SILVER WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Rosevear Honored By Large Number Of Friends

On Saturday, March 31, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Rosevear of Bethesda, received the congratulations and felicitations of their many friends on the occasion of their 25th wedding anniversary. At noon a sumptuous dinner was served to twenty five guests. The dining hall was beautifully decorated with bunting and the tables with tulips and roses. The toasts were given by Rev. G. McKee, of Baltimore. The bride and groom of a quarter century were the recipients of many lovely silver gifts. The afternoon and night was spent in games, contests and music. The following were present Mr. and Mrs. White, Brighton; Mr. and Mrs. Jones, Peterboro; Miss Ellis, Madoc; Miss Chatterton, Colborne; Mr. and Mrs. John Rosevear and daughter, Ina, Harwood; Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Ferguson, Camborne; Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Macklin; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Macklin, Bethesda; Rev. J. G. and Mrs. McKee, Baltimore.

PETERBORO BUS REMAINED HERE

Unable To Traverse Peterboro Highway On Thursday Night

Portions of the Port Hope-Peterboro Highway proved troublesome spots for motorists to navigate over the holiday and several cars were stuck axle deep in the mud. The Toronto-Peterboro transportation bus that leaves here at 8 o'clock was unable to get past Bewdley and was forced to return to Port Hope with its load of holiday visitors, who were content to remain overnight until the departure of the seven o'clock Canadian National train Friday morning.

TO HELP OUR TOURIST TRADE

Some New Regulations Have Been Announced At Ottawa

Announcement of new regulations respecting the entry of tourists' out fits into Canada was made by Hon. William D. Euler, minister of nation al revenue. Action by Mr. Euler is for the purpose of assisting in the development of Canada's tourist traffic.

Guns, rifles (not including revolvers or pistols), fishing tackle, golf clubs, tennis rackets and cameras, previously used by a tourist and imported by him for personal use and actually in his possession at the time of his arrival in Canada, may be admitted without deposit. The articles must be reported on a form known as E-29, as in the case of any other article comprising a tourist's outfit, with full particulars, for the purposes of identification on report outward under customs supervision within six months. The filling out of this form for these particular articles is not required, though, where the tourist has entered by an automobile.

Canoes, outboard motors, tents, camp equipment, phonographs, radios, musical instruments, etc. brought in for tourists' personal use and not for gain or hire, may be admitted upon the collector being furnished with a cash deposit of a sum equivalent to the duty and taxes payable thereon. This deposit is subject to refund if the articles be exported and identified at the customs port where imported inwards, or at another port within six months of the time of entry.

It is further provided that the articles be produced and their identity attested to before a Canadian customs officer at the place of export or before a customs officer, justice of the peace, or notary public, at a place outside of Canada. A form known as form E-29 must be filled in by the tourist.

DRUNK CHARGE IS DISMISSED

Nicholas "Nick" Tamin Was Arraigned In Port Hope Police Court

Nicholas Tamin, commonly known as "Nick," faced a charge of intoxication in Police Court here Saturday morning before Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell and after hearing the evidence of three witnesses, the case was dismissed. Accused was represented by W. F. McMahon and pleaded not guilty to the charge. Chief of Police Murphy testified that he saw Tamin emerge from Hunt's pool room about 9.20 on the evening of March 31st and after staggering along the wall, went into the Queen's Hotel. Before leaving he saw Tamin and another man sparring in the ante room of the shop.

"Did you think this an altercation or just buffonery?" asked Mr. McMahon in the cross examination. "He was a little rough." "Any argument?" "I did not hear any."

"And you saw him walk from one door to another and base the charge on that and no other evidence?" "Only that."

George Sleeman testified that he was with Tamin continuously from 8 to 10 o'clock on the night in question and that he did not leave the pool room until about ten o'clock. He seemed perfectly sober. Albert Breen swore that he saw Sleeman and Tamin in the pool room and that Tamin did not leave from eight until ten o'clock. He was perfectly sober during that time, said the witness.

