

T.C.S. CRICKETERS ARE AT PRACTICE

Large Number of Players Available for Prep. School Eleven

With the advent of dry weather, outdoor sports have been taken up at the Trinity College School, now located in the Woodstock College buildings. A large group of boys practiced at the cricket net Tuesday afternoon, getting into condition for the opening of the season. The school is represented in the Little Big Four League with Ridley College, Upper Canada College and St. Andrew's College providing the opposition. The following schedule of the games has been arranged to date:

May 24—Toronto Cricket Club at Woodstock; June 2—St. Andrew's College at Aurora; June 9—Upper Canada College at Woodstock; June 12—Ridley College at Toronto.

Other games are expected to be arranged in the near future. As soon as the members of the Woodstock Cricket Club are ready to start practice the college boys will join with them in a series of pre-season exhibition games, which will be highly beneficial to both teams. It is hardly likely that any of the students will be able to play on the Woodstock Cricket Club teams, as they will be away from school at the end of June, but the Woodstock

DR. G. A. DICKINSON PASSED AWAY

M.O.H. of Port Hope Died This Morning After Lingered Illness

The death occurred at his late residence, Walton street, at 9.45 this morning, of Dr. George A. Dickinson, Medical Health Officer of Port Hope. Deceased had been suffering from a lingering illness for the past five months and he gradually weakened until death ensued today.

The late Dr. Dickinson was 63 years of age and was widely known in this district. He was highly regarded as a member of the medical fraternity and his passing is much regretted. He was a life member of Ontario Masonic Lodge A.F. & A.M. No. 26.

Left to mourn his passing are his widow, whose maiden name was Maggie Hogg, one daughter, Jean, at home and two sons, Bianco G. C. Dickinson of Alaska, D.C. and Arthur Dickinson of Warroad, Minn. The funeral, which will be private, will be held from his late residence, on Friday afternoon at 2.30 under Masonic auspices. Interment will be at Welcome Cemetery.

Those of Tuberculosis Specially Susceptible—High Voltage Affair Designed in Paris

The Academy of Science at Paris learned Tuesday of the invention of a high voltage electric lamp, emitting rays surpassing violet rays. The lamp was tested in the laboratories of the faculty of medicine. Its rays caused instant destruction of numerous microbes, principally those causing tuberculosis.

WEDDING BELLS

TAYLOR-BEBEE

A pretty Easter wedding took place on Wednesday, April 11th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Bebee, Morrish, when their only daughter Bernice Lucinda, became the bride of Mr. Franklin Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Taylor, Quay's. The bride, who was unattended, wore a dress of peach georgette crepe, beaded in silver, wreath of orange blossoms and tulle and carried a bouquet of roses and sweet peas. Her only ornament was a silver bracelet the gift of the groom. She entered the living room, which was decorated with evergreens, spring flowers and streamers, to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March as played by Miss Mary Irwin. After the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. D. R. Clare of Norham, the guests retired to the dining room where a dainty luncheon was served by three girl friends of the bride.

Amid showers of confetti and good wishes the happy young couple left for a brief honeymoon trip to Rochester. The bride's going-away costume was a powder blue crepe dress and sand tricotine coat, with hat and hose to match.

IROQUOIS DANCE WELL ATTENDED

Mr. and Mrs. Misener Were the Winners of Twenty-Three Piece Set of China

Throngs of lovers of the terpsichorean art attended the dance at the Town Hall Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Port Hope Iroquois Club and many visitors from out of town attended.

The following orchestra provided music for the evening—Mrs. E. B. Lingard, Chas. Doney, Al Stag, Albert Mann and P. Hawthorne, while Messrs McDonald and Dodge called off.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Misener were the winners of the twenty-three piece china set for the lucky number dance.

WELCOME NOTES

The services in the United Church at Welcome on Sunday last were of a special nature. In the morning a reception service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. E. Honey, in which twenty new members were received into the church. Of these the following seven names transferred from other churches: Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Austin, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bamsey, Messrs Waiter and James Reynolds and Mr. Lewis Crossley and thirteen young people from the Sunday school were received into full membership on profession of faith—Helen Bosnell, Irene Martin, Louise Pearce, Ruth Symons, Marion Martyn, Marie Grice, Mildred Kelly, Walter Kelly, Harold Symons, Allan Bamsey, Wilbur Bamsey, Roy Chestnut and Floyd Honey.

In the afternoon the session of the Sunday school was favored by having with them, Mr. R. J. Rowe, President of the Durham Temperance organization, who gave an interesting and helpful report of the recent temperance convention held in Toronto.

The regular meeting of the Auxiliary of the W.M.S. was held on Thursday last in the basement of the church. An interesting Easter program was presented by Group H. under the leadership of Mrs. C. J. Staples.

[School] reopened on Monday of this week with an increase of 11 names on the roll. This was made up of three newcomers to the section and the following eight beginners who have our best wishes for a successful school career: Helen Kellogg, Esther Bamsey, Margaret Black, Mary Andrus, Paul Symons, Allan White, Vernon White and Gordon Cotter.

