FLAMES MENACE YARKER VILLAGE

Locomotive Whistle Fails To Rouse Citizens—Damage Over $65,000

The entire village of Yarker, about thirty miles northwest of Kingston, was menaced by fire at an early hour on Sunday, when the old Benjamin plant, used as a box factory and the administration building were totally destroyed. Considerable damage was done to other buildings in the vicinity. Only the presence of several members of the Kingston and Napanee fire departments, with some of their equipment saved the village from what looked like certain destruction. As it is, the damage which was early estimated at about $65,000, may be closer to $100,000 when final checking up is completed.

The fire was discovered by members of the crew of a freight train, which was passing through Yarker about four o'clock Sunday morning. They immediately started a continual whistling, but the villagers were not alarmed, and the crew had to hastily leave their train and sound the alarm.

The village bucket brigade did gallant work, but their efforts were not nearly sufficient, and hurry calls were sent to Kingston and Napanee. Fire Chief James Armstrong of the Kingston brigade, along with several members of the department, and the big pumper, were rushed to the scene and played three lines of hose for more than five hours. The residence of Mr. Freeman, a short distance away, caught fire, but was soon under control, while a frame dwelling across the street was badly scorched. As soon as the main fire was under control, fire broke out in the power house, across the river, but it was quickly extinguished.

The factory which was destroyed was formerly an axle and spring factory, and latterly had been used as a box factory. Employees were working in it up to ten o'clock on Saturday.

Brock Leonard, son of the station agent at Yarker, was seriously injured when a part of the wall fell on him. He was rushed to the Kingston General Hospital where his condition is still serious.

Residents of the village were profuse in their thanks to the Kingston and Napanee departments, expressing themselves as certain the entire village would have been wiped out had it not been for them.

REGAN, PRESTON ADDRESS JURY

CHIEF COUNSEL FOR DEFENCE DELIVERED MASTERFUL ADDRESS IN TWO HOURS

Shortly after the opening of the court at Cobourg at 1.30 this afternoon, Frank Regan, chief counsel for defence, commenced his address to the jury in the $50,000 Currie libel action. The case was masterfully presented and Mr. Regan concluded at 3.42. At this stage W. T. R. Preston commenced his address and is proceeding as we go to press.

WEDDING BELLS

A very pretty wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Baulch, Bedford street, Port Hope, at one o'clock Saturday afternoon, when their daughter, Edith Belle, was united in marriage to Charles "Chuck" Reaves of Niagara Falls. Rev. F. W. Anderson of the Port Hope United Church performed the ceremony.

The bride, who entered the drawing room to the strains of the wedding march played by Mrs. W. G. Currie of Toronto, looked charming in a beautiful dress of white tulle and tulle with white embroidered tulle veil caught with a band of silver leaves and carried a bouquet of butterfly roses and lily of the valley.

The bridesmaid, Miss Madeline Leuty, looked very pretty in a dainty gown of white georgette, a white picture hat trimmed with pale pink and carried a bouquet of ophelia roses.

The groom was supported by Mr. Algie Davis of Toronto and was the recipient of a sterling silver belt buckle and the gift to the bridesmaid was a pearl bar pin. The groom's gift to the bride was a diamond bar pin.

After a dainty wedding luncheon, Mr. and Mrs. Reaves left on a honeymoon for western points, the bride travelling in frock and hat of a soft shade of rose georgette and blue velour coat trimmed with natural wolf. On their return they will reside in Niagara Falls, Ont.

Miss Baulch has been living in Toronto for the past few years where she was extremely popular with the younger set. Last year she was president of the Lakeside Ladies' Athletic Club.

Charles "Chuck" Reaves is also outstanding in sports and is probably the best basketball player in Canada. He was a member of the West End "Y" Basketball team when they were winning championships and is also prominent in baseball, rugby and hockey.

Among the guests who attended the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. J. T. McCurdy, Peterboro; Mr. and Mrs. J. McIntyre, Toronto; Mr. Ed. Reaves, Niagara Falls, N.Y.; Mrs. Ed. Broadbent, Port Hope; Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Currie, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Howard Mitchell, Toronto; Mrs. Annie Gammerson, Toronto; Captain and Mrs. J. H. Salery, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Colin Hamlyn, Port Hope; Mrs. Alberta Hansman, Port Hope; Mrs. W. R. Thompson, Cobourg; Miss Clara Brockenshire and Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Baulch, of Port Hope.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. James Walker and family wish to express their appreciation of the many kindnesses shown during the illness of the late Rachel Leonard Walker, and the kindnesses of friends who sent flowers and loaned cars during our recent bereavement.

