

WHO IS TO BLAME FOR THE ACCIDENTS?

All of us who have never had a fatal auto accident may give fervent thanks to be relieved of that grave responsibility.

Some of us have had ample opportunity in hunting, fishing and travelling and it was only a day or two ago when driving into Cobourg, a Guide representative had a narrow escape. Two little boys, one using an old auto tire as a hoop, the other a three wheeled "bike" and they were weaving all over the Provincial Highway in a dizzy zig-zag fashion regardless and indifferent to motor and other traffic. Our motor had to stop in order to avoid hitting them or being hit by them. Again, having to change tires in the same locality as natural and expected a group of attractive children gathered to watch proceeding and give suggestions, and it is always a pleasure to converse with children. We asked why they did not go elsewhere to play. Mary, the expert champion of women's and children's rights, exclaimed: "Why this is 'OUR PLAYGROUND,' intimating that the autos and other users of the highway were trespassing on the children's rights.

Through an unfortunate accident one boy was killed in Cobourg last week.

Are the children of Cobourg so numerous and so little thought of that parents exercise practically no control over them? Ball games, tag and other absorbing games loved by children, even to an advanced age, being underway at all daylight times on the Provincial Highways and Streets.

The poor driver of horse or power vehicle has his own liberty, even life, and the lives of children and other pedestrians constantly on his hands every time he moves. If a person is hit the first verdict is usually "the driver is to blame," when, as a matter of fact, he may have been careful, observed every precaution, not only laid down by the law, but suggested by experience, alert and careful driving.

This applies not only to Cobourg but to Port Hope and other places as well.

WATER OVERFLOW CAUSES FLOOD IN BASEMENT OF TOWN HALL HERE

Entire Ground Floor of Town Hall Inundated by Two and a Half Feet of Water Sunday Morning—Furnaces Are Extinguished and Considerable Damage Done

Although the basement of the Town Hall on Queen street has been flooded at certain times with considerable quantities of wet goods, an honest-to-goodness flood visited the building Sunday morning and the entire ground floor was inundated to the extent of two and a half feet of water. The water was pumped out today and considerable inconvenience was wrought.

The water began to seep into the building at seven o'clock Sunday morning, due to a blocked sewer just south of the building. The water made its appearance through the floor in the bottom jail and quickly spread to the basement under Mr. A. J. Chesher's residence and the market hall. Boxes, etc., floated about the rooms and considerable trouble will be experienced in cleaning up.

As a result of the presence of the water in the market hall, the floor became badly heaved and it is not known now whether the I.O.D.E. rummage sale listed to be held in the market hall tomorrow, will take place or not. Early this afternoon, the greater part of the water had been pumped out of the premises.

The water commenced to enter the building at seven o'clock in the morning and within a few hours the entire ground floor was flooded. Members of the council visited the building and looked the situation over and repairs will be effected immediately.

FLIGHT WAS MADE OVER NORT POLE

Trip From Point Barrow Made in Twenty and a Half Hours' Flying Time

Another conquest of the North Pole regions was recorded Saturday when Captain George H. Wilkins announced to the Copenhagen Politiken the safe arrival at Spitzbergen of himself and Carl B. Eielson. They flew over the roof of the world from Point Barrow, Alaska, a distance of 2,100 miles.

Only two brief messages by wireless came through, but they revealed that Wilkins, like Koehl and Fitzmaurice in the Bremen, had a narrow escape from disaster at the very end of their epochal adventure. For some reason, as yet unexplained, Wilkins was obliged to make a landing on an uninhabited islet only 25 miles from his goal. The fliers were detained there for five days by bad weather. The islet on which they landed, on the north side of Isjford, bears the forbidding name of Doedmansoera. It is a mere speck in the Arctic waste. There was shelter for Koehl, Fitzmaurice and Von Huenefeld on Greenely Island, but there is no lighthouse on Doedmansoera.

The Wilkins announcements were all the briefer because the regular radio operator of the small station in the Svalbard Archipelago was killed a few days ago in an accident. Someone of the Spitzbergen colony knew enough about wireless transmission to get out word of that accident and to call for a relief operator.

It was not clear as to who transmitted the messages from Wilkins but he may have done that himself, as he had kept in communication with stations in Alaska by using a small radio set with which his plane was equipped while he was still at Point Barrow. The plane's set, it is believed however, to have gone out of commission, for no word came from Wilkins on the day he hopped off nor for several days preceding the start.

The Captain in his messages to the outside world, said that he reached Spitzbergen after 20 1/2 hours of flying. He mentioned the five days' delay on the island. It was figured, therefore, that he must have left Point Barrow, some time last Sunday. His message was timed as having been sent at noon yesterday.