The Y.P.L. meeting on Thursday night last took the form of a social evening, it being the conclusion of an attendance contest which has been conducted by the League during the winter months and it ended with the "blue" side, under the leadership of Mrs. A. Lewis and Miss Eva Pearce winning out by a margin of 24. The leaders of the losers were Miss Irene Martin and Mr. J. Reynolds, who, with their helpers freely demonstrated their willingness to pay the price of losing the contest. Games and contests were provided after which candy and refreshments were served, bringing to a close a very happy social evening.

PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Crossley, and son Kelvin, were the guests of his father, Mr. Lewis Crossley during Easter week.

Mr. Austin Chestnut of Toronto, spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Will Chestnut.

Mrs. Frank Bamsey and daughter Esther, spent a few days in Toronto last week.

Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Martin and daughters Florence, Carol and Joy, of Stratford, spent Sunday with his mother, Mrs. G. H. Martin.

Mrs. J. A. Rorke and children, Betty and Brian, are visiting at the home of Mrs. E. H. Martyn.

FINED $250

Remanded until Tuesday morning in Peterboro court, after facing a charge of having liquor without a permit, James Akey of Peterboro, who was committed for trial on a perjury count in Port Hope court last week, appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley in Peterboro police court and within a few minutes heard imposed upon him a $250 fine, plus $47.15 costs, with one month at hard labor in the common jail as an alternative. His Worship's judgment, as given the court, came after a verbal review of the case during which he took cognizance of the wordings in the statutes which determined just what may be considered a private residence, as well as the possibility of ownership.

J. A. O'Brien, appearing for Mr. Akey, immediately gave notice of appeal.

Judge Threatens Witness With Arrest In Libel Action Hearing at Cobourg

Several Witnesses Take Stand at Cobourg Spring Assizes—War Diary of Brigade is Different From Other Records of Casualties, Regan Claims at Trial.

The feature of the Tuesday afternoon session of the $50,000 libel action launched against F. W. Wilson and W. T. R. Preston by Sir Arthur Currie now being heard at Cobourg was the appearance of Colonel John A. Currie, who commanded the 15th Overseas Battalion.

There was quite a stir when his name was called. Col. Currie stated that he had been connected with the militia since 1892, and was an original member of the 48th Highlanders. He joined for service overseas on Aug. 12, 1914. He volunteered and was accepted by Gen. Sir Sam Hughes.

"I would not take a staff appointment, although I was offered one, because I wanted to get to France for otherwise I might have been left in London," said Col. Currie.

"You knew General Sir Arthur Currie?"

"Yes, he was in command of the Second Brigade. I was in command of my unit in the 3rd or Highland Brigade under Gen. Turner."

Col. Currie said he remembered the battle of St. Julian in 1915.

"Have we not enough to do with Mons?" asked Mr. Tilley.

Mr. Regan pointed out that the article dealt with the enormous loss of life that took place in the war, through the negligence of plaintiff.

Mr. Tilley—The difference is that at Mons the waste of life was deliberate and useless and due to the plaintiff.

Mr. Regan said he hoped to establish the fact that plaintiff's conduct was such that it did not reflect any credit or honor on him.

"It was at this battle that the story got out—Mr. Regan was proceeding to say when he was interrupted by the judge who said it would be enough to say that the story was derogatory.

Mr. Regan—It got out on the floor of the House of Commons. If plaintiff's general character is in issue, proof must necessarily be received as to what his general character is or is not.

"Possibly his reputation is in issue," said Mr. Justice Rose, "but whether we are going to try here in this court the question of whether good judgment was shown at the second battle of Ypres, I doubt if we are not getting beyond our own depths. I hardly imagine the jury feels competent—I know I am not—to decide upon such evidence as can be produced here, whether the orders for which plaintiff was responsible were wise or not."

His Lordship could not see the relevancy of the account of the second battle of Ypres, and asked to what issue the evidence was to be directed.

Mr. Regan—I want to have evidence as to Sir Arthur's character. His Lordship—I suppose there was waste of human life and will always be so until commanders are omniscient.

"Do not answer this next question," said his Lordship.

Col. Currie—I understand, sir, but it is very hard after all these years not to be able to say something in my own behalf.

Justice Rose—You are not being tried.

Col. John A. Currie, M.P.P. for Toronto-St. Patrick and first wartime Commander of the 15th Canadian Battalion came within an inch of being arrested for contempt of court.

said the shells were from the Germans.

W. R. Teddman, who was an Acting Company Sergeant-Major with the 52nd Battalion of the 3rd Division, said he saw the bodies of three or four 42nd Montreal Highlanders in Mons late in the afternoon of Nov. 11. He identified them by their kilts and by their battle patches. Teddman's outfit, he stated, was at Wasmuel, the night of the tenth. There was considerable shell fire that night the impression among "the troops" being that "Heinle" was digging in for a final "stand-to."