Mrs. W. Jones, Hagerman st., testified that Tamin, who lodges at her house came home on the evening of March 31st and did not appear to be intoxicated. Magistrate Campbell, in summing up the case, stated that someone was evidently mistaken regarding the time but was forced to deliver judgment according to the evidence. Consequently the case was dismissed.

Sandwich eaten from road side stand caused the death of Dr. Wm. Demuth, New Philadelphia, Ohio, of potmaine poisoning.

TRUCK RUNS INTO DELIVERY WAGON

W. Sandercock Sustains Injuries When Delivery Wagon Is Rammed

When a delivery wagon owned by Fred Oke, local grocer, and driven by W. Sandercock, was proceeding up Ontario Street Thursday evening it was rammed by a truck driven by K. Ware. The wagon was badly damaged and the driver was dragged along the pavement for a considerable distance.

It is stated that Sandercock was starting to cross the right hand side to proceed up Young Street to the stables of his employer when struck by the truck which was proceeding north on Ontario Street. Sandercock sustained cuts and bruises on his head as well as lacerations on his arm.

CAR CRASHES THROUGH GUARD RAIL ON HIGHWAY; TWO PERSONS INJURED

Star Sedan Carries Four Occupants Over The Embankment at Roseberry Hill on Friday Morning—Robert E. VanEverdingen and Milton Oliver Taken to Hospital.

As a result of a serious accident which occurred on the Provincial Highway west of here at eight o'clock Friday morning, Robert E. VanEverdingen and Milton Oliver of Port Hope, were taken to the Port Hope Hospital suffering from severe injuries and Herbert Rogers and Charles Scott, also of this town, miraculously escaped serious injury. The car was practically completely demolished and was towed to Stephenson's Motor Cales. This morning it was learned that the two injured young men at the hospital were resting quite comfortably.

The party were returning from Toronto at eight o'clock Friday morning with VanEverdingen driving his Star Sedan with Charles Scott in the front seat and H Rogers and M. Oliver as occupants of the rear seat. When the sedan was descending Roseberry Hill, eight miles west of here, it is stated the driver evidently lost control and the car crashed through the guard rail on the south side of the road smashing off two or three stout posts. The vehicle rolled down the steep embankment and landed at the bottom on its four wheels and facing in a westerly direction.

Scott and Rogers were thrown clear from the car and escaped serious injury but both were badly shaken up. The latter, however, sustained a slight cut on the forehead. Oliver was partly pinned in the wreckage but was soon extricated. VanEverdingen was lodged beneath the debris and passing motorists who stopped at the scene assisted in removing him from his precarious position.

A. W. George & Son's ambulance was summoned and Oliver and Van Everdingen were rushed to the Port Hope Hospital. Dr. F. W. Beamish attended the young men. Oliver received a severe injury to his back as well as a badly lacerated arm. VanEverdingen sustained injuries to his head and chest and it is not known yet whether or not they are suffering internally.

The car was wrecked beyond repair and had the left front wheel and fender torn off and the whole body of the car crushed in, smashing every piece of glass in the car.

COMING EVENTS

BAND CONCERT ON WEDNESDAY

Local Musical Organization And Assisting Artists To Appear At Royal Theatre

It is several weeks since the Port Hope band gave the second of their Sunday concerts, and the public should welcome the announcement that next Wednesday evening this increasingly popular organization will be presented as an added attraction at the Royal Theatre. Many people expressed a desire to contribute something to the band in return for their enjoyable concerts, but as admission fees and collections are both prohibited on Sunday, there was no means of doing so. For the Wednesday engagement, the band will receive remuneration according to the attendance, so everyone who patronizes the Royal that evening will not only enjoy a double program of photoplays and music but will indirectly contribute to the funds of the band.

The concert will consist of several choice selections interspersed with vocal and instrumental solos by some of Port Hope's leading artists. Full particulars of this program will appear later.

OBITUARY

MISS E. MORTON

Miss Elizabeth Morton of Hamilton township, daughter of the late Richard Morton, died rather suddenly last Saturday evening. Friday afternoon she was seized with a severe pain in the back of her head and became unconscious a few hours later, she never regaining consciousness. Deceased had lived practically all her life in Hamilton township. Two brothers, Willard and John, of Hamilton Township and four sisters, Mrs. (Mary) Ferguson, of Hamilton township, Mrs. John Penwarden of Newtonville, Mrs. Wm. Scott of Port Hope and Mrs. Andrew Jamieson of Hope township, survive. Deceased was a member of St. Mark's Church, Port Hope, and a lady of exceptionally high Christian character, kind and neighborly.

