New Arrangements.

She was taken to bed, and attended with the utmost care by her hostess, who would not suffer her to talk till she had had a sleep. She merely heard enough to find out that the stranger had known her son in Italy; and she was thrown into a painful state of guessing by the poor girl's eyes, which followed her about the room till the lady fairly came up and closed them. "Obdient! Obedient!" said the patient; "obedient in every thing; only the signora will let me kiss her hand; and, taking it with her own trembling one, she laid her

The Venetian Girl.

The sun was shining beautifully one summer evening, as if he bade a sparkling farewell to a world which he had made happy. It seemed also by his looks as if he promised to make his appearance again to-morrow; but there was, at times, a deep-breathing western wind; and dark purple clouds came up and there, like gorgous waiters on a funeral. The children in a village not far from the metropolis were playing, however, on the green content with the brightness of the moment, who instantly gathered them about her by the singularity of her dress. It was not very extraordinary; but any difference from the usual apparel of their countrywomen appeared so to them; and crying out, "A French girl, a French girl!" they ran up to her and stood looking and talking. She seated herself upon a bench that was fixed between two elms, and for a moment leaned her head against one of them as if faint with walking. But she raised it speedily, and smiled with great complacency on the rude urchins. She had a bodice and petticoat of different colors, and a handkerchief tied neatly about her head with the point behind. On her hands were gloves without fingers; and she wore about her neck a guitar, upon the strings of which one of her hands rested.
The children thought her very handsome. Any one else would also have thought her very ill; but they saw nothing in her but a good natured looking foreigner and a guitar, and they asked her to play. "Oh che bel gazzi!" said she, in a soft and almost inaudible voice;—"Che visi fetti!" and she began to play. She tried to sing, too; but her voice failed her, and she shook her head smilingly, saying, "Stanca! Stanca!" "Sing, do sing," said the children; and nodding her head, she was trying to do so, when a set of schoolboys came up and joined in the request. "No, no," said one of the elder boys, "she is not well. You are ill, ain't you, miss?" added he, laying his hand upon hers, as if to hinder it. He drew out the last word somewhat doubtfully, for her appearance perplexed him; he scarcely knew whether to take her for a common stroller, or a lady straying from a sick bed. "Grizzi!" said she, understanding his look; "troppo stanca; troppo." By this time the usher came up, and addressed her in French; but she only understood a few words, and there. He then strode "Latta" and repeated one or two of his words, as if they were familiar to her. "She is an Italian," he, looking round with good-natured importance. "Non daitio," continued the usher, "quin in lectis poetam illum celebrissimum, Tassonem; Taxum I should say, properly he lays her weak head upon the lady's hand. The latter would have persuaded her to sleep again; but she said she could not for joy; "for I'll tell you, madam," continued she; "I do not believe you'll think it foolish, for something very grave at my heart tells me it is not so; but I have had a long thought" (and her voice and look grew somewhat more exalted as she spoke), "which has supported me through much toil and many disagreeable things, to this country and this place; and I will tell you what it is, and how it came into my mind. I received this letter from your son." Here she drew out a paper, which, though carefully wrapped up in several others, was much worn at the sides. It was dated from the village and ran thus:
"This comes from the Englishman whom Rosaura nursed so kindly at Venice. She will be sorry to hear that her kindness was in vain, for he is dying; and he sometimes fears, that her sorrow will be still greater than he could wish it to be. But marry one of your kind countrymen, my good girl; for all must love Rosaura who know her. If it shall be my lot ever to meet her in heaven, I will thank her as a blessed tongue only can." "As soon as I read this letter, madam, and what he said about heaven, it dashed into my head, and though I did not deserve him on earth, I might, perhaps, by trying and patience, deserve to be joined with him in heaven, where there is no distinction of persons. My uncle was pleased to see me become a religious pilgrim; but he knew as little of the contract as I; and I found that I could earn my way to England better, and quite as religiously, by playing my guitar, which was also more independent; I had often heard your son talk of independence and freedom, and commend me for doing what he was pleased to call a much kindness to others. So I played my guitar from Venice all the way to England; and all that I earned by it I gave away to the poor, keeping enough to procure me lodging. I lived on bread and water, and used to weep happy tears over it, because I looked up to heaven, and thought he might see me. So, playing and giving alms in this manner, I arrived in the neighborhood of your beloved village, where I fell sick for a while, and was very kindly treated in an outhouse; though the people, I thought, seemed to look strange and afraid on this crucifix,—though your son never did—but he taught me to think kindly of every body, and hope the best, and leave every thing, except our own endeavors, to Heaven. I fell sick, madam, because I found for certain that the Signor Montague was dead, albeit, I had my hope that he was alive." She stopped awhile for breath, for she was growing weaker and weaker; and her hostess would fain have had her keep silence; but she pressed her hand as well as she might, and prayed with cheek upon it; and it staid there till she dropped asleep for weakness.

