collected and arranged the facts as found below. It is a fact conceded by the best historians, that the most prominent events are items in the Dominion estimates. Everynot always the most important in effect. As thing is arranged in this respect. A grant to which are most important may well be a matter of dispute. In the following enummatter of dispute. In the following enum-eration we have not attempted to settle that. In May the question of a new school came up, and has been discussed at nearly every We have given the events which were most | meeting of the Council and School Boards talked of at the time of their occurrence. While we recognize the truth of the statement that quiet influences are the most was granted the power to extend her liabilipotent, as a rule, and the hullabaloo raised ties to the extent of $20,000, for the purpose over the arrival of such celebrities as Oscar of completing her water works system and Wild, or Mrs. Langtry, is incomparable in result to many an event which passes entirely Midland Railway offices to Peterboro'. unnoticed, yet for popular interest we have to place an estimate on events according to the degree of interest they excite in the mind of the populace. In the hurry of preparing the list, some events may have been missed, and in a few instances the dates may not be accurately fixed, but on the whole we think that it will be found a pretty reliable chro- every week. Bitters, Hop Bitters, at Robt. There are a few things in addition to the above which deserve notice, but which can-

numerate them.

One of the prominent topics at the first of the year was the Midland Railway amalgama-tion. Following that was the great Manitoba fever, which affected all parts of the country more or less. Hundreds from this county left for Manitoba, and speculation was all the rage, push was made in the way of securing factories. A cotton factory was supposed to be definitely settled, but so far all attempts have proved fruitless. Last session of Parliament a post office for Port Hope was one of the was also secured for the improvement of the harbor.

since. At the present nothing is more decided upon than at first. During the 1882 session of the Ontario Legislature, Port Hope

During the months of May and June the Dominion elections were the exciting topic. Meetings were held in every village in the county. The result was a sweeping victory for the Conservatives and Col. Williams. In these same months, by a strange fatuity, a great number of accidents occurred on the Midland railway; The Times having for some time to record the death of some one the council to offer a reward but without success. As regards the public policy of the town, very little can be said particularly. It has been a quietly progressive one, at the same time economical. Altogether, it can not be said that 1882 has in any way been epochical. Very little change of any kind is noticeable, except that a considerable desire for improvement by the merchants, in the way of handsome signs and nice shop-windows has been evinced.

It a bitter cold November in the year of grace 17-; damp fegs hung over the earth like a pall. The mists rose from low fens of Lincoln and Nottinghamshire, the waters oozed out and inundated the meadows, carrying malaria in their train. Fields that in the merry haymaking time children shouted through, gardens where grew succulent vegetables, all now lay passive under the stagnant flood. The inhabitants of these shires had grown weary of this state of things, and had tried how far digging ditches and dykes all across the face of the country would alleviate this annual plague. Their work proved fruitless; abandoning the effort they sent a call to the other side of the ocean, to the princes of drainage, the clever Dutch, to come and help them. They came, and this November great engineering was going on; canals were dug, deep dykes planned, every means of drainage these Dutchmen knew was put in use to redeem the Carrs of North Lincolshire from the dread winter visitors-" the waters." Square-shouldered, heavy-built Dutchmen smoked long pipes and drank their "Schnapps" in the lodgings of the small neighboring towns. They were silent, steady men, most of them had a "vrau" at home and square shouldered little children. The Lincolnshire lassies could not make many conquests, and so the Lincolnshire lads, having no cause for jealousy, were very friendly with these clever foreigners, who were redeeming the land for them. Every morning the Dutchmen, rolled up in warm wraps to keep out the cold, rode ont from the towns and villages to the open country to superintend the dykes and dams, and stayed there till the afternoon's waning light warned them to hasten home, for it was evil traveling at night across that swampy land.

There was one stalwart Dutchman, who had no "vrau" at home; he was better looking than most of them; taller, slighter and more jovial; he looked about him more and had noticed favorably a daughter of the land. This pretty lassic lived in a quaint little village called Grangelev-super-Montem, a village whose proud prerogative is to stand not only on a hill, but on the only hill that exists for miles around. It was a pretty steep pull up to the village from every side, and from its beacon on a clear daywhen so rare a thing occurred-the spectator could behold a vast panorama lying at his feet. They did say seventy churches and two cathedrals could be seen from its summit, but that Lucy Metcalfe could not certify; she was far too impatient and frolicsome a lass to have patience to count them all. She might often be seen running up and down the steep hill, for Lucy was only eighteen, and full of youth and health. John Metcalfe was a respectable farmer, who sent his daughter to market every week with produce, and no one's eggs and butter was so popular, no one's ducks and childrens so fat as Lucy Metcalfe's; no eyes shone more brightly, no hands were more quick and pretty in taking and giving change, no tongue more vivacious and full of gay repartee.

There were several young farmers around who had an eye on her, and thought what a good housewife she would make, but Lucy tossed her head, and pretended she did not see this admiration.

One day Meinherr Wilhelm Van der Roost thought he would like a duck and some sausages for his dinner, and wandering into the market to buy, he came as far as Lucy's stall, and there became a fixture. For half an hour he stared at her, a contemplative pipe between his white teeth; for another half hour he at her without a hope-a sure stared sign that his mind was deeply stirred, and then he drew nearer and touched a fat duck with his large thumb. "Do you want a duck, sir?" asked pretty Lucy, who of course had noticed him fifty nine minutes before, and had actually found means to discover that the starer was the superintendent of the works in the North Lee Carrs, and one of the chief of the Dutch sent over.

Wilhelm fancied he had been unobserved, but then men are so dense about these things. He found Lucy very pretty, and on nearer inspection her figure was so slim, her hair so dark and wavy, her eyes of so beautiful a blue, and there was so many fat ducks to choose among, and such a savory neap of sausages to look at, that his marketing took quite another half hour. Lucy was very patient, though she used to be sharp enough sometimes to haggling or undecided customers. Meinherr's broken English was very hard to understand, and the noise in the market so great, that Wilhelm had to come behind the stall to be comprehended at all.

"How is it your ducks are so fat?" "I don't know; they get better food than the others, perhaps.

"And how is it you are so much fresher and rosier than the other girls?" "Oh! we get fresh air, you know.

live at Grangely-super-Montem."
"Where? That is a hard name-Grange-Grange-"

Lucy laughed merrily, and made him repeat the name till he could say it right; that took quite ten minutes. "And where is this favored village?" "Don't you know! When you are down in the Carrs, have you not seen a church-tower on a hill? Our tower is a beacon for miles around." "Ah! Yes, of course I have; and that is Grangely-super-Montem. Is your name so hard to speak?" "Oh, no. It is Lucy."

"Lucy; ah, that is not hard, but soft, soft as your fat ducks. Lucy-what? "Metcalfe."

"Oh, the harsh English. I will not try to say it even. I will stop at Lucy. And should I see you if I came to Grangely-super-Montem?"

"Perhaps you would; it depends where you went to.

"I would go to the high tower to breathe a deep draught of the fresh air that makes you so rosy. May I come and look for you? I want to know how to make sausages like these; they are so

"But you haven't tasted them yet."

"Ah, but I know." "Cannot your wife, Mrs. Van der Roost-oh, what a long hard namemake saussges?" asked Lucy, mischiev-

"Perhaps she could, if I had ever found her, but I have no vrau at home, Lucy?" "Suppose you were to take your duck and go now; I have to be busy," suggested Lucy.

Wilhelm had no excuse ready, so after ten minutes more over the change, he owly departed.

That evening the Dutchman smoked a thought he could not wait till next market day for another. Next morning when he got to the Carrs, he looked up to the square tower of Grangely-super-Montem till he could resist no longer; he must fetch another duck.

In time he fetched a great many, and left his heart behind instead, though he did not find this out at once; and it was longer still before he made the discovery that he had carried off Lucy's in its

It was December; the dullest days of all the year were at hand. Wilhelm wished the big drains were all dug and full of the clushy waters that he might return to his beloved Holland with his pretty English Lucy and her recipes for fat ducks and sausagement. But neither of these wishes seemed likely to be fulfilled.

As regards Lucy, a great obstacle had arisen. Her parents would not hear of their daughter, the apple of their eyes, the light of their old age, going to a foreign land, a land—because to them unknown, full of all soris of horrors and drawbacks-with a strange man, whose lingo puzzled them, and who might have half a dozen wives for aught they knew. So Meinherr Wilhelm Van de Roost was hunted away with a volley of north country abuse, and such severe injunctions were laid upon Lucy against ever speaking to this Dutchman again, that the lovers were in despair.

But Lucy was wise, she never gave up for a moment, she meant to go to Holland with him, come what would, yet she did not say so. She kept at home quietly and docilely, she appeared to have forgotten Wilhelm so easily that her mother's fears were allayed; and though she would not let Lucy go to Larket any more, or even out of the village, she grew quite kind again.

Lucy's birthday was at hand. As a reward for her good conduct, her mother gave her leave to ask all her friends to the tea party. Lucy clapped her hands with delight. How she would have liked to ask Wilhelm! But that would not do. Her mother would have been outrageous. 'So Lucy had to make up her mind to do without him.

A few days before the party Lucy's mother had a dream. Now Dame Metcalfe was old-fashioned and simple in her notions, and possessed a long list of the meanings of dreams. This time she dreamed that Wilhelm Van der Roost came in one night as the clock struck twelve, and offered her a big meerschaum pipe, such as he used to smoke, and that Lucy was dancing round the room. She so angry with Wilhelm that she dashed the pipe from his hand; as she did so her best china tea-set, that was always kept in a special cupboard, came down with a clatter about her head, and lay in a million fragments, mixed up with those of the big pipe.