The funeral was conducted by Rev. O. Rigby and the following gentlemen: Messrs. Frank Staples, Geo. Holdsworth, Geo. Burnham, Wm. Noble, H. Boudry and R. Ferguson, acted as pall bearers.

Her mortal remains were laid to rest in St. John's Cemetery.

THE GUIDE STORY

Just as she was about to turn homeward the sound of hoofs made her suspect that the battle was not yet ended and she again sat down, sharply ordering the dogs to be quiet.

Down the lane came the horse, starting at every sound, arching his neck, and picking his way gingerly through the mud. Firefly caught the glint of white round his eyes, and held her breath.

Again rose the sound of hoofs tearing up the ground. But the struggle was longer this time. As the horse reared and kicked savagely, Firefly heard the rider's steady voice saying: "Don't be a fool, Laddie. You've got to pass it, old chap." The result was the same, however; a sharp swerve round, then a mad stampede up the lane.

This time however, the horse was checked and brought round in a very few seconds, and Hal Pett, with a set expression round his mouth, tried another method. He walked the animal as near the desired spot as he would go without resistance, then pulled him up short, and sat there immovably, whistling unconcernedly.

Before long Laddie found this tedious, compared to a contest of wills, and tried to swerve round, and succeeded easily enough, only that he was forced to continue turning till once more he faced down the lane. Then he tried kicking, then bucking, then rearing, only to find at the close of each movement his head was still pointing down the lane and that his rider was apparently indifferent.

Then began a fresh contest, in which the horse did his level best to tire the man. Like an animal carved in granite, Laddie stood motionless, except when Hal tried to urge him forward; when he backed till his legs were in a sliding position.

Firefly could stand it no longer, with a stern order to the dogs to stay where they were, she walked up the lane.

"That is not the way to manage a horse. I will lead him past, I suppose he is afraid of those stones poor creature?" she said.

Though Harry Pett was six feet two inches, broad shouldered, and the champion horseman of the district, he was bashful, as far as the gentler sex was concerned; therefore instead of telling Firefly that he knew his own business best, he blushed.

"Er—thank you—you are very kind," he stammered, and waited for the girl's next proceeding.

Laddie seemingly liked the feel of Firefly's soft little hand against his cheek. The fire died out of his eyes, and after a moment's hesitation, he obeyed the pressure on the reins, and allowed himself to be led down the lane quietly.

"There," exclaimed Firefly triumphantly. "I knew that was the way; but why didn't you use the whip at first? A good cut would have settled matters long ago."

Hal's embarrassment gave way to honest indignation.

He looked at her keenly.

"Excuse me, but that idiotic practice of using the whip on every occasion is the one way to ruin a brute's temper. He was scared the other day by a fool letting off a gun behind that hedge, and with a Corrugated, nothing but patience will cure a fright like that."

Then suddenly realizing that he had used uncomplimentary language with regard to a lady's advice, he added hastily: "I am sure I am awfully obliged though. It was jolly nice of you to lend a hand, thinking I was in a fix, but—er—you won't be annoyed if I go back again, will you? I came out this morning intending to set the beggar's nerves straight, and being led past isn't the same thing as obeying, and walking past."

Firefly began to think that man and horse were alike masterful. She let go Laddie's bridle.

The horse then became a trifle restive.

"I am sorry I spoiled the lesson, Mr. Pett," she said, "I hope Laddie will not keep you here all day for that lesson. Perhaps, after all, you know best."

"Er—I am very sorry" said Hal, nervously, looking at her with bewildered eyes, wondering whether he could have been dolt enough to have met this delightfully pretty girl and yet have forgotten her completely.

