

CURRIE LIBEL ACTION PROCEEDS AT COBOURG TUESDAY MORNING

Wm. Woodlock of Port Hope is Called and Argument Ensued Whether "Common Talk" Could Be Admitted As Evidance

That the war diary of the Fourth Infantry brigade was kept in a fashion that made it impossible to tell whether casualties entered up as having occurred on Nov. 9, 1918, took place on the 9th, 10th or 11th (Armistice Day) was the evidence given by Col. Duguid, director of Historical Records Ottawa, at the trial today. This admission was secured from Col. Duguid on examination by Frank Regan, counsel for defendants, after much argument and cross firing between counsel as to the manner in which this document should be produced. Col. Duguid said that this record of the war was made up monthly. The casualty entry on Nov. 9 covering the 9th, 10th and 11th, stated they number 4 officers and 91 other ranks. The entry for Nov. 10th was "see Nov. 9—" and the entry for the eleventh was "see Nov. 9." Daily from the 1st to 9th of Nov. the entry

APRIL 17, 1908
Good Friday

April 17th, 1908 was Good Friday and there was no issue of the Evening Guide.

When the sessions opened, Mr. Regan for the defence, called William Woodlock, pianist, Port Hope, to state what he had heard about casualties in front of Mons. Long argument ensued as to whether "common talk" could be admitted as evidence. The judge ruled against the defence in that regard and spoke sharply to Mr. Regan who insisted that the article complained of was based on the 'common talk' of soldiers and the information they had received from comrades. His Lordship pointed out that it was thoroughly well established that one could not establish a plea of fair comment without showing that the facts upon which comment was made, were real facts.

DIES SUDDENLY IN HAMILTON

Mrs. H. V. Jewell Passed Away in City Hospital--To Be Buried Here

The news of the passing of Mrs. Harry V. Jewell, Monday, in Hamilton, was received by her many friends here with surprise and profound regret. The late Mrs. Jewell was known and beloved in Port Hope as 'Phrona' Lightle, her maiden name being Euphrona (Margaret) Lightle. She was the daughter of the late David Lightle and was born near Port Hope. Moving here with her father at an early age, she received her education in the local schools, after which she entered the office of the Nicholson File Co. and later was in the Department of Agriculture. She was a great worker in the Sunday school, Young Peoples' Society and other departments of the United Church, and by her kind, thoughtful and charming disposition cultivated a character which endeared her to all who knew her. In 1922 she was married to Mr. Harry V. Jewell, son of the late John and Mary Jewell, who resided on Charles street. At the time Mr. Jewell was purchasing agent for the Bank of Hamilton, previous to this he was overseas; having gone from Port Hope. Mr. Harry Jewell is well known here, having spent his earlier life here and just previous to going overseas was in the employ of W. Williamson and Son and F. H. Brown. Mr. and Mrs. Jewell resided in Hamilton until the Bank of Commerce took over the Bank of Hamilton, when he was transferred to Toronto. After about two years he left the bank and returned to Hamilton, where he entered into the stationery business with his brothers, William and Ewart. Besides her husband, she leaves two daughters, one two years old and the other an infant of ten days and three sisters, Mrs. C. S. Apple-gath and Miss Lillian Lightle of Hartford, Conn., and Mrs. A. E. Fulford, Brown street. Mrs. Jewell died suddenly Monday morning in Mountain Hospital, Hamilton and will be buried from her late home, 257 Stinson Crescent to Woodland Cemetery in that city. The funeral will be at 2.30 on Wednesday afternoon.

WELCOME Y.P. VISIT U. C. LEAGUE

Visitors Presented Programme Monday Night--Local League Provide Refreshments

The Young People of Welcome United Church were guests of the local Young Peoples' Society and came with a program for the evening.

The president of the Port Hope Society, Miss Ethel Kerman, made the address of welcome to the Welcome ones in whose behalf their president, Mr. E. H. Martin, responded.

The devotional period was conducted by Rev. W. E. Honey, the pastor, after which a quartette, composed of Mrs. C. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Symons and E. H. Martin sang, "I've Been Listening."