WITNESS STATES CURRIE CONFERRED WITH STAFF BEFORE MONS OCCUPATION BECAUSE THERE WAS "DOUBT"

Two Chief Points Came Out When F. W. Wilson Took Stand in Currie Libel Action at Cobourg Saturday—Hansard Ruled Out

Persistent attempts on the part of W. N. Tilley, K.C., chief counsel for the plaintiff, and Mr. Justice Rose failed Saturday to bring to a close the examination of F. W. Wilson, publisher of the Port Hope Guide, and one of the defendants in the $50,000 libel action brought by Gen. Sir Arthur Currie. Frank Regan, chief defence counsel, was evidently determined that Mr. Wilson should remain on the stand until adjournment for the week end, and he managed to succeed in his object.

It was a hectic session with the judge time and time again calling Mr. Regan sharply to order for trying to introduce matter irrelevant to the case. He practically accused the lawyer of deliberately prolonging the examination simply for the purpose of reaching the agreed time for adjournment with his client still on the stand.

"Mr. Regan," said the judge at one time, "please sit down if you have no more questions to ask."

Hansard Ruled Out

The evidence was marked by another unsuccessful attempt to introduce the speech made in the House of Commons in 1919 by the late Sir Sam Hughes. Mr. Regan tried to have Mr. Wilson read Hansard on the speech, but he was sternly halted by the judge, who declared the matter had been definitely ruled out.

The defence attorney did succeed in getting into the records a conversation between Mr. Wilson and Sir Arthur, which occurred after the action was instituted. At first, in reply to a question from the judge, the defendant said the conversation had taken place without prejudice, but later, he pleaded that he did not understand the term and Mr. Tilley waived his objection to the conversation being related.

Two chief points came out of the Wilson evidence. One was that Gen. Currie had told him he had conferred with his staff before the occupation of Mons, because there was "doubt" about the movement. The other statement was that Sir Arthur asked the publisher what he was going to do about the matter and received the reply that Mr. Wilson was going to do "what he thought was right."

"That is what you are doing now?" asked Mr. Regan.

"That is what I am doing now," was the reply.

Another feature of the day was a lively battle between Mr. Regan, W. T. Preston and Col. Reginald Orde, Judge Advocate General of the Department of National Defence. Col. Orde, in view of hints made by the defence counsel, that he had been obstructed in trying to secure Government reports to help his case, was given an opportunity to make a statement, which he did with considerable force.

Orde Denies Charge

Mr. Preston charged that records had been given to Sir Arthur Currie "surreptitiously," without the knowledge of the Minister of National Defence, which Col. Orde hotly denied. Later Mr. Regan denied all intention of making charges against Col. Orde and the other officers of the department who have been in attendance at the trial, and said he had already written to the Deputy Minister expressing appreciation for the help given him.

The day opened with an attempt by Mr. Regan to put in as an exhibit a copy of Field Service Regulations to which he has made frequent references during the examination of witnesses. The exhibit was rejected but the lawyer asked that certain passages be treated as exhibits. He read a long list of these to the judge. He was finally stopped by the judge, who declared he could find little relevant to the case in the passages cited.

"It is quite obvious," he said, "that the greater part of what I have had a chance to look at is utterly irrelevant. These sections would appear, on their face, not to be relevant, and anyone reading them can see that."

"Will Your Lordship indicate what parts I can put in?" asked Mr. Regan.

"No," said the Bench. "If you will show me any section that is relevant I will admit it. This reading of a lot of articles, however, is simply a farce. Is there anything in the pleadings which makes night operations an issue?"

Mr. Regan had particularly stressed this angle of the case in referring to the regulations.

"I will have to leave the pleadings to speak for themselves," he replied.

Oh no," said the judge. "Counsel must speak for the documents."

"You will also object to putting in Volume 2, I suppose?" asked Mr. Regan.

"It will certainly be ruled out," the judge said, "if you cannot show to what is relevant."

"I am afraid," said the lawyer, "that if I try to use part of it, the impression will go out in the press that I am arguing with Your Lordship."

Told To Forget the Press

"Please" requested the judge, "forget that there is any press here. Confine your arguments to the issue in hand. What is relevant in these books?"

"I want to show," said Mr. Regan, "that night attacks were not carried out with the precautions set out in the regulations."

He failed, however, to get the books into the exhibits.

Col. Arthur Duguid, head of the Historical Section of the Records Department, was brought back to the stand and questioned closely by Mr. Regan about gun targets on November 10. One of the requests made by the defence counsel was that a document be compiled showing enemy gunfire from Nov. 9 on.

