SHOOTING FISH IS PROHIBITED

Cap Carson Issues Warning—Season is Closed Now, Anyhow

Captain Carson, fish and game inspector, has been informed that men have been seen shooting ducks and maskinonge. He is investigating the rumor. The shooting of fish is forbidden at all times, and killing of lunge by any means is forbidden until June 16th. The season for ducks does not open till September 1, and steps will be taken to have punishment meted out to all offenders.

The officers of the Fish and Game Protective Association call attention to the folly of killing fish at this time of year, before they have spawned, as it cuts down the supply for next year and following years.

BASEBALL

Toronto Leafs Head List

Toronto Leafs, by virtue of their 2-0 win at Jersey City yesterday, now head the International League standing. With five wins, three losses and a .625 percentage, the Leafs are determined to hold down the skyscraper position throughout the season.

Dan Howley, the regular manager of the Leafs, was banned from the lot at Reading on Monday for causing an altercation, and Commissioner Landis refuses to do anything in his case as yet. In the meantime, the Toronto team are being directed by Maisel.

Hoot Gibson hurled the Leafs to victory yesterday, and with an excellent reserve of pitchers, the Leafs should carry off the big end of the Jersey City series.

Baltimore, winners of the 1924 pennant, have been running into hard luck so far this season, and are tied for second place to-day, with the "Skeeters." Jersey City so far have been doing some phenomenal playing, and to date register a .571 percentage.

Buffalo haven't been slouching at all, and in nine games played they have chalked up five wins. Newark in fifth place have four wins and four losses to their credit. Rochester has three wins and four losses. Syracuse two wins and four losses, while Reading brings up the cellar position with three wins and five games lost.

New York hold a stiff lead in the National League, with a percentage of .833, and Cincinnati and St. Louis, the nearest runners-up, holding .625 averages. The four leaders—New York, St. Louis, Cincinnati, and Philadelphia—all scored easy wins yesterday.

The struggle in the American section is a tight one. To-day the standing shows Philadelphia, Washington and Cleveland tied for top place with five games won and two lost. Cleveland have lost their last two fixtures, one to Ty Cobb's Tigers, and yesterday to St. Lou's.

BASEBALL SCORE BULLETINS

In an effort to give the Big League fans in Port Hope the best possible service, The Guide have arranged to give a complete bulletin service, including the results of all games played in the National, American and International Leagues. As these are received by radio, however, where reception depends upon atmospheric conditions, regular service cannot be guaranteed; but whenever possible we will post the scores in The Guide office window between seven and seven-thirty each evening.

ON LOCAL DIAMONDS

The recent snowstorm and cold snap took a good deal of enthusiasm out of the baseball fans. However, several snappy twilight games have been played at the Commons, and fixtures are being arranged between several of the Juvenile nines.

Nothing so far has been done at the Town Park, but it is expected that work will be commenced shortly.

The feasibility of organizing and operating a local Church League is being questioned. It is suggested that a large number of the boys who played in last year's League

BOY DISAPPEARS FROM HOME; CITIZENS ASKED TO JOIN IN SEARCH

No Trace of Young Lad Who Left Home Last Night Has Been Found up to Time of Going to Press

Having disappeared from his home on DeBlaquiere street early last evening, considerable anxiety is being felt regarding the safety and whereabouts, of Wilfrid Johns, 12 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Johns.

Parents and friends of the young lad have been making a frenzied search of the town and the surrounding country, but to little effect—the child has vanished as completely as if the earth had swallowed him up.

Late this afternoon, the parents were asking official aid in the search, and it is expected, that should the lad not turn up before evening, citizens, Boy Scouts and others will be asked to organize a country wide hunt.

Returning to Port Hope, he heard for the first time, of the missing boy and getting in touch with the parents immediately informed them of what he had seen. His description of the boy's dress, tallied exactly with that of the parents, with the exception of the grey sweater, which Mr. and Mrs. Johns maintain was blue.

The parents rushed over to Cobourg, and went immediately to the C. P. R. yards where they made an enquiry regarding the child. Several workmen reported seeing a boy, answering this description, and one man was certain that he had seen him climbing into the cab of a freight train, which was shunting back to Port Hope.