The good mother told Lucy her dream. Now Lucy was not in the least a believer in dreams, but she had a quick wit, and while her mother ransacked her memory to ascertain what dreaming of a pipe betokened, Lucy read the riddle thus:-

"Don't you see, mother, it means that on my birthday, when I am dancing, just at twelve o'clock, Withelm will offer you the pipe of peace. That is, he will come again to ask you for me, and if you dash h's offer aside, we shall be ruined, for he shall let the floods swamp all the lands; now he's got those big drains full, you know, he could soon let it overflow all our Carr land; that is the china teaset falling down. So, mother, if he should come-though that's quite im possible since you've refused to let him come near us-but if by any strange chance he should come, you would not say nay again, would you mother?"

The good dame was puzzled. Lucy was a very Daniel in her interpretation. and twist her dream in which way she would, she could not read it any better than Lucy had done, and she was not one to regard a dream lightly. Her only consolation was that Wilhelm would not know of it and come. She would keep the doors well fastened, and take care to send every one home by eleven on Lucy's birthday, so that they might all be in bed and asleep before twelve, and then the Dutchman could not fulfill the dream. To fly in the face of it never occurred to the simple woman; but there of course would not come; how was it likely?

Lucy said no more; she sang as lightheartedly as ever over her work. The day before her birthday was market-day. Lucy coaxed her mother to let her go this once to buy some ribbons for her adornment to-morrow, and to meet some distant neighbors whom she could not ask otherwise to the frolic. Lucy had been so good that her mother consented on solemn condition that she would not speak to Wilhelm if she saw him. She promised readily, and they set off.

For several hours Lucy stood by her mother, or chatted with her friends, apparently gaily enough. But her eyes continually roved in search of a handsome bronzed face, and her heart ached with fear lest she should not see it.

At last, in the afternoon, just before the market people were beginning to pack up, Wilhelm Van der Roost strolled through the place, his head down, his eyes fixed on the ground; he did not look about him so much now, you see. Lucy stamped with impatience: if he did not look up, it was all over with their hopes. She coughed loudly; he started; their eyes met. A deep flush stole over his face, and he stood transfixed. Lucy cautiously glanced toward her mother; the good lady was deep in gossip with a crony. Lucy gave Wilhelm a meaning glance, took aim and threw an egg at The aim was good; it hit nose. For a moment Wilhelm looked aghast. Could the simple, loving Lucy, who had clung to him bathed in tears when last he saw her, be turning against him now, and making him openly ridiculous? He stroked his nose; it was none the worse, no daub of yellow yolk was on it. He looked again at Lucy; her tearful, imploring look, and her finger pointing to the offending missle-gradually revealed to him the possibility that the egg might be a means of communication. He picked it up just after the heavy heel of the farmer had trodden it flat. There was a small piece of paper inside, and that was not injured. He read the paper slowly; once, twice; and then, after carefully watching Lucy, that he might catch her eye unseen, he gave three solemn, quiet nods. Lucy gave a hasty one in return, and smiled happily. They were only just in time; a second later, and the good old woman's gossip ended.

Wilhelm went home with the precious little scrap of paper that had cost Lucy some time of careful thought and laborious writing; for in those days young gir's were not the ready writers our farm house lassies are now, and this note had great many contemplative pipes. The duck and sausages were so good that he to be both short and clear. It ran thus-to our big barn door, at half-past eleven of the clock, wait there till I come, and mind and bring your very biggest pipe with you. Do this as you love me; our last chance; nod three times if you understand this aright."

The ruse had succeeded; the three nods were as good as an oath to Lucy that her lover would not fail. It was such a weight off her mind that all had gone

The birthday evening came and Lucy was in a fever of expectation and delight, though her pleasure in her smart clothes, and in the various viands she had prepared with her own hands, was rather dashed by the thought that Wilhelm would not be by to praise and admire. The tea was a great success; it was a regular north-country tea, such as we south erners never see. There were pies by the score, pork, pigeon and beef; there were fat geese and fowls, both hot and cold, there were whole loads of buns, cakes and plum-loaves.

When all this food was gradually consumed, the games and dancing began in the big farm kitchen. Lucy's eyes often wandered to the clock, and so did her mother's. The good lady had not forgotten her dream, and was firmly resolved that by eleven o'clock the guests must helm would not give up the effort. go, Lucy to be tucked up in her little white bed, far out of reach of that dreadful Dutchman, and the china set securely locked up to prevent its clattering down.

"L'homme propose, Dieu dispose." In the course of the evening a rumour arose that a poor crazy lad was locked up in the church. There had been a funeral that afternoon, and one Billy Watkins, "a softee," was soon gaping and grzing about the church, and had not turned up since; and as they were passing, some one had been terrified by a sound of crying coming from the empty building. Since then Billy had been missing, so that "some one" put two and two together, and said he must be in the church.

Now Reuben the sexton was likewise Reuben the fiddler, and when the young people came to the old man and begged him to proceed at once to the church to let out the boy, he did not feel at all in-clined to go. He was so cosily ensconced in farmer Metcalfe's chimney corner, and so happy fiddling and tippling warm ale, that he readily consented to let some one go in his stead. Five or six young big lads volunteered, "for the fun of the thing." Lucy let them out under pretence of seeing what sort of night it was. It was a bitterly cold one, and a dense raw fog hung over the land.

"What a bad night for Wilhelm's ride," thought Lucy; "however, it's a good road here from the market town, and he knows it well. It's half-past ten now: in an hour he will be here.

"Mind yourselves, lads," she cried aloud, as the six youths, noisy with beer and dancing, set off.

"Never fear, Lucy," answered one of them, "we'll have such a lark! We'll ring the bells in your honor."
"No, no, don't."

"Indeed we will; just you listen." Lucy was in hopes it was only a joke; it would be so stupid if they did it, and every one would wonder what it meant. The bells never rang except on Sundays or for some great event, and the sound might puzzle Wilhelm. But true enough, some moments later, a first chime, then a second fell on the air, and presently a noisy, merry peal made itself heard above the din of the party in the kitchen. Four of the lads were bell-ringers, so they knew what they were doing, soon a regular swell of sweet church bells roused the quiet village and electrified the guests at farmer Metcalfe's. Lucy repeated what the boys had said. People cried, "Ah, boys will be boys," and then went on with their fun.

The bells chimed away: 11 o'clock struck; Mrs. Metcalfe fidgeted. Unfortunately, one of the lads was her own Jack, so that at the first hint af a breakup every one vociferously put her down.
"Those lads will want first a good hiding, and then a good roasting and toasting after their cold freak, wife," said the hospitable farmer.

The Clock's hands stole along: Lucy slipped out unperceived to the barn-door. It was cold and dark outside, and Lucy had flung a warm shawl over her. half hour struck; "now Wilhelm will be she thought. But no sound or sight of him came Five minutes more pas ed: she grew fidgetty; ten, and she grew impatient; fifteen, she was cold and miserable; twenty, she burst into tears. Oh! had he forsaken her! Was this a sign he no longer loved her? Why did he not come? "Oh, Wilhelm, Wilhelm, where are you?" cried poor Lucy, laying her curly head against the barn door and sobbing aloud. A quarter too twelve struck; it would soon be to late. And where was Wilhelm all this time? He had dressed himself with particular care that day, and had set out early to the Carrs. There he found that something had gone wrong with a drain; so, instead of returning as usual at four o'clock to the town, he made up his mind to stop later at the works-in fact, as long as he could see.

"It doesn't look like a bad night," he said to himself, "and my horse and I can find our way blindfold up to Grangely; I'll go about six o'clock, and get toa at the inn just below the village, and wait there till eleven. I wonder what is up in Lucy's clever little head." At six, a thick blinding fog rose up from the swamps. The workmen left; Wilhelm extinguished the candle in his little office, where he had been making some calculations, and mounted his good steed, Hans.

"Now, Hans," he said, quick as you can, up-hill." Hans did not like the fog any more than his master, as he trotted off fast enough. They rode for many minutes through the dense darkness. Wilhelm thought that Hans was extra active in going up hill so nimbly, and yet it did not seem like riding up hill either. Had they got wrong? He could soon tell, for a few minutes more ought to bring them to a steep, stony hill, whence they could see the village lights. Half an hour's more easy riding convinced both Hans and Wilhelm that they were wrong. Hans stopped suddenly and snorted.

"Yes, yes, I know you've come wrong, well enough muttered his rider. What's to be done I thought we started rightly. Where are we?

Hans turned round.

"You want to go back you sensible beast, do you? Well, if you can find your way back to the town, that will do as well-so there, guide yourself; it won't be the first time, eh, Hans?"

Hans trotted off, but after some time he pulled up at no other place but at the

however, it might be worse."

He dismounted, and fetching out a candle stuck it into a kind of rough lanthorn. "Now, Hans, we will try again in this style.' Once more they set offen the right road the candle threw an uncertain light; still, even that was better than nothing. "We must have gone wrong at the cross roads," said Wilhelm. "If this candle will but let us pass the sigu post, we shall do.'

But suddenly Hans gave a false step plunged, and over went Wiihelm, candle and all, on to a roadside bank. He jumped up unhurt, but Hans and candle were gone.

Wilhelm swore some terrible Dutch oaths; all at once he started at feeling a soft nose rubbing his shoulder. Poor Hans had only been looking for his master. With a growl, Wilhelm remounted. As he did so, he wondered which way Hans' head was turned, it was so very confusing; if only the fog would lift!