Col. Duguid said this was one of the tasks that would take considerable time, but he would not make an estimate as to how long the document would be in preparation. Mr. Regan asked that an exhibit number be allotted to the document and that it be put in when prepared, subject to objections from the plaintiff. This had already been done in regard to several records which had been asked for.

"I am willing to let these exhibits be reserved," said Mr. Tilley, "if it will mean expediting the case."

"This record," declared Mr. Regan, was asked for a long time ago. It was named in the subpoena. I do not want to be put under the suspicion of taking the witness by surprise."

Col. Duguid replied that the records were present, but this was the first time a request had been made ords showing the information asked for compiling such a document as that sought.

"I do not think it fair," remarked

FORMER MAYOR LAID TO REST

Funeral of Stanley B. Burnham Held Sunday—Was Well Attended

The funeral of the late Stanley B. Burnham, ex-Mayor of Port Hope, who died on Thursday, was conducted from his late residence on Queen street on Sunday afternoon and the obsequies were well attended by relatives and friends of the well-known deceased. Canon Oswald Rigby conducted the impressive services and entombment was made at St. John's Cemetery.

The following gentlemen acted as pall bearers: Mayor R. J. Edmunds, Wm. Robertson, G. N. Patterson, Wm. Walker, V. B. Coleman and J. C. Hayden.

Motorist Struck Another Driver Seriously Crushing His Left Leg

Saturday a very painful accident was caused by an unknown motorist who struck and very severely injured Harry Lyons of Trenton, who was taken from the local hospital to Toronto on Sunday, where every effort will be made to save the injured member.

It appears Mr. Lyons was driving from Oshawa, where he works, to his home in Trenton, when a short distance east of Port Hope, he pulled off the right side onto the shoulder of the road for the purpose of cleaning his windshield, when the accident occurred.

Mr. Lyons, who was accompanied by Mrs. Herb. Sampson and Mr. Russell Eekbert, was by the left rear wheel of the car when a car driven by an unknown driver crashed into him, crushing his left leg between the cars, so mangleing it that there is considerable doubt as to whether the leg can be saved. The motorist who caused the trouble, without stopping to leave his name or give aid, hurried on his way west along the highway.

The injured man was brought to Port Hope Hospital immediately following the accident and Sunday it was found necessary to remove him to Toronto in an endeavor to save his leg.

Miss Ida Van Camp was awarded $7500 damages against J. C. Anderson, school teacher, in Toronto Technical School and J. E. Carter, florist, for loss of her right leg in a motor accident arising out of collision between two defendants.

Chief Justice Meredith also awarded Silas Van Camp $1400 for expenses in connection with his daughter's accident, plaintiff being under the age of 21.

His Lordship said regarding plaintiff's damaged marriage prospects, that if she, with only one leg herself, did get a husband, he would probably love her better than one she would have got, had she had two legs.

DRIVE WITH PERMITS

The fact that twenty four owners of autos are summoned to the Police Court in Cobourg for operating cars without drivers' licenses should mean something. Everyone has had ample warning that this section of the Highways Act would be enforced. Don't blame the Highway Officers for carrying out their orders, kick yourself for being so careless and not providing yourself with the necessary permit, the price of which is not prohibitive—only one hundred cents. The officers are human and really do not deem it a pleasure to bring anyone to court for slight infringements; they are called down by the Department for allowing these little offences to pass—help them, don't hinder and make things unpleasant for yourselves.

ISSUES WRIT IN CHURCH DISPUTE

United Church not Satisfied with Award of Court in Case of Church Property at Beaverton

The duties of Sheriff Paxton of Whitby a few days ago led him to Beaverton with a writ of execution from Judge Thompson, in connection with a dispute between the Presbyterian Church and the United Church there and the division of certain church equipment. Feeling ran high between the two parties and it has been reported that the sheriff promised drastic action unless those concerned carried out the terms of the writ in more amicable fashion.

It will be recalled that last year the Ontario Legislature passed a private bill restoring to the Presbyterians the old stone church and a clause in the Act stipulated that the county judge was to effect a settlement between both congregations, dividing up certain church equipment, including an organ fund of $1,100 and there was to be no appeal from the judge's decision.

His Honor listened to representatives from both churches, and then made his award, which it is understood, was not satisfactory to the United Church, and since that time little or no attempt has been made to carry out the terms of the award.

It is understood that the United Church officials claim that there is no organ fund, although representations that there was, were made to the judge. The Presbyterians, since the award, have built a fine brick church and naturally want some of the equipment awarded to them.