Early on the morning of the 11th he received instructions to parade B Company to the stores for bombs and extra ammunition, the mission of his unit being to go into Mons and "go through" the 7th Brigade already there. But about 10.15 the word came down the line that fighting would cease at eleven. Later, he picked out a composite platoon which went into the city and was reviewed by Sir Arthur Currie and the Headquarters Staff.

"Was the order to pick out a platoon given before eleven?" asked Mr. Regan.

"After eleven," the witness said. "Before dinner or after?"

"After."

Mr. Teddman said he could not see a reason why the dead men who had been killed on the tenth should be left lying on the roadside until the eleventh.

Triumph, He Says

The Canadians' entry into Mons had been in every sense a triumphant one. They were accepted by the people as deliverers from German oppression. The people were exuberant. He thought that surely the Belgian populace would have buried the dead soldiers had they been killed on the tenth. Of course, it was only his opinion, he said.

Mr. Regan asked the witness if he had read any articles about the prospects of an armistice which had appeared in English papers.

"No, no, no," objected Justice Rose.

"We are concerned with the Port Hope Guide" interpolated Mr. Tilley. "That's the only one."

Only Scattered Houses

Witness told the court that there were only scattered houses along the street where he had seen the bodies. "Were the houses occupied?" inquired Mr. Tilley. Witness could not say.

"Then there may have been no inhabitants there on the tenth to pick up the bodies and bury them," said Mr. Tilley. Witness agreed.

Re-examining witness, Mr. Regan, asked what was happening in Mons on the tenth.

"How can he tell that?" put in Mr. Tilley. "How does he know?"

"I'm telling what all the world knows," said Mr. Regan.

"Then the jury knows without going any further," smiled Mr. Tilley.

R. W. Wilson, formerly with the Transport Section of the "Princess Pat" and now an accountant in Toronto, told of being wounded by a shell in Jemappes, the night of the tenth. Shelling, he said had been heavier than usual that night. He was now a 70 per cent disability. Two other men had been "blighted" by the same "crump" but none had been killed.

More argument followed, grammatical construction and its proper use being called into account. In reading the offending paragraph about "The Commander-in-Chief," Mr. Regan said:

"Whoever that was, he said that General Currie had stated in the examination for discovery that Foch was responsible for the last order. Well, then, Foch was responsible..."

"For glorifying Canadian Headquarters," smiled Mr. Justice Rose. "Oh, there will be plenty of evidence before this case is finished," said Mr. Regan "to show that this idea of capturing Mons was peddled around a long time before it happened."

He thought that The London Times should be allowed to be read to show that the tone of their peace negotiations were reflected in the attitude of the man who wrote the alleged libellous statement in The Port Hope Guide, Mr. Justice Rose, however, refused to admit the files as evidence.

John McKay, signaller with the 2nd Machine Gun Battalion, said that at 11 o'clock, the morning of the Armistice, he had been ordered to be ready with two other signallers to open up communications into Mons by 11 o'clock. At that time his unit was from 12 to 14 miles from the city. On the way up, he had met a padre who had said, "Good morning, boys."

Padre Tells Good News

"Good morning, padre," they had replied.

"Have you heard the good news?" the padre had asked.

"What is it?" they had asked. "The Armistice is to be signed at 11 o'clock."

"I hope it is true," McKay had said.

"God grant it is," the padre had replied.

In Mons that day an old Belgian had directed their attention to a shed in which were five bodies, 3 of Canadians and two Germans. They were ready for burial with white wooden boxes standing near by. A day or so later, when he passed the spot he found the Germans' bodies still there, but found the Canadians had been removed.

Albert Mason of York County, who is doing market gardening now instead of the job of a Company Sergeant Major with the 20th Battalion, said he was with the details of his unit when he heard of the armistice. That was about 10.30 o'clock the morning of the eleventh. "I immediately dropped my kit and went into Mons," he said.

Saw Three Dead On the way he spotted three dead. One, he was sure, was a Princess Pat. On their bodies the civilians had placed flowers. He was absolutely certain the bodies were in Mons proper. The men had either been killed there where they lay or further forward in the city. "For," he added, "bodies are usually carried back—not toward the enemy."

Several days before the armistice he had been with either Lieutenant Mair, his company commander or Lieutenant Brown, a platoon officer, when a staff officer—he could not recall the name—had said to them: "I believe that German envoys are over to arrange an armistice."

and that the attack may not come off."

Cross-examined by Mr. Tilley, he admitted that he had had no knowledge of any attack that moment. The dead he saw were on the road leading out of Cuesmes. He could not remember what rank the men had.

Morley Drake told the court that his unit—the 18th Canadian Battalion—had advanced nine miles on Nov. 10. At midnight they had reached the village of Cipluy. Only one man, he believed, had been wounded all day. At 7 o'clock the next morning his battalion had "stood to." The 19th battalion, he said, went after an objective it had failed to reach the day previous. There was a German machine gun post on a hill that was within the advance. Engineers came up and threw a bridge over a stream at the edge of Cipluy. A "whizz-bang" gun was run across, placed in position and the machine gun shelled out. The Germans went "over the hill" in the direction of Mons. German guns returned the fire, and one 10th man was hit.

