YOUNG LOCAL GIRL DEPORTED FROM UNITED STATES

Romance of Pretty Port Hope Girl and Husband in Rochester

John J. McInerney, attorney, orator, fraternal man, golfer, godfish tamer, and, as the Roastfester of the Rochester Press Club put it, "ex-politician," recently essayed a new role—that of "Cupid" in smoothing out troubled waters in the office of Acting Inspector of Immigration Fred M. Bullard, in the Federal building, so that a newly married couple would not be rudely separated by governmental red tape.

The ground work for John J.'s heroic role was laid five months ago when a girl, 17 years old and pretty, of Port Hope, Ont., came to Rochester on a summer excursion. As is the custom with excursionists, $8 head tax on Canadian immigrants was not collected. She intended to return the same day, but—Rochester looked good to her and she remained here with an aunt.

And then romance entered her life in the person of Joseph DiLorenzo, 21 years old, of No. 60 Hebbard street. Later the couple obtained a marriage license and were quietly married by County Judge Willis K. Gillette.

In some manner Inspector Bullard learned of the issuance of the marriage license. He checked up and found the girl had not paid the head tax. Then followed an interview with Mr. and Mrs. DiLorenzo in which she was told that she was illegally in the country and would have to be deported. The twain made one seemed about to be put asunder until young DiLorenzo thought of "Jack" McInerney.

They were at his office bright and early the next morning. Tearfully, the young bride told her story. The lawyer listened attentively and sympathetically. The matter was further complicated by the fact that DiLorenzo was not a citizen, having taken out only first papers. It wouldn't do to have him go back to Canada with her as he would have difficulty in getting back into the United States again.

First, there was an interview with Inspector Bullard. Then a long distance telephone conversation with the girl's mother in Port Hope. Then some more conferences. As matters finally were ironed out, it was decided to proceed as follows:

Mrs. DiLorenzo had to submit to the deportation order, return to Port Hope and obtain her mother's consent to the marriage. This the parents said in the telephone conversation, gladly would be given. Some time soon, the young bridegroom will meet his wife at the Suspension Bridge immigration office at Niagara Falls. The head tax will be paid and she will be permitted to enter the country as his wife.

The young couple were given a reception and shower at the home of the bridegroom's parents. And for his fee, Attorney McInerney will have the satisfaction of knowing he prevented red tape and an unpaid head tax from spoiling love's young dream. —Rochester Democrat Chronicle.

FLOATING BOTTLE

Survives Eleven Rough Years at Sea

Eleven years ago Capt. J. R. Moore, the landlord of a hotel in Falmouth, England, was in charge of the motor ketch Fort Churchill when the vessel was caught in a blizzard at Port Perriquet Bay, on the Labrador coast.

Thinking that his ship was doomed and that the crew would perish, the captain enclosed farewell messages in a bottle and threw them overboard. After he had done this it was found possible to beach the vessel, and all lives were saved.

Capt. Moore has now received word from the Hudson Company to the effect that the bottle with the message has been washed up on an island at Labrador.

BODY BROUGHT FROM TORONTO

Despite Heavy Condition of the Road the Hearse Came on Own Power to Within Eight Miles From Here

Ruth Kidd, daughter of Elijah Kidd, of Toronto and niece of Rev. David Kidd Byrne, who died at her home on October 30th last, at the age of one year and four months, was buried in Bewdley cemetery today.

Late yesterday afternoon a white hearse from Toronto arrived here after a most difficult journey, the last eight miles of which had to be made with the assistance of a team.

The funeral left the Funeral Parlor of Walker & Jex at nine o'clock this morning to Bewdley cemetery where the interment took place.

Local Games Cancelled

All local games scheduled for this week are cancelled until the ice gets back into shape after the thaw.

Prospects of seeing Port Hope and Peterboro Intermediates matched in a series for the Brown Cup are temporarily shattered by the mild weather.

Kingston Shows Class by Winning in Trenton

Kingston Intermediates defeated Trenton in Trenton last night by 3 to 1. The ice was very soft, and was more suitable for water polo than hockey. It was covered with water and slush, making combination impossible. Rooney for Kingston was the best man on his team, with Joe Smith a close second. Schenkel and Shoniker were Trenton's stars. The rink was almost filled with excited fans. Rogers, Kingston's goalkeeper, played a great game. Trenton rained shot after shot on him in the third period. Kingston suffered through penalties, getting five out of a total of six.

