POLICE COURT.

The Alexander Butcher on Deck—A "Flush Hour" for the Beak—The Sheep Thief Committed.

TUESDAY, Oct. 24, 1882.

A number of cases were on hand this morning. The one which created the greatest amount of interest was the case of Alexander, the purloiner of various articles not legally and rightfully his own. He was charged with stealing bags out of the barn of Mr. I. Johnston, of Clarke. Mr. J. and his brother proved the stolen property to be theirs. Mr. Jno. Johnston had a heap of grain on his floor, and on going into the barn on Monday morning, the 16th inst., noticed that the quantity of grain had decreased very materially since the Saturday night previous. He thought that there must have been fully 35 bushels taken. It was at this time also, that the bags were missed. Entrance to the barn was made by breaking a chain, with which the door was fastened, by means of a crowbar. Mr. Marshall testified as to the particulars of the arrest, as given in another column. The prisoner was committed to stand his trial at next Assizes.

Three other cases, all of assault, were brought before His Worship, but were postponed until to-morrow.

WEDNESDAY, Oct. 25.

The several petty cases laid over from yesterday were called to-day, and owing to the non-appearance of the principals in the different cases, were dismissed by the magistrate. The first called was Kearnan vs. Wittman. Wittman, who was out on bail, presented himself at Court, but Kearnan did not put in an appearance. His Honor dismissed the case with costs to the plaintiff.

The case of assault preferred against Wm. Hudson by his wife, which was laid over for hearing to-day, was withdrawn.

Another assault case, laid by "Gunner," the terror of Port Britain, against Mr. Job Dickinson, of Hope, one of the quietest and most respected men in the township, did not come up for hearing, "Gunner" evidently thinking that the farther he was from the scenes of the law the better for himself. This man has long been a nuisance to Port Hope and vicinity.

MR. LAIRD'S CASE.

After all that has been said, and the columns of stuff that has been doled out for weeks past, the public is more than ever satisfied that the mountain labored to bring forth a mouse. It is quite evident there has been an abortive attempt to injure the reputation of the father through the follies of the son. Mr. Laird gave an emphatic denial that he promised to consent to a marriage between the erring two and subsequently denied such consent. Mr. L. says in his letter that he made such a promise, but shows that the non-fulfillment is due to his son's willfulness, and not to his own refusal. That Fred's crime should be condemned, his father admits, in sorrow, but that the father is responsible for proper restitution not being made, not one satisfactory proof has been advanced to show, and the public regard Rev. Mr. Laird as having the better end of the controversy, and an injured man.

The whole thing, as we remarked before, is well understood to result from personal spleen. Scandals which involve suggestions of what is lascivious and prurient is seized upon by our contemporary with the eagerness with which a hawk seizes on its prey, and these, under cover of being exposed in the interests of morality and religion, are rolled like a sweet morsel under the tongue. Talk about Marmion being immoral and offensive—that it cannot be critically read by children, or critically analysed by young ladies! What about a newspaper that weekly rakes up all the immoral gossip of society, and is read in the heart of the family? Are the details of the Laird seduction case fit to be read and devoured by children and young women who hope to cultivate pure tastes and develop unullied characters? The press has long laid claims to being an educator of the public, but the journal which panders to the morbid, prurient and sensational tastes of its readers, can scarcely hope to be classed as one morally progressive in its endeavors. The reproduction of the letters appearing in the News last week, which passed between a spoony, foolish couple, in order to implicate one manifestly innocent, must be regarded as contemptible and mean.

THE MARKETS.

The market on Saturday was a good one, and well attended by both buyers and sellers. There is no change in the prices quoted last week.

Wheat is coming in fairly, and keeps steady, with a slightly downward tendency. Farmers receive five cents more a bushel here for wheat than in Cobourg, and come from the immediate vicinity of that town, and from a considerable distance beyond, to Port Hope to sell.

Barley is firmer than last week, and good grades have raised on the "other side." Buyers are paying from 50c. to 72c. on the streets. It is not moving very lively just now, but if prices do not raise it is expected to in a few days. There are very few samples of Canada No. 1 grade seen on our market.

PROF. WILLIAMS is now moved into his new quarters, Queen's Hotel block, and has fairly got to work again. He claims to have the most complete hospital establishment in Port Hope. 15-4t

METHODIST MISSIONS.

Willoughby, M.A. A number of laymen from the various districts were also present. The Conference Special Committee, composed of the above Chairmen of Districts, together with Revs. R. Jones and J. E. Betts, met yesterday morning.

BOOKS AND PAPERS.

The Yorkville News has been very greatly improved and enlarged. It now reports Dr. Wild's sermons in full, and contains editorial matter written by spicy Toronto journalists. May it succeed.

The Canadian Journal is the latest candidate for public favor. It aims at Canada for the Canadians, but we are doubtful of its success. It is too small, and has but little literary merit to commend it.

The November number of St. Nicholas begins a new volume, and appears in splendid style with a colored frontispiece. This is a great magazine for children.

November's number of the Popular Science Monthly is replete, as usual. "The Science of the Present Day," "Who was Primitive Man?" and "Physiognomic Curiosities" are the articles which contain the greatest amount of interest to scientific readers.

Demorest's Monthly Magazine comes to us with its accustomed regularity, and on examination of the November number we find there is a variety of very readable articles, some of which are illustrated, on interesting topics, and every department, including the "Fashion," "Household," and "Current Topics," is fully and judiciously filled.

The Atlantic Monthly is a magazine written in a peculiarly charming style, and is always a favorite with a class of readers who take the medium between light and heavy literature. The November number contains two good papers: "How Shall the American Savage be Civilized?" and "A Ride in Spain," by Chas. Dudley Warner.

Wilford's Microcosm, a religious-scientific monthly, is to hand. It is devoted to the discoveries, theories, and investigations of modern science, in their bearing upon the religious thought of the age. There are about forty regular contributors, among whom are several quite eminent scientists and theologians. It is decidedly interesting, and contains a great deal that is novel in polemics of its class.

With November, the Century Magazine also begins a new volume. The contents is too varied and extended to admit of enumeration. Pictorially considered, it is a grand success. By the way, we understand that a Canadian edition of this magazine is to be issued, having, besides the usual amount furnished in the American edition, a Canadian supplement contributed to by Canadian writers. We only hope it may prove successful.

The remarkable improvements begun in the October number of the American Agriculturist are continued in the November number—new cover, new type, new engravings, new artists, and additions to the editorial force—making the November number of this journal, now in its forty-third year, far superior to any previous issue. The cover page is unquestionably the handsomest cover which ever appeared on an American periodical. (Hereafter there is to be a new cover for each month, appropriate to the season.) There is an unusually large number of original engravings in the last issue.

N. W. Ayers and Son's American Newspaper Annual for 1882 is a valuable book to extensive advertisers, and for general information. Besides the usual list of all newspapers and periodicals in the U. S. and Canada, with full particulars, it gives the population of all the American States, territories, counties, and county seats, cities and towns. Similar information is given respecting Canada, population being taken from the latest census. A carefully prepared description of every county in the United States, as well as state and territory, as regards mineral deposits, agricultural resources, etc., is presented. Canada is similarly treated. Price $3.00. Address Philadelphia.

Petitions have been received by the Department of Justice at Ottawa for the release of Miss Wright, of Brighton, sentenced to six months' imprisonment for shooting a man whom she took for a burglar; and for the commutation of the sentence of Bibby, sentenced at Toronto to five years for killing his wife. In the latter case the jury who convicted Bibby of manslaughter, and who have sent in the petition, state that they expected the prisoner would only get one or two years. Miss Wright's release has been ordered.

To the Editor of THE TIMES.

Sir,—Oblige by inserting the following roundly. I challenge cynical cavillers to publish a different version.

Yours,

STONEV BATTER—REDIVIVUS.

As round the world we roam,
Amidst its dim and clatter,
We'll always think of home,
And that's dear Stoney Batter.
But if bad luck and care,
Misfortune and reverses,
Should meet us every where,
Saint Patrick, sure, would bless us.
Then, hi! for Bob and Joan,
Hi! for Stoney Batter,
We'll strive for right alone,
Never heeding other matter.

In deeds of valour seek,
We'll war and glory follow,
No longer tame and meek,
No victory poor and hollow;
We'll fight for Irish fame,
For England's glory's name,
But G-d before them all, Pat!
Then, hi! for Bob and Joan,
Hi! for Stoney Batter,
We'll strive for right alone,
Never heeding other matter.

WELCOME.

We are sorry to say that Mr. Philp and family, who have resided for a long time among us, are about to remove to a place he has recently purchased, east of Port Hope. As the family were connected with the Sabbath School, their services in this connection will be missed. Mrs. Philp had charge of a class of young ladies, and these determined to express their appreciation of their teacher's care of them in a substantial way. On Sunday afternoon last, during Sabbath School, one of the young ladies of the class read the following address:—

DEAR TEACHER,—Having heard with regret of your near departure from our midst, we gladly had this opportunity to assure you of the high esteem in which you are held by your Sunday School class and your many friends in this community, we beg of you, on their behalf, to accept this earnest and pious prayer, not on account of their intrinsic value, but as a slight token of our good will and esteem for you. You have endeavored yourself to us by your many kind acts and Christian example. The regularity with which you have attended school, the manifest interest you have taken in the moral, intellectual and spiritual welfare of your class, and the school at large, has tended greatly to enhance our love for you and yours; and we sincerely pray that our Heavenly Father may abundantly reward you with the assurance that you have been doing His will, and with all those blessings that "maketh rich and addeth no sorrow," and that at the end of life you may meet all your Sabbath School class and all your many friends in the realms of bliss, there to enjoy each other's companionship throughout an endless eternity.

Signed on behalf of the class and friends,
SUSIE BAMEY,
ANNIE INGH.

Welcome, Oct. 22, 1882.

Mrs. Philp replied briefly. She was so surprised she could not express the gratitude she felt. Her sorrow on having to part with a class so kind and attentive was more than she could say. She hoped they would show the same forbearance to their new teacher, and still continue in that path which is a delight to follow.

Mr. Philp met with a pretty severe accident one day last week. While binding a load of sheaf oats, the binding pole broke and let him down rather suddenly, breaking one of the wrists and badly spraining the other, at the same time receiving bruises about the head and face. He has so far recovered as to be able to walk about a little.

The meeting of Welcome Branch of the Bible Society was held on Thursday evening last. Addresses were delivered by Rev. E. Cookburn, of Uxbridge, and others. The trustees have purchased two new stoves to do duty in the school during the coming winter.

Rev. Mr. Clarke preached in the Metropolitan last Sunday morning, and Dr. Kelly in the evening. Both had pretty fair audiences.

THEY SAY

That one of the young men in the neighborhood is mourning the sickness of a fair one.

That the sharp frost of one night last week set people half wild to have their apples attended to.

That Greenwood & Co., of Port Hope, have bought a large quantity of apples throughout the township, Mr. Paul Oke alone having packed about 1,200 barrels for them.

That many of the youths of the neighborhood will stand at the church gate on Sunday evenings, and anxiously watch the ladies, that none fall while coming down the steps.

That the fences and walls along the road are not yet quite covered with advertisements.

That there is a comet somewhere towards the east, which may be seen by rising somewhat early. We have not seen it yet, being contented to take their word for it.

That Indian summer is coming and the weather is very fine.

That the calculating process the school room has undergone is not altogether satisfactory.

LIFFORD.

The farmers of this part are busily engaged in fall ploughing; there seems to be a very small portion performed in many places. Barley has been rapidly marketed, but the prices were not so favorable as the expectations.