But it didn't, and they got hopelessly lost. Hours passed, miles were traversed, one more they found themselves back at the office. This time Hans was stirred again, with difficulty, but Wil-"It can't be more than nine o'clock; I won't fail, Lucy, if there's a mortal way of getting there."

Again they proceeded, footpace this time. Hurrah, he could see lights shining in the distance.

"Cheer up, Hans, old beast, we're that that. Now for Stony Hill." right at last. Now for Stony Hill."
Wilhelm had rejoiced too soon; a momet later and Hans had nearly sunk in a quagmire; the lights were will-o'-thewisps. After intense difficulty, the poor horse was dragged out. Hans shivered with fright, and whined piteously. Wilhelm Van der Roest was in despair; all thought of his eppointment with Lucy was lost now in the thought of saving his poor horse's life. It was a terrible predicament. Taking the weary horse's bridle, he slowly, step by step, sought to regain firmer ground.

"And if once we find it, Hans, we'll stop there. The fog may lift at midnight: if it doesn't we can but freeze to death instead of being smothered in the swamp.

Suddenly Wilhelm's head came in contact with something hard.

"What's that?" he cried, and felt it up and down. Was a tree trunk, or a gate post? Happy thought-was it the finger post at the cross-roads?

Slipping the bridle over his arm, he climbed up, and felt the four long arms stretching out. Yes, it was the fingerpost; now, then, which led to Grangely? There was the difficulty. He tried to strike a light with flint and steel, but the fog prevented him. There seemed no help for it but waiting. He fretted to think of Lucy, lest she should deem him false to his word.

But hark. What was that sound that made Wilhelm's heart beat quicker, and cause poor Hans to plunge?

One, two, three, cling, clang, cling, rang out the merry church-bells through the fog.

"Grangely bells, Grangely bells," cried Wilhelm, joyously. They sounded so close and clear. "We are saved, my poor beast." The horse snorted, as if he too, knew that a good thing had happened. Wilhelm mounted once more, riding in the direction of the sound. "Come this way, come this way," the bell seemed to be pealing, loudly and more loudly, Cling, clang, cling. It was all right, the read began to ascend; impatient Hans had to slacken pace up the steep, stony hill. At last the village lights began to glimmer. Cling, clang, cling, clang, gtill clashed the bells, as Wilhelm rode by the church. He had no idea what time it was, but he would ride straight to the barn door. Fortunately, the fog was not nearly so dense up here, and he could see around him. When he reached the barn door, he jumped off Hans and tied him up. he did so, a sound of sobbing fell on his ear, and he saw a figure leaning against the door. "Lucy !" he cried.

With a spring she was in his arms. As fast as he could he told her of his peril and how the bells had saved him. At that moment they ceased; the fact was the lady knew it was midnight, and they were afraid to cross the churchyard later for fear of ghosts. Dame Metcalfe looked at the clock: it wanted one minute to twelve; she felt uncanny. Where was Lucy? she didn't see her. She looked at the best tea-set, which she and some gossips had washed, replaced and locked up in the corner glass cupboard. No games were being played now, and dancing was getting slack. Folks were growing weary, and wanted to be home. They get impatient at the lengthened absence of the boys. Old Reuben, now that fiddling and tippling had ceased, began to wonder whether the parson would blow him up to-morrow for the untimely ringing of "Lucy," called Dame Metcalfe, sharply; "Lucy, child; where are you. The big clock began to strike the hour slowly and solemnly. At the first chime the door opened, and in walked Meinherr Wilhelm Van der Roost, wet and damp with fog, smoking a huge meerschaum pipe. Every one looked up astonished. The Dutchman walked straight up to the dame, utterly unconcerned by the many questioning eyes fixed on him, laid his pipe in her lap, placed his hand on his heart, and drew shy little Lucy forward with the other.

A scene of questions, answers, explanations followed. A few minutes later the six lads stole in, looking rather sheepish, for they feared a licking. they came in, they found Wilhelm and Lucy sitting hand-in-hand, and the dame herself heaping hot food on a plate for his supper. The story was briefly related to them, and the boys suddenly found themselves heroes, and gladly pocketed the broad piece Wilhelm gave them, calling them the savers of his life.

In gratitude for this, Wilhelm, before he returned to Holland, taking with him his faithful Lucy, and her recipes for fat ducks and sausage-meats, left a sum of money which was to pay for the ringing of Grangely-super-Montem bells every 19th of November. So they ring to this day; and the stranger in the village is surprised about ten o'clock on this evening to hear the bells ring cling, clang, cling, through the night air. If you ask the cause, the villagers say, "These are the Dutchman's bells."

I have heard them; and so can you, if you ever go to Grangely-super-Montem. door off the little office by the drains.

'Confound you, Hans!" cried Wilhelm,

'If you love me, come to-morrow night I thought we were to go back to the town;

'Some one's" ears had played them false.

Clearly it was the good angels of Wilhelm Van der Rocat who rang the bells.

A young gentleman who had quarrelled with a lady to whom he had paid his ad dresser, was so impudent as to threaten that he would publish the letters she had written him. That Hired Man.

"Ho'd Been a Good One if He Had Stayed,"

A good old Wethersfield farmer, pestered by the lack of help, told his son to slip down to New York and hire a man. But before he started he cautioned him to look out and not get loaded down with a dead beat, adding: "There are sharpers there who will beat you if you give em half a chance. You can tell one of them air beats as far as you can see him. Hire some good, lusty young fellow—a greenhorn if you can—any one but a dead beat." In a couple of days the new man was at work on the farm, and with a little practice would have broken in all right, but the old farmer, who was fretful and impatient, disliked his ways, and so he shipped him. The young man went to a neigh-boring place, and hired out, and the old farmer started for Gotham himself to get the right kind of a hired man. He came back with one last Thursday, stopping in Hartford to buy him some new clothes, the price of which was to be deducted from his wages. The new help wanted some pretty good clothes, and quieted the old farmer by telling him he could take the price out of the earliest earnings. Friday morning he set him to work in the garden in the rear of his barn. In about an hour the old farmer went out to see how he was getting along. He found him lying on some hay on the barn floor. "What is the matter?" said the farmer. "I'm feeling bad-don't know what "Do you ever drink?" asked the farmer. "Yes, an' I s'pose that's what's the matter. I've been drinking purty hard of late."

"Why didn't you let me know it?" said the other, "and I would have fixed you up sunthin'. I'm a temp'rance man, though I always have a drop in the house for medicine. The old farmer went in and made a rum punch and gave it to the fellow. This had an in-spiring effect, and the hired man said he felt better and started for the house. In a few minutes he came out dressed up in the new suit and started down the road toward Middletown, much to the old man's surprise. "Where you going?" sang out the farmer.

"To New Yorruk," was the prompt answer, as the pedestrian struck a five-mile rait

The old farmer's feelings may be bet-ter imagined than described as he saw $20 worth of his clothes on the road to New York, but at this moment his son came along, and, with a twinkle in his starboard eye, quietly said: "Where's the hired man, father?"

The old man, with eye still on the retreating figure, pointed to him and answered: "There he is! Don't you see him?" Then, after a short pause, he added: "But, my son, he would have been a good one if he had stayed."—Hart-ford Times.

Total length of fencing in the United States is upward of 6,000,000 miles, and the cost over $2,000,000,000. Cost of fencing during the last census year was nearly $79,000,000.

At noon the committee came, smelled, tasted and discussed, while she suffered agonies, as if running the gauntlet, but at last the blue ribbon was put on one of her loaves and the red on another.

Regardless of the latter, she seized the blue ribbon loaf, and hurrying to the office, she accosted the same suave official, who wondered at her breathless excitement as she held the loaf up and

"Are both your prizes here?"
"Yes, madam."

"Do you see that blue ribbon? I want my $5 and my farmer."

"Here they are," and he extended the bill and a copy of the Farmer. "When would you like to begin with the Farmer, madam?"

"I'm ready; for I come prepared to ke him. Which one is it?" and she looked inquiringly at a group of gentlemen who, noticing her excited manner as she came in, had stopped their conversation and were observing

"This is it," said the Superintendent, putting it in her hand; "date of Septem-"Why, this is a newspaper-I want my farmer." "Well, see, the Kansas Farmer," and he displayed the title-page.

"Was that what you meant by the farmer you was goin' to give for the best loaf o' yeast-light bread?"

"Yes, madame. Oh, not one copy, certainly, but a year's subscription," he added hastily, thinking he had discovered the cause of her trouble.

"That paper!" she arswered with the utmost scorn, as she sniffed with her upturned, freckled nose. "Is this the underhanded way you take to deceive a lone woman like myself? I wish I had words to speak out my mind to you and tell you just what I think about it."

"What did you expect? It was so announced on the premium list."

"Why, a farmer—a man, of course!" The unfortunate official tried to explain, and the other gentlemen assisted him, each assuring her that doubtless somebody might be found to fill the bill, but as no one offered himself for the vacancy Polly, not at all appeased, went off, leaving the Farmer and loaf of bread, but she did not forget the crispy $5 bill. In that dark hour of disappoint-ment it was a source of comfort to her, and kept her from utter despair as she hitched her horse and drove home single and alone.

