A REVIEW OF PRESTON'S BOOK

Manitoba Free Press Comments on Port Hoper's Recent Book

In a recent issue of the Literary and Book Review section of the Manitoba Free Press, J. W. Defoe reviews the recent book, "My Generation of Politics and Politicians," by W. T. R. Preston, Augusta St. The article reads as follows:—

In the last two decades of the 19th century, now sunk by nearly 30 years beneath time's horizon, all Canadians who took an interest in the country's politics, a definition which included nearly everybody, knew W. T. R. Preston or knew of him. His official position at that time was that of organizer for the Liberal party of Ontario, an office which did not necessarily make its occupant conspicuous. Some political organizers indeed preferred to be what was known in the argot of that time as "gumshoe artists," being neither seen nor heard, but only experienced. But Preston wasn't that kind. While, as the result proved, organization was not neglected, Preston was by preference a campaigner in the open. At a time when the gentle art of tearing political opponents to pieces on the platform was practised in Canada with a gusto and spirit of which these days know nothing, Preston made and held a reputation as one of the best political duellists of the day. In joint meetings and on numberless individual platforms throughout Ontario with occasional excursions to other parts of the Dominion, Preston for twenty years told the story, as he saw it, of Conservative perfidy, corruption and incapacity. Tens of thousands of people noted him in action and came to know him and his characteristics; the slight, wiry figure, alive with combativeness, the rapid flow of words in a somewhat high pitched acid voice, the uncompromising, unqualified story of the contrast between a party wholly good or nearly so and one trembling on the brink of perdition, the refusal to give or ask quarter. Preston, the organizer, the platform debater, the pamphleteer, the planner of party strategy, was a personification of the Liberal fighting spirit, as it showed itself in the long and never ending campaign stretching from the disaster of 1878 to the crowning mercies of 1896. He became one of the best known and certainly the most abused of all the Liberal champions of that time.

Mr. Preston has now made under the title, "My Generation of Politics and Politicians" (Toronto: D. A. Rose Publishing Co.) a contribution to the political literature of our time which, since its appearance three months ago has been the subject of heated discussion and controversy. Mr. Preston's twenty years' absence from Canada while filling various official positions and the passage of the years has not in the least modified or softened his judgments; he is in his 77th year, with his busy life behind him, the same doughty partisan fighter that he was in his vigorous prime. What he thought of the Tories in the eighties and the nineties of the last century he still thinks of them; and as for their political descendants of today, Mr. Preston thinks they are worthy of their ancestry. The book is valuable and interesting on many counts, not the least because the writer recreates, through the sincerity of his feelings and the accuracy of his memory the political atmosphere of the last quarter of the 19th century. There was then an intensity of feeling and a directness of intention of which only traces can be found in our politics today; no doubt the veteran, looking over the disorganized and often purposeless mob of electors today, are contrasting them with the highly organized and sternly disciplined party armies of forty years ago feels that the times are degenerate.

Mr. Preston is exceptionally equipped to write a book of political reminiscences. His career has been, in many respects a remarkable one—in its range of interests, its contacts and its experiences. He was born in Bytown six years before it was picked to be the capital of Canada. He was present when the foundation stone of the parliament buildings was laid by the Prince of Wales in 1860. He remembers, says Mr. Preston, writing of himself "with that ardent interest the small boys sitting out of their old playground, watched the great building lifted tier by tier and one at least, felt vaguely that it was history being made, as well as a parliament building being erected; and knew of a certainty what great dramas can go into stone and mortar." These buildings were opened for the last session of the last Parliament of Upper and Lower Canada—the parliament which made possible the Confederation of Canada. This parliament in the judgment of Sir Richard Cartwright, a member of it was, in respect to its personnel, the greatest parliament of which he had knowledge. Preston, a lad of 16 already interested in politics, watched the deliberations of this parliament from the public gallery and he confirms Cartwright's opinion. "At no time in the history of this country, had any legislative chamber numbered amongst its members so great a proportion of men of outstanding ability." The parliaments following Confederation were familiar to the young student of politics who daily watched the proceedings and listened to the debates from his eyrie. He was an eye-witness of the parliamentary struggle of 1873, arising from the Pacific scandal, which ejected Sir John A. McDonald from power. As Sir John moved the adjournment of the house preparatory to tendering his resignation, "I stood," writes Mr. Preston, "beside the speaker's chair and am among the few now living who were present on that memorable occasion." In the campaign of 1878 Mr. Preston was impressed as a speaker; and his immediate success determined his career. For the next twenty years he was in the thick of the political battle. Then followed 15 years of service abroad in various official capacities. First, in the immigration department, and afterwards as a commissioner of trade to Japan, and later to the continent of Europe. Under the code which prevailed in those days, Mr. Preston's retirement followed promptly on the change of government in 1911; but he remained in England and during the war he was employed in some important capacity by the British government. With the coming of the Union government in

HEARD ON THE STREET

Well, some change from Friday to Sunday!