The "going, going, gone" was the popular cry of the auctioneer on Wednesday 18th inst., disposing of the farm stock and farming implements belonging to Mr. Wm. McKee, prices realizing fair.

Fleetwood Orange Young Britons held their last meeting on Friday evening last. They contemplate having a social about the 5th Nov. Arrangements are already being made.

The Ontario Government is apparently opposed to the whole system of Civil Service examinations. At least it is fair to suppose so from the fact that it has failed to accede to a request from Ottawa for permission to use for a few days a room in the parliamentary buildings for examination purposes. Consequently the Temperance hall has had to be engaged, and Mr. Crooks and his friends have added to their reputation for littleness.

A Port Hoper in Trouble.

(From Saturday's Mail)

It appears that about half-past three o'clock a volunteer, whose name could not be learned last night, had been up at the Fort, and passed through the Toronto, Grey, and Bruce yards on his way to the city. He had his rifle with him, and in passing a passenger train which was about to run down to the station, met a baggageman named George Harcourt, with whom he entered into conversation. Harcourt took the rifle from his companion to examine it. While doing so he noticed a couple of "divers" in the water between where they were standing and Capt. Taylor's house on the end of the wharf, and of course wanted a shot at them. The owner of the weapon who certainly should have known better, placed a cartridge in the rifle and handed it to Harcourt. The latter in the excitement of firing his first shot saw nothing but the water fowl, and blazed away. He, however, missed his mark, and the bullet glancing off the water went whistling across the wharf. Mr. John Gordon, the road master, who was standing by, warned them to be careful, but regarding the caution a second shot was fired. Capt. Taylor was standing on the wharf at the time, and his wife, hearing the shooting called to him to come in. An instant afterwards a third shot was fired, which after glancing off the water, struck the window frame on the north side of the kitchen and passed through about five inches of pine. Mrs. Taylor was standing by the kitchen table at the time, and was leaning over it in the act of tying up a jar of preserves, when the bullet struck her above the eye, breaking her spectacles, then glanced downwards through her cheek, knocked out one or two teeth, passed out through her lower jaw, and then through her breast. The Captain, hearing a fall, ran in to find his wife lying senseless on the floor and covered with blood.

The authors of all the mischief had left in the mean-time without knowing what they had done. The man who owned the rifle started down town, while the baggageman left for Owen Sound on the departure of his train.

During the evening a telegram was sent to Owen Sound for the arrest of Harcourt on the arrival of his train.

At twelve o'clock last night Mrs. Taylor was resting comfortably, and should inflammation not set in she will recover.

Harcourt is a young man of excellent character, and has been upwards of seven years in the employ of the railway company.

George Harcourt, the young man who has got into the difficulty, is a son of Mr. Harcourt, Street Surveyor. The case was tried in Toronto Police Court on Monday, but was adjourned for a week. Mrs. Taylor's medical attendant appeared in court and stated that she was out of danger. George was released by furnishing two sureties of $500 each. Mr. Harcourt, his father, has been in Toronto for several days in connection with the matter.

A $20.00 Biblical Reward.

The publishers of Rutledge's Monthly offer twelve valuable rewards in their Monthly for November, among which is the following:

We will give $20.00 in gold to the person telling us which verse in the New Testament Scriptures (not the New Revision) contains the greatest number of words by November 10th, 1882. Should two or more correct answers be received the reward will be divided. The money will be forwarded to the winner November 15th, 1882. Persons trying for the reward must send 20 cents in silver (no postage stamps taken) with their answer, for which they will receive the December Monthly, in which the name and address of the winner of the reward and the correct answer will be published. This may be worth $20.00 to you; cut it out. Address RUTLEDGE PUBLISHING COMPANY, Easton, Penna.

It is announced that Archbishop Croke is to confer with the Pope during the winter in regard to the state of Ireland.

Sixty thousand families are rendered homeless in the Philippine Islands, by the recent terribly destructive cyclone.

Afghanistan is becoming unsettled again. The report of a serious revolt, including Cabul, the Governor of which was killed, has reached London.

Official instructions have been sent to Cobourg to set at liberty Miss Wright, the lady who shot a supposed burglar at Brighton.

Arabi Pasha is now reported as saying that the only salvation for Egypt is the virtual government of the country by the British.

Brick Pomeroy, who is now editing a weekly paper in Denver, is building a very large house near the city. The parlor is to be 40 by 50 feet, and is to be put next the roof.

Later particulars concerning the revolt under the False Prophet in the Soudan, reveals the fact that the movement is not only gaining ground, but that the onward march of the wretched fanatic is marked by deeds of the most revolting inhumanity. The capital of Kordofan is besieged and likely to fall into his hands, and it is said he contemplates reaching Cairo.

At Lyons, France, on Sunday there was a serious riot, and the gendarmes had to clear the streets. A restaurant was afterwards blown up by dynamite bombs, and several persons seriously injured. It has been discovered that Nihilists are concerned in the agitation among the miners at Montceau les Mines, and the threatened strike of 20,000 factory employees in Faubourg, St. Antoine, Paris, causes much uneasiness.

About one o'clock Tuesday morning a fire was discovered in the boot and shoe store of P. Fitzgerald, Missisquoi-street, Orillia. It spread rapidly, despite the exertions of the fire brigades and citizens. P. Fitzgerald's boot and shoe store, J. Shanahan's boot and shoe store, Mrs. Kirkland's boarding-house, R. Hoy's harness and trunk depot, and Geo. Tite's general store, paints, etc., were totally destroyed. The contents were partly saved. The loss is slightly covered by insurance, and is about $15,000.

ALICE WELLINGTON ROLLINS.

Sweet Sister Anna with the patient face, I read the wonder of thy soft surprise...

Following are the verses left upon the Andro monument at Tappan, N. Y., by the very ardent patriot who defaced the stone erected by Cyrus W. Field.

To long had stood the traitor's shaft, A monument to shame, Built up to praise a traitor's craft...

This vulgar and insulting stone Would honor for all time, Not sneaking Andro's death alone...

MY LITTLE SWEETHEART.

"Uncle Harry, may I be your sweetheart?" asked Marian Sterling, lifting her big brown eyes to mine...

"Indeed you may," I cried, stooping to lift her to my knee. "No," she said, drawing back. "If I am your sweetheart I must sit on your lap..."

"But you are absolutely your own master for the present?" he asked. "Yes, nobody expects me at home, as I was returning on that most idiotic principle—a surprise!"

"What good wind," he exclaimed, "blew you into England?" "I told him of my legacy, my resignation of my position, and of my return home."

"But you are absolutely your own master for the present?" he asked. "Yes, nobody expects me at home, as I was returning on that most idiotic principle—a surprise!"

"Join us, then! We all start next week for a jaunt through France, Spain, Italy, perhaps up the Nile. We are not bound by any route, by any promises. Westward a party of fourteen, every body at leave if he prefers another route..."

"O, I will work you a pair of slippers when I am big enough, and I'll kiss some of the sugar-plums, and let you eat them, and I'll wear the flowers, and if there is any song you like very much I will practise it, and learn it, if the accompaniment is not too hard."

"All right. It's a bargain. You are my little sweetheart, and I your devoted adorer from this day," I cried. "But it seems to me, May, that for a lady of your age you know a good deal about the sweetheart question."

"Well, you see, uncle—no; you're not my uncle any more." "Dear Harry," I suggested. "Dear Harry, you see there is the drawing-room, and there is the parlor; and if Tom Irving comes while Agnes is in the parlor, she says, 'Run up stairs, May, that's a good girl; and when I get to the drawing-room I see Tracy Hill kissing Jane, and I run into the kitchen, and Molly has John McCoy there; and I can't help seeing them all,' she added bitingly."

"Exactly. And I think you are a very sensible child to start a courtship of your own. Will you allow me to drive you to the grove this afternoon, Miss Marian?" I added, with my very best society bow.

"Thank you, dear Harry," she said, with demure gravity. "I will go with pleasure." So we commenced our flirtation, and never had any man a more piquant, lovelier little sweetheart than I, Harry Montgomery, had for the three years I remained at Maxwellbrig, the village in which the Sterlings were leading people.

"What pleasant days we do have, dear Harry!" she said to me, when we were picnicking in the woods; "all the girls think I have the nicest beau in the world. And nobody has any idea who it is who helps me with my French and German, and shows me all about my Latin, and I go up over their heads because you make all my lessons so easy. It's not cheating if I really study all the same, and do all my sums and exercises myself, is it?"

"No," I said truthfully, for the child's own eager thirst for knowledge and hard work gave me only the pleasure of simplifying some of her lessons and defining some of the "hard words."

"But when I had been nearly four years at Maxwellbrig my father obtained for me a diplomatic appointment in Germany, and there was a heart-breaking parting."

"It is not the drives and rides, and rowing and flowers and candies, I'm crying for," sobbed my little sweetheart, "though Agnes pretends it is. It is because I'm going to lose you. You don't believe I love you just for those things, do you, dear Harry?"

middle-aged matrons, left Marian the only daughter at home, and society was exacting. I heard of her brilliant beauty, a musician of great talent, and a bright sparkling conversationalist. I tried to fit this to my little sweetheart, and failed. I had lost my childish adorer.

"But I was not fond of society, nor devoted to the duties of a cavalier. Perhaps Janet had left too deep a wound to heal, though I did not think so, when, ten years after our first meeting, I found her with a party of tourists, 'doing the Continent,' a loud-voiced, red-faced woman of fashion, who had left three little children at home while she displayed costly dresses and horrible French and German abroad. Tracy evidently preferred the society of the babies, as he was not one of the traveling party."

"Marian!" she said, when I inquired for all the home circle. "Why, Marian is in London. Didn't you know about Marian? Ah! Mrs. Agnew—good evening."

"Tell me," I entreated. "What about Marian? Is she married?" "Bless me, no! Hasn't even a beau, as far as I know. May is so prim—cut out for an old maid. And she'll be worse than ever now. Excuse me—Mrs. Maitland is moving to the dressing-room, and I go in her carriage. Good night. Do come and see us." And her escort came up, and she sailed away. And it was not until ten minutes later I remembered that I had not asked her for her address or Marian's.

I tried to repair this omission the next morning by visiting all the hotels and examining their registers. The only result was the assurance that the whole party had left Berlin that morning. But the fates favored me. I dropped into a nice legacy, quite sufficient for the wants of a family of modest tastes, and I determined to go to England—home! It was a year since I had met Mrs. Hill in Germany. Was Marian still in London? My little sweetheart! Strange she had lingered always in my memory as the ideal woman of my bachelor fancy!

I determined to return at once and accept a long-standing invitation to visit my friend, Lord Loring, at his place, Loring Hall. I met with a most cordial welcome, and, arriving just before dinner-hour, Lord Loring hurried his own preparations, and came into the room assigned to me.

"What good wind," he exclaimed, "blew you into England?" "I told him of my legacy, my resignation of my position, and of my return home."

"But you are absolutely your own master for the present?" he asked. "Yes, nobody expects me at home, as I was returning on that most idiotic principle—a surprise!"

"Join us, then! We all start next week for a jaunt through France, Spain, Italy, perhaps up the Nile. We are not bound by any route, by any promises. Westward a party of fourteen, every body at leave if he prefers another route..."

"O, I will work you a pair of slippers when I am big enough, and I'll kiss some of the sugar-plums, and let you eat them, and I'll wear the flowers, and if there is any song you like very much I will practise it, and learn it, if the accompaniment is not too hard."

"All right. It's a bargain. You are my little sweetheart, and I your devoted adorer from this day," I cried. "But it seems to me, May, that for a lady of your age you know a good deal about the sweetheart question."