About twenty friends of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Mitchell, Walton st., assembled at their home Saturday evening to celebrate their 19th wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell were presented with a silver sandwich tray, a fancy lamp, a bouquet of flowers and a large fern. The visitors were thanked for their thoughtfulness and a very pleasant evening was spent.

I.O.O.F. PARADE TO CHURCH

Durham Lodge No. 78 and Visiting Brethren Attend Service at United Church

In fitting commemoration of the 109th anniversary of the Order and more particularly to render thanks to God for his unflinching goodness to the Order during another year, local Oddfellows and a large number of visiting brethren paraded to the evening service at the United Church on Sunday. They were joined at the church by some twenty five or thirty members of the Rebekah Degree and the centre section of the large auditorium was comfortably filled.

The minister, Rev. F. W. Anderson, M.A., conducted the service, and preached a splendid sermon from the Master's words found in the story of the Good Samaritan. "Go and do Thou Likewise." The preacher held the rapt attention of the Oddfellows and Rebekahs as well as the large congregation as he graphically depicted the attitude of the priest and the Levite as they looked upon the poor sufferer, who had been robbed and wounded by bandits, and they had no pity, but had passed by on the other side. The compassion of the Samaritan was also dwelt upon at some length and although the unfortunate sufferer was supposed to be an enemy of the Samaritans the good man hastened to give relief and provided rest and shelter to the man who had met with such cruel treatment on his journey from Jerusalem to Jericho. Mr. Anderson strove to impress upon his hearers the necessity of helping the other fellow no matter what his creed or nationality might be, and quoted the words of the practical Apostle James, when he wrote: "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this; To visit the fatherless and the widows in their affliction and to keep himself unspotted from the world." The discourse was a most practical one as one brother afterwards remarked: "It was the best Oddfellow sermon I have ever heard."

The music was of a high order, and the choir was out in full force. The hymns were well chosen and were all familiar to the Oddfellows, and they certainly entered into the singing of them with a great deal of devotional spirit. A duet by Messrs. A. E. Fulford and G. Darling was a most enjoyable feature, and Mrs. Van Alstine sang "Open the Gates of the Temple" in a charming manner. It is a beautiful selection and this talented singer did full justice to it. The Anthem by the choir was a treat to listen to and showed careful training and attentive practice.

On returning to the Lodge Room, votes of thanks were passed to the minister, choir and visiting brethren and the Rebekahs. Light refreshments were afterwards served.

EVIDENCE IS CONCLUDED IN CURRIE LIBEL ACTION AT COBOURG

Case Will Likely Be Continued Until Tuesday When Jury Will Render Verdict.—General and Lawyer Stage Combat Which Throws Court Into Up roar.

Hurling defiance at Frank Regan, chief defence counsel in the $50,000 libel action of Gen. Sir Arthur Currie, Maj.-Gen. J. H. McBrien, until a year ago Chief of Staff for the Dominion, Saturday threw the court into the greatest uproar which it has yet experienced. The bitter encounter came on the last day of evidence in the trial and was a smashing climax for what will go down in legal history as one of the most sensational actions tried in a Canadian court.

Gen. McBrien stated that he was not used to such treatment as the lawyer tried to mete out to him, and loudly declared that he did not have to do what Mr. Regan told him to. "You have been very funny for a long time and very insulting as well," he said.

Reputation of Highest Order

When the general took the stand, there seemed little prospect of anything exciting. He was one of several high officers called as "reputation" witnesses by W. N. Tilley, K. C., chief counsel for Sir Arthur. Mr. Tilley gleaned from him the statement that Gen. Currie's reputation among military men was "of the highest order."

The plaintiff's counsel then turned to an order issued by Marshall Fokh on November 9, 1918. Gen. McBrien said he had seen a certified copy of the order and had also seen a translation of it published in a book of war history appearing three years ago.

Mr. Tilley produced the book in question and asked Gen. McBrien to read the order from it.

"I object to the reading of that book. I have tried to read from books, and they have been ruled out," declared Mr. Regan.

"I am merely attempting to prove publication. I want to show that, three years ago, this order was published and was available to the defendants," said Mr. Tilley.

"My friend is attempting to produce proof of malice. When I tried to disprove malice, I was ruled out. That book proves nothing," said Mr. Regan.