Those who had intended to bring out their new Easter bonnets on Sunday were somewhat disappointed in the cold and stormy wind.

Did you see the lake yesterday during the storm? It was quite worth while to see those tremendous waves piling on the shores and striking the piers so as to send a tremendous spray across the harbor. Yes, no one was out sailing in that wind! The sailors preferred the dull tame shore.

For Wednesday evening the Royal Theatre has announced something new as an added attraction—a half hour concert presented by the Port Hope Band and assisting artists. This is the band's first appearance in six weeks and during that interval they have been rehearsing some new selections which show further improvement in the work of the organization. The mid-week play will be John Hines in "White Pants Willie," a feature comedy that everyone will enjoy and the combination of music and fun should attract a capacity audience.

Have you been bothered with mosquitoes yet? A resident on Park Hill killed a big one Saturday thereby saving an army of them later in the season.

This is the eleventh anniversary of the battle of Vimy Ridge in which many from here were engaged.

Mr. Knox Thompson, who has been in the local branch of the Bank of Toronto for some time, has been transferred to the Union Station Branch, Ottawa. Mr. Thompson has made many friends here who wish him every success in his new position.

W. E. Davis, Production Manager of the General Motors Acceptance Corporation, has been appointed by General Motors of Canada, Limited, as its representative on the Board of Conciliation to bring about a definite settlement of the recent strike at the plant in Oshawa. Announcement of the appointment was made through the Minister of Labor. James Simpson of the Trades and Labor Congress was appointed to represent the men. The two representatives will select a Chairman in the course of a few days.

Two children of Belleville were struck and knocked down by motorists over the week end. Harold Kirkpatrick, 5 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Kirkpatrick, 84 Station St., was struck by a car driven by William Cochrane of Tillsonburg, and sustained a fractured leg. Marion, 3 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Diamond, was knocked down by a motor truck on Saturday morning in front of her home, but was not seriously injured.

The Editor Thinks Out Loud
Do you know if the editor has looked at those poems I sent him?
Yes, sir. He glanced through them this morning.
Oh—just a cursory examination, I suppose?
You're right, sir. I never heard language like it in my life!

Canada, Mr. Preston got back into the Canadian political game as the representative overseas of the Canadian Liberals in the war time elections. He returned to Canada shortly afterwards, was a figure of some prominence in the Liberal convention in 1919, contested a constituency unsuccessfully in 1921, was charged by the Liberal government with respect to freight rates on the Great Lakes and the north Atlantic, between 1921 and 1925, and then retired to his old home in Port Hope to write his reminiscences. He can hardly be said, however, to be in retirement. There is usually something doing wherever Mr. Preston is; and at the moment he is the defendant in what may prove to be the most interesting libel suit that Canada has known for many a year. Mr. Preston, in his long and stormy life probably holds the record for taking part in libel actions, both as plaintiff and defendant, and in this, as in other respects has had his share of triumphs.

FUNERAL HELD THIS AFTERNOON

Sad Death of Mrs Stanley Bickle Occurred on Good Friday

The sad passing of Mrs. Stanley Bickle occurred at the Port Hope Hospital on Good Friday and the funeral was held from the residence of her mother, Mrs. Arthur Watt, Blooms Grove Avenue this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. The service was exceptionally well attended by sorrowing relatives and friends of the deceased who was widely known in this locality.

The service was conducted by Rev. Campbell of Bethel Grove Circuit, assisted by Rev. F. W. Anderson, pastor of the Port Hope United Church. The wide profusion of flowers testified the esteem in which the late Mrs. Bickle was held. The following acted as pall bearers: Messrs. Dr. Storey of Bowmanville, Headley Bickle, Wm. Lightle, Wm. Watt, Sidney Watt and Gerald Dawson while B. Bagsley, Norman Chestnut, Alex Watt and Fred Watt were flower bearers. Interment was at the Port Hope Union Cemetery.

The late Mrs. Bickle was confined to the hospital six weeks, suffering from a serious illness, and although she put up a stubborn fight against overwhelming odds, death ensued at 5.30 Friday afternoon. She was a resident of Hamilton Township and was a member of Bethel Grove United Church.

Deceased, whose maiden name was Verna M. Watt, was the only daughter of Mrs. Arthur Watt and the late Arthur Watt of Blooms Grove Avenue. She was in her 30th year. Deceased was possessed of a loving disposition and kindly attributes and her wide circle of friends will be grieved to learn of her demise.

NICKLE TO ACT IN OSHAWA CASE

D. A. J. Swanson Has Withdrawn From Elliott Case At Oshawa

D. A. J. Swanson, who has been acting for H. W. Elliott in connection with serious charges against him (has withdrawn from the cases, he announced Thursday. It is expected that W. F. Nickle, K.C., former Attorney-General for Ontario, will act in Elliott's defense. It is also announced that W. F. O'Connor will be special prosecutor in these cases.

