Office: Over Wickett's Dry Goods store. Money to Loan at Lowest Rates, and Lands for sale.

Market Clerk, be accepted. Carried.

A petition was received from a large number of influential ratepayers setting forth the desirability, in view of the dirty and dilapidated state of the Music Hall, of refitting and improving the Music Hall, so as to make it suitable for holding concerts and entertainments.

Coun. Stevenson thought this could be done without an outlay of more than $500 or $600. The acoustic properties of the Town Hall were defective, and this would have to be remedied. The scats could be arranged in amphitheatre style, with the stage in the corner. Coun. King thought that the improvements at first suggested could be carried out. He would like to see an opera house that would be a credit to the town. It could be arranged so that the market building might be enlarged at the same time. An opera house properly conducted could be made remunerative to the town.

The Mayor agreed with Coun. King. The petition was referred to the Council as Committee of the Whole to take into consideration.

SHORT MEMORIES.

To the Editor of THE TIMES. DEAR SIR .- I notiged in a Toronto daily, a few days ago, a statement to the effect that there has not been such a fine October for forty years; another paper had it forty-three years! If any person curious in such matters will address a note to Post Office Box 249, Port Hope, I will appoint an interview and show by my diary, accurately kept, that Oct. for the years 1877, '78, '79, '80 and '81, was as fine in every respect as October of this year. Yours,

Guy Fawkes Displaced in the Popular Estimation by a Port Hope Editor, who Figures to Advantage as a Martyr.

A REALLY INTERESTING SENSATION.

All day Tuesday vague rumors were circulated to the effect that the old-time custom of burning Guy Fawkes in effigy on the anniversary of the Gunpowder Plot would that evening be varied, as was done on one eventful occasion before, by transferring the historis hate for one who villainously attempted it strange that she could do so, when there evening be varied, as was done on one eventtoric hate for one who villainously attempted to blow up "the King, Lords and Commons" to a local celebrity, who periodically does his best to blow up the entire universe. Nothing definite was known as to the nature of the intended celebration until about eight o'clock, when the tooting of horns was heard in the direction of Cavan Street, and the lurid glare of torches sent up their ominous reflection to the evening sky directly in the reflection to the evening sky directly in the zenith of that most interesting part of our town. The strange noises and the strange sights, together with the effect of the flying rumors of the day, brought together an immense concourse of townspeople, who thronged along the streets to see what was coming. It came presently—a procession, which, to the readers of classics, brought up visions of strange mythological fancies. It was led by a veritable. Don Ouivete sword in head a veritable Don Quixote, sword in hand, astride of a veritable Clavileno Aligero. Behind came more wonderful steeds and more grotesque conceptions of beings—beings to whom old grim Moloch would have resigned his title of God of War had he seen them. It was evidently a celebration in honor of some one, and one, from first sight, might have imagined it was an Indian nabob seated on a palanquin borne in procession. Bringing up the rear, and before which went the torches and the masked attendants, was a figure standing on an elevated platform, carried on the shoulders of boys. The question was: Whose image? and what the superscriptions? It certainly looked like nothing in the heavens above or the earth beneath or the waters under the earth, and had the members of the suite got down and worshipped it, they could hardly have been accused of idolatry. Without doubt, some monstrosity was intended to be represented. On the breast was an ornamental design, bearing the inscription, "Character, 20 cents," and on the back another, with something about an uncle who had serious doubts concerning the integrity of somebody, even on oath. It was thought by a few, owing to these phylacteries, that Tom Pepper had been resurrected in place of Guy Fawkes, and that his votories were giving him a moonlight serenade on his success in being kicked out of perdition.

Success in being kicked out of perdition.

Our representative was standing in a succession was not thought right to disturb her any successions contained in parratives they are approached, when he was accosted by one whom, according to the orthodox representation of a being with horns and tail, he guessed to be "Old Clooty." The theory concerning Tom Pepper was being badly weakened when His Satanic Majesty spoke up:

had recovered her eyesight, and the story told the reporter on the day following is altotemporaries?" "No," our innocent replied quite innocently, "who are you?" "You're a goose," was the response. "Your Highness is mistaken," replied our rep., "I'm a Goslin." "Well, whatever you are, look out that you don't get your feathers scorched some day, too." With this piece of advice the winiter of declarate and the second score of advice the winiter of declarate and the second score of advice the winiter of declarate and the second score of advice the winiter of declarate and the second score of advice the winiter of declarate and the second score of th gether the most wonderful.

" 'I am glad to see that you have recovered your eyesight, said the reporter. 'Yes,' she replied, 'I can tell you the colors now without feeling them.' She then proceeded to tell the following story concerning the recovery of her sight: I was lying in the bed,' she said, when an angel, which had been with me all the time, touched me on the hand and called me three times. "We are going to leave you, Winnie," said the angel "and switch-off was made to Queen Street. It you will not see us again until you are with us in Heaven. You must now get up and kneel down by the side of the bed on which you have suffered so much and say five 'Our Fathers' and five 'Ave Marias," and you will then be able to see." I sent for Mr. and Mrs. McIntyre, and with them on each side of me, and my mother, sister and the nurse, knelt down and repeated the prayers. When I had repeated them the fourth time I could see a little, and on repeating them the fitth time I could see plainly, and recognized those beside me and shook hands with them.' Mr. and Mrs. McIntyre confirmed this statement so far as their names were used in it. 'Was it this angel that told you the colors, and the time, and the other things you told us yesterday? asked the reporter. 'Yes, it was the same angel,' she replied; 'when I touched a color it would tell me what it was, and it told me the time. When Dr. O'Shea brought in his cousin, I could not see him, and never knew him, but the augel told me who he was.' Again was her statement confirmed by Mrs. McIntyre and the doctor, is so far as they said Dr. O Shea's cousin did call to see her, although his name was not mentioned, she told at once that he was a cousin of the doctor. 'On Monday evening,' she said, in answer to a question, 'I could not see anyone, and it was then the angels first came to me, and they stayed with me until I could see last evening, and then they said ed. I carnot tell anything now, only by my ordinary sight, 'Do you know what the other doctors who came up with Dr. O'Shea

A very strange story comes from Peterboro', the incidents of which seem to be so thoroughly corroborated by authentic witnesses that no room is left for doubt. We give it below as stated by the Review, leaving out the least important details:-

"Miss Winnie Tracey, whose home is in Barrie, came to Peterborough and found em-ployment in the Oriental Hotel dining-room on the 8th of October. On the 18th of October she became indisposed, and on Saturday, the 28th, she was attacked by convulsions and lock-jaw. Her sufferings continued until Tuesday night, although Dr. O'Shes, who is attending her, did all that medical skill could do to relieve her. During that time the remained conscious, but was speechless, and could only communicate her wishes to those who were attending her by signs or by writing. Her hearing was also affected, although she was not altogether deprived of that sense, and on Sunday her sight began to fail. Remedies were tried to relieve the lockjaw, but without avail, until Tuesday night. A fly blister was applied to her neck, and five minutes after it was removed the jaw opened. The convulsions also ceased, and | those present knew it at the time.

"On Tuesday night the strange gift which Miss Tracey's sickness seems to have brought to her was accidentally discovered. Dr. O'Shea, who kindly informed us of the par-ticulars when we called upon him, was stand-ing beside the sick girl's bed, with others, and she was talking of dying, as she had concluded that she could not live. While talking she incidentally remarked that it was ten minutes to one o'clock, and the doctor, on looking at the clock, found that she had told the exact time. A few minutes afterwards she said, casually as before, that it was six was no timepiece in such a position that she could see it even if she were not blind. He questioned her shortly afterwards as to the time, and was answered correctly. "On Thursday afternoon a Review reporter called to see the sick girl. * "Her eyes looked natural, but on a hand being passed quickly and repeatedly past them, they did not move, nor did her eyes close when a finger was placed so close to her eye that it almost touched it. However, in order to make deception impossible, she al-lowed herself to be blindfolded, and tests of phenomena were made. The third gentleman who was present reached his hand to her, and, having felt it, she said 'I have not felt this hand before; this gentleman is a stranger to me, but he is staying in this house.' A glove was then handed to her, and she said, 'This is a glove, a kid one; it is of a brown color—a dark brown,' which was an accurate description of the glove. It did not seem strange that she could tell that the article was a kid glove, but that she could tell the color of it was certainly remarkable. tell the color of it was certainly remarkable.

A piece of colored paper, red on one side and white on the other, was handed to her, and, without making the least mistake, she said, 'This is paper; this side is white and (turning it over) this side is red. Other pieces of colored paper were placed in her hands, and she told the color of each of them correctly. A small pocket diary was then placed in her hands, which was ruled with red lines and had printed date lines on each page. 'This is a book,' she said, runing her fingers up and down on the page, of white paper; it has red lines across it, and there is printing here,' she continued, as her fingers rested on the printed date. A small scribbling pad was then handed to her by the reporter, and she de-scribed accurately the different colors on the binding. 'There is writing here,' she said, as her fingers touched a line of partially ob-literated lead pencil writing, 'but I cannot make out what it is.' No further color test appeared to be necessary and she was then asked what time it was. She paused a few moments, and replied slowly, 'It is twenty minutes-it's a quarter to three.' By the town further then."

The above account is taken from Friday's Review, but in the Saturday's issue is found

In the meantime, it appears, that the girl

"good-bye" three times, and have not re turn said about you? 'Yes,' she replied, 'I knew all they said; the angel told me.' "While the reporter was in the room, Dr.

O Shea came in and told the girl that a physician wished to see her, mentioning his name. I don't want to see bim,' she said, with a touch of anger in her voice. 'Why not?' asked Mr. O, Shea. 'B-cause,' said, 'when he was here the other night be took you down the hall outside, and told you that I was shamming. He said for you to stay out of my room, and he would come in and tell Mrs. Melntyre to go out, and would then threaten to cut off my hair, and I would soon speak.' 'By jove!' exclaimed Dr. O'Shea, that is just what he said, and I never mentioned it to anyone.

"Further conversation took place, and the reporter left the room. Dr. O'Shea states that the girl told him exactly what passed between him and Dr. McCres, Dr. Sullivan and others, and that she had also told him exactly what he thought of her case while he was in his office alone. Mrs. Molntyre states that the girl's mother fainted on Friday, and that a moment after the girl said that someone of her family was sick, and also that on Friday a gentleman and lady, who were total strangers to all in the house, came up to the girl's room, and, having felt their hands, she told them that they were man and wife, which they indeed were, although none of

THE "IMMORALITY" BUGABOO.

Much Ado About Nothing, or the Slander Against Our Schools.

" If the statement of a Reform paper published in Port Hope be correct, a lamentable state of affairs exists in the schools of that town. Children attending those schools, and entering them with pure minds, learn from their little friends immorality of conversation, and pass out into the world with foul mouths. Have our schools been established for the propagation of obscenity? There are those who object to the teaching of morality in the schools -do these same persons favor the spread of immorality?"-Mail.