Mr. Justice Rose, "to suggest that, when the Minister was asked to produce documents from his department, he placed obstructions in the way of the litigant making the request. There has been no evidence of any obstruction. On the contrary, there is evidence of the greatest co-operation. Three officers have been in Cobourg for a week and I judge from remarks made in the witness box, that their assistance was not only given in court but also in the evenings."

"It is most unfortunate that any suggestion has been made that there was any disposition not to produce everything asked for. I think it only proper that the officers should make a statement, if they choose."

Charge Inferred

"Is it suggested," asked Mr. Regan "that I made a charge?"

"You inferred it," replied the judge.

"I would like it pointed out," pressed the lawyer.

"Let Col. Orde make a statement" said the Bench.

"I will make one later" declared Mr. Regan.

"Maybe you will," was the remark from the Bench.

Col. Orde immediately went into the box, and told of a subpoena calling for 73 different things. All of these, he said, had been furnished, with the exception of one record which was not in the files of the Department.

"We have given every assistance" he said, "and have even suggested lists that might be helpful. We have given Mr. Regan the benefit of our technical knowledge. One night Mr. Regan asked for a record on prisoners captured and we told him we were unable to compile it. He agreed that he would not ask for it. The next day he put me into the box and demanded details on the subject. That is what we had to face."

Col. Orde went on to say that, before the department had any official notification of the case several documents had been given to Sir Arthur Currie. Later, after Mr. Regan visited Ottawa, duplicates of all these were forwarded to the defence. The colonel said he had checked the documents himself to see that they coincided. Later, Mr. Regan and Mr. Preston had at various times asked for records, until the Minister declared no more would be given out except under subpoena, and that the department would reserve the right to refuse any whose revelation might be against the interests of state business.

"Did you know," asked Mr. Preston, "that the Minister was angry because Sir Arthur Currie was supplied with these documents?"

"No," replied Col. Orde.

"They were given out surreptitiously, without his knowledge declared Mr. Preston.

Denies Preston's Charge

"They were not given out surreptitiously," denied Col. Orde. "They were listed on a file open to the Minister. I have your receipt for copies of those very documents."

Mr. Regan here declared that the officers had given him every assistance which they believed fell within the province of their duties. He said that the night previous he had dispatched a letter to the Deputy Minister, expressing his appreciation of the co-operation given him.

"I am glad to hear that," said the Judge, "This is evidently another instance where your remarks did not convey the meaning they were intended to convey or I took the wrong construction."

"I was not going to advertise the fact that I had sent the letter" said Mr. Regan. "It was unsolicited."

"He commends privately and criticizes publicly," remarked Mr. Tilley.

"That is not a fair statement," retorted Mr. Regan. "Mr. Tilley should not be allowed to say such things. I have not criticized."

SUMMER MORNING'S SONG

Up, sleeper! dreamer! up; for now There's gold upon the mountains' brow—

There's light on forest, lakes and meadows—

The dew-drops shine on flow'ret bells The village clock of morning tells.

Up, men! out, cattle! for the dells And dingles teem with shadows.

Up! to the fields through shine and stour;

What hath the dull and drowsy hour So blest as this? the glad heart leaping

To hear morn's early song sublime; See earth rejoicing in his prime;

The Summer is the waking time The Winter time for sleeping.

The very beast that crops the flower, Hath welcome for the dawning hour.

Aurora smiles! her beckonings claim thee;

Listen—look round—the chirp, the hum,

Song, low and beat—there's nothing dumb—

All love, all life. Come, slumber, comet!

The meanest thing shall shame thee.

—J. TOLLENS.

REPRESENTATIVE GIVES ADVICE

Jas. A. Neilson States Pruning Methods Varies With Different Bush Fruits

The yield and quality of bush fruits depends upon various factors, such as soils, pruning, fertilizers, disease and insect control. Of these factors, pruning is one of the most important in its effect on the size and yield of fruit. In order to prune bush fruits properly, it is necessary to understand the fruiting habits of the various classes. The fruiting habits vary somewhat with the different species as is shown in the notes given below by James A. Neilson of the Port Hope Agricultural branch:

Raspberries and blackberries bear their fruits on shoots which grow early in the season from buds on canes of the past season's growth. In most cases there are a large number of buds on such canes, and moreover these buds are nearly all potentially fruit-bearing. If all the buds are allowed to produce fruiting shoots, there is likely to be more fruit formed than the bush is capable of developing to a desirable size. To get fruit of the largest size, it is therefore necessary to remove some of the buds, and this is best accomplished by cutting back a portion of the canes but some fruit is also borne on older canes. As a rule the older canes bear rather small fruit, and the longer the canes are allowed to remain the smaller the fruit is likely to be. This situation, therefore, suggests the desirability of having the bush composed mainly of two and three year old canes with enough new canes to provide for future crops.