May Have Gone East
Hurrying back to Port Hope, they visited the local stations, and were told that no train had shunted into this station. Quite probably, the train had departed eastward, bearing twelve year old Wilfred Johns father and farther away from his anxious parents.

Believing this to be the case Mr. Johns and his brother, motored east, visiting each station in an effort to locate any trace of the lost boy, but up to the time of going to press no encouraging reports have been received.

Every Possible Place Searched
At first it was thought that Wilfrid would have gone to his grandmother's or other relatives in Cobourg, Baltimore or Bewdley, but in every place, the same sad report was given—Wilfrid had not been there.

Cobourg Scouts Hunting
A telephone call to Cobourg, resulted in the complete Scout Troop of that town being ordered to join in the search. In this manner almost sixty keen boys will join in a careful hunt throughout the district.

The co-operation of Scoutmaster C. P. S. Carman's, First Troop of Port Hope, is also being asked. If no trace of the lad is found by night-fall, almost two hundred persons, who have volunteered, will endeavour to locate him.

Mr. and Mrs. Johns, although nervous wrecks from their long vigil, are active searchers. The sympathy of the whole community is extended to them in this great trial.

Should this not meet with approval—why not the organization of a Midget League. If no one else would undertake the job of handling the boys, perhaps the Boys' Work Board might take them under their control.

One way out of this difficulty, in the opinions of many of the sport fans, would be to raise the age limit slightly in the Rotary League, and by increasing the number of teams, run a double schedule.

Mr. Harold Tozer, chairman of the Sports Committee of the Board, is endeavouring to get the members together to discuss these matters, but to date has been unsuccessful.

A fine picture of the Intermediate hockey team, Intermediate Consolation champions of Eastern Ontario, is on display in a local photographer's window.

Things are very quiet throughout the D. & O. towns these days—even Orme Gamsby at Orono having little to say about his wonderful team.

It is said that the Orono Juniors cleaned up quite a tidy sum at their dance last evening.

The Belleville Ontario finds a little comfort when it considers the luck of those teams who have got out to practice ahead of the Grand Trunks. Incidentally they get in a sly dig at the practice of winning the pennant on the newspaper columns instead of on the field. The following extract expresses their opinion nicely:

"Many amateur ball games were played on Saturday in perfect weather and the good teams ran up against some snags. The Motor crew took a good licking from the Oslers, and perhaps will now settle down and try to win the C.O.B.L. on the field instead of through the newspaper columns.

"The weather will set back the training, so Belleville will be in as fine shape as any when the gong sounds."

The Bankers softball team had a dandy workout at Ganeraska Park yesterday afternoon. Twelve men were present, and Manager McCannel put them through their practice in fine style. Personally, we don't think Alex McAlpine's Ganeraskas will carry off the honours this season if the Bankers keep up the style they displayed yesterday.

Quite Religious

A little girl returned home to her parents after sitting for her school musical examination. They asked her how she had got on. "Very well, I think," she answered. "What was the examiner like?" "Quite a nice man—and so religious." "Religious? How could you tell?" "In the middle of one of my pieces he put his head in his hands and said, 'Oh, heavens! Oh, heavens,' very reverently."

REVEALS MURDER 500 YEARS OLD

Old Much Hadham Hostelry Has Secret Stairs and Passages Dating From 14th Century

Behind the Tudor panelling of a secret staircase in the ancient Red Lion Inn at Much Hadham, in Hertfordshire, Eng., human bones have been found. Doctors who examined the remains believe them to be those of a girl about 17 who probably died 400 or 500 years ago.

The fact that the body has been so carefully concealed suggested that she was the victim of foul play. The discovery was made during continued investigations by the present proprietor, who last August found the secret staircase above the fireplace in the dining room. It was thought that this staircase led to a secret room, but it has been found to be an entrance to a curious winding passageway stretching across the top of the old house for a distance of 200 or 300 feet to the stables, where there is an exit.