The main topic was on the subject of "The Dangers of Slang and Cheap Talk" and was handled by Mr. James Reynolds, Misses Elva Pearce, Helen Lewis, Irene Martin and Elsie Symons. The piano duett by Floyd and Melvin Honey was extremely good and much enjoyed. The quartette favored the hosts with a negro melody, "Jacob's Ladder" and the concluding hymn was sung, followed by the Mizpah Benediction.

Before the visitors returned to their home the local society presented them with the "Visiting Banner" and gave them light refreshments.

YOUNG PEOPLE VISIT ST. JOHN'S

Bowmanville A.Y.P.A. Spend Interesting Evening With Local A.Y.P.A.

Eight car loads of happy young people from Bowmanville A.Y.P.A. came down on Monday night and spent a social evening with St. John's A.Y.P.A. in the Parish Hall. After everyone had written their name and pinned it on themselves, the visitors were given pencil and paper and told to get as many Port Hope names as possible, and the local members were instructed to get the visitors' names and thus every one get acquainted.

A very sad "meller-drammer" was then read by Rev. A. G. Emmet and acted in pantomime by ten young people.

The play, "The Courtship of Miles Standish" in the days of the Puritans and "In 1928" was then cleverly put on by Cicely Hancock, Jack Mitchell and Arnold Wiseman.

Mrs. Gordon Scott gave two splendid readings and Alf Stagg accompanied by Miss Dorothy Wormington, delighted everyone with two exquisite violin numbers.

The sing-song was led by the local president, Jack Winfield, accompanied by Margaret Strong.

After several games and contests everyone went to the dining room which was prettily decorated in yellow and mauve and partook of a dainty lunch. A vote of thanks and three cheers was then given by the visitors for Port Hope, and another happy evening for which St. John's A.Y.P.A. is noted, was over.

Interprets "Commander-in-Chief."

Harry Merrifield of Port Hope, called by Mr. Tilley, counsel for the plaintiff, testified that he had served the notices in question on the defendants.

Ralph Hodgson, Registrar of Deeds for the East Riding of the County of Durham, stated in reply to Mr. Tilley's questioning that he had read the article in The Port Hope Guide, and at the time had taken "Commander-in-Chief" to mean General Currie, "and no other."

Three Defence Witnesses Take Stand In Currie Libel Suit at Cobourg Monday

W. T. R. Preston Will Conduct Own Defence While Frank Regan Acts For F.W. Wilson--Former Soldiers Testify and Tell of Final Battle.

Three defence witnesses testified in the celebrated $50,000 libel suit instituted against F. W. Wilson of the Port Hope Guide and W. T. R. Preston by General Sir Arthur Currie, Canadian Corps Commander, which opened at the Cobourg spring assizes Monday afternoon before Mr. Justice Rose of Toronto. The action was commenced on account of a newspaper article alleged to have been written by W. T. R. Preston and which appeared in the Guide last June and which charged in effect that in the taking of Mons. Armistice Day, November 11th, 1918, much human life had been deliberately wasted for the glorification of the Canadian Headquarters Staff.

At the opening of the trial Frank Regan, K.C., of Toronto, counsel for the defendants intimated that W. T. R. Preston would conduct his own defence in the libel action against himself and F. W. Wilson.

Huycke, farmer, Percy Township; James Swarbrick, miller, Clarke Township; Henry W. Patterson, farmer, Cavan Township; Geo. F. Morincy, agent, Alnwick; John A. Winfield, musician, Port Hope; W. T. Duncan, gardener, Seymour Township; William J. Norman, gunner, farmer, Percy Township; Herbert F. Souch, farmer, Clarke Township and George Anderson, gentleman, Cobourg.

Col. Orde is Called

Called by Mr. Regan, for the defence, Col. Orde, Judge Advocate-General, stated that he appeared as the representative of the Minister of National Defence.

"Have you brought with you any documents in response to a subpoena?"

"You don't mean to say," said Mr. Regan "that Sir Arthur Currie was the whole corps?"

"He was part and parcel of it," said the witness.

Mr. Regan produced a copy of the Field Service Regulations and interrogated witness on army terms, but the latter stuck firmly to his contention that the word "Commander-in-Chief" as carried in The Guide's article could mean no other than Sir Arthur Currie.

