

DEFENCE COUNCIL AND COL. EWING CLASH TUESDAY IN LIBEL ACTION

Frank Regan Declared Witness for Plaintiff was Trying to be Clever in His Answers.— Trial Will Likely Continue Until End of Week.

From the lips of the man who, so far as has been yet disclosed, left the first band of Canadians in Mons on the night of November 10, 1918, the court in Sir Arthur Currie's libel suit Tuesday heard the narrative of that night. There was nothing consciously impressive in the telling. The very simplicity of the story was the most impressive feature.

Modest Account of Capture

There was an unassumed modesty about the major's recounting of the incident, for incident it seemed, in the way he told it. Throughout most of his evidence, he made practically no personal reference to himself. He spoke always of the "company commander" as though he were telling of the deeds of some other person.

About 10 a.m. on November 10 he said, he was at Jemappes, where the 42nd had its headquarters. He received verbal orders to advance and take over the territory held by No. 4 company of the P.P.C.L.I.

The company "kicked off" about 10.20, proceeding along the main road to Mons, until it reached the Princess Pats just where the road skirts the south side of the Condemons canal. There was a laugh when Major Grafftey told of talking to Capt. White, commanding the Princess Pats Company in the basement of a brewery. When the company was passing through the brewery yard the troops were observed by the Germans guarding the western entrance to Mons and were subjected to intermittent shell fire, and also some machine gun and rifle action. They were close enough to the city to make such fire effective.

The company had been ordered not to place itself in danger of too many casualties, so the commander ordered the men to take shelter in houses along the roads. Small scouting parties were sent out, however, and in the most matter of fact voice the commander told how at 5.30 in the afternoon, Lieut. McLaren, leading a patrol, had established a post only 50 feet away from a German machine gun in Mons. The men had gained this point undetected by climbing over back fences which sheltered them from view of the enemy.

It was not until dusk that someone ventured forward, but at that time, one platoon, commanded by Lieut. M. Handley and accompanied by Major Grafftey, "tried out" the road. They attained a position just at the place where the canal turns to the north right in the environs of Mons. It was at 9 p.m. that they reached the point.

Platoon Takes City

Two Lewis guns were carried from there forward by the platoon for protection on the right flank, where a German machine gun had been very active during the afternoon. This was now silent, however, and the gallant little No. 16 platoon passed through a farm yard, thru the railway yards, and right into the city, where a post was established.

The city, Major Grafftey said, was quiet. One could imagine, he stated, nothing more quiet. Back to the main body of his company went runners and the whole company was at the new post by midnight.

Major Grafftey then sent three of his platoons through the city on a search for enemy troops. One, under the command of Captain J. Stewart, was sent through the centre of the city; another under Company Sergt.-Major Young, went to the north around the boulevard and the third took a southerly course, under Lieut. Handley. All were instructed to make their way to the Place de Flandres, on the extreme eastern edge of the city.

There was no recklessness, Lieut. Handley was told to keep a sharp watch for a machine gun post to the south which had been spitting during the afternoon. The Major said the company was not to proceed until it was sure that the gun had "pulled stakes."

Fifteen minutes later, sounds of firing came from the south and the commander said he imagined that Lieut. Handley's platoon had become engaged in a minor conflict. He learned later that the platoon, near the location of the machine gun post, had thrown several hand grenades in its general direction. Receiving no reply the men concluded that the post had been abandoned and continued on their way.

Four Prisoners

By 4.30 the survey was completed and all three platoons had met at their objective point in the east. The net result of the tour had been the capture of four German prisoners, who were believed to have composed the crew of the machine gun in the south. Between 6.30 and 7.30, Major Grafftey started toward the centre of the city, and was met by the president of the chamber du commerce, who greeted him cordially. He was escorted to the hotel de ville, where he met his commanding officer, Lieut. Col. Royal H. Ewing.

It was at 7.45 the armistice message reached the officers, through the signal officer Lieut. Biggar. Major Grafftey immediately sent the news to his men on the eastern side of the city, the message reaching them at 8. Meanwhile the other companies of the 42nd had reached the city and had passed on to high ground east of Mons.

"We took to billets," calmly said

POLICE COURT

Motorists will continue to speed across intersections in Port Hope and Fred Hahet of Ottawa was the last motorist to land in the toils of the law and consequently he donated $5 and costs to Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell.