LEAFS TAKE FINAL

Toronto Maple Leafs galloped off with the final game of the series with Newark by defeating the Bears 10 to 4 at Newark on Saturday afternoon. A home run by Daie Alexander with the bases full settled the issue beyond any doubt. It was Alexander's second rap of the four base kind in as many days, the ball going on a line into the right field bleachers. The victory was the Leafs' first of the season, O'Hara's men having lost the first two games with the Bears 6 to 0 and 15 to 9.

Rip Collins, veteran right hander from the Detroit Tigers, pitched effective baseball for the Leafs. He was inclined to be wild, and passed several, but tightened up in the pinches, and was given fine support by his teammates.

Jack Bentley, in the past a puzzle to Toronto teams was on the firing line for the Bears and he gave a fine hurling performance, striking out no less than seven Leafs, but his support was weird, all seven misplays figuring in the scoring.

Joe Rabbitt, Leaf right fielder, again gave a clever display, his batting, base running and fielding being of a high order while Warren Cote, Mervin Jacobson and Billy Webb also were very much to the fore in a defensive way.

WOODS PRESERVE WATER SUPPLY

Forests are nature's preservers of water supply. The forest floor, being porous, retains the maximum amount of rainfall. This physical condition combined with the mechanical obstructions of tree roots, retards the rapidity of run off. Excess water is released gradually and the equilibrium of stream flow is preserved. In like manner the melting of snows in the springtime is delayed by the lower temperature and shade in the forest, so that danger of floods is lessened.

HEAVY DEMAND ON FORESTS

For generations past the forests of Canada have borne more than their just burden in supporting public expenditures. As a result they have been severely depleted. They cannot much longer stand the exorbitant drain caused by extravagant use and inadequate protection.

FORESTS EFFECT ON TEMPERATURE

Forests have an equalizing effect on extremes of temperature. Records for Canada show that in forested districts maximum temperatures are lower and minimum temperatures higher than in adjoining deforested tracts.

BIRD ARRIVALS ARE CONTINUING

Number of Blackbirds Increase—Cowbirds Make Appearance

Reports from many vicinities state that a further number of bird arrivals have been noted. Now that the sun is warming up the countryside, and drying off the land the birds again return to take up summer residence in Canada.

Although a number of blackbirds have been reported before, great flocks of them are continually seen in this neighborhood. Crows are again taking to the meadows and pastures and even though they are condemned to death even before they arrive, it is a welcome sight to see them around again.

Cowbirds are arriving in numbers and have done so for a few weeks past. These birds, too, have a questionable character and as a rule are not encouraged to live in a community on account of their peculiar habits of laying their eggs in the nest of smaller birds and leaving them for the mother bird of the nest to bring to maturity.

As a general rule, no warblers are reported back. These timid songsters are partial to warm climates and usually remain until the last few days before real summer to return. However, the hardy little Myrtle Warbler, a streaked yellow and brown bird with black markings on breast, is one of the first warblers to come back and is generally followed by the Black and White Warbler, quite noticeable for its prominent black and white stripes covering the entire body. The warblers are a community's most beneficial birds, destroying in a season many injurious insects. They should be encouraged to summer at Port Hope.

A sparrow hawk was seen near here during the latter part of last week. This arrival was noted with interest, since it is a scarce bird, and seldom reported as a resident in this part of the country, although no doubt it does make its home here in the summer.

Those birds which are legally banned and a menace to the beneficial birds of the community are the crow, the English sparrow, the sparrow hawk, the cowbird, the blue jay and blackbird.

One time a man of talents rare Sighed that he had no time to spare. For always, as with me and you, He found himself with work to do. "Were I supplied with clothes and bread I'd never work again," he said.

"The bitter curse of life, I find, Lies in the irksome daily grind, Full oft I'd like to stay in bed, But I must rise to work instead, I swear, before my life is through, I want to loaf a year or two."

In course of time this man retired— Another in his place was hired— And he, set free from anxious need,

Slept late, a happy man indeed; He heard the factory whistles blow And chuckled: "I don't have to go!"

But ere a month had travelled by The light went from the loafer's eye. The time he'd longed to call his own Grew difficult to spend alone, And he began to wish again To take his place with busy men.