"Oh, Mr. Regan," said the judge, "don't make such absurd statements. No evidence to disprove malice was refused by me. I have explained my rulings in a way that should be clear to counsel, but you do not seem to grasp the distinction between my rulings."

Mr. Tilley said he was quite willing to leave the book out, if the court would admit a certified copy of the order. He produced this copy, accompanied by a translation from the French, and a certification made by the United States Secretary of War and Secretary of State.

Objects to Foreign Copy

Mr. Regan still objected, on the ground that, if the original order could not be brought in, the next best available evidence should be produced. This, he said, would be the British copy, and he urged that the copy brought from a foreign country should not be admitted.

There was argument from both sides, and after considerable deliberation, the judge found in favor of the defendant, ruling out both the book and the copy of the order. Mr. Tilley immediately abandoned this questioning.

As soon, however, as Mr. Regan took up his cross examination, he started to delve into the translation appearing in the book, which the general still held in his hand.

"I want you to look at that translation and tell me if the word 'pressure' occurs in that order," he said to the witness.

"Oh, you are bringing the book in now, are you?" said Mr. Tilley.

"No, never mind it," said Mr. Regan hurriedly.

"Oh yes, now we will have it," insisted Mr. Tilley. Mr. Regan was forced to continue with his examination on the order, and he again asked about the word "pressure." The General started to make a statement about the order.

"Answer me, yes or no, does the word 'pressure' appear in that order?" shouted Mr. Regan.

"I won't answer you yes or no," declared the general in just as heated a tone.

"Then close the book. We will not go any further with it," demanded Mr. Regan. This demand was accompanied by the shaking in the general's direction of Mr. Regan's horn rimmed glasses, which he held in his hand.

"I won't close the book," shouted the general. "I don't have to do what you tell me in this court. If His Lordship tells me to close the book, I will do it."

Belligerent Shaking
"And don't shake your glasses at me. I am not used to it. If you shake your glasses at me, I will shake the book at you." And he did, in a belligerent manner.

"All right, I'll put the glasses on," said Mr. Regan.

As he replaced his spectacles and began to consult a document in his hand, the general said, "You have been very funny for a long time, Mr. Regan."

"Oh, is that so?" retorted the counsel.

"Yes, and very insulting as well," declared Gen. McBrien. "You will not be that way with me."

"My Lord, I demand that the witness be compelled to retract the remark."

"Oh, get on with your examination," urged the judge.

"Very well, I will go on," said Mr. Regan.

"But don't shake things at me, I am nervous," said General McBrien.

Opening of the court found Sir Arthur Currie still in the box, under cross examination by W. T. R. Preston, one of the defendants. The latter kept on the line of questioning as to why the general had never attempted to defend himself from the attack made on him in the House of Commons by the late Sir Sam Hughes in 1919. He wanted to know why none of his friends on the floor of the House had answered the former Minister of Militia.

"He was answered" declared Gen. Currie.

"By whom?" demanded Mr. Preston.

"By Col. Cy Peck, a very gallant officer who won his Victoria Cross. He answered Sir Sam Hughes, I think it was the next day, in forceful terms."

"Was Col. Peck at Mons?" asked Mr. Preston.

"No, but he was in France, and knew more about it than Sir Sam. Even as severe as Sir Sam was, he was not as severe as you. He did not say I took Mons for my own glorification; you did. He did not say the soldiers had their guns trained on me ready to shoot; you did."

"It was common rumor, common talk," declared Mr. Preston.

"Do you consider your report to be a sufficient answer to the charges or rumors against yourself?"

"It would be a most improper thing," replied Sir Arthur, "for me, a commanding officer, to shape an official report so as to answer a charge or rumors against myself."

"But this is your only answer to your trouble with the department and the government?" asked Mr. Preston.

"I had no trouble with the department, the government or the people of Canada. My only trouble was with one man."

"What would have been the result if you had simply caught Mons in a sort of pincers and waited for the Germans to vacate it?" asked Mr. Preston.

"There might have been a very serious result," replied the command. "In many former instances, when we occupied certain ground without clearing the enemy from a town within the area we suffered severe casualties. That was a lesson dearly learned."

In answer to further questions, Sir Arthur declared the Germans were not being routed, that they were not running away, and the German people "would be the last to admit it." He declared the retirement was orderly and that, if the Germans had been allowed to reach the line of the Meuse, the war would have been prolonged, and casualties much increased.

Gen. Currie said he knew armistice envoys had come through the lines, but he did not know they had agreed on terms, until he received official word on the morning of November 11. Even so, it was only an armistice.

