HORSERADISH AND GLUE.

M . Lechner's Industries, the growth of which he ascribes to the beneficial effects of the N. P.

Mr. Lechner's bottled horseradish is well known to connoisseurs in relishes. Several years ago this gentleman started his industry of pickling with six roots; this year he has 12,000 roots ready for pulling and pickling, and considering the constant care and attention required in their cultivation, the manual labor devolving on Mr. L. speaks volumes for his industry. Orders are coming in from all the neighboring towns, and Mr. Lechner, who thoroughly understands the N. Armoracia in its tillage and preparation, regards his as one of the staple and remunerative industries of the town. There are five gardens used by Mr. Lechner in the cultivation of the radish.

Lately, Mr. Lechner has branched out in another direction. For twenty-three years he was employed in a glue factory in Philadelphia, and so has all the tricks of the trade at his fingers' ends. As in his pickling business, so in the manufacture of glue, the beginning was in a humble way, no less than by using "a mush pot in the back kitchen." Lately, Mr. Lechner has been carrying on operations in a building just in the rear of the car works foundry. Business so far has been so successful, that the ambitious manufacturer felt justified in buying the shop, and renting the grounds upon which it is located, the purchase and lease being completed on Saturday. Every Saturday night the butcher shops are visited, and all the cows' feet, out of which, it is needless to inform our readers, the "gum stickum" is made, are bought up and carted to the glue factory. Through boiling, the oil from the marrow and joints of the feet and shanks is extracted, and thus besides glue, Mr. Lechner is enabled to manufacture Neat's fcot oil, sewing machine oil, and coarser oils for other purposes. The process employed in making glue is an interesting one, but we have been strictly enjoined not to give it away. We are informed by cabinet makers that the article manufactured by Mr. Lechner is a superior one, and the very best in the market.

To adopt the vernacular of the genial owner of these embryo industries, "dees is vat the National Bolicee has done vor Porte Tope. Oof it was not for it, I good manuvacture nod dese tings. I am von grade beleefer in de National Bolicee, und mine young vriend dond you forgot dot one bit." Mr. Lechner is characterized, like all representative Teutons, by an industry, a frugality and shrewdness that does him honor, and although he does not possess the advantages which many others enjoy, he deserves all the more credit for his enterprise and determination to succeed in the face of many difficulties.

Are Anglo-Saxons Israelites?

Dr. Wild's Lecture on Jeremiah in Ireland-Queen Victoria the direct descendant of Solomon -The Harp that sounded in Tara's Hall was David's Harp.

Dr. Wild's iecture was a subject for some considerable expectancy on the part of many. The Music Hall on Thursday night last was well filled by an audience capable of appreciating such a lecture as it proved to be. The characteristics of Dr. Wild's speaking have been very much exaggerated. Instead of being wild and sensational in his manner, he is, on the other hand, very natural, striving after no oratorcal effect whatever, but "speaking right on" in an earnest, conversational style, which charms and interests. He is peculiar, because he is entirely non-ministerial, more than for any other reason. His audience on this occasion, so far as we can learn, were highly pleased, and if the "Dr." should ever make it convenient to give another lecture in Port Hope, he would be sure of a good house. His remarks were quite extended, and we cannot give anything but a brief synopsis. After a few preliminary remarks, the lecturer spoke of the vast extent of the habitable world, and the portion yet uninhabited. He believed in the survival of the fittest, by which the weaker nations would be gradually extingnished, and one ultimately and solely survive. What nation would that be? He believed it would be the nation of Angle-Saxons, including, of course, the United States. The great elements of power in determining the place of a nation were:—Population, language, religion and race. In each of these respects England was asserting her supremacy. Her population was increasing with great rapidity; her language was becoming the language of commerce and science; in fact, the language of the world. Wherever the English went they carried their language send a proper boat.

Coun. Burnham, in regard to the emigrant sheds, thought if any place between Toronto and Kingston needed them it was Port Hope, and if we wanted them we would have to move at once on the same would be send to the same was true of England's religion.

English went they carried their language with them, and made those around them learn it, while all other nations, when they imigrated, adopted the lauguage of the people they went among. The same was true of England's religion. recognized to be that of christianizing the world, the only nation that sent out missionaries. There was a peculiarity about the Anglo-Saxon race; their origin could not be traced. We think convergence a clear. The Mayor said they pushed things in Co-be traced. We think ourselves a clever in the 17th Chap. of Ezekiel: Thus saith bourg. He was talking to the emigrant people, but we are the only nation that the Lord God, I will also take of the out where came from Sharon Turner, the great authority on the subject, carries us back to Central Asia, but from there we can go farther. The very name Saxon, according to Max Muller, the greatest living philologist, signifies in the original Sanskrit "a people without epoch or beginning of days." The Jews are a people we cannot reason about, the same as other nations. At the beginning of the christian era they numbered so many, and after 1,800 years they number neither more nor less. For that long period they had existed as a people without a king, state, government or land. It was not because they were not rich, moral, intelligent, and numerous enough, because they were all these. It was only since a few years after the speaker was born that any Jew in all this long period of time ever owned a foot of land in any country. Why was it? Simply because the Lord had decreed it. All this was opposed to reason, still we must believe it. A man who believes in a Jew, believes in God, and in a Divine economy. There were divisions in Jacob's family, as was natural where two wives were involved; there were two legal mothers, Rachael and Leah. So there was a division in the Kingdom of Israeltwo factions: Saul, the son of Rachael, leading one; and David, son of Leah, leading the other. At this point Israel splits into two nations. Rehoboam succeeded Solomon, but ten tribes revolted under him and took a king unto themselves. From this onward they are two distinct nations, the ten tribes being called Israel, and the two remaining tribes Judah, or the Jews. After this, wherever Judah and Israel are spoken of, they mean entirely different people, a distinction very few, not even ministers, understand. Tom Paine would not have become an infidel had he understood it, because he confesses that the prophesics turned him against a belief in the Bible. In one passage he saw the Jews cursed, and in the same breath Israel blessed. How that a God could bless and curse a nation at the same time was inexplicable to Tom Paine. He did not know that Judah and Israel did not mean the same people. The two Kingdoms had gone on side by side for 254 years, with 19 kings to each, but still distinct. Judah had been cursed and Israel blessed. The ten tribes were carried captive by the Assyrians into Halah and Habor, the very point where Sharon Turner finds the Saxon. Who could say they were not identical? 184 years after this the Jews were carried captive into Babylon, but they returned; the Israelites never did. We are told that:

"So was Israel carried away out of their own land to Assyria unto this day." Their places in the Holy Land was filled by Samaritans, who were there when Christ came, so that the Israelites could never have returned. Where did they go? Christcom-manded his disciples to go not in the way of the Samaritans or unto the Gentiles but unto pray that it may be on earth as in heaven, and so on earth there would be one throne, one king, one high priest, a spiritual and temporal throne, the symbol of that above.

David's throne, we are told, is to last forever.

The national throne of David must still be filled by David's seed. What other throne could this be than that of Queen Victoria?

Those who did not believe it might choose another if they could. Reuben's birthright as the eldest son was given to the sons of Joseph, and so there were two forms of government in the Saxon or Israelitish race,

Manasseh being represented by that of the United States. But the sovereignty remain-ed with Judah. Our Saviour was a Jew. Our sovereign is of Jewish race, not Israelitish and so not Saxon. She was of Jewish decent on her father's side. She took her title from the lost sheep of the House of Israel.

was stipulated that its ruins should not be disturbed. Antiquarians would long ago have disclosed its mysteries had it not been for this. Jeremiah was known as the Sainted Patriarch. A fictitious person has been substituted as a national saint, St.

Patrick. All the miracles and wonders attributed to Ireland's saint had been attributed to Jeremiah, or the Saint Patriarch, centuries before. The Episcopalians, in their grand liturgy, appointed a portion of scripture to be read each day, so that every chapter, with some slight portions omitted, of the whole

Bible was read once a year. But both in the old and new lectionary one chapter, and one only, was omitted-Ezekiel xvii. Why? Because Te Tephi was so clearly portrayed as the tender young twig taken from the top of a high cedar and planted on a mountain of the height of Israel, where it grew to a goodly cedar, bringing forth boughs and bearing fruit, so that fowl of every wing should dwell in the shadow of its branches. The omission was providential, to call more attention to the passage. This is called Ezekiel's riddle.

There was another thing Jeremiah brought to Ireland with him-a stone. In the temple was kept the Ark of the Covenant, the ten tables of stone and Jacob's Pillow, or the stone Jacob slept on on his way to Padanaram. When Nebuchadnezzar ravished the Temple, a list of what he stole from it is given, but those things mentioned above are not in that list. Hence it is only fair to infer that Jeremiah took them with him when he escaped. The Spaniards speak of their wonderful visitor as having with him a stone and wonderful box, which could work miracles. That stone is in the coronation chair at Westminster. If we went to Westminster Abbey we could see it. Money could not buy it, for it was worth more than the crown or royal diamonds. The sovereigns of the British Empire were crowned on it. Cromwell, who would not go into the Abbey, had it taken out that he might sit on it when installed as Protector. It was called the stone of destiny, and connected the three kingdoms of England, Tara and Israel. The English got it from Scotland by stealing it.

Fergus of Scotland had borrowed it from his brother in Ireland to be crowned on it, and,

Scotchman-like, forgot to pay it back. Jeremiah brought it from Jerusalem. Thus the chain was complete. As Irishmen substituted St. Patrick for the Saint Patriarch, so they had substituted a blarney stone-the touch of which was supposed to make lips eloquent-for Jacob's Pillow. As Jacob's stone was in existence, so was the Ark of the Covenant-hid in Tara. There was a degree of Masoury founded on the hiding of the Ark, originally of nine members representing the nine tribes. Royal Arch Masonry came from Tara. This degree would some day have its work completed, for the Ark would be discovered. The lecturer had three pictorial illustrations with him-the Royal Arms and two sides of the United States seal. The crowned lion on the Royal Arms, travelling east for a supporter was the lion of Judah travelling from Tara to Scotland and England.