The editor of the News has, of late particularly, shown the slippery ease with which he can "put his foot in it" on occasions the least opportune. Not satisfied with his success in attacking M. P.'s, Methodist ministers, and almost every conceivable and inconceivable variety of the genus homo, he last week, in his insatiable thirst for gore, turned his attention to the public schools in Port Hope, and came out with a sensational article about their frightful immorality. Little attention was paid to it in town at the time, for the reason that his periodical frenzies are understood. However, the article was copied in the Toronto Mail, and captioned with three flaring headings: "Immorality in Schools," "A terrible state of affairs in Port Hope," etc., and thus was heralded all over this wide Dominion the wickedness of our town. A bugaboo, the creation of an editor with an imagination sufficiently elastic to have served William Penn's purpose when he treated with the Indians for land, was circulated to the immense damage of the reputation of our schools, our town and our teachers. Had there been the slightest foundation for such a report, it might have been justly excused, but on the contrary the morality of our school children will compare favorably with any town in the Dominion. In fact, it is the special care of the teachers, and the Head Master only the day before the article appeared, had occasion to compliment the school on the whole, upon the healthy moral tone pervading it, and the complete absence of anything like obsenity or leadness. These circumstances will no doubt be regarded by the teachers as a peculiar evidence of the irony of fate. It is not to be expected that in a school of hundreds, composed of those from all classes of society, there will be an entire absence of profanity or obscenity to a certain extent. We appeal on this particular point to the ex-perience of the News editor himself, or to any other person who ever attended school. Fur-ther, if such a state of things did exist, it is not to be wondered at when a newspaper is placed in their hands every week glorying in dragging to light the details of seduction suggestions contained in parratives they are accustomed to read and hear? In the nature of things, seed sown in fertile soil will, eventually, bear fruit.

Very strong indignation has been expressed in town by parents and teachers. The reflection upon the latter is much greater, naturally, than on the former, and they feel very keenly the injustice done them. The follow-ing letters, which appear in the Mail of yesterday, sufficiently evidences the feeling in regard to the matter:-

Sir.—I observe in this day's Mail an article copied from the News, and headed by you, "Immorality in the Schools." "A Fearful state of things existing in Port Hope." To the Editor of The Mail.

Port Hope."

Permit me to say 'hat I have been a member of the Public School Board for several years, and have been in the habit of visiting the schools, and I am not aware of any such immorality as that complained of existing, nor has any complaint of such be n brought before the 'rustees.

The Board has, on several occasions, complimented the head master on the fact t'at nothing obscene has appeared on the premises, but, on the contrary, the rooms, halls, yards, and closets have been exempt from anything like impurity.

from anything like impurity. Yours, &c., REA DICKSON, Chairman Public School Board,

To the Editor of The Mail.

To the Editor of The Mail.

Sin,—In to-day's Mail appears an article copied from the Port Hope News, which you introduce with the headings—"immorality in the schools," "A fearful state of thugs existing in Port Hope," "Young chi'dren lear-ing obscenity."

Will cou allow me to say that I think such statements cannot fairly be deduced from the News' article. Whether they can or cannot, matters little; they are not true. Great care has been taken by special teaching in the schools and by close supervision in the grounds to prevent immorality, and I am in a position to state that the use of obscene language is not prevalent. That some lewd talk may be used by children who come from all grad a of society used by children who come from all grad a of society and mingle on the way to and from school is pos-sible, but that "children attending our shoels, and entering them with ure minds, learn from their lit-tle friends immorality of conversation, and case out into the world with foul mouths," is too untrue to

into the worm with four above pass unchallenged.

NEWCASTLE, Nov. 7, 1882. We are pleased to learn that business in the Standard Bank here is so much improved that it is necessary to secure an additional assistant. Mr. Elliott, from Holland Landing, is the fortunate one.

We notice that the storekeepers and butchers in this town are making preparations for Thursday, Thanksgiving Day. The supply of beef, pork, and turkeys in the different stores is more than usual.

The schooner Eliza White is loading barley for Mr. A. Lockhart, and we think she will leave to-night. The schooner Howard is also here, but is going to Port Granby to load barley. Barley ranges from 58c to 70c. The School Board met last evening.

This week we are to have seve al shows, and a horse training by Prof. McPherson. The Literary Society are busy preparing for another entertainment.

The Troubadour.

With a jaunty cloak and swagger, and a jewel-handled dagger.

And a lute across his shoulders, by a ribbon —blue at that!

And a fascinating feather in his funny little hat:

Not fat and roly-poly, like that parody Brig-

Singing sentiments affected to a mercenary

But a poet, young and slender, he would charm the tender gender.

As he sighted his soul, in music, at the maiden or the moon. He would rove the land and ocean, on a fancy, whim or notion;

He would sing the tender rondeau, he would tell the merry tale;

He would thrill the flerco Crusader, he would turn a serenader;

He would banquet in the castle, he would billet in the goal.

And the Queens and noble maidens doted on his serenadings,
And they dropped the smile or ribbon, and the gloves or lock of hair,
Or, in lieu of rope or stringlets, loosed their long and silken ringlets,
And the minstrel, bold and loving, climbed them as you might a stair!

Thus, he poached on others' manors, and he fought for others' banners,
And he dined at others' tables, and he droned in others' hives.
And he 'livened others' journeys, and he rlymed of others' tourneys.
And he emptied others' flagons, and he flirted others' wives.

So he wandered forth, a-warring, and a-rhyming and guitaring,

And in attitudes artistic, tinkled lum-te-tum-And the ladies all adored him, and the gal-lants aped and bored him,
And his tunes were legal tender for his lodg-ing everywhere.

Thus, a-humming, and a-strumming, and awooing, and a-cooing,

Dealing ditties by the dozen, making sonnets

by the score.

While the glamour of the amour hid the stammer of his grammar—

Ah! so gay, and free, and happy was the merry Troubadour!

A DAY'S LESSON.

It was striking one o'clock on a cold, wintry night, as a carriage, filled with yawning belles, rolled over the pavement of Union Square and drew up before a comfortable freestone house in Fifteenth street. "Brother Jim," who had ungallantly preferred the society of the coachman and a cigar, descended to the carriage door and commenced an involuntary schottische as the cold from the flagstones struck through his patent leather pumps. Sallie, the oldest Miss Lockwood, roused her sister and cousin from a short nap on the back seat, and stepped out into the moonlight, as tall and stylish in her hood and wraps as she had been an hour before in the ballroom. Nett and Isabel, all curls and rigolettes and shawls, came shivering up the high steps, supported by Charlie Lockwood, the just graduated collegian of the family.

Brother Jim, being what is termed a "fast" young man in society, thought it necessary to counteract the velocity of his actions by the slowness of his drawl and the languor of his general manner, where his sisters or the young ladies of their set were concerned. He left it to Charlie to turn up the gas and get Isabel a glass of water, as he plunged his hands as far as possible into his "bang up," and, leaning on the banisters, declared parties "uncommonly slow, and "all the women got up in the same style every night in the season."

"No variety," exclaimed the injured young gentleman, preparing to shuffle off to bed in advance of the young la-

Charlie wished them a gay goodnight, telling Nett that he heard compliments showered upon her as thick as motto papers; and Bel that she danced like a Preciosa, a comparison which mystified her considerably, as she was not just out of Yale and very much in love with Longfellow's Spanish Stu-

"Nothing for me?" asked Sallie, as she leaned on the railing of the first landing to watch him stand on tiptoe, lighting his cigar at the chandelier.

"Not a syllable. Any fellow of the set knows you are as vain as can be already, and I must not countenance you in it."

"Good-night, Saucebox!" "Pleasant dreams!"

And so these pleasure-seeking young people dispersed to their own rooms to sleep off the fatigues of the first large party of the season.

The brothers were consigned to the usual bachelor apartments of a New York family, named hall rooms, without fire or light, until they had invoked one by the aid of the ever ready lucifers. The young girls occupied the two large communicating chambers on the third floor, where blazing grates and gas burners sent a cheerful radiance over mirrors and curtains and white-counterpaned beds. It was the very picture of comfort this frosty night, and the chambermaid, dozing in an easy-chair, had contributed much to make it so.

Bel, who had commenced stripping herself of her finery on the stairs, threw a handful of glittering jewelry-bracelets, a brooch and necklace-into a Parian sea shell standing on the dressingtable and called for Norah to unlace her dress that very instant, or she should "die with sleep."

"And hurry, there's a good girl," said Annette, "for mine is in a dreadful knot; I began to undo it under my cloak in the hall." "I had to dance with that odious Mark Harrison twice," lamented Bel the next instant. "He keeps time so abomi-

"I never saw him keep time at all," remarked Sallie, unthreading the long braids of her black hair. "Just look at my new tarletan! What a smash! It will never be fit to wear again! There were six times as many as the house would

"I didn't even get a sight of the sup-per table," added Bel, in the same injured tone of voice; "not so much as an oyster or a glass of champagne. When I give a party, I never mean to have more than can get into the supper-room comfortably. Oh, dear! I am so tired! There, that will do, Norah. I believe you are half asleep.' "Sure, an' it's sleepy time," said

Norah, apologetically. Her young mistress did not dare to use more than a pettish tone toward the weary-looking maid It was against Mrs. Lockwood's rule, and of her own free will, that she had waited up to aseist them. "There, you can go now, said Sallie, as the girl began to collect some of the scattered finery. "Mine are only hooks and eyes. Oh, girls, what do you think!" when the door closed behind her. "I really believe our Jim is attentive to Mary Snelling. I saw them sitting together in the recess of the receptionroom, looking as tender as possible. I was dying to get Norah off so as to tell

"I should think you might have waited till she hung up our dresses," Bel re-torted crossly. "I know Mary Snelling is doing her best to get Jim; anybody could see that, with half an eye. I'm sure I'm too tired to touch the room to-

In another minute the disturbed young lady, who, to do her justice, was only fretful when sleepy, had tied on her Valenciennes-frilled cap, and nestled herself comfortably on the pillows. "But, Isabel," said her cousin, carenaments—a brooch and earrings of her mother's hair-"here is all your jewelry."

"Well, I can't help it; nobody will run off with it to-night. I wouldn't get up for twenty sets of coral." "Let her be, Nett," said Sallie, stepping out of the pile of fleecy flounces and into the low French bed. "There's all my things too. I wouldn't be hired to put them up to-night. I wish I had been born to a lady's maid."

"Norah seems to be a very nice girl.

I like her a great deal better than Ann, who was here when I first came." "Only mamma is so afraid of letting her wait on us. She says there's enough of the regular work in our large family. Are you never coming to bed, Annette?" and even the stylish Sally began to show symptoms of drowsiness. "As soon as I have hung up my things. You know I can't get evening dresses as easily as you can, and have to take care of what I have. Norah seems very honest and obliging."