At the outset of the defence Mr. Regan stated that defendants had subpoenaed the Minister of Defence to produce certain records from the department and the Deputy Minister had replied that such papers would be produced if it was considered that it was in the public interest. "In accordance with that statement," he continued, "the government have sent three representatives today, headed by Colonel Orde, Judge Advocate-General, with part of the documents under subpoena. I have not seen them, and it is necessary for me to see them in order to extract from them the ones that I require. I did not have an opportunity. The Deputy Minister would not allow me the privilege of inspecting these documents in Ottawa, or give me copies of them, or allow me to get them without Mr. Tilley's consent."

Mr. Tilley said he had heard nothing about it. He was instructed that Mr. Hall of the counsel for the defence was in Ottawa for weeks.

Mr. Regan said he himself had an interview with the Deputy Minister, who on April 10 informed him by letter that if counsel for plaintiff agreed to him (Mr. Regan) being allowed a copy of a certain list of documents which he had asked for by subpoena or to copy certain of these documents, the department would provide the necessary facilities. The letter stated that the same applied to the plaintiff, the list to be agreed upon by each counsel.

Wants Files Accessible

"It took the government some weeks to go that far," Mr. Regan said. "The men," he continued, were present in court with the documents, and he wished to put them in, with the understanding that they be placed in a room in the Court House to which he and Mr. Tilley would have access and that certified copies be made for use as exhibits. "The government I think," said he, "are taking the position that they don't care to leave the original files, and I, of course, agree."

Mr. Regan complained that defendants were in a position different from plaintiff. After the action started, plaintiff went to Ottawa and was given exactly what he asked for he insisted.

Mr. Tilley--You were given the same.

"No," said Mr. Regan. "When I went and asked for something the defendants were refused by the Deputy Minister." Counsel said that subsequently he received a copy of the documents already sent to the plaintiff. He suggested that the representatives of the government be put in the box and that arrangements be made to put in copies of documents relative to the issue.

After further discussion, Justice Rose demurred to blindly ordering the representatives of the department to hand over these papers, adding: "As they are called and asked for the documents, I shall bear, no doubt, what they say about producing them. I am not in a position now to give any instructions."

na served on the Minister?" asked Mr. Regan.
"We have brought with us a large number of documents, some of which will be produced in their entirety, others of which cannot, for reasons of State, be disclosed. The Minister is of the opinion that the disclosure of a number of these documents in their entirety and indiscriminately would be contrary to the public interest," replied Colonel Orde.

These latter included all State documents and all those subject to privilege, if in the opinion of the head of the department concerned, they should not be disclosed for the reasons stated. "On the other hand," Col. Orde proceeded, "the department recognizes that, although this absolute privilege exists, the refusal to produce all the documents might hamper the administration of justice." Witness explained that, subject to qualification, operation orders of the Army Corps, division brigade and battalion would not be separated from the volumes in which they were bound without destroying the value of the books, which contained much secret information on military operations, having nothing to do with the present libel action.

"Would you be willing if the Court permits it, to have certified copies made?"
"Yes. We cannot allow these documents and books to leave our possession."
Witness further said that certain war diaries, reports, returns, telegrams, personal files and correspondence contained information of some specific fact or facts relative to the issue, and if counsel would inform him or the other officers of the department present of any such fact or facts on which they desired information, the relevant portions would be extracted.

Mr. Regan respectfully suggested that Col. Orde be requested to make copies of documents which he or Mr. Tilley required.
Justice Rose—I won't order him to make a copy of anything. He says he will give facilities for making copies of certain things. If he gives these facilities, well and good, I will not order the government to make copies of documents, nor will I order Col. Orde to permit inspection of any documents, which he, under the authority of the Minister, says he cannot, having regard to the public interest.

Mr. Regan—It is perfectly all right with me. On the other hand, I would like to get copies of those whose production he does not object to, if any way can be suggested.

Certain Orders Available
Witness said that either counsel could have copies of certain operation orders.