"What with?" asked Mr. Regan. "A piece of shrapnel," witness answered.

"How do you know he was hit?" "I saw him fall."

Some time that afternoon, feeling curious about the machine gun post on the hill, he had gone up and looked the ground over to see what actually had happened.

Three Dead Canadians

"I found three dead Canadians lying there," he told the court.

"Could you see Mons?" he was asked.

"You couldn't see Mons till you got over the hill," he answered. Artillery fire, he declared, had lasted until well up to 11 o'clock the morning of Armistice.

Colonel Duguid, recalled by Mr. Regan, read from his records the nature of the message which Sir Arthur Currie had wired to Major-General Sir Frederick Loomis, 3rd Divisional Commander, at 10.15, Armistice morning. It was as follows:

"Warmest congratulations on having recaptured the historic battlefield of Mons before the cessation of hostilities."

At some length Mr. Regan pressed for information as to German casualties during the last few days around Mons. He read from an army order to show that Canadian troops on entering the city had killed the whole crew of a machine gun nest. Was it the regular thing for an army to bury enemy dead in its possession? It was, Col. Duguid replied. Then, where were the records of German

News of Armistice

Robert Marshall of the 3rd Division Signalling Corps, told of his arrival at Jemeppe on Nov. 10, for the purpose of opening up a signalling office. He went on duty at 11 o'clock that night, he said.

"Did you get word from Headquarters about the Armistice?" "We got official word about 3.30 or 4 a.m. on the 11th. It may have been a little later, but it was in the early morning hours."

"The message that was issued to all units of the Canadian Corps, advising that the Armistice was signed and giving instructions what to do."

"From the hour you went on duty at 11 p.m. on the tenth until you got word about the Armistice, did you get any reports over the wire from any brigade in the line of their progress into Mons and of the opposition encountered?"

A.—We received reports, yes.

Q.—How often?

A.—Not very often.

Q.—How long did you stay on duty?

A.—Till noon on Nov. 11.

Casualty Reports

Questioned as to the receipt of casualty reports, witness recalled receiving some later in the day of Nov. 11.

Q.—Did any reports come in during the night of Nov. 10 and 11 about any casualties having been received by the brigade?

A.—There were reports.

Q.—What did you do with them?

A.—They were delivered to the General Staff Chief Officer of the Third Division.

Q.—Was there any gunfire on the night of Nov. 10?

A.—There was gunfire.

Q.—How late did that continue?

A.—It continued intermittently until a few minutes to 11 a.m. of Nov. 11.

Q.—Were both sides firing?

A.—Certainly, both.

At 8 A.M.

John Overend, attached to Headquarters Company of the 58th Battalion, 9th Brigade, testified that the first learned of Armistice at 8 a.m. on Nov. 11. He then joined in a march from Hornu to the suburbs of Mons which were reached at 11 a.m., where he heard people talking of the Armistice.

Witness declared that 200 yards from the City Square in Mons, he saw two dead Canadians lying in the gutter between 11.30 and noon, and that 20 yards away a dead German was lying.

"As we passed that dead German a lady stepped off the sidewalk and gave him a kick."

"Do you know if any brigade made an attack that morning?"

"The Seventh Brigade attacked Mons."

Witness could not state the hour, but declared that he heard Canadian guns firing until practically 11 a.m.

Toward Mons.

Joseph Morgan, a woodturner, who served with the 5th Brigade, testified that his unit was proceeding toward Mons on Nov. 10.

Mr. Regan—Did you arrive at Mons?

Witness stated that they went into Mons after the Armistice.

Q.—When did you hear about the Armistice?

A.—About 10.20.

Q.—Did you see any dead Canadian soldiers?

A.—I did. At the outskirts as we were going into Mons.

Q.—How did you know they were Canadians?

A.—I could tell by the Divisional badges. They were of the 3rd Division.

Answering further questions, witness said they got within two kilometres of Mons on the morning of the eleventh.

Mr. Tilley—What place were you going from when you went into Mons?

A.—We were marching from Valenciennes.

Mr. Tilley—You found those two dead Canadians on the outskirts?

A.—Yes.

Records Produced

C. B. Belk, who had been subpoenaed to appear, was not present, and Col. F. L. Armstrong, who had charge of certain government war records, was next to take the stand.

Mr. Regan requested the production of records of "Price and Joyce."

Witness gave the regimental number of Price as 256265 and his rank as private. He stated that certain information he had was of a confidential character, but that there was no objection to reading the circumstantial death report.

On the report in question being produced Mr. Regan hastened over to the box with a magnifying glass in his hand. After closely scrutinizing the document he said: "There have been some changes?"

Witness—Not that I am aware of.

Mr. Regan then read the report, which was to the effect that Private G. L. Price had died on Nov. 11, 1918, and that the cause of death was "killed in action."

At Three Minutes to Eleven

The report further stated that Private Price was killed by an enemy sniper at 3 minutes to 11.

Mr. Regan asked Col. Armstrong if he had a similar report in connection with Joyce's death.