"Well, you see, uncle—no; you're not my uncle any more." "Dear Harry," I suggested. "Dear Harry, you see there is the drawing-room, and there is the parlor; and if Tom Irving comes while Agnes is in the parlor, she says, 'Run up stairs, May, that's a good girl; and when I get to the drawing-room I see Tracy Hill kissing Jane, and I run into the kitchen, and Molly has John McCoy there; and I can't help seeing them all,' she added bitingly."

"Exactly. And I think you are a very sensible child to start a courtship of your own. Will you allow me to drive you to the grove this afternoon, Miss Marian?" I added, with my very best society bow.

"Thank you, dear Harry," she said, with demure gravity. "I will go with pleasure." So we commenced our flirtation, and never had any man a more piquant, lovelier little sweetheart than I, Harry Montgomery, had for the three years I remained at Maxwellbrig, the village in which the Sterlings were leading people.

"What pleasant days we do have, dear Harry!" she said to me, when we were picnicking in the woods; "all the girls think I have the nicest beau in the world. And nobody has any idea who it is who helps me with my French and German, and shows me all about my Latin, and I go up over their heads because you make all my lessons so easy. It's not cheating if I really study all the same, and do all my sums and exercises myself, is it?"

"No," I said truthfully, for the child's own eager thirst for knowledge and hard work gave me only the pleasure of simplifying some of her lessons and defining some of the "hard words."

"But when I had been nearly four years at Maxwellbrig my father obtained for me a diplomatic appointment in Germany, and there was a heart-breaking parting."

"It is not the drives and rides, and rowing and flowers and candies, I'm crying for," sobbed my little sweetheart, "though Agnes pretends it is. It is because I'm going to lose you. You don't believe I love you just for those things, do you, dear Harry?"

"No," I said truthfully, for the child's own eager thirst for knowledge and hard work gave me only the pleasure of simplifying some of her lessons and defining some of the "hard words."

trembling hands, almost whispering, "My little sweetheart!" Her eyes grew soft, lustrous, dowy. "You have not forgotten?" she said. "I have never forgotten. No other has taken for one hour your place in my heart. But you, beautiful and famous, with your talent—" "Hush!" she said, softly. "Who gave me any of the gift you call talent? You, who taught me that books were not mere dreadful repetitions invented to torment school girls, but preparations for future power and intellect; that lessons were not strings of words to be committed to memory, but stores of knowledge to be garnered and cherished. You roused my ambition, my hope, what power I have of expressing what my brain suggests."

"May," I said, gaining possession of the hands she had released, "you have travelled, seen the world, had your conquests; can I, dare I hope I may still call you—" She nestled into my bosom, her big eyes raised frankly to meet mine, and said, "Your little sweetheart, now and over."

"How I meant to torment you!" she told me, later when, her soft, loving emotion over, her sauciness regained sway. "I intended to win you back by all the arts of coquetry, of jealousy—for I have a lover or two, sir—but my heart betrayed me when I saw your love in your eyes, and knew that you had been faithful all these long years. Dear father and mother will be delighted; and perhaps I ought to tell you Janey is a widow."

"Then you guessed that secret, too?" "You big goose, you were the family laughing stock until I took pity on you."

"I'll believe as much as I please of that," I retorted. "You can never deny that you made the first advances."

A High Stool. By introducing a high stool into the kitchen, a great deal of the work may be done while sitting; for instance, dish-washing, bread and pastry making, ironing, etc. This humble piece of furniture, when properly introduced into the economy of the work, will prove to be a source of salvation to many a woman tired to death from being so much on her feet. One can do with ease all the above enumerated tasks, which are usually done in a standing posture, and the facility in working while seated upon a stool is, of course, greatly increased by practice. With an ironing board well adjusted at both ends, and high enough so that the knees will pass under it, one may do a large ironing, only rising to change the iron. And if one is too much of an invalid for that she can have a small charcoal stove, which will heat the irons, placed at her hand. With such contrivances ironing becomes "fancy work," for a lady may do it in her room with ease. The charcoal or kerosene stove is very nice for "doing up" fine and elaborate pieces that require much time and skill. If your stool has an adjustable top, it may be raised or lowered at will, which will be very much useful. The reason why very many tired women do not sit more at their kitchen work is because the ordinary chair is too low, and it is impossible to bring tables and shelves down to the level of chairs. But the high stool and the adjustable stool make the thing pleasant and practicable. Try the experiment, tired housewives.

Cape Cod Folks. The Cape Cod folks were exclusive, even in the matter of graveyards. There are more private graveyards there than anywhere else. In early life a Cape Coddler often goes to sea, following by either school-teaching or peddling. He has a great respect for the county courts, but does not go to law, because of the expense. In trade he always wants the best of the bargain.

Cape Cod was first settled in 1677, Plymouth being the starting point. The settlers were English, and brought with them, although exiled, a deep love for the mother country, extending even to the colors of the flowers in their gardens. Every town at first had a settled church, with pastors, who also acted as lawyers and physicians, and they were allowed many privileges. One at Sandwich was permitted to pasture his horse in the graveyard, and allowed the proceeds of every whale which came ashore for pocket money. Some of their laws were curious. One was that no man who had not killed six blackbirds and three crows during a year could not be married; but Sandwich exempted all such men who were over 70 years of age. Cape Codders always sent their children to school, believing in public schools. The pedagogues were not very well paid. One school-mistress was given £12 a year and diet, with the use of a horse once in six months to visit her relatives. The conduct of the Cape people during the wars of the revolution and 1812 were graphically described. In contrast to the austerity of Cape Cod folks and illustrative of their humor and free and easy ways, the following anecdote is related: One of them, Capt. Percival, when his mate woke him up at sea with the intelligence that the ship was going to eternity, replied: "Well, I've got ten friends over there to one in this world; let her go." And he turned over and went to sleep again.

The oldest convict in Michigan state prison is John Marsh, who was sent from Detroit Nov. 20, 1848, for life, for murder. He was then 31 years of age. He has become blind, and occupies quarters in the prison asylum. His employment is sawing wood. He has no desire to leave, and calls the prison his home.

A Mean Man. A Philadelphia man who invested money in stocks and lost it, took down the sign "Shaving Saloon" from a barber shop, the other night, and nailed it over his broker's office. Some men can be fearfully mean.

A Power in the House of Parliament. Considering among the influential men of the Dominion is M. J. H. Metcalf, Member of Parliament from the city of Kingston. C. Metcalf, before a school teacher, he has bravely worked his way upward to the honor of political business and politics he now holds. Coming to a personal matter, we would mention that Mr. Metcalf was formerly a student of extreme socialism of the class, for which, as he himself says, "I could find no remedy but St. Jacob's Oil, the Great German Remedy." In the following letter, Mr. Metcalf gives evidence of his appreciation: "I take great pleasure in stating that I used St. Jacob's Oil for extreme rheumatism of the chest, and found it to be an excellent remedy. I would not be without it for ten times its selling price. As a family remedy it certainly has no equal."

IRISH NATIONAL PLATFORM.

The Conference of the Irish National League now in session, have agreed to re-plate a platform of principles embodying a statement of the following reforms essential to the future welfare of Ireland: 1. Self-government for the Irish people in the full American sense.

2. Protection to Irish industry, and Government aid to each wherever possible for their development as a means for encouraging Irish agriculture by giving, as a home market, of giving the State a strong body of artisans, and of making the State as far as possible independent of other nations.

3. The creation of Irish peasant proprietorship; the State to advance the entire sums of money necessary to enable the peasants to purchase in fee their own lands, the moneys so advanced to be repayable to the State after 63 years, on small payments yearly thereafter, with a low interest on the balance.

4. The transfer of the uncultivated lands of Ireland by compulsory purchase to County Boards for reclamation, improvement, and final sale to the peasantry.

5. The abolition of the Vice-Royalty in Ireland, and the substitution thereof of a system of local self-government by which the various County Boards of Ireland will perform for their respective counties all the local governmental functions necessary, and at present obliged to be, under the Vice-Royal system, performed unjustly or inadequately by Royal underlings, either ignorant of the needs of the people, or indifferent to them.

6. Land law reform in such a general and thorough way as will abolish entail, primogeniture, and all the special features of the English system that go to foster aggregation of land titles and the creation of a landed aristocracy.

Holloway's Pills—Prevention.—As autumn treads on winter, slender, delicate, and pale-faced youths become listless, languid and debilitated, unless an alterative, combined with some tonic, be administered to quicken their enfeebled organs. This precise requirement is supplied in these acted Pills, which can and will accomplish all that is wanted, provided the printed instructions surrounding them meet with scrupulous attention. Holloway's Pills are especially adapted to supply the medical wants of youth, because his medicine acts gently, though surely, as a purifier, regulator, alterative, tonic, and mild aperient. A very few doses of these Pills will convince any discouraged invalid that his cure lies in his own hands, and a little perseverance only is demanded for its completion.

A Voice from the Press. I take this opportunity to bear testimony to the efficacy of your "Hop Bitters." Expecting to find them nauseous and bitter and composed of bad whiskey, we were agreeably surprised at their mild taste, just like a cup of tea. A Mrs. Cresswell and a Mrs. Connor, friends, have likewise tried, and pronounce them the best medicine they have ever taken for building up strength and toning up the system. I was troubled with costiveness, headache, and want of appetite. My ailments are now all gone. I have a yearly contract with a doctor to look after the health of myself and family, but I need him not now. S. GILLILLAND, July 25, 1878. People's Advocate, Pittsburg, Pa.

There is hardly an adult person living but is sometimes troubled with kidney difficulty, which is the most prolific and dangerous cause of all disease. There is no sort of need to have any form of kidney or urinary trouble if Hop Bitters is taken occasionally.

The Result of Perseverance. A representative of the Times-Democrat was present at the office of the Louisiana State Lottery Company when Mr. D. P. Blair, of Columbus, Miss., received a cheque for $15,000, as the lucky holder of one-fifth of the capital prize of $75,000, on ticket No. 42,101, and asked: "Did you not feel a little favored by fortune?" "No, not at all," he had said. "The world win. I had been taking tickets—well, now it must be for nearly two years, and I was biding my time, for I felt my turn would come soon. I never hurried the Lottery Company up, but waited, taking my tickets regularly every month, and now I've hit them." "What do you intend doing with the money?" "Well, the night I believed I had won, I mentally distributed it. I have children, and I propose to invest a portion of the money for them. The plans I made on that night I intend carrying out. I felt that occasion by intuition, it would almost seem, that I had won. The feeling, of course, is impossible to describe." Thus he bided his time. The next drawing will occur November 14th, and any information thereof can be had on application to M. A. Dauphin, New Orleans, La.—N. O. Times-Democrat, September 16.

Among the ladies who may read this there may be several sickly ones who have made up their minds to act on the old saw which specifies that "What can't be cured must be endured." While the truth of the old proverb is self-evident, it is just possible they may have erred in judgment as to the possibilities of the healing art outside of the medical profession, and before giving up in despair they had better test the efficacy of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is now attracting universal attention.

Consumption in its early stages is readily cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," though, if the lungs are wasted, no medicine will effect a cure. No known remedy possesses such soothing and healing influence over all scrofulous, tuberculous, and pulmonary affections as the "Discovery." John Willis, of Elyria, Ohio, writes: "The 'Golden Medical Discovery' does positively cure consumption, as after trying every other medicine in vain this succeeded." Mr. Z. T. Phelps, of Cuthbert, Ga., writes: "The 'Golden Medical Discovery' has cured my wife of bronchitis and incipient consumption." Sold by druggists.