Mr. Regan pointed out that defendants were not military. "The plaintiff is," he stressed. "The plaintiff went to Ottawa and got from the Minister of National Defense, copies of documents which he required for use in the present action of his claim before the court. There was no question then about public interest or taking the formal position the department is now taking. Now the defendants come along, and as a result of information received and of examination for discovery they are of the opinion that certain other documents ought to be produced. They feel that there are in existence in the department in Ottawa, documents which will substantiate the position that they take. We don't know how to refer to the documents in a technical sense in order to enable Col. Orde to put his fingers on a particular document. We don't know the numbers of the orders."

Justice Rose had no doubt that if Col. Orde were asked if a document existed reporting upon or ordering a particular action upon a particular day he would give the information and would also state whether he would produce it.

Col. Orde—Perfectly right, my Lord. We are perfectly willing to assist either party in this way.
Mr. Regan—I just wanted to understand the situation. That's all.
His Lordship—Well, it ought to be plain enough to you now.

L. J. Hagey, Librarian of the Globe, Toronto, on taking the stand was called upon by Mr. Regan to produce a copy of the Globe in which there appeared a despatch giving details of the unveiling of a plaque at Mons. This despatch, it was alleged, had given rise to the article in The Port Hope Guide.

A somewhat lengthy examination followed, in the course of which Mr. Hagey defined that the despatch referred to was a Canadian Press despatch and at the time it was received by Mr. Andrew Clarke, News Editor who was responsible for cable advices.

Mr. Regan—Is he with the Globe now?
Mr. Hagey—Yes.

Following further examination, Mr. Justice Rose queried witness as to whether The Globe had received that particular despatch on the date "of that paper," the answer being in the affirmative.

Former Signaller on Stand
Harold V. Fox, Ontario street, Port Hope, former signaller with the 21st Canadian Battalion, had just returned to his unit from hospital, he told the court, when it attacked east of Mons at dawn of Nov. 10. A private (Sullivan) was killed that day. There was a number of wounded, he said, but did not know their names. At 7.30 o'clock the morning of Nov. 11, the word had come along that fighting would cease at 11 o'clock.

"I went into Mons on Nov. 11," he said, "although I had no official authority to go there."
"Did you see any dead in Mons or around Mons?" asked Mr. Regan.
Witness said that he had passed the bodies of half a dozen Third Division men.

"Where were they?" asked Mr. Regan.
"Right where they fell," said the witness. "Where they were killed the night before."

"Odd Shell" sails in Under Mr. Regan's examination witness said that there was still some fighting going on in Mons at that time—between 8 and 9 o'clock. The "odd shell was sailing in," and there were machine guns firing to the north of the city.

"Sir Arthur has sworn," stated Mr. Regan, "that there was no man killed on the eleventh."
"He did not say that," interrupted Mr. Tilley.
"That there was no man killed on the last day of the war, then," Mr. Regan said.
"He didn't say that," declared Mr. Tilley.

"Well, we'll see," said Mr. Regan, and he read from the examination for discovery. On first questioning at the examination General Currie had stated that no man had been killed, but subsequently had added, "to my knowledge."

Killed on Eleventh, he Says
Returning to the subject of the men Signaller Fox had seen by the roadside, Mr. Regan drew from the witness the declaration that these "dead" had been killed between 10 o'clock the night of the tenth and 8 o'clock the morning of the eleventh.

"Then," he added, "these men were killed on the eleventh?"
Mr. Tilley strenuously objected to Mr. Regan leading his witness into inference evidence, and his objection was upheld by the Court.

Under cross examination by Mr. Tilley, the witness said his reason for believing that these men were not killed until after 10 o'clock the night of the tenth was that there were no Canadians "up to Mons" before that time. "The Germans," he said, "occupied the territory."
"How do you know the Germans occupied the territory?" Mr. Tilley asked.

"We could see their machine guns firing," replied the witness.
"Where were you up to 10 o'clock on the tenth?"
"We were going over."
"How close were you to Mons?"
"A mile or so away."
"Down to what time were the Germans firing on the tenth?"
"All night."

Father Gives Evidence
Edwin Joyce, was the next witness. Mr. Joyce had a son, Corporal

Fred H. Joyce, killed with the 20th Battalion on the eleventh.
"You don't know that," said Mr. Justice Rose.