Witness said no, but as far as he could remember Joyce had died of wounds, and there would be no circumstantial death report in that case. He, however, produced a report dealing with the admission of Acting Corporal F. W. Joyce to the Field Ambulance. Joyce had, according to the report, been shot in the chest and arm and had died on the tenth.

Further examination revealed that on Nov. 1, 3 officers and 127 other ranks were killed. On Nov. 2, 3 officers and 28 other ranks; on Nov. 3, 2 officers and 13 other ranks; on Nov. 4, 2 officers and 33 other ranks; on Nov. 5, 4 officers and 72 other ranks; on Nov. 7, 1 officer and 36 other ranks; on Nov. 8, no officers and 17 other ranks; on Nov. 9, 1 officer and 10 other ranks; on Nov. 10, 8 officers and 49 other ranks. On Nov. 11 there was 1 in the other ranks category. Succeeding testimony indicated that on Nov. 11 there were 14 admissions, 7 suffering from effects of gas.

Mr. Regan commented that the total was 27 officers and 419 other ranks who were killed or died of wounds on the dates mentioned. Additional figures showed that 100 officers and 1594 other ranks were wounded, but not fatally, making a total of 2140 men and officers.

Mr. Regan handed Colonel Armstrong a document and asked him what he took the report to be.

The reply was that it pertained to the 7th Canadian Infantry Brigade.

Mr. Regan—That is one other document you sent to General Currie?

Mr. Tilley—You have your copy. I do not think that is fair.

Mr. Regan then asked witness to read what the document said regarding casualties under the date of Nov. 11.

Document Is Read.

As read by witness, the document was to the effect that the casualties were one in the "other ranks" class killed, six other other ranks wounded, six other other ranks gassed. In the 42nd Battalion six other ranks were wounded; in the 49th Battalion five other ranks were wounded, making a total of thirteen wounded and one killed.

Mr. Regan then referred to casualties on the tenth, and asked witness if a stranger reading the report would not conclude that the casualties had occurred on that date.

Witness—That is correct.

Mr. Regan then asked if a stranger could not understand casualties under the 11th to have occurred on that date.

Colonel Armstrong—He would.

Mr. Regan at a later juncture quoted from "Field Service Regulations" to prove that war diaries had to be an "accurate record" of operations.

Asked About Discrepancy

Mr. Regan—Will you tell me how it comes that in this list of casualties set out in the war diary you have in front of you for the 7th Brigade there are 23 other ranks wounded and only 16 other ranks wounded in the list which you handed to me here, compiled for the purpose of giving evidence at this trial?

Witness said that the diary had not been made up so far as casualties were concerned.

Later in his examination of Col. Armstrong, Mr. Regan asked him to look up records of Corporal Fairley and Lieutenant R. L. Germain.

"I am told that Fairley belonged to the 20th Battalion and so did Germain," said Mr. Regan.

The report showed that Lieutenant Germain was killed in action on the 10 Nov., 1918, while acting as a platoon commander during military operations.

Mr. Regan said he had been told that his (Germain's) next of kin were notified that he was killed on the eleventh and his tombstone at Kingston bore that information.

When the court adjourned the question of the notification of the manner of Germain's death sent between Nov. 10, 1918, and April 3, 1919, was being queried.

International Got Away Today

Today the eight most evenly matched teams in modern International league history started off on a 168 game baseball race that should break all records for attendance. Half a dozen managers honestly believe that they have a chance to win the pennant, which is most unusual in this or any other league. No one of the eight teams is so weak that it does not entertain hope of getting up near the top.

The Buffalo Bisons, champions of 1927, open at Baltimore and Jack Dunn sent his star righthander, George Earnshaw to the mound in an effort to check the titleholders in the first game. Dunn has a good pitching staff but so has Buffalo.

The much heralded Newark team started with Toronto as its guest. The Leafs have wonderful pitching this year, as good as any in the league. Jess Doyle is Manager O'Hara's choice to hurl for the Leafs against Al Mameaux of the Bears.

Walter Johnson is not able to be about yet and George McBride will handle the Bears. Fans of the circuit and many experts have made the Bears the favorites to win this year with Jack Fournier, Walter Johnson, Hugh McQuillan, Bill Lamar, Fred Lutzke and other additions to last year's team. But rival managers are conceding nothing. They are out to whip the Bears.

Over in Jersey City the Skeeter fans will look upon the strongest entry they have had in years under the management of Frank Gilbooley.

Billy Southworth, a new manager, has not let it be known who will pitch. He has very good pitching this year. Both Southworth and Gilbooley are playing managers.

Reading entertains the Montreal team, a new entry in the John Conway Toole circuit. Harry Hinchman says his Reading team is a hundred per cent stronger than last year's aggregation, which finished a bad last.

George Stallings bought the Jersey City team of last year and moved it to Montreal, but he has added much to it, and now has a formidable lineup. Just the other day he secured Pitcher Walter Beall from the Yankees. Bob Shawkey is in condition and should be a winner.