"That's it. She would as soon take care of our drawers as not: but mamma has a foolish notion that lace sets and embroidered handkerchiefs and jewelry might tempt the most honest person to steal. I'll be up time enough to put them away before breakfast."

But the red light from the grate flickered out, and the gray light of dawn crept over the disordered room before either of the wearied occupants so much as turned upon their pillows. And even the dressing-bell rang unheeded, except by Annette, who lay in a half-dreamy revery, wondering if it really was time to get up. Finally she roused herself sufficiently to look at her cousin's watch, and found to her consternation that they had just fifteen minutes to dress

There is a sleight of hand, wonderful to the uninitiated, by which young ladies contrive to make a morning toilet in an incredibly short space of time.— Sallie and Isabel, roused at last, arrayed themselves as rapidly as possible; for Mr. Lockwood, indulgent in many things, exacted prompt attendance at the breakfast table. So down stairs the ladies hurried, without so much as a thought of the scattered jewelry left behind.

It was a very merry breakfast party, they had so much to discuss with each other and Charlie and Jim; so many queer incidents to relate. Mr. Lockwood, who suspended his perusal of the money article to listen, and Mrs. Lockwood, who had been a belle herself in her younger days, showed a great deal of interest in all that had occurred.

Charlie, especially, was in the highest spirits, and fretted the elegant Jim continually with allusions to "Miss Snelling's addresses," until the young gentleman's ire was so highly roused that Mr. Lockwood told them both it was high time they should be down town, and so sent them about their business.

The girls lounged about the diningroom and parlor some time longer, talking and laughing all at once, until Bel suddenly remembered the coral set, her father's last birthday gift, and hurried up stairs to put it in the cases.

Not a trace of it was to be found, except the pear-shaped pendant of one ear-ring, accidentally dropped and overlooked. Perhaps Norah had put them away. The key was in the drawer, but the drawer was empty. Sallie might have played her a trick, and hidden them with her own ornaments after she had dropped asleep. But Sallie's watch and chain and diamond ring had vanished too. The bewildered girl stood perfectly still for a moment in the extremity of her loss, and then rushing down stairs, heedless of the discovery of her carelessness, began calling "Sallie, mother, papa," all at once, much to the astonishment of those who still lingered in a group round Mr. Lockwood.

The old merchant was seriously angry, when he comprehended what had happened, at his daughters for their carelessness, in spite of oft-repeated warning, but above all things that he should have harbored a thief in his household. The hall door was fastened as usual; no one could have entered that way. The cook, an old family servant, could take her affidavit that no one had passed through the area, where she had just left Norah "talking with a boy, her cousin." The whole family instinctively looked at each other at this announcement, and Mr. Lockwood immediately despatched the waiter to detain the man, and send Norah to him. The discovery was made too late; the man had disappeared with his booty; cook also testifying that she saw the girl "give him a bit of parcel, though she never saw harm in her." It was very hard for Mrs. Lockwood to believe that the young, innocent-looking girl to whom she had taken such a fancy, and who had made herself a general favorite in the household, could be the culprit. Even Mr. Lockwood had noticed her quick step and cheerful face as he passed her on the stairs. But who else could it be? The jewelry was gone, to the value of many hundred dollars, and no one except Norah had any call to enter the young ladies' rooms. Every drawer, box, and hiding-place was searched by the police officer, hurriedly summoned; and suspicion became a charge preferred by Mr. Lockwood against his new servant, all the rest having been in the family many years. It was a pitiful sight, as she was led away to the station-house, still protesting her innocence; her hair dishevelled, her face pale and swollen with sobbing, and the dreadful fear of a prison before her, for no one could doubt but this was her first offence. Mr. Lockwood sent his daughters to their own rooms before she was finally given up to the officer, and steeled his heart to her frantic appeals, as she knelt, clasping his knees, and besought him not to send her

It was a hard matter, "but justice must be done," the merchant said to himself, in justification, as that face, raised so beseechingly to his, came before him through the day. Mrs. Lockwood went about the house very pale and sad, while the servants spoke in whispers to each other, as if some domestic calamity had happened; and the young ladies, whose own carelessness had placed the great temptation in poor Norah's way—and not for the first time—shut themselves into their own rooms, and cried and sobbed *'

The day dragged slowly by, and it was a relief to hear the light hearted Charlie whistle on the steps, and the slick of his latch-key, an hour earlier than usual. There was no one but Annette visible, and his smiles changed to a most harassed, painful expression, as he heard the story of the day's doings. The snow was already coming down heavily, but, snatching a cap from the hat rack, forgetful of overcoat orgloves, he rushed out of the house the instant he learned where Norah had been taken.

The remorseful look upon her cousin's face somewhat lightened Annette's heart, though she could not explain his haste or the errand to his mother and sisters. It was a very anxious hour of watching for all; Isabel lying at full length on the sofa, her face covered with her hands; Sallie trying in vain to practice at the grand piano, and Annette, standing in the drapery of the front window, straining her eyes through the fastfalling snow at every approaching vehicle or foot passenger.

At length the roll of an omnibus ceased at the door, and the glad cry, "Here he is!" as a gentleman stepped out, brought them all to the window, was changed into, "It's only uncle," in a tone more of disappointment than of welcome. But scarcely had Mrs. Lockwood opened the door to her husband, when a vehicle stopped at the door, and Charlie lifted a woman up the steps, whose hood falling back, disclosed the pale face of Norah.

The poor girl said nothing, but crouched down on the stairs the instant Charlie released his hold, and rocked to and fro as one in the extremity of grief or

"Oh, father, for Heaven's sake don't speak so!" he interposed to Mr. Lockwood's angry demand for an explanation of her appearance in his house again. "It was me; I got there just as she had her hearing, and told them so. It was me, father. She's suffered enough already, poor thing!"

And more than enough, for a pureminded, innocent young girl, shut up all day, with the heavy accusation, and the anger and unbelief of her master, hanging over her, with the worst of idlers and vagabonds, and even criminals, and nothing before her but the still darker prospect of conviction and a prison.

"I hid them, father, to tease the girls for being so careless. They are in my dressing-case," continued the generous fellow, with vehemence. "Won't you speak to her, father, and tell her so?"
But Norah had fallen in strong convulsions on the floor, while they were trying to comprehend her innocence, nga a brain fever was the result of the day. Every one in the family ministered to her, from Mr. Lockwood, who called in his own family physician, to the good-hearted cook who had so unwittingly given evidence against her; but it was many weeks before the con-science-stricken Charlie saw her creeping slowly up and down the stairs again, pale and emaciated, the very shadow of the blithe young Irish girl who came there to find a home. She was forgiv-ing and grateful to all of them, but her languor and timidity remained a perpetual remembrancer of the wrong so heedlessly inflicted.

The faithful Norsh's presence in the household-for Mr. Lockwood has offered her a home as long as she may need one-is a check upon his rash judgments of the actions and motives of men, upon Charlie's wanton heedlessness of the feelings of others, and even brother Jim's sublime selfishness. As for Isabel and Miss Lockwood, who tended her through her long illness as if she had been a sister or a friend, they have almost come to consider her as such, and both try to exact a promise from her that she will take charge of their homes, now that there is a near prospect of two weddings in the family. But Norah inclines to "Master Charlie's" offer, to wait till he gets through his law studies and takes Annette for better or worse. So in the end poor Norah's misfortune proved a blessing a disguise.

The Philosopher and the Flea. This is the tale of the philosopher and the flea:

1. The former, having been bitten by the latter, seized and was about to dispatch his foe, when he reflected that the little insect had only acted from instinct, and was not to be blamed. Accordingly he deposited the flea on the back of a passing dog.

2. This dog was the poodle of a lady, and she was very fond of the pretty animal. On his return to the house his mistress took him upon her lap to caress him, and the flea embraced his opportunity to change his inhabit.

3. The flea having in the course of the night engaged in active business operations, awakened the lady. Her husband was sleeping peacefully beside her, and in the silence of the chamber she heard him in his dreams whisper with an accent of ineffable tenderness a name! The name was that of her most intimate female friend!! 4. As soon as it was day, the out-raged wife hurried to the house of her rival, and told therival's husband of the big, big d--ing discovery she had made. He, being a man of decision, at once called out the destroyer of his household's peace, and ran him through.

5. The widow, when her husband was taken home to her upon the medium of a shutter, was so terribly smitten with remorse that she precipitated herself from the fourth-story window.

6. The other lady convinced her husband that he had wronged her by entertaining any suspicions as to her fidelity, and, becoming reconciled with him, seized an early opportunity of poisoning

7. Inasmuch as the jurors of that country had never heard of "extenuating circumstances," and the chief magistrate thought that he could put a murderer to better uses than not guillotining him, the guilty woman was duly decapitated, and the sole survivors of the tragedy were the philosopher and the

Pauline Markham, in an interview, says: "We on the stage are like workers on tapestry—we see nothing but the wrong side. We are in the shadows, as it were, and however exhilarating a spectacle or burlesque may be from the chairs, it is not very heavenly from the wings, I can assure you. It has its fascinations, but a woman in that class of entertainment need never expect to pass through life without being talked about, and the more prominent her name the more exaggerated the stories

Conversing recently with several gentlemenone of them the representative of the largest advertisers in the world-Mr. Withrow remarked:—"As to advertising, I consider St. Jacob's Oil the best advertised article by far. It is a splendid remedy, too. Besides the many cases of rheumatism it has cured right amongst us, it has rendered me most efficient service in curing a severe soreness of the chest and an obstinate head. ache. It does it work satisfactorily."

As seen in his prison, Arabi is a man of singularly courteous manners; tall, burly, not uncomely, with a tendency to baldness and snowiness about the beard. He should be a man of 55, but Orientals are inscrutable in the matter of age, some of them looking 100, while in reality they have but just turned 30. He is a fellah of the fellaheen. The shape of his eyes and cast of his countenance show this. He has the ignorance of the fellah, his boundless trust and grotesquely selfish belief that Allah's time is occupied with specially watching him above all other creatures.

Every considerable village could muster a large audience for an accosional dramatic entertainment, provided it was a good one; but the trouble has been that such places have no buildings of auitable size and facilities. A manager now pro-poses to make a tour with a portable theatre, including a stage, first rate scenery, and an able company. The structure will be transported on and partly formed by eight railroad cars, and can be set up in half a day. It will have a gallery, heating apparatus, and a seating capacity of 1,500. By means of a temporary track a site can be reached half a mile away from the railroad.