Mr. Regan produced a photograph which witness identified as a likeness of his dead boy. He asked permission to file it as an exhibit. Mr. Tilley objected and the Court could see no reason for it being filed.

"I thought," said Mr. Regan, "the jury might like to have a look at one man who was killed on the eleventh."
A letter was then produced by Mr. Regan, which was written by the Chaplain at Aubercourt, where Corporal Joyce had died. Mr. Tilley objected to it being filed as an exhibit if it made any reference to the hour of death.

"I don't see why," said Mr. Regan heatedly. "We're going to meet in this case with a whole battalion of officers who will prove that nobody did die."
Mr. Tilley read the Chaplain's letter and consented to it being filed. It could not, however, in his opinion, add any information to the case.

Cross examined by Mr. Tilley, the witness admitted that he was relying solely on information from others as to how and when his son had died.

Machine Gun Victim

Joseph Smith, another 20th Battalion man, who had enlisted with Joyce, gave evidence regarding the latter's wounds. He had seen him in the battalion aid post. He had been hit by 13 machine gun bullets.

"I asked him," said witness, "how he was doing, and he had replied, 'No good.'"
Witness said that his battalion was on the right of Mons.

"How far from Mons?" asked Mr. Regan.
"I don't know" was the reply. "When you're advancing day in and day out you can't tell distances."

Early the morning of the eleventh, he said, there was "lots of machine gun fire." Later in the day he had gone into Mons. He saw no dead there or on the way back.

Cross-examined by Mr. Tilley, the witness did not know how long Joyce had been at the dressing station before he saw him.
Charles Leslie of the 3rd Machine Gun Battalion was called by the defence to give evidence concerning a military funeral of Canadian dead which he had seen on the streets of Mons on Nov. 13.

"Killed where?" asked Mr. Regan.
"Wait, wait," objected his Lordship.

Picture of Funeral

Mr. Regan banded witness a picture and asked him if it were "a good picture" of the funeral.

"Are we concerned whether this is a good picture or not?" protested Mr. Tilley. "Are the records to be encumbered with documents that have really little bearing on this case?"

Mr. Justice Rose studied the photograph and then permitted it to be filed, with a "I don't see how we can very well exclude."
Leslie told the court that his company's objective was the eastern side of Mons. They had "hopped off" at 5 o'clock on the morning of the eleventh. He had not seen any Canadian dead in the city, but on the way up to the assembly line he had seen four bodies. For a while, during the advance, his company had had to duck in doorways from machine gun fire and "throw ourselves on our stomachs" to escape the odd shell. Then things had quieted down. Their objective was reached about 9.30. An hour later Colonel Balfour assembled the troops in the square and read to them the order for cessation of hostilities.

"What was the common talk among officers and men and the civilian population of Mons about these soldiers being killed?" asked Mr. Regan.
"No, no, no," objected his Lordship and the interrogation went no further.

Cross-examined by Mr. Tilley, the witness said that as far as he knew, no man of his unit had been killed in the advance of the final morning.

It looks like a long case, the action. Neither counsel for the plaintiff nor for the defendants had much of an idea this afternoon as to when it might wind up, Mr. Justice Rose of the Supreme Court, who is presiding over the case, has set 9.30 as the hour to go to work each morning and 6 o'clock as quitting time.

THE GUIDE STORY

Olwen's eyes began to look troubled. "She did not know I was there. I was going to Wood's cottage about the boy's start for that training ship I told you about the other day, and as I passed, I looked in at the window for the firelight was bright and the blind was not drawn. There sat Miss Firefly in a big armchair by the fire, the youngest Wood cuddled up in her arms, as if he had known her all his life, while she was evidently listening with great interest to Mrs. Wood's tearful lamentations over what she calls the approaching exile of that young scamp Jack. Why did she do it? Was it a whim? Was she playing acting, as she sometimes terms humming, or was it a touch of genuine kindness of heart? I don't know, neither do you; therefore I say we do not yet understand Miss Firefly Fenton."