The proprietor of the Red Lion says that the discoveries made have enabled him to trace the house back to the fourteenth century. The passageway in the roof of the house was probably used as a place of hiding, and also a means of escape, by people in olden times. In addition to the two entrances from the dining room fireplace and the stables there is another just over the ballroom. The proprietor of the hotel is now hunting for another secret passage which he believes may exist under the cellars.

At the Royal to-night, to-morrow and Saturday is the screen version of William Collins' great stage success, "Never Say Die," starring Douglas MacLean. It is one of the season's funniest photoplays and should not be missed by any of the countless Port Hoppers who enjoy an evening of laughter.

DESERONTO WAS TO HAVE FACTORY

Promoter's Wife is Under Arrest, Husband Jumped His Bail Following Swindling Disclosures

With her husband having already fled the country while on bail because of the operations of the company, and with one Johnston having already been sentenced, and still facing criminal charges on the same account, Mrs. Agnes Petrie was arrested Wednesday by the Provincial Police, and so lent a somewhat dramatic turn to the affairs of the Petrie Cream Separator Company. The charge facing her is conspiracy to defraud, and she is held without bail in the Court Street Police Station, Toronto.

The arrest of Mrs. Petrie came after the Provincial Police had spent the greater part of one day in waiting at her pretentious home on the Lake Shore Road. She is alleged to have been one of the principals in the scheme by which stock to the value of $150,000 in the Petrie Cream Separator Company was sold to the Ontario public. The company was to have erected a factory in Deseronto. According to the Provincial authorities no such step was taken, but the proceeds of the sale of the company's stock were diverted for the promoters' benefit.

Some days ago the shareholders of the company held a meeting in the Carls-Rite Hotel. The situation was rendered anxious by the fact that Mr. Petrie, the company head, had jumped his bail and was believed to be in Buffalo. Little light could be thrown upon it, furthermore, because of the fact that the company's books were in possession of the company's auditors, who refused to relinquish them until their claim of $120 had been satisfied. Eventually the shareholders "passed the hat" for this amount, when, it is stated, a most disquieting set of conditions was found.

A hasty examination of the books is said to have shown a condition almost of chaos. In some cases, seemingly, the stock certificates had been made out but not detached from the book. Another book showed various entries which gave Mr. Petrie's expenses as nearly $7,000, although the period for which this sum accounted was not stated.

At the shareholders' meeting it was stated that the company had collected in its two years of operations the sum of about $150,000. Some shareholders, it was stated, had invested as high as $10,000 to $15,000 in the venture. It was declared that even children had been sold stock and that one instance in which a cripple had invested money had been revealed.

O.K. FOR BOYS AND GIRLS TO HOLD HANDS IN CHURCH

Boys and girls holding hands in church is not a thing to be deprecated, according to Rev. Douglas S. Johnson, Dean of Manchester.

Dean Johnson in an address referred to his days as Vicar of Altrincham and said the boys and girls were encouraged to go to church together, and there was no objection even to their holding hands in church. In fact, he said, the officials of the church lowered the lights in order to make it easier for the young people to do so. He hoped the boys and girls of the parish eventually joined hands in matrimony.

The Dean told of his having established a camp jointly for boys and girls while he was a vicar, and he said a "howl of horror" went up from a number of people because of this. The joint camp, however, had a good influence. The boys and girls attended church together and the authorities had no trouble with them after that.

KINGDOM IS LOST AS GUARD DRINKS

Sixth Century Tragedy of Cardigan Bay is Brought to Light

"Few people even in Pwllhell are acquainted with the Bay of Whistling Sand," said Evan Davies, formerly the town clerk of Pwllhell, in a lecture on the subject. This bay, he continued, was discovered recently by a visitor on the Irish side of the peninsula, near Aberdaron. Footsteps on it led forth a mysterious piping whistle, and sometimes the sound resembled singing. The discovery was of especial interest to scientists.

Dealing with the romantic interest of Cardigan Bay Mr. Davies said that in the sixth century it was thickly populated, and had in it 16 fortified towns. A stone dyke was erected to prevent sea encroachments and a man named Geithenyn, who looked after the embankment, was given the title of Lord High Commissioner.