There was an awkward silence. "No, it is alright," said Firefly mischievously. "You don't know me in the least. I recognized you as Mr. Pett, from someone's description. You live at Greylands, don't you or rather at the Wool Farm, and you are number two of three brothers, and—er—there, I won't tell you any more of your own history. Good by, and a pleasant morning."

Hal sat stupidly staring, while Firefly picked her way over the

and as daintily as ever Laddie had done it. Then, as the dogs rushed to meet her, barking and yelping in a way that made Laddie dance in sympathy, a light flashed across his mind.

ENCOURAGING TOURISTS

Touring in Canada is an American fad and touring the United States is quite as popular with Canadians. But it is conceivable that there would have been more crossing of the border for pleasure had there been less red tape involved in the undertaking. Border formalities have been the "f" in the ointment of touring on the other side of the boundary.

For some years both governments have been trying to make it easier to cross the border. The latest move in that direction is abolition of the permit heretofore issued to American motorists upon entering the Dominion for an extended stay. Issuance of these permits necessarily delayed tourists at the border, with a consequent tie-up of traffic.

Now the motorist who does not remain in Canada longer than thirty days needs only the registration card for his car to re-enter the United States. Those who wish to remain longer must furnish the bond as in the past.

It is to the mutual advantage of both countries to foster this exchange of guests. Canada reaps a rich harvest from the hundreds of thousands who come from the States in the course of a year, and the United States need not discount the value of the tourist business coming from the Dominion. But the benefits are not confined to the materialistic. As long as these two great American peoples enjoy mutual understanding and sympathy all will be well along the international boundary, and the seed of understanding and sympathy is knowledge gained by actual contact.—Oshawa Times.

SOUND WAVES TO SET WOOD AFIRE

Scientists Develop Waves That Also Burn Through Glass

Jazz, the shriek of siren and the office boy who is given to whistling have convinced most people that nothing remains to be added to the field of devastating sounds. Yet in a private laboratory in Tuxedo Park, at New York, a Johns Hopkins professor and a New York banker are conducting researches with sound waves that will set fire to a piece of wood, bore a hole through a plate of glass and cause a clear liquid to turn dark blue or murder a goldfish in its bath. And while performing such experiments with these terrific sound waves, it is not necessary for the investigators to wear earmuffs or plug their ears with cotton. The frequency of the waves is so high that they cannot be heard.

The conductors of this work are Robert W. Wood, Professor of Experimental Physics at Johns Hopkins, and Alfred L. Loomis, Vice-president of Bonbright and Co. The apparatus needed was so complicated that it went beyond the facilities of the present physics laboratory at Johns Hopkins. Mr. Loomis had to have it built by the General Electric Company. He had it set up in the private laboratory at his home in Tuxedo Park, where he finds in the wonders of physics an absorbing recreation and hobby.

Intense sound waves at the rate of 300,000 vibrations a second, a frequency comparable to that of certain light waves, are set up by what is called a piezo-electric oscillator, operated by a 50,000 volt current. The highest frequency of sound waves that can be heard by the human ear vibrate at the rate of almost 20,000 per second. The upper-sound waves of Professor Wood's and Mr. Loomis's experiments vibrate so rapidly that they do not register in the air. A heavier medium is needed to produce them, and so they are generated by a disc-shaped oscillator of quartz which is submerged in oil.

High frequency sound waves of this type first became an object of research during the war when Prof. Langevin of France invented apparatus for their production in an effort to locate submarines "by the echo of a narrow beam of high frequency sound waves."

No one can say what the ultimate value of the research will be. Faraday, pressed for an answer to a similar question—the researches which led later to the invention of the dynamo—growled: "What use has a baby?" The first task is to discover and determine the action of new scientific phenomena. This is the initial requirement toward paving the way for the practical applications that follow. It is the type of work in which Professor Wood and Mr. Loomis are now engaged.

Sound That Burns Wood

Here are some of the things they have already found out:
They placed a tapering glass rod in an oil bath through which the high frequency sound waves were passing. The waves were transmitted to the rod which, when pressed between the thumb and finger, burned a groove in the skin. A chip of pine, when pressed against the rod, began to smoke and emit sparks and soon had a hole burned clear through it. The sound driven rod would also drill a hole through the plate of glass.