The little crowned lion for a crest was Eph-raim. The nine lions in all represented the nine tribes. The unicorn moving west and with a broken chain was Benjamin, the tribe of Israel that stayed with Judah to receive our Saviour. It was commonly understood that ten tribes were carried into captivity, but in reality there were only nine Benjamin stayed with Judah, we are told, as a light unto his brethren. It was not until the siege of Jerusalem that the tribe of Benjamin separated themselves. Those who received Christ all belonged to the tribe of Benjamin, and they were commanded to flee out of the city

Kings of Tara. He would not quarrel with King James as to his descent. After tracing Victoria's descent back through a long line of westward and settled in Normandy, the only westward and settled in Normandy, the only Kings to those of Tara, he then took up the part of France that never proved recreant to Christian principles. The Huguenots and the people of Ulster were alike in this. The thread of succession from Solomon down. When Nebuchadnezzar took King Zedekiah prisoner and blinded him, he cut off the heads Normans came to England in the eleventh of all the members of the Royal family, except century, and brought the unicorn with them. two daughters of Zedekiah, who went to Egypt with the prophet Jeremiah, and the The shamrock typified the birthright divided into three parts, the thistle Saxon Israel small rempant who escaped there. (See Jer. while spreading and stinging, and the rose 43.) Henceforth Jeremiah vanishes from the same race when flourishing. The motto was "God and my right," and the sovereign sight in Scripture. There is no mention of his death or burial place. Escape by land was filled both the spiritual and the temporal throne of David. All this might not have cut off by the enemy, so he must have gone by sea. He had two lines to choose from. been intended, but men builded better There was the Phonicians and the men of than they knew. The great seal of the Dan, who were senfarers, trading as far as the British Isles. He would naturally go with United States was next examined. Because Reuben defiled his father's the men of Dan rather than with foreigners, bed, the birthright passed to Joseph. Of ard now Jeremiah, having vanished from his two sons, Ephraim and Manassch, Ephsacred history, crops up in profane. Early raim stands for England, Manasseh for the Spanish history speaks much of a wonderful United States. Ephraim was to be the visitor, a descendant of Moses, travelling on greater nation; Manasseh a great nation, his way to "Scotia," the first name of Irebut not so great as Ephraim, who was to be land. The early Irish historians, four out of a great nation and a company of nations, five of them, and he did not speak from hear-sey for he had studied the originals, said that (England with her 56 Colonies.) Manasseh left England in Cromwell's time (Isaiah the Island was settled by two distinct peo-ples, the Phœnecians and Danites, D.m in 49, 19.) When he became a nation he had to adopt a design for the great seal. Ulster and the Phonicians in the south. Examine it. You have an eagle with out-stretched wings, the striped escutcheon on These people did not agree in Palestine, nor its breast, and a scroll in its beak upon which is inscribed "E Pluribus Unum" had they agreed in Ireland. The old Irish historians speak of a "Divine man," a stranger, a Hebrew, who promised the king of Munster a beautiful young princess for a wife if he would forsake his idols, establish schools for the prophets, and make her offspring heirs to this throne. This beautiful One out of many, as Manasseh was. Over the head of the eagle there is a glory, the parting of clouds by light; in the opening appear 13 stars forming a constellation spring heirs to this throne. This beautiful argent, on an azure field. In the right princess was Te Tephi, a daughter of king talon is an olive branch, asymbol of peace; in the left is a bundle of 13 arrows: These Zedekiah, and the "Divine man" was Jeremiah. The bargain was kept, the idols were are the 13 states symbolical of the 13 forsaken, schools were established in this "Isle of the Saints," and King David's descendant succeeded in a long line to the throne. The capital was rechristened Tara, tribes. On the reverse side of the seal is a pyramid-an unfinished pyramid-with the thirteenth part, or Manassch, removed. This is exactly the same as the great pyraand a palace was built of Hebrew design. The mid in Egypt is to-day. The arrows being harp that sounded in Tara's halls was David's joined show that the ten tribes would yet harp, different from all others, now the emblem of Ireland. An old Irish Coin, still to be seen in the museum bearing the date of Jeremiah's visit to Ireland, is stamped on one side with the "Figure of Liberty" and on the other a woman in a Chariot drawn by a lion. This was none other than Te-Tephi, the daughter of Zedekiah and the wife of the Ulster Prince, and the Lion was the Lion of the Tribe of Judah. Ireland at that time as, is well known, possessed the best schools of the world; to her flocked students from all parts of all the world. The students

The Dr. concluded with a very eloquent peroration, eulogizing our noble Queen and wishing prosperity to the race, and the banner which has so long floated triumphantly over as a beacon light guiding England to her destiny.

A vote of thanks was tendered the lecturer, who responded in brief but appropriate terms.

(From the Peterboro Examiner.)

Last Friday Ennismore was the scene of a lively little escapade, reminding one of some parts of Ireland in these lively days, and showing that an Irishman's instinctive determination to cling to his home is not weakened by removal across 3,000 miles of salt sea. On Friday, Sheriff Hall went out to Ennismore to execute a writ of possession issued in the case of Smith vs. Patrick and Bridget Collins. (H. H. Smith for a Toronto Loan Company.) Patrick was found in possession, and not trusting implicitly to the nine points of the law given by possession, supplemented them with two points of a pitchfork. Sheriff Hall was confronted by a closed door, which was forcibly broken open. The house was filled with Collins' friends, but they were persuaded to go out quietly, but Mr. Collins had retreated to his citadel-up stairs, where he had provided himself with weapons, such as clubs, pitchforks, sleigh-runners, etc. The top of the stairs was boarded over, except a narrow space, through which Mr. Hall was warned he could not pass alive. He boldly made the attempt, however, but while attempting to seize the tines of the fork, Collins struck him a blow on the head, the force of which was broken by a stiff hat. In the meantime Mr. Stapleton arrived with Constables Pigeon and Adams. The latter put a Windsor chair on his head as a helmet, and thus armed made a gallant rush on the enemy's position. But as he reached the top of the stairs, Collins assaulted the chair with a sleigh-runner, mashed the legs and split the seat, and forced the assailant to retire. Close siege was kept up, but at about 10.30 on Friday night a compromise was effected. Collins capitulated, and in the morning Sheriff Hall placed the enemy in legal possession, and with his posse returned to town. But on Saturday evening Collins' friends gathered in force, and in turn "evicted" the enemy. Things are, therefore, in status quo. Without another writ the Sheriff will not again interfere in the matter, and Mr. H. H. Smith is in correspondence with the Loan Company, in reference to future proceedings. In the meantime, however, Patrick Collins "holds the fort."

TWENTY YEARS OF OUTLAWRY .- Yery different from the ordinary run of blood and thunder stories is Dr. Dacus' authentic "Lives and Adventures of Frank and Jesse James." With the death of Jesse and the surrender of Frank James, the record of the remarkable band of outlaws whom they led passes into history, where it will always form one of the most thrilling pages in American annals. As one of the editors of the St. Louis Republican and a member of the Missouri Legislature, Dr. Ducus had every means of gett ng at the inside facts of their extraordinary careers, and even spent many weeks among the friends at d family of the outlaws in western Missouri, where he obtained all the facts concerning their antecedents and ancestry, and also a vast amount of information, at first hand, concerning their numberless train and bank robberies, their dashing raids and vengeful murders during the twenty years of their career in as many States and territories. Bold, dashing and seemingly reckless, their marvelous sto y is one of absorbing interest, yet so graphically has the talented author narrated it, that the reader never loses sight of the grim shadows in the background, reminding him that "the way of the transgressor is hard." The details of the tracedy which ended Jesse's career are particularly vivid, and the pen pictures of Frank as he appeared in the scenes attending his surrender to the Governor at Jefferson City are life-like in the extreme. The book contains over 500 pages and is illustrated with 70 engravings, including portraits of the outlaws, their comrades, their wives, their children (born in outlawry), and other members of their families; portraits of Gov. Crittenden and the Ford Bys, the homestead where Frank and Jesse were born and reared, etc. The book is sold by sub scription, and affords a rare opportunity to agents. It is published by N. D. Thompson & Co., of New York and St. Louis, whose announcement appears in another column.

TALES OF A DETECTIVE.

A Man Who Obtained His First Start in Life by Stealing

During his perambulations a St. Louis Republican reporter met a well-known citizen who was many years a private detective, and whose line of work was of a kind which seldom finds its way into the newspapers, but meanders through the substratum of mercantile life and penetrates at times into the homes of wealthy and prominent business men. A reporter rarely goes to a detective for an item, for he knows he will not get one, and never asks him for information upon any subject, unless it has already been made public. Although the man of mystery could furnish a newspaper a vast amount of intensely interesting reading matter every day in the week. he has the habit of reticence and secrecy so firmly imbedded in his nature that it makes his face ache every time he lets drop a little grain of information, or a "pointer," as it is called.

The particular detective referred to in this article had no special reason for reticence, and therefore he was willing to talk just a little. He was willing to state facts, but his nature revolted against giving names and dates. Having found a cozy retreat and comfortable seats. he was asked to furnish the data for a newspaper article, devoid of imaginative ornamentation and based upon solid, substantial, undeniable

"Facts," said he laughing, "are the only things I dealt in while a detective; they were the only things that were worth a nickel to me. I spent years in separating hard facts from unsubstan-tial fancies and I learned to distinguish the one from the other at sight. Iknew it to be a fact that a prosperous merchant of St. Louis, who is also an active church member, obtained his first start in life by stealing, by systemati-cally robbing his employers. He was a packer in a wholesale dry-goods house years ago, and had an intimate friend who was doing a good business in one of the interior cities. He purchased all his goods at the house in which our friend was employed. Between them they arranged a plan by which they could swindle the house and escape detection. The country merchant came to the city, bought a bill of goods, and of course it fell to the duty of our friend to pack them. It was a very easy matter for him to slip in an extra piece of silk, or a bolt of cloth of some kind. When the box arrived at the destination there were more goods in it than were called for by the invoice, but the country merchant understood what it meant, and when he next visited the city he would quietly slip a $10 or a $20, or two or three bills of those denominations, according to circumstances, into our friend's hand, and the transaction was complete. Of course the house missed the goods, but never knew what became of them. This sort of arrangement ran on for years. Our friend finally started in business, for he saved his earnings, and he prospered. He is now rich. Well, this thing might have always remained a secret if the country merchant had followed our friend's example-but he didn't. He didn't save his earnings, neither did he shun the flowing bowl. He did not prosper. One day he came to the city flat broke, and called upon our friend and his friendhis friend who had served him so well in the past, and asked him for the loan of $100. Our friend refused it now, for he had reformed and had grown virtuous. The country merchant obtained the money elsewhere, got drunk, and and then he denied the truth of the disclosure, saying that he had only been fooling. Out of mere curiosity-nothing else-I worked at the case, and found it was just as I have told you."

"Both parties alive to-day?" "Both became talkative. The refusal of his former friend rankled in his bosom, and out of revenge he gave away the whole scheme. He repented of it afterward, for he suddenly realized that :- ing his friend he had betrayed himself, parties alive to-day as far as I know. One of them is, surely, unless he has died within two hours.

"There are a great many strange occurrences in a large city?"

"Yes, and the public never sees nor hears of one-quarter of them. I was once called upon by a prominent and wealthy business man who wanted me to take a case for which he offered to pay me liberally. He said that on the previous morning his wife's trunk had been broken open and a large amount of jewelry and other valuable property had been taken. I stepped into his carriage and went to his residence, an elegant, aristocratic mansion in a fashionable quarter of the city. I went up to his wife's room-a front room-the second story-and there, sure enough, was the trunk with the hasp of the lock pried off and the contents, consisting of dresses and finery of all kinds, tumbled about as though a hurried search had been made. The lady told me that on the previous morning she went down to breakfast, leaving the trunk locked, and when she came back she found it broken open and the stuff gone. She said that she had heard no one come into the house nor leave it, and had forgotton to see whether the front door was open or. not. I carefully examined the room and the trunk, watched the lady's manner, catechized the servants, and decided to give up the case. I did not tell the merchant of my decision, but worked on the matter for a day or two. I was satisfied as to the case almost at once, but on the following day I discovered that on the evening prior to the alleged robbery a man had rapped at the lady's door, had been admitted to her room, remained there less than five minutes, and had left the house. The next day I informed the merchant that the case was hopeless, and that I would retire from it. My reason for doing so was this: I found that at some time in her early life this lady had committed an indiscretion which was known to only one man, whom she supposed was dead. She kept the secret locked in her bosom, knowing that its disclosure would destroy her husband's confidence in her, break up her family, and ruin her socially. One day this man, supposed to in St. Louis, met the e ueau, curneu up lady, demanded money of her, and threatened to blow the secret unless she complied. She could not raise sufficient money from her husband without arousing his suspicions, so she decided to give her jewelry and some other valua-bles to the blackmailer. He came to the house by appointment, she handed over the stuff to him, and according to a promise made he left the city. Then, in order to clear herself, she concocted the story of the robbery, and it was a badly built one, too, I can tell you. Of course I did not dare to tell the true state of affairs to the husband, because it would have ruined the wife, so I withdrew. He is ignorant to this day of the facts, and probably thinks I am a very poor detective"

"Well, you haven't reached the end of the rope yet," said the reporter as the detective stopped and looked out of the window. "Give me another one, I am being interested."