At first she thought she would hunt up Mrs. Volney and speak her mind to her, but the ride home and the soothing purr of the old cat, which lay in the no longer tabooed arm chair, claimed Polly, and sober second thought prevailed. She did her own fall! plowing; it kept her at home three weeks, and when next she met Mrs. Volney, who had heard of her disappointment through the Superintendent, neither of them made any reference to the Kansas Farmer. But as the Farmer came to her regularly, she gradually learned to look for it, and felt a new importance to have some mail for her at the post office. From reading current prices, weather notes and prospects of crops, she began to care for other things; so that by the next fair she presented herself at the office with another loaf, and to the smiling Superintendent's "Miss Gorden, if you get the blue ribbon, remember it is only the Weekly Kansas Farmer for one ir from date we can give you," was able to reply with a return smile.

"I don't want any other. This is the best kind for me."

However, in Mrs. Volney's house, the inquiry is made weekly. "Has Polly's educator come yet?" and it always creates a ripple of laughter among the young folks.

A Mother's Love.

A private letter brings us this singular story. A widowed lady in New York gave her only daughter in marriage to a physician who lived in California. mother and daughter were deeply attached to each other, and had been inseparable companions for years.

After the newly married couple had gone, the mother, who was an invalid, sank suddenly and rapidly. Telegrams were sent after them urging them to return, but as their exact course was not known the messages failed to reach

The mother grew worse. Her prayer was that she might live to see her child again if but for a moment. On the afternoon before her death she was left alone for a few minutes, and when henattendant returned, she was found sitting up in bed, her cheeks flushed, her face illumined with delight.

"Have you seen Charlotte?" she asked. "She has just gone into the other room."
"Charlotte has not come," they said. "Oh yes," she replied smiling, "I have had her in my arms. I kissed her. God has been so good to me, to bring her back in time!" and so talking she sank into an exhausted slumber from which she never awoke.

Now on this afternoon the daughter was in Omaha, totally ignorant of her mother's illness. Her husband afterwards wrote that on that afternoon, being in their private parlor in a hotel, she suddenly sank into a deep sleep which lasted nearly an hour. From this she awoke pale and sobbing, saying she had dreamed she was with her mother, who looked strangely ill and exhausted. The impression, however, soon passed away.

This coincidence, of course, can easily be explained on natural grounds, and yet one almost wishes that it could not be explained. We would like to believe against reason that the mother's love would be strong enough to bring back her child for that brief moment to ease the pain of death.

In Pompeii, lately, workmen discovered in the hardened mud of new excavations, two empty spaces left by decayed and vanished bodies. The spaces having been been filled as a mould would be with plaster, as is the practice, the figure of a woman with her arms outstretched to a little boy were brought

The child was just beyond her reach, but as the fiery flood flowed in upon her, she had held out her arms to save him -in vain. Eighteen centuries have passed since then. Every atom of that woman's form has passed from sight.-Yet there is the mother's love, immortal

The Woman Who Rules Russia.

"Who is now the leading spirit of the zar's government?" asked a St. Petersburg correspondent of the New York Sun of a high official. "A woman, as usual," he answered. "Like other monarchical countries, we have always had some woman at the top or bottom of our government. Mme. Pobedonostzeff, the leading spirit of the Russian government of to-day, is the wife of the chief procureur of the holy synod and the most confidential counselor of the czar. She is young, beautiful and ambitious. She married Mr. Pobedonostzeff but a few years ago. Her husband, a very old gentleman, is in love with her. It is said of him that the knightly motto, "God and My Lady," he changed into "God and My Wife," and upholds it as devoutly as a knight of old. He rises early wrays to God, adores his wife and early, prays to God, adores his wife and then goes to see the czar, or the ministers, or the holy synod, and everywhere he tries his best to carry out the commands of his charming goddess. Mean-while she herself is not idle. She re-ceives hosts of fair visitors of high rank, who, while offering their homage, seize the chance of commending their husthis or that minister of state does himself the honor of paying his respects to her. Occasionally she visits her majesty the czaritza to cheer her soul in her golden cage. And the czar himself is there always at hand. Thus it has come about that, while the czar keeps away from the capital of his empire, Mme. Pobedonostzeff has somehow found herself to be the center of the Russian political world. Instead of the czar's policy, or the chancellor's, or the minister's policy, we hear of the madam's policy. With the modesty of an ascending star, she does not reveal her projects, but it is very doubtful whether any liberal reforms will find favor with

Hints for Poor Sleepers. Poor sleepers will find it advantageou, often to raise the head of the bed a foot higher than the foot, and then to sleep on a tolerably thick hair pillow, so as to bring the head a little higher than the shoulders. The object is to make the work of the heart in throwing the blood to the brain harder, so it will not throw so much. A level bed, with the head almost as low as the feet, causes an easy flow of blood to the brain and prevents

Persons who find themselves restless and unable to sleep at night, would do well to place the head of the bed toward the north, as it is undoubtedly a great conducive to health. A hot mustard foot bath, taken at bedtime, is beneficial in drawing the blood from the head, and thus inducing sleep. Sponge the entire length of the spine with hot water for ten or fifteen minutes before retiring. This will often insure a good night's sleep. A hearty meal, and a seat near a warm fire, after a long walk in a cold wind, will induce deep sleep in the majority of persons, no matter how lightly

Active outdoor exercise, and avoidance of excessive and long continued mental exertion, are necessary in all cases of sleeplessness. Where these means fail, such remedies as are known to diminish the amount of blood in the head should be resorted to-of course, under the direction of a competent physician. Opium, chloral, etc., increase the quantity of blood in the head, and are highly injurious. Their use should never be resorted to.—L. H. Washington, M. D.

Many good people find themselves, sometimes, in a condition of mind like the little boy who, on being asked whether he would rather have a Bible or a jewsharp, hesitated a moment and then replied: "Well, if it don't make any great difference with God, I would rather have the jewsharp."

A man has ninety-one sheep, eighty seven calves and thirty-five pigs, and he desires to divide them equally among three sons and a daughter so that the daughter shall have nine more head than the boys. What will be the share of each, providing three sheep are stolen, two calves get lost and five pigs follow

Port Hope, Thursday, Dec. 28, 1882

OUR NEW MAYOR.

We congratulate Mr. Adolph Hugel on is election as Mayor for 1883 by acolamation, and we confidently look forward to his proving a much more valuable Chief Magistrate than we have had for the past four years. This is paying him but a very poor compliment. Mr. Hugel s a keen, shrewd, pushing business man, -he is well known abroad, and commands the esteem and respect of our most prominent legislators and manufacturers. Though Mr. Hugel has had no experience in municipal matters, yet at the same time we believe he will exercise himself to the utmost to advance the best interests of the town of Port Hope.

MRS. WILLIAMS' DEATH.

Last week we expressed a hope, which was cherished by many, that the valuable life which then lay flickering on the dividing line between time and eternity, might be spared to her husband and family, and to the social circle which she and gives promise of great success. Scotch people so eminently adorned. That hope has an old-time folks all know what is the meaning of the sold out to close estates, partnerships or corporations. It is a term used when things are to not been realized. An all-wise Provible sold out to close estates, partnerships or corporations. I propose a sale of this nature. The prosper to dence, who ordereth all things well, had ous season so far this year, the largest I ever had, otherwise decreed; and those most deeply encourages me to affected must bow in meek submission to

In this saddest affliction of a life, which, with much of brightness and j y in it, has not been without a large neasure of sorrow and sadness, Colonel Williams has the deepest and most sincere sympathy of the whole community, ot alone of this neighborhood, where he has lived his domestic life, but of the more extensive sphere in which he has long moved in public positions, and in which he has won the heart-friendship of the leading men of the Dominion. Here this feeling found expression in the public demonstrations of sorrow, and in the vast and impressive assemblage which came together on Tuesday, to pay their ast tribute of respect and affection for the dead, and to manifest their sympathy TOWNSHIP of HOPE. telegraph wires conveyed numerous mesfor the living. In her domestic relations she was faithful and devoted, and in her intercourse with the outer world she was quietly and unostentatiously benevolent and kind. That in her the poor and distressed had a warm and assisting friend, was abundantly evidenced by the tears which dropped beside her mortal remains.

It was mercifully vouchsafed during her illness that she had a realizing sense of the great change that awaited her, and that she was able to give to her family the comforting assurance that she could meet it without fear.

The beautiful and impressive burial service of the Church of England was read by the Rev. Dr. O'Meara and the Rev. Charles J. S. Bethune, the choir of St. John's Church singing the hymn, "Days and moments quickly flying." The deep solemnity of the occasion will not soon be forgotten.

A Lindsay tory has named his horse 'Mowat," because "Mowat must go!"

Last year we referred to 1881 as being year of wonders. 1882 cannot claim particular distinction. One or two of the world's wise and honored heads have passed away. England has had another war, playing the part of arbiter in the disputes of her neighbors. With this exception, nothing marks its history as peculiar to us. Quiet and tranquility, peace and plenty, have on the whole been characteristic of the world throughout, noting, of course, the chronic exceptions of Ireland and Russia. In these wo countries have existed a state of affairs much similar; evictions, crimes and punishments have been the order of he day throughout. Home Rule on the one hand and Nihilism on the other, both natural outcomes of the existing circumstances of government, make their cases unpleasant ones to remedy. In another column will be seen an enumeration of events, which in their sequence will give tolerably good idea of what influences have been at work. Perhaps a little interlarding will be necessary.