—Silken rest
The all thy cares rest.

thought her kind watcher, who was doubtly thrown upon a recollection of that beautiful passage in Beaumont and Fletcher, by the suspicion she had of the cause of the girl's visit. "And yet," tho' she, turning her eyes, with a thin tear in them, towards the church spire, "he was an excellent boy—the boy of my heart."

When the stranger woke, the secret was explained; and if the mind of her hostess was relieved, it was only the more touched with pity, and, indeed, moved with respect and admiration.
The dying girl (for she was evidently dying, and happy at the thought of it.) was the niece of an humble tradesman in Venice, at whose house young Montague, who was a gentleman of small fortune, had lodged, and fallen sick in his travels. She was a lively, good-natured girl, whom he used to hear coquetting and playing the guitar with her neighbors; and it was greatly on this account, that her compassionate and hus-hing gravity struck him whenever she entered the room. One day he heard no more coquetting, nor even the guitar.
He asked the reason when she came to give him some drink; and she said that she had heard him mention some noise that disturbed him. "But you do not call your voice and your music a noise," said he, "do you, Rosaura? I hope not, for I had expected it would give me double strength to get rid of this fever and reach home." Rosaura turned pale, and let the patient into a secret; but what surprised and delighted him was, that she played her guitar nearly as often as before, and sung too, only less sprightly airs. "You get better and better, signor," said she, "every day, and your mother will see you and be happy.
I hope you will tell her what a good doctor you had." "The best in the world," cried he, as he sat up in bed; he put his arm round her waist, and kissed her.
"He begged my pardon," said the poor girl, "as I was listening out of the room, and hoped I should not construe his warmth into impertinence; and to hear him talk so to me, who used to fear what he might think of myself—it made me stand in the passage, and lean my head against the wall, and weep such bitter and yet such sweet tears! But he did not hear me;—no, madam, he did not know, indeed, how much I—how much I—loved him, child, interrupted Mrs. Montague; you have a right to say so; and I wish he had been alive to say as much to you himself." "Oh," said the dying girl, her tears flowing away, "this is too great a happiness for me, to hear his own mother talking so." And again she lays her weak head upon
(and her voice and look grew somewhat

such a patient panting of voice to beal-lowed to go on, that she was. She smiled beautifully, and resumed:—"So, when—so, when I got my strength a little again, I walked on, and came to the beloved village; and I saw the beautiful white church spire in the trees; and then I knew where his body slept; and I thought some kind person would help me to die with my face looking towards the church, as it now does; and death is upon me, even now; but let me a little higher on the pillows, dear lady, that I may see the green ground of the hill."