Dyspepsia and Debility—A Severe Case. From Wm. BENTLEY, 24, Rossman Street, Fall River. "I was severely afflicted with general debility, caused by over-exertion in working when I was not strong enough to do so. It became so nervous and debilitated that I was finally obliged to give up work and devote myself entirely to rest. This, however, did not benefit me, as I had nothing to occupy my mind and I was not interested, contented, and buoyant, who pronounced it an aggravated form of dyspepsia, and was treated accordingly. Nothing that I tried gave me any relief until Dr. F. J. Cheney's was recommended. I used three bottles of this, and could see a great improvement, as I was able to resume work. This bottle more completely restored my health." Sold by all druggists.

Don't Deceive.

Several weeks ago a Philadelphia gentleman took his little son on a railway excursion. The little fellow was looking out the window when the father slipped the hat off the boy's head. The latter was much grieved at the supposed loss, when papa consoled him saying he would "whistle it back." A little later he whistled and the hat reappeared. Not long after the little lad flung his hat out of the window, shouting, "Now, papa, whistle it back again!" A roar of laughter in the car served to enhance the confusion of the perplexed papa. Moral:—Don't attempt to deceive little boys with plausible stories.

Jenny Lind's Courtship.

"I am a Quaker, as you know," a Philadelphian recently said to me, "and it is reported that, shortly before Jenny Lind's visit to our city, an aged lady arose in one of our meetings and said she had heard that 'Jane Lyon, a very wicked woman, was on her way to this country to sing and she hoped that none of the young people would be drawn away to hear her. Nevertheless, an uncle took me and my brother on the Saturday matinee. We had seats in the balcony and so near the stage that we could in a way see behind the scenes. Early in the entertainment Jenny Lind sang 'Home, Sweet Home,' and the audience was beside itself. Among the members of her company was her future husband, Otto Goldschmidt. He was to the audience simply an unknown pianist, and to be obliged to listen to anything but the voice of Jenny Lind was provoking. Well, the man played, and from where we sat we could see Jenny Lind behind the curtain listening most intently. When he had finished, the audience seemed in nowise disposed to applaud; but Jenny Lind began to clap her hands vigorously, observing which, we boys re-enforced her, and, observing her face light up—I can see the love-light on it yet—we clapped furiously until the applause spread through the audience. When he had finished playing a second time, my brother and I set the ball in motion and the applause was great enough to satisfy even the fiancee of Otto Goldschmidt."—Home and Society, in the October Century.

Mme. Modjeska recently gave a dinner in London to several Americans. "The soft and fruity wines of Hungary," says an historian of the occasion, "lent additional zest to the delicate and tempting dinner, and after it was over, coffee and cigarettes were served, in both of which—shall I tell it?—Mme. Modjeska joined the rest of us. Moreover, she seemed to like the mellow smoke from her dainty little roll of Turkish tobacco." The actress was getting ready for an American tour and she took the opportunity to say that she loved this country and its people ardently; that it was untrue that she had ever called us barbarians or ignoramuses. This was how she praised us: "I think the American mind is particularly subtle and quick in perceptions. The people follow an actor or actress more closely than is the case in other countries. They seize instantly upon the meaning of every gesture, every inflection, every expression, and they quickly respond to every appeal directed at their emotions. It is this great responsiveness which enables an artist to throw himself or herself into the part in hand with a fervor that cannot otherwise be achieved. It produces magnetism."

A Humane Invention.

A German chemist has invented a bullet which he believes will greatly diminish, if not altogether remove, the horrors of war. The missile is of a brittle substance, which breaks when it strikes the object fired at. It contains a powerful anesthetic, producing instantaneous insensibility, lasting for twelve hours, which, except that the action of the heart continues, is not to be distinguished from death. A battle-field where these bullets are used will in a short time be apparently covered with dead bodies, but in reality merely with the prostrate forms of soldiers reduced for the time being to a state of unconsciousness. While in this condition they may be carefully packed in ambulance wagons and carried off as prisoners. Whole cities may in like manner be reduced to helplessness by means of shell charged with the same compound.

Jean Condoist has been brought to Paris as a medical curiosity from the Haute Saone. According to a medical contributor to a Parisian contemporary, this youth, aged 19, took a start on the 17th of May, 1881, being then six feet three inches high, and found one morning that he had grown an inch. Every week since that he has registered himself, and on the 14th of September this human beanstalk had gained nearly five inches; he grew five inches more before the 20th of January, 1882, and seven more before March 15, and he now stands 7 feet 10 inches. All this has been accompanied by great pains in the back, and he stoops considerably; but since last June it is his legs only that have grown, and his feet are already twenty-four inches long.—Ec.

ACCOMPLISHED LINGUISTS.—Once on a time a Dutchman and a Frenchman were in Pennsylvania, where their horse lost a shoe. They drove up to a blacksmith's shop, and no one being in, they proceeded to the house to enquire. The Frenchman rapped, and called out, "Is de smit-wit?" "Shtand back," let mespeak. Is der blacksmith's shop en der house?" The fruitful season of the year is prolific with many forms of Bowel Complaints, such as Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Colic, Cholera Morbus, Cholera Infantum, &c., as a safeguard and positive cure for those distressing and often sudden and dangerous attacks nothing can be used that is so old and reliable as Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

Wilde and Miss Morris. Before he left New York, Mr. Wilde had an opportunity of meeting Miss Clara Morris. The event took place at the house of a fashionable New York lady, Mrs. Croly, during a reception. The interview between the celebrated actress and Mr. Wilde was viewed with much curiosity by Mrs. Croly's assembled guests. Clara, arrayed in white, glistening in jewels, awaited the appearance of "the youth to whom is given so much of earth, so much of heaven!" with mixed emotions. Oscar, rejoicing in the most extraordinary composure ever vouchsafed to mortal man, repeatedly besought her not to "run away," saying that he could scarcely hope to convey to her how much this meeting meant to him. "I am nobody," he remarked, "but Mrs. Sarah Bernhardt is an authority; she has told me how greatly she admired your acting, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding. There are so many things I should like to say to you." An opportunity was found later in the evening, after Oscar had been duly introduced to others present who, he likewise modestly remarked to Miss Morris, were not there to see him, but "because they love and honor" her. After seeing her in the "New Magdalen," Mr. Wilde said many complimentary things. One speech was: "Is it possible that you are guilty of an affection? For it is one to persist in your refusal to act in London."

A Disciplinary Cat. A new cat story is something, very rare, and is always considered a prize by a sympathetic editor. A correspondent of the London Spectator tells the following: "Picture to yourself a little girl, about two years of age, sitting on a low stool before a drawing-room fire. Coiled up on the rug is a favorite domestic cat. The child is in a fretful mood, and has been crying for a long time. The cat endures the annoyance for some time, though evidently displeased. But even feline patience has its limits. So pussy uncloiled herself, walked up to the child, and gave her a box on the ear with her closed paw, and then lay down again before her. The child, taken completely aback, cried louder than ever. Again pussy tried to endure it. Again her patience became exhausted, and she delivered a second box upon the ear, which nearly knocked the child off her stool. It was now the little girl's turn to be enraged. She rushed at the cat, and dragged it round the room by the tail. The story rests on the authority of the child's mother, who was witness of the scene."

Caught in His Own Trap. Henry Sullivan lives, as many other miners do, entirely alone, in a little log cabin at the head of Buckeye gulch, says the Leadville Chronicle. Among the tools and articles in his humble place of abode was a large steel trap, such as is used in catching bears and heavy game. Its shape, when open, was oval, but when the spring was touched two sets of cruel teeth sprang together, closing on whatever happened to be in range, be it man or beast. The trap had not been used for a long time, and stood open in a corner of the place. Lately it occurred to Sullivan that the trap might do some damage in that condition, and accordingly he pulled it out to the middle of the floor to close it up. In its long period of disuse the springs had become rusty and the working portion of it stuck together, refusing to operate. Sullivan labored with it for quite a time, and then becoming angry, picked up a hatchet and began hammering at it. Still the jaws refused to shut and without thinking of the consequences he thrust his foot against the lever and struck it again.

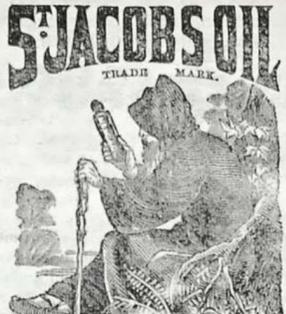

At that instant there was a crash, and the teeth sprang shut, pinning him just above the ankle. The springs were of the most powerful make, and there was no unhooking them when they had once caught. Sullivan, in his agony, felt his very bones crack under the death-like grip, and half fainting as he sank to the floor. Then, nerving himself for a desperate effort, he wrenched at the stout iron with both hands, but without loosening it the fraction of an inch. Half an hour of pain and terror followed, and a new idea occurred to him. The trap was fastened at the base with heavy screws, bolted at either side. A wrench lay within reach, and grasping it with the strength of desperation he succeeded at last in unloosening the bolts. The steel bars dropped apart, and he was free. It is needless to enlarge upon his journey of a mile and a half up the gulch, and how he was carried to this city. His injuries are of such a nature, that he may possibly yet suffer the amputation of his foot.

Congressman Russell, of Massachusetts, is an amateur farmer. He has much money invested in Holstein cattle. His regular business is that of a paper manufacturer.

An individual styling himself "Dr. Roman, King of Dentists," is gaining a great deal of advertising in Cincinnati. He rides around town in a hack and stopping at corners jerks out the aching molars of all who apply for nothing. He is dressed in fantastic colors, and upon his head rests a crown, to signify that he is the king of tooth-jerkers.

A Speculation in Bones. An amateur farmer was badly sold recently. He had a great project on hand for boiling down bones to make "superphosphate." All the neighboring boys were engaged to collect material. The man thought, however, that he would first try the bones as a fertilizer without burning. So, having a lot of grapevines, the first lot of bones were planted around the roots of the vine. The boys saw the proceeding, so at night they went and dug them all up again. Bright and early the next morning they presented themselves with a supposed new lot. The bones were bought again and put around a second vine. The process was repeated till fourteen grapevines had been thus served and fourteen times had those identical bones been sold.

The reason why New Year resolves are so often forgotten is because many who turn the new leaf forget to gum it down.—Philadelphia Chronicle.

Clara Belle on Tight Fitting Trousers and Thin Legs.

"Isn't it odd," writes Clara Belle, "how things go concurrently in extremes in male and female dress? Just now, while the belles are putting on and pressing out their arms, the beaux are doing the same thing to their dear little legs. New trousers are made on astonishingly narrow thighs, and end once cut down, I don't know how it is in Ohio, but here in New York the young men's legs run thin and irregular. This statement is based upon public and casual observation. I have of late frequently met in an elevated railroad car, when some of the passengers had to stand, and wondered in my inmost soul how some of them continue to do so. When the car slows around a corner, an equilibrium has to be carefully readjusted, these still-supported chaps twist the two strands of legs into a single rope, and seem certain to go down in a heap with it coiled beneath them. These same fellows, I have no manner of doubt, would sit on the front row of a theatre on a ballet night and make fun of legs twice as thick and straight as their own. We think a woman has narrowed her skirts unreasonably when she gets them down to three breadths, but I do not know that I saw this morning a pair of trousers with legs not an inch more than eleven in girth at the knee—or at the knob which I took to be a knee. I want to know if the fashionable woman, in her wildest absurdities, ever equalled the fashionable man of the day, with his legs squeezed into such trousers, and a hat protruding over his forehead. If you want close fitting pants, go to BUDGE. If you want your pants so tight that you have to grease your limbs to get them on, or as one customer, when ordering his pants, said, 'that if he could get them on he would not have them, go to BUDGE.' 1882. 1883.