"Perhaps, as you say, neither of us understands her yet," Olwen said. "But why did she never say a word about knowing the Woods? I was telling her about them yesterday morning, and of how much you were doing for the boy."

There was seemingly some charm about that dim corner of the long drawing room, in which it was clearly impossible to study a theatrical cast, though there was plenty of light at the farther end where Miss Granby sat, for the two stood silent for a few seconds, busy with their own thoughts.

"What has been wrong with you lately, Miss Ransome?" John asked quietly. "You must forgive my trained eyes for having discovered that you are looking fagged and spiritless."
"I feel fagged, and dull, and moody," answered the girl despondently. "In this place there is nothing to do. I don't care for any of the people, and I suppose I miss the Wiseman girls and the excitement of having to economize and contrive for even a new hat. I must be very unimagined, or easily satisfied in one way, for now that I have got a comfortable carriage for Aunt Charity's use I can't find any more things that I want to buy. To my way of thinking, it is deadly dull down here, but how can I move up to London? It would be brutality to drag Aunt Charity there yet, though I feel that I'm pining for town life. I suppose I am not suited to the country."
"You are atrociously lazy," said the doctor, who, in dealing with Olwen, had never minced his words. "You are dull too. What girl would not be with no occupation, no hobbies, no interests of any sort? Why don't you bustle about and find some avocation into which you can throw your heart and mind? There must be something, for you have intellect and energy, and, as you said once, you have never even known what it was to be ill. It's that confounded money of yours. It threatens to hang round your neck like a dead weight and turn you into a drone, and a miserable one into the bargain. You would be far happier if you were earning your own living."
"But I don't want to do that," said Olwen hastily, scenting the reopening of an old subject of dispute. "It is very hard not to be able to have a comfortable grumble without being taken so literally! I like my wealth, thank you, and I would rather be rich and dull than poor and worked to death. It would be all right if I knew more people, I could then fill this huge barracks with guests, but I don't know any one to ask except the Wisemans, and now that they are working night and day to get Nan's trousseau all ready for India, they will not come."

While Olwen had been speaking she had gradually drawn within the radiance of the tall lamp that stood beside Miss Granby's table, John recognized the hint to close the interview.
"Well," he said, "whatever your opinion on the matter is, I own that I would rather have penniless Olwen Ransome for my friend than the heiress—which may sound rude, but is not intentional. As you are dull, why don't you trot round and see some of my poor folk, and agitate for me on the water question? If something is not done soon to get a proper supply there will be a bad epidemic."

Olwen hesitated, then she looked up at him.
"Do you know that in some quarters, you are making yourself unpopular, Doctor Forrester?"
"Ah, it has come round to your ears, has it?" A light came into the doctor's eyes. "Yes, I know, and it can't be helped. Men who will go round investigating abuses that affect the interests of other people are bound to make enemies. It is only just beginning—the fight as well as the unpopularity. In the end I shall have my own way, but before success is assured, I may go under. I hear that a friendly hand has already been held out to a new man and a hint given that it might be worth his while to settle at Woodlands, but the future will decide which wins."

Leafs Win Slugging Bee

There was all kinds of free and fancy hitting in the final exhibition game of the Leafs' training trip and the Class C Patriots nearly held their own with their more exalted rivals in the baseball scale. The score was 15 to 10 in the tourists' favor but the margin in favor of the winners might have been much larger if they had played out the string. They didn't persevere after they had amassed a safe lead, and the Patriots came along with a rally at the finish as a consequence.

Nine home runs were chalked up during the festivities and two baggers galore rattled off the bats of the opposing gladiators. Five of the circuit clouts were gathered in by the Leafs, Rabbitt getting two, and Alexander, Webb and Burke one each. LIGHTNING RODS ARE PROTECTION

Proper Installation of Equipment Essential—Alberta Proposes to Enact Draconic Legislation

The irresponsible seller of lightning rods is finding that the field for his activities is being narrowed down by restrictive legislation in various provinces. There is under consideration by the Alberta legislature at the present time a bill to regulate the sale and installation of lightning protectors. It is proposed that licensees be given to parties who will furnish a bond of five thousand dollars to the government. It is further stipulated, that when property is damaged by lightning after being fitted with rods the agent shall indemnify the owner.