THE GUIDE STORY

"I don't like to hear any one unjustly criticised or blamed," she answered, with indifference, and the doctor laughed.

Firefly entered the room. For the rest of his visit Firefly monopolized his attention, and secured a promise from him to put in an appearance at Squire Pett's next day, when the preliminary rehearsals of the theatricals were to be settled. Owen sat quietly listening to the conversation, wondering whether she would dislike the reality as much as she now disliked the idea, of Firefly and John Forrester being together.

CHAPTER XI

Filial Confidences

"Hello, dad!" "Hello, Hal! Here's the frost at length with a vengeance."

It was an intensely cold morning, without a glint of sun or a break of blue in the heavy grey sky. Hal and the squire of Greylands had met at the white gate that marked the boundary of the latter's property. It was the first meeting that day between the father and the son, in consequence of a certain line of conduct which the old man had laid down on the birth of his son and heir, and to which he had ever since strictly adhered.

On that day, twenty eight years previously, Harry Pett, senior, seemingly the person of least consequence in his own house had retired to his study to meditate, with the help of his pipe, over the great responsibility of bringing up a boy in the way he ought to go. That

Do you buy advertised goods?

Of course you do; everybody does. Just run over in your mind the various articles that you have purchased in the last week. How about foods? Your breakfast fruits, cereals and bacon are all advertised. Probably that is how you first came to know of them—through advertising. Probably the shoes you are wearing, or the dress or suit you have on are equally well known advertised makes and you are proud of them. In the home. On the floor are rugs and linoleum—the better wearing kinds are extensively advertised. What about the kitchen? Aluminum ware, gas ranges, hot water heaters, dish and clothes washers, cooking utensils of all kinds—practically everything you use is advertised. You buy advertised products because you have confidence in them. You know that a manufacturer cannot afford to advertise shoddy or unworthy merchandise. Advertising is a form of insurance. It gives you a feeling of perfect confidence and safety when you ask for an advertised brand, for you know that you will get the quality and the service you expect. The name is the guarantee. The more you read advertising the more you will know about human progress. You will become well posted in almost every line of human endeavor and a canny judge of values. To read advertisements is a fine habit. Cultivate it.

Read the advertisements and buy the advertised goods. They are the safest investment.

the boy in question was then but a few hours old mattered little to him. He was a man of great physical strength and activity, true-hearted and trustworthy, but he preferred as a rule, to leave mental efforts to his wife except on those rare occasions when to every one's astonishment, he exercised his own powers in that direction.

This afternoon had been one of those occasions. When the squire reappeared some three hours later he looked fagged, but supremely satisfied that, so far as in him lay, he had solved the problem.

His fondness for animals had helped him somewhat in his cogitations, the gist of which was: First that idleness and dullness may spoil a boy as much as an animal; secondly, that too tight a hand on the reins was as bad as no hand at all; thirdly, that if boys were allowed a judicious amount of independence and responsibility in youth there would be no reason for them to sow "wild oats" on reaching manhood. That afternoon he had adopted two rules that he had kept unflinchingly; one was that by the age of sixteen his boy must decide on a profession, and then stick to it; secondly, that on reaching his majority he should have handed over to him a certain sum, whatever the estate could afford, and be given a fair start in whatever profession he had chosen.

Daughters not having entered into his calculations it was, perhaps, fortunate that the three children subsequently born to Squire Pett were all boys. Hal, the second son, resembled his father in his interests and his character. The eldest son, Lesley, took more after his mother, and, by reason of his reserve and cold manner was a mystery to the open hearted old man. Charlie, the schoolboy, unlike the others, disliked the country voted farming a stupid career and declared that he meant to be a soldier.

Lesley, at the age of twenty one, became his father's manager, at a handsome salary with a separate house at his disposal. Being of a careful turn of mind he continued to live at home, and let the house.

Hal, having decided that his forte lay in farming and horse-breeding, received, on his majority, the title deeds of a small property on the outskirts of Greylands, called the Wool farm, and was given the option of living at home or settling on his estate and becoming a man of independent means by working the farm. Like most the young fellows, Hal had grand ideas and he promptly decided to settle on his own farm, and prove to his father the superiority of new methods over old.

This whim—if whim it could be called—was about the only thing in their married life upon which the squire and his wife disagreed. She failed to see why, when they possessed a comfortable balance in the bank, their boys should be forced, or bribed, into working as though they were poor men. But the squire was firm; on all other points he gave in to her meekly, and it must be owned that, though Mrs. Pett was considered in the neighborhood to be cold and proud and a difficult woman to get on with, she made an excellent wife and mother, and moreover kept Greylands happy and peaceful.

Hal was the old man's favorite, and they saw more of each other than do most fathers and sons after the latter have attained manhood and emancipation. The Wool Farm was a few minutes' walk from Greylands, and though Hal had set up his household goods there, over which a certain Mrs. Wobb kept watch and ward, he was in and out of his old home several times a day.

The son, having for the first time in his recollection, passed a sleepless night, determined to broach the subject of it to the squire feeling that he would gain more sympathy from that broad minded old man than from the mother he admired but never understood.