His friends were all at work and so By day to them he could not go. Upon his seat he sat and grieved That he by life had been deceived. "Who thinks that work is hard," he cried,

"The idler's task has never tried!"

NEED OF FOREST POLICY

Few people realize the urgent need which exists for a forest policy in Canada. The economic facts are that the forest is second only to agriculture in production of commodity values and it contributes today one quarter of Canada's total export trade. Therefore, continued depletion of raw materials essential to the well being of the forest industries is a direct menace to our national prosperity.

It Cleanses, Strengthens and Tones up the System

SOME people buy laxatives casually and then wonder why constipation persists.

Ordinary laxatives merely goad the system into action; then, weakened by harsh treatment, the body lapses into worse condition than ever.

While relieving constipation Fruit-a-tives builds up general health. Made of juices of fresh fruit and tonics, for 24 years it has been aiding people to positively overcome constipation. Try it yourself. 25c and 50c a box.

THE GUIDE STORY

"Why does everybody about here conspire to abuse a certain unfortunate Mr. Stern who seems to own a lot of land? I have heard that man called 'a mean wretch,' 'a cowardly brute,' 'a detestable cockney,' and 'a rat,' while all that I can discover against him is that he naturally tries to protect his ducks and chickens by shooting every fox when he gets a chance."
Squire Pett almost groaned.
"Bless the girl! She's an utter heathen!" he exclaimed; then, as

Firefly continued to gaze at him, bewildered, he choked down his perturbation sufficiently to give her a full and convincing instruction on the subject of English sport, to which she patiently listened.

CHAPTER XIII

A Riding Lesson

"I wish to consult you on a very serious topic," said Miss Granby, after she had watched Firefly flitting about her room for some time.
"Dear me, that sounds rather exciting," said the girl, who that morning was looking her best in a scarlet dress that matched the hue in her cheeks.

"Yes, I feel worried, and you must come and sit quietly beside me, or I shall not be able to collect my thoughts."

The old lady spoke fretfully and Firefly drew up a chair.

"There, I am quite ready to listen, Aunt Charity," said Firefly.

"It is about Olwen, my dear," said Miss Charity, pursing up her mouth and looking important.

"Miss Ransome?"

"Yes. Have you noticed, child, that we have seen a great deal of the Pett family lately?"

"Well, now you mention it, they have been here a good many times. I suppose it is on account of the theatricals, and the riding lessons, and the skating."

"My dear, I am an old woman, but I have not lost all the use of my eyes, nor the use of my faculties. When a young man is always making some excuse to visit a particular house it generally means that there is some attraction in that house. I wish that it had been the oldest brother. There is something to my mind eminently refined about that young man, but I have nothing against young Harry Pett at all, and I feel convinced that his affections are centred on Olwen. At first my imagination went a little astray and I fancied that he was attracted by your pretty face, child—no, you need not blush, for I am only an old woman, and since I have seen you together of late and perceived how antagonistic you are to the poor young man, I have found the right solution in the thought that he admires Olwen."

Firefly had not blushed. She had merely dimpled all over with sudden amusement.

"Well, Aunt Charity?"

"I shall be very glad if Olwen makes a suitable marriage. The youth, though not well off at present, is well connected and of a kindly nature. What I wish to consult you about is the Renfrews' ball on the thirtieth."

"Ah! said Firefly. "Everyone says it will be a splendid ball."

"It is the principal ball of the season, I am informed," said the old lady, with emphasis "and if this little affair is successful, my greatness must appear at that ball suitably attired. Young men, when they are in love, like to see a girl prettily dressed. You are acquainted with dear Olwen's little whims by now. You know she clothes herself in a perfectly unbecoming manner. She has accepted this invitation, and unless we do something she will attend that ball."

"In a straight, narrow, unadorned black velvet dress and rational shoes," said Firefly.

"Quite so my dear. Now that I have taken you into my confidence, will you try to persuade Olwen to dress suitably for the event?"

Thoughts ran quickly through Firefly's head. Miss Granby had hardly finished speaking when she glanced ahead, recognized possibilities, also that some of her own plans might need readjusting if this proposed resolution came about.

"Thank you, I feel much relieved. You will not, however, have any disturbance over it? I implore you not to have any disturbance, nor to mention my name in the matter. Use your own tact, child. Perhaps you could also persuade her to alter her daily mode of dress a little. Those high, stiff collars are dreadfully unbecoming to her! You see how very important it is just now, that dear Olwen should look her best."

"One thing at a time, Aunt Charity," said Firefly, "if everything is to be in trim for the thirtieth, the ball dress is the first thing."