The Major. "Our company show was over." The company show to which he referred so lightly had been, according to his account, the occupation of an important Belgian city and railroad centre which had been in the hands of the enemy for four years, by a single platoon of soldiers.

In reply to questions of Mr Tilley chief counsel for Sir Arthur, Major Grafftey said his total casualties amounted to two men killed and ten wounded. The last wounds were received about four p.m. and the company had not been under fire since four thirty.

Frank Regan, chief defence counsel, tried to bring information from the witness as to the doings of the other companies of the battalion, but the Major could only give hearsay. He knew only that C Company had entered the city between 1 and 2 in the morning, but could give no definite information as to when the others arrived, what casualties they had suffered or what fighting they had encountered. He declared, however, that there was no fighting in the city after midnight.

Not Fair Assumption

"If there had been any more fighting you would have heard it," said Mr. Regan. "That is a fair assumption isn't it?" "No, it is not a fair assumption," replied the witness. "Would you have heard any fighting?" the defence counsel pressed. "I can answer that in fifteen ways" was the reply.

"Well, said Mr. Regan, just answer it in the way I want you to." "That is the way I don't want to answer it," said the Major. "Did you hear any more firing?" "Yes,"

"In Mons?" "No." Mr. Regan questioned the witness as to the four men for whom a civic funeral was held in Mons on November 12. Two of these, Lance-Corporal Jones and Private Mills, the witness said, were of his company the two men he had referred to previously. He did not know the other two.

Mr. Regan questioned him as to the report of the battalion which told of a machine gun on the right flank of the company at 5 p.m. The witness said he had seen the gun, but that it was idle.

"Why didn't you advance then?" asked Mr. Regan. "The gun might have changed its mind," suggested Mr. Tilley.

"Is that the reason?" asked Mr. Regan. "I did not want to make fools of my men by leading them into danger."

At the beginning Albert Kelly, a former officer of the P.P.C.L.I. and now demonstrator in engineering at McGill University, was called to explain a large map which he had prepared, showing the Mons area.

Joseph Freeman who was a transport corporal in the 42nd Battalion, told of the incident referred to earlier in the case, of a shell exploding in the battalion headquarters at Jemappes on November 10, killing two men and wounding ten, four of them fatally. Freeman suffered the loss of a foot. He said he went to hospital "quick."

"Did you go back?" asked Mr. Tilley. "No, thank God," he replied.

James Page, regimental sergeant major of the battalion, also spoke of the shell which brought havoc to the transport line while the battalion was at rest. He also told of the movement of the battalion on November 10.

He went to Mons with regimental details by way of Cuesmes. He saw one dead soldier, a member of the Princess Pats, just outside of Mons, but no others.

SCHOOL CADETS TO BE INSPECTED

Annual Inspection of the High School Cadets To Be Held May 4th

The annual inspection of the Port Hope High School cadet corps will take place on Friday, May 4th at 2.45 p.m. The general public are cordially invited to attend the various exercises on the program which will consist of ceremonial, company drill, platoon drill, Strathcona exercises, extended order drill and games.

The bitterest battle of the day came when Col. Ewing, commander of the 42nd, was in the box, there were constant clashes between him and Mr. Regan and the counsel was several times rebuked by the judge for his attitude toward the witness.

Mr. Regan declared the Colonel was trying to be "clever" in his answers and warned him that he would ask the court to force him to answer properly.

The fireworks started when Mr. Regan told the colonel that other witnesses had given him a different explanation of the disposition of the companies of the battalion. "No one knows better than I do," declared the colonel, "and they were there."

"I suppose you have discussed this case with other witnesses for the plaintiff?" "Absolutely, exactly, really," replied the colonel. "And you all agreed?" "No," was the answer. "We found mistakes which we did not know existed."

"Where did you find them?" asked the counsel. "In the war diaries for instance, they were considered a necessary evil in the army." The judge took Mr. Regan to task for grilling the witness as to the time casualties took place in his battalion on November 10. He asked how many casualties occurred after the 42nd had relieved the Princess Pats but when the colonel started to tell of casualties in his forward line, Mr. Regan stopped him abruptly.

"I don't care about the forward line, I want to know how many casualties you had after you took over the territory," he declared.