"Is there any instance in history, where, hostilities have been resumed after an armistice had been declared?" asked Mr. Preston.

"Yes, many instances," replied the general.

"Will you name one?"

"The American Civil War."

"Was there an armistice there?" asked Mr. Preston.

"Are we going into the Civil War now? We have a very good war here," said Mr. Tilley.

No Traitors in Corps.

"I think you said," remarked Mr. Preston, "that you would have been a traitor if you had ceased hostilities as soon as you received news of the armistice. Had you any traitors in your corps?"

"No," replied Sir Arthur firmly.

"How about Col. Ewing?" barked the defendant, and there was an audible gasp from the audience.

"I submit, my Lord that that is not a proper question," declared Mr. Tilley.

"It certainly is not," declared the judge.

Col. Royal H. Ewing, commander of the 42nd Battalion had testified a few days before that, after hearing of the armistice in Mons, he sent word forward to stand fast where they were.

"I think," said General Currie, "that, in justice to Col. Ewing, I should be allowed to say that some of his men had reached their objective before he received the news. Also, other troops had gone thru them, and were far in advance of the position of the 42nd Battalion."

"Some of them had attained their objective," said Mr. Preston.

"It was not necessary to send them all there," declared General Currie.

"We are not going to try Colonel Ewing here," declared the judge firmly, putting an end to the argument.

It was at this stage that Mr. Justice Rose asked about several exhibits for which numbers had reserved, pending preparation of copies of documents by representatives of the Records Department. He wanted to know if Mr. Regan was going to put the min. The latter said he had not yet received them from the Ottawa officers.

Col. Walter Gow, who was Deputy Minister of Overseas Militia during the war, told of having driven into Mons on Armistice Day with the late General Sir Edward Morrison, at that time in command of the Canadian Artillery. He said that of the way into the city, he saw three or four German bodies, but no Canadians.

Col. George B. McLaughlin, D.S.O. and Bar, officer commanding the 2nd Battalion, was called briefly for evidence as to Sir Arthur's reputation. He described it as "enviable."

The last witness of the case was Major George G. D. Kilpatrick, D.S.D., senior chaplain of the 3rd Division. He was asked by Mr. Tilley about the way in which the soldiers received word of the armistice.

Lack of Rejoicing

"We were all struck by the lack of any rejoicing on the part of the troops. We went about among them and there seemed to be a strange unreality about the whole thing. There were celebrations in Mons, but they were all on the part of civilians."

The chaplain told of the addresses delivered at the graveside in the plot set aside for the Canadians, by the burgo-master and the Parliamentary representative of the Province of Hinaud. One sentence from the latter's address he recited in court. It ran:

"There are those in your land who sorrow this day. Tell them their sons are in our keeping. They rest in a corner of Belgium which is forever Canada."

"If opportunity ever offers," remarked Mr. Regan, "will you tell the people of Belgium that those sentiments are re-echoed by Mr. Wilson and Mr. Preston."

Three Addresses to Jury

All that now remains of the case, which has attracted notice, not only throughout Canada, but throughout the whole Empire, is the argument before the jury and the verdict. Court resumed at 1:30 on Monday, with Mr. Regan's address coming first. He will be followed by Mr. Preston, who is conducting his own defence. Then Mr. Tilley will sum up for the plaintiff and the judge's charge will follow.

There is doubt that Monday will see the end. Although a night session has been suggested, it is not yet assured. All parties Saturday assured the court that their arguments would be comparatively brief but the case has been so extensive in its scope that it is difficult to estimate the time necessary for the addresses.

The trial started two weeks ago on Monday, April 16. Since that time, the court has sat each day from 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. and three times has opened half an hour earlier, with one session lasting until 7 p.m. During that time, witnesses have been called holding almost every rank in the army.

There have been representatives from practically every unit which was in the vicinity of Mons. They have ranged from privates to brigadiers, and each one has added his bit to the story of the last few days of the war.

Defence witnesses told of seeing many bodies in and about Mons on

Armistice Day and, in rebuttal, the plaintiff has produced evidence tending to show that Mons was taken without the loss of a single life attendant on the actual entry of the city.

Voluminous Records

Volumes of records, orders, war maps and newspaper clippings have been introduced. Throughout the trial, three executive officers of the Department of Records, at Ottawa, have been in attendance with bags filled with documents from the department. Many of these have been copied, the copies appearing as exhibits in the trial, and there have been acrimonious passages when others have been refused, on the ground that their revelation would be "against the interests of state business."