Miss Granby was right in saying that of late a good deal had been seen of the Pett family. Generally it was Hal who rode over on Laddie with some carefully framed message concerning the ice or more often than not requiring enlightenment concerning his part in the play "Sir Lesley," as Firefly had nicknamed the elder brother, had appeared more than once.

WAR ON FOREST FIRES

Completing her 25,000-mile cruise around the world in the course of which she visited 18 countries and 27 ports, Canadian Pacific flagship Empress of Australia docked at New York April 12, from which port she sailed December 2 last. She was carrying 320 passengers, including prominent society and banking leaders of Montreal, Toronto and other Canadian and United States cities.

Winnipeg.—Over a thousand new homesteads have been filed in the four western provinces during the month of January and February this year, being 1,036 as compared with 629 for the same two months' period of last year. By provinces, Manitoba reports 74 homestead entries as against 71 last year, Saskatchewan 430 as against 336, Alberta 502 as against 213, and British Columbia 30 against 9.

Raymond.—According to a cable from London, England, discoveries likely to be important for the Canadian beet sugar industry have been made at Oxford. A means has been found to dry the sugar beet and thus allow the manufacture of sugar to be continued throughout the year, and it is even believed that a method of treating the resulting effluent in such a way as to free it from poison has also come to light. The discoveries are a result of four years' research work.

Vancouver.—I am satisfied with the progress of Canadian products in the Chinese trade field and prospects for the increase of trade are extremely good," Col. Moore Cosgrave, Canadian Government Trade Commissioner to China, said here on his arrival from the Orient. "Canadian products of all kinds and especially those from British Columbia are being very well received in China now. There is no real boycott against Canadian goods; the Chinese merchant knows his prices and knows where to place his orders."

Announcement has been made from Canadian Pacific Railway headquarters that a "Remembrance Tour" is being organized for the coming summer for ex-soldiers, their relations and friends to visit the scenes of battles in France and Flanders during the Great War. The tour will leave Montreal July 13 next, on board Canadian Pacific liner "Duchess of Bedford," one of the new cabin class steamships which will be placed by the company on the St. Lawrence route this year.

THE "ICE PATROL"

Its Duty Is to Locate Icebergs Nearest Steamship Lanes of Atlantic Ocean—Mountains Afloat.

The Swiss navy is an ancient pantomime joke; a certain lesser European power possesses a fleet of a couple of submarines but no warships, while the Grand Fleet of Monaco consists of a number of motor-boats on the lakes.

But the smallest fleet in the world boasts the biggest owner—it is an international affair, and the countries concerned in its upkeep are Great Britain, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway, Sweden, and the United States.

The International Derelict Destruction, Ice Observation, and Ice Patrol service was created in January, 1914, after the Titanic disaster had roused a universal demand for safety measures, says a writer in Tit-Bits. The United States agreed to provide two vessels to patrol the danger area during the iceberg season.

The Modoc and the Tampa comprise the fleet, with the Seneca in reserve. These ships are 240 feet long and 39 feet broad, while some of the bergs they meet are about 700 feet long, 250 feet wide, and 200 feet in height above water.

The cutters are armed with one five-inch gun forward and another aft, a three-inch anti-aircraft gun, and two six-pounders for saluting. The ships are driven by electricity, attaining a speed of fifteen knots, and are the smallest vessels which regularly sail the North Atlantic beyond the Grand Banks.

The official job of this miniature navy is "to locate the icebergs and ice-fields nearest the transatlantic steamship lanes, and to determine the southerly, easterly, and westerly limits of the ice as it moves to the southward and keep track of all ice seen or reported."

As only one of the vessels operates at a time, the work being carried out in "shifts" of two weeks each, it sounds a tall order, more especially when it is considered that the cutter sometimes follows one iceberg from the time it is sighted until it melts in the Gulf Stream or breaks up on some shore.

The icebergs come from Greenland, which is covered by an ice-cap 5,000 feet thick, and they drift about 1,800 miles before they reach the lanes of traffic.

The navigating officer of the vessels is also the oceanographer, and he, with the wireless operator, transfers from one ship to the other as it is relieved. He is a veritable marine encyclopaedia, and must know his vessel's position at any moment of the day or night.

He keeps a changing record of the movements of all ships within 400 miles. He also keeps account of all floating ice in the steamship lanes and sends radio warnings of weather, derelicts, and ice, prepares weather charts, received and answers requests from ships by radio, and is responsible for all experiments.

The work of the men is made difficult because icebergs, even on a starlit night, cannot be seen beyond half a mile.

DREDGING FOR TIN.

Fleet of 100 Craft Will Add 1,500 Tons Per Month to Output.