Col. Ewing said this was impossible to answer as he did not know the exact time when the transfer was made. The reliefs were carried out, he said, at different hours.

The lawyer refused to believe that an officer commanding a battalion would be without this information and continued his grilling until halted by the judge.

In response to a question, the colonel said he received news of the armistice at 7.45 a.m.

"It was no news to you then?" asked Mr. Regan. "I should say it was," replied the colonel. "Oh, it was, eh?" asked Mr. Regan.

"I heard nothing about it until a newspaperman told me the afternoon before that an armistice was coming. It was Mr. Livesay in whom you put so much dependence and I told him that, if he went too far down the street there would be no armistice for him," replied the witness.

Mr. Regan had previously tried to read quotations from a book written by F. B. Livesay, who was a war correspondent in France and had been refused the privilege. This answer of the colonel's drew a complaint from the lawyer to the bench, about the clever answers.

"I want to be serious about this," said Col. Ewing. "Mr. Livesay came to me the afternoon of the 10th and told me there was nothing between us and Berlin. I did not believe him, and I told him that it would not be safe to go past the street in Cuesmes, where the conversation took place. He went down to the corner and found that I was right. A German machine gun opened up and he had to run back."

Speakers at some of the meetings of horticultural societies, recently held in the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham, have strongly advocated the planting of nut trees. It is contended that these will be a future source of profit to both rural and urban residents as well as providing necessary shade.

AVIATOR DEAD

Floyd Bennett died in the Jeffrey Hall hospital at Quebec today of pneumonia.

America lost one of her greatest airmen and the whole world mourned one of the pioneers who played a conspicuous part in the stirring aviation feats of the past year.

Bennett died in the cause to which he had devoted his life. Although in ill health, he sacrificed himself to fly with relief from Detroit for the transatlantic plane Bremen on Greenley Island.

Double pneumonia developed. The man who piloted Commander Richard E. Byrd to the North Pole and risked his life in other daring feats was unable to combat it in his weakened condition.

RABIES OUTBREAK NEAR KINGSTON

Eight More Cases Reported To Be Under Treatment At Napanee

The outbreak of rabies in Kingston district has reached a most alarming state, Federal inspectors who are at work reported. There are 26 people taking treatment in the Kingston General Hospital, while there are eight more under treatment at Napanee.

Dr. D. M. Robertson, of the Department of Agriculture, animals branch, is working in the district in connection with the outbreak. The inspectors drew attention to the seriousness of the situation and the great need for the by-law to be rigidly observed, stating that unless dogs are tied up all the time, there is great danger of them coming in contact with other infected dogs.

Federal officers state that they have noticed that residents of rural districts are not complying with the law, by keeping their dogs properly quarantined, and have issued a warning, stating that it depends absolutely on their co-operation how long the quarantine will have to be kept effective.

It was decided to seek the co-operation of the provincial police, as well as the city police in the matter and it is stated that action will be taken in all cases where co-operation is refused.

Four Federal officers are at present working in Frontenac and Lennox and Addington counties, and Dr. McKay of the Provincial Health Department, is in the city on behalf of the Ontario Government.

MISSING MAJOR REPORTED SEEN

Major Lean Reported Seen In Toronto—Supposed to Have Been Here Dec. 7th.

Major Osborne Lean, 187 Albany Ave., Toronto, who was reported to have been seen in H. W. Mitchell's drug store here on December 7th, is supposed to have been noticed in Toronto on Saturday on Firstbrook avenue by a woman who gave him a meal. The Major has been missing since November 29th.

After eating the meal the man went toward Woodbine avenue and the woman, knowing that Major Lean was suffering from loss of memory, notified the police. The police of Main street police station searched the east end of the city, but without avail.

Major Lean is about 52 years of age, six feet in height and about 200 pounds in weight. He has a scar across the lower right part of the nose; is bald at the top of the head; carries a cane and walks with decided limp due to an injury he received during the war. He has been reported in different sections of the city and in the adjoining country-side since his disappearance, but so far has not been definitely located.

Temporary injunctions have been granted against 25 soft drink parlors at Lafayette, Ind., as students of Purdue University visited the places.

CHICAGO MAN ENJOYS GUIDE

E. V. Montgomery, An Old High School Student Under Dr. Purslow

Quite a number of our readers both here and among those scattered about the earth will remember the writer of the following and take pleasure in reading it and thinking back to happy days in the Port Hope High School, 1406 Thorndale Ave., Chicago, April 21, 1928.