Kingston—Goal, Rogers; defence, Rooney and Reynolds; centre, Watts; wings, Smith and Johnson; sub, Lawlor, Tobin and Rogers.

Trenton—Goal, Bowen; defence, Burns and Anderson; centre, Shoniker; wings, Wells and Schenkel; subs, O'Rourke and Blakely.

R referee—R. Armstrong, Toronto.

Lightning and "Petes" Reach Soo Together

The first game of the series between Peterboro and the Soo was called off yesterday on account of lack of ice, and the games will be played on Tuesday and Wednesday nights. The "Petes" arrived at noon. In the early hours of the morning a thunderstorm struck the district, vivid flashes of lightning, thunder and rain making unusual conditions.

CURLING

Postpone Oshawa 'Spie!

The Oshawa Curling Club bonspiel, which was to have been opened yesterday morning and concluded on Thursday, has been postponed until Feb. 18, 19 and 20 owing to the mild weather.

DEVOTED LIFE TO EXPLORING CAVES

Floyd Collins, who has done considerable exploration work in the caves at Cave City, Kentucky, and was the discoverer of the famous Crystal cave, which has been the mecca of tourists from all parts of the world, and who is also part owner, left home Friday, Jan. 30, to explore the cave in which he is now entombed, which is situated near Mammoth cave. When he did not return, a party went in search of him. They found the entrance of the cave had been blocked by a cave-in. A subterranean rock, estimated to weigh as much as eight tons, pinned Collins in a section of the cave only eight inches high as he was crawling out after a long trip of exploration.

If ideas be not innate, there was a time when the mind was without those principles, for where the ideas are not, there can be no knowledge, no assent, no mental or verbal propositions about them.

CONTAGIOUS DISEASES

It is reported that there are twenty-two cases of contagious disease in Port Hope. Are proper precautions being taken to prevent these?

Fifty-one are out of the High School through illness, not serious in most cases, but seriously interfering with school work.

Though twenty-two are reported, it is alleged that there are many cases of mumps, and other diseases not reported. Around town are cases without restriction; some at school, at the Library, Post Office and other places of public gathering, mingling with their fellows, spreading the germs of disease, without let or hindrance.

Those who have had mild attacks, it is alleged, have not absented themselves from their usual places; in some instances have been required by an observant teacher to leave school.

Those mild cases may communicate death-dealing germs to perfectly healthy children.

We hear a great deal about "Safety First"—why not apply that watch-word to contagious diseases? Let everyone take precautions, to prevent their spreading.

MAYOR CHALK TO OPEN VALENTINE BAZAAR

Hospital Mission to Hold Annual Affair in Town Hall

Mayor T. B. Chalk has kindly consented to press the button which will set the Women's Hospital Mission annual Valentine bazaar in motion, at three o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

The affair will be held in the Town Hall, where a large number of ladies have been working during the past week decorating and arranging the many booths. The booths will include the usual Fancy Work, Candy, Home Cooking and Touch and Take tables. Novelty booths in the form of the Valentine Post Office, Fish Pond and Brick sale will be introduced.

During high tea, to be served from 4.30 to 7 o'clock, a nine-piece orchestra under the direction of Mr. L. P. Unitt will render a program of popular and light classical numbers.

SHIPPING AGENTS INDIGNANT

Representatives of Atlantic Lines in Montreal Attack Preston Report

Representatives of the various Atlantic shipping interests in Montreal expressed indignation at the tenor of the report tabled in the House of Commons Monday giving the result of W. T. R. Preston's investigations into the alleged shipping combine, but were unable to present detailed opinions until such time as they had studied the report in all its ramifications.

An examination of the books of the companies would disprove the statements made, said Major P. A. Curry, General Manager of the White Star Line, one of the companies "named" in the alleged combine. The report, according to Major Curry, seemed to be a deliberate attack on the shipping companies.

Money Lost on Cattle Shipment

He cited, with regard to freight rates, the cattle carrier Irishman, the biggest in the company's service. It had sailed out of Montreal, he declared, with 1,160 cattle at $22.50 a head. That voyage cost the company so much money that the boat had been laid up ever since.