One night when Geithenyn was drinking there was a hurricane, the sluice gates gave way, and the embankment was destroyed. The kingdom fell into ruins and its people were drowned and the royal family brought down to poverty.

Mr. Davies discredited the story that Geithenyn was drowned. Instead he seized two empty barrels, and with his arms over them, reached the shore. Twenty years after he jocularly remarked that the barrels were indebted to him for emptying them, and they did him the service of floating him to safety.

Now her ghost is said to haunt the ruins. Sometimes it is heralded by a hovering light, shal'er-high. Villagers say so. A postman and a publican have seen the spectre—if it be a spectre—and its guiding light.

The wail from the motor horns is as uncanny as the ghost itself. A number of drivers have heard it. One of them described it to me.

Motor Horn Mystery

"The horn," he said, "made an altogether different noise from usual. It was exactly like someone in prison wailing or shrieking for release. I never want to hear anything like it again. I tried to stop it, but I could not. It lasted for nearly a minute."

Two other persons were in the car, and they said that it was the most uncomfortable time they ever experienced.

This wail came from the horn while the car passed at night along the highroad from Whitney to Cheltenham, near the Minster ruins. Other horns have wailed in the Others think the ghost may be that of Francis Lord Lovel, not the bridegroom, but one of the barons in the Wars of the Roses, who was attainted as a deserter from the Red Rose side. He lay hidden in a secret chamber in the castle. The only person who knew his hiding-place was a servant. She died suddenly and he, locked in the secret hole, died of starvation. His skeleton was found in 1708.

HOW MANY STEPS DO POSTIES CLIMB

Move Made to Reduce Distance Travelled and Burden of Postmen

How many steps do postmen in London and other large British cities climb daily? This forms the basis of an inquiry that is being conducted by the Union of Post Office Workers with the view of alleviating the unhappy lot of the climbers. The tenement buildings are said to be one of the greatest torments of the postal service. H. H. Wallace, assistant secretary of the union, estimates that postmen who deliver letters in these tenements have to climb nearly 3,000 steps a day.

"The men," he added, "spend about seven hours a day climbing and descending these steps, carrying a load of perhaps 35 lbs.

"In London also postmen have to climb many more steps than formerly owing to the conversion of so many large houses into flats."

At the annual conference of the Union of Post Office Workers at Colwyn Bay next May the executive will suggest that 17 miles a day, instead of 13 miles, should be the maximum distance any rural postman should walk, and that no walking postman should carry more than 25 lbs.

EXCITEMENT OVER FIND OF PLATINUM

Fortune Hunters Rush to a Small Area in the Transvaal

Fortune hunters are excitedly embarking on a new adventure—platinum. The news of the discovery of extensive deposits of platinum—the most valuable of commercial metals—in the Lydenburg district of the Transvaal, which has caused a feverish boom on the stock and share markets of South Africa, is having its reflex action in London and on the other stock exchanges throughout the country, and some judicious people have already made substantial fortunes.

A world demand exists for platinum which cannot be satisfied. The requirements of the electrical industry for the metal are increasing enormously and the electrical manufacturing trades are at the moment exceptionally prosperous. That is why the price of platinum stands at $120 an ounce—gold, incidentally, is now about $21.50 an ounce.

Geological reports declare that platinum has been found in a strip of country 60 miles long in the valley of the Steelport River, in the Transvaal.