She was raised up as she wished, and, after looking a while with a placid feebleness at the hill, said in a very low voice, "Say one prayer for me, dear lady, and if it be not too proud in me, call me in it your daughter." The mother of her beloved summoned up a grave and earnest voice, as well as she might, and kneelt, and said, "O heavenly Father of us all, who, in the midst of thy manifold and merciful bounties, bringest us into strong passes of anguish, which, nevertheless, thou enablest us to go through, look down, we beseech thee, upon this thy young and innocent servant, the daughter, that might have been, of my heart, and enable her spirit to pass thro' the struggling bonds of mortality and be gathered into thy rest with those we love;—do, dear and great God, of thy infinite mercy; for we are poor, weak creatures, both young and old." Here her voice melted away into a breathing fearfulness; and after remaining on her knees a moment, she rose, and looked upon the bed, and saw that the weary, smiling one was no more.

NOVEL PROCEEDING—COUR- TESY TO THE LADIES.

The New York Legislature is now in Session. The discussion took place on the 21st inst.

Mr Burroughs said there was a delegation of ladies present with a petition signed by 28,000 ladies for the Maine Law. He desired to move that the chairman of the delegation be allowed to present it in person.

Mr Hastings trusted the request would not be granted. It would be setting a bad precedent.

Mr Miller hoped as ladies suffered most from intemperance, that this request might be granted.

Mr O'Keefe deemed it a foregone conclusion that these eminent ladies should be allowed to exhibit their masculine powers. He trusted, therefore, that it should be done gracefully. Members would be gratified with the appearance of a lady—not in the antiquated garb of Elizabeth, but in the garb of modern days striding across the floor, to perform this masculine duty.

Miscellaneous

Wishes to be in a blanket... The Weekly Chronicle... a most disgraceful personal outrage perpetrated at Bransgrove, on Mr. Dell, a respectable confectioner by the boys at the Grammar School.

FAITH.—A female teacher of a school that stood on the banks of a quiet English stream, once wished to communicate to her pupils an idea of faith.

AN EPITAPH.—"My name, my country, what are they to thee? What, whether high or low, my pedigree? Perhaps I far surpassed all other men; Perhaps I fell below them all. What then?"

DR. YOUNG.—One day Dr. Young was walking in his garden at Welwyn, in company with two ladies (one of whom he afterwards married), the servant came to acquaint him a gentleman wished to speak with him.

DIRECT ANSWERS.—A prisoner being brought up to the bar, the following dialogue passed between him and the sitting magistrate: "How do you live?" "Pretty well, sir, generally a joint and pudding at dinner!" "I mean, sir, how do you get your bread?" "I beg your worship's pardon; sometimes at the baker's, and sometimes at the chandler's shop."

MR. THELWALL.—When citizen Thelwall was on his trial at the Old Bailey for high treason, during the evidence for the prosecution, he wrote the following note, and sent it to his counsel, Mr. Erskine: "I am determined to plead my cause myself. Mr. Erskine write under it: 'If you do, you'll be hanged'; which Thelwall immediately returned this reply: 'I'll be hanged if I do.'"

SAILOR BOY'S WIT.—In a great storm at sea, when the ship's crew were all at prayers, a boy burst into a violent fit of laughter; being reproved for his ill-timed mirth, and asked the reason of it, "Why," said he, "I was laughing to think what a hissing the lost-sinner's red nose will make when it comes into the water." This ludicrous remark set the crew a-lughing, inspired them with new spirits, and by a great exertion they brought the vessel safe into port.

PROMPT ANSWER.—A stevedore, keeper of the seals of Louis XIII, when a boy of only nine years old, was asked many questions by a bishop, and gave very prompt answers to them all. At length the prelate said, "I will give you an orange if you will tell me where God is." "My lord," replied the boy, "I will give you two oranges, if you will tell me where he is not!"

They grow walnuts so large in California that they have to crack them with a trip hammer. To get at the meat, a friend informs us they have to use a crowbar. Great country, that land of gold.

A barber in England advertises that his customers are shaved "without incision or laceration for the microscopic sum of one ha' penny."

Why is a fisherman like a ghost? Because he is a shad er. The youth that perpetrated this has left the country and gone over to Jersey City.