Prosecutions in California under United States laws for selling wine and liquor to Indians are largely farcical. This is partly owing to the unreasonable character of the prosecutions, which are often based upon the sale, not of harmful alcoholic liquor, but of mild native wine that does no harm, and is often really needed by the savage consumer for use upon long trips through a parched country. In such cases juries are not willing to return verdicts of guilty. The failure of the prosecutions may also be attributed partly to the unwillingness of many jurors to believe the testimony of Indians. The result is that prisoners are brought to San Francisco from distant parts of the State, at great expense to the Government, only to be acquitted after long and vexatious trials.

Mrs. B. M. Gifford, of Port Rowan, was for many years a sufferer with Liver Complaint and a serious complication of diseases. In a recent letter she says that she has only taken two bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters and has nearly recovered her health, and authorizes us to use her name in advertising to suffering humanity.

The law in Boston forbids the sale of liquor in any building within 400 feet of a school on the same street. To evade the prohibition, dealers whose barrooms were on corners within the limits put the entrances on the side street, and the Police Commissioners granted them licenses. But the Supreme Court decides that the plan will not do.

MADCAP MAY.

She was not beautiful, few people indeed called her pretty, but all the men staying at Orwell House ran after her, and all the women, as a natural consequence, were desperately jealous of her. Had Orwell House been a private mancion, this state of affairs might have produced serious complications, but as it was simply a boarding-house, where people could come for as short or as long a time as they chose, and could go away at a moment's notice, provided only that they paid their bills, masculine infatuation and feminine jealousy were matters which did not concern the two eminently respectable ladies who presided over the establish-

They listened to May Ralston's rattle, they also listened to many spiteful things said about her, and in each case they smiled and prudently forebore to utter a word that could give offence to any one.

So Madcap May, as she was often called, pursued the uneven tenor of her way, equally untouched, by the adulation or the envy so freely awarded her.

"It is a most singular proceeding for a girl who claims to be a gentlewoman, to go careering about the country with no other protector than a boy of fourteen," remarked Mrs. Prudholm, sneeringly, when our heroine was the subject of cca-

"Indeed, does Miss Ralston go careering' about the country?" asked a quiet, mild looking lady who had arrived in Dovercourt the previous day.

"Yes,-at least I don't know what else you can call it," was the somewhat confused reply. "There is some story told about her father having left her here, and about a married cousin coming to chaperone her, but no father has been here in | Harwich. my time, or cousin either, and I and my girls will have been here three weeks tomorrow."

"Then you think the father and cousin are myths?" asked Mrs. Drake, quietly. Mrs. Prudholm shrugged her shoulders expressively as she said. "It doesn't matter much what I think; you and Miss Ralston became friends at once, I observed, and therefore you will no doubt be prejudiced in her favor; still, even you, Mrs. Drake, must admit that it & net the correct thing for an unmarried girl to go out in a boat with Captain Ferris and Mr. Smythe, and only her little brother to take care of her, and without asking any other lady to join the party." "There you are in error, Mrs. Prudholm, for she urged me to go with her; but I am afraid of the water," said Mrs. Drake. "But as you would not go, she could have invited somebody else. I would have allowed either of my daughters to have gone, out of sheer kindness to a poor motherless girl, or I would have even joined the party myself with both my daughters." "Why didn't you volunteer to do so?"

asked the new-comer, with slightly elevated eyebrows; "surely the offer should have come from you."

"No, it should not," replied Mrs. Prudholm, with great dignity; "only last week I allowed my sympathy to get the better of my judgment, and my daughters and I were neglected most shamefully. What the men can see in her I cannot imagine." "Ne, nor can 1," here chimed in Mrs. Thorrold, the jealous wife of a careless husband, and mother of three mismanaged "Then you don't admire Miss Ralston?"

asked Mrs. Drake, sweetly. "No; but my husband does," was the spiteful reply; "he even carries his admiso lar as to order me to be civil to her, and though I do all in my power to keep him and the children from following her about, I don't in the least succeed." "There can't be much harm in the girl, if the children like her," remarked Mrs.

Drake, quietly. "I don't know about that," was Mrs. The conversation was here interrupted by the entrance of May Ralston herself. She came into the room with her face flushed, her eyes bright, her wavy, fluffy brown hair hanging in pretty disorder about her pleasant sweet oval face; and she swung her wide blue-lined hat in her hand, as she looked laughingly at three children who followed at her heels, and then addressing herself to Mrs. Thorrold,

"Fred wants to go in my canoe with me Mrs. Thorrold; will you trust him to my

. "And I want to go too," clamored both the other children. "I can only take one at a time," said

May to the noisy brood; then, glancing at their mother, she repeated her question-"Will you trust them to me, Mrs. Thorhave thought you might have been satisfied with robbing me of the affections of my husband without trying to steal my children's love from me." And Mrs. And Mrs. Thorrold's face became white with rage as she uttered this outrageous impertibreakwater, and she calls out ther, she had not spoken to him a dozen times in her life.

Staring at Mrs. Thorrold with a bewildered gaze, she next turned her eyes upon Mrs. Prudholm, to see if she concurred in condemning her.

But that worthy matron, though she had her own little spites and jealousies, could not sit tamely by and see a motherless girl gratuitously insulted in that way, and feeling for once an impulse of konest indignation, she rose to her feet and said-

"For shame, Mrs. Thorrold, you have forgotten yourself, and your remark is most unladylike." "And most unwarranted," added Mrs. Drake, likewise rising; "and I shall in-the room, followed by all the other ladies except Mrs. Thorrold, who was left with to throw herself out when she found she her three children screaming in concert-"I will go with Miss Ralston! I will go in a canoe with Miss Ralston!"

Their mother tried to quiet them, but in vain; and, sometime afterwards, her husband came into the room, pale with passion but terribly in carnest. "Silence!" he said, sternly, to the little ones; "leave the room!" And, as they obeyed him, he turned to by the spectators on the breakwater, while his wife, and said coldly-

the rest of their stay; and though the child that her whole thoughts were cenchildren always ran after May whenever they saw her, she made a point of discouraging such expressions of affection. This little contretemps had the effect, however, of making May Ralston very popular in Orwell House. Mrs. Prudholm discovered that she was a very charming girl, and if she did take part in a few mad pranks, still she was so young, and so artless, and so unaffectedly good natured, that it was well enough to smile at and look over them.

Mrs. Drake's presence and suddenly avowed relationship was also a protection to May, and as Captain Ferris and Mr. Smythe found their attentions were accepted with equal impartiality and goodnatured indifference, they were piqued occasionally into devoting themselves to more appreciative members of the assemblage of visitors at Dovercourt.

So the days went on. Happy, pleasant, sleepy days. What with bathing in the morning when the tide was in, strolling on the sands, or on the parade, or lounging in the Spa subscription rooms, the time slipped away almost imperceptibly

Excursions were organized to all the places of interest in the neighborhood, and very much May enjoyed them; but her chief delight was to paddle about the broad, calm harbor in her canoe. Sometimes she led a little fleet of canoes, and at other times she was quite alone, without even her brother to accompany her.

Those who know Dovercourt will remember that it stands in the centre of an extensive bay, bounded on the right by Walton-on-the-Naze, and by Languard

Point on the left. Between the latter and Dovercourt liv the broad estuary of the Rivers Orwell and Stour, and the harbor and town of

At a point about midway between Dovercourt and Harwich there is a bow headland, from which there has been built ont into the sea a kind of breakwater or rather groin for the protection of the Harbor of Harwich. Standing at the end of this groin, one may have the water at one's left hand as calm as a mill-pond, while there will be a perfect little tempest raging at one's right, with only some five or six feet of solid stone between the two.

From seaward comes the monotonous boom! boom! of the bell-buoy on the bar at the entrance of the harbor, and its ominous clang reminds one incessantly that, however placid and safe it may be in the harbor, there is storm and danger enough outside. Sometimes this groin is under water, and inaccessible; but generally it is possible to get out to the end of it, where strong seats have been fixed for the benefit of those who appreciate the luxury of having water on three sides of them, without the least risk of having their retreat cut off.

The currents are dangerously strong off the point of the breakwater, and it is perilous for any small craft or canoe to tempt to round it without going some distance out to sea, though the most fragile craft ever floated could lie close to the sloping stonework on the harbor or Harwich side without the least danger.

It was a hot, hazy afternoon. The Spa was filled with brightly dressed people, who seemed to have deserted the parade and the sands for such shade as they could find here.

A band is playing in the grounds, and Madcap May sitting comfortably in her canoe, with her paddle at rest, listens dreamily to the witching strains, and thinks how much sweeter the music sounds here on the water than it does close to the performers.

Her cance is lying almost opposite the Spa, and not a hundred yards from the breakwater, and she is enjoying the pleasant sensation derived from the slight rocking of the canoe, and the notes of the distant music, when a shrill piercing shriek echoes through the air and makes every listener start with sudden alarm.

May looks about her anxiously to see from whence the cry of terror comes .--Then she sees upon the end of the breakwater a woman frantically waving her arms, and screaming, while two terrified children cling to her skirts. Their faces are turned in the direction of Lauguard Fort, and tany are evidently trying to call attention to some person or thing that had fallen into the water.

Some of the people of the Spa grounds hear the cries of distress, for what wind there is, is in that direction, and madly run along the sea-wall towards the breakwater, but it will take the quickest runner a full ten minutes to reach it, and traverse its entire length; and, even when there, what help can any one give? It would be madness for the strongest swimmer to throw himself into the seething, whirling water at this point. One moment's pause "Certainly not, Miss Ralston; I should and then May makes straight for the spot. She knows her danger well, and in the brief moments that elapse between the alarm and her reaching the scene of peril, she thinks of what she has to lose, and of who will be left behind if she perish. There is her father. He will mourn for her, but her brother Frank will comfort May Ralston, 10r a moment stood petri- him-and there is another; but she knows

"What is the matter? Tell me!" "Freddy! Freddy has fallen into the water! My child! My child!"

And Mrs. Thorrold, for it was she, held up her arms, shrieking like a mad wo-

May's face was very paie; a clear stead-fast look came into her eyes; httle Freddy was drowning, and she must save him or lose her own life in the effort.

A few seconds later, and she is on the spot; at the mercy of the swirling current, it would seem, but as she is swept past the place where the child was last seen, he rises again to the surface, and she reaches over and clutches him. "Well done! Well done!" is shouted by the lookers on; but their exultation is firmly, but what she feared, what she has prepared for has happened, she has overbalanced the canoe, and she and little

She had just presence of mind enough must go, and grasp the canoe with her left hand in the hope that the tiny craft would bear the strain long enough to allow time for help to reach her, and here she floats, holding Freddy in one hand and clinging to the canoe with the other, while the bell from the floating buoy booms solemuly as

"Hold on, hold on!" is shouted wildly people in hoats from the Harwich side are pulling lustily towards the scene of the accident, though they only have a very

if ringing her knell.

Counting by minutes, and not one had been lost in coming to May Ralston's aid, the time had been very short indeed, but to her it seemed as though the agony of a lifetime could never be so lengthened out.