THE GUIDE STORY

Big feet were Frank's abomination. Alice's were as small as the feet of a twelve-years-old child, and her ankles, too, were very slight, and graceful, but Alice was of different blood from Magdalen, and Frank believed in blood, and held that it would show itself in the curl of the eyelash, the curl of the lip, or the turn of the instep for many generations. Alice was of French origin, but Magdalen he believed was Dutch — plump, rosy, undeniable Dutch, and he sat waiting for her, ready to criticise whatever there was in fault in her. Neither he nor Roger had a program, and they did not know when she was coming, and when at last she came Roger did not recognize her at first. But Frank's exclamation of something more than surprise as he suddenly rose to his feet, warned him that it was Magdalen who bore herself so like a queen as she crossed the stage and took her seat at the piano. The little girl in the shaker, leaning over the gate, faded before this vision of beautiful girlhood, and for a moment Roger felt something as a father might feel who after an absence of eight years returns to find his only child developed into a lovely woman. Roger's surprise and admiration kept him silent, while his eyes took in the fresh, glowing beauty of Magdalen's face, and his well-trained ears drank in the glorious music she was making. Frank, on the contrary, was restless and impatient. Had it been possible he would have gone to Magdalen at once, and stood guard over her against the glance of those who, he felt, had no right to look at her as they were looking. He saw that she was the bright star around which the interest of the entire audience centred, and he wanted to claim her before them all as something belonging exclusively to the Irving family, but, wedged in as he was, he could not well effect his egress, and he sat eagerly listening, or rather looking at Magdalen. He could hardly be said to hear her, although he knew how well she was acquitting herself. He was watching her glowing face, and noticing the glossy waves of her hair, the long curls on her neck, and the graceful motions of her white hands and arms, and was thinking what a regal looking creature she was, and how delightful it would be at Millbank, where one could have her all to himself. He did not regard Roger as in his way at all. Roger never cared for women as he did. Roger was wholly given to books, and would not in the least interfere with the long walks, and rides, and tete-a-tetes which Frank had rapidly planned to enjoy with Magdalen even before she left the stage for the first time. When she came back to sing he could sit still no longer, but found his way through the crowd, and went round to Magdalen just in time to escort her from the stage. His appearance was sudden and Magdalen was so surprised that ere she realized all what it meant she had taken Frank's offered arm, and he so was leading her past a group of young girls who sent many curious glances after the handsome young man who had so publicly claimed Magdalen.

Frank was wonderfully improved in looks, and there was in his manner a watchful tenderness and deference toward ladies very gratifying to those who like to feel that they are cared for and looked after, and their slightest wish anticipated. It was this manner of Frank's that had so won upon the invalid Alice, who had longed for some sympathizing friend to lean upon in place of her selfish father, and grave, prim aunt. And Magdalen felt even during the moment they were walking down the hall to the little reception room, where Frank turned her more fully to the light and said: "Excuse me, but I must look at you again. Do you know how beautiful you have grown. As your brother, I think I might kiss you after my long absence."

Magdalen did not tell him he was not her brother, but she took a step backward, while a cold, haughty look flashed into her eyes, and warned Frank that his days for kissing Magdalen were over. She was very glad to see him, and his flattery was gratifying to her, but she never for a moment forgot Alice Grey, or the fact that Frank was engaged to her.

"Where is Mr. Irving?" she asked, and then, seating her in a chair, and thoughtfully dropping the curtain so that the cool night air, which had in it a feeling of rain, should not blow so directly upon her uncovered neck, Frank left her and went for Roger.

Magdalen would have kissed Roger, as she thought of him while sitting there waiting for him. He was so old and fatherly, and had done so much for her, but when he came and stood before her, she would as soon have kissed Frank himself, as the elegant-looking young man whose dark blue eyes and rich, brown hair with a dash of gold in it, were all that was left of the Roger who went from her eight years ago. He was entirely different from Frank, both in looks and style and manner. He could not bend over a woman with such brooding tenderness, and make her think every thought and wish were subservient to her own, but there was something about him which impressed you with the genuine goodness and honesty of the man who was worth a dozen Franks. And Magdalen felt it in part at once, and gave her hand trustingly to him, and did not try to withdraw it from his friendly clasp. It was a very pretty hand, indeed. Milking the cows had not spread the joints or put it out of shape, as Roger had once feared, and as he took it, he thought how small and fat, and white it was, and how much like the little baby hands he had clasped years ago and covered with his kisses.

Prejudice render a man's virtues his habit, and not a series of unconnected acts. Through just prejudice, his duty becomes a part of his nature.