If there is a degree of severity in these regulations it may be attributed to the swindling operations of agents in the earlier years before the principles of lightning protection were well understood. Experience in Ontario over a considerable period have shown that security can be obtained by rods properly installed. Manufacturers know what materials are good conductors and by following correct rules in the placing of rods can furnish almost one hundred per cent immunity. It follows that they should take more of the responsibility for effective working of the rods.

INFLUENZA GERM STILL BAFFLING

Fastest Traveller of Respiratory Diseases, It is Not Always Recognizable

Influenza is the swiftest traveler of the respiratory diseases. Before the epidemic of 1918 medical authorities believed influenza a specific, well defined disease. Studies made during and since that epidemic lead several authorities to believe that it is caused by a group of related germs and not by one particular germ. Experiments of the public health service led to the conclusion that diagnosis of influenza by superficial examination is not trustworthy. There is no standard by which the infection may be recognized. Until the cause of influenza is discovered the relation between it and catarrh, grip and common colds that cannot be known definitely.

It is probable that agents which cause influenza come from the nose and throat of infected persons. Some physicians believe that hand to mouth infection and indirect contact are the principal ways in which the disease is spread. So far as is known, water, milk and food do not carry the infection, although utensils of the dining table probably do spread influenza.

Keeping the general health at a high standard and avoidance of contact with infected persons are the best preventive measures.

Clean, pasteurized milk, hot lemonade, oranges and grapefruit are good anti-grip substances, while alcoholic drinks should be avoided.

If a person suspects he has the disease he should go to bed at once and call a reputed physician. If it turns out to be only a common cold, staying in bed is the best treatment for it. The patient should stay in bed at least forty eight hours after he thinks he is well. Pneumonia and bronchitis are frequent complications of influenza. Sometimes neuritis is common.

USED GOOD CARS

Do you buy advertised goods?

Of course you do; everybody does. Just run over in your mind the various articles that you have purchased in the last week. How about foods? Your breakfast fruits, cereals and bacon are all advertised. Probably that is how you first came to know of them—through advertising. Probably the shoes you are wearing, or the dress or suit you have on are equally well known advertised makes and you are proud of them. In the home. On the floor are rugs and linoleum—the better wearing kinds are extensively advertised. What about the kitchen? Aluminum ware, gas ranges, hot water heaters, dish and clothes washers, cooking utensils of all kinds—practically everything you use is advertised. You buy advertised products because you have confidence in them. You know that a manufacturer cannot afford to advertise shoddy or unworthy merchandise. Advertising is a form of insurance. It gives you a feeling of perfect confidence and safety when you ask for an advertised brand, for you know that you will get the quality and the service you expect. The name is the guarantee. The more you read advertising the more you will know about human progress. You will become well posted in almost every line of human endeavor and a canny judge of values. To read advertisements is a fine habit. Cultivate it.

Read the advertisements and buy the advertised goods. They are the safest investment.

Seventy Members of Lathers' Union Call Strike On Saturday

About seventy men are out of work as a result of the strike of Toronto members of the lather's union. The decision to strike for a five-day week and a daily wage of $12 was made, following receipt of information that the contractors had refused to negotiate with the union.

"We expect to get our demand," an official of the union said. "We are worth as much as the plasterers and there is work for us in many parts of America and if we cannot get the wages we demand here we can go else where."

The strike only affects the metal lathers, who are allied with the wood lathers.

CROSS COUNTRY MARATHON

Gavuzzi of Southampton Lengthens Lead In Derby

Forty-three days out of Los Angeles and with approximately half of the distance to New York covered the seventy odd cross country marathoners camped at Tulsa, Okla., last night with Peter Gavuzzi, Southampton, England, winner of Monday's lap from Bristol. He is also the leader in elapsed time.

Little more than a day away from Claremore, his home town, Andrew Payne, Oklahoma's entrant, was unable to meet the Britisher's challenge and fell more than an hour behind in elapsed time. Gavuzzi seized the leadership Sunday after Payne had held it since the runners entered the state a week ago.