A very important question, the effect on output of the new dredges which are now coming into use in Malaya, was answered or forecasted, for the first time, by Mr. King, chairman of the Malaya Shamese prospecting company.

It had been estimated by many engineers a year or so back that when these got in full work 1,500 tons per month would be added to the tin output, which would have affected the tin position of the world. About 72 of these large new dredges have now been installed in Malaya and about 30 more are to be added this year. Each produces about twenty tons per month and will float and travel not before worth handling.

Mr. King, after a very careful investigation, considers that, allowing for the fact that these are being used on ground formerly worked by Chinese-owned mines and, however, dropping in output heavily, about 30 per cent in the last few years.

The tin output in China itself is said to be at present also only 4,000 tons instead of the normal 8,000 tons. Mr. King, therefore, thinks that the new dredges will not add much to the world's total tin output as it stands today except to make up for falling supplies from other sources.

Benefit of Irrigation.

California has virtually the same average under cultivation now that it had in 1885, but much greater crops are raised through the spread of irrigation, according to J. J. Haly, Jr., deputy chief of the division of engineering and irrigation.

In 1885, he said, approximately 12,000,000 acres were under cultivation. To-day, while the acreage of cultivation remains about the same, 114 irrigation districts are functioning to water some 3,999,150 acres. These districts have to date voted $140,000,000 for their water development.

Irrigation in Korea.

Land owners in one section of Korea have organized the Shewa Irrigation Guild in order to take advantage of the Japanese Government's financial aid in reclaiming waste land.

It is planned to reclaim an extensive tract through irrigation at a total cost of $25,000,000 over a six-year period. The rice yield of that district will then be increased by about 1,000,000 koku (roughly five million bushels), it is estimated.

5 hours—OR 3 minutes?

FLOYD W. PARSONS, the well-known publicity expert said that on his last trip to France the telephone authorities told him it would take five hours to give him telephone connection between Paris and Havre. It only takes a railway train five hours.

Herc, he could have been talking as great a distance in three or four minutes—if he gave the operator the distant number.

If you don't know the distant number, Long Distance will look it up for you, and tell you what it is, so you can make a memo. of it for future use.

A wise move is to give us a list of the firms you talk with by Long Distance, and let us supply the numbers. We will, gladly.

Do you buy advertised goods?

Of course you do; everybody does. Just run over in your mind the various articles that you have purchased in the last week. How about foods? Your breakfast fruits, cereals and bacon are all advertised. Probably that is how you first came to know of them—through advertising. Probably the shoes you are wearing, or the dress or suit you have on are equally well known advertised makes and you are proud of them. In the home. On the floor are rugs and linoleum—the better wearing kinds are extensively advertised. What about the kitchen? Aluminum ware, gas ranges, hot water heaters, dish and clothes washers, cooking utensils of all kinds—practically everything you use is advertised. You buy advertised products because you have confidence in them. You know that a manufacturer cannot afford to advertise shoddy or unworthy merchandise. Advertising is a form of insurance. It gives you a feeling of perfect confidence and safety when you ask for an advertised brand, for you know that you will get the quality and the service you expect. The name is the guarantee. The more you read advertising the more you will know about human progress. You will become well posted in almost every line of human endeavor and a canny judge of values. To read advertisements is a fine habit. Cultivate it.

Read the advertisements and buy the advertised goods. They are the safest investment.

NON THEATRE-GOERS: DON'T READ THIS

It Is Intended For Capitolian Patrons Only

On Wednesday and Thursday, Al Stagg and his popular organization will present their nineteenth revue "Hits of Yesterday," which I expect, will prove one of their biggest successes, if not the biggest yet. All the numbers will be old ones, so old as to be new to nearly everyone, and from a wealth of material there has been selected a surefire program rich in melody and humor. To middle aged and older folk, this program will recall many happy associations of other days, while to the young people it will prove that pep and fun were not originated as recently as some may think.

I know you will enjoy every minute of "Hits of Yesterday" and I ask you, in appreciation of the great entertainment the Capitolians have given you during the last two seasons, to join me in an effort to break their attendance record. Tell your friends who are not theatre-goers what they are missing and urge them to go this time. They will thank you afterwards, while the larger the audience the more the Capitolians will be encouraged and the better time everybody will have.

Keep it Painted! Pride shines in the eyes of certain home owners you know as they invite you in. They may not make the comment openly but they would like to say, if the truth be told: "Isn't this a pretty little place of mine?" "Isn't it kept well?" Get the dingy spots covered with paint and have the same feeling.

COME IN and we will help you select your requirements.