WILL NOT ABOLISH PENALTY OF DEATH

How All Ranks Conspire to Protect Deserving Case

The discussion on the death penalty in the army fully justified its promotion from a hurried gabble against the clock to the studied debate of the afternoon, says the Times' correspondent at Westminster. The abolition of this penalty is the heart's desire of Mr. Thurtle, and he has been persuasive enough outside the chamber to induce his party to give it their qualified support. Inside, sentiment set up as good and reasonable a case against experience as sincerity could warrant. Mr. Thurtle's quarrel was not with the machinery of military law, but with the law itself. It should be equal as between men and officers, and it should not take the life of either.

Reprived 89 Per Cent
Mr. Macpherson opposed his experience at the War Office to this view. He urged that what the army most cared about was its discipline and reputation. A jury of a man's own comrades—the very comrades whom his alleged act had betrayed—would not be more merciful than a court-martial, which could always impose a lesser penalty, or a commander-in-chief who had reprived 89 per cent of the men sentenced.

Mr. Snell, speaking as the merciful amateur, could not see that the abolition of flogging or Field Punishment No. 1 had rotted the army. He asked, with Lincoln, what good would it do a man to shoot him? This was better than ex-Private R. Morrison, who revelled in saying all the nasty things about generals which had boiled within him in the army. But it was not so good as Captain Gee, 30 years ago a private and seven years ago a staff captain, who described the earnest search after an excuse for mercy through all stages from the C. O. to the C-in-C. Nor did it compare with Mr. Hopkinson, 26 years ago an officer, and seven years ago a private, who described the regimental conspiracy to strain the quality of mercy to the point of perjury.

All Ranks Equal
Sir Laming Worthington-Evans had therefore merely to emphasize the views of those who knew. These included two committees, the last of which for some part of its sittings was presided over by the Labor Under-Secretary, who could testify to its fairness, though not responsible for its report. He had adopted, and was proposing, several suggested modifications of the Army Act—among others, the complete equality under military law of officers and men. Then he touched on the real point. Why should a man who failed in his duty be better off than one who did not? The only alternative punishment was penal servitude, safe and terminable by an amnesty. There had been no single case of miscarriage of justice, nor of any execution save on the gravest charge.

It did not require party discipline for the Labor proposal to be defeated by 320 to 136.

TESTS FOR BRAKES

Periodic brake examinations are necessary for all cars, and there are at least a dozen simple rules for keeping brakes in good working order.

Apply the brakes slowly. Never let the tires slide. Use the motor as a brake on hills. Test both brakes before starting. Keep the brake lining clear of oil, road grit and metal particles.

Clean the brake lining with kerosene once every two or three months. Remove glazed spots on the brake lining by roughening the surface with a round or half-round file.

Tighten regularly all lock nuts and rivets, avoid loosening the turn buckles and scoring the brake drums. Try out the brakes under various conditions and see how quickly the car will stop. When in service always add a liberal margin of safety.

To test this out, jack up the rear wheels, start motor, and with the car in high gear apply the brakes. Both wheels should slow down uniformly.

Keep the foot pedal and hand lever in proper position so that the foot pedal will never go down far enough to strike the floor board, and so that the hand lever will never pull back and strike in its slot.

Sores Heal Quickly.—Have you a persistent sore that refuses to heal? Then, try Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil in the dressing. It will stop sloughing, carry away the proud flesh, draw out the pus and prepare a clean way for the new skin. It is a recognized healer among oils and numbers of people can certify that it healed where properly applied.

GENERAL PURPOSE DRESSES APPEAR

Sports Outfits Hard to Tell From Evening Gowns in London

A number of sports dresses look like evening frocks this spring. It takes, indeed, a discerning eye to notice the difference.

The dresses have been executed in woven silks of the most beautiful textures and hues. They have short sleeves and low necks, and the tunics are bound with broad bands of fur.

They are made in varying hues of green, and some times of pinks, merging from pale coral to deep salmon and through their mesh are woven threads of gold and silver metal which add to the illusion that they are intended to be worn for dinner or dancing.

Hand painting is a great feature of their embellishment. Ornate and vivid designs are painted across both coat and skirt. The coats are trimmed with synthetic fur woven from fine wools.

The great advantage of these suits is that they can be worn both in the country and in town.