"Well, here's one which is perhaps the strangest occurrence of the kind that ever happened here. There was a business man in this city, very wealthy, very industrious, and very highly respected. He had one fault, which came near ruining him several times. He was strictly temperate, never touched a drop of liquor except at intervals of from two to five years, but when he did get drunk he was sure to do some outlandish, reckless thing that a sane man would never think of. He had not taken a drink for nearly three years, when one day off he goes and climbs into a drunk. He kept it up for two or three days, and one night he strayed into a disreputable house, took three of the inmates and put them into a hack. They were in a condition of undress unfit for the street, but they drove out into the suburbs and all around town, stopping at every drinking-place open and having drinks sent out to the hack. Strange to say, they were not arrested, but returned to the house just before daylight in a fearful condition. The merchant recovered from his spree and resumed his business again as if nothing had happened. A young man of rather an enterprising turn of mind heard of the case, and began to investigate it. He talked with the hack-driver, and worked quietly until he had secured documents to show beyond a doubt that the merchant had been seen riding in the hack with three females, and that the quartet did not have clothes enough on them to wad a

It was a hot summer night and they were probably not uncomfortable. One day this young man called upon the merchant at his place of business, went into his private office with him and closed the door. The merchant thought the proceeding was strange, but the young man quieted him by saying:

"I have a very interesting story to tell you and I don't want anyone else to

"They sat down, and the visitor began to tell the story in the 'once upon a time' style. Before he had half finished the merchant jumped up excitedly and "'It's a d—d lie.'

"'Hold on,' said the young man quietly; 'listen to the rest of it.'

"Then he went on and completed the story, and the merchant said it was a falsehood. He denied it most emphatically, and threatened to have his visitor arrested for attempting to blackmail him. He changed his mind, however, but ordered him to leave the office.

"'Wait a minute,' said the visitor, very coolly, pulling a packing of papers from his pocket, until you look at some of these. Here is an affidavit from -, who keeps a saloon at r from — —, another from is another from -----hibited half a dozen. The merchant saw the nature of the documents, and turned as pale as a ghost.

"'This is an infernal blackmail scheme,' said the merchant, controlling his chagrin; 'but you have probably been to a good deal of trouble in getting those papers. I'll give you $500 for them. "I do not want your money, sir; I did not come here for that purpose. Five hundred dollars is no money at all for these papers. I can get more than that from a certain newspaper I know

But you may go down to the bank and draw $10,000 and lay the money on the desk here. I havn't seen as much money as that together in a long time, and I'd like to see how it looks. Perhaps I may take a notion to lay these papers on the desk and go off and forget to take them with me. I'm very absent-minded at times.' "The result was that the merchant went to the bank, drew the money, laid it on the desk, and the young man walked off with it, forgetting to take his papers. The merchant lives here now, and this young man of an enterprising turn of mind is doing business in San Francisco, and is prospering.

The Good of Contrasts.

"How beautiful it is this morning, Cicely, my dear," said her intimate as she called for her to take a morning walk. "You'll wear your new spring suit to-day, of course?"

"No, indeed."

"But I've got on mine." "That's just the reason. Don't you suppose I know the power of contrast. I shall wear my new suit alongside of a rusty winter sait when I do wear it." "Then I shall have the advantage this time," was the reply. Somehow it had never seemed in that light to Cicely, and rather than give her friend such an obnoxious opportunity, she donned the new suit and the two sailed up the street like Greek goddesses modified by modern fashion.—New Haven Register.

A Boston girl, according to a local paper, was heard to say in a street-car, on her way home from the Soldier's Bazaar, "I think he looked like a perfect raving angel in his uniform! He was awfu! heavenly!"

Box Stalls in the Stable.

Box stalls are a necessary appendage to large stables. Two or three stalls, for the use of sick and lame horses, are indispensable to all large establishments. The more box stalls, the better for training race-horses. They are far better than open stalls for conditioning the racer, and are better for wintering that class when out of training. They should be built from twelve to sixteen feet square, which would give abundant room for the largest class of inmates to lie down and get up without being cramped for room. These stalls can be converted into single stalls by a movable partition, when necessity requires Each stall ought to have an escape pipe running up to the roof, to carry off the foul air, and apertures at the bottom to let in fresh air. The constantingress of fresh air, and the egress of foul air will cleanse and purify the stable. Condition for winning races is nothing more than good health, put in execution by constant exercise, and good grooming. Preserve the health of horses by pure air and clean stables, and the skill of the trainer will more easily put them in condition to contest for the palm of vietory. Great consequence is attached to health and condition in the breeding stable. It is acknowledged to be the turning point of success in breeding establishments. - National Live Stock Journal, Chicago.

Taking Time by the Forelock. At the battle of Groveton Stonewall Jackson tried an experiment which nearly frightened a Federal division out of their boots. Bars of railroad iron were cut up into foot-lengths and fired from some of his heaviest guns, and the noise these missiles made as they went sailing through the air was a sort of cross between the shriek of a woman and the bray of a mule. The Federals listened in wonder at the first few which banged through the tree-tops, and presently one of the pieces fell just in front of a Pennsylvania regiment. A captain stepped forward to inspect it, and after turning it over he rushed to his Colonel with the

"Colonel, them infernal rebs are firing railroad iron at us!"

"No! "They are, for a fact!"

"Captain, advance your company to that ridge and deploy, and the minute you find Jackson is getting ready to fire freight cars at us send me word. I don't propose to have my regiment mashed into the ground when it can just as well be decently exterminated in the regular

The World's Benefactor!

Who, that has opportunities of reading, but has heard of the philanthropist, Howard, the greatest part of whose lite was spent in visiting the prisons of Europe and administering relief to countless numbers of suffering inmates, and whose name will go down to remotest time, crowned with the honors which millions yet unborn will bestow upon it? In the same category we may place the name of Holloway. possessor of an immense fortune, which would allow him to traverse the world in search of pleasure, he chooses, instead, to devote his leisure and his talents to the benefit of his fellow creatures, by dispensing among them the most remarkable remedies, which he himself discovered. To these researches Professor Holloway was first incited by the enormous amount of suffering from various diseases which he everywhere saw around. We have seen in-numerable testimonials from possons who have used these remedies, in which their wonderful powers are extelled in the high-est degree. In every case of incipient disease, recourse to Professor Holloway's never-failing remedies will save months of painful illness, if not life itself. We do not overrate the man nor his medicines, but what we are confident of we are willing to bear testimony in its favour; and as far as our absolute knowledge extends, covering a space of years, we feel competent to speak upon the subject in the warmest terms. Therefore, it is our exprest wish that not a family in the land should be ignorant of the Professor's remedies, and that they should always be kept on hand to use in cases of sudden illness, as they will operate as well as preventatives as curatives, while there is no possibility of danger to the system arising from their use.—Galveston News.

The Meaning of an Opal.

*See with what vivid and what varied flame I love you Aghe," said my love to me, Always so tenderly be breathes my name, The little name seems a caress to be.

Clasped in an endless circlet of fair gold, An apai -less a jewel than a fire-Burned with bright hues whose symbols sweet-of deathless love, of truth and pure desire.

We studied this keen opal, he and I. Check warm on check, bands safe in shelter-ing-hand; Here burned the blue of fair fidelity. There shot the gold of wisdom and command. Here vivid violet, in which red and blue Blent cunningly to tell the truth of love; And then all suddenly love's crimson hue Triumphantly all colors spread above.

Next sprang to light the emerald's fairy sheen, Whereat I looked to him; he, whisperingly: "Of old, Hopes's sacred symbol was this green; Profaned it means, love's tender jealousy."

Then glowed an orange light, where red and

NARROWLY ESCAPED.

"Yes, I am not generally mistaken, and from all that I have seen I don't think I am this time. Take my word for it, their engagement will very soon

Mrs. Carton spoke composedly, nod-ding her head as she did so. Her host-ess looked at her in surprise, and her hostess's daughter, Amy Featherstone, lost from her face all semblance of attention to the conversation of young Mr.

"You think so. Mrs. Carton?" interrogatively, from Mrs. Featherstone. "I certainly do. Laura Gordon is a beauty, and very captivating; Dr. Ferrers is a rising man. The match would please her family. Then there is the power of propinquity, you know," af-firmed Mrs. Carton, as she rose. "Come, Bruce, if you are done saying pretty things, we will go." Bruce Carton's complimentary remarks were certainly at an end, it was so evident that the girl was lost in her own thoughts. He rose, casting a half reproachful last glance at the fair, downcast countenance, and in a moment Mrs. Featherstone's callers, mother and son, had taken their departure. In spite of herself, Amy looked pitifully at her mother. "I do not believe it, dear," said Mrs.

Featherstone. With a throb of gratitude toward her mother, Amy's heart yet ached, as though a sword had been thrust through it. She stood at the window a moment, but she turned away at last, and went up to her own room. She flung herself face downwards across the bed, and lay shivering and thinking bitterly enough in the cold chamber. Though her mother had the utmost confidence of this pure, young gir's heart, she wanted to be alone swhile with her meditations.

All the long, pleasant Autumn, Charles Ferrers had frequented Mossmere, as the picturesque old house was called; and for weeks Amy had enjoyed the sunshine of his society, sweet and unconscious as a flower.

But one day her father had said, with a half-laugh: "Child, do you imagine your handsome young doctor comes to see me or your mother? No; he comes to see Amy's blue eyes grew wide with sur-

"Mother!" she said, appealingly, the tosy color mounting to her temples.

"Certainly, my dear; you are sixteen years old, good and pretty. Why not?" responded Mrs. Featherstone, quietly.
The color faded slowly from the soft cheeks. Amy grew thoughtful; from that moment she was no longer a child.

And all that Winter the visits of Dr. Ferrers at Mossmere continued. It was Adelightful home, and Amy, so widely different from the girls of the period whom he was constantly in the habit of meeting, had a decided charm for him. She was his secret ideal of what a girl ought to be; and yet there was Laura Gordon and the influence of Elmcroft, the most magnificent estate in the mosphere. He felt sometimes that only the grave responsibility of his calling and the influence of the sweet girl at Mossmere kept him from becoming as light a butterfly as the rest.

And part of the luxury of Elmcroft was Laura Gordon. No pictured creation was ever so bewilderingly fair-a houri, with nothing to employ her idle white fingers but the counting of the rose-tinted pearls that formed her favor-Ite necklace.

And for Doctor Ferrers all her smiles were honestly sweet. His voice, manners, and beautiful physique pleased her fancy, and she knew that he was considered talented.