AN EARLY LESSON

I made a wager long ago; a sorrel horse I used to knead had most astounding speed; a stranger came to town one day; he had a tall and gangling bay he said was fast, indeed. The village sports fixed up a race, and it was said to see me chase, and run myself in debt; I borrowed kopecks everywhere and soaked my hat and underwear for money I could bet. I knew the stranger's horse must lose, and so I sold my Sunday shoes, and all my shirts but one; I knew that I'd be sitting tight with fifty kinds of coin in sight when that big race was run. The race was run upon a day; the actor was the gangling bay, the sorrel showed up bad, the smiling stranger left the town with everything not bolted down, and all the coin we had. My goods and chattels all were gone; the clothes I cherished were in pawn, and I was deep in debt; and as the sheriff seized my cow I filed a large and solemn vow—I never again would bet. And often since the tempter came and showed me some dead certain game where I could win a pile; but I recall that dismal fluke that left me busted and rebuke the tempter with his guile. When I behold the heartsick jays, who've kept on betting all their days, and who are paupers now, I bless that stranger and his nag, who took my rubles in a bag, and also got my cow. If I had won the coin I bet, no doubt I would be betting yet, if I could raise a dime; but I received a lesson stern, and so I take the coin I earn and put it down in time.

RODENTS CAUSE HEAVY LOSSES

Traps, Poison and Gas Effective Means of Ridding Farms Of Plague

Several requests have been received for methods of ridding buildings of rats. In answer to these it may be said that preventive measures will do much to keep them away.

Dispose of all garbage and waste on which rats feed. Remove trash, and litter that harbor these rodents. Screen all basement and cellar windows with wire netting. Close rat holes with sheet metal, cement, sand and broken glass, or sharp bits of crockery or stone.

Use concrete in the construction of foundations, footings and floors of house basements, granaries and barns.

Use discretion in killing off the natural enemies of rats—hawks, owls, skunks, weasels and mink.

Get a good rat dog. Small Irish, Scotch and fox terriers are best. Their work is much more effective by using ferrets to drive rats out of their holes. Muzzle the ferrets before sending them in after the rats, otherwise they may kill the rats and stay in the holes after sucking the blood. They sometimes become wild also and attack poultry. White cats are good mousers, few of them learn to catch rats.

Use "guillotine" traps, the kind with a wire fall released by a baited trigger and driven by a coiled spring. Those made entirely of metal are more durable and are less likely to absorb and retain odors. Steel traps are also effective. Handle the bait and trap as little as possible. Place the trap in the runways.

Mix ordinary oatmeal with about one-eighth of its bulk of barium carbonate. Mix it with water and stir it into a stiff dough. Put this bait in the rat runs, about a teaspoonful at a place. If the first application fails, it should be repeated with a change of bait. Try spreading the poison on fish, toasted bread or ordinary bread and butter. The action of this poison is slow and the rats frequently leave the premises in search of water before dying. In the small doses fed to rats and mice, it would be harmless to domestic animals.

Another method now being used effectively to kill rats infesting the barns, granaries and poultry houses, but not dwelling houses, involves the use of a commercial product containing calcium cyanide. All outlets to the rat burrows are plugged up except one into which this substance in finely powdered form is pumped. The usefulness of this powder as a rat exterminator lies in the fact that it unites with the moisture in the air and forms deadly cyanide gas, which kills rats almost immediately. The formation of gas soon ceases and the dust remaining is not poisonous.

Stack or people should not remain in the building while this treatment is being used, unless they are standing at some distance from the rat holes and in a place where there is good circulation of air, as the gas is fatal. The dust pump may be filled in the open air if the operator is careful not to breathe the dust.

The Newest Coat: Frock Opens On A Diagonal Line

For the first days of Spring when it is warm enough to venture on the street without a coat, the necessity of a warm dress to be worn with one's fox scarf is readily seen by those who would be comfortably as well as smartly dressed. The coat frock charmingly supplies this demand and one should be included in every Spring wardrobe. The model shown above is entirely new. Formerly all coat dresses have opened straight down the front. This one, however, opens in a diagonal line running from shoulder to hem. The skirt is a one-piece wrap-around with a slight flare at the left side. A little set-in pocket at the right and groups of buttons on the sleeves and along the closing line add to the smart tailored effect. Light weight wools, tweeds, silk crepe or shantung make this a very desirable frock for street or traveling. (Copyright, 1928, by Butterick)

THE QUILTING PARTY

The day is set, the ladies met, And at the frame are seated; In order placed they work in haste, To get the quilt completed. While fingers fly, their tongues they ply, And animate their labors, By counting beaux, discussing clothes, Or talking of their neighbors.

"Dear, what a pretty frock you've on—"

"I'm very glad you like it;"

"I'm told that Miss Micomicon Don't speak to Mr. Micate!"

"I saw Miss Bell the other day. Young Green's new gig adorning; What keeps your sister Ann away?"

"She went to town this morning."