In Canada the year opens out with politics at fever-heat. The National Policy and the Boundary Award, together with minor questions, occupy politicians up to the 20th of June. Then politics were given a rest. In the spring the Manitoba fever became epidemic, and Ontario seemed in danger of being decopulated of its wealth and enterprise. t, too, died away in due time. The North-west, however, continues to be settled at an amazing pace, and its towns

The United States has been blessed with the usual amount of sensations in the way of Oscar Wilde, Guiteau, Mrs. Langtry, etc. She has lost Longfellow. A great change of political sentiment has come about, as evidenced in the sweeping victories for the Democrats at the recent state elections. In other respec's our southern neighbors have not been

Between the war in Egypt and the woes of Ireland, England has had her hands full. She won a great victory over Arabi, showing that her prowess still exists without decay. The terrible persecution of the Jews in Russia will go down as a blot on t'e otherwise fair name of 1882.

Chinese immigration is one of the evils which threaten Canada. Thousands of the Chinese are coming into British Columbia. The danger from the Mongolian monster is just beginning to be realized. Amongst the political questions discussed at last session, was one comparatively new in our country, but nevertheless, bound to be thrust upon the attention of Canadians. We refer to Canadian Independence. Mr. Blake's stand in reference to it has opened up new lines of thought and left the threshold open to a new danger to our national prosperity. The definite In referring to Mrs. Williams we will dates from 1882. In this connection the laying out of a policy on independence step in our growth. We have reached that stage in puberty when we think it necessary to dictate to others. Ontario politics have been made memorable by the much y discussed "Marmion" question. We beg our reader's pardon for referring to it, but it really cannot be helped in a description of this kind. Closely allied in point of time with the foregoing, is the advisability of introducing the Bible in the schools as a textbook.

> There are a number of ideas suggested by the events of this year we would like to express, but as we have already occupied a large amount of space in the chronology of the year, further elaboration must be curtailed. Our readers will find the brief history a valuable one, and we advise them to cut it out and preserve it. A Happy New Year to all.

THE ELECTION OF COUNCILLORS.

THE contest for election to the Council promises to be a warm one, and in every Ward there will be a fight. In Ward 2, Mr. Stevenson has boldly taken his stand on the school question, leaving Ward 1, where he was sure of election. He has honestly and faithfully performed his duty to the town for a number of years, and we hope to see him returned at the head of the poll on this occasion. In Ward 3, Mr. Winslow's absence from home will prevent a personal canvass, but it is the general opinion that all the old members (Messrs. Beamish, Winslow and Burnham), will be re-elected. We are authorized by Mr. Wm. McKee to state that he is not a candi date for re election in Ward No. 2, and to express his thanks to his fellow citizens for the confidence reposed in him in the past, a compliment which he highly of Peterboro. The pall bearers were appreciates and is grateful for. Mr. McKee has resided nearly forty years in M. P. P.; Judge Benson; Messrs. D. Port Hope, and during the past fifteen years has been employed in the Midland Port Hope. The funeral was an exceed. Railway shops. Mr. McKee was placed in the Council as the representative of the mechanics of the town, and he has faithfully discharged his duty.

NOMINATIONS.

HERE AND ELSEWHERE.

Not very many ratepayers assembled in the Town Hall on Friday last. His Jolliness took the chair at the appointed hour and called for nominations for Mayor. Two were handed in. P. R. Randall, proposed by A. Hugel, and his nomination seconded by S. S. Smith; A. Hugel, proposed by Peter Robertson, and his nominaton seconded by J. P. Clemes. Mr. Randall retired, leaving Mr. A. Hugel Mayor for 1883.

Mr. D. Smart, after nomination was over, took the chair.

platform. He had served the town many years-four of these as Mayor. He thanked the Council for the degree of respect with which they had treated him, and the confidence they had reposed in him. It was no small thing to be a Councillor. It was easy enough to find fault, but the best cure for a grumbler was to elect him one year as Councillor. The Council going out could show the best record of any Council for the past fifteen years. He was not egotistical enough (?) to take credit for all this improvement in the condition of affairs, but if he were entitled to the blame for all the misdoings and mistakes, he was certainly entitled to all credit. It is poor rule that won't work both ways. (One reason for a mule's success.) When he took office in 1878 there was $3,824 of a floating debt. Now there were $4,500 Bills payable to liquidate, with $4,800 in the bank to do it with. At the end of the year there would be a surplus of about $864. He had done more than that. $15,000 worth of improvements, over and above the other exbenses, had been paid for, and for something which would never need to be done again. Next year the estimates need not exceed 14 cents on the dollar. The condition of the town financially is an excellent one. Certain parties have been hammering away at him. The press had called him incompetent, etc. They have not shown a single thing wherein he or the Council were guilty. They write and talk away, and they do not know a single thing about what they are writing or talking. He had been blamed for not getting factories in Port Hope. Now, he would say this to his successor, Mr. Hugel, by way of warning, if he did not succeed in getting two or three factories built while in office, he would go to the dogs. Conscientiously, he had done all in his power. He had never let private affairs interfere with his duties as a public

officer; never once had he neglected them. Few mayors or councillors could say that. Just here he would give another piece of advice to Mr. Hugel. If he wanted to be a very popular man, and hurt nobody's feelings, just let him sit in his chair and do nothing and it would be all right. After a few more remarks, of a more or less interesting nature, the ex-Mayor sat down amid several plaudits. Mr. Hugel was then called upon. He thanked the ratepayers for the honor bestowed on him. Fully realizing the responsibility of the position, he would endeavor to work with his whole might and power for the benefit of the town. If he failed, he hoped he would receive due consideration at the hands of the electors. Mr. Randall had made some surprising statements. First, he had warned him (Mr Hugel) that if he did not work hard and get factories established, he would go to the dogs; and then again if he (Mr. H.) wanted to be popular, he must fold his hands and do nothing. (Loud cheering.) The ex-Mayor takes credit for the debt that had been paid off, etc., but it struck him that all this had come out of the ratepayers. He (Mr. H.) was a perfectly green hand as far as municipal matters were concerned, and in this reepect he was quite willing to take the Mayor's advice to do nothing, and leave the management to the Councillors. There were other things, however, which he thought could be done, and he was prepared to do his best to meet the heavy responsibilities which would rest on him. Port Hope, geographically, has many advantages, and something ought to be done to induce capitalists to invest money in industries here. In addition to this, a more advantageous relation with the railways was desirable. Having the Midland Railway and shops in Port Hope, there was no reason why they could not be enlarged and many more men employed, instead of them being removed as rumored they would. We should have better railway stations and accommodation, and something ought to be done towards that end. He had come out with reluctance, but he would do everything in his power to advance the interests of the town, and hoped to meet with, in his policy, the approbation of the ratepay-

DEATH OF ONE OF PORT HOPE'S OLDEST RESIDENTS.

On Sanday one of Port Hope's very oldest inhabitants passed away, in the person of Mr. Edward Dodd, aged 74 years. Perhaps no one in town was better or more favorably known. The funeral on Wednesday was very large.

The deceased was born in Northumberland, England. He came to this country over fifty years ago with the Rutherford family, and settled with them in South Monaghan. For a short time he remained with them, but soon after came to Port Hope, and was first employed with Squire Williams, Col. Williams' father. Subse. quently he learned the distilling business with Mr. John Crawford, and remained with him as distiller for a number of years. He was afterwards similarly employed with Mr. Burton. In 1852 he began business for himself. From 1852 to 1859, being the time the railways were being built, Mr. Dodd amassed wealth rapidly, and at the end of the period named, he retired, and remained retired up to the time of his death.

A friend speaking to our representative said: "You can't put it too strong; Mr. Dodd was as good and as honest as ever lived in Port Hope." We can pay the memory of the deceased no higher compliment than simply repeat these words. He was a strict adherent of the Presbyterian faith, and was never known to shirk his religious duties. He was a good Conservative as well. For a great unmber of years he took a very active interest in politics, and was a Conservative sound to the core. He leaves a wife and one daughter to mourn his departure. Four daughters preceded him to the grave.

ECHOES OF PUBLIC OPINION.

GARFIELD IN A NEW LIGHT.

Dorsey was Garfield's mentor until the latter reached the White House, when he abandoned his friend. Dorsey, who is now on trial, and seeing the possibility of his tribulations ending up in imprisonprisonment, has given to the world a series of letters from the late President, which will darken the name of Garfield in history and put an end to the worship which was paid his memory. These letters prove beyond a doubt the intimacy between the late President and the Star Route thief, and the willingness, and even desire, of Garfield to secure his election by equivocal, dishonest and corrupt means.—Montreal Post.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Still another surprise is in store for the public. Following closely the announcement that Mr. Jno. Cameron had assumed the management of the Globe, comes the one stating that Hon. D. Mills is to succeed Mr. Cameron of the Advertiser, and to be known in future as its editor-in-chief. Mr. Mills has given up all hope of Parliamentary honors, his law course and all, and landed himself body and bones into journalism. From his extensive reading and wide range of information, the honorable gentleman should be a decided success as editor-if not too heavy for his readers. We predict for him a greater success than in any other line. Mr. Mills has not been a success as a politician. He has failed to popularize his theories. Theoretical, visionary politicians are useful in a sense -to relieve the matter-of fact monotony, in the same way that an occasional scrap of poetry relieves the heaviness of prose

NEWCASTLE.

NEWCASTLE, Dec. 26, 1882.

The result of the nominations last Friday must have been approved by the ratepay ers, as there was not one dissenting voice to the present council. The consequence was they were re-elected by acclamation. viz :- J. J. Robson, Reeve; Councillore-D. Allin, T. Douglas, F. J. Hedges, G. A. Jacobs, Jr.