As Mrs. Carton had said, "The match would be agreeable to the family." And Vaguely he felt it.

Mrs. Featherstone saw, with concern, that Amy loved, was drooping, and impulsively combatted the idea that Mr. Perrers loved another. She had studied the young man—believed that he appreciated her daughter; and if this were true, how could he marry Laura Gordon, with her selfishness, beautiful as "Propinquity!" she murmured. "That is an argument against it. He must, thrown so much in her society, learn her selfishness, her insincerity, her beartlessness." But for Amy there was no such hopeful consolation. She had great self-respect, but little self-esteem, and with deep appreciation of beauty, caused by modest in its claims, seemed quite lost. "Of course he will forget me for her?"

Mrs. Carton was own aunt to Dr. Ferrers. Her house was a fine one, on the outskirts of Highbridge, and just at this time she gave a large, general party, inviting the Gordons, her nephew, the Featherstones, and many oth-

"I do not care to go, mother," said

Amy, dejectedly.

Poor child! The world seemed so very hollow, and she was so young, and her powers of endurance undeveloped. But she yield d to her mother's wishes. and when the pale brown silken hair, with its tinge of gold, was looped in great braids, and fastened from the white temples and roseate cheeks by a) sprays of lace-like green, that trailed from the graceful conteur to the hem of the rustling, moonlit, silken robe, no fairy was ever statelier or lovelier. Amy saw her beauty with a start of surprise

"Mother, am I really so pretty?" she asked, looking with innocent eyes of frank delight into her mother's pleased and tender face. "My darling, you are beautiful and good as you are fair." And so, with her secret grief half consoled by these words of love, Amy went There were many strangers present, and among them a little, wrinkled, old lady, with a plain cap and black alpaca dress, looking strangely out of place in her corner, though evidently much en-tertained by the novel sight of the gay company. Her dress was extremely neat, and suited to her years, if not to the occasion. And Amy and her mother, after a single glance and mutual thought to this effect, were passing by, when their attention was attracted by a half-subdued sound, very like a schoolgirl gig-gle, and turning, beheld a merry group surrounding Miss Gordon, whose eyes were directed toward the corner where sat the little old lady in alpaca, and by the smiles curling the lips of those around her, the remarks falling from her ruby lips were evidently very amus-

The surging crowd of promenaders pressed Amy and her mother a little closer to this group.

"Oh, I know!" Amy heard Laura say;
"it's one of the extinct species Professor Dabney was telling us of last Winter.
How interesting! and how very kind of Mrs. Carton to provide for the enter-tainment of her serious-minded friends!"

The air of mock gravity and the graceful contortion were indescribable, and half-a-dozen lace handkerchiefs went up to rosy lips that must not laugh too

I will do this group the justice to say that they were the very youngest of Mrs. Carton's guests, and had recently been Laura's school friends. It was but a year and a half since the young lady had left the academy.

But Amy's cheek burned. She met Laura's beautiful eyes indignantly, and, as her mother, not overhearing the objectionable remarks, serenely joined a group of matrons, she slipped her hand from her arm and stepped back into the old lady's corner.

"May I sit here a moment?" she asked, with a sweet, apologetic smile. "I am a little tired."

"Yes, dear; certainly, certainly," re-plied the old lady, gathering her alpaca skirts to make room for Amy's fair drapery on the little sofa; and then she looked, with evident pleasure, more closely at the sweet countenance.

"You don't look tired," she said, at ast. "You look as fresh as a May morning. It is very nice to be young, though the old have their pleasures. Of course, nobody notices an old lady like me in this corner, but I am really enjoying myself. I live so quietly in my house in the country that the company, the dancing, and the music are very entertaining to me. Mrs. Carton is my sister. I arrived unexpectedly to-night, intending to give her and my son a surprise. I was not prepared for attending a party, but I-I thought I would slip in quietly for a little while, and not make any trouble. I presume no one has seen me but you, my dear."

There was something very sweet in this simple and unconscious old lady's manner. Amy replied with a smile, and continued the conversation, hoping to so divert her companion that she might not discover Laura's eye-glass, and the merry faces of her friends. Suddenly, to her surprise, she saw Dr. Ferrers, his flashing eyes fixed sternly upon the merry-making group. Suddenly advanc-ing upon the haughty Laura: "Will you allow me?" he said; and taking her hand upon his arm, led her before the little, old sanger.

"Miss Gordon, allow me to present you to my mother," he said; and then, not giving the gentle old lady time to rise, he swept the young lady to a seat and took a ceremonious leave of her.

In a moment he had come back to the sofa in the corner, and his brow cleared.

"So you and Miss Featherstone are getting acquainted, mother?" he said, gladly. "I hope," he added, bending closer, "that you will come to love each other as much as I love you both."

Out of the long evening at Mrs. Car-It was often frequented—yes, thronged—by the wealthiest, the gayest, the most fashionable people. He saw them constantly, daily lived in this artificial at-

And when morning came, Doctor Ferrers, driving out, with his dear, little, old mother, in the presence of her mother, who also "loved them both," offered to Amy his heart, hand, and fortune, apparently not without fear and trembling, awaited his answer.

It was a momentous occasion. I can only say that it ended happily for all

"Mrs. Carton thought you would marry Laura Gordon, Charles," said Mrs. Featherstone, after the wedding. Doctor Ferrers looked thoughtful. He did not just then confess that he had narrowly escaped making such a mis-

He sat at her feet in quiet peace. He looked into her face and said, softly, "Ah, dear, I could sit here forever." "Could you, love?" answered she. "Yes, sweet." "You are right sure you could, darling?" "I know it, my own." "Very well, then, you sit there, for I have an engagement to go out with young Mr. Fitzpooner, and I won't be back this Turn down the gas and fasten evening. A Fifteen Cent Expression and a Fifty Cent Ovation.

It was on Lookout Mountain, at Chattanooga, a New Yorker stood on Pilot Knob and looked down into the valley, and exclaimed:

"How grand!"
"That's ten cents extra," replied the guide, as he extended his hand. "What a charming prospect!" continued the visitor. That's a lifteen cent expression—pay at the gate as you go out. "Here has nature mingled the grand with the beautiful—the sublime with the lovely—the majesty of the mountain with the loveliness of the valley!" "Colonel; that's one of our regular fifty cent ovations. It will be charged in with your hotel bill."

"Villain! how dare you!" said the New Yorker, as he seized him and backed him to the edge of the cliff.
"Don't you do it, Colonel," calmly observed the man. "Throwing a guide off the Knob always costs two dollars more—pay at the toll-gate as you go down."

Clara Belle on Tight Fitting Trousers and Thin Legs.

Thin Legs.

"Isn't it odd," writes Clara Beile, "now things go concurrently to extremes in male and fenale dress? Just now, while the belies are pinioning and pressing our arms, the beaux are doing the same thing to their dear little legs. New trousers are made on astonishingly meagre times, and old ones cut down. I don't know how it is in Ohio, but here in New York the young men's legs run thin and irregular. This statement is based upon public and casual observation. I have of late frequently sat in an elevated railroad car, when some of the passengers had to stand, and wondered in my immost soul how some of them continued to do it. When the car slews around a corner, an equilibrium has to be carefully readjusted, these at it supported chapat twist the two strands of legs into a single rope, and seem certain to go down in a heap with it coited beneath them. These same fellows, I have no manner of doubt, would sit on the front row of a theatre on a ballet night and make fun of legs twice as thek and straight as their own. We think a woman has narrowed her skirts unreasonably when she gets them down to three breadths, but I is denully declare that I saw this morning a pair of trousers with legs not an inch more than eleven in girth at the kneedor at the knob which I took to be a knee. I want to know if the fa himable woman, in her wildest absurdities, ever equalled the fashionable man of the day, with his legs requezed in to such trousers, and a flat hat pressing down on his brain."

"CATHOLIC DOMINATION."

The changes are being rung in certain quarters on the ories "Papal aggression" and "Catholic domination" with wonderful energy. Those terrible people are going to subvert our most cherished institutions. They are always aiming at supremacy. They are intolerant when in power. Their tenets are utterly inconsistent with free institutions and intelligent self-government. By virtue of the despotic powers of the ecclesiastical authorities the Catholic vote in every land is a solid weight, sufficient to turn the scale in favor of any party. Hence where their numbers are large there is great danger that they may come to control the Government, make puppets of its Ministers, and so trample the institutions and liberties of the country beneath their feet. The next thing to be expected is religious persecution -perhaps the revival of the Inquisition. Thus in a thousand forms the appeal is made by interested politicians to the prejudices and fears of Protestants, and we are sorry to say it too often happens that those fears and prejudices are easily aroused .- Globe.

We know of no Conservative secular paper in Ontario agitated by such fears, or attempting to instil such prejudices in the minds of Protestant readers. It ought to be remembered that the Globe uses the above language, and such sentiments emanating from the Globe are strange and anomalous.

For a year past the Globe has been at frequent intervals throwing itself into spasmodic burats of fury over "French domination," the "tyranny of the Bleus," etc. Quebec is politely referred to by the Globe as "a priest-ridden province." But in Quebec the proportion of religious elements is quite the reverse of that in Ontario, and consequently it is of no importance if Reman Catholics are offended there. The Protestants in that province, and Catholics in Ontario, being in each case in the minority, have their religious sympathy appealed to for political

The Globe is just now performing in the role of gymnast and contortionist. In Ontario it pats Archbishop Lynch on the back, winking slyly over the left shoulder at the Protestants, while in Quebec it attempts to tickle its co-religionists, who form but a small part of the population, by calling the main portion priestridden, unenterprising and sluggish. Not only that, but the terror of the "priestridden" Bleus is held up to Ontario Protestants to excite them to vote against Sir John Macdonald, who we are gravely informed, is led around by the nose, the mere tool of the Bleu faction. The specialist of the circus, who keeps up a number of balls to the admiring gaze of spectators, aptly illustrates the efforts of Messrs. Mowat and Brown to dangle glittering baubles to catch the eye of the adherents of every creed. All readers of the Globe know how, in the past, it hounded Roman Catholics with unexplainable bitterness-in fact, it student named Chester, and that the could have been no more assailant had it | moral of the poem contained in the been a specially appointed champion of its creed, with the sole mission of squelching out Catholicism. With these facts staring it in the face, the former anti-papal organ has the hypocrisy to assert that it is "sorry to say that it too often happens that Protestant fears and prejudices are easily aroused." Does the Globe bewail sectarianism? What but the Globe helped most vigorously to implant those very prejudices it now pretends to weep over? Who but the Globe writer, like Paul going to Damascus, breathing out threatenings and slaughter, strived to arouse anti-Catholic feelings, which it is now said are being acted upon as a factor in defeating Mowat? The subterfuge is too shallow, and the Globe, in its attempted guise as acrobat, might pass muster if the protruding ears did not mark the identity of the animal within. An Ethiopian cannot change the color of his skin; no more can the Globe juggle so as to successfully deceive. No sensible man in Canada fears "Papal aggression." The fears given vent to in the above extract are manufactured to catch Catholic sympathies or else unearthed from the back fyles of the Globe. There is, however, a strong feeling in reference to the action of Archbishop Lynch throwing his clerical influence into the political arena. We have always observed a due respect for Church dignitaries in their proper sphere, but when the powerful influence of an archbishop becomes subservient to political leaders, the limit is passed inside of which the "cloth" demands respectful deference. None regret more than ourselves that sectarianism and politics should become mixed up. As we remarked in last issue, they are entirely distinct; but if divines are the sectarian feelings. Neither Roman Catholic or Protestant ministers, as a rule, interfere in Canadian politics, and Arch. bishop Lyuch deserves severest censure for leading the way in what must only tend to harden the lines existing between those who profess different creeds.