Elliott, who was former Inspector of the Children's Aid Society for Ontario County, was arrested about a year ago on several charges involving alleged offenses against boys. He was tried before his Honor Judge Ruddy at Whitby on three charges, two of which were dismissed. On the third he was convicted and sentenced to three years in Portsmouth Penitentiary, but when the case was taken to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court the conviction was quashed.

CANADIANS NOT STRONG FOR GOLD

Ottawa Reports Light Demand for Yellow Coins—No New Precious Metal Has Been Cast Since 1916

There is no great demand for gold coins in Canada, it was stated at the finance department, in reply to a query as to when new coins were likely to be minted. The last issue was in 1916 and of these a very considerable stock is on hand. The demand is not for use as common currency, but rather mainly, for Christmas, birthday or purse presentations. For a suggested new issue of gold coins, certain designs were submitted and favored by the Confederation jubilee committee last summer and these are under consideration, but in view of the small demand for gold currency and the stock which is on hand, it is rather doubtful if any action will be taken. The matter, however, is not decided.

BAND CONCERT ON WEDNESDAY

Local Musical Organization And Assisting Artists To Appear At Royal Theatre

It is several weeks since the Port Hope band gave the second of their Sunday concerts, and the public should welcome the announcement that next Wednesday evening this increasingly popular organization will be presented as an added attraction at the Royal Theatre. Many people expressed a desire to contribute something to the band in return for their enjoyable concerts, but as admission fees and collections are both prohibited on Sunday, there was no means of doing so. For the Wednesday engagement the band will receive remuneration according to the attendance, so everyone who patronizes the Royal that evening will not only enjoy a double program of photoplays and music but will indirectly contribute to the funds of the band.

The concert will consist of several choice selections interspersed with vocal and instrumental solos by some of Port Hope's leading artists. Full particulars of this program will appear later.

YOUTH SHOT AT PETEBORO

Hope Held Out For Recovery of Boy Hit in Abdomen On Saturday

John B. Gauld, aged 14, was shot at 1.30 p.m. Saturday when the rifle which a boy friend was carrying discharged. The bullet entered Gauld's abdomen. Gauld was rushed to the hospital where three doctors worked on him during the afternoon and night and Sunday a slight hope was being held out for his recovery.

Four boys started on a hunting expedition and, while on the way, they started to shoot at tin cans. Phillip Marrocco, aged 17, went to aim at the can, but before he pulled the trigger he turned to young Gauld to ask him to take a cigaret out of his mouth as the smoke was bothering his eyes. As he turned the rifle went off.

The boy's father, George T. Gauld, recently volunteered to lay the famous Keating ghost of Seymour Township. The family of ten went to Peterboro a few months ago from Port Hope.

NEW SECRETARY OF HOPE LODGE

At the last regular meeting of Hope Lodge, No. 114, A.F. & A.M., Mr. Arthur Mark was selected to fill the office of secretary, a position held so efficiently for over thirty years by the late Thomas H. Bell. We congratulate the lodge on its choice, as we feel sure Mr. Mark will fill the position with credit and efficiency, and his place of business is so convenient, dues can be paid and other matters attended to without much delay.

PLANNING TO COMBAT RUST

War on the spruce bud worm whereby millions of dollars will be saved to the country will be carried on during the coming season. The forests of both eastern and western Canada will be protected.

Government officials in the Aviation and Agricultural Departments also are planning to combat the rust, which seriously affects the quality of Western wheat. Aeroplanes will fly over the stricken fields in an effort to confine the trouble to limited areas.

Canadian aeroplanes also will continue the work of making aerial surveys and preparing adequate maps of the Dominion, half of whose surface has not yet been seen by man, according to an official estimate. During the last five years 200,000 square miles have been mapped by aviators, co-operating with other officials working on the level. Previously the maps were prepared by surveyors travelling on foot and by canoe.

PUNT WAS USED TO CART MAIL

Village of Kinmount Near Lindsay Was Visited By Flood

The Burnt River, in Haliburton County, overflowed its banks Saturday, causing a washout on the Canadian National Railway tracks at Holland Junction and at Fells Station, where it is three feet over the tracks. A torrent of water rushed down the main street at Kinmount, flooding houses and stores. The Postmaster at Kinmount had to use a punt to cart the mail from the office to the depot, 100 yards distant.

OBITUARY

MISS CATHERINE FALLON

The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon from the family residence, Alexander street, of Miss Catherine Fallon, a lifelong resident of Port Hope, who passed away at the Port Hope Hospital on Friday, April 6th.

Service at the Church of Our Lady of Mercy Sunday afternoon, conducted by Very Rev. Dean F. J. O'Sullivan, with interment at the Roman Catholic Cemetery.