"Ain't it wicked to rob dis chicken roost, Jim?" "Dy't a great moral question, Gumbo; we hain't no time to argue it now; hand down another pullet."

MIGHT'S Patent, Self-Acting, Horizontal SAWING MACHINE. THE Subscribers beg leave to call the attention of the Inhabitants of the United Counties of Durham and Northumberland, that they are prepared to supply the above valuable Machine. Persons engaged in the manufacture of Sawn Shingles, Staves, &c., would do well to examine them, as they will do more work, in a better manner, and with less power than any other Sawing apparatus extant. For the cutting of Fire Wood, exceedingly applicable; with a two-horse motive power, and four men to attend, one machine will cut from twenty to thirty cords of wood per day, from logs of twenty feet in length, or under, and double this quantity will be cut, if a motive power of four horses be applied. The Inventor received a Diploma for his machine at the late Provincial Agricultural Show at Toronto; and a Premium was awarded him for his invention at the late Agricultural Show held at Newcastle. Parties wishing to Manufacture these Machines for other parts of the Province, can obtain the Right, Models, &c., on reasonable terms. The following Certificate will be sufficient proof of the excellence of this machine, to ensure it that attention from the Public which the makers are desirous it should receive. ROBT. MIGHT, N. STRONG. Port Hope, October, 1-52.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, For the rapid Cure of COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

MANY years ago, having been inspired by the public confidence in this medicine, has won for it an appreciation and notoriety far exceeding the most sanguine expectations of its friends. Not only its intrinsic virtues and the unmistakable benefit conferred on the ranks of sufferers could originate and maintain the reputation it enjoys. While every inferior remedy thrust upon the community, have failed and been discarded, this has gained friends by every trial, controlled breathing, afflicted by can never forget, and produced cures, too numerous and too remarkable to be forgotten.

While it is a fraud on the public to pretend that any one medicine will infallibly cure—until there is abundant proof that the Cherry Pectoral does not only as a general thing, but almost invariably cure the malady for which it is employed. As it makes these facts wider and better known, this medicine has generally become the best reliance of the afflicted, from the log-cabin of the American Peasant, to the palaces of European Kings. Throughout this entire country, in every State, city, and I send almost every ancient household, the Cherry Pectoral is known as the best remedy extant for diseases of the Throat and Lungs, and in many foreign countries, it is coming to be extensively used by their most intelligent Physicians. In Great Britain, France and Germany, where the medical sciences have reached their highest perfection, Cherry Pectoral is introduced, and is constantly used in the Armies, Hospitals, Alms Houses, Public Institutions, and in domestic practice, as the most successful attending Physicians can employ for the more dangerous affections of the lungs. Also in milder cases, and for children it is safe, pleasant and effectual to cure. In fact some of the most flattering testimonials we receive, have been from parents who have found it efficacious in cases particularly incident to childhood.

The Cherry Pectoral is manufactured by a practical Chemist, and every ounce of it under his own eye, with inviolable accuracy and care. It is sealed and protected by law from counterfeits; consequently can be relied on as genuine without adulteration. We have endeavored here to furnish the community with a new line of such superior and domestic practice, as the most common household medicine—remedy at once safe, speedy, and effectual, which has by repeated and countless trials proved itself to be; and trust by great care in preparing it with chemical accuracy, of uniform strength, that Physicians as well as laymen on which they can rely for the best results, and the afflicted with a remedy that will do for them all that medicine can do. Prepared and sold by JAMES C. AYRE, Practical and Analytical Chemist, Lowell, Mass. Sold by Chas. Brent, Port Hope; J. V. B. S. well, Cobourg; and by all Druggists throughout Canada.

The Guide, IS PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY MORNING, By William Furby, Proprietor, AT HIS OFFICE, WALTON STREET. TERMS. If paid in advance, £0 10 0 If not so paid, £0 12 6