ARCHBISHOP LYNUH CON-DEMNED.

Hon. Frank Smith and Hon. John O'Donoghoe, two prominent politicians of the Catholic persuasion, have addressed a manifesto to the Archbishop of Toronto and the bishops of Ontario, protesting against the interference in politics by bishops and archbishops. The tone is mild. As Catholics, the writers express their confidence in Archbishop Lynch's wisdom as a spiritual adviser, but in purely political matters they object to interference or dictation from him. The reasons urged against such a course of conduct are quite logical, and agree with the position we have taken. This protest from two leading Roman Catholics is significant.

A SCHOOL IN PROSPECT.

The proposal by Dr. R. A. Corbett, to sell the old Ontario Bank building to the town as a school building, or rather the proposal made to the Dector to that effect, has been favorably received. Active steps have been taken by both Council and School Boards. An informal meeting of the School Board was held on Monday afternoon, at which a letter from Dr. Corbett, offering the building in question for $5,250, was read and discussed, and a resolution favorable to buying was passed. The Council have appointed a committee to confer with the owner of the desired property, which committee will report at a special meeting of the Council to-night. Everybody appears favorable to the idea, and from appearances the school question, which so long has been "a white elephant" for the Council, is likely to be settled in a most unexpected manner.

BRIEF COMMENT.

Belleville granted $150,000 in aid of the Grand Junction Railway Company, in the belief that the Railway would be a benefit to the city. Now the citizens complain that, since the road became part of the Midland system it discriminates against Belleville.

There are towns in Ontario Winnepeggian in their progress. Ridgetown, of two thousand inhabitants, has put up $100, 000 worth of buildings this season. The Standard, the equally progressive journal of the town, deserves all credit for its enterprise in "writing up" the improve-

Apropos of the Marmion discussion, the following from the Bowmanville News in answer to a correspondent is about as good as we have seen:-

"Marmion was not a school teacher, and Mr. Crooks did not dismiss him for immorality, or any other cause; and Marmion did not run at one of the by-elections, out of revenge; and if he had run, he would not have got the Catholic vote; and he could not have run anyway, for he is dead; and besides, there never was any such person, as he was only a fictitious person, created by Sir Walter Scott to make a poem about; and as Sir Walter was a lawyer, it is believed that he had a words, "Charge! Chester, charge!" is to emphasize the advice that the first and last duty of a lawyer is to charge and keep charging all he can. We hope our correspondent's family are well."

Annual Meeting Most Successful - The Music Hall Filled-An Excellent Address by Rev. W. S. Rainsford.

The annual meeting of the Bible Society was held on Tuesday evening, in the Music Hall. A large audience was present, the Hall being well filled. Besides the speaker of the evening, Rev. W. S. Rainsford, there were on the platform:-Revs. Dr. O'Meara, Jas. Cloland, A. P. McDiarmid, R.J. Beattie, Mr. Copeland, and Messrs. T. M. Benson, Wm. Craig, Sr., and H. H. Meredith.

The meeting was opened with the singing of a hymn; Rev. Mr. Cleland read a chapter from the Bible; Rev. Mr. Beattie followed in prayer. A quartette, composed of the Misses Johnston and Scrimgeur, and Messrs. Burns and Massie, during the evening rendered several fine selections of music, Mr. Singleton presiding at the organ.

Rev. Mr. McDiarmid read the ANNUAL REPORT. "The grass withereth, the flower fadeth, but the word of our God shall stand for ever," God's word is enduced with a quenchless life. "The word of the Lord endureth forever." Its existence to-day is sufficient evidence of its immortality. It has come to us through the fires of presecuting days, and out of the red-hot crucible of rationalistic criticism, and yet it is perfect, wanting nothing, without so much as even the smell of fire upon it. We have it, not only that we may give it to others. The work of the great Bible Society, with which we are affliated, is the dissemination of "the word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever," and concerning which God has promised, "my word shall not return unto me void; but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it."

"The power that gave it, still supplies The gracious light and heat, Its truths upon the nations rise; They rise, but never set."

first to trample under foot the ethics to be observed, they must expect to arouse to arouse triple in the first to trample under foot the ethics to be observed, they must expect to arouse to arouse triple in the world has attained as high distinction as the British and Foreign Bible Society. It elicits little notice from the world, and awakens all too little interest among Christians themselves. We ought to esteem it a privilege and honor to have any share in so noble a work as that of the Bible Society. Its aim is to put the w rd of life and salvation into the hands of every lost child of our fallen race.

Our local work has been confined almost exclusively Our local work has been confined almost exclusively to the collecting of funds for the carrying out of the great purpose of the parent society. Nor is this as trivial an affair as some may esteem it. The mere giving of a dollar or two, or ten, may be a small matter, but its gift to give the Bible to our fellow men is a great thing. Were yan able to watch the course of that contribution you have thrown into the circulation of this grand organic system, throbbing with its heavenly life, you would see that that act of yours is a God-accepted factor in the working out of the glorious achievements of grace in the worl!

Thet money is confected into the word of God, which is able to make men "wise unto salvation, through faith waich is Christ Jesus." Could you know the joy it has brought to but a single soul for know the Joy it has brought to but a single soul for time and for eternity, you would joy in it as the best investment you had over made, an investment that will bear its fruits on through the endless future. Let us, therefore, be encouraged in our work by the realization of its vast importance and high dignity.

The amounts collected in the different districts of the town are as follows:-Ward 1-North half-Mrs. McIntyre and Mrs. Ward 1—South half—Mrs. Douglas and Mrs. Armstrong... Ward 2—West half—Mrs. Clemesha and Mrs. 33 05 Leverich.

The most cordial thanks of the Society are due these ladies for their self-denying and arduous work.

JAS. CRAICK.

As the Depository does not require any grant this year, your committee would recommend that the entire amount collected, less necessary expenses, be given to the U. C. Bible Society as a free contribution. All of which is re-pectfully submitted.

Dr. O'Meara moved the adoption of the report, and Rev. Mr. Copeland seconded it, each gentleman accompanying the action with very appropriate and highly appreciated remarks

The report was carried without dissent. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:-

President-H. H. Meredith. Vice-President-Wm. Craig. Sr. Secretary & Depositor-W. H. Parsons. Treasurer-J. Craick.

Auditors-R. Dingwall and J. Paterson. Executive Committee-S. Lelean, A. T. H. Williams, T. M. Benson, D. Chicholm, Wm. Craig, Jr., J. R. McNellie, Edward Douglas, Rea Dickeon, Robt. Gray, A. Skitch, P. Pennington, E. W. Barnett, W. W. Renwick, C. Bingham, R. C. Smith, W. Williamson, J. F. Clarke, P. R. Randall, Thos. Watson, Dr. Purslow and the resident ministers of the town.

Rev. Mr. Rainsford then came forward and addressed the meeting. He is very plain in his style of address, but lucid and impressive. In his manner of treating Bible truths he is out of the beaten track, and is liberal and comprehensive in his ideas. He remarked as a preliminary that the object felt. of this meeting was the diffusion of Bible truths. This could be accomplished in two ways—1st, by being practical ourselves, i.e., giving towards the cause. If everyone won'd lay aside a certain portion of their income to give towards religious purposes, he or she would find it vastly easier and better, and more satisfactory. He simply threw this out as a hint. 2nd, To translate the Word of God-not by making it intelligible in other languages, though a very worthy thing in itself, but into our daily life and actions. The Bible, it must be confessed, was not the same power it used to be. There was reasons for this. He would state a few, although many might not be inclined to agree with him at first. The reasons were not to be found outside of the church, but within its pale; it was the result of mistaken conceptions on the part of the Bible's strongest champions. He would mention two or three of these mistakes. First, the Bible, the teachings of the Book, is a growth. Part of its teachings were transitory, and intended only for a time, and another was permanent. We must discriminate. God lead his people, step by step, from one degree of morality and knowledge to another. To say that every part of the Bible is equally applicable to the conditions of the present day, is to endanger the truths of the Bible. Again, undue worship of the letter of the Bible was a mistake. At one period the Bible was reduced to a science, so that the longest chapter, end the shortest verse, and the middle verse, etc., were all known This was idolatry. A man might have all the Bible in his head and none in his heart. The same mistake has been repeated again and again. It is not the men of science who are the enemies of roligion; it is these Bible idolators—the same people who crucified Christ. They study the letter so closaly, that the spirit is forgotten. God has written two books, the Bible and the Book of Nature. He is seen in both. Many seientists read the one one and refuse to look at the other. It is hoped they will find out their misfake some day. It is not the loudest mouthed Christians, or those who say "Lord, Lord," will be saved, but he that doeth the will of God. Another great mistake was, over literalism in applying the lauguage of Scripture. The speaker gave a number of instances of what erroneous notions people sometimes got into

in this way.
Still another, and not the least, was reading without studying the context. Some people skipped here and there and all over the Bible, to find texts to suit pre-conceived theories. To very many the Scriptures were nothing but a compilation of proof texts for the particular purpose of bolstering up some theory. Some looked for election, some free grace, and so on. The real work of Bible students was to translate its teachings into their life, so that men could see their good works and glorify God. The Bible is like an ocean vast and deep, into which the wisest men can only wade to their chin. It is also a rill, out of which a thirsty earth can become refreshed, and the smallest child drink. Rev. Mr. Rainsford then applied the truthe he was aiming at, in a general way, to the present evangelical needs. After he had concluded, the usual votes of thanks were passed, a liberal collection taken up, and the meeting dismissed with doxology and benediction-

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE

Mr. and Brs. W. A. Copeland, on Leaving Port Hope, are Sade the Recipients of Valuable Presents and Tendered Many Kind Wishes.

Mr. W. A. Copeland, who has been for eleven years in the employ of the Toronto Bank here as teller and accountant, has been promoted to the management of the Collingwood branch. From receiving notice of his promotion to leaving, the time was very short, and the citizens of the town, in whose estimation he stood very high, had little time to properly express their appreciation of his worth in the way of a public banquet in his honor. However, on Saturday evening a number of prominent gentlemen of the town, principally business men, met in the rooms of the Y. M. C. A., with which institution he was always a leading member, and there presented him with a beautiful gold watch and chain.

Mr. Wm. Craig, Sr., who was chosen to make the presentation, said that no formal address had been prepared. The task was allotted to him late in the afternoon, but he had no doubt the expression of good will on the part of the citizens of Port Hope would be no less acceptable on that account. He had known Mr. Copeland ever since he came to Port Hope, eleven years ago, and as a business man, in all his experience with banks and bankers, he had never known a man who conducted business with more courtesy towards all, or greater ability. He had known 2 co Mr. C. but to love and honor him as a Christian and a gentleman. In taking a higher and more responsible position, he felt assured that the same business and Christian conduct, which had secured for him the confidence of the bank and the good will of the public here, would be characteristic of him in Collingwood. He trusted Mr. Copeland would wear the watch in remembrance of his friends, and wished for him many happy years to enjoy its possession.