The Guide, Port Hope, Ont. Dear Sirs:—

Enclosed please find my cheque for two years' subscription to the Weekly Guide.

Notice some of your subscribers say they have been reading The Guide over 25 to 30 years since leaving the old town. I have been reading it for the past forty years since I left the old High School under the late Dr. Purslow, who was then head master, either having it sent to me by my father, the late J. T. Montgomery, or since his death direct to myself, and I have enjoyed everyone of them, as I like to keep in touch with the old town where I was born. Sorry to hear of the loss of the old T.C.S. by fire and hope they will be able to rebuild and stick to the old town.

Wishing you every success. Yours truly, E. V. Montgomery.

HEARD ON THE STREET

Well, what's the big thing for today?

Capitolians, sir!

And don't forget also the I.O. O.F. "At Home," in the Town Hall tonight. From present indications it will go over "big."

Showers seem to be an everyday occurrence, varied only by the occasional fall of the beautiful and stray beam of sunlight. But we will the more appreciate the sunshine and flowers when the clouds pass over and the rain is gone.

Councillor Hewson believes in building up Port Hope, he having bought a lot from Mrs. J. Thomas on Julia street and intends to erect a double garage on the same.

Our corner friend says that the local man manufacturing "Crispettes" as advertised in the Guide, certainly chose an opportune time to put his confection on the market when special emphasis is being made on Empire Shopping. One local confectioner sold 18 dozen last week which shows it is going to be popular.

Mr. Geo. Perry sold his house on Cumberland street to Mr. James Terrington, who will move there shortly.

The I.O.D.E. Rummage Sale yesterday afternoon was well attended and the results were very gratifying. It was held upstairs instead of in the basement as is usually the case on account of the building being flooded Sunday.

Fishing on the Bay of Quinte, about Deseronto, and from which some five hundred families obtain a livelihood, has been sadly spoiled this season by the terrific gales that have so frequently prevailed since the middle of March. The catch is two thirds as compared to other years.

THIS IS EMPIRE SHOPPING WEEK

Covers Week Commencing April 21st and Ending April 28th

It is probably correct to say that one cannot get a proper background for Empire Shopping Week in Canada without paying considerable attention to the fact that general conditions in Canada over a long period are more stable and sound than in many other countries, largely due to the fact that many of her people are of British stock, or are strongly affected by British traditions deepened and improved by long residence in Canada perhaps, in cases, residence for three or more generations.

No excuse is needed by any Canadian for holding strongly to the view that the type of civilization and its promise of development as shown in countries of the British Empire is one that Canadians desire to encourage. It is simply a natural and right thing for a Canadian or any other British citizen to do.

It is suggested occasionally that an attitude of this sort may in some way offend the susceptibilities of our great friends and neighbors to the South. How can it when they to a great extent share the same traditions modified by North American spaciousness and freedom with Canada shares with them, but modified too by many elements which the most loyal citizens of the United States themselves would say do not tend to raise the average of their civilization. Does that not make it all the more desirable for those who respect Canada to see that her more purely British and Canadian civilization is maintained.

Then, in purely trade matters, we all recognize that there must be very extensive business transactions between Canada and the United States. Many things because of convenience, because of cheapness, because of amplitude of supply will always find their way back and forward across the border.

Certainly no attempt is being made to upset economic laws. No country is more strongly seized of the idea of protecting its own industries and encouraging the purchase of goods made at home than the United States. However, the Governments of British countries throughout the Empire practically without exception reflecting what they think to be the feeling of the population at large, have established a system of granting preferential rates of customs duties or their equivalents to assist the entry of goods produced or made in other parts of the Empire.

That makes Empire Shopping Week in Canada come right in line with the public acts of various governments throughout the Empire. Canada is part of the Empire. She likes to be. She can benefit as greatly from the operations of Empire Shopping Week in Canada as her people or any other people engaged in producing goods in Canada and the rest of the Empire care to do without trespassing one iota on good taste or injuring the good relations existing in any part of the world. The pupils in many schools in Canada are going to be told today something about Empire Shopping Week in Canada. This whole question is of equal or even greater interest to every newspaper reader. The purpose of Empire Shopping Week in Canada is to bring to everybody's attention during the week of April 21st to April 28th, all of the various products that are made in Great Britain, Canada and other parts of the Empire and some of the underlying motives relative to trade. When the Empire Shopping Week comes along and the products of various countries of the Empire are displayed in the stores, they will know something about them and will have special occasion to see how much is made in their own home, Canada.