To keep the child's head above water was not an easy matter without the use of her other hand; and though she could swim she dared not let go her hold of the cance, and she had not strength to turn it over and lift little Freddy into it.

. So here she hung at the mercy of the current, which had already carried her tred. Her arm was tired and numb, and seemed as though it must fall powerless by her side; but if Freddy's face were not kept above the water, of what use would her own peril have been?

Her very terror lest she should loosen her hold on the child increases her exhaustion, and her ideas become vague and confused. She is dimly conscious of a Babel of voices and the rushing sound of the waters; and then, with one convulsive sob. she realizes that help is close by, and she has just strength enough to murmur-"Take him!" Her eyes watch the chi'd grasped and lifted into the boat, and she knows no more.

"She was nearly gone," is the verdict passed upon her as tender hands drag her tenderly into the boat. They carry her to Orwell House, where everything that skill and affection can suggest is done for her recovery.

She came back to life slowly and painfully, and the first thing she was positivey conscious of, was a small curly-headed boy of five clambering over her bed and nestling in her arms, as he said-

"I'm your little boy now, Miss May; mamma says so, and she says, please will you forgive her, for my sake?" Two days later May's father returned he had heard of his daughter's noble act, and was justly proud of her. And he brought with him a young lieutenant in the navy, who had evidently known our heroine at some earlier period of his life, and who, the first moment he found her alone, clasped her in his arms,

May." This will, no doubt, account for the very sudden departure of Captain Ferris and Mr. Smythe from Dovercourt, and also for the wedding that took place at the old church a few weeks later.

Clara Belle on Tight Fitting Trousers and Thin Legs.

"Isn't it odd," writes Clara Beile, "low things go concurrently to extremes in male and female dress? Just now, while the belies are pinining as dipressing our arms, the baux are doing the same thing to their dear little legs. New trousers are made on astonishingly mesgre lines, and o dones cut down. I don't know how it is in Ohio, but here in ew York the young men's legs run thou and irregular. This statement is based upon public and ensual observation. I have of late frequently as in an elevated railroad car, when some of the passencers had to stand, as divendered in my immos soul how some of them continued to do it. When the car slews around a corner, an equilibrium has to be carefully readjusted, those still-supported chaps twist the two strands of legs into a single rope, and carefully readjus ed, these stile supported chaps twist the two strands of logs into a single rope, and seem cor ain to go down in a heap with it colled bene th them. These same follows, I have no manner of doubt, would sit on the front row of a the tree on a bailet night and make fun of logs twice as the ck and straight as their own. We took a woman has narrowed her skirts unreasonably when she gets them down to three breadths, but is learnly declare them down to three breadths, but I s lemnly declare that I saw this morning a pair of tousers with legs not an inch mere than eleven in girth at the kneed at the knob which I took to be a knee. I want to know if the fa hi nable woman in her windest absurdities, ever equilled the fashionable man of the day, with his legs squeezed into such trousers, and a flat hat pressleg d who on his brain."

UPSET SALE.

Of Fall and Winter Clothing commenced this week and gives promise of great success. Scotch people and old-time folks all know what is the meaning of "upset sale." It is a term us d when things are to be sole out to close estates, partnerships or corporations. I propose a sale of this nature. The prosperous season so far this year, the largest I ever had, encourages me to.

RING ALL THE BELLS.

And call the people in to close out all of the surplus stock. $7,0000 worth of Men's and Boys clothing. I want to sell out to make purchases for fall. I want to sell out to keep pienty work going. I want to sell out to make some changes. I want to sell out to start again with a new stock.

I want to sell out to do a larger business than ever
N thing stops me in executing the right plans, and if the prices must be cut down to gather the

DOWN GO THE PRICES. The people of Port Hope and surrounding country have trea ed no generously for over thirty years, and I am satisfied even though I do sac iff e my + ro-fits for a month. I make money in the long run by serving my cust mers we l.

IN A NUTSHELL, THIS IS IT,

The practical point of all this is a radical reduction in prices. They are cut, some ten, some twenty, some thirty per cent, and some, on goods pr paned specially for his sale, not at all. Compared with April 1st the average deduction is twenty-five per, cent. From the great price list which might be made I on y quote three items to-day, namely:

3,060 pairs of men's Cassimere Pantaloons, made and making, siring, neat, durable, lately worth $3.50 now $2.62. now $2.62.

now $2.62.
6.0 men's suits, real standard Sawyer's Cassimere, made and making, late price $15.00, now $12.50.
750 men's suits, eight styles, every garment freshly made, some of them sold freely at $12. $9.25.

These are only specimens of the reductions,
My great desire is to get the people to examine the goods and see the resitty of the reductions. GOOD CLOTHING FOR WORKING MEN. Good Cothing for wear, and fair to look at, meedn't cost more than $12 a suit. The best every-day suits I make cost ready-made, $30. Be ween these two figures I make an immense variety of clothing, each sort having its particular adaptation, and its own particular goodness. There's no way to pick it out so good as to come and see it. There's no way to prove it so good as to try it. It is by making such clothing as this 1 am talking of that I have won the trade I enjoy.

The credit system is a curse to the country, and in the trade of the country.

1874 I gave it up in disgust. As I am selling my goods at B. Trom CASH PRICES, and not making allowance for bad debts. 5 per cent. per month extra will be charged on all goods not settled within three months of date of invoice, until account is fully paid, as I require to turn over my money or goods three or four times in each year.

E. BUDGE having a personal and practical experience in the business of over thirty years, and having formed business connections direct with some of the very best manufacturers in Europe and America in all the different lines of goods, a call from all the cash paying citizens of this town and surrounding country is respectfully solicited. It is not considered any trouble to show goods and quote prices to intenting purchasers. I sell for cash, and don't you forget it. Good works en wanted, Coat, Vest and Pantaloon makers wanted, a Good Machinist wanted.

Port Hope, Thursday, Nov. 9, 1882 RELIGION IN SCHOOLS.

Last week, owing to the unusual demand on our space, we were unable to deal with several prominent issues of the day. The question of the Bible for the schools is one of these. Since the deputation waited on Mr. Mowat a few weeks ago, the air has been full of the discussion. Mr. Mowat, when interviewed, dealt with the matter so cautiously that it is hard to come to any definite idea as to what his opinions really are. If that deputation left Mr. Mowat's presence any wiser as to his intentions, it must have been through divination. However, independent of the deputation or the "little Premier," the question has an important aspect.

John Bright, the gifted orator, it is said, studied only three books as text books, viz.: The Bible, Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, and Milton's Paradise Lost. From these he drew a vocabulary which, combined with his natural eloquence, constituted him the greatest English orator of the day. The success of Bright, by contrast, shows the defects of our latter day educational system. By concentrating his efforts upon such grand literature as is contained in the Bible and in Paradise Lost, he assimilated a nobility of sentiment and a style that he could never have acquired by skimming over namby-pamby Sunday school books and the other flimsy literature placed in the hands of children now-a-days. So much of an indiscriminate character is appointed for study that a boy or a girl his to read a very great deal, and subsequently is very little impressed with any thing thus perused. The mere reading of the Scriptures in

is nothing less than a farce as far as

moral effect is concerned. It is also out of the question to imagine that teachers will turn preschers. If, incidentally, they take every advantage of inculcating moral principles in the minds and hearts of their pupils, it is all that can be expected of teachers in this respect. Still, while we do not believe in routine reading of the Bible, or teachers turning Sunday School teachers, we maintain that the Bible should be studied as a Book of History and Literature. All history is founded on biblical history. In the Bible is to be found the finest poetry, the most beautiful imagery, the sublimest sentiment, and the grandest eloquence ever produced. It adapts itself to the vivid imagination of children as well as to the judgment of the matured, and the teacher who is not able to explain it and teach it as a book of History and Literature is not fit to be a teacher. It is an astonishing fact that, notwithstanding all our Sabbath Schools and the number of Bibles in the land, of nine-tenths of grown-up people in this Province, the book with which there is the least acquaintance is the Bible. All, or nearly all, have read it and heard it read time and time again, but it is because it is read and not studied that the Bible is not more generally understood. If the historical parts of the Scriptures were read by children in school as any other reading exercise, and the splendid not recognizable as Hebrews in passing literature found in Job and the Psalms read and talked about, not only would very important knowledge be obtained, but a superior literary taste formed. objections are urged: We should have no text-book in schools in which all creeds can not unite in studying. Well, if the History and Literature of the Bible are objectionable to Catholics, respect their prejudices and exempt them. Again, we are told that the This objection is counterchecked by the Bible, like "Marmion," on account of certain passages, could not be "critically" explained to a class. The morality of this age is getting to be something surprising when the Bible, the basis of our morality, on account of perverting be your God. Yet the number of the the minds of the youth, cannot be read to children. It would seem as though the sea, which cannot be measured nor there was some danger of people becoming too good. It is true that such passages do exiat, but it is not necessary they should be read. Others urge that the reading of the Bible is objectionable on account of denominationalism. Where denominationalism and the Scriptures cussed become too numerous and too conflict, it is certainly not desirable in a Christian country to kick out the Scriptures in order to save the feelings of devotees to sectarianism. But those parts involving denominational issues need not be dwelt upon. There are portions of the Bible historical, some purely literary, some prophetical, and large class tell us to keep religious and secular training apart. We say so too; but we advocate furnishing the facts of Biblical history to the child, and letting religious teachers apply these as they please in forming doctrines. As a rule, the impressions which cling to men and women through life are all obtained before they pass their minority, and there are hundreds to day who owe about all they know of the history of the Bible to the old text-books, now looked upon by the advanced(1) educationists as too old-fashioned and not up to the times. Our theory in regard to education is this: teach only to scholars what they can learn well and what is important and necessary; and as the Bible is regarded by a Christian nation as most important to be studied, it ought not to be excluded. To form the basis of historical knowledge and to elevate literary tastes, if for no other reasons, it is the book, above all others, which should be studied.

DR. WILD'S THEORY.

It is not strictly correct to speak of the Anglo-Israel theory as "Dr. Wild's theory," because it is not at all original with Dr. Wild. Over twenty-five years ago Taylor advocated the identity of the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel with Great Britain, or the Anglo-Saxon race. Hine, in his successive psmphlets of the Twenty-seven," "Forty-seven," and Seventy-seven Identifications," is most elaborate, and gives nearly all the proofs advanced by Dr. Wild. Mr. S. Russell, a former resident of Millbrook, some years ago contributed much towards the advancement of this theory, and is, perhaps, one of its best versed adherents in Canada. However, as Dr. Wild is the prominent expounder of Anglo-Israel ideas in America, we will allow the theory for present purposes to retain his patronymic.