Mr. Copeland, in reply, was somewhat overcome by his feelings. He referred to the associations he had formed in a business and social way in Port Hope, and would always look upon it as his home-where he had spent the best and most enjoyable part of his life. His relations with his associates in the bank 42 48 had always been of the most pleasant character. After thanking them for the present, which would be worn more as a representative of good will than on account of its value, he bade all a public good bye.

Mr. W. R. Wadsworth, manager of the Toronto Bank, said he could not allow the opportunity to pass without adding a tribute to the worth of Mr. Copeland. Five years ago, when he assumed the management, all knew the state of depression the country was in. The difficulties to be overcome in successfully directing financial matters were not a few; in these the assistance of Mr. Copeland had been of great value to him. His courtesy, already referred to, had always been characteristic of him. It was one of the maxims of the General Manager, which he endeavored to impress upon the minds of all the bank officials, to be always courteous and keep one's temper, even under great provocation. During all the time he had been associated with Mr. Copeland, he had never known him to be discourteous or lose his temper once. His promotion was well merited. In the Toronto Bank the field for promotion was limited; the positions were few, and a man had to wait patiently, proving himself to be worthy in every respect. He was very sorry to lose so able a coadjutant.

Capt. Wright and Messrs. H. A. Ward, S. Lelean, D. Chisholm, and Dr. Clemesha followed in order, heartily endorsing all the encomiums Mr. Copeland had received, expressing at the same time regret at losing a valued and respected citizen, and congratulating Mr. C. upon his promotion. Lelean especially referred to the work of Mr. Copeland in the Y. M. C. A., of which he was one of the chief promoters, and where he exerted a moral influence that would long be Besides his connection with the bank and the Y. M. C. A., Mr. Copeland was a prominent member of the First Presbyterian Church and an active worker in the Sabbath School. Last Sunday, after the regular exercises of the Sunday School, Mr. C. was again made the recipient of valuable presents, accompanied by the following aldress, read by Mr. Williamson: -

ADDRESS:

To Mr. W. A. Copeland, DEAR FRIEND,—We have heard with sorrow that you have accepted a position which will cause your removal from this congregation. During many years we have taken sweet counsel together, and walked into the house of God in company. Now that that companionship is to cea e, we begin to real ze how much you have done and how great will be our loss. Your business talents were devoted to God's service, and you rendered valuable aid as a trustee of this congregation: afterways you were called to the this congregation; afterwards you were called to the office of the eldership. In the prayer meeting your place has seldom been vacant, and the value of the work you have done there cannot be estimated. We feel, however, that it has been at this afternoon service in the Sunday School that your diversified gifts of heart and mind have been best employed. Here you have led our songs of praise. You have impressed upon minds just opening to receive the truth the story of the blessed Gospel. The present truth the story of the blessed Gospel. The present flourishing condition of the infant clars attests the ability and fidelity of its teacher. It gives us sincere pleasure to bear testimony to the true Christian spirit in which all your work has been done. We know that if this testimony were borne with any idea of exalting you as an individual, it would be deeply offensive to you. But while we recall the humility, fidelity, forbearance and love that have shone in your spirit and work, we would unite with yourself and all true Christians in readening thanks and praise to Him who is able to make us abound in and praise to Him who is able to make us abound in Your many fries

Your many frieds, not only in the Sabbath School but also in the congregation, rsk yourself and Mra, Copeland to take with you the se gifts; when you see them, think of us and pray for us. We part with them, think of us and pray for us. We part with you hoping that yourself and all the members of your family wil have no reason to regret the change you are about to make. That you may be long spared to labor for the good of souls and the glory of our common Mester, is our wish and prayer. Signed, W. WILLIAMSON,

Oct. 29, 1882. Mr. J. F. Clarke made the presentation of a Teacher's Bible, a concordance, an album and a commentary. Mrs. Copeland was not forgotten either; to her lot fell a splendid gold chain and locket.

The reply was made in appropriate terms, and was followed by remarks from the pastor, Rev. Mr. Beattie, and Mr. Craick. Mr. Copeland and family left for their new home on Monday morning. They were ac-companied to the station by a number of friends, who bade them good-bye and sent with them many good wishes for success.

No man ever left Port Hope who better deserved the recognitions of worth he received than Mr. Copeland. His Christian character, his correctness and courtesy as a bank official, and his quiet, unassuming manners gained him general respect and esteem. He has well merited the promotion awarded him, and there can be no doubt of his success in the future.

Parisian bankers and money changers are said to have been victimized to the tune of nearly two million frances by two Englishmen, who passed that amount of counterfelt English bank bills on them. Monday night was burned down.

WELCOME.

The ruffianly trick of breaking some of the school house windows was indulged in by some parties on Saturday night or Sunday morning. Such sneaking rowdies, whose whole delight seems to be in destroy. ing property and molesting peaceable people, should be made an example of. The parties are suspected; but in order to make sure, a reward of $5 is offered for information that will lead to conviction.

The young men of the village have pur chased a football, and intend indulging in the manly game. We see no reason why a regular club should not be organized, as there seems to be quite a number of young men who are quite lively on the "kick."

The three men with the unpronounceable ames, and two bears, gave a free exhibition of bear wisdom to our citizens one day last week. It did not appear to be a success, financially, so they soon left in the direction of the Great Bear.

One evening last week a man attempted to save five cents by running through the gate without paying. Fortunately for the road revenue, the buggy ran against a post, throwing out the robe and driver. The horse ran on a mile or two, and was caught The man followed, leaving the robe in the hands of the gatekeeper, who kept it till the money was paid. The man seemed to have imbibed a quantity of tangle-leg, at least one would judge so by the language he used as he went along. Mean men seem to be not all dead yet. It costs money to keep the road in repair; and any who make use of the road have a right to pay for it. The road is well attended to, and we venture to say no better gravel roads than

HOME FROM THE NORTH-WEST.

A large number of those who went out to Manitoba this past season are now coming home to spend the winter in Ontario. Last week we noticed five or six who had returned. All speak in "glowing" terms of that country, and intend returning again in the spring.

Mr. Fred Salter, who has been doing settling duties out there, returned home last Friday evening. His stay there has not injured his health in anyway, as he comes home much stouter and more robust looking than when he left.

A gentleman who very many will be glad to hear concerning, returned on Saturday last. We refer to Mr. S. Beamish. He has spent a long and somewhat lonely summer, camping and working on his farm at Turtle Mountain. Next spring he returns again. That section of country is filling up rapidly.

Col. Williams, who has been visiting the North-West country for about a month, is again in town. The Col. is quite enthusiastic over the prospects of the country through which he travelled, which includes Brandon, Plum Creek, Souris District, Antliers Creeks, Regina, Qu Appele and many other points of interest. He had the pleasure of meeting many of his old constituents, all of whom are doing well and very hopeful. Some considerable "roughing" was experienced, as he went beyond the limits of civilization to the border of where the buffalo roam in herds. Col. Williams is not in the list of those who intend taking up their abode in the N.W.T.

On Monday, a well-known countenance was seen again on our streets. Mr. Fallis, of was seen again on our streets. Arr. Fains, or millbrook, popularly known as "Muggins," returned that morning. He has a farm near Brandon, and is full of the progress of that town. Its growth is most marvellous. Mr. F., too, returns in the spring.

Notwithstanding the greatness of the North-West the most pleasant experience of those who have returned, is getting home

THANKSGIVING day next Thursday.

THE Orangemen of Lindsay district intend having a supper on the evening of the 6th of

THE Orangemen, in a body, will attend divine service at St. Mark's church next Sunday morning—the anniversary of the "Gunpowder Plot," The Rev. J. S. Baker will officiate.

Besides the complimentary benefit tendered Prof. Philp in Guelph, and referred to in our "Personal" column, the members of the City Band gave him a supper the evening before his departure for Winnipeg.

WE have to chronicle this week the death of one who has long been a character amongst the old residents of Port Hope. We refer to the decease of "Jerry" Greeney. He was a man of remarkable physical en-

Rev. Mr. Jeffrey, in his last Sunday evening's sermon, gave the merchants a going over for not closing their shops earlier. He said that clerks were kept in until all hours, when they should be out walking with decent young ladies.

ACCIDENTS .- A Midland brakeman, belonging to Peterboro', had his fore-finger so badly crushed between the buffers, while shunting at Bethany on Saturday, that it had to be amputated. Another brakeman, based Dinne, had one of his arms badly bruised at Orillia the same day, in a manner similar to the above.

FISK JUBILEE SINGERS.—Everybody remembers with pleasure the visit of the Fisk Jubilee Singers in Port Hope some time ago. They are coming again, one week from next Saturday night. Mr. E. Shepherd is playing them, and has opened a guarantee list. From the success he is already meeting with, the house will be crowded.

We were pleased to meet our old friends, Col. Erbeldring, Ed. Spaulding, and Eli Weed, of Rochester, N. Y., in town on Sat-urday last, on their way home from a brief visit in the direction of Burleigh, where they stopped at the popular hotel kept by Mr. John Holmes, of whose kindness and courtesy they spoke in the highest terms of praise.

They were very successful, and got all the hunting they wanted, and plenty of game.

Col Erbelding took a magnificent deer's head home with him, a present from Mr. Holmes. The party left on Saturday morning, but after being out on the "stormy deep" for a couple of hours the steamer returned, and they had to remain here until Monday morning. We hope they arrived home safely, and do not now begunde the time spent with their many friends in Port Hope.

HALLOWE'EN PRANKS. — Tuesday night was Hallowe'en. The good old customs of ducking for apples, swinging apples, melting lead, etc., have passed away among the things of the past, but the pranks of the boys still Unhinging gates, pulling up cabbages, and performing other deeds of like mischievous character still live, and Port Hope was victimized to the usual extent. At the harbor a number of vessels were let loose, and other minor depredations accomplished. One of the special constables appointed to look after things down there, was rewarded for his pains by receiving two eggs in an advanced state of putrefaction planted squarely alongside of his head. On John street Mr. H. Covert had a gate removed from its hinges and planted on the opposite side of the road. A number of other more or less wicked deeds have been reported. The matter is now in abeyance until next Hallowe'en.

NEWCASTLE.

NEWCASTLE, Oct. 30, 1882.

Mr. C. Wilmot, who has been away for the past three weeks gathering salmon trout ova for the Newcastle hatchery, returned this morning. He informs me the spawning at Pigeon Island, Lake Ontario, is much later than other years, and he has not brought back as many as usual. As his presence is required at Georgian Bay at once, he left several assistants at the Island, who will take his place and see that the spawa is precured. Mr. Wilmot brought from the Pigeon Island Salmon Fishery four very fine specimens of salmon trout, which will be stuffed and exhibited at the coming will be stuffed and exhibited at the coming Exposition, in May, 1883.

W. Foster, one of our most extensive farmers in this part of the country, had a yield of 1,000 bushels of carrots off one acre.

Mr. F. is also an extensive stock breeder, both in cattle and sheep.

Mr. Duncan Arnott has sold his farm to Wm. Grose, and we understand Mr. A. in.

Wm. Grose, and we understand Mr. A. in-tends coming to town to reside with us. We want all the retired farmers we can get, as they are certainly a great acquisition to our town.