LETTING LOOSE THE DOGS OF WAR

The phrase, "Let loose the dogs of war," once had a real meaning. In the Middle Ages dogs were employed for carrying fire toward the cavalry of the enemy in order to frighten their horses and cause them to stampede. On their backs they bore a kettle of burning resin, the odor, smoke and flame of which naturally excited the horses. Underneath the kettle was a stout jacket of leather, which protected the dogs in case the hot resin was spilled. In olden times the dog used to be a turnspit, toiling in a treadmill while the meat roasted before the fire.

THE FOREST AND FUR RESOURCES

Canada possesses one of the greatest fur-producing areas of the world and its fur-bearers constitute a most important resource. For their protection the maintenance of the forest is of major importance. No effort in conservation can be effective that does not consider the important relation of forest cover to the fur-bearer and wild life generally. With an annual fur take totaling millions in money value any action which endangers the forest must be reflected in diminished returns from our fur-bearing resources.

It is generally conceded that the finest furs are obtained in the most densely wooded districts. The colour and lustre of the pelts is increased according to the degree of forestation in the locality where the animal is trapped. The reasons for this superior quality are shelter, shade and better food. After fire has devastated a region a marked decline in fur is noted.

Effect of Forest Fires

Helpful Factors

The setting aside of numerous areas, such as national parks, preserves and sanctuaries have tended to counteract some of the losses sustained by our wild life resources. In this respect Canada has progressed and the areas set aside are considerable in comparison with some other countries, and comprise many thousand square miles. These protected areas have the advantage of all that goes with the adoption of advanced conservation methods which safeguard the forests in so far as possible against fire and other forms of wild life destruction. They constitute outstanding object lessons of the part which the protected forest plays in the marked increase in the wild life within their areas and also in the districts adjacent to them.

Value of the Fur Industry

The annual value of the fur takes of Canada during recent years is approximately $17,000,000, and this value is capable of being increased many times by careful management and practical protective measures.

Many thousands of persons in Canada are dependent upon the fur bearers for their livelihood. Indians and white trappers in the far north and throughout every province bring in millions of pelts. These are marketed to be manufactured in Canada, or exported for manufacture and sale in foreign lands, eventually reaching the people in the many beautiful garments that bring comfort and adornment, and their progress from the forest to the wearer means the exchange of millions of dollars.

Thousands of individual citizens, including trappers, traders and artisans, are recipients of the monetary benefits from these fur resources. The exchequers of the various governments, provincial and federal, receive also their due share of this wealth in license fees, royalties and other forms of revenue.

The number of fur-bearers taken in Canada during the season 1923-24 was over 4,000,000. These have a value of $15,644,000. The grand total for the past three years is 13,538,579 pelts, with a value of $50,000,000.

In 1923 there were in Canada 235 establishments engaged in the manufacture of fur goods. These had a value of production of $11,861,774. The total salaries paid to 2,513 employees was $2,763,080. The total value of production of Canadian furs dressed and undressed and manufactures of during the same period was $17,589,055.

The position held by Canada as a fur-producing country has been an important factor in the establishment of fur markets, not only in Canada but in the United States as well. The fur auction sales which are now held several times each year at Montreal and New York are a comparatively recent development. The sales at which millions of dollars worth of fur are sold annually are international in scope, and attract buyers from all parts of the world. These establishments are undoubtedly due to the fact that Canada is a fur-producing country. Since the inauguration of the Canadian fur auction sales at Montreal in 1920 more than $21,000,000 worth of furs have been auctioned.

Protect the Forests

Considering the fact that the fur-bearers of Canada furnish to the people the necessities of life in varied forms, bringing wealth, comfort and luxury, there should be little conflict of opinion as to the benefit to be derived from the placing of the fur industry of Canada on a firm basis, and this can be best accomplished by making ample provision for such protection as will ensure the perpetuation of fur-bearing life, and among the measures which will contribute greatly to this desired end is the protection of the forests of Canada.