With regard to the projected subsidizing of the company of Sir William Petersen, Major Curry asked why the Government did not approach some of the companies that built up the trade instead of a new concern.

HEARD ON THE STREET

What signs of Spring have you seen?

One lady noticed a bee humming over the snow. It was her belief that he'd fly a long way to find a flower and some honey.

The condition of Cavan street is terrible for pedestrians. The sidewalk in many places is submerged to a depth of six or eight inches, and in parts the pavement is under water. Is it fair to the ratepayers of this section and the men who have to go that way to work?

Mild weather Sunday and a heavy rain yesterday afternoon banished the snow and the sleighing. Country roads are dangerous and many impassable. The rain will be beneficial to many farmers whose wells have been dry for some time.

Since the thaw, automobiles have come east from Toronto within five miles of town, where it was necessary to have teams to pull them the rest of the way.

If the rain had continued through the night, the people in the lower end of the town would have had to move upstairs. As it is, the water runs high at the bridge.

Sleighing was none the best this morning, and we noticed one man hauling coal to the college had two teams, otherwise designated "The Four-in-hand."

DOOMSDAY DID NOT ARRIVE

Seventh Day Adventists Disappointed at Failure of Prophecy

Oblivious to the jeers of the unbelievers, large numbers of men, women and children at various parts of the country unflinchingly awaited the end of the world Friday night.

From several points in the United States came news of the patient vigil of the bapts, disciples of Mrs. Margaret W. Rowan, of Los Angeles, and self-styled members of the Seventh Day Adventist Reformed church, steady in their professed belief that the end of all was at hand.

The beginning of the millennium was set for midnight, but it was not clear whether the sign was to be expected at that hour, eastern standard time, or Pacific coast time, three hours later. For the elect seemed to be in true accord on but one thing, and that was that all were to be transported to a mountain near San Diego, Cal., from whose height they were to watch fire and pestilence ravage the world of the faithless, after which they were to begin a seven-day trip to heaven, stopping at various planets en route for food and to gather others of the chosen in their train.

Patient Vigil Held

From Hollywood, Los Angeles and Oakland, Cal., came stories of the patient vigil of the elect. Similar stories were told of their steadfastness at College View, Neb., at Washington, in up-state New York and a half-dozen other places.

Many Tragedies Result From Prophecy

Seer Disappeared
Mrs. Margaret Rowan, the seer who predicted the end of the world, has disappeared from her home in Los Angeles.

Mrs. Rowan ought to be spanked, according to Mrs. Matilda Wright, Philadelphia, who paid no attention to her daughter's predictions. "It is not my fault she is acting this way," the mother said.

An unidentified woman, fearing the end of the world, predicted for Friday night, attempted to jump from a San Francisco bound ferry boat on Thursday night, it was reported.

Fear of the end of the world at midnight was declared by members of her family to have prompted Mrs. Andrew Korts, Schicklinsky, Pa., to commit suicide Friday. Her body was found hanging to the rafters in a garage at the rear of her home.

In the dim drab light of another day about 100 followers of Mrs. Margaret Rowan at Cleveland, Ohio, straggled wearily home after a night spent in fervent prayer together, waiting for the cloud chariot to heaven that did not come.

Depressed because he believed the end of the world was at hand, Walter Michlowsky, aged 37, Brooklyn, N. Y., committed suicide Friday by hanging. His wife said he had been despondent since the millennium was predicted.

Saying the end of the world was near and he wanted "to end it all," Benjamin Lemoncelli, 23, of Jessup, Pa., entered a police station in New York, Friday, confessed he was a fugitive from justice, and asked to be put in a cell.

One of the few people whose visions of the end of the world were realized were buried Friday, Karl F. Danzeisen, 49, farmer, who shot and killed himself and seriously wounded his wife for fear he would lose $35,000 worth of property, amassed during a lifetime through the crack of doomsday, was interred in a little country cemetery near Temperance, Mich.

"Here she comes, boys," shouted the desk sergeant at police headquarters when all the telephones suddenly went dead at midnight. Fifteen minutes later the lines all came to life again. Electricians are still puzzled by the strange incident.

EARLY DEATH OF FAMOUS "DIANA"

Brilliant University Student Dies From Hunger and Exposure

"Burn my body," whispered "Diana of the Dunes," into the ear of her husband, Paul Wilson, as she lay in his arms on her death bed Sunday afternoon, "and throw the ashes to the winds from the top of Mount Tom."