EDITH D. ELDRIDGE

The death occurred suddenly at Toronto on Good Friday morning of Edith Dorothea (Queenie) Eldridge, beloved wife of Ernest S. Simmons, 16 Cortland avenue. Deceased was well known in Port Hope, having resided on John street with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Eldridge, now of Whitby. The funeral service will be held from "The Funeral Home," 525 Sherbourne St., Toronto, on Tuesday afternoon, with entombment at Mount Pleasant Mausoleum. Two brothers also survive, Arthur of Toronto and Edgar of Whitby.

Coke making at different altitudes has been the subject of four-year survey at Western State College of Colorado.

HAIG MEMORIAL IN OLD LONDON

Whitehall Likely To Be Site Of Statute, Between Cenotaph Duke Of Cambridge Figure

His Majesty's office of works will be confronted with a question of some difficulty when they decide the site for the memorial to Field Marshal Haig, which parliament will order to be erected at the national expense.

Trafalgar square is dotted over with statues of notable warriors of some difficulty when they decide the site for the memorial to Field Marshal Haig, which parliament will order to be erected at the national expense.

Opposite the war office in Whitehall, in the centre of the roadway, as the imposing equestrian statue to Field Marshal the Duke of Cambridge, cousin of Queen Victoria, who was commander-in-chief for 40 years, save but a few months.

FOSTERING EVIL

Sensationalism in the press is being blamed for much of the irregular living indulged in today. Lurid accounts of crime, of moral failure, of life as it is lived in the underworld, and by unbalanced individuals in the higher strata of society, are having the inevitable effect of producing imitators and breaking down old standards of respectability.

Undoubtedly, newspapers which play up these unsavory features are assuming a heavy responsibility. It is all very well to talk about freedom of thought; but it must be remembered that many more young people are reading the newspapers today than used to be the case, and that their immature judgment is liable to be seriously prejudiced.

The glamor thrown around the criminal even exalts him above the common run of humanity. The morally corrupt, who for selfish purposes or from mere love of notoriety, commit some degrading act are able to capitalize their misdeeds and false prophets run around preaching doctrines which are bound to bring disaster.

DRESS ISN'T EVERYTHING

I watched that girl with the silken socks, And the powdered face and the bobbed blond locks; And low-cut neck and high-cut sleeves And the silken waist of the thinnest weaves,

She sat in the car just across from me, And I said to myself, "What a sight to see." And I patted myself upon the back That I hadn't a daughter to follow her track.

Her face was wrinkled with age and care, And she'd just enough to pay one fare. There wasn't a joy-mark on her face, Not a hint of a smile had left its trace;

When all at once that girl of style, With a tender look and the sweetest smile, As quick as a flash jumped to her feet And gave that dear old soul her seat,

And maybe you have a daughter, too So I'll be a daughter now to you." Then over that sad and wrinkled face, There crept a smile of sweetest grace,

I like that girl with the silken socks And the powdered face and the bobbed blond locks, And the low-cut neck and the high-cut sleeves, For beneath that waist of thinnest weaves There beats a heart that is kind and sweet.

"We Deliver The Goods." 48—HELLO—645

BRINGING UP FATHER—

THE GUIDE STORY

"Now, Laddie, old chap, no more fooling around," he said. "We've got to take a note to the Manor in ten minutes, so just hurry up, old man, and don't keep me dangling about in this lane much longer." Laddie hurried up and before the ten minutes were past, he walked to and fro the lane without turning a hair, and was soon afterward galloping along the road leading to Woodlands, at a pace that met with his master's satisfaction.

CHAPTER VII

Love at First Sight

Conscious though she was that the galloping hoofs belonged most probably to Laddie, Firefly continued on her way. "Excuse me," said Hal, nervously, as he reined in Laddie to a walking pace "I think—in fact—I recognize Miss Ransome's dogs. Er—I have a note from my mother for Miss Ransome."

"Indeed?" As Firefly glanced up unconcernedly at the speaker, Hal thought he had never before listened to so wonderful a voice, or looked into such wonderful eyes. "Did you want me to carry it for you?"

"No, certainly not! I hoped that—I thought perhaps you would not mind—would not object to my walking with you the rest of the—the way." Firefly wondered whether all the young men of Woodlands blushed as much and were as shy as Hal. "How do you know that I am going to the Manor?" she asked, as though the question were of mighty importance.

"I don't know; unless it was seeing you with the dogs, and knowing none of the other houses expect a visitor." "Well, you guessed right. I am Miss Granby's new companion." Hal looked puzzled. "Oh, I see," he exclaimed, "you are joking. It must be jolly dull for the poor old lady up there. I expect she's glad of the visitor."

"I am a companion," said Firefly, glancing up at him. Hal, however, to the distress of his lady mother, who had ambitious ideas in which she vainly tried to make her boys join, was simple, and merely felt relieved that the pretty girl was not a duchess in disguise. "How jolly for Miss Granby, and for me, too," he remarked.

"I was afraid that you were some swell or another that the heires—both—Miss Ransome, had got down for a visit. With grand ladies I always put my foot in it. They think me cheeky, and don't mind saying so, which makes a fellow feel a bit riled, when he's only trying to be friendly. I say, may I get down 'Certainly," replied Firefly. Hal dismounted and throwing the bride over his arm, he strode along by the girl's side, dimly conscious that the day had gained in warmth and the sun in brightness.