Leafs Idle

While a warm sun broke through the clouds early Tuesday morning and beamed all day on the baseball playing field at West Side Park, Jersey City, the large quality of moisture that covered the diamond, the result of two days' heavy downpour of rain, made it necessary to call off the third game of the series between Jersey City and the Toronto Leafs. It was the third hold up for the ball players in as many days.

With only today left for the Leafs and Black Cats to swing into action this trip of the Leafs the two teams endeavored to reel off a double header leaving the other two games of the series to be played the next visit there of the Toronto team.

Manager Bill O'Hara and his retinue of ball players are quartered at the Plaza Hotel and upon learning that the game was off several of the players visited the ball park, hoping for an opportunity to limber up, but finding the conditions unfavorable for work because of the soft going returned to the hotel.

In the afternoon, headed by Bill O'Hara, the boys hustled over to the Yankee Stadium to see Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and other Yankee stars do their stuff against Bucky Harris' Washington Senators.

"Babe" Gets Two

"Babe" Ruth got his big war club into action at New York Tuesday as Herbert Pennock held the Washington Senators to three hits and the Yankees won 4 to 0. Ruth's contribution consisted of two home runs into the right field bleachers giving him a total of three this season and putting him one up on Lou Gehrig. The bases were empty for each of the drives.

CROSS COUNTRY DERBY

Payne Retains 36 Minute Lead in the Bunion Derby

Andrew Payne of Claremore, Okla. retained a 36 minute lead over Peter Gavuzzi of England, in the transcontinental foot race when they tied with two other runners for tenth place in Wednesday's run of 32.4 miles from Waynesville to Rolla, the fifty-second control. Their time was 5:37.50.

Phillip Granville, Hamilton, the Dominion's walking champion, retained fourth place by running a dead heat with Ed. Garner, Seattle negro, in 4:39.37. His time for the 1969.3 miles from Los Angeles is 370.55.42 Andrew Constantinoff, Toronto Siberian, was sixteenth for the day in 5:59.24, 416.15.51 and other Canadian competitors as follows:

Thomas Ellis, Hamilton, 7.03.33—549.20.04.
John Cronick, Saskatoon, 6.27.58—382.37.06.

SOFTBALL

Will the Sanitary Repeat?

With the opening of the local softball season but two weeks away, keen interest is being manifested regarding the six teams that will compose the local softball loop for the 1928 season. Last season the Sanitary, Bankers, P.E. and Ganexskas composed the league and this year two new entries have been received, including the Mathews Conveyer and C.N.R. Little is known regarding the former entry but the latter team include "Deed" Hills of hockey fame, Frank Bird, former hardball pitcher, and Chas. Francey, a catcher of no mean ability, promise a strong entry. Deed Hills et al. are entering the league with a determination and the w/e entry may upset the dope.

Perhaps the most interesting question of present day discussion in softball circles is "Will the Sanitary repeat?" The tub manufacturers romped away with the McMahon Shield for three years in succession and at the last meeting of the executive, Manager R. Jex announced that his club would donate the shield for 1928 competition. They have strong hopes of repeating this year but the other nines are to be seriously considered.

Perhaps the strongest point in the Sanitary defensive is centred in the box. Williams has a mean delivery for opposing batters and will be capably backed up by tantalizing delivery of Sandy McDonald. Peacock, in all probability, will handle the backstopping; while O'Neill and Johns, who did not play last year owing to injuries, will battle it out for the initial sack. Manager Jex also held down this position for part time last year and may handle it himself. H. Wade will likely appear at the middle cushion with Rowden and Sell alternating at short. Ham is not working at the Sanitary this season, and maybe Vic Highfield of the Highway League champs last year can be approached to play the hot corner. The Wharfmen will present a strong trio in the outer garden and Munro, Clarke and Wakely will likely land the regular berths.