Rev. Canon Brent, who has been seriously and we hope he will be able to resume his duties next S bath. His son, Mr. C. Brent, officiated ery ably the last Sabbath, and also at the Friday evening prayer meeting.

John B. Gough tells us the following story though the joke is at his own expense. Once, while on a lecturing tour in England, he was introduced to a small village audience in these terms: "Lidies and gentleman, I've the 'cher to introduce to you the dis-tinguished lectures, Mr. John B. Gough, who will haddress you on the subject of temperance. ### Fortunes for Farmers and Mechanics.

Thousands of dollars can be saved by using proper judgment in taking care of the health of yourself and family. If you and silly gossip is dispensed at the tea table. are Bilious, have sallow complexion, poor appetite, low and depressed spirits, and generally debilitated, do not delay a moment, but go at once and procure a bottle of those wongerful Electric Bitters, which never fall to cure, and that for a trifling sum of fifty cents. Sold by G. A, Mitchell.

If the Galveston (Texas) News is to believed Thomas McWhirter of San Antonio was lately the hero of an experience which he would be glad to keep socret. Becoming somewhat heated with work about his yard, he took off his coat and laid it across the fence, without considering the proximity of his robust and resolute goat. Presently he turned around and beheld the coat is the mud and the goat on the roof of the chicken coop, joyously munching what look precisely like the red morocco pocket book in which Mr. McWhirter had placed $2,000 in Government bonds. The thought of a four dollar goat eating a two thousand dollar breakfast almost drove him crazy. The goat eaw blood in his eye and ran, with McWhirter in pursuit. At last the animal was caught, killed and di sected, but almost the only thing not found in her capacious stomach was the bonds, for a very good reason that they were safe at home in the pocket of another coat.

Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" has become so thoroughly established in public favor that were it not for the forgetfulness of people it would not be necessary to cal attention to its power to cure consumption, which is scrofula of the lungs, and other blood diseases, as eruptions, blotches, pimples, ulcors, and "" liver complaint." DR. TALMAGE ON MR. BEECHER.

The Brooklyn Tabernacle Paster Approves His Colleague's Cour-e and Sets Forth His Own Religious Belief.

Dr. Talmage, in the course of his usual Friday evening lecture at the Brooklyn Tabornec'e, said: "The question is asked me on all sides what I think of Mr. Beecher's resignation from the Association of which he was a member. My answer isnot stay in the denomination to which I belong any longer than it would take me to write my resignation if I disliked its doctrines. This is a wine world, and there is no need that any religious teacher stay anywhere where he does not want to stay. Mr. Beecher's theology is very different from mine, but he does not differ with me any more than I differ with him. He never interferes with me, and I have no disposition to interfere with him. Every little while some of the ministers of America get a sort of Bercherphobia, and go foaming at the mouth at something that the paster of Plymonth Church has said. People who have a small congregation are apt to distike a preacher who has a full church. Way not realize that there is plenty of room for all our churches and all our theologies? As for myself, I cannot forget that just after I came to Brooklyn Mr. Beecher, in his pulpit, went clear out of his way to say pleasant things of myself and to encourage me as I took charge of a broken down church, and for thirteen years and more his church and ours have never collided. He has more people than he knows what to do with, and I have more people than I know what to do with; so we are both happy. I belong to the company of the orthodox, but if I thought that orthodoxy demanded that I must go to breaking other people's heads. I would not be orthodox five minutes. By all this I do not mean to say that it makes no difference what a man believes-it makes a great deal of difference. But the best way for y u to correct what you consider error is it he most circulationward way to preach what you consider the truth. About twenty-five years ago, when I entered the ministry, I resolved that I would not interfere with any religious worker, however different his theories and modes might be from mine. I have fulfilled my promise. So much for the ecclesisstical controversies of the past week.' WHAT DR TALMAGE BELIEVES.

"But people all over the country, in the church and out of the church, are now telling what they believe and what they do no belleve, so I suppose my turn has come to tell what I believe. I can tell you in five minutes. I believe in God, the good, the kind, the loving, the just, the independent, the omnipotent. I believe in Jesus Christ, with a heart large enough to take the whole race in his compassion, and perhaps other worlds, for I do not know but that He has done as much for other spheres as He has done for ours. I believe in the Holy Ghost, a wooing, coaxing, elevating, sublimating, parifying, gracious personage-gentle as the dove that symbolized him at the baptism, and yet as intense as the fiery tongues which covered the heads of the disciples at the Pentecost. I believe in a soul, immortal, winged for eternal flight, and having for a choice whether that flight shall be upward or downward. I believe in a heaven, built on so vast a scale that there is room for all angelhood, all manhood, all wemanhood, all childhood, and not a monopoly for a few, but twelve gates for all. I believe in a perdition the abode of those who are soul suicides, for God pushes n man off the precipice. He jumps off. I believe in baptism, the water beautifully symbolic of a cleansing of the soul, whether the bright liquid drop from a wooden cup, as when in holy rite the Covenanters of Scotland sprinkled their children among the Highlands, or whether the candidate have the whole Jordan roll over him. I believe in the King's banquet, commonly called the Lord's Supper, and welcome to the table all who acknowledge allegiance to Him, of whose atonement the blood of the grape is parabolic. 1 believe in the Bible, from lid to lid, inspired, not always as a precept, but sometimes as a history, the sucred writers no more approving some of the conduct described in the Bib'e than Macaula approves all the conduct in England describe in his history, yet the best book ever written by pen or printed by type—the foundation of happy homes and good governments, the book from which most other good books have been beaten out, as one little piece of gold may be beaten into gold foil of almost illimitable extension. I believe in the brotherhood of man-all of one blood, all having the same rights, all made in the image of God, and that he who insults a man, however obscure, strikes in the face of his Moker. These cardinal truths I have been preaching for twentyfive years, and I have no prespect of

NO USE

There is no use in putting up the motto "God bless our home," if the father is a rough old bear and the spirit of discourtesy and rudeness is trught by the parents to the children, and by the older to the younger. There is no use in putting up a motto "The Lord will provide," while the father is shiftless, the mother is shiftless, and the boys refuse to work, and the girls busy themselves over gewgaws and finery. There is no use in putting up the motto, "The greatest of these is charity," while the tongue of the back-biter wags in the family, There is no use in placing up conspicuously the motto "The Liberal man deviseth Liberal things," while the money chinks in the pochet of the "head of the household," greaning, to get out to see the light of day, and there are dollars and dimes for wines and tebacco and other luxuries, but positively not one cent for the church. In how many homes are these mot oes standinglet ous say hanging-sarcasms, which serve only to point a jest an adorn a satire? The beauty of quiet lives, of trustful, hopeful, free-handed, charitable lives, is one of curpassing leveliness, and those lives shed their own incomparable fragrance, and the world knows where to find them. And they shall remain fresh and fadeless when the colors of pigment and the floss have faded, and the frames have rotted away in their joints. -Exchange.

The Boaton Transcript publishes the following among its "Stories without Mogals." "Henry was a good boy, but, unfortunately, was not possessed of tact. I do not know that you understand precisely what tact means, therefore, I will illustrate. One day, a gentleman was walking along the street, when, all of a sudden, an avalanche of dust descended upon him from a accord-storey window. Henry, who was standing near, Mr. Bescher did just as I would have done under the same circumstances. I would It seemed so funny to see a strange gen tleman suddenly subjected to a dostshower that he laughed aloud. But John was entirely unlike Heary. Notwithstanding it was he who had precipitated the dust upon the strange gentlem in, he was in the street and addressing the gontleman in a moment. He said he was exceedingly sorry that such an unfortunate ceident had befallen the gentleman, nd volunteered to brush the dust from the latter's clothing; but, while pretending to do this, he rubbed chalk all over the gentleman's back. The gentleman thank ed John for kindness and said he should be only too glad to do him a favor. John you see, had tact; but Harry, who saw the whole transaction, did not offer to assist the gentleman. He simply laughed. This angered the gentleman, and by his efforts Henry was di charged from employment, while John secured a remunerative situation. There is nothing like

New York marketmen are agitated over a proposed city ordinance, providing that the poultry and game sold in the markets must be drawn. There has been some lively correspondence on the subject in the Sun, in the course of which one writer tells about an ancient elk: "At the same place there was half the carcass of an elk, which became as familiar a land-mark as the City Hall. Day after day the glassy eye looked out on pedestrians. I used to speculate on the history of that animal. Imagination ran him back to the woods of Maine or Canada, and I exhausted Daboll in calculating the days, weeks and months that had intervened since he was knocked over, the hands he had passed through, and wondered whether the people were still alive that had eaten the other half of him. But one day I missed him. He was gone. Somebody probably had made an offer. I looked over the deaths for a day or two to see whether there had been any increase."

She Could Talk Dresses in any Language. "Oh, mon papa," replied Mollie. 'I'll ne faut pas dire des choses, comme ca." "Well, I didn't," said Mr. J., "say your clothes were dear, but what in thunder are you talking about? Can't you talk American?"

"Oh, mon papa, je comprends certe language laide, mais je ne la parie plus." "What in thunder," cried Mr. J., "do you mean, Mollie, by a long-laide pariplu on prongs? Here I've come all the way to Ogden with two new silk dresses for you, bought in San Francisco, and you can't say thank you for 'em, I suppose, except in some infernal foreign gibberish."

"You dear, darling old duck," replied Mollie; "you can just bet I don't talk no more Parce till them dresses is wore out," and the angel hugged the old man all the way home, until she got her dresses, and then she remarked: "Oh, Fronce! jo vous adore! may belle Fronce." -San Francisco News Letter.

An Old-Time Incident.

The Lowell Courier recalls the fact that when the practice of inoculation was first introduced into Boston in 1721, the House of Representatives passed a bill prohibiting it, and a sermon was printed in Boston upon this text: "So went Satan forth from the presence of the Lord, and smote Job with sore boils from the sole of his foot to his crown;" from which the doctrine was deduced that Job had the small-pox and Satan was the first inoculator!

The Unengaged and the Engaged. The London World thus describes girls before and after they are betrothed: "The Young Unengaged Bird-She is slight, light, and bright; fond of the Society of the Cousin Bird; chatters a good deal at feeding time; is addicted to meaningless interrogations, round games, bon-bons, fragments of the slangberry, and semi-plucked Undergraduate Birds, upon which he feeds voraciously. She is frequently found chirruping with others of her tribe at the pluming or 'come-to-my-room-and-brush-your-hair' hour. The Engaged Bird-Generally seen flitting mys trousseau tree. In the evening prefers sitting out on a branch and watching the Flappers; has been known to smile on the Best Man Bird and cause much irritation thereby. As a rule, feeds with one claw concealed, and is invariably lost at a picnic, to the amusement of the Matron Birds and envy of the Flappers. The flesh is white and soft."

Troy Points a Moral. Moralists often find a text in the greed of the wealthy to add to their possessions, but they seldom find a better theme to enlarge upon than that furnished by the 15-year-old boy in Troy, N. Y., who in his eagerness to make money, attempted the experiment of working in one iron-mill in the daytime and in another at night. Nature finally as-serted herself; the boy dropped on the floor in a heavy slumber, from sheer exhaustion, when an iron rod, heated to a white heat, penetrated his vitals to a depth of ten inches, and he died a horrible death. There is a moral here certainly.—Boston Herald.