"I conclude that after I left Laddie learned his lesson fairly quickly," remarked Firefly at length, more to break the silence than from any particular interest in the beautiful animal walking quietly beside them. "Yes, I knew it was only a question of nerves and patience. Horses are like women. Let them have their head too much and they are all over the place!" "What atrocious sentiments!" exclaimed Firefly indignantly.

"Well, it does sound bad, but it is true," persisted Hal, who felt his shyness slipping away in the most comfortable manner. "I remember my father pitching into me as a youngster because I let a skittish young mare I was breaking in have her own way of bolting up a short hill. I liked the fun and never gave a thought of the future but dad was right! She gave me a bad time afterward. Ride horses with a steady hand from the beginning, and never nag; then they know what to expect, and treat one honestly. It's the same with women, I expect."

"Do you spend your time in training horses, Mr. Pett?" asked Firefly demurely. Hal laughed. "Is that a warning to get off my hobby? Ah, I forgot we are still strangers, and you don't know that my family say I am a perfect bore with my everlasting chatter about the brutes. You see, I am keen about horses; they are grand creatures, and I suppose they know I like them, for I can lick pretty much anything in the way of horse flesh into shape, without once using the whip. Just for the sake of a scamper, bareback, I used to play truant many a time. You're laughing at me!" He paused abruptly and colored.

"Yes, I am." Firefly certainly made no attempt to conceal her merriment. "Do you know that you are walking at the rate of six miles an hour?" "What a beast I am!" Hal looked so mournful that Firefly again laughed and began to think Woodlands would be a pleasant place to live in if it contained many such easily managed youths.

"Don't you think that now that we have become such friends I might know your name?" asked Hal persuasively, when they had covered another quarter of a mile at a more reasonable pace. "You see, we are not distant neighbors, as distance counts in the country, and I'm taking an invite from my mother to Miss Ransome for an affair next week. I wish I had known you were here, but tomorrow I'll bring over a separate card for you." (To be continued)

CABBY MAKES HIS LAST TRIP

Closes His Career as a Cab Driver in Marathon Journey Put out of business by automobiles, Karl Hartmann, Berlin's oldest cab driver, is closing in a spectacular fashion a career of almost half a century. Wearing the traditional lacquered stovepipe hat, an ancient uniform and urging on a decrepit nag with which he has seen many years of service, the be-whiskered old man started his last drive last week with Paris his goal.

Persons in the streets, noticing the rattle-trap vehicle with signs bearing the inscription: "Berlin and Wannsee to Paris," thought the matter an April fool joke, but the old driver, after showing his passport and credentials from the Mayor, slowly drove out of the city. Forty three years ago Hartmann founded the Wannsee Cab Company and did a big business for about 3 decades, but the arrival of the taxicab finally crowded him to the wall. For many years he has hardly been able to earn a bare living.

The idea of closing his activities with a drive to the French Capital entered his head last year when Mills, Rachel Dorange rode from Paris to Berlin on horseback.

SPORTING SKITS

HOCKEY RANGERS TIE SERIES

The 1928 Stanley Cup series now stands tied, with the competing teams, Montreal Maroons and New York Rangers, each having won a game. The Rangers knotted the series count by scoring a gallant 2 to 1 over time victory over the Maroons in the second game of the titular contests. A display of fighting defensive hockey, tempered with an ever dangerous offensive, following the loss of their regular goalkeeper, Lorne Chabot, early in the second period, was responsible for the Gotham squad's victory.

Lester Patrick, veteran manager of the New Yorkers, proved the hero of the game, for it was the wily Lester that donned the pads, and replaced the unfortunate Chabot in the Ranger net for more than half the game. Patrick had never before played as goaltender in any kind of a contest, let alone a Stanley Cup game. He was game, however, and aided by the inspired display of the members of his team he led the blue clad New Yorkers to a surprising and wonderful victory.

Chabot was injured early in the second period when Stewart sent in a high backhander from the left side of the net, which caught the goaltender full in the left eye. He fell to the ice and had to be assisted off.

Following the loss of their goaltender the Rangers applied for permission to use Alex Connell, the Ottawa, netminder who was in the rink. The Maroons refused this, and also refused the New Yorkers permission to use Hughie McCormick, goalie of the London team of the Canadian Professional League, who also witnessed the game. The Montreal team averred there was too much at stake to allow the opposing team the use of an outside goaltender.

The Rangers had no substitute available, however, so Lester Patrick announced that he himself would enter the New York net. The veteran 44 year old mentor was given an ovation by the crowd when he finally made his appearance.