Owing to the sleighing disappearing at Xmas, we have not had quite so lively a time as should have been in our town.

But we cannot complain. One of our young and enterprising men who left for the great North-west last summer, returned home last Saturday, and from what I can learn, his intention is to return again in about six weeks and locate in Regina. W. T. E. is one that cannot rest contented unless he is making a big strike. Although not a farmer, when there he got his $4.00 per acre for cradling wheat, and cut one and a half acres per day.

Dion Boucicault will bring out a new play in Boston, with a somewhat noval and risky principal character. This is a poor, half-witted Irish boy, with merely the instincts of an animal. He is like a dog in many respects, but is, of course, attached to the heroine, whom he follows about abjectly. When she is in sorrow he is frantic grief, and when she is happy he is wild with delight. When she tells him to bite he does it, and when she orders him to lie down he grovels at her feet. He is actuated by a passion of which he does not know the meaning, and which he does not discover until the last. "There are many such boys one is entirely natural character. I created him with a view to the future of my son, who will hereafter play the part; but for the present I shall assume it."

AN "OLD STOUGHTON BOTTLE."

To the Editor of THE TIMES.

DEAR SIR,—I notice the following in last week's News: "Coun. McKee is a candidate again, but the ratepayers might as well send an old strughton bottle to represent them." This reference to a respected townsman is worthy of the source from which it amanated.

Coun. McKee, it is true, is a working-man—a man who earns his living by the sweat of his brow. Coun. McKee is not as well educated, perhaps, as the editor of the News. He did not enjoy the advantages of being brought up at the expense of others; being brought up at the expense of others; when young he was never sufficiently versed in literature to appreciate the classic beauty of the "A. B. C. Directory" class of books. Coun. McKee is simply a workingman, who is noted for his sterling qualities of honesty, industry and truthfulness. No doubt these, in the eyes of your contemporary, are objectionable in any man, and furnish a good reason for calling Mr. McKee "an old stoughton bottle."

It is strange Coun. McKee was singled out for such an appellation, when several of out for such an appellation, when several of your contemporary's own stripe of politics, sitting around the Cenneil Board, have such an undeniable right to the title. The News should not do such a gross injustice to its friends.

However, as a ratepayers in Coun. Mc-Kee's Ward, I believe the workingmen recognize in him a representative upon whom they can depend, and who will not think less of him because he happens to be one of themselves — honest, hard-workingmen —
"Stonghton bottles," it may be. Occupying the position he does in the confidence of the electors of his Ward, Coun. McKee need not be ashamed because he bears his arm to the labor of the forge six days of the week, and carries home each night the marks of his calling. Such an avocation is vastly to be preferred to one which has for its object the weekly dissemination of slander.

Very truly yours, AN ELECTOR.

To the Editor of THE TIMES. SIR .- I see Mr. Harold Barrett is actively endeavoring to get into the Council again. In his card be says:-

"The interest that I have in the preper management of the town affairs, due to the large stake that I have in the municipality, is a sufficient guarance that my abilities will be used to reduce municipal taxation to the lowest possible point."

Please do not criticise the poor fellow's grammar, for he cannot be expected to know much. I would just like to ask this wouldbe aristocratic upstart if he wants to sell any more of his property to the corporation for street purposes and to further enhance the value of his own premises, for this is the only thing I know him to have accomplished during his previous term in the Council, except securing the defeat of his father inlaw (a good man, too) last year. No, Sir. we do not want any Harold Barretts in the Council, particularly this year. They are too numerous and useless. In my opinion, what we want in the Council areas and property of the council and the council areas are the council areas and the council areas are the council what we want in the Council is good, practical, business men, who command the respect and esteem of the ratepayers, and we can do better from the candidates nomi-nated than electing Mr. Barrett.

Yours, etc., RATEPAYER, WARD 3.

GOOD MUSIC.

DECEMBER 26, 1882. To the Editor of THE TIMES.

DEAR SIR:-It is not often the congrega-DEAR SIR:—It is not often the congrega-tion, of any church outside the large cities, is favored with such a musical treat as that which was given to the people of St. John's church on last Christmas day.

The conscientious work of the indefatig-able choir master, Mr. E. Shepherd, pro-duced the desired result, and met with its best reward in the hearty praises of all present at the service on that day.

The musical portion of the service was not only admirably selected, but as well per-only admirably selected, but as well per-formed, and the precision of time in such difficult choruses as the "Hallelujab," and "Unto us a child is born," from the Messiah was astonishing, and proved not only the patient skill of the choir-master, but also the talent of the ladies and gentlemen who compose the choir.

Neither choir-master nor choir, however, could have achieved such results had they not been sustained by the beautifully sympathetic accompaniments of the talented organist, Mrs. E. Shepherd, association with whom makes the musical part of the service doubly a work of love to the members of the choir. May her Christmases be many and happy, and her connection with the choir of St. John's long.

CHAS. SMITH

THE ELECTORS ARD NO. 1, OF THE

TOWN OT PORT HOPE.

Having been requested by several of the ratepayers of Ward 1, to come forward as candidate for municipal hono s, for the year 1833, and having been nominated, I have accepted the nomination, and respectfully solicity your vote and influence. My principles are well known. I am a strong advocate of economy and reduction in the present high rate of taxation. I was honored in the position of Councillor for the Township of South Monaghan for several years, and succeeded in getting the tax rate reduced one-half, with more efficient public service. I am satisfied after several years residing in this town, that the offices of both Harbor and Town are conducted at too great expense, and that the same can be greatly reduced. I will do all I can to greatly reduce the present high rate of taxation. Being strongly in favor of the estab-ishment of manufactures, I will assist our new Mayor, A. Hugel, Eq., in every possible effort. Ward No. 1, in this altrection, I consider has been greatly neglected in the past: I will demand that this neglected Ward receives its fair share of the ratepayers' money, judiciously applied to its streets, sidewalks, crossings, &c. Economy and reduction in the tax rates is my motto. On these grounds, I ask your vote and influence.

An English medical journal does not agree with those who would do away altogether with tobacco instead of making temperate use of it. The writer says: live in times in which the custom is to denounce as d'exrious everything which happens to be pleasant. Here, in a wild, romantic district, lying between Madatieh and Sanisat, he found a line of megalithic monuments, averaging between 55 and 60 feet in height, and bearing in-scriptions. They are in a remarkable state of preservation, and Herr Sester has no doubt that they formed a part of some great national sanctuary, dating back some 3,000 years or more. There was formerly at this place a necropolis of the old Commagene kings, so that it seems esonable to attribute these colossal mon uments to this ancient people, the here ditary foes of the Assyrians. Much amusement seems to have been caused in Constantinople by an incident that occurred the other day at Gulata. An iron box, covered with rust, and bearing evidence of great antiquity, was discovered beneath the rubbish of an old building in course of demolition in the Pershembe Bazaar. The discovery of the box was at once reported to the authorities, who were, moreover, informed that it contained, beyond doubt, treasure, dating back to the Genoese dominion. Attempts were made to open the box, but no key could be found that would fit, and it was at last decided that the box should be broken open. This was done on Nov. 19 with great ceremony. There were present on this occasion the Pre-fect of the city, the Mutessarif of Pera, and several chief efficers of police, besides other important functionaries. The excitementwas intense, and every one was on the tiptoe of expectation, but there was a sad revulsion of feeling wher, the box being opened, it was found to contain nothing more valuable than an old umbrella. Why the umbrella was placed in the box will never be known; but it was probably deposited there for security in the old By zantine times, when, as in the present day, there was a general looseness of morality as regards the ownership of umbrellas.

The following very remarkable little poem is a contribution to the S n Francisco Times; from the pen of Mr. H. A. Deming. The sacrifice by John Smith of his boy, at Los Augelos, Cal., after the manner of A'r ham's proposed killing of Isaac, was an example of religious zeal that was honest, even though murderous. Smith had never read the Bible until within a year, but on becoming a Methodist, spent most of his time pouring over its pages. He not only convinced himself that he ought to make a human sacrifice, but brought his wife and son, aged 13, to accept that view. "When he talked to me," says the wife, "and persuaded me that a good woman ought to think as her husband did, I got so as to take whatever he said as the truth. He made us fast, and Ben asked him frequently if God had ordered us to starve. He said

yes. When we announced that the boy must be killed, we both remonstrated, but finally thought it was all right. On the day appointed for the ceremony, he called Ben out of the house, and told him that he had to die for our Saviour. The little fellow knelt down, and I got on my knees by his side. John raised the knife, looked hard into the boy's face, and then drove the knife into his breast." The woman, who is now in jail, still believes that the deed was justifiable, though she breaks down on recollecting the sight. "I am always thinking of Ben," she exclaims. "I can hear him all times in the night, asking to be brought in and laid on his bed, and begging for a little water before he died,"

MR. DRURY, who seconded the address, hit the nail on the head when he suggested that "though they might rejoice that the Government was receiving more than a million dollars revenue from the forest resources, yet they must be convinced that the time is RAPIDLY coming when they would have to depend mainly on the products of the soil," i. e., we take it, upon a revenue derived from the farmer. Up to the 31st December, 1881, the gross receipts of this Province (since confederation) from woods and forests, had been $6,581,797, or over seven million and a half of dollars up to the present time. Now every dollar's worth, or Such as ASH, MAPLE, BIRCH, ELM, BASSWOOD, nearly so, of timber which produced that money stood to our credit as a portion of our capital on the 1st day of July, 1867, and where is it now? gone! Gone, it is true, in part for purposes of a beneficial character, but gone irrevocably as a revenue producer. The fact of the matter is the rulers of this Province for the last ten years have been getting rid of the property of the Province as fast as they could, and calling the moneys derived from its sale "revenue," with just the same sense and result as the spendthrift, who sells or mortgages farm after farm, and treats and spends the money thus obtained as "revenue." Such recklessness always has had, and always must have, the same ending, and the day is not far distant, unless the breaks are speedily applied, when the pinch in our Provincial finances will come, and the "p oducts of our soil" will, in one way or another, have to bear, according to Mr. Balfour, the evils of nearly doubled tax ation .- Peterboro' Review.