The Bottle Fountain.

What is called "The Bottle Fountain" may be made from an ordinary bottle and a piece of glass tube. The tube should be somewhat smaller at one end than at the other. Place the tube, with the large end down, through the corkstopper of the bottle. Let the bottle be about two-thirds full of water, and let the tube nearly, but not quite, reach the bottom. Blow with all your might into the tube, and quickly remove your mouth. Then, if the arrangements have been made properly, the water will spurt out and there will be a fountain of spray until the water is exhausted.

Many good people find themselves, sometimes, in a condition of mind like the little boy who, on being asked whether he would rather have a Bible or a jewsharp, hesitated a moment and then replied: "Well, if it don't make any great difference with God, I would rather have the jewsharp."

A man has ninety-one sheep, eightyseven calves and thirty-five pigs, and he desires to divide them equally among three sons and a daughter so that the daughter shall have nine more head than the boys. What will be the share of each, providing three sheep are stolen, two calves get lost and five pigs follow a circus away?

John Kern, of Bellefontaine, O., begun suit against the Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati and Indianapolis railroad for $10,000. Ten years ago the son of Kerns was killed and a daughter badly injured by one of the trains of the company. The officials settled with Kerns by paying him $4,000, and, he says, promising himself and family a life pass. The pass, he claims, has been withheld during the past year; hence the suit.

A writer in the Rochester Express says that he has heard a "young woman of respectable parents" in that city remark to her sister at night: "Let us go out and see if we can find some fool who will buy us the oysters." According to the same paper's showing, it is a common thing for highly-educated Rochester girls to be dragged out of saloons in a state of beastly intoxication.

Mr. Wm. Ransom, of South Norwick, says:—For sixteen years I suffered from Biliousness, never had any medicine to do me any permanent good until recommended by our druggists (J. Wesley Fish & Co.; Otterville) to try Dr. Carson's Stomach and Constipation Bitters, which have done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken. MR. J. ATKINSON, Assistant Superintendent of the Midland Railway, explains in a letter to the Guide that the delay in the special train bringing the Port Hopers home from Millbrook, referred to in last issue, was not the result of mismanagement, and was, owing to unforeseen circumstances, entirely unavoidable.

A man in Cobourg "dropped" $500 on the streets of that interesting town one day recently. Although we are not certain on the point, it can easily be inferred from the large amount lost that the "man" was a stranger. It can also be guessed with little difficulty that, dropping it as he did in Cobourg, he may bid his money an eternal BREAD has come down to six cents a loaf, with the exception of the "Snow Flake" brand, which is promised to be reduced shortly. This is, of course, the result of a " come down" in flour. THE promptness with which the Royal Ins. Co., of England, pay their policy-holders for loss by fire is commendable. All losses by the recent fire on Mill Street were paid in full within ten days after the fire. J. N. G. Lodge represents the company here.

SEVERAL of our boys thought to play a lark on some Cobourg boys, so they sent them postal cards purporting to be from ladies in Port Hope, and promising to meet them at a certain place at a certain hour. The youths of Sleepy Hollow wouldn't "bite."

A correspondent, of antiquarian turn of mind, asks us if any historical connection can be traced between the Saint Patriarch Dr. Wild was talking about, and a certain gentleman of patriarchal appearance in Port Hope. We are not up in the genealogy of Saints, the Times being "a semi-sporting journal" and "an advocate of horse-racing."

"PATSEY" opened out his oyster rooms on Saturday night, and the patronage was beyond his expectations, and the demand for oystors more than he could supply. The rooms are very nicely situated and are neatly and comfortably furnished. Ambitious as a restaurawith the oyster department, a furnished parlor, with organ and music supplied.

A doctor in St. Thomas a few hours before his death sent over to the Times office for his account, stating that he could not die easy unless the printer was paid. Whether it was a desire simply to depart with a "clear sheet," or the fear of the (printer's) devil in the world to come, that actuated him, is not stated. It would be a grim satisfaction to refusing to let him marry his victim—is little stated. It would be a grim satisfaction to not a few publishers if more people constituted like that doctor would take a notion to

THE truth of the old saying that "misfor. tunes never come singly" would seem to be verified in the case of Mr. R. C. Smith, lumber merchant. - He had men, horses and winter supplies for the woods on the steamer Asia when she sank. Since then he lost a large raft of timber valued at nearly $100,000. The latest occurrence was the explosion of the boilers in his mill at Longford, which involved a loss of $15,000 .- Barrie Advance.

Now, Mr. Laird shows positively that he neither promised marriage in the first nor opposed it in the second case. The Port Hope News, which has so bitterly opposed the rev. gentleman, can only now state, after doing him such grievous injury, that it is simply a question of veracity between father and son. This, after devoting a couple of columns to villifying the character of the son, is anything but complimentary to a man whose only sin seems to be that he is unable to govern his wayward and wilful boy, and whose character as a minister of the Gospel has been heretofore irreproachable. - Oshawa

OUR Town Council passed a by-law not long ago, making it punishable to scatter dodgers along the streets. It has had its effect in abating considerably the nuisance of loose paper flying in all directions. An exchange remarks that this "trouble will prevail in these localities until the merchants of the place learn that the proper, most judicious, and best paying way to advertise their stocks and goods is in the columns of a live local paper, and not by the endeavor of dodgers and hand-bills, which, thrown around indiscriminately and wastefully, contribute very little to the object in view.'

VENNOR'S KNOWLEDGE OF THE WEATHER. -Vennor hits sometimes and misses some times. His hits and his misses are so equally divided as to numbers that his reputation as a prophet has been somewhat shaken in the public estimation. Weather is a subject upon which an opinion is as likely to be right as wrong. This, without doubt, accounts for much of Vennor's success in the past. In predicting frost for November, snow storms for December and January, a thaw for February, blustery weather for March, warm showers for April, balmy weather for May, warm weather for June, very warm weather, with occasional thunder storms, for July and August, etc., Vennor is, nine out of ten times, tolerably sure to be correct. When, however, he ventures on course, and good-naturedly tied up until frosts in July, snow storms in October, and a warm December, ninety-nine times out of a hundred we will have quite the reverse, although, as Sam Slick would say, he makes some "almighty good guesses sometimes." Heavy storms were predicted for the 25th, 26th, and 27th ult., but as no storms hap- for lower prices. 65c is now paid on the pened on those particular cays, it is safe to infer that Vennor must have been mistaken. Our Canadian weather prophet, without doubt, knows as much about the meteorological conditions of the atmosphere as any other man in this fair Dominion, but weather, like women, is decidedly uncertain at times.

PETERBORO' is infested with "fire bugs" A DECIDEDLY BRILLIANT CON-TEMPORARY.

The Guide reports Dr. Wild as saying: "Books had been written to prove that THE RED MAN were the last tribes. But to look at a squaw wrapped in her blanket, who would suppose her to be one of God's elect nation? The tribes of Judah and Levi numbered 9,000,-000. How much must the ten tribes outnumber them? They would be vastly more numerous than all the Red Indians, with the Esquimaux included." Now, as a matter of fact, Dr. Wild, when in Port Hope, said no such thing. There was nothing at all in his lecture about the Red Man or the Esquimaux in this connection. The interpolation by our brilliant contemporary can be explained in this way. Dr. Wild lectured in Peterboro' on the same subject on the evening of the 3rd of October, and the Daily Review, the following day, had a report of the lecture, which report was jealously stowed away by the editor of the "medical journal" for expected future use. Last Friday he had occasion to use it, and dished it up as entirely original, smilingly asking his friends how they liked "my report of the lecture." It happened, however, that the Dr. said some things in Peterboro' he did not say in Port Hope, and what is accredited to him in the above extract is among the things he did not say here. This will explain any apparent mystification which may exist in the minds of those who attended the lecture and subsequently read the Guide's report.

AN IGNOMINIOUS BACK DOWN.

"As intimated in a previous issue, the statement that Rev. W. H. Laird had stood in the way of Fred's marriage with the young woman, in accordance with the alleged agreement, had been made on the authority of Fred's declarations in his letters that such was the case, extracts from which were published last week. Rev. Mr. Laird states in the most positive manner that neither by word or deed has he ever hinted to Fred that he did not desire him to marry the young woman upon attaining manhood. Rev. Mr. Laird acknowledges that he promised in the early stages of the trouble that he would not oppose their union when Fred had secured his profession. He solemnly declares that he never used his influence to prevent it. Upon a question of fact between Fred and Rev. Mt. Laird, it is only natural that the utmost confidence should be attached to the latter's statement."—News.

After the columns of red-hot abuse which Rev. Mr. Laird received at the hands of our contemporary, the above must appear to all as a very cool, not to say contemptible, way of backing out of a scrape. If "the utmost confidence should be attached" to Mr. Laird's teur, Mr. C. intends having, in connection statements, it is strange that fact was not discovered before a virulent pen was lent to besmirching his character; and now that his innocence is admitted, such damaging charges would naturally demand the amende onorable to be made.

At the outset we were told:-

"The charges made against the Rev. W. H. Laird in connection with the suit, that he would not allow the virtuous Fred to make

And again: -"Further particulars have come to hand, all of which tend to prove, not only the utter heartlessness of the young scoundrel, Fred, but the equal heartlessness of Rev. W. H. Laird in the whole matter."

And in order to cause his attacks to as sume the character of philipics on the side of religion and morality, the News waxed piously indignant, as follows:-

"Rev. W. H. Laird, as a Christian minister and a father, should not have denied the facts when challenged with them on his arrival here, and then SENT the immaculate Fred forth to pursue the even tenor of his damnable ways, if a victim could be found.'

The series of vindictive declamations finds climax in this:-

"If any other evidence was necessary to prove that Fred's refusal to marry the woman was in accordance with, not only the approbation, but the advice of the reverend gentleman, it was found in the singular pairfather and son-Methodist minister and selucer, arm in arm, in the lobbies of the Whitby Court House when the suit was before the Court. From all such religion, Good Lord deliver us."

After such-not insinuations-but positive statements, the spirit of the explanation is less becoming than the attack itself. The audicity of the latter is only equalled by the ungentlemanliness of the retraction. However, where the public look for a weekly supply of Billingsgate, they scarcely expect to have that supply adulterated with any element of what, between gentlemen, is regarded as the proper consideration of mutual rights. The public feel glad that Mr. Laird has been able so successfully to clear himself of any complicity in his son's crime-glad on his own account and that of his professions. He will not live lower in the estimation of his friends, and his detractors will reap the retribution justly theirs.

The Central Association talks of getting up a grand association tournament at Port Hope or Cobourg towards the end of November. There is no reason why all the central clubs should not be represented, nor why, if the clubs turn out well, the tournament should not be a double one, going on at once in both Cobourg and Port Hope. Football is particularly strong in the neighborhood of these places, a fact which in some measure entitles them to call for play The "Vics." of the Cobourg Collegiate Institute, played the Port Hope High School a game of football last Tuesday afternoon, in Port Hope. The "Vics" won by two goals.

The great six-days walking contest in New York, which wound up on Saturday, created considerable interest in town. Some money was up on the result. The score at the finish was as follows:-Fitzgerald, 577 miles; Noremac, 567 miles; Herty, 541 miles; Hughes, 525 miles.