The action arose out of the publication in the Port Hope Guide of June 13, 1927, an article entitled Mons. This article, from the pen of W. T. R. Preston, declared that, "on the last day, the last hour and almost the last minute" of the war, Canadian troops were ordered not to attack on Mons "for the glorification of the Canadian Headquarters Staff." It charges that the city was taken with an appalling loss of life.

The result of the publication was a writ from Gen. Sir Arthur Currie, commander of the Canadian Corps in France, demanding $50,000 damages and exemplary damages for libel from Mr. Preston and F. W. Wilson, publisher of the paper. The case has been tried before a special jury, with Hon. Mr. Justice Rose, of the Supreme Court of Ontario, on the bench.

PORT HOPE GIRL SINGS AT ROYAL

Studied in Europe and is Professional Soloist in Toronto

On Wednesday and Thursday of this week the Port Hope Tennis Club is holding special theatre nights at the Royal and has been very fortunate in securing as an added attraction Miss Elfrida Boulton of Toronto. Miss Boulton is a Port Hope girl and though it is several years since she has sung here, many will remember her work in local musical comedies. Since then she has studied in Europe and is now a professional soloist in Toronto, where she recently had one of the leading roles in an opera at the Regent Theatre.

The screen program for Wednesday and Thursday has been specially selected and features Reginald Denry's latest comedy drama "That's My Daddy," in which a diminutive coming star, little Jane LaVerne, is prominent. This youngster figuratively runs away with the picture and will win the heart of everyone. Admission both nights of course, is open to the public.

Popular Story Tonight

"The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come" from the widely read book by John Fox Jr., is the attraction for tonight and tomorrow and should prove one of the best drawing cards of the season.

Mrs. Magdalena Egley, 52, mother of eighteen children, died at Decatur, Ind., from poison accidentally swallowed.

OBITUARY

REV. ROBERT McCULLOCH

Early on Sunday morning Rev. Robert McCulloch passed quietly away at his home, 96 Walmsley Boulevard, Toronto, after a brief illness. He was born in Darlington, July 17th, 1843. He taught school for a time and then entered the ministry of the Methodist Church graduating in theology from Victoria College, Cobourg in 1867. During his college days he supplied the pulpit at Capton, where he met his wife, Evelina Hawkins. They were married in June 1873, and celebrated their golden wedding in 1923. Mrs. McCulloch predeceased her husband, March, 1924. The Rev. Mr. McCulloch spent 45 years in the active ministry, holding charges in the Toronto and Bay of Quinte Conferences at Merrickville, Samia, Melbourne, Cobourg, Woodville, Keene, Millbrook, Lloydstown, Rosemont, Cookstown, Hampton, Tyrone, Newburgh, Marmora, Omeme and Greenbank. He was president of the Bay of Quinte Conference 1908-09, and three times a delegate to the General Conference of the Methodist Church of Canada. After superannuation he removed to Toronto and became a member of the Timothy Eaton Memorial Church. During the pastorate of the late Dr. James Henderson he took an active part in the ministry and until recently was a most regular attendant at the quarterly board and the regular church services.

His strong, upright life, devotion to duty, financial leadership, Scotch integrity and perseverance have been a great asset to the churches he has served throughout his long ministry.

Rev. Mr. McCulloch is survived by a sister, Mrs. William Gilbert, and a brother, James McCulloch, both of Toronto. He leaves five children Mrs. George Deroche of Belleville; Dr. Edward A., Dr. R. J. P., Dr. A. Ernest and Miss Ella McCulloch of Toronto. There are seven grandchildren.

The Sarplice Closing

TEA-TIME at the Royal Poinsettia, a marimba band playing, and the breeze sweeping lazily from the blue Gulf Stream across the wide verandahs. In this exquisite frame, the gay printed frock shows here supplies the picture. It is well in the van of fashion. Trimming bands in two shades repeat the colors of the material and accent the sarplice closing of the waist. They edge the straight gathered skirt and make the cuffs that tie in bows. Either in plain or printed crepe de chine, georgette, or voile, this dress is lovely and it is becoming to most every one—whether stout or thin. (Copyright, 1928, by Butterick)

Allen Aneller, 22, was killed at Mishawaka, Ind., when his automobile crashed into street car.

Twilight beetle, discovered in Long Island in 1923, came from Japan and scientists say may become national pest.

Nancy Miller Blackskquirrel, oldest Indian on Tonowanda reservation, near Batavia, N.Y., observed her 109th birthday.