FALL AND WINTER UPSET SALE. Of Fall and Winter Clothing commenced this week and gives promise of great success. Scotch people and old-timers folks all know what is the meaning of "upset sale." It is a term used when things are to be sold out to close estates, partnerships or corporations. I propose a sale of this nature. The prosperous season so far this year, the largest I ever had, encourages me to...

RING ALL THE BELLS. And call the people in to close out all of the surplus stock. $7,000 worth of Men's and Boys Clothing. I want to sell out to make purchases for fall. I want to sell out to keep plenty work going. I want to sell out to get rid of my old stock. I want to sell out to start again with a new stock. I want to sell out to do a larger business than ever.

DOWN GO THE PRICES. The people of Port Hope and surrounding country have tried me generously for over thirty years, and I am satisfied even though I do sacrifice my profits for a month. I make money in the long run by serving my customers well.

IN A NUTSHELL, THIS IS IT. The practical point of all this is a radical reduction in price. They are great and people to examine the goods and see the reality of the reductions.

GOOD CLOTHING FOR WORKING MEN. Good clothing for wear, and fair to look at, needn't cost more than $12 a suit. The best everyday suits I make cost ready-made, $30. Between these two figures I make an immense variety of clothing, each sort having its particular adaptation, and its own particular goodness. There's no way to pick it out so good as to come and see it. There's no way to prove it so good as to try it. It is by making such clothing as this I am talking of that I have won the trade I enjoy.

The Times

AND COUNTY OF BURHAM BRITISH CANADIAN. Port Hope, Thursday, Oct. 26, 1882. THE CATHOLIC VOTE.

It is becoming painfully evident that striving after the Catholic vote is fixing itself as an element of our political system as firmly as is the "colored support" a factor of Southern politics. Catholics constitute about one-sixth of the population of Ontario, and their interest in very many ridings, if united, is sufficient to turn the tide in either one direction or the other. Hence, pandering to their prejudices and religious predilections is resorted to by both sides of politics to secure the balance in their respective favors. It is too often the case that the most successful tacticians in this respect are the ones who gain the day. Catholics have begun to recognize their own importance, and take advantage (as it is human to do) of their position to demand favors in the way of representation, which seldom fall to the lot of minorities.

In a new country like this, where we are endeavoring, or should endeavor, to develop a truly Canadian spirit, it is too bad that the prejudices of the Old Country, fostered under entirely different circumstances, should have been transplanted into Canadian virgin soil. It is too bad that politics and religion should become mixed. We do not make Catholics responsible for this; Protestants and Catholics are equally to blame. Hundreds of well-meaning Protestants say: "I will never vote for a Catholic." Catholics understand this spirit, and they demand a Catholic representation; and it is through this very feeling that their politics has become a marketable commodity—the property of the highest bidder. Such an antagonistic, sectarian feeling should not exist. A movement has been started in favor of Catholic representation in the legislatures of our country. Representation by nationality has also been talked of, and in appointing Cabinet Ministers and making many other appointments it is always a matter for consideration. While, to a certain extent in the present state of public feeling, some consideration must be given to national and religious elements, it is at the same time wrong in principle. Catholics have no right to such representation; neither have Protestants. The only true basis of representation, and the only truly national one, is representation by population. If a man is fitted by nature and attainments to act in a representative or governmental capacity, he should be elected or appointed, as the case necessitates, irrespective of his creed or nationality. If neither side will accede to this liberality of action, then it is the duty of political leaders to educate the people to that standard, instead of pandering to the sympathies of race and religion. As far as politics is concerned, Protestantism, Catholicism, or Orangism are as distinct as day and night.

It is said (it appears to be not without foundation) that Archbishop Lynch lent his ecclesiastical influence towards the election of Mr. Mowat's supporters in the late elections. It is said he actually issued instructions to his co-religionists how to vote. If so, Archbishop Lynch has prostituted his position as one of the highest ecclesiastical dignitaries in the Dominion. At all events, he made his sympathies so generally known that his followers though they ran could read. It is also without doubt that the mandate had its effect. Perhaps that dignity justifies his course by assuming more than hierarchal authority. This is certainly a pontifical claim, but is recognized as merely nominal. The world has long ago assigned ecclesiasticism and things temporal to distinct spheres, and it is still satisfied to allow them to remain there. If it comes to be known and generally understood that Archbishop Lynch is running the Mowat Government according to his own dictation, the five-sixths of the people in Ontario who do not hold to his infallible right in this respect will be aroused by religious animosity to resist such encroachment on their right to rule themselves.

The general subscription raised throughout Canada to erect a monument to the late Mr. Brown, of the Globe, has at length closed, and five thousand dollars has been raised. The monument is to take the shape of a statue which is to cost five thousand dollars. Five thousand dollars! Is that all? Either the public are ungrateful, or George Brown was not worthy of the monument which he has been cracked up to be.—Bob. Independent.

THE LAW OF SELF DEFENCE. PRACTICAL EDUCATION.

Under the heading, "Is it to be a national curse?" the Toronto World has a splendid article, perhaps a little overdrawn, but full of suggestiveness. On general principles, the World maintains that a system of education which develops only the ideal and ignores the practical is disastrous and a national curse. It points out that our present system of education is unfitting for a young woman for performing their duties in the station of life in which they naturally belong. The wood has to be hewn, and the water to be drawn, and the wool to be carded and spun, and the boots and the shirts and the coats to be made. Did every square mile in the country show a grammar school and 75 per cent. of our young men and women come out from their classes modalists or honor bearers? A young girl, after a few years of what is called education, leaves school with ideas as far as the stars above the work of the farm house. She has been educated in lines pointing far beyond her sphere, and she will not alone refuse to milk the cow and weave the cloth, but she may often be filled with a yearning for ways that she can never tread. Something must be done to educate in the direction of the practical as well as of the ideal. We must eat and the wheat must be grown; we must be clad and the cloth must be woven. We cannot live on piano notes or dissected buttercups, or make a dinner on a stanza from "Marmion." The element of home industry must be cultivated, and the duties of domestic life must be taught side by side with that which is purely intellectual and ideal. This will have to be done, or we shall soon be obliged to look upon our education as the destroyer of our race.

Did every square mile in the country show a grammar school and 75 per cent. of our young men and women come out from their classes modalists or honor bearers? A young girl, after a few years of what is called education, leaves school with ideas as far as the stars above the work of the farm house. She has been educated in lines pointing far beyond her sphere, and she will not alone refuse to milk the cow and weave the cloth, but she may often be filled with a yearning for ways that she can never tread. Something must be done to educate in the direction of the practical as well as of the ideal. We must eat and the wheat must be grown; we must be clad and the cloth must be woven. We cannot live on piano notes or dissected buttercups, or make a dinner on a stanza from "Marmion." The element of home industry must be cultivated, and the duties of domestic life must be taught side by side with that which is purely intellectual and ideal. This will have to be done, or we shall soon be obliged to look upon our education as the destroyer of our race.

Under the heading, "Is it to be a national curse?" the Toronto World has a splendid article, perhaps a little overdrawn, but full of suggestiveness. On general principles, the World maintains that a system of education which develops only the ideal and ignores the practical is disastrous and a national curse. It points out that our present system of education is unfitting for a young woman for performing their duties in the station of life in which they naturally belong. The wood has to be hewn, and the water to be drawn, and the wool to be carded and spun, and the boots and the shirts and the coats to be made. Our rights and to propagate your Protestantism?

A cry is raised against his grace the Archbishop of Toronto. For what? Because he protested against the use of Marmion as a school book. Is that a great crime? His grace is a citizen of this country, and as such has all the rights of citizenship, and cannot be an alien in what concerns the good of this country. He is a Catholic, and as such has a right, in common with all other Catholics, to ask for equal rights for us in the educational institutions of this country so long as they are supported by our money. He is recognized by Catholics, as the head of the Catholic church in this province, and as such he has certain duties to perform towards the members of that church. And when Catholics listen to him they are not to be told their intelligence is not above that of "poodle dogs," nor is his grace to be called a "donkey driver." There is certainly not a Catholic in Ontario who will be in a hurry to forget this language.

Now a few parting remarks:— Over two thirds of the Catholic students of Ontario attend the public and high schools. Over two thirds of the Catholic teachers are employed in the public and high schools. The high schools, collegiate institutes and the universities are supported partly by the money of Catholics.

The educational system of Ontario is not the work of Catholics, consequently they are not to blame if Protestants are deprived of their rights to teach Protestantism in the schools.

The only books used in the separate school and convent in Lindsay are the books used in the public and high schools, consequently the Toronto Telegram will learn that there is nothing offensive in them to Protestants, but there is something offensive to Catholics in Collier's history used in those schools, but in no other book.

Will the Telegram please ask Godwin Smith what the late council of public instruction thought of this history? Had the senate of the University known that in all our teaching communities the prescribed work in literature had to be used in order that young ladies studying in them might be able to compete for certificates, they never would have put "Marmion" on the list. They never would have asked the Sisters to teach the base, black calumny on their order revealed in that poem. No; the members of the senate are gentlemen.

For a plain, honest, truthful reasonable statement of this controversy for a common sense—Scottish sense—statement of it see last week's Canada Presbyterian. Let the Catholic press publish it everywhere for its readers. I have seen nothing like it. It is from the pen of the well-known and highly respected Rev. John King, Presbyterian minister, Toronto.

ROUND ABOUT US.

Dr. Vincent had a audience of 800 at Peterboro'.

Peterborough citizens hold $612,600 worth of bank stock, so the Examiner says.

10,584 dozen eggs were shipped from the Peterboro' station on Wednesday of last week, valued at $2,400.

Mr. John Grant of South Oshawa, a man of 80 years, had his leg broken while picking apples one day last week.

Last week at Kinnmount, Mr. Jno. Dovey was instantly killed by an accidental discharge of a gun, while getting into a buck-board.

Mr. W. H. Huston, M.A., has been appointed as Principal of Pickering College, in place of Mr. Davis whose death we noticed in a previous issue.

A green snake was killed near Campbellford recently. Weather seers prognosticate an open fall, because these snakes are rarely seen out of ground after the last week in September.

The much talked of canoe race between James Adams, of Fenelon Falls, and Wm. Walters, of Lindsay, has been postponed by mutual consent until Spring, it being impossible for these men to meet before the cold weather sets in.

At a meeting of the Cobourg, Victoria University, literary society a discussion was held on the "Marmion" question. This august body decided that "Marmion" was an improper book and should be expunged from the list of text books.

Philip Taylor, of Oshawa, purchased last spring a peck of potatoes, for which he paid 75 cts. He cut them in pieces, with one or two eyes in each piece, and planted one piece in each hill. He has dug them and got twenty bushels. The land they grew in was fifteen square paces. Who can beat this yield, 1,200 lbs of potatoes from 15 lbs of seed.

A peculiar accident happened on the farm of Mr. Hancock, near Oshawa, a few days ago. Mr. Hinton was thrashing on the farm, and a dog belonging to Mr. Everson attempted to run across the table into the cylinder backwards and with a howl and a gasp in was no more. The poor animal was torn to shreds up to the neck, when the machinery broke and stopped further progress.—Vindicator.

Heroes of the Plains.