Wilson, six feet and five inches, and known as the "Giant of the Dunes," whispered his promise to obey. A few moments later Alice Gray, brilliant student in undergraduate days at the University of Chicago, died.

It was about nine years ago that some dune "faun" brought back a strange tale of a nymph dancing on the desert stretches along the lake shore as if in the performance of strange pagan rites.

Investigation proved the dancing nymph was Miss Gray. She gave as her reason for deserting a promising career in scholarship her overpowering love of the dune country.

An equally baffling personality was her huge husband, an engineer of considerable talent until he deserted his profession to dwell in the dune-land. The giant and Diana lived the last five years of her life among the sand hills.

In the Summer the pair supported themselves by fishing. In the Winter they lived as best they could upon the proceeds of their Summer industry, in a frame shack nine miles from Gary and four miles off the dunes highway.

The privations of her frontier life had slowly sapped the vitality of the extraordinary woman. Five weeks ago she became ill. "Too much hunger and exposure," said a physician. She was forty-four years old.

PUBLICITY PLAN HINTED AT

Man Trapped in Cave for Eight Days, Though Still Alive

Governor Fields yesterday ordered a military court of inquiry into the entombment of Floyd Collins in Sand Cave, and the rescue methods employed. The order was issued as a result of reports that Collins is not trapped in the cave at all, and that the whole thing was an advertising scheme.

However, the Governor pointed out that at least five persons saw Collins, who has now been in his underground prison for ten and a half days.

Radio tests yesterday showed, those who had made them said, that Collins is still alive. The test made over the wire which still provides the trapped man with electric light permitted listeners to hear Collins' breathing or heart beats. These indicate he is not suffering from pneumonia, as had been feared.

The shaft being dug down to him, begun when the floor of the cave rose and sealed the passage, is now down 33 feet, and will not reach Collins' level until Thursday or Friday.

However, efforts are being continued to find some other passage into Sand Cave and reach Collins from behind the boulder which pinned his foot in a crevice a week ago Friday.

A hole about 20 feet from the entrance to the cave is now being studied with a view to possible blasting through it into the passage leading to Collins. A pick and iron bar were found in it yesterday, and they are believed to have been left there by Collins. Banana oil, sprayed into the cave itself, indicated there might be some connection for the odor was forced by a draft into the hole.

The military court, which will begin its investigation of the advertising rumor, and of the rescue efforts to-day, will be headed by Brig.-Gen. H. H. Denhardt, of the Kentucky National Guard, who is in command at Sand Cave.

He will summon before him every man who has gone down into the cave and talked with Collins, including the man's brothers, Homer, Marshall and Andrew, Robert A. Burden and William B. Miller, of the Louisville Courier Journal. The General will also interrogate some citizens.

PREDATORY DUCKS

Confronted with the devastation of their oyster beds by the predatory activities of coots and bluebill ducks, and being prevented by law from routing the invaders by the ordinary shotgun process, members of the Olympia Oyster Growers' Association have determined on a novel campaign of bloodless "frightfulness" to protect their bivalves, according to E. N. Steele, secretary of the organization.

With the reported approval of state fish and game officials, a speedy launch has been equipped with a gun which discharges a blue carbide flame into the air at regular intervals. The boat carries also a mortar which discharges smoke and noise bombs, hurling the projectiles into the air a distance of 150 yards. This permits reaching out over the exposed beds when the tide is too low to approach the feeding birds.

This craft will cruise about the beds, belching its flames and hurling its deathless projectiles, in hopes that the thousands of predatory birds which feed upon the oysters may be routed without depleting the game supply, or running counter to the federal game law provisions.

A HERMIT INDIAN TRIBE?

In a sheltered archipelago off the coast of Panama lives the hermit tribe of San Blas Indians. There are about 20,000 of them in all. For centuries these Indians have lived in their boats, with the result that the present generation is short, averaging about five feet in height, have very small thin legs and huge arms and shoulders.

They are one of the purest tribes in the world. There is no strain among them, of Spaniard or black or white. Traders are permitted to visit the islands during the daytime. When night comes down, every alien must go back to his ship, and during the day when strangers are ashore the Indian women keep to their bamboo houses, that the eyes of the foreigner may not rest upon them. The women are forbidden, under pain of death, to leave the islands. The men occasionally sail their dugout canoes to Colon to trade and an adventurous few sometimes get on ships—but the women stay at home.—The Mentor Magazine.