"Oil and water will not mix" was an adage at which the high frequency sound waves laughed. When the waves were passed through oil that floated on the surface of water, they broke up the two fluids into tiny drops and mixed them in an emulsion. They even broke up mercury into such fine particles that it hung suspended in water, forming a water and mercury mixture of the emulsion or colloid type.

In fact, the sound waves kicked up such a disturbance in fluids that they caused mists of fog or mercury vapor over water or mercury. This spray or pulse wave was very like the cloud of white spray which used to arrive on the surface of the ocean when depth bombs were exploded. It would appear instantaneously with the explosion, before the rising of the great mound of water which was forced up an instant later.

The sound waves also produced queer chemical tricks. Their vibrations brought about the so-called clock reaction in which a clear transparent solution quickly changes to a dark blue. Equally strange was the fact that they appeared to be able to change paraffin into a crystalline form. They also had the power to generate heat on the interior of a solid as quickly as on the surface. Blocks of ice submitted to this test melted as quickly at the core as on the outside.

Professor Wood and Mr. Loomis might hear the weird song of high frequency sound waves if they cared to dip their ears into one of the solutions through which the waves were passing. But they know better than to try. It would probably be the last sound their ear drums would ever register. This is because of the effect, already demonstrated of the waves on living tissue.

When the investigators dipped their fingers in the solutions through which the waves passed, a sharp pain was felt, not on the skin, but on the surface of the bones. When they pinched glass threads that were dipped in vibrating fluids, red marks resembling blood blisters appeared later below the skin.

Possible Use in Disease
On small living organisms the effect of the sound waves was terrific. From spirogyra, tiny creatures with hair-like filaments, these appendages were torn. One-celled organisms, called paramecium, broke in pieces when the waves passed through the water on which they swam. Frogs and fish died within a few minutes. Mice were able to stand up better, but when a sample of their blood was taken, after they had been exposed to the waves, it was found that the number of red corpuscles had fallen off 450 percent.

Whether these corpuscles had been destroyed cannot as yet be said. Biologists assert that, when a mouse is frightened, the red blood corpuscles run and hide in its liver until the danger is over. But when red blood corpuscles were placed in a test tube solution, and the waves were passed through it, the corpuscles were destroyed.