Those to whom the doctrines of this new school are novel are apt to laugh it to scorn, but they will be surprised upon entering the fild of polemics on this question with any of its champions to find how easily they can be unhorsed. The whole doctrine pivots on these Biblical truths:-The complete separation of the Israelites after the reign of Solomon into two distinct kingdoms-Judah and Israel; the Ten Tribes were carried away into captivity and never returned; after the separation, when reference is made to Israel and Judah and the Jews, it invariably points to distinct peoples, and the terms never became synonymous; certain promises were made to the Israelites, as a kingdom, which were never fulfilled before they were carried into captivity. Now, the inferences to be drawn are these: The Lost Ten Tribes must exist somewhere as a nation; the promises made to them must be fulfilled, so that they are yet to be found; to find them we must look to some nation which appears to most nearly fulfill the conditions of the promises made; if the Brish nation is not the Ten Tribes, where are they The above is the basis of the theory.

Those who heard Dr. Wild's lecture or read the report in THE TIMES were, doubtless, surprised at the number and character of the proofs adduced, but only a very small corner was touched. The Anglo Israel theory in all its details is. perhaps, the most elaborate, unique, and withal the most ingenious theory ever propogated. We say nothing about its correctness; but to those who are dubious as to the evidences in its favor, we would recommend the study of some of Hine's works or those of Dr. Wild. The theory can certainly do no harm, theologically considered, as it keeps close, some say too literally close, to Scripture texts, and gives room for a world of thought. After a very careful study of its tenets, we could recommend it as an antidote to infidelity and an exceedingly interesting course of study.

Objections of a serious nature naturally pops up in one's mind as the theory is proposed. The question arises, How could an Eastern race in the space of less than 600 years become so transformed in appearance and language that they were through the countries of Europe to England? Now there is no resemblance between a representative Englishman and a representative Jew or Hebrew. Anthropology and philology point to the Teutons as our kinsmen, and the whole Teutonic family must claim equal rights to descent from Jacob. If England is identical with the Lost Tribes, nothing short of a miracle can account for it. prediction that Israel should change her countenance and not be known by her language; also by such passages as these "Then said God, call his name Lo-ammi for ye are not my people, and I will not children of Israel shall be as the sand of numbered; and it shall come to pass, that in the place where it was said unto them, ye are not my people (Israelites), there it shall be said unto them, ye are the sons of the living God(a christian nation)." The problems which rise up as this is disbroad for newspaper articles, and can only be intelligently and fully argued in pamphlets and magazines. It is a subject, however, well worth study.

Previous to this a telegram was sent to the Globe from its Ottawa Ananias, making certain statements. In these fabrications, as they proved to be, seven dis inct assertions were made, viz.: That the Licensed Victuallers complained of having to close at seven on Saturday; that Sir John requested them to call a meeting to frame a memorial of their heroes of the Old Bible, and to read to grievances; that he said he would endeavor to have matters settled to their satisfaction; that the Licensed Victuallers produced the books of their Association; that they said the Victuallers controlled 7,800 votes; that Sir John the License Law the same as that of Quebec; that Sir John extracted a Reform party.

Every member forming that deputation came forward, through the columns tive terms, over their own signatures, that every statement made was entirely false. Thus time and again the Globe, account of its lies, but it rises up each ened determination to keep on lying.

Sir John Macdonald's position on the Mowat License Law is well understood. He says that the Ontario Government's action in taking the right of regulating licenses out of the hands of the municipalities is unconstitutional, and he is bound to set the matter right. This well known resolve on his part is taken as a lever by which to injure the Conservative party with temperance people. ed. > " Smiff" of the Bobcaygeon Independent has a poor opinion of the Bibe, especially the Old Testament, as a text book in schools. Here is what he says:

"The morality of the Old Bible, we will put it mildly, is not suitable for the present state of civilization, and no right th nking man or women would for a moment contemplate training up their chil dren in such a system of morality as is exhibited in the Old Bible. Concub n age, prostitution, drunkenness, murder, and horrible offences which this journal. though not by any means mealy-mouth ed, dare not mention, were common to the most distinguished and most pi us boys and girls in school such shocking stories of moral depravity would certainly have the very worst effect."

A Man With Fifty Children

Mr. Basingame, a prominent merchant from Social Circle, Georgia, reports a remarkable case of vitality, which he says is well known to the people of his country. Near Social Circle resides a colored man named Harry Lackey, who has probably more descendants than any other living man. He has been in this country so long that his own testimony on this question is corroborated by his neighbors. Harry is 90 years old, hale and hearty, and one of the most industrious and highly respected negroes in the country. The other day he took into himself a third wife, Susan Phillips, aged 61. He already has fifty children, whom he acknowledges, and who call him by various terms of filial affection. Several of his children have died. In the presence of some gentlemen the other day, he named over more than 300 of his grandchildren and said there were others whom he could not then remember. One of his sons has thirty living children. Several of his sons count up more than a dozen children each. The old man is proud of his record, and talks freely about it whenever questioned. He has always been an organized Democrat, and is the only negro in his militia district who votes in the Democratic primary elections. He says he don't think his work is finished yet, and as no idea of suspending business so soon. - Atlanta Constitution.

Dominion Organs Lead the World

Beats the CIOUGH & WARREN, MASON & HAMLIN, BELL (of Guelph), and the SMITH American Organs.

It affords us unlimited pleasure to again congratulate the enterprising Managers of the Dominion Organ & Piano Company, of Bowmanville, on the unbounded success of their Organs abroad. Yesterday's mail brought them the following letter, forwarded by their English House-Messrs. Forsyth Bros., of Manchester and London, and which they have given us permission to publish:-

DERRY, ENGLAND, Oct. 11, 1881.

MESSES. FORSYTH BROS.,

GENTLEMEN, —I have been exceedingly busy during Church Congress week at the Exhibition, or I should have written you sooner respecting the Organ you kindly sent for exhibition. When your traveller was here I mentioned that Chappells (of London) were sending me the largest organ that Clough & Warren make, Metaler, a Masson & Hamlin large size, Bell Organ Co., (of Geolph).—a largest size also—the Smith American Organ Co., tone of their largest size, and as I wish to make the exhibit as complete and telling as possible, you might perhaps be willing to send a representative instrument on same terms, viz., that I paid carriage each way. I am bound in truth to tell you, that although the organs I have named were fine instruments, everybody of the large number who tried and examined the stock, was of the opinion that the Dominion Organ was certainly the best, and at the price (the Clough & Warren was £225 there was no comparison. I think to highly of the organ personally, that although I have in stock two large ones of Clough & Warren manufacture, I am convinced that if I keep it, and place it at the end of a long saloon it will soon sell and lead to a good business in that style of instrument. The exhibition is now over, and the ergan loose splendid where I have it placed; and I feel so sure that it will lead to so many sales that I am loath to part withit, and have, therefore decided to keep it.

Yours faithfully,

Ergan Horne. MESSES. FORSYTH BROS.,

Yours faithfully, Ergar Horne.

This letter, we are informed, is only a sample of the many the Company are con-stantly receiving from all parts of the world; and coming, as they do, unsolicited on their part, they prove to a certainty that the "Dominion" is the finest organ manufactured. This, coupled with the fact that orders are crowding in so rapidly that the Factory has to be run over time to fill them, notwithstanding that they have now a manufacturing capacity capable of turning out one instrument an hour, should convince intending purchasers of the real worth of the Organs and Pianos manufactured by the Deminion Organ & Piano Co., of Bowman-ville. Discussion is rife in England upon the events which marked the opening of the autumn session of the Imperial Parliment. The Cost of the War in Egypt.

Next to the actual character of the settlement which is to be carried out in Egypt, the cost of the war is the question in which the country is most interested. A good deal of exaggeration is prevalent on this point, and sums ranging from ten to twenty millions have been mentioned as likely to be the cost of the campiagn. It is hardly necessary to say that this short waris not likery to entail so large a burden on the country.

When the vote of credit for £2,300,000 was taken the government based its calculation on the belief that the war would end by the 15th of September. This expectatation was fulfilled almost to the day; but, as usual, the original estimate turns out to be entirely inadequate. I believe that the expenditure connected with the war will be between four and five millions; and if it should not exceed the higher figure the country will not have much cause to complain. This is, of course, exclusive of the cost of the Indian contingent, which will be over two millions, and part of which will almost certainly have to be borne by this country .- London World.

"Female Complaints."

Dr. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N.Y.: Dear Sir,-I write to tell you what your "Favorite Prescription" has done for me. I have been a great sufferer from female complaints, especially "dragging-down," for over eix years, during much of the time unable to work. I paid out hundreds of dol-lars without any benefit till I took three bottles of the "Favorite Prescription," and I never had anything to do me so much good In my life. I advise every sick lady to take it. Mrs. EMILY RHODES, McBride's,

More Coward than Hero.

"Detroit furnishes a hero in the shape of a young man who studied medicine with one of the best physicians in the city and was regarded as an uncommoly promising neophyte. Last spring he was graduated from the Medical Department of the Michigan University. During his student life he visited the sick assiduously as an observer and assistant, was engaged in hundreds of surgical cases, and everywhere demonstrated his remarkable adaptability for the profession. On coming home from College he one day walked into his old preceptor's office and startled that eminent practitioner with the declaration that he should never practice. Said he: 'I have traveled with you several years and seen more woe than I ever dreamed existed in this world. Now the simple fact is I shall hever do it again. The thought of spending the remainder of my life surrounded by the wretched miseries of the sick room and being forever haunted by the piteous sights an active physician must everywhere encounter is too horrible to be thought of with anything like indifference or equanimity. I'll not do it, and there's an end of the whole matter.' Remonstrance was useless. The brave fellow kept his word, gave up the results of years of study and is now hard at work in a manufacturing establishment, with sleeves rolled up, learning a new business."

Woman's True Friend.

A friend in need is a friend indeed. This none can deny, especially when assistance is rendered when one is sorely afflicted with disease, more particularly by those complaints and weaknesses so common to our female population. Every woman should know that Electric Bitters are woman's true friend and will positively restore her to health, even when all other remedies fail. A single trial always proves our assertion. They are pleasant to the taste, and only cost fifty cents a bottle. Sold by G. A. Mitchell

The way in which Japanese newspapers are often conducted is amusingly naive. A recent issue of the Nichi Nichi Shimbunwhich, like all of its native contemporaries, is printed, not in columns, but in squares -came out with one square, the empty space being covered with a number of straight lines. The editor apologizes for the extraordinary appearance of the paper, informing the readers that at the last moment he found that what he had written was all wrong, and had to be taken out. He had no time to fill it up with anything else, and there was nothing to be done but to leave the space with nothing in it.

Gun-Cotton.

The Power of the Terrible and Dangerous Explosive.