In American history there are no more interesting figures than the Heroes of the border. Bold, daring, adventurous and patriotic; loyal to friends, to country and to the interests of society, their work was singularly effective in the advancement of western civilization. With seeming recklessness, their efforts were in the interest of law and order, and the people owe them a debt of gratitude they do not forget. Their page in history is as fascinating as it is honorable, and there is a peculiar pleasure in reading the narrative of their wonderful exploits. Among these, whose careers were singularly adventurous, are Kit Carson, Wild Bill, Buffalo Bill, Capt. Payne, Texas Jack, California Joe, Capt. Jack and others whose achievements have made them justly and widely famous. They have a warm place in the hearts of the people, and a prominent one in their admiration. It is appropriate that their achievements should be recorded, and we note with pleasure the forthcoming of a new book from the press of N. D. Thompson & Co., New York and St. Louis, called "THE HEROES OF THE PLAINS," covering the grand border history. It is profusely illustrated with 100 engravings and 16 colored lithograph plates. It is sold by subscription through canvassing agents, and presents an opportunity to agents to make money especially inviting. We advertise it in another column.

Three bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters cured him, and he tells us in a recent letter that he considers it the best family medicine now before the country for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint.

Phosphor bronze has an electric conductivity two and a half times that of iron or steel, and one third that of copper.

The Edgemoor Iron Company, of Wilmington, Del., have finished the Bowers bridge over the Goshaloven river, near New South Wales. This bridge is the largest in the colony, being 1,103 feet long and 20 feet wide. It is built of iron.

The longest span of wire in the world is used for a telegraph in India, over the River Kistnah, between Bezorah and Setaanagram. It is more than 6,000 feet long, and is stretched between two hills, each of which is 1,200 feet high.

With thermometers placed at four feet and at fifty feet above the ground, Mr. Geo. Dines has obtained readings which lead him to believe that the average maximum temperature for every month is always greater and the average minimum lower near the ground than at a considerable elevation.

Experiments have shown that firing with a three-inch 12-ton gun at armor plating 9 and four inches thick, representing a deck of a vessel inclined between 10 degrees and 15 degrees, in no instance caused penetration, although full charges were used.

Preliminary measures have been taken for the construction of an electric railway at Tunis. The rolling stock of each train will consist of four cars, each provided with an electric motor and capable of carrying forty passengers.

The cars will be driven by four dynamo-electric machines, lighted by electricity, and stopped instantaneously by electric brakes.

From observations made during many years in Senegal and other intertropical regions in Africa, Dr. A. Corro is inclined to believe that the African blacks are destined in course of time to disappear and be supplanted by a superior race of European origin.

He believes that the possession of immunity against yellow fever and malaria, he thinks the blacks in every way inferior to the whites.

Starch is much more readily converted into sugar when under pressure than otherwise. Not only, says a contemporary, is the diastatic action of the soluble albumenoid increased, but when the pressure is great the small percentage of free acid which is found in all cereals is sufficient to convert rapidly the starch into sugar. It is matter of surprise, therefore, that brewers do not mash under pressure.

In concluding a late lecture on telephonic communication, Colonel Webster said that there was a great social aspect of this new industry which will materially affect the body politic, namely, the question of public order, and the preservation of the peace. Power of communication between a number of householders means rapid combination against disorder, rapine, or burglary, which no police regulations could ever supply; and comparative aid and security will be afforded in thousands of cases for which there is now hardly any provision.

A description of the method of observing meteors at the summit of the Puy de Dome has been read by M. Alluard before the Academy of Sciences, Paris.

A circular terrace with balustrade has been formed around the tower. The balustrade is divided into 360 degrees, the north being marked 0 degree, and the localities all around are referred to this graduation. Two terrestrial telescopes are supported on chariots running on rails round the terrace. Geographical maps are constructed, having concentric circumferences round the Puy de Dome. The origin and course of any meteor, thunder-storm, mist, etc., are easily and accurately observed.

Who's the Best Physician.

The one that does most to relieve suffering humanity of the thousand and one ills that befall them, is certainly the best of all physicians. Electric Bitters are daily doing this, curing where all other remedies failed. As a purgative and blood purifier they have no equal. They positively cure liver and kidney complaints. In the strongest sense of the term, they are the best and cheapest medicine known.—Daily Times. Sent by G. A. Mitchell, at 50 cents.

Be careful of your eyes, for once lost they can never be replaced. Churchill's Climax Eye Salve is the best. Price 25 cents.

Courage and Commissariat.

As usual amongst British troops in active service all over the globe, the Egyptian campaign presents innumerable examples of incomparable valor and endurance. In particular, by telegram, we are told that—

"One proof mentioned by the Duke of Comaungat of the spirit of his men was that, for twenty-four hours after starting from Ismailia, they had nothing served out to them; yet hungry, thirsty, worn out as they were, dirty and unshaved, they were most anxious to be lied forward against the enemy."

This anxiety on the part of our gallant fellows, of course, simply and solely evidenced a combative inclination, coupled with a desire to do their duty superior to depressing circumstances, and to get it over and feed as soon as possible. Quite right too. "Dirty and unwashed"—did the Duke or correspondent who seems to be quoting H. R. H.'s words expect the men to be neat as pins, and trim as when on parade? Other soldiers, similarly situated, might also possibly evince a longing to be led against the enemy; but that would betray impatience, and show themselves simply tired of life. Though not always shorn and pipe-clayed for duty in Pall Mall, our own heroes are never too untidy for action; and alike whether hungry and thirsty or replete with rations, they uniformly exhibit an indomitable and unbounded stomach for the fight. More might be said, but that foreigners might perhaps mistake it for brag, apparently a little too like blowing our own trumpet. Besides, the question chiefly suggested by the statement that our men had to fight upon empty stomachs is, obviously—who ought to be hanged?—Punch.

A scandalous scene was enacted at St. Jude's Church, Liverpool, one Sunday recently, when the incumbent, the Rev. Ernest Fitzroy, was assaulted. On the previous night an orange-colored placard was posted in the neighborhood, as follows: "God save Protestantism. The parishioners oppose the profanation of the services because of, first, monkish cassocks; second, a surpliced choir; third, processions; fourth, preaching in the surplice; fifth, intoning the prayer; sixth, early morning (fasting) celebration of the Lord's Supper; seventh, naming the Lord's table the 'altar,' and bowing to it; eighth, a cross and flower vases on the Lord's table; ninth, teaching the Real Presence and baptismal regeneration; tenth, turning to the east and bowing likely to promote tumult. Protestants, help in opposing these pranks until they are withdrawn." On Sunday morning the Protestant party gave vent in the church to disagreeable sounds, and when the incumbent and the choristers proceeded down the aisle an attempt was made to stop them. A diatribe was uttered as the consequence, and Mr. Fitzroy and the choristers took off their surplices on the spot. Several blows were made at the incumbent, who warded them off as well as he could. The police appearing on the scene, a young man was given into custody.

A DISAGREEABLE AND UNSIGHTLY result of poverty of the blood is seen in the various diseases of the skin that disfigure the surface of the body. In this class of cases there is a defect in the digestive process, and the elements do not reach the circulation in a state fit for the work of repair. Here Wheeler's Elixir of Phosphates and Calceya, composed of agents that invigorate the stomach and secure healthy blood, has cured many obstinate cases.

Abel Simmons, of Rosendale, N.Y., has a wonderful dog, named Jack. Jack used to toss a silver piece placed upon his nose, and turn around once and catch it in his mouth; but some one put a hot penny on his nose one day, and that spoiled the trick. In the winter time he is the dread of all the school children who have sleighs, for he will rush out when a boy is going along, grab the tops of the sleigh, pull it loose from the boy, and run off with it as fast as he can go. Finally the boys combined against him. When Jack decides that he wants a sleigh they let him have the rope, but five or six boys jump on the sleigh, and Jack very soon tires of drawing them. Jack, when a cork is thrown up in the air, will jump up, turn a summersault, and catch it in his mouth.

The blue jay is the boldest and most mischievous of wild birds. Near Knoxville, Tenn., recently, one was seen to fly a number of times to a high pocket fence to attract a pair of kittens playing on the lawn. The kittens finally mounted the fence, and began a cautious approach from picket to picket. The jay let the first get to it within eighteen inches, and then hopped over between the two. The second kitten approached; the bird hopped over it. It turned, and the jay hopped back and between. The first kitten approached, and the jay hopped back over it, and so kept it up till one kitten got disgusted and left, and the other followed soon after. Once or twice after the jay tried to inveigle the kittens to another frolic, but failed.

In Sir Garnet Wolseley's little manual, entitled "The Soldier's Pocket Book," this excellent passage occurs: "A nation was bred up to feel it a disgrace even to succeed by falsehood. The word spy contains in it something as repulsive as the word slave. We will keep hammering along with the conviction that honesty is the best policy, and that truth always wins in the long run." These pretty little sentences do well for a child's copy book, but the man who acts upon them in war had better sheathe his sword forever.

At a wayside inn in the south of France is a roasting jack moved by animal power. Two dogs turn the machine, working alternately. One day the dog whose proper turn it was being a'ent, the other was caught and put on the wheel. He flitted off, however, to work, and neither coaxing, threats, nor chastisement produced any effect. After some delay the missing dog was found and set to the task. After he had nearly completed the job he was released, and the first tried again, and the animal so lately recalcitrant now offered no opposition, and made the wheel revolve with a hearty good will till the roast was finished.

Congressman Dingley is strong as Neal Dow in support of the prohibitory law in Maine, but he does not hold that it greatly lessens the consumption of liquor. He says: "Even though it be but spasmodically enforced, it is better than license for it is a solemn witness to the sentiment of the State. The objection that prohibition cannot stop drinking is unreasonable, no law absolutely kills out crime."

Mr. Wm. Ransom, of South Norwick, Bismarck, never had any medicine to do me any permanent good until recommended by our druggists (J. Wesley Fish & Co.; Ottaville) to try Dr. Carson's Stomach and Constipation Bitters, which have done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken. I would, with the utmost confidence, recommend them to all suffering from biliousness, &c. Sold by all druggists at 50c a bottle.

The other day there was seen in London, for the first time, the Blue Ribbon, the emblem of the teetotaler, worn side by side with the token of the wearer's adherence to Roman Catholic religion. Cardinal Manning has sanctioned the Blue Ribbon Army by accepting a position in its ranks by the side of the Rev. Newman Hall. In doing so he writes to give his adhesion, because "he considers every good cause tending to draw the human soul from light to darkness as the work of no particular creed, but of God Himself."

Among the most ingenious and complicated mechanical achievements of modern times is a gigantic clock, just completed by Messrs. Lund and Blockley of London, at the instance of Mr. Premchund Roychund, a well-known native of Bombay. Some time ago this gentleman intimated to the Indian Government his desire to present Bombay University with a new clock carillon, and his offer having been accepted, deposited a large sum of money with the authorities, requesting them to lay it out on his behalf in the manner indicated. The dials of the clock are thirteen feet in diameter, of opal glass; it is fitted with an apparatus enabling it to telegraph its time daily to the observatory and synchronize to correct time all the other clocks in the university and Bombay city. Connected with it is a carillon of sixteen bells, weighing about twelve tons, which can play sixteen tunes and 150 changes, besides "firing" at full speed as smartly as though the peal were being chimed by expertingers. The repertoire of this carillon includes Irish, Scotch, and Welsh airs, as well as British melodies, two or three familiar hymns, the British national anthem, and "Rule Britannia."

The announcement that a peerage is about to be conferred on Sir Garnet Wolseley recalls the fact that a number of other distinguished Irishmen, including the Duke of Wellington, Lord Beresford, Gen. Hutchinson (afterwards Lord Donoughmore), Lord Keane, and Lord Gough, have been rewarded for military service in a similar manner in the present century. The career of Gen. Hutchinson presents perhaps the most striking parallel to that of Sir Garnet Wolseley. He entered the army in 1774 as a cornet of dragoons, and in nine years rose to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. In 1793 he raised a regiment himself which he commanded as Colonel in Flanders in the war against the French. In 1796 he was made a Major-General, and was subsequently engaged in the Netherlands. In the expedition to Egypt in 1801 he was second in command to Sir Ralph Abercrombie, and when that distinguished officer fell at the battle of Alexandria the chief command devolved on Major-Gen. Hutchinson, who advanced, like Wolseley, as far as Cairo, when a capitulation took place, and the war was ended. For his services he was raised to the peerage as Baron Hutchinson of Alexandria and Knockfoyle in the country of Tipperary.