VALENTINO'S "MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE" PLEASES

Despite the slushy walking last night there was a very good attendance at the Royal Theatre for the opening presentation of "Monsieur Beaucaire," the special production which marks Rudolph Valentino's return to the screen after an absence of two years. This photoplay is a most elaborate one with beautiful settings, an all star cast including Bebe Daniels, Lois Wilson and Doris Kenyon, and a story by Booth Tarkington which becomes more and more interesting as it progresses.

The music by Winfield's orchestra added the finishing touch to a high-class entertainment which caused very enthusiastic comments, many remarking that they had never seen anything better. The picture will be shown again tonight and tomorrow, with special music tonight only.

"Home Manager— Purchasing Agent— Art Director—Wife"

Just a slim girl, maybe, or a motherly woman with sweet eyes and white hair—but what a responsibility is hers!

She is the active partner in the business of running a home. She buys most of the things which go to make home life happy, healthful and beautiful. Through her slim, safe fingers goes most of the family money.

And wisely and well it is usually spent too—far better than the average man could spend it himself. For women are better purchasing agents than men. They compare prices, weigh values and shop carefully.

They read advertisements regularly. Every day you'll find the wise little home manager searching the advertising columns for news that will add to the comfort, convenience and improvement of her home. You will find the same clever purchasing agent studying the advertisements to find where and when to buy, and what and how to buy most economically. The advertisements, too, tell this responsive art director how she can make her home more beautiful, more individual—the kind of home that a man appreciates but never knows how it is done!

Advertisements are the wise counsellors in the spending of money that the clever housewife heeds daily.

The business of running a home is made easier by reading the advertisements in the Guide.

PEGGY DISCOVERS SOME LADY WASPS WAYS

ONE day in the early Spring, when Peggy was on her way to school, she spied something moving between the stones in the fence, and ran over to see what it was.

There, stretching first one slender leg after another, sat a dear little Lady Wasp.

"Good-morning, little girl," she buzzed very politely when she saw Peggy looking at her. "I suppose you're going to crush me now that I'm stiff and can't fly very well."

"Who, me?" Peggy asked. "Why should I crush you? I'm a friend of Squeedee and of Happy Giggles. I never harm any of the meadow folks. But, goodness gracious me, what ever made you come out before the weather grew warm? I don't see why your mother didn't lay her eggs a wee bit late last Fall, so you wouldn't hatch out until real warm weather."

At this, Lady Wasp laughed so hard she nearly fell off the fence.

"Oh, dear!" she panted when she could stop laughing. "My dear, I didn't hatch out this Spring. I had

"I Had Just Awakened." a home of my own all last Summer, and . . .

"You mean you had a nest yourself?" asked Peggy, who couldn't believe her own ears. "What have you been doing all the cold . . ."

"Sleeping, of course," interrupted Lady Wasp. "Didn't you know that? I don't suppose you did, you