Tha Rooster's "Battering Ram." I suppose I needn't tell any of the Companion boys what a battering-ram is; but I want to tell them the true story of a polite and smart rooster that I was once acquainted with.

In the fall he and his family of hens were allowed to run in the garden and pick up all the seeds and grubs they could find. In the border, under a stone wall, was a row of tall, fall flowers such as dahlias, etc., and amongst them was one very tall sun-flower.

I suppose the great round heads of shining black seeds looked very tempting to "chanticleer," for he kept perking his head on one side and looking up at it, and then would fly up to try and reach the seeds. But he was a heavy as well as a tall bird, and would come fluttering down.

At last he did just what I've seen boys do when they wanted to jump over boys do when they wanted to jump over a brook or a wide ditch; he ran back a boys do when they wanted to jump over a brook or a wide ditch; he ran back a dozen steps or more and then dashed at the strong stem of the sun-flower with his bill,—or "battering-ram," as we called it,—and down came a shower of whales as well as about the same as well as after, about the whales as well as a bout the same tasks as well as a shell as a the coveted seeds .- Youth's Compan-

It Didn't Bust-

When McClellan reached Malvern Hill in his retrograde movement he had the Federal gunboats at his back. They took position in Turkey Bend, a mile and a half above the Hill, and from this spot they sent their monster shells over the Federals and into the woods where the Confederates were forming. One of the shells fell in front of a Brigadier-General from Georgia and two aides, and came rolling to their very feet. Like lightning each of the trio threw himself flat on the ground, rolled over once or twice, and then hugged the ground and waited. They could hear the sputter of the burning fuse, and the chances of being wiped out were ninety-nine in a hundred. In this situation one of the aides "Gentlemen, I believe secession is something, and while they were waiting to hear him declare himself he suddenly called out:

"Get up, gentlemen, get up—the dum thing isn't going to bust at all!"

The True Fish Story.

Coup, the circus man, says his threetailed Japanese crab cost him $2,200 in gold. Biggest fish story of the season. Boston Globe. Is it, now-is it, now? Perhaps you think you are an authority on the value of crabs! Did you ever purchase a crab at Long Branch? No? Well, we will not be harsh with you; but if you are ever left a fortune, and go to Long Branch and invest in a crab without even one tail, you will know colossal fish story or not. Now, then, get some one to leave you a fortune .-

More people have read The Sun during the year just now passing than ever before since it was first printed. No other newspaper published on this side of the earth has been bought and read in any year by so many men and women.

We are credibly informed that people buy, read, and the Tur Suy for the following reasons.

and like THE SUN for the following reasons. Among others:Because its news columns present in attractive dissent as plain'y and fearlessly as when supported by general approval. The Sun has absolutely no purposes to serve, save the information of its readers purposes to serve, save the information of its readers and the furtherance of the common good.

Because it is everybody's newspaper. No man is so humble that The Sun is indifferent to his we fine and his rights. No man is so rich that it can allow it justice to be done him. No man, no association of men, is powerful enough to be exempt from the stict application of its principles of right and wrong. Because in politics it has fought for a dozen years, without intermission and sometimes almost alone among newspapers, the fight that his resulted in the recent overwhelming popular verdict against Robersonism and for honest govinnment. No matter what party is in power, The Sun stands, and will continue party is in power, The Sun stands, and will continue to stand, like a rock for the interests of the people against the ambition of bosses, the encreachments of against she ambition of bosses, the encroachments of monopolists, and the dishonest shemes of public robbers.

All this is what we are fold almost daily by our friends. One man helds that The Sun is the best religious newspaper ever published, because its Christanity is undifuted with cant. Another holds that it is the best Republican newspaper printed, because it has already whipped half of the raccals out of that party, and is proceeding against the other half with unduminished vigor. A third believes it to be the best magazine of general literature in existence, because its readers miss no hing worthy existence, because its readers miss no hing worthy of notice that is cu rent in the world of thought. So every friend of THE SUR discovers one of its many sides that appeals with particular force to his indi-wrong, and I'm sorry I took up arms."

ONE. The FIRST ingredient in DR. WILSON'S PULMONARY CHERRY BALSAM is an extract of wild cherry bark, which soothes the irritated surfaces in the lungs and air passages, acts as a tonic to the stomach, giving a healthy appetite, has a soothing, sedative influence on the heart and blood vessels, preventing palpitation. TWO.

The SECOND loosens and displaces the tough, stringy phlegm which causes so much pain and distress, and which is the cause of the convulsive coughing.

When Billy Root was a little boy he was of a philosophical and investigating turn, and wanted to know almost everything immediately. He could not wait for time to develop his intellect, but he crowded things and wore out the patience of his father, a learned savant, who was president of a livery stable in Chicago. One day Billy ran across the grand hailing sign generally represented as a tape worm in the beak of the American eagle. Billy asked his father what "E Pluribus Unum" meant. He wanted to gather in all the knowledge he could so that when he came out West he could associate with some of our best men. "I admire your strong appetite for knowledge, Billy," said Mr. Root, "you have a morbid craving for cold hunks of ancient history and cyclopedia that does my soul good, and I am glad, too, that you come to your father to get accurate data for your collection. That is right. Your father will always lay aside his work at any time and gorge your mind with knowledge that will be useful to you as a farrow cow. The strongest and best evidence to bring forward to establish an honest and just chim, is to produce those witnesses whose intelligence, candor, honor, and veracity are unimpresenable. The results which have followed the ose of Flax-Seed Emulsion Comp. in NERVOUS EXHAUSTION, PARALYSIS & GENERAL DABLITY as well as the affections of the Throat and Lungs acute and chronic Rhuenatism, might seem almost incredible, were it not for the graquestionable evidence which we present in our promphlet of testimonials of many of the most prominent citizens of the city of Ogdensharz, where Flax-Seed Emulsion Comp. has been manufactured and largely sold during the past years. We invite the closest investigation on Flax-Seed Emulsion Comp. in Ogdensburg, N. Y., where it is thoroughly known.

I want to recommend Finx-Seed Emmission Compound to all persons who are taking Cod Liver Oil Emmission I have taken Cod Liver Oil for six month without getting any beneft. During this time I was constantly spliting blood. I had not taken more than one bottle of Flax-Seed Emulsion Comp. before I began to feel better and now am better than I have been in six months. I am able to walk around every day and have not raised one neor of Blood since I began to take the Flax-Seed Emulsion Comp. I hope every person with weak lungs will use the Flax-Seed Emulsion Comp. for it is far better than the Cod Liver Oil and very pleasant to take. It never deranged my stomach as the take. "I have sent a sermon to the TIMES on the same subject, which I happened to have by me. I think it will be a sufficient answer to the brother. The great mistake in the minister at Port Hope (Rev. Jas. Cleland) is that he does not recognize that Benjamin is Israel. Now, the tribe of Israel was left with the tribe of Judah until the year seventy of our Lord. They are, nevertheless, of Israel. The disciples were of this tribe, all except Judas, with that exception, there was not a Jew that was a disciple, they were all men of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin."

THE scenery which is used in the hrst, second and fourth acts of "Young Mrs. Winthrop," at the Madison Square Theatre, is constructed of wood and brass. The metal was cut by hand in India for Louis C. Tiffany & Co., who imported it. In India, this metal is used for decorating rooms, dedicated to special ceremonials. The walls and ceiling of the scene at the Madison Square Theatre contain over two hundred Oriental designs. Its full beauty can only be appreciated by a minute inspection through an opera glass. It shows the kinds of house decoration which the more wealthy are now introducing in New York city homes.

THE annual tea and entertainment gotten up by the Presbyterian congregation of Garden Hill, on Christmas day, proved highly successful. The audience-room and basement were filled to overflowing. Tea was served from 5 to 8 o'clock, during which time the waiters were kept on a continual run. $125 was realized from the supper. About 8 o'clock the Rev. Mr. Jamieson, the respected pastor of this church, took the chair, and after a few brief remarks, called upon the Revs. Mr. Taylor, of the M. E. Church, and Mr. Cameron, of Millbrook. These gentlemen pleased the audience with their well advised and practical addresses. During the evening the choir, led by Mr. John Martin, favored the meeting with choice selections, which were well rendered. The meeting broke up about 10 o'clock.

SINGING AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH .- As

special preparation had been made by the St. John's choir for Christmas Day, and a difficult programme selected, their efforts are worthy of special mention. Two of the selections, "For unto us a Child is born," and the "Hallelujah Chorus," as is well known, are extremely difficult. Their rendition, with the exception of the opening part of the latter, was quite successful. To say they did justice to these fine songs, is to pay St. John's choir no mean compliment. A number of other denominatious were present to listen to the singing. Mr. and Mrs. Shepherd, who have taken very great pains, and worked indefatigably, deserve every credit. The following was the programme of the song service:-Cffertory, Chorus, "Hallelujah",, Handel spectfully,

THE JOLLY PATHFINDERS.