The score at the time of Chabot's unfortunate injury stood at nothing all. When the game was finally concluded after seven minutes and five seconds of overtime play, the Rangers, with Patrick at the helm and in the net, had won the game. Patrick's appearance evidently had inspired his men to rise to hockey heights. The entire team immediately turned into a well nigh perfect defensive machine, which tempered their brilliant defensive work with an ever dangerous offensive. They were fighting mad following the injury to Chabot and gave all they had to protect their heroic manager in the net. In their protection giving act they were successful, and the majority of the 18 shots made directly on the Rangers' net during Patrick's tenure there, were of the easy variety, owing to the close checking tactics of his teammates. In all, the Maroons had 18 direct drives on Patrick, one of them slipping through for the tying goal late in the third period after Bill Cook had put the Rangers ahead 30 seconds after the start of the final scheduled session.

Stewart scored the lone Maroon counter when he snapped Hooley Smith's rebound past Patrick. The winning goal was scored after seven minutes and five seconds of overtime when Frank Boucher took a pass from big "Ching" Johnson to

BASEBALL BABE RUTH AND OTHERS GO TO WORK

The succulent peanut and ubiquitous hot dog are in for it right away. Do you realize, Mr. Fan, that the baseball season opens tomorrow? The Boston Red Sox and Washington teams remove the cover at Washington a day in advance of the rest of the major league teams, and Calvin Coolidge, as has been the custom of United States Presidents for decades, will toss out the first ball. On Wednesday the six other teams of the American league will hoist the flag and start after the umpires, as will also the eight contestants in the National League. To paraphrase a popular saying, "It won't be long shortly." The opening games are as follows: American League—New York at Philadelphia; Boston at Washington; St. Louis at Detroit; Cleveland at Chicago. National League—Boston at New York; Philadelphia at Brooklyn; Chicago at Cincinnati; Pittsburg at St. Louis.

Jack Williams, former Perona and Belleville pitcher, who has been spending the winter at Verona, expects to leave in a few days for Charleroi, Pa., to join his team for a few weeks' training before the opening of the league season. The Charleroi team of which Williams is the pitching ace, had a great season last year. Williams did some heavy hitting last season, being well up among the home run getters, as well as doing good twirling.

FAMILY OF THIRTY BRINGS UP FATHER

Mother Makes Clothes Go Round—Bedtime Roll Call

Charles Henry Masters, revealed to me today the secret of how to bring up a family of thirty children I saw him at his home in St. Andrew's street, Northampton, England.

At fifty four years of age he is the father of twenty five children and step father to five more. He has seventeen grandchildren. He has never weighed more than seven or eight stone.

This was Mr. Master's story:—"I was married when I was nineteen and we had a new baby every year for twenty five years. My first wife died after the nineteenth child but within seven months I married again, so that the twentieth baby came without my missing a year. Only five were boys. Sixteen of my twenty five are living today.

"It's in the family, this birth rate. I am one of twenty-nine, but I am the only one who inherited the complaint. My present wife's mother was married at thirteen and had 19 children.

"Seven of my children are now married and so far there are seventeen grandchildren, the eldest of whom is two years older than my youngest child, who is only eight.

"There were never more than 15 children in my family at any one time; but that was more than we had room for at the dinner table. Three or four would have to sit on the stairs.

"In those days they slept about five in a bed. Every night before my wife and I went to bed, we would have to go and count them, because sometimes we couldn't tell which was which, and sometimes two or three would have strayed off to the neighbors houses.

"It has always been a bit of a job for us to make clothes. Five children of course, cost more than one, but ten do not cost twice as much as five."

Mrs. Masters, who was busy at her sewing machine with a large Christmas order of leather cushions for a department store, broke in:

"I make over all their clothes three or four times. Frocks, pinafores, petticoats, trousers—I either tuck them up or let them down.

"I tuck a light weight dress in winter for one of the little girls, and let it down in summer for one of the big ones. And now that some of our sons are grown so big, I make over their coats and waist-coats for their father. He is only half their size."

Mr. Masters then took up his story again:

"And ever since I worked in the shoe factory I have made over their shoes. I can put a big cap and a big vamp on a small shoe and get a large one out of it. Or I sometimes put a small sole on a big vamp to make a small shoe.

"But I always say to my wife, 'never mind about their clothes. Give them a good dinner. Keep 'em healthy.' You can find a new dress or a new coat any old time, but you can't get a new inside."

"They do get a good dinner, too," explained Mrs. Masters.

"The best thing for them is a meat pudding. I buy twopennyworth of beef, one pennyworth of liver, one pennyworth of suet, a halfpennyworth of onions, and twopennyworth of flour. That makes one big pudding. Many a time I've made six at once, before the older children got married off.

"For dessert they get currant pudding or sweet dip—melted butter and sugar. Then they all go to bed happy.

"Every Saturday afternoon I go into town with my market basket, that's the only outing I take.

"Some of the children might not have lived but for always having a doctor whenever we needed him by paying a shilling a month to the dispensary.

"Once we had seven children down with the 'flu' at the same time for a whole month. That doctor earned his shilling.

"Another time four were taken with measles and two of them were lost."