THE GUIDE STORY

"You have doubtless read all the particulars of that dreadful catastrophe, the burning of the Xyphias off the coast of Bermuda. In the middle watch of the night we were alarmed by the cry of fire. How that fire originated it is impossible to say. Every means were used to arrest the flames, in vain. They were fast approaching the powder magazine. The crew, the strongest of their lives. The passengers, the aged, the women, and the children, were in the cabin. The captain and officers made every exertion possible to save the lives of all, but without the assistance of the crew, little could be done. Signal guns were fired, but not heard, or not answered. I think no ship was near us; and the part of the coast ahead was distant from any port. I swam to the shore. On the beach I found a fisherman's small skiff moored. Two oars were in it. I jumped into it, took, and rapidly plying the oars, reached the ship. Well, we succeeded in saving some lives. By that time the inhabitants of the island were aroused, and approached the shore with torches. But there were no boats except the one I was using. In my last trip to the ship, while I was in the act of assisting into the boat an old man (who had insisted on being the last to be taken off, because he said that he was old and alone in the world, and that his life was the least valuable on board), the fire reached the powder magazine, and the ship was blown up, with the terrific noise and force of an exploded planet. Thrown to a great distance off into the sea, stunned, bruised, burnt, but not dead, I must have sunk and risen again, and finally floated or swam, I scarcely know which, to a still greater distance, for I was picked up by a Spanish ship bound to the Cape of Good Hope. We were three months in getting there; another month passed before I could obtain a passage home to the West Indies; and so, with unprecedented difficulties and impediments, it was two years from the day of my leaving Havana that I again reached its port. I went immediately to the Dell. Imagine my surprise at finding it in the possession of strangers. Imagine my horror at the atrocities that had been perpetrated upon my wife and child. At this moment I believe it was only Providence that withheld me from breaking the neck of the fellow in possession there. I comforted myself with the assurance that I should soon make him disgorge all his ill-gotten wealth. The whole property, with the exception of the few slaves sold with Erminie—with Erminie—great God! My heart must ever burn at the thought. I said that I would soon make him disgorge his ill-gotten possessions. I had the means of doing it! For the last will and testament of Monsieur Alphonse Dozier was in my own possession. A will, first of all, acknowledging the quadroon, Erminie Dozier, as his daughter, and setting her free; and then endowing her with all his property, real and personal. This will drawn up with legal precision by a lawyer of Havana, witnessed by two gentlemen of note, had never left my person. Affecting, as it did, the legitimacy, the fortune, and the personal liberty of my wife and child, this will had been enveloped in a water and fire-proof cover, and bound to my heart, before I tempted the sea. I took possession of the property, in the night of my wife, without difficulty. I made every inquiry as to the fate of Erminie. I went to New Orleans, and there lost all trace of her. The trader, who had bought and sold her was dead. I traveled all through the Southern States, had advertisements inserted in all the Southern papers—to no purpose. Thus the third year, since my parting from her passed. I should have told you that whenever I traveled Erminie's daughter (whom I had found still at the Dell in charge of the old woman with whom her mother had left her) went with me. I was in despair. I had never dreamed of the possibility of her having been conveyed to the North. It so rarely, so very rarely, happens that—that slaves" (he choked at the term) "are purchased at the South and carried north. Well, sir, one day it happened that I had a box of clothes sent to my order by a New York merchant tailor. I was at the Dell at that time. Many layers of paper lay between the clothes and the top of the box. They were old papers. On the top paper I was struck at the sight of my own name, and read with feelings of intense joy this advertisement:

"If this notice should meet the eye of Guillaume La Chappelle, formerly of the Paris opera, or attract the attention of any one who may be acquainted with the address of that gentleman, he is hereby informed that Messrs. Greenfield & Barry, attorneys-at-law, Richmond, are in possession of facts of the utmost possible importance relative to the family of the said Guillaume La Chappelle. Personal application, or a letter addressed to Messrs. G. & B., will meet with prompt attention."

"I looked at the date of the paper. It bore date three years before. This somewhat damped my new-born joy. Nevertheless, I took my daughter, threw myself on board of a packet, reached Norfolk after a passage of twenty days, posted through to Richmond, called the same hour of my arrival upon Messrs. Greenfield & Barry, your agents in the affair, obtained your address—and am here!"

Touching the bell as he finished speaking, the landlord entered. "Have my little daughter brought in, if you please."

Sometime! Why not this time?

SAYS SMELL IS NEGLECTED

Opportunity to Increase Knowledge Ignored, Dr. Hendrick's View

Opportunity for an important increase in knowledge is offered by the development of the sense of smell, at present entirely neglected by the human race, according to Dr. Elwood Hendrick, noted chemist, of Columbia University, New York, who spoke before the Royal Canadian Institute at the Physics Building, University of Toronto recently. Man had five senses, Dr. Hendrick pointed out, of which he cultivated only two—sight and hearing. Smell was taboo. Touch he knew nothing about, and taste was a rudimentary sense that responded only to sweet and bitter, salt and a few other reactions.

"We have to break down the taboo about smell," continued Dr. Hendrick. This taboo had become established among the customs of the people, and as a result it was considered impolite to talk of smell. It was necessary, he stated, to begin to use this neglected sense without any false shame. Taking the dog as an example, Dr. Hendrick pointed out how he thought in terms of smell. Five-eighths of the intelligence of the dog came from his sense of smell, and as a result he knew many things of which humans were ignorant.