"No, I will find something else for her to do," answered Olwen. "she is, as you say, estimable, and has hitherto suited me."

While she was thinking she heard a well known step in the carriage drive, near which she was standing. "What a late visit, doc!" she called out.

"Then this is not a professional visit to Miss Granby?" exclaimed Firefly in surprise, trying in vain through the darkness to see the expression on his face.

"What do you mean? Is she ill? I wanted to see her tonight—on business."

"Not all of us. You will not lose your patient, Miss Granby. Miss Ransome has some shopping to do in London and we may go over to Paris in search of one of her requirements—which is indigenous to the soil."

Leafs Take Two

Before 6500 fans at Baltimore Sunday, Toronto opened its series with the Baltimore Orioles and crashed out two victories by 10 to 2 and 11 to 8 scores.

Joe Rabbitt's terrific hitting which brought him a double, triple and home run, was instrumental in the seven-inning nightcap. However, it was Renss's homer in the third with two men on base that gave Toronto the lead.

HEARD ON THE STREET

Good morning! 'Twas a lovely change!

We'll have to put a nick in the gate post—we really had one fine week-end—most unusual weather, you know!

Blue Monday, the usual week end storm was a few hours late to spoil the Sunday promenade, but in time to supply soft water for wash day.

Make sure what time your train goes; several got fooled last night coming out of Toronto and were carried through here and had to get a taxi back, which added to their costs of travel.

Tonight the Young Peoples' Society of Elizabethville will be here with their inter-league debating team. The local United Church Society will be represented by Miss Hazel Wright and Mr. John Moon. The subject chosen for tonight will form the basis of a very interesting discussion. Our representatives are to prove that "Electricity is more useful to man than steam."

A goodly number of the local Rotarian Club members are in Toronto attending the 27th District Convention being held today and tomorrow in the King Edward Hotel. Many of them are accompanied by their wives.

Look over the Railway Time Table corrections which have been made. Don't be going to catch trains that have already left.

The program of the recital to be given by Mr. Fred Winfield under Port Hope Music Club auspices will be found in this issue. It looks good.

The Wesleyville Y.P.S. play has been so successful when presented in Wesleyville and Canton that it is being brought here next week under the auspices of the United Church Y.P.S. of Port Hope. "Go Slow, Mary" is the title of the play and it only costs "two bits" to get in.

The Port Hope Fire Brigade received a run at 3.15 Sunday afternoon to a grass fire on Ross street, just off Pine street. A frame shed was slightly scorched and the use of chemicals was necessary. No damage was done.

R. B. Lloyd, a barber of Oshawa, has purchased the first airplane to be owned in Oshawa. The plane arrived in the city Friday from New York, piloted by W. N. Milne of Peterboro, who was accompanied by Mr. Lloyd for part of the trip. Mr. Lloyd intends securing the services of an instructor in the near future.

Provincial Constable McCoy of Madoc, succeeded in arresting Harold Stone after an exciting chase in the wilds of North Hastings. The accused is held as a suspect in connection with the recent fire which destroyed the general store of Hubbell Brothers near Paudash Lake. Stone was armed when taken, having a .45 revolver and plenty of ammunition. The officer and the man met on the railway track and the battle started. The constable's dog took a hand and jumped on the man while the officer made him secure with handcuffs.

With the mercury standing above eighty all over the prairies the farmers kept at their seeding in many sections right through the Sabbath. Work on the land is delayed a week but with the excessive heat and high winds drying out the low lands, it is believed seeding will be completed within the next ten days at least. For the past week the weather has permitted seeding even on the low lands. The work is being rushed by the moonlight in some cases as well as on Sunday.

COMING TOMORROW

is coming to Olver's store with all the new models of Spring Suits and Overcoats from Semi-Ready Made-To-Measure. Hundreds of cloths to choose from.

COME IN and see the show.

CARS CRASH ON HIGHWAY

Two Oshawa Cars Damaged On Highway Sunday Near Newtonville

The only week end auto accident in this district occurred Sunday afternoon shortly after three o'clock when a Buick coach driven by E. Hartley of Oshawa, collided with a Chevrolet coach operated by Miss Elmley of the same city, on the Provincial highway just east of Newtonville.

Both cars were proceeding in an easterly direction and Miss Elmley turned off the pavement to the left in an attempt to turn around. Hartley was driving at a moderate speed and crashed into the car. His right front bumper was slightly damaged while the Chevrolet sustained a damaged left front bumper and wheel.

H.T.O. Gordon Hallick investigated the accident.