GYM AND PHYSICAL TRAINING

T.C.S. Meet

Before a large audience of the citizens of Woodstock, the students of Trinity College School, now located at the Woodstock College buildings, gave a display of gymnastics and physical training work in their annual competitions Monday afternoon. Practically all of the boys in the school took part and gave evidence of the training they had received from Sgt.-Major Batt.

Of the thirteen boys taking part, five did exceptionally fine work on the parallels. Walton, who headed the competition, was particularly good and Rous was best on the horizontal while Willy was outstanding on the horse.

The maximum mark was 185, and Walton, who came first, had a total of 174. The other seven who came out best in the competition were: Willy, 172½ marks; Rous, 168 marks; Medd with 164½; Kirk (Max) 155½; Irvine, 144½; Johnson (Max) 144½; Gardner (Max) 137½.

ORILLIA DECLARES MOSQUITO WAR

War on the mosquitos has been declared in Orillia. The battle will start from the air. The town has arranged for an aeroplane survey of the whole district to locate the breeding grounds of the blood thirsty marauders. As soon as the weather permits, it is understood the campaign will start.

R. Twinn of the Entomological branch, Ottawa, is there in connection with the battle and claims that if Orillia leads in wiping out the worst of summer pests it will greatly increase the volume of tourist traffic. Canadian mosquitos, he claims are the most blood thirsty in the world. But as they hatch only one breed in the year, they can be almost wiped out by systematic oiling of breeding pools in the early summer, he says.

The board of trade, the Orillia Kiwanis Club and other bodies are behind the campaign.

THRESHING 1927 ALBERTA CROP

Meanwhile Seeding Commences in South and Soon Will be General

Seeding was commenced at several points in Southern Alberta on Monday it was reported to the general office of the C.N.R. at Calgary. Work on the land in the Medicine Hat district was general and seeding had been started. Kipp, in the Lethbridge division, reported that seeding had commenced at two or three places and would be general within a few days.

No reports were received of harvesting of last season's crop, though it was expected to be fairly general in several communities following the coming of warm, bright spring weather in that section of the prairies.

The Capitoliens held a very successful final rehearsal last night and their program promise of being one of the best, if not the very best, yet.

THE GUIDE STORY

The squire was an open hearted man, and liked to keep open house at Greylands all the year round. Naturally, Hal could not neglect his father's other guests for the sake of humbly following one fair lady who teased him upon every opportunity, and openly declared that she much preferred the father to the son. It therefore came about that whenever he knew Miss Ransome would not be up at Greylands he would make his way to the Manor, and if Firefly proved impracticable would devote himself to Olwen, with whom he still continued to get on very well.

Hal made for the Manor pond one afternoon to find to his disgust that Olwen was giving an "At Home," of which the pond was the centre, chairs being in readiness for those who preferred to be propelled over the ice to skating and rugs and foot warmers being provided on the bank for all who cared to watch instead of being entertained indoors by Miss Granby.

Hal stood for a few seconds on the bank, wondering whether, not having received an invitation, he ought to efface himself. His happiness was not further increased when he noticed Firefly's little figure flitting over the ice in company with a good looking young man. With a muttered growl of disgust he was turning away when Olwen skated up to him, followed closely by Doctor Forrester.

"I'm glad you have come, Mr. Fogg. I wrote an invitation to you all at Greylands, but Firefly forgot to give you the letter. Do forgive us and put on your skates."

Olwen spoke kindly, but Hal was beginning to know her so well that he fancied he could detect that she was either worried or annoyed about something. While murmuring his thanks he glanced at her companion as the two moved away together easily and gracefully; for Olwen skated well. He thought to himself that if anything was the matter, the doctor was in it, for he certainly looked glum.

John was out of temper and he made no pretense to hide it. As they skated along, Olwen addressed him without looking at him. "One more turn round, and then I must go and speak to Mrs. Oxbridge. You have no right, Doctor Forrester, to be angry because I don't care to go and call on a tradeswoman."

"She is a lady," answered the doctor, "and this is the first request I have ever made to you, Miss Ransome. I thought you were above all such petty pride. Mrs. West is quite worthy of being visited by Miss Ransome, of the Manor, as you would be the first to recognize if you saw her. It is very hard for a cultured, refined woman to be ostracised because she earns her living. Besides, as I told you, I have other and deeper reasons for asking you to be her friend."

"Yes, and you refuse to tell me those reasons," said Olwen as she skated to a chair and sat down. "Will you take off my skates for me, please?"