23 SAVED HIS MOTHER BUT KILLS FATHER

Calgary Youth Uses Axe, Killing Man Almost Instantly—Inquest Friday

Driven half-frantic by the heartbreaking cries of his mother, who was slowly being beaten to death before his eyes, Harold Braun, aged 13 years, hit his father, Edward Franklin Braun, aged 41, of Calgary, three times over the head with the blunt end of an edged axe, killing him almost instantly. The tragedy occurred on the Braun farm, 14 miles west of Didsbury, Sask., at 2.30 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

"He tried to kill mamma, and I killed him instead," was the 13 year old boy's simple statement to the police when questioned concerning the tragedy.

The lad was removed to Didsbury, where he was placed in the care of an uncle. He will be formally arrested on a charge of murder, and will be held in the custody of his relatives pending the result of the inquest, which will be held at Didsbury on Friday.

In the meantime, Provincial police and officials of the Attorney General's Department will decide just how the case will be handled.

The story told by the young boy was corroborated by his 9 year old sister.

WELL KNOWN LADY PASSES

Mrs. W. B. Couch, Bowmanville

One of Bowmanville's highly respected residents passed to rest on Tuesday, April 14, in the person of Jane Thompson, beloved wife of Mr.
W. B. Couch, senior member of the firm of Messrs. Couch, Johnston & Cryderman.

Deceased was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Richard Thompson who lived near Oshawa where she was born. They later moved to Port Hope when she was quite young.

In August, 1869, she was united in marriage with her now bereaved husband. They celebrated the Golden Jubilee of their marriage nearly five years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Couch have lived on Centre street all their married life, the greater part of it in their present commodious residence. She has been ailing for over two years and during the past six weeks she was confined to her bed, gradually growing weaker until the end came.

The funeral was held Thursday afternoon from the family residence, service being conducted by Rev. J.
U. Robins, Pastor of the Methodist church of which deceased was a faithful member and regular attendant. He delivered a very comforting address. Rev. D. W. Best, B. A., minister of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, assisted in the service.

The pall bearers were Messrs. J.
Lyle, J. P., J. A. McClellan, C. M.
Cawker, J. H. H. Jury, A. Mitchell and Dr. John Spencer.

The business houses on King street were closed during the hour of service out of respect to the oldest business man still doing business in town.

Besides her husband she leaves to mourn her loss one son, Albert of Montreal and two daughters, (Edna) Mrs. C. W. E. Meath, of Ottawa and (Norma) Mrs. C. S. Mason, town, who were all present at the funeral.
Two sons died in infancy, one daughter Mabel died about 25 years ago, and one son Fred W. died just one year ago, being buried on Good Friday of last year. Miss Alice Thompson of this town, sister, is the only surviving member of a family of 13 children.

Among the relatives present were:
Mr. Smallpiece and Mr. Robt. Gray
from the W. R. Brock Company, Mrs.
E. A. Hyland, Mr. and Mrs. Alex.
Wolfe, Mrs. A. L. Dayment, Mrs. F.

PHEASANTS GOOD TO FIGHT INSECTS

Bowmanville Man's Experience
—So Called Sportsmen May Prove Nuisance

Pheasants figure as allies of man in his war against insect pests says
T. H. Jennings, Bowmanville, formerly a farmer in the Regina-Arcola district. "Fred Blackburn of Bowmanville last year got two settings of pheasant eggs and hatched out 26 from the 28 eggs," said Mr. Jennings. "As you remember, it was a very wet season, and pheasants apparently are like turkeys—difficult to raise in wet, cold weather. However, 12 fine birds were raised to maturity. They were very active in getting after insects on the ground, and when a long trailing vine was attacked by large black slugs they flew up and cleaned them right off.
In fact," he added, "I have seen them fly into the lower branches of small apple trees after slugs and bugs." Three birds disappeared, probably shot. "That's the trouble," remarked a bystander who had heard the story. "The farmer who raises these game birds does so to supply 'sport' for some one else. They are nice to have around the place, and many more people would keep them if it did not mean a struggle against promiscuous shooting on their premises."

The Terror of Asthma comes like a thief in the night with its dreadful throbbing, robbing its victim of breath. It seems beyond the power of human aid to relieve until one trial is made of that remarkable preparation, Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy. Then relief comes with a rush.
Life becomes worth living, and if the remedy be used persistently, the disease is put permanently to rout.
Take no substitute.