In response to Superintendent Walling's criticism, as reported in the Sun, allow me to state a few facts concerning explosives, which I shall be happy to demonstrate to him, if he will honor me with his presence, at the College of the City of New York, or at Bellevue Medical College. If gunpowder is placed in a basket made of coiled platinum wire, and is then inserted in a glass jar arranged so that it can be exhausted of air by an air-pump, on applying a current of electricity to the coil, so as to render the wire red-hot, the gunpowder will neither explode nor burn with a flash. It will apparently boil, with a purple light, and will require from five to twenty seconds for its complete combustion, depending on the quantity of powder and the amount of air removed.

All know that gunpowder has its own supply of oxygen—it does not require any from the air; for we shut out the air when we load a pistol, a rifle or a cannon. The nitrate of potash furnishes the oxygen for the carbon and sulphur of the powder, The cause of the tardy combustion of the gunpowder in the exhausted receiver is the diminished pres-

But wrap the powder in paper, and we have the firecracker; enclose the powder in an iron sphere, and we have the bomb-shell. As the powder burns under increased pressure produced by its own gases, it explodes with increased force. An ounce or even a pound of powder, when burnt in the open air, produces no explosive sound-merely a

The fulminates of silver or mercury which are used in percussion caps will also burn slowly when placed in the platinum coil referred to and heated red-hot after the air has been exhausted from the glass jar. Yet in the open air, when fired, they will explode with a sharp sound.

If a lock of gun-cotton (of the most explosive kind), say a foot in length, ba suspended in a glass jar with said platinum coil, and after removing the pressure of air by a pump, if the coil is made red-hot by an electric current, the guncotton will not explode, nor will a flame or spark of fire be seen; the gun-cotton will gradually disappear.

Even under the pressure of the air, or, in other words, in the open air, small quantities of gun-cotton of the most explosive variety when lighted do not explode; they merely burn with a bright flash of light. When we prepare guncotton for a class in chemistry we frequently place a lock of it on a student's hand and fire it to show how quickly it burns; for he scarcely feels it. This is one of the trivial tests of its good quality. Another is to place the gun-cotton on gunpowder, then apply a light. If it fails to ignite the powder it is the explosive variety; if it sets fire to the powder it is inferior in character. Photographers' gun-cotton, which is soluble in alcohol and ether, and is used for making collodion, will burn slower. If placed on gunpowder it will ignite it.

Enclose the explosive variety of guncotton in a stout receptacle. Now fire it, and it will exhibit three times the force of gun powder.

If Superintendent Walling will fill a teaspoon with nitro-glycerine and apply to it a lighted match, he will find that the nitro-glycerine will quietly and slowly burn, with a green-colored flame, because it is only subjected to the pressure of the air. But if he places this amount of nitro-glycerine in a closed vessel and fires it, I would advise him to remain at a respectful distance from it.

I have placed a fluid ounce of nitroglycerine in a metal cup, connected with one pole of a galvanic battery, and on applying the opposite pole of the bat-tery to said liquid, I have shown before a medical class that the nitro-glycerine burns tardily and without noise. With said battery I had previously fused and volatilized platinum, iridium aud other refractory metals to demonstrate the intensity of the heat. Yet, if a single drop of nitro-glycerine is placed on a smooth surface and struck a sudden blow, the explosion is stunning to the ear. The same law applies to giant powder, dy-namite, rend-rock and other terrific explosives. They must have pressure to exhibit their power. They burn quietly and slowly without it, -Dr. Doremus in the New York Sun.

He Kept It.

Dr. Prime in the New York Observer writes some observations on the grace that is not common in England, Germany and America. The churlish selfishness so often seen in railroad-cars, he characterizes as an Anglo-Saxon qual-

Coming home in the Fifth Avenue omnibus one afternoon, says Dr. Prime, I met with a specimen of mother and manners that will amuse you.

The stage was full-six on each side. A woman-observe, I do not say a lady -entered with two children, a ten-yearold boy and a younger girl. As she could not find a seat, I ave her mine, and the two children stood at her knee.

Presently two persons left, and the boy and I sat down opposite the mother. Now two ladies entered, and the mother instantly bent forward, and said to her

"Keep your seat; I paid for you." This was a lesson in selfishness that will be remembered by the boy all his life. The mother had just before accepted my seat, compelling me, a man twice as old as herself, to stand up in an omnibus; but the moment when her little son had an opportunity to be kind to ladies, she interposed, and bade him keep his seat.

Now that the reaping and mowing season is coming on, farmers should remember that "Kaiser" Machine Oil is the best reaper and mower oil in the market. For sale by all dealers.

We feel inclined to tell a story of a Bradford lady whose husband was detained late one night at his buisness in Haverhill and could not join a whist party to which he had been invited. "Why didn't Charley come?" asked the host. "Because," answered his wife, 'he had to stay at the store---"[after a vain search for the word she want-ed] "teetering his accounts." "Balsneing" was the word she was hunting for,

"Do you mix anything with your candles here?" he asked as he laid his money down and picked up the package of gum drops.
"Well—ahem—anything else?" "Perhaps a little clay." "Any chalk?" "Only a very little. Not enough to speak of." "It's of no interest to me you know," continued the stranger. "but I was wondering why you didn't have your candies made at the regular brick-yard, of the regular material, and have something you could warrant to purchasers."

"I'm in love with her figure," the young man sighed.
"You cipher for me, then" the young lady replied.
"Lot's add both our fortunes and then divide."
And then they were married and multipled.

It is not improbable that serious difficulties will arise to prevent Sir Garnet Wolseley's promotion to the rank of General. Mr. Toppnyagon have queen more tried high

Mr. Tennyson bas once more tried his hand at a play. His previous efforts in this direction, whatever their merits as dramatic poems, are dead failures as acting plays. The fact is that the Laurente never, or "hardly ever," goes to the theatre, and, accordingly, knows little or nothing about the requirements of the stage. His new prose drama, which is to be produced at the Lon-don Globe Theatre, is called "The Promise of May," and its theme is the suffering of rustic innocence at the hands of a libertine of the most Mephistophelean type. One must, however, admire Mr. Tennyson's persevering effort to achieve success as a writer of plays, even though his attempts have been hitherto ineffectual. Carter's Little Liver Pills are face fr m n'l crude and irritating matter. Concentrated medicine only; very small; very easy to take; no pain; no griping;

no purging. Oscar Wilde thus recounts an incident of his Saratoga experience:- "While talking with Judge Brady at Congress Hall a great crowd came around us, mostly women, and finding it a great bore to be thus stared at, I moved on into the office. There they came flooking in after us. I went to the billiard room, but found no refuge there. The women rushed there-ladies in silks and crapes and laces, with diamonds in their ears, bringing their daughters with them! To balk their pursuit utterly, I fled to the bar room. Will you believe me that they came there-in ten minutes fifty to one hun dred of them-filling up the place almost? It seemed to me a most painful and dreadful thing-the bold-faced staring and half audible comment."

Sir Stafford Northcote knows how to flatter the vanity of the Scotch. In returc. ing thanks recently to the Glasgow Corporation for presenting him with the freedom of the city, he quoted Burns more than once, referred to characters in Scott, and was, in fact, more Scotch than the Scots themselves. He then launched into a high eulogium of the city of Glasgow, and, while descanting on its commercial prosperity, thought fit to sneer at the development of the great cities of America. "When I hear of the growth of these mushroom cities," said the orator, "however great they may be, and however they may threaten the prosperity of my own country, I shall always remember and say: 'Don't speak to me—I am a citizen of Glasgow.'" This certainly is a very absurd parody of the Civis Romanus sum, but no doubt it does very well for Glasgow.

Dyspepsia of Thirty Years' Standing. From J. T. Bowen, of East Aurors, N.Y.

From J. T. Bowen, of East Aurors, N.Y.

"I was troubled with dyspessia for thirty years, and tried several medicines advertised for the cure of this distressing complaint, without deriving any benefit from them. About a year ago I commenced taking the Penuvian Syaur, and after using altogether twelve bottles I find myself entirely cured. I consider my case one of the worst I over heard of, and I take great pleasure in recommending the PERUVIAN SYRUP to all dyspeptics, believing that it will be sure to cut e them." All draggists sell it.

The King of Holland, notwithstanding his eccentricity, may fairly claim that his conduct is a protest against the luxury and effeminacy of some persons who lay claim to aristocracy. One of the great Roman heroes, after leading his country to victory, rejected the material rewards which a gratepeople offered him, and retired to his humble cottage to live as a common hus-bandman. The King of Holland cannot boast of having achieved any military triumphs, but he exhibits the same indifference to pomp and grandeur as the illus ri-ous Roman. We are told that instead of dining sumptuously every day he personally superintends the frying of his own potatoes, which, together with a few glasses of beer, constitute his homely repast.

". "" Men condemn in others what they practice themselve." Those who practice the use of Kidney-Wort never condemn its use by others, but commend it to all affected with piles, dyspepsia, constipation and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of Kidneys, liver or bowels.

A successful ascent of the Dent du Geant by an Alpine tourist, an Italian named S lla, has just been made. So many at-tempts to climb this colossal and practically perpendicular obelisk had failed that it was regarded as inaccessible. The pick of the guides—Swiss, French and Italian—met with no better success than simple tourists. Some years ago an English nobleman at-tempted to throw a cord weighted at one end over the summit, but the wind was too much for him, and the rope was blown back into the hands of the person throwing it. A flutter of excitement ran through the hotels of Chamonnix and Courmayeur when it be-came known that a young Italian had scaled the peak. The means by which he was enabled to perform so remarkable a feat proved to have been simple enough. For several weeks past two guides had been cocupied in cutting steps in the most slippery and less accessible places, in fixing hooks and staples and attaching ropes to them. When these preparations were completed. the ascent proper took place; but it was not accompanied without much difficulty and danger. No sooner was the news known at Chamounix than an Englishman started to m.ke the ascent also. He succeeded.

nor if your lungs are badly wasted away can they be cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." It is, how-ever, unequalled as a tonic, alterative, and nutritive, and readily cures the most obsti-nate cases of bronchitis, coughs, colds, and incipient consumption, far surpassing in effi-cacy cod liver oil. Send two stamps for as usually covers eggs. The hen, during Dr. Pierce's pamphlet on Consumption and this summer, has laid three eggs similar to Kindred Affections. Address WORLD'S DISthis in size, each of which contained another PENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo,

"Who is that sad-looking man whom I saw sitting in the next room, as I came through?" said Mr. Jones to the managing editor.

"That? that is Lawson, our substitute editor." "What is a-What are the functions of that kind of an editor?" "Why, you know, we employ Lawson to shoulder disagreeable consequences of all kinds. When we 'go for' anybody until outraged nature can no longer stand it, the injured man calls and we show him in and let him kick Lawson." "But I don't exactly understand

"Why, you see, the man comes here and asks to see the managing editor. The boy at the door knows, from the fire in his eye, what he wants, and he turns him into Lawson's room. There is a brief scrimmage and about a quar-ter of an hour later Lawson saunters in here with his handkerchief to his nose to say that his salary really must be raised. He is a very useful man. By concentrating all the storms on him, the regular staff is allowed to have periect peace and security. He is cowhided once or twice a week, and knocked down even oftener. We have the floor in there padded on purpose to make it as comfortable as possible. He don't mind an ordinary flogging so much, but the man has a strange disinclination to be shot at; possibly because he has three bullets in his legs and a two-ounce slug encysted somewhere in his interior department.