Mr. Masters then revealed one of the trials of a large family.

"When I was a market gardener my wife and I had to take five of the children, from two to seven years old, with us. We never could keep track of them. One or two would always stray away.

"Finally we gave up trying to hold all five round our stall, and when the market closed, and some of the youngsters were missing, we just went to the police station. They were always there, playing with the cat or eating sweets."

ALBERTA COAL WITHIN 10 DAYS

Operators And Officials Tell Of Large Contracts For Ontario

Coal from Alberta will start coming to Ontario within ten days. Contracts have already been made for amounts running into the thousands of tons. The first shipment of coal will leave the West on April 15.

This information was received from a number of operators and officials who were in Toronto en route to the West. All were highly enthusiastic over the possibilities of developing an important market for Canadian fuel in this province.

They expressed particular gratification at the support which the movement for an all-Canadian fuel policy had received in Ontario, both from the people as a whole and from the Provincial Government.

The fuel which is to come East, according to the group in Toronto will be very closely supervised and only selected grades of coal will be shipped. The coalfields of Alberta can produce a wide range of fuels, but those which are to be consumed in Ontario will be required to pass rigid tests to determine their suitability for use here and only those grades which are satisfactory will be passed.

A Board of Standards has already been formed, with official powers, but acting independently. Ontario is represented by J. A. Ellis, Provincial Fuel Controller, who is already in the West. The other members are: R. J. Drinnan, well known mining engineer; Edgar Stansfield, coal research engineer of the University of Alberta, and R. J. Dinning, representing the Government of Alberta.

In addition to this, it was intimated, the Canadian Coal Committee will, in all probability, open an office in Toronto, through which full information on the method of burning the coals can be secured. One or more combustion engineers will also be sent East, it is understood.

WHAT WILL YOU DO WITH JESUS?

What shall I do with Jesus? Was asked of the maddened crowd What shall I do with Jesus? Echoed long and loud.

There in the palace court room Where mocking they bent the knee, Sorrowful stood the sinless Jesus of Galilee.

What shall I do with Jesus? It echoes even today, Echoes that vital question, Dare we to answer "Nay."

What will you do with Jesus? Dear brother, oh heed the call, Take Him a friend and Saviour, Give Him your life, your all.

Some day in Heavenly Court Room Where humbly must bow each knee,

Asking yourself the question What will he do with me? M.A. Wolfe, Lexington, Mass.

CROP REPORT

Work on the land has already commenced on the higher and lighter land in some of the more southerly counties according to reports received by the Ontario Department of Agriculture from Agricultural Representatives for the week ending on March 24th. In many of the northern and eastern counties as well as in districts of Northern Ontario there still remains considerable snow on the fields and many of the roads are almost impassable.

There is a good deal of uncertainty in regard to the condition of the fall wheat and clovers. In general, however, they are reported in fair condition with the critical period still to come.

Supplies of roughage are still reported sufficient for all requirements but there is a serious shortage of grain in many counties. Demand for seed grain remains brisk but the trade for small seeds is reported as dull and a large quantity of low quality alsike remains in the farmers' hands. Increased interest is reported in certified seed potatoes and in Dufferin the Agricultural Representative estimates an increase of 25 per cent, in the acreage to be planted this year.

Sugar making is in full swing in a number of counties. However, the run to date has been light and prices correspondingly high.

The demand for farm help is keen in many counties with an increased demand for boys from 15 to 18 years of age.

DUFFERIN—There is an increased interest in the breeding of sheep in this district. More inquiries for breeding stock have been received during the past few weeks than is usual.

DURHAM—There seems to be a greater demand than ever for British boys and many applications are being sent in through this office. In the majority of cases those boys seem to be giving satisfaction and are helping solve our labor problem.

HURON—Sugar making has been the order of the week. The weather has not been exceptionally good for this business. Roads are breaking up fast and many are almost impassable for any loaded vehicle.

LAMBTON—A few farmers have started to work on the land. Fall wheat is very brown on top and requires a warm rain. Clovers seem to be heaved more than the wheat. Three cars of certified seed potatoes were distributed to our growers this week.

LINCOLN—There is a keen demand for good seed oats and more sweet clover seed will be sold as a result of the great difference in the price of this seed as compared with red clover and alfalfa seed.

MIDDLESEX—The potato market has been on the rise and reached two dollars per bag last Saturday, but today the price is back to $1.90. Maple syrup has been on the market now for a week. It is selling for $3.00 per gallon.

NORTHUMBERLAND—The orchards for the time of year show promisingly and apparently have wintered well with the exception of girdling by mice and rabbits. As the season advances reports of this girdling continue to come in and we are of the opinion that there has been more damage done to orchards by these pests this year than has been the case for a considerable number of years. Small fruits have wintered well.

PEEL—Fall wheat shows bleached but does not show any signs of heavy injury. Alsike seems to be coming through satisfactorily and there are only a very few bad reports on the alfalfa situation. Good seed seems to be scarce particularly of oats and barley. The small seed market is the duller it has been for a few years.