"No Indian ever had his pony shod," observes the Detroit Free Press, "and yet the Indian Department is charged with $18,000 worth of horse shoes per year. Oh, that's all right. The Indians hang 'em over the doors of their wigwags to bring good luck."

Skobelev.

The Reckless and Brilliant Military Exploits of the Russian General.

Through two Austrian detectives had been ordered to watch General Skobelev until he left Vienna for St. Petersburg, it is given out with special stress that his recent fiery speech was not delivered seriously, but was born of too much champagne.

In connection with General Skobelev the London Pall Mall Gazette reproduces some interesting reminiscences of his career. The story of his exploits in the Bulgarian campaign includes all that was most exciting in the war which brought the Russian army within sight of the minarets of Stamboul. From the day when "to show the stuff he was made of," he swam his horse across the Danube while General Dragomiroff was forcing the passage at Simnizza, to the time when he could with difficulty be restrained from marching into Constantinople as soon as the British fleet entered the Sea of Marmora, he was the most prominent actor in the drama. He became the legendary hero of the campaign, and in the minds of the common people he almost monopolized its glories. He was always in the front of the hottest battles; four horses were shot under him in ten days, but he was only wounded once, and after being in constant expectation of death for months he returned home safe and sound. His white uniform was to his soldiers as the white plume of Henri Quatre at the battle of Ivry. "I have heard the soldiers speak of him," says Lieutenant Green, "as a General under whom they had rather fight and die than fight and live under another. They had often to die—sometimes 50 per cent. of his command perished; but he spared no exertion to minister to their wants, and to supply their needs. His division was the best fed and best clothed and best armed in the army. He was always with them in the most exposed positions in the fight, sleeping with them in the trenches, and looking after all their necessities in the camp. In short," says Lieutenant Green, "he succeeded so thoroughly in making himself one with his division that his men responded to his thoughts as readily as the muscles obey the will. I doubt if a more thoroughly ideal relation between a General and his men has existed since the days of Cromwell."

His custom of wearing white, as if to court the bullets of his enemies, his reckless personal bravery and the strange custom of his of always "going into battle in his cleanest uniform and fresh underclothing, covered with perfume and wearing a diamond-hilted sword, in order that, as he said, he might die with his best clothes on," gained him the reputation of a wild daredevil, which somewhat obscured his real capacity as a general. In reality they only showed how thoroughly he had divined that secret of power which lies in fascinating the imagination as well as of appealing to the reason of men. When he was sent to take Geok Tepe and subdue the Tekkes many shook their heads and predicted that his impetuosity would be his ruin. So far from that being the case he displayed the utmost caution, acted with the greatest deliberation, refused to move from July to December, until he had made all his preparations, and after he had carried on camels to the trenches no fewer than 1,575,000 rounds of ammunition, to say nothing of several thousands of heavy shot and shell, he laid siege to Geok Tepe, and captured that hitherto impregnable stronghold. He had 10,000 troops against 40,000 Asiatics, and he achieved the conquest of the Akhal Tekke country with a loss of 937 men. Only once in the campaign did Skobelev display his usual recklessness. After the fortress had fallen he was riding through the country with his escort when he met several Tekkes. He asked who they were. They answered: "Friendly Tekkes." "How can I believe your word?" he asked again. "Tekkes never lie," was their confident response. "Well," replied Skobelev, "if that is the case I will send my escort home, and will return accompanied by you." He was as good as his word, and his trust in the word of the nomads was not misplaced.

His Prescription. Up in New Hampshire is a well known eccentric individual, a self-constituted curer of all ills; a sort of universal panacea, "body and soul, head, heart, and conscience doctor," who, with all his eccentricities, has a fund of actual wit that is hard to beat. Not long ago the "doctor" was called upon by the witness-stand. The opposing counsel, who is said sometimes to indulge in "liquor-pizen," knowing the doctor's peculiarities, ventured, in cross examining him, to show him up a bit. The result will be appreciated. "What is your business?" pompously inquired the counsel. "My business is to do what little good I can do to my fellow-men," modestly replied the doctor. "But that doesn't answer my question," gruffly remarked the counsel. "How do you spend your time?" "Why, squire, it takes about all my time to do what I said."

"But I want something more definite," stoutly demanded the counsel. "How do you go about your business?" "That depends upon circumstances, according to the nature of the case," explained the doctor. "For instance, if I were going to begin on you, the first thing I should do would be to advise you to sign a temperance pledge!" The court roared, and the counsel, as if convinced the doctor was pursuing a legitimate and respectable vocation, proceeded with the regular cross-examination.

Utah Girls. Many girls who are in the evening genuine ornaments to the parlor, tastefully dressed and "meat as a new pin," are little better than slatterns when performing domestic duties. I have no patience with this untidiness. It has always seemed to me as if Cinderella herself might have kept out of the ashes even if she was obliged to stay in the kitchen and work. To look well while about housework is worth while. A neat calico dress, short enough to clear the floor, smoothly brushed hair, a clean collar and a plentiful supply of aprons, are all within the reach of any woman, and I maintain that she will do her work better, and feel more like doing it if so prepared for it. The moral influence of dress is undoubted.

At Salzburg, in the Tyrol, some old bricks were found to be magnetic. Experiments on the clays in the neighborhood showed that the bricks, which contain granular mica-slate, argillaceous iron-garnet, chlorite and hornblende, became, after intense heating, capable of affecting a magnet.

FLAX-SEED Emulsion Compound.

The strongest and best evidence to bring forward to establish the fact that it is of proven those witnesses whose intelligence, candor, honor, and veracity are unimpeachable. The results which have followed the use of FLAX-SEED Emulsion Compound in NERVOUS EXHAUSTION, PARALYSIS & GENERAL DEBILITY, as well as the affections of the Throat and Lungs, acute and chronic rheumatism, might seem most incredible, were it not for the unquestionable evidence which we present in our pamphlet of testimonials of many of the most prominent citizens of the city of Ogdensburg, where FLAX-SEED Emulsion Compound has been manufactured and largely sold during the past year. We invite the closest investigation and inquiry into the merits and reputation of FLAX-SEED Emulsion Compound in Ogdensburg, N. Y., where it is thoroughly known.

I have the pleasure of informing you that I have personally administered each bottle of FLAX-SEED Emulsion Compound, and induced many others to use it with equally satisfactory results. I have carefully observed its effect during the last two years in MANY CASES and firmly believe and endorse its claims as a superior nerve tonic, stimulant and fat producer.

President of the Ogdensburg National Bank.

OGDENBURG, N. Y., April 28, 1881. I want to recommend FLAX-SEED Emulsion Compound to all persons who are taking Cod Liver Oil Emulsion. I have used it for six months without getting any benefit. During this time I was constantly spitting blood, and had not more than one bottle of FLAX-SEED Emulsion Compound before I began to feel better and now am better than I have been in six months. I am able to walk around every day and have not raised one drop of blood since I began to take the FLAX-SEED Emulsion Compound. I hope every person with weak lungs will use the FLAX-SEED Emulsion Compound, for it is far better than the Cod Liver Oil and very pleasant to take. It never deranged my stomach as the Oil always did. DANIEL CARTIN.

AYLER, QUE., March 17, 1880. FLAX-SEED Emulsion Compound. When I began taking your remedy I was greatly benefited after eating and suffering with most intense pain in my stomach and bowels, was losing flesh rapidly, and was coughing constantly. Consumption had been carried on for a few months as I was growing weaker and weaker each day. I had not taken a whole bottle of the Emulsion when the pain and coughing was entirely removed and after taking four bottles I had gained 10 pounds. I feel now as well as ever I did in my life. Q. THE Methodist church pulpit was last Sunday occupied according to announcement, Rev. J. F. German in the morning, and Rev. J. Bredin in the evening. These gentlemen delivered addresses to the Sunday School in the afternoon.

RAILWAY ties to the immense number of 1,200,000 have been shipped this year by the Messrs. Rathbun. This is enough to lay over 430 miles of railway. Their shipments of various kinds of lumber will exceed 100,000,000 feet.—Lindsay Post.

THE Midland Railway will shortly issue the winter time table and schedule of train arrangements. It is expected the link of roadway between Manilla and Wick will be in running order in about three weeks, and that the new arrangements will include the running of the Toronto trains over that route.

"No quorum" on Monday night. Everything runs along so smoothly in the administration of civic affairs that there is really nothing to do for our aldermen but recommend the payment of current accounts. Several of the "Fathers" have deserted the forum entirely.

THE Toronto News of Monday has a long article on "Dead Beats," showing up the way in which many of the officials in the Government Departments and others dead beat their way in the city. A list of the names of these is threatened to be published shortly.

THE Rev. W. S. Rainsford, of St. James Cathedral, Toronto, is to be the speaker at the Bible Society meeting on Tuesday evening next. The meeting is to take place in the Music Hall at 8 o'clock. A very large attendance is expected. Be early. The adoption of the Committee's report will be moved by Rev. T. W. Jeffery and seconded by Rev. G. H. Copeland, each delivering a brief address. A collection will be taken for the work of the Society.

BUSINESS is likely to hum in the shanties this winter, and a very large "cut" will be made. Gangs of Frenchmen go North on the Midland every day or two. Altogether, there must have been five hundred went to work on the railroad and shanties, recently. In all probability, if the prices keep up, there will be more lumber shipped at Port Hope next year, than ever before.

WE notice that a vast number of reverend gentlemen call at the Guide office. The TIMES being a "semi-sporting" journal and "an advocate of horse racing" our sanctum is shunned by the "cloth," consequently no holy air of sanctity pervades our editorial recess. The constant association with holy men, no doubt accounts for the sanctified appearance of some people.

WHAT IS IT?—"What is that, mother?" "A washer, dear; You will always find it standing here, Posing on the corner of the street, Proudly displaying its tiny feet, Twirling its little ten cent cane, And stupefying its tender brain With the smoke of a paper cigarette. Don't touch it, dear, it was raised a pet." "Will it bite, mother?" "Well, I should shout; It will bite a free lunch for all that's out."

ELOCUTIONARY ENTERTAINMENT.—The entertainment in the Music Hall on Friday night was well attended. Mr. Bonbright's rendition of the "Diver" was greatly admired. Miss Vickers, however, took the honors of the evening, being loudly encored at each appearance. The selections by Miss Lola Kimball, and Miss Aggie Wilson bespoke high elocutionary talent in each of these young ladies.

A NEW PHASE IN THE SCHOOL QUESTION.—At the Court of Revision, on Monday, Dr. R. A. Corbett applied for a reduction on the assessment of his property on John Street. He wanted it reduced to $5,000, and was asked if he would be willing to sell it for school purposes at that figure. The Doctor replied that he would, and thereupon made a written statement to that effect, providing his offer was accepted inside of two weeks. The matter will be discussed at the next meeting of the School Board, and should be accepted, as it is a most generous one.

A NEW IDEA.—What is certainly a new departure in social affairs is the advertising of the names of all the marriageable young ladies in the place, as is done by a Port Perry paper. The list includes not only the names of the unengaged damsels, but those of the engaged, so that an intending benedict can tell at a glance just in which direction to turn. The names of the eligible young men of the place are not given. The Toronto Telegram's bachelor editor thinks that the next list should contain not only the names of the young ladies, but a description of each of them, with marginal references as to the financial position of the old gentlemen, so that young men in search of helpmates would understand the exact position of affairs at a glance.