"Why can't you trust me a little, Miss Ransome? You have known me long enough now, surely, to feel that I would not ask you to do any thing unbecoming to your position. Neither would I run the risk of offending you—but for some strong reason."

"All the same, I do require some better reason than you have yet given before I shall call on the woman who has opened a cyclists' rest at The Briars," replied Olwen coldly, yet hating herself at the time for being so churlish. "You said, I think, that it is not because you want me to help her with money, or to get her custom?"

John flushed, and Olwen noted the fact and stored the memory of it away for future consideration.

"No, she needs no help of that kind." "What does she want, then, or rather what do you want for her? An entrance into society? I am afraid that, comparative stranger as I am to Woodlands, I shall not be able to persuade it to receive a tradeswoman, however much of a lady she may be."

"How heartless and uncharitable some rich women are," exclaimed the doctor indignantly, as he rose, swinging Olwen's skates with one hand "and how you do like to persist in harping on that odious word 'tradeswoman!'"

"Well, tell me at any rate, some thing about this interesting widow's late husband. What was his profession?"

John bit his lips. The tone of Olwen's voice more than the words tried his temper sorely. Furthermore, there was a certain reason why he found her last question embarrassing and, being naturally a straight-forward man, that combined to irritate him still further. He therefore answered somewhat doggedly.

"I did not know him and I cannot tell you."

"Yet you are a friend of his widow! How strange!" remarked Olwen.

"ACROSS CANADA" TOURS VIA CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

This summer there will be two "Across Canada" tours via the Canadian National Railways. Both of them will include the best known scenic features of Western Canada, the Canadian Rockies and the Pacific Coast. The most outstanding of these will be the stop over at Jasper Park Lodge in Jasper National Park, and the famous Triangle tour of British Columbia, thirteen hundred miles by rail and five hundred and fifty miles by steamer through the most wonderful mountain scenery in the world. The second tour will include in addition a side trip by steamer to Alaska, that mysterious land of glaciers and totem poles.

These tours will leave Toronto July 4th, returning to this city July 26th and 30th, respectively. They will be personally conducted and the prices are "All Expense" charges, covering transportation, sleeping car, steamer and hotel accommodations, meals, sight-seeing drives and gratuities.

THE LEANING TOWER OF PORT HOPE

In this little stream of ours,
Was the only place for the towers,
Of which our hopes lay
And were there to stay,
In this little town of ours.

And it formed our harbor then,
Which just gave us ten
Times as much trade,
And that is what made
This little town of ours.

And a lighthouse was built on the pier,
So by which big vessels could steer,
Or not to go past
This little town of ours.

And these big vessels did bring,
Every good small and big thing;
And got from us wheat,
And nothing could beat
This little town of ours.

The West Winds did blow,
And there came with it snow,
And part of the pier
Was washed away here
At this little town of ours.

And this lighthouse stood for years,
Which was on one of the piers,
And the waves made a hollow beneath it,
And it was not kept a secret,
In this little town of ours.

And it looked like the leaning tower of Pisa,
And everybody was at ease-ah,
But if only they could make,
The things just run jake,
As this little town of ours.

And the West Winds did blow,
On that Friday afternoon so,
And it was blown into the sea,
And there forever more to be,
At this little town of ours.

HOPE TOWNSHIP COUNCIL MEET

The regular monthly meeting of the Hope Township Council was held in the Bank of Toronto chambers on Saturday afternoon. Reeve Mont. Wilson presided and all the members were in attendance.

John Anderson spoke to the Council regarding the killing of his sheep by dogs. One of the dogs was owned by W. Mason while the other belonged to Mr. Sproutt. The former agreed to kill his dog but the latter did not agree to do so. The clerk was instructed to inform Mr. Sproutt that he must pay half the costs while the council paid the other half which totalled $10.

A resolution was passed whereby the Township was divided into sections. The Reeve and Deputy Reeve will look after sub-divisions 1 and 2 and part of 3, south of the highway; Councilor Caldwell will look after sub-division 4; Councilor Dean sub-division 5, and Councilor Mercer No. 6 and a portion of sub-division 3 north of the highway.

Dr. A. C. Beatty of Garden Hill, was appointed M.O.H. for 1928 at a salary of $200 which is an increase of $100 over that of last year.