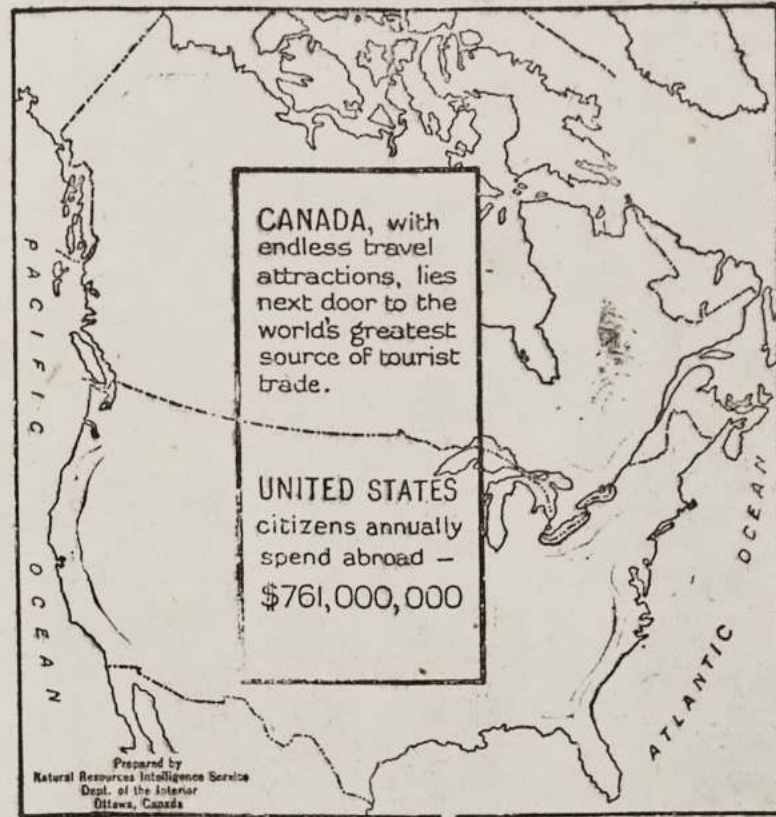

Dr. Joseph S. Ames of Johns Hopkins says that the science of physics holds as great or even greater promises for the future conquest of disease than does the already prolific science of chemistry. These sound waves that blast the one-celled paramecium may be capable of dealing a like fate to disease germs. But will it be possible to tune them in such a manner that they will slay the germ and yet not injure the blood or the tissues of the living body? Perhaps a way will be found to harness and tame the lightning of these high frequency sound waves.

IN SPRING A FISHERMAN'S FANCY TURNS TO HIS FAVORITE STREAM

Fishing time is near again. The gear that brought you good luck last year is being overhauled—you are deciding on your fishing grounds.

Thoughts of the fun and sport you had last year are sprucing you on to new endeavors—where will it be—the same old spot where you fought it out with the big black bass, or new waters to conquer—where the lunge are eager for the bait—and cool streams haunted by the gamey speckled trout.

Timagami, Kawartha Lakes, Georgian Bay or Alouquin—wherever you wish to go, Canadian National Railways offer you a most satisfactory service. Any Canadian National Agent will be glad to help you plan your trip—he has all the information and trips that you want—ask him for descriptive booklets, game laws, etc.

CANADA, with endless travel attractions, lies next door to the world's greatest source of tourist trade.

UNITED STATES citizens annually spend abroad — $761,000,000

If the volume of United States tourist travel continues to grow at anything like its recent rate it will be only a matter of two or three years until the amount of money expended by Americans abroad reaches the colossal sum of a thousand million dollars a year. For 1926, according to the United States Department of Commerce, the outlay of American tourists was roundly $761,000,000—or nearly twice as much as the dominion government collects in tax revenues in an ordinary year.

Canada's position in relation to this trade is one of the matchless advantages. Already our tourist business represents in the dominion roughly $260,000,000 a year. And there is ample reason to believe that this total can be doubled in the next ten years. Canada possesses an endless variety of attractions for holiday seekers of all kinds, plus a four thousand mile frontage facing the world's wealthiest and largest source of tourist travel. Taken all in all, there is probably no other country so favorably situated for attracting tourist trade.

The warm welcome which Canadians extend to visitors, is an ever-growing influence in directing travel toward the dominion. Those who come gladly return again and bring their friends with them.

Valuable to Port Hope

The value of American trade to Port Hope is very great and a warm welcome should be given them to prompt them to return again to the prettiest town in Canada. With its paved streets and many other facilities, Port Hope should become a big attraction to American tourists.

For some time past the need of a suitable tourist camp has been felt and with the yearly increase in traffic, a suitable camp should be established. Suitable signs need erecting at the limits of the town and in this way Port Hope will gain considerable advertising. The town has offered little or no advancements to tourists and the establishment of a camp, provided with the necessary conveniences would be a boon to the town. The Kawartha Lakes are rapidly increasing in popularity and Port Hope is the gateway to this popular summer resort.

Vancouver.—The first radio telephone conversation between Vancouver and Great Britain took place on Thursday, March 8th, when a member of a local business firm talked to a representative of the firm in London. Each could hear the other distinctly, they said. The call lasted four minutes and cost $75. This conversation was said to be the longest ever made in the British Empire, spanning a distance of 7,000 miles.

John G. Strathlee, director of winter sports at the Chateau Frontenac, Quebec City, states that the winter season just concluded there was the best in the history of the city. Many parties came from New York, New England States, Chicago and even as far south as Wilmington, Del. The season practically came to an end with the Eastern International Dog Derby February 20-22, having commenced at the end of December.

POLA NEGRI

In "Barbed Wire," a powerful story of wartime behind the lines, which will be shown at the Royal Theatre on Monday and Tuesday, inaugurating the spring policy of 3 program changes weekly. This production deals not with battles but with the more interesting situations that developed away from the trenches. It is considered the best photoplay in which the great European actress has ever appeared.