"But Lawson don't mind his ordinary duties as much as you would think. We turn in all the bores upon him. He commands a large salary because he is deaf as a post, and a bore who would set me leaves him in a condition of unruffled calmness. All the poets who come here are sent to his room. One of them'll sit there and read to Lawson a poem in forty-two stanzas, and Lawson'll sit there smiling blandly, just as if he heard it all, and then he'll compliment the writer and bow him and his manuscript out with charming grace and ease. He makes mistakes sometimes, to be sure. The other day a man read him a speech which the man wanted to pay for inserting in the paper. Lawson thought it was a poem, and he told the man, in the usual formula, that he was sorry our advertising was pressing us so just now that we couldn't oblige him, and the man went up the street and published it in the Herald. A dead loss to us of about forty dollars; but Lawson is too valuable to be discharged for a single blunder like that. "Whenever there's an excursion on a dangerous part of a new railroad, or a trial trip of a steamboat that we are doubtful about, we always send Lawson to represent the staff. He has been blown up twice on the river and has been dropped eight times through a de-fective trestle-bridge, besides participat-ing in a couple of boiler explosions. We could hardly run this office safely if we didn't have Lawson."

"He struck me as looking rather lowspirited."

"So he is. He has naturally a strong constitution; but he is gradually breaking down under the strain, I am afraid, and is going to die early. It weighs on his mind. He had a terrific fight with an indignant politician last summer just after he had tested a basket of rather unripe cantaleupes, and I have noticed that he has been gloomy ever since."

Just then the subdued noise of an al-tereation was heard in the adjoining room; there was a pistol shot and a bullet came whizzing through the partition, passing close to Mr. Jones's head.

"What's that?" asked Jones.

"Lawson's having a tussel with McIlvaine, the Democratic candidate for Common Council. We cut McIlvaine up in to-day's issue. I thought he'd call. Boy!" exclaimed the editor, "run for a policeman!"

Then the sounds died away and ten minutes later, when Mr. Jones went out, he saw the policeman and two other men carrying Lawson to the hospital on a stretcher, whereupon the managing editor said:

"We'll have to let up on McIlvaine for a day or two till Lawson has time to recuperate."

Giving up His Farm.

A Norwegian farmer is self-possessed, brave and clever at all kinds of handicraft. If he wishes to build a house, he goes to the forest, cuts down the trees, hews them into shape, saws them into boards, and uses them as if he had been a trained carpenter. He can tan leather and make a harness or a pair of shoes. He is his own blacksmith and miller, and if he lives on the coast, his own shipwright. For amusement he makes musical instruments and furniture. He is an expert fisherman and a brave When the farmer has become too old for active work the farm comes into possession of the eldest son. Custom prescribes how the important event shall take place. Mr. Du Chaillu thus describes such an eyent which he witnessed in Husum:

Dinner being ready, all the members of the family seated themselves around the table, the father taking, as he had for years, the head of the table. All at once, his eldest, Roar, who was not seated, approached his father and said,— "Father, you are getting old; let me take your place." "Oh no, my son," answered the father, "I am not too old to work; it is not yet time; wait awhile,"

"O father," said Roar, with an entreating look, "all your children, and I especially, are often sorry to see you look so tired when the day's work is over. The labor of the farm is too much for you; it is time for you to rest, and do nothing. Rest in your old age. Do let me take your place at the head of the

"Not yet, my son," again answered the father, and all the faces were very sober, tears being in their eyes, as the other children said,—

"Now, father, it is time for you to

Then, hard as it was for the sturdy old man to give up the place he had so long filled, he rose from his chair, and Roar seated himself in it. Thence he was the head of the family and the master of the farm.

The father from that day would have nothing to do, except to live in a comfortable house and receive a stipulated amount of butter, cheese, meal, milk, grain, flour and potatoes.

Gooderham, of the late firm of Gooderham & Worts, and Messrs. J. G. and T. F. Worts, W. H. Beatty, A. M. Cosby, David Smart, E. S. Cox, W. G. Gooderham, A. E. Gooderham. The capital stock is placed at $2,000.

NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE .- As intimated last week, the Peterboro' Examiner made its appearance in an enlarged form. Business men in Peterboro' appreciating the benefits to be derived from extensive advertising, make heavy demands upon the publisher's space, and so our contemporary, in order to not neglect either reader or advertiser, has extended its borders, and now measures 56 columns, 30 of which are given to the reader. It is now the same size as THE TIMES. In print and morals the Examiner claims to be the "cleanest" in the Province. Peterboro' has now two papers of which any town of its population may be proud.

COMPLAINTS are made by shippers of live stock concerning the gross negligence of the Grand Trunk authorities in attending to their wants. Mr. Haw shipped a car load of horses from Port Hope recently, which should have reached Montreal on Sunday morning but which was delayed at Brockville for twenty-four hours, and from the time the horses left here until they reached Montreal they were without food or water, and had kicked each other so badly that two weeks doctoring was necessary before the horses were salable. This resulted in considerable loss, and Mr. Haw informs us that as far as sheet down street sent us his compliments he knows, there was no possible reason for the this morning. Thanks."-Friday's Guide. delay at Brockville.

LAST Thursday evening the Methodist prayer-meeting was addressed by a reformed gambler. He is travelling as a revivalist, and has been nine years converted. Before his conversion he had spent a life of gambling and crime. While in State prison, a lady one day presented him with a bonquet of flowers. That kind act, he said, influenced him towards a new life. He is an illiterate man, but very fluent speaker. His looks are a'l proof sufficient that he was once a gambler. The twinkle in the eye, where a professional trumps high and has still a reserved force of three aces in his sleeve, has not yet departed from him. From here he went west, and he intends to study at an Ohio college for full ministerial work.

A POLITICAL LANDMARK GONE .- James Wicks Dunsford, for several years Police MagIstrate in Lindsay, is another among the great number of prominent men who have Sept. 17th, and the Psalm appointed for the lately passed away. He was born in 1814; settled in Verulam in 1837; was Reeve of that appears the following verse: - Thou hast township for many years; was elected in 1861 fully guarded. Owing to lack of space we in the next general election, this time defeating Hon. Sydney Smith; and some years ago was appointed Chief Magistrate of Lindsay. He was old-fashioned, and his virtues, for which he was generally respected, were also of the old fashioned, sterling kind.

OUR MARKET .- "As I had a trip to Port Hope last Saturday, and was in the market, I may give the Tox a few jottings. You would not believe the business done there. There is more lamb, mutton, pork and beef shown on the market than would be shown in the FIXING THE PARK .- The committee ap- Lindsay market in six months; and such a quantity of butter, eggs, fowls and vegetables! AN ORANGE SERMON. - According to notice last week, Sunday being the anniversary of the Gunpowder Plot, the Orangemen of the town attended St. Mark's church in the morning, when the Rev. J. S. Baker preached a sermon suitable to the occasion. A large number of Orangemen were present, and the sermon, which was full of facts relating to will greatly regret the leaving of Mr. C., who the history of Protestantism and the landing has always shown a commendable public of Prince William, was greatly enjoyed. The Rev. gentleman took occasion to refer to the action of Archbishop Lynch, so much commented upon lately. He thought the encroachments of this Canadian Pontiff should be resisted, and our religious interests careare unable to publish a synopsis of the dia-

MR. BENSON APPOINTED JUDGE.

The last number of the Canada Gazette contains the following notice of appointment: "Thomas Moore Benson, of the town of Port Hope, Esquire, one of Her Majesty's Counsel learned in the law, to be Junior Judge of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham-and under the provisions of 44 Vic., cap 5, sec. 76, Ontario, a Local Judge of the High Court of Justice for Ontario." That this appointment would be made has long been expected. As to its suitability all are agreed; Mr. Benson's position as an able lawyer has long been recognized, and we feel certain that no Judge in Ontario can fill a similar position with more credit to himself. We trust that Judge Benson will long enjoy his well deserved honors.

As the appointment of Mr. Benson to a judgeship has rendered him ineligible to a seat in the Harbor Board, there will, consequently, be another vacancy in that body, which, of course, necessitates the appointment of another Harbor Commissioner.

ORANGE SUPPER.

The Orangemen of Port Hope on Tuesday vening revived the old custom of having a supper on or as near as possible the evening of the Fifth of November. Mr. C. Nixon, landlord of the Turner House, was the caterhis guests. The spread was really first-class Mr. Jas. Evans, District Master, presided, while Mr. E. A. Powers acted as Vice-Chair-

Rev. J. S. Baker, incumbent of St. Marks, and Messrs. D. Marshall and W. G. Stevenson, occupied the seats of honor.

After the oysters, goose and other items of the bill of fare had been disposed of, toasts were introduced.

The Chairman, with happy reference to each, proposed the usual loyal toasts, to which the responses were hearty.

"The Grand Lodge of British North America, the Provincial Lodges, and their Representatives" was responded to by Mr. D. Marshall. As reference had been made to the political aspect of Orangeism he thought a few words would not be out of place. Orangemen were independent on all questions where they could be. There were several questions, however, upon which they had to be political. Among these were connection with the Mother Country, and that of Orange Incorporation. Orangeism had not opposition enough in Ontario, so that no open attacks were made on them. The attempts made against them were of a more subtle cheracter. Both political parties pandered to the Catholic vote, and both were trying to hoodwink the Orangemen. Mr. Frazer really ruled Ontario. What was true of Ontario was in some respects true of the Dominion. It could not Ontario had played false with the Orangemen, and it was their duty to oust Mowat and put in his place the leader of the Opposition, who promises to meet Orangemen in a spirit of fairness. Mr. Marshall concluded by remarking that the Protestants were getting too liberal, and were little by little conceding to Catholics what they some day might have to take up arms to regain.

The toast of the "Press" was next drank.

and responded to by members of the "fourth estate" present.

Mr. W. G. Stevenson responded at some length to the toast of "The Mayor and Town Council." He regretted the encroachments made on Protestantism in Ontario, and com-plimented the Mail on the manly stand it and taken in the recent discussion, and hoped it would always stick to it.

The health of Rev. J. S. Baker was hearily drank, and this action elicited a most felicitous speech from Mr. Baker. In reference to the intolerance of Archbishop Lynch, he advised the Orangemen, forcibly express-sing it, to "sit" on that dignitary.

The "Host and Hostess" wound up the list of toasts, and all separated.