On the second of January the above popular company is to appear in the Music Hall, in their reconstructed and incomparable musical oddity, "Scraps," or "Fun at the Pleasure Grounds." Concerning this, the Lynchburg, (Va.) News says: "The play is simply bubbling over with humorous songs, ridiculous situations and irresistibly funny character representations." The Toronto World speaking of a performance, remarks that "the audience was highly delighted, and loudly applauded their amusers. Nothing was tire-

" FIVE SOCIAL FRIENDS" BALT.

This interesting event took place on Tuesing said he did not want their money. If day evening in the Music Hall. Everything was arranged in style worthy of the "Five Friends," who spared no pains to make the hall appear attractive, and give good value in amusement for the price of the ticket. The decorations were elaborate and looked really fine, consisting of the flags and colors of a number of vessels in port, together with beautiful models of vessels and steamers placed at convenient intervals. In the centre of the floor was a stand for the master of ceremonies. This was artistically decorated with evergreens. On the whole the effect was very imposing. About fifty couple were present, and enjoyed themselves thoroughly. At midnight the company adjourned to the Queen's Hotel for supper. No laudatory remarks are required in referring to that part of the programme-Mr. Adams always pleases as a caterer. The festooning, etc., of the hall was left untouched for the assembly last night. Everything passed off pleasantly and orderly, and the "five social friends" are to be congratulated upon their success.

THE NEW MANAGER OF THE GLOBE.

Wonders will never cease. The public was tion of Gordon Brown from the management of the Globe, realizing that the Globe was no more the Globe since the Browns had departed. But if it were possible for surprise to be more complete, it was, as announced in Tuesday's Globe, when John Cameron of the London Advertiser undertook its management. We hoped for signs of better when Gordon Brown retired, but it appears disappointment is in store for the public. Formerly the opinions of the Globe were dictated by the Browns. Now it is the mouth-piece of a business and political clique, who have hired Mr. John Cameron, at a certain stated salary, to run the paper to suit them. The Globe henceforth must be regarded politically, as the mouthpiece of Mr. Blake. It cannot otherwise be directed by Mr. John Cameron-the man who started the Liberal in Mr. Blake's interst, and who was the managing editor of the London Advertiser, the mouth-piece of Hon. D. Mills.

The new manager is a nice man in his way. He makes a tolerably good Sabbath school teacher, is goody-good on the temperance questi an, and quite in his element at a tea fight or a camp-meeting, but to run a heavy paper like the Globe he is not made of the "right kind of stuff." As it was in the Advertiser, perhaps Mr. Mills will contribute the heavy articles. At all events, Hons. Blake and Mills will receive very particular attention now from the Globe. If the Globe is to be the organ of the party, the appointment of Mr. John Cameron as its manager means that Blake and Mills are to be considered first and second in the Reform ranks. We are sorry for the Globe and the Reform

Miss Maggie Walsh, who has taught in School Section No. 2 for a number of years, has left us and is going to take the school on the gravel road between Bowmanville and Newcastle. Before leaving she invited the parents of the children to an examination and entertainment, which she had taken great pains to arrange successfully. The scholars evidenced scholastic ability surprising in children of their age, while the entertainment furnished by them was really enjoyable. The school was tastefully ornamented. Miss Walsh was held in very high esteem by her pupils and those in the section, generally, and on the occasion referred to, she was presented with the following address, accompanied by a handsome presentation:-

DECEMBER 22nd, 1882.

To Miss Walsh, Teacher. In the order of a kind Providence we are permitted to assemble here, at the close of another year, to exchange greetings. But that this occasion be not soon forgotten, we take this opportunity of expressing our deep regret for the loss of so amiable, as well as efficient teacher, and can only console ourselves in the fact that what is our loss will be another's gain. We also take this opportunity of expressing our esteem for our much respected teacher, by presenting you, Miss Walsh, with this album. We do not expect you to prize it for its intrinsic worth, but merely as a token of the good feeling which exists between you and the parents of the children, of which you have been the instructor for so long. Wishing you every success, and a Happy New Year, we remain, respectfully, Your Loying Scholars.

CHRISTMAS DAY.

The 1882nd anniversary of Xmas did not pass off as merrily as we anticipated. The thaw of the days preceding spoiled the roads and to a great extent curtailed the joys expected. However, not less than the usual share of felicity was experienced. Had the sharp, brisk weather continued, Monday would have been a day unexampled in the stirring music of sleigh bells. On the whole, it passed off very pleasantly, although a little dull. One or two rows occurred, but of no particular consequence. All the "boys" who have been scattered here and there, returned that day, and the day was blessed with many a happy re-union. The world could hardly do without Christmas.

MAYOR RANDALL'S LAST KICK.

Hithertoour feeling in regard to the Mayor, in common with many others, has been one bordering on contempt. We have now nothing but compassion for the poor man who has stepped down and out. His position on nomination day was one that could not help moving any one to pity. As ex-Mayor Randall stood and pleaded for recognition of his usefulness, the sight was sufficient to cause the most hard-hearted to weep, and the more one considers his case, the more is one inclined to be sorry. Mr. Randall once had political friends, or at least thought he had. Now that he has done them all the service he can naturally be expected to do, he is kicked overboard, and told, if he likes, to go over to the Conservatives-whom he at Millbrook professed to love like brothers, Poor fel'ow, he is dead ! His last struggles took place on Friday, and in going out of public life he died hard. He has been given the required amount of rope, and he has completed the job of hanging himself with the perfectness of the trained hangman. His condition reminds one of the old man with the ass who tried to please everybody, only he is worse off than the old man in the fable. He has not only lost his ass, but himself in

With these few comments we would have let the memory of a departed life pass, had not Mr. Randall in his expiring gasps referred to a portion of the press, which, in their not complimentary reference to himself, he thought were written without the writer having any knowledge of his subject. As we had always opposed His Worship's having a seat at the head of the Council Board, we supposed the reference was to THE TIMES. We have repeatedly said that P. R. Randall was incompetent as a Mayor. The estimate in which the ex-Mayor is now held by his own party and the citizens of Port Hope generally, is all that is necessary to justify us in our oft-repeated opinion. He has eight years uninterruptedly sat at the Council Board, No better opportunity ever was afforded any man to do something. His complete failure is self-evident, and he ends his course ignominiously by being kicked out, and that by his friends.

We have not said that Mr. Randall shirked his duty as councillor or mayor. He attended all the meetings, and was possibly informed in municipal affairs. Beyond that he was powerless. He was always blowing greatly surprised to hear of the forced resigna- about what he was going to do; he was full of buncombe and impossible he did not do, if recorded, would make a voluminous volume. Mr. Randall takes credit for clearing off the floating debt of the town, and paying some $15,000, besides, for improvements. According to his confession in the same speech, the ex-Mayor in excusing himself from any blame in connection with his municipal regime tells us that he was only one-tenth of the council, and therefore had very little to do with the matter. When it comes to taking credit, ex-mayor Randall wants it all. There is nothing hoggish about this defunct alderman.

Another peculiarity about the speech was his congratulations of the ratepayers upon the prosperity existing in town, and the splendid state of finances existing, not forgetting to add that all this had come about under his own wise guidance. Last summer Mr. Randall was stumping the townships during election times, and told the electors that a terrible state of affairs existed in Port Hope. What about the idle mechanics, and unemployed sailors going through the streets, and everything else in a state of bankruptcy, -now? The ex-Mayor deserves a leather medal for consistency, for a pronounced in-stance of which we refer our readers to his speech on nomination day. His advice to his successor is characteristic of him all the way through his career. Finally, we echo the sentiments of all when we say that the town is heartily glad it is rid of him, once for all. In trying to pursue a course of popularity, in which twofacedness was his trump card he lost his friends, and failed to secure the support of those he wished to win over-admirably illustrating the fable of the "Dog and the Shad-While no doubt many feel sorry for him in his present humiliating position, yet they cannot help but feel as well, that his fate is the result of a course, deliberately chosen as a means to an end. His late Worship being politically and municipally dead as a door nail, we can now afford, in compassion, to bury the hatchet, and leave Mr. Randall to reap in silence the reward he has so well earned. Requiescat in pace.

BOOKS AND PAPERS.

GRANDMOTHER NORMANDY. By the Author of "Silent Tom." V. I. F. series. Boston; D. Lothrop & Co. Price $1.25. The series of which this volume is the third issue, has already achieved a remarkable popularity. It deals more directly with some of the vital points of Christianity, than either of its pre-decessors, and show how the bitter things in every one's experience may be turned to good and lasting account. The story itself is fascinatingly told. The character of Grandmother Normandy, stern, relentless, and unforgiving, almost to the last, is strongly drawn, and the author has shown her skill in the means she has devised for softening the old lady's heart and melting the pride which has wrought so much unhappinees in her family. The book is written in an entertaining style, and without any flagging of interest from the first chapter to the last.

Funk & Wagnall's, New York, have arranged with Messrs. Cassel', Petter & Galpin, to issue immediately from their regular imto issue immediately from their regular imported plates, a remarkably cheap edition of Canon Farrar's new work, "The carly days of Christianity." The price of the work was $5 and $2, according to binding; the new edition will be, in paper 40 cents; in cloth, 75 cents. It will be wholly unabridged, printed from the original plates, containing the notes, appendix, etc., exactly the same as the high-priced edition. the high-priced edition.

The Crusader, of London, and the Citizen, of Toronto, the two temperance papers of the Province, have amalgamated, and now the new paper is a highly creditable journal.