"Tis time to roll"—"my needle's broke."

"So Marti's stock is selling;"

"Louisa's wedding gown's bespoke;"

"Lend me your scissors, Ellen;"

"That match will never come about. Now don't fly in a passion;"

"Hair puffs they say are going out. Yes, curls are all in fashion."

The quilt is done, the tea begun. The beaux are all collecting; The table's cleared, the music heard, His partner each selecting.

The merry band in order stand, The dance begins with vigor, And rapid feet the measure beat, And trip the mazy figure.

Unheeded fly the minutes by, Old time himself seems dancing, Till night's dull eye is open to spy The steps of morn advancing;

Then closely stowed, to each abode The carriages go tilting; And many a dream has for its theme The pleasures of the quilting.

(Many of the elderly ladies of Port Hope will remember the Quilting Parties which were so much in vogue when they were children. They will appreciate the above lines.)

GOLDEN WEDDING IS CELEBRATED

Mr. and Mrs. James Prouse of Sheho, Saskatchewan, Are Remembered by Friends

Mr. and Mrs. James Prouse, who were born at Port Hope over seventy years ago and lived for a number of years near Osaca, celebrated their golden wedding at Yorktown, Sask., on March 26th. Extensive preparations were made by the committees in that town and the event was most successfully carried out.

The event began with a private dinner served at the home of Mr and Mrs. Jas. Prouse, where 35 friends and relatives partook of a very tasty repast. Arrangements of the dinner were handled by Mrs. R. D. Toreson and Mrs. Joseph Sorrell and a very appropriate wedding cake was provided. Among the guests present were the children, Mrs. S. E. Wilcox, Yorkton; Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Prouse, Sheho; Mr. and Mrs. James Donald, Sheho; the grandchildren, Wilfred and Raymond Wilcox, Yorkton; Miss Jean Prouse, Sheho, and Jas. Prouse, Jr., Sheho; brother, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Prouse, Kelvington, with their son and daughter, John Prouse and Mrs. Fraser of Yorkton.

The following gave toasts and were speaker at the dinner: Mr. Ashdown, Mr. Lawrie, Mr. P. Peeters, Mr. P. Prouse, Mr. Chas Prouse, Mr. R. Quinn and Mrs. Robt. Curry. They all spoke of the good accomplished through the years by Mr. and Mrs. Prouse, when settlers were very scarce in the country. Never was a stranger turned away and those were good and happy times. Mrs. Curry spoke especially of the support given to the church by Mr. and Mrs. Prouse, saying that they were always willing to help on every occasion. The toasts were fittingly replied to by Mr. Prouse. About twenty-five telegrams were read by Mr. Curry and forty-two letters were received by the couple on the occasion. Numerous valuable presents were received and the house was well decorated with flowers. After the dinner the party adjourned to the front where many snaps were taken by friends.

Decorated very fittingly the Sheho town hall was the centre of interest in the evening. Cards were played by the gathering. A program was then given, starting with the wedding march by Mrs. Frank Wunder, while a humorous mock wedding ceremony was performed by Joseph Sorrell. The bridesmaids were the Misses Vida, Alice and Annie Peeters, Ethel Webster, Edith Odell and Beulah Johnson. Miss Jean Guendeline Prouse acted as flower girl.

The ceremony was followed by the presentation to the bride and groom by Frank Wunder. Mrs. Prouse was given a friendship ring and purse and Mr. Prouse a Masonic ring from their many friends in Sheho and district. This was followed by a presentation by Mr. Ashdown, on behalf of the Aurora Masonic Lodge No. 45, A.F. & A.M., of Theodore of a Masonic pin to Mr. Prouse and a beautiful brooch to Mrs. Prouse.

Mr. Prouse very effectively thanked one and all who had helped to make the occasion so successful. He stressed the fact of the great value in friends. "If it wasn't for friends," he said, "what would I have today? Nothing! But friends have made this event in our honor possible, have given my wife a brooch and a ring of friendship and have put on my hand the Masonic emblem. I am very proud of it and I thank you all."

With a few appropriate remarks Mr. Robt. Curry, chairman for the evening, opened the program.

After the program supper was served to over two hundred and fifty invited guests, which was followed by old time dancing. The music was supplied by Mr. and Mrs. Darling and Mr. Webster, later by Miss V. Wilde and Mr. John Peeters.

Mr. and Mrs. Prouse were born at Port Hope, over seventy years ago, and married there in 1878, farming until 1882, when they took up residence in Aberdeen, South Dakota. For nine years they were good citizens under the Stars and Stripes, after which they moved to Inisinger, where Inisinger is now. During the following nineteen years they watched the growth of that community, the coming of the railroad and the passing of strangers pushing westward. Having during these years observed the birth and growth of many towns, so eighteen years ago Mr. and Mrs. Prouse picked Sheho as a place of residence most suited to their needs. Scarcely fourteen months in Sheho, sorrow overcame the family, when the youngest son, Mr. Fred Prouse, who was working the homestead, contracted typhoid for the second time and was taken away. He left a wife and one child.