GETTING IT SEVERE.—A few months ago the Peterboro Times was belching forth innuendoes against the Midland Railway officials; in last week's issue it returns to the attack with renewed vigor. The Times has a coadjutor in the Fenelon Falls Gazette, which lays into the officials right and left. Delays in the mail train from the south is the cause of the editor's dire wrath. It is stated that when the train stops at McLaren's Creek the men get off and go crane shooting for half an hour or so. The Gazette winds up by saying: "As a petition which was got up with reference to the mails some time ago has had no effect, the impression is that the Midland Railway Company feel that they can do exactly as they please, and do not care a straw for expostulations. The indignation at the irregularity of the mail is becoming stronger day by day, and the residents of this village are trying to hit upon some plan by which the annoyance can be put an end to." We feel confident, if irregularities really exist which can be avoided, a proper representation of them to the officials of the railway would lead to an improved state of affairs; and we would recommend our contemporary to fully set forth the facts, so that a fair opportunity may be given the company to place matters right.

EXEMPTING CIVIL SERVANTS.—Messrs. Murray and Kelly applied at the Court of Revision to be exempted from taxation on income. These gentlemen are mail clerks on the Midland Railway, and are appointed by the Postmaster-General. Considerable discussion ensued regarding whether they were entitled to exemption for the same reason that gazetted Government officials are—in other words, whether they were civil servants. Mr. White, who appeared for them, contended that any officer of any Government department, appointed by the head of that department and receiving remuneration out of the public coffers, was legally exempt from taxation on income, and quoted a decision by Chief Justice Harrison in proof. No definite decision was arrived at, and it is still "under consideration." Mr. Baird also asked to be taken off the assessment roll. The latter gentleman thinks there should be no exceptions whatever, but where others are exempted he claims the same privilege.

A PRIZE OF ONE HUNDRED GUINEAS.—The foregoing is the prize now offered for the best essay in English on the following subject, viz., "The Heathen World; its need of the Gospel, and the Church's obligation to supply it." The essay in question must contain not less than 200 pages of 300 words on a page, and not more than 250 pages of 300 words, and should, if possible, consist of chapters or sections. All essays must be sent postpaid to Rev. W. H. Withrow, D.D., Toronto, competition being open to any person in the Dominion of Canada or Newfoundland. This offer is open until noon the 15th of July, 1883, and the award made on or before the 15th day of October. No name is to appear on the essay, but a mark or motto only, each to be accompanied by a sealed envelope containing the name and address of the writer, bearing on its cover the mark by which the essayist is to be identified.

LUMBER is coming in on the Midland in immense quantities, but is not yet moving lively from the docks.

Rev. Mr. McDiarmid preached in Peterboro' last Sunday. His place here was filled by Mr. Sale, of University College, Toronto.

Smith street sidewalks are in a very bad state of repair, and the Street and Bridge Committee is getting "tally ho," over the head of it.

A NEW style of smoke stacks are being introduced on the Midland Railway. The new device is intended to save the net of steel ribbing on the top from wearing out so quickly as it does at present.

Saturday night witnessed several rows on the street. A great many complaints came from Englishtown about rowdiness up there. As far as can be learned, these complaints are well founded.

A despatch from Montreal says Mr. William Toplis of the Montreal Herald, who has been seriously ill for some time, has nearly recovered.

THE Orillia Packet, a first class local paper, has donned a new dress, and now presents a most creditable appearance. Being a strong temperance journal, the Packet is, of course, strongly opposed to Mr. Mowat's system of licensing.

Another gentleman who has claims on the Garden Hill butcher is Mr. H. Knapp, 5th Con. Hope. Last Thursday night he lost a large quantity of grain, including wheat, oats and rye. The buffalo robe found with the thief, Mr. K. claims as his. He was on hand Monday evening to claim his property.

THE special train to leave Millbrook on Monday night at 10.30, did not get along until about one o'clock. About a hundred people from Port Hope, who were at Millbrook attending the church opening, were obliged to wait for it at the station.

A vessel came into the harbor yesterday, which is quite a curiosity in its way. She was built for a "blockade runner" during the American war, but is now employed by the Kingston Wrecking Co., being brought from the Gulf last year. She brought a pumping engine, to be taken to the Georgian Bay via Midland, to assist in raising a sunken vessel there. She is named the Conqueror, and is quite an interesting sight.

A GOOD IDEA.

Reference is made in another column to the offer of Dr. R. A. Corbett, to sell the old Ontario Bank building for $5,000. The idea suggested of turning it into a school building is a splendid one. With a little internal rearrangement, it would make a first-class High School building, while the present High School building could be used for a Central Primary. In fact, it would be the very best move the town ever made in the way of schools. Sanitarily considered, it would not be as well situated as the present High School, but it is not too objectionable on that score. Dr. Corbett's offer of two weeks should not be lost sight of, and the matter receive immediate consideration. If that building can be obtained at the price named, it should be secured.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Marshall Thompson arrived home from the North-West on Monday night last.

Rev. W. H. Laird was in town several days of this week.

Mr. Jas. Evans received word last week that his father was dead. He lived in the county of Simcoe.

The Belleville Intelligencer claims that the Grand Junction Railway is run in the interests of Peterboro'.

Mr. W. H. Ellis, formerly of THE TIMES office, has returned from Winnipeg, highly pleased with his success. He returns again in about a month.

The shooting party, composed of Messrs. N. Hockin, T. Neelands, S. Williams, Wm. Robertson and F. W. Wilson, have returned from Pigeon Lake. They brought home sixty ducks.

Mr. Boyd, bridge contractor on the "missing link," was in town this week. He has several immense bridges on hand, one 1,700 feet long, with truss-work 70 feet high. His conversation on such topics is exceedingly interesting.

Mr. G. H. G. McVity, formerly Manager of the Ontario Bank here, was in town this week. He is manager of the mills in Longford, which were recently blown up. He gives a most thrilling account of the terrible explosion. Work will soon be resumed.

A party named Huff has died in Long Island leaving several millions, and the "heirs" of that name are "looking after" the estate. If the genial editor of the Co-bourg World only knew how to spell his name right now it would be money in his pocket.—Post.

Mr. J. L. Lewis, referred to in complimentary terms in last issue, has given up his position on the Belleville Intelligencer, and goes on the Hamilton Times. Mr. L. has attained a position among newspaper men in Eastern Ontario, particularly as a literary and dramatic critic, and we look for his continued success in the West.

Dr. Schultz, of Winnipeg, lately appointed Senator, is dead. In 1860, the year in which he graduated in medicine, he went to the North-West, where his decision of character soon made him a man of note, and when the rebellion of 1869-70 broke out he became leader of the Canadian party. Riel, the rebel leader, captured him and sentenced him to death, but he escaped by making a long snow-shoe tramp, which gave his system a shock from which he never recovered.

BUSINESS NOTES.

A Few Items of Interest Concerning the Tide of Prosperity.

The Port Hope Cash Store has recently added a very large stock of goods, and is now replete in every department.

Messrs. J. & T. Wickett and S. Williams & Co. have each enlarged their stocks to a considerable extent.

We have already noticed the putting in of plate glass in the windows and the number of beautiful signs erected, all of which have added wonderfully to the appearance of Walton Street, and on the whole indicate a hopeful sign, as far as the prosperity of our merchants are concerned.

The store recently occupied by Mr. L. Ross is having a new floor put in, and will be generally fitted up in the most improved modern business style. It will be occupied after Christmas by Mr. Clark, of the present firm of Clark and VanEvery, the term of partnership existing between these gentlemen expiring at that time.

"Patsy" Connell, who has built up a substantial business at the "Wedge," intends catering to the public taste for "the festive bivalve." His refreshment booths will be situated in the rooms formerly used as offices by Mr. Henry Wade.

While on the oyster question, we might mention the additions made by Mr. J. C. McNaughton to his saloon on Queen Street. Having rented the building vacated some time ago by Dr. Ough, and after considerable internal rearrangement, has now ample facilities for supplying the public demand for the mollusk.

What with the splendid plates dished up by Mr. Martin Griffin, and the unlimited supply to be obtained in the other places referred to above, there will be such a devouring of oysters that will make their Baltimore friends weep.

Mr. Tempest is re-painting and improving the store in his block, for so many years occupied by Mr. T. N. Pitts, and proposes further adorning it with a new plate-glass front. The store will be re-opened shortly, with a new stock of cloths, tweeds, hats, caps, gents' furnishings, etc., and as the stand is a good one, and Mr. Pitts well known, doubtless a flourishing business will be done in it.

If improvement in stores and enlargement of business can be taken as indications of success, certainly Port Hope can lay claim to a very gratifying increase in prosperity. For many years there has not been noticeable such a desire for improvement; in fact, attractive windows and handsome signs have become almost a rage with our merchants. Any person who has not visited Port Hope for several months would be surprised at the great change. Business is apparently enlarging and developing, too.

Mr. W. J. Stevens, confectioner, Mill Street, has decided upon enlarging his business, and towards that end has leased the store lately occupied by Mr. Hoffman. This place of business is now undergoing the necessary repairs, and will be ready for occupation in the course of three weeks or so. New, attractive windows will be placed in this store. The front portion will be used as a first-class confectionery, and the rear as a refreshment and oyster saloon. Mr. S. informs us that he intends fitting up his new place in first-class city style. Restaurants in Port Hope are noticeable by their absence, and, if carried out as is proposed, one ought to be quite successful and remunerative.

NEATLY NABBED.

A Career of Theft comes to a Sudden End—Messrs Chant and Hawken the Captors—Who Deserve the Praises of their Neighbors.

A History of Thieving Exploits.

Early last spring a man named Alexander made his advent in Garden Hill. This gentleman (?) rented a house from Mr. Wm. Seaton, of the above named place, and started out in the business of butchering, which must have been somewhat lucrative as it is generally supposed he stole his stock in trade. Alexander fixed two trap doors in the floor of his house, where he lived alone, although he represented himself to be a married man. He made the cellar a reservoir for all stolen property, and when closely pressed would jerk down there a live sheep or calf, in short order. A great many things, comprising live stock, grain, etc., were missed in the neighborhood. The escapee in which this same individual escaped from Constable Fallis, of Millbrook, who had him in tow for Port Hope for stealing sheep from Mr. Thos. Pierce, of the Lake Shore Road, is still fresh in the minds of our readers. His coming to Garden Hill, and his subsequent arrest for stealing the sheep, the carcasses of which were found in his cellar form two chapters in his history. The third, and no doubt the last for some time, begins with his appearance in Port Hope on Monday morning. Mr. Chant and Mr. Geo. Hawkins were on Cavan street between 8 and 9 o'clock, when James Alexander, Esq., drove along with a horse and democrat wagon, having on board eight bags of wheat, some oats, a number of empty bags, as subsequent revelations proved. Mr. Hawkins remarked that "There goes the Garden Hill butcher," and upon still further assuring Mr. Chant that he was not mistaken, the latter proposed that they should get the Chief Constable and nab him. They went in quest, found Mr. Marshall, impressed a horse and rig at the St. George Hotel, and started in pursuit. They came up to the thief near Mitchell's gardens, handcuffed him without trouble, and proceeded in triumphal procession to the lock-up.

Quite a number of the bags were marked "R. Johnson," two, "J. D. Hoar," and one, "J. Sando." As police court revelations show, the bags belonged to Mr. Robt. Johnson, of Clarke, who had loaned them to his brother, from whom a quantity of grain was stolen a short time ago. See Police Court news for further particulars.