PRINCE EDWARD—Intermittent weather in January and February caused a good deal of anxiety among farmers as to the chances of fall wheat and clovers standing the winter. Since the snow has disappeared, this anxiety has been relieved and there is no evidence of loss to date. Orchards and small fruits have all come through the winter in excellent condition. An increased amount of pruning has been accomplished and a larger number of new men are pruning. Plans are being made for spraying and cultivation of the orchards generally. Many are planning to re-work or topgraft Ben Davis and Stark. Farmers are obtaining for seed prices as follows: Barley $1.25 to $1.50; oats around $1.00. An increased inquiry for certified seed potatoes and registered seed oats and barley.

SOUTH SIMCOE—A car load of horses were shipped from Alliston this week to Toronto, buyers paying as high as $225 each for these. This load were 75 per cent heavy horses, the remainder being wagon horses. Several cars of potatoes have gone out during the week, as high as $1.50 a bag being paid for table stock. One grower sold two cars of certified Dooleys to go to State of Pennsylvania also.

THE SABBATH

Sweetly breaks the Sabbath morning, Breathing forth a holy calm, And with restful tints adorning Toilers' homes by pine and palm.

Bringing respite to the weary Sooty brow, and limbs that pain; Light of joy in household dreary, Absent ones are home again.

When the morning stars are shining Through the new made streets of time God, in right relation bringing All things, made this day sublime

Tired nature ceased from labor; Living waters drank with zest, Sparkling like a jewelled sabre, Drawn from healing wells of rest.

Then those healthful draughts in slumber Energies revived again, Pouring blessings without number On the homes of tired men.

At this well the seeking nation Will the strength of greatness find, Moulding into true relation Benefits for all mankind.

Day of rest, one day in seven, Which a man may call his own; So decreed at first by Heaven, Offspring of the Eternal Throne.

Insured Buying

There's a way of insuring your buying against waste money and unsatisfactory merchandise. And that insurance costs you not a penny. It is always paid up to date and in full force.

That insurance is the advertising here in your newspaper. Advertised products are standardized, perfected and carefully priced before they are ever advertised.

Whether you are buying soap, clothing, shoes, tooth paste, food or electrical household appliances, the result is the same. You get reliable, economical merchandise whenever you buy by the advertisements.

Make up your insured shopping list in the comfort and quiet of your own home. Compare the merits of the products advertised. Study the way in which each is adapted to your needs.

You'll find advertising truthful, informing and interesting. That's the only sort that pays, you know.

Every dollar you spend on advertised merchandise is insured against waste.

CANTATA GIVEN BY CHURCH CHOIR

St. Paul's Choir Present Maunder's "Penitence, Pardon and Peace"

Once again the choir of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, under the direction of the organist, Miss Gladys Black, rendered an exceptionally fine concert in the church auditorium on Thursday evening and those in attendance appreciated the work of the choir. The cantata was interspersed with vocal and instrumental numbers.

The feature of the evening was the singing of Mrs. McKee Bingham of Cobourg, who was a newcomer to Port Hoppers. She possesses a beautiful contralto voice and completely won the hearts of the audience. Her numbers "Abide With Me," "Sheep and Lambs" (Homer) and "Like as a Hart (Allitsen)" were rendered in fine style.

Mr. D. A. Shay, who needs no introduction to local audiences, sang "Comfort Ye My People" (Handel's Messiah) and "If With All Your Hearts" (Elijah) Mendelssohn while Miss Frances Johnson, who is rapidly gaining popularity as a soloist, rendered "Entreat Me Not To Leave Thee" (Gounod) and "O Man of Sorrow" (Baynton-Powers). A male quartet composed of Messrs Sherman Gifford, Chas. Doney, Walter Roberts and R. S. Hancock, was heard to good advantage in the rendering of "He Arose."

Before the cantata "Penitence, Pardon and Peace" (Maunder) was presented, a piano duett "Military March" (Schubert) was played by Arthur McElroy and Fred Skitch. The cantata, befitting the Easter season, was ably given with Miss Jean Dickinson as soprano soloist, and Mr. Charles Doney as baritone soloist. Mr. Arthur McElroy accompanied the choruses on the piano.

EASTER AT UNITED CHURCH

Easter Sunday morning one of the most largely attended communion services in recent years was held in the United Church.

In the afternoon the following were christened at the close of the Sunday School session: Jack Douglas, Courier Pickle, Phillip Carns, Egerton Snider, Carol Joan Giddy, Allen Denton McCarthy, Hope Muriel Currie, Annie Elizabeth Orchard, Marguerite Francis Cole, Marice Clifford Cole, Margaret Enid O'Neill, Elizabeth Emma O'Neill.

During the Sunday School Service little Miss Mary Turk and Miss Phyllis Dayman sang a very appropriate duett which was much enjoyed by the scholars.