Gavuzzi ground out the 41.7 miles in 4 hours 47 minutes, his elapsed time being 270.41.05. Payne finished third in 5.39.58, with elapsed time of 271.47.29. Giusto Umek, Italian champion, came in second in 5.28.69 his elapsed time being 324.37.50.

Mrs. T. E. Sleeman, Port Hope East, has returned home after spending a few days with her daughters and sons in Oshawa.

Mr. J. B. Baulch and bride have returned from their honeymoon and have taken up their residence on the Lakeshore Road.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Rorke and family of Toronto, and Miss Laura E. Rorke of the teaching staff of the Glebe Collegiate, Ottawa, spent the Easter holidays with their mother, Mrs. E. H. Rorke, Margaret St.

Mr. F. A. Brisco of the Advertiser, Armstrong, B.C., who is visiting his nephew, Mr. R. T. Davison at Welcome and other relatives in his native county, called on the Guide and seemed pleased with our up-to-date plant.

LOSSES CAUSED BY FARM PESTS

European Corn Borer Appears In Quebec

The latest report of the division of field crop and garden insects gives an account of pests that have been, and are likely to continue to be, particularly troublesome. The European corn borer, the pest making its appearance in Quebec caused perhaps the most concern. Officers of the entomological branch are assisting the provincial departments of agriculture in a campaign of education, particularly in sections just invaded. A wide distribution of warning posters and illustrated charts is one means of meeting the danger, and assistance is also given at farmers' meetings.

The infestation in Ontario has seriously increased, particularly in the southwestern part of the province. Control measures, as required under the regulations of the provincial Corn Borer Act, are imposed in the counties most severely affected. In the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan the wheat-stem sawfly and several species of wireworm cause severe losses. The former has spread into much new territory, and in Saskatchewan has caused a loss estimated at $12,000,000. The wireworms, are as a class, considered second in destructiveness in the prairie provinces. They are the cause of much loss and some investigational work on the biology of these insects was conducted in 1926 and 1927.

In British Columbia the Colorado potato beetle has extended its spread and now occurs in areas where it was hitherto unknown. Efforts were instituted to prevent its further spread, by an active campaign of control directed by the officers of the division with the close co-operation of provincial officials. In this same province grasshoppers continue to be numerous, being particularly active and destructive in the northern part of the dry interior. Control operations were conducted co-operatively and a very successful campaign was thus carried out.

ORCHESTRA AT ROYAL THEATRE

Al Stagg's Capitoliens Will Furnish Special Music Tomorrow Night

A rollicking college photoplay promises delightful entertainment and with an orchestra accompaniment by the Capitoliens it is irresistible. For tomorrow the screen attraction at the Royal Theatre is Marion Davies in her greatest comedy drama, "The Fair Co-Ed," for which the management have engaged Al Stagg's popular orchestra to provide suitably syncopated music. The public say they don't get enough of this talented organization in the Capitolian revues, so their playing tomorrow from eight o'clock to ten should meet a real demand. Popular music as only the Capitoliens can play it, plus a hilariously funny photoplay and selected short subjects will provide an evening's entertainment too good to miss.

"Land of Hope and Glory" There was an exceptionally large audience last night for the British production "Land of Hope and Glory" which—to judge from the comments heard after the show—met with hearty approval. It is entirely out of the ordinary and has the patriotic appeal which, unfortunately, is all too rare in our motion pictures.

GO WEST THIS SUMMER ON THE "CONFEDERATION"

If you are going to visit Western Canada this summer, plan to travel on the "Confederation," the Canadian National de luxe train between Toronto and Vancouver, which will commence service again on May 19. This train, first established last summer and named in view of the national celebration of the Diamond Jubilee of the Dominion, proved instantly popular with the travelling public, and will undoubtedly be equally popular, and deservedly so, this year.

The equipment of the "Confederation" of all-steel construction, will include compartment-observation-library-buffet car (radio equipped) standard and tourist sleeping cars, dining car and coaches, while the route via Sudbury, Winnipeg, Brandon, Regina, Saskatoon, Edmonton and Jasper will provide excellent additional service to and from all these points.

Tickets and further information from any Canadian National Agent.