Dr. Hendrick spoke of the experimental work of Prof. Henning, of the University of Rostok, who had made an investigation of the subject. He discovered that people who were blindfolded and thrust upon their sense of smell for guidance made all kinds of curious errors at first, but gradually became keener. He also discovered that

Basing his opinion on the fact that such essays as that of Sir Francis Bacon on gardens were no longer produced, Dr. Hendrick suggested that people of the present day were even less keen as regards their sense of smell than their ancestors of Elizabethan days. Shakespeare also in his works gave numerous realistic descriptions of scents and odors.

There is no cheerfulness like the resolutions of a brave mind, that has fortune at its feet.

WASHINGTON CONFERENCE

Four Local Persons Attended Mission Convention in U. S. Capital

Rev. and Mrs. F. W. Anderson and Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Galbraith represented the local churches at the Foreign Missions Conference held in Washington last week. Mr. Galbraith gave a comprehensive report of the sessions at the morning service at the Methodist church Sunday morning and we are printing a short synopsis of his address, which we are sure will be of interest to our many readers.

The Conference was held in the Auditorium at Washington, D. C., a building of immense size. From outside of Washington 3500 delegates were present, while judging from the number of tickets distributed in the city—and these passed around from one to another—at least ten thousand persons attended at least one session. Canada was entitled to send 210 delegates from different societies.

Fifty-eight Mission Boards were represented while twenty-seven other societies sent delegates, making a total of 85 societies who took part in the convention. Eleven training schools had members present.

The Conference met each morning at 9.30, the session continuing until 12 o'clock, when it adjourned for lunch. In the afternoon from 2.30 to 4.30, groups met in the different churches throughout the city, at which time pictures of activities in Mission Fields were shown. From 8 to 10 the Assembly was addressed by numerous speakers prominent in the work. Thus eight hours of each day was spent at the convention.

During the period of the conference 62 addresses were delivered, with 108 persons taking part. One of the most interesting ceremonies of the session was the Intercession by the President of Princeton College. Opening the service with a hymn and a prayer, this gentleman conducted his audience through an interesting and instructive hour.

The conference was financed by the delegates themselves, each one being requested to pay a $6 registration fee in advance. The amount thus obtained was used in the rental of the auditorium ($500 per day) and furnishing Hymn books and other expenses. A ticket given each delegate on his arrival served as admission to all sessions, with no reserve for a sent. Washington people had to pay just as much, and no one was allowed in without the card.

Many Countries Represented

The following countries were represented by the 108 taking part:—64 were from churches, colleges, schools, or missionary societies in the U.S.A.

6 were from Canada, viz.: Rev. Drs. Endicott, Cody, Mackay, Gaud-

TRUSTEE ELECTED BY ACCLAMATION

W. C. Williamson Will Fill Vacancy on Public School Board

When the Public School Board hold their next regular meeting on March 3rd, Mr. W. C. Williamson will occupy the position left vacant, when neither of the Ward 1 nominees qualified at the regular nomination meeting.

A fairly large number turned out to the meeting last evening, among those present being Mayor F. B. Chalk, Councillors and members of the School Board.

The nomination of William Clark Williamson by Dr. A. G. Aldrich, seconded by R. B. Thompson, was the only one received, and consequently Mr. Williamson was elected by acclamation. Clerk J. W. Sanders presided at the meeting.

ier, Hon. Newton Rowell, Toronto, and Bishop David Williams, D.D., London.

5 were from Africa, 1 from Korea, 3 from India, 3 from Great Britain, 5 from China, 1 from Burma, 2 from Japan, 1 from Chile, 1 from Bombay, 1 from Holland, 1 from Scandinavia, 1 from France, 2 from Germany, 2 from Cairo, Egypt, and 1 from Constantinople.

Some of the speakers were natives of the countries named and others were missionaries home on furlough.

In conversation with delegates from different countries, it was found that nearly all were astonished at the indifference of the American churches to the mission situation. One German representative, deploring the feeling between the Americans and his country, that they were not sincere in their messages, was grateful to the North Americans for the relief sent their starving people.

The missionaries from India recounted many stories of their interesting fields of service, especially the phase regarding the education of the children into Christianity. Several of the addresses given were more about the heathen within our gates than those in foreign lands. One speaker, deploring the examples set by so-called Christians to foreigners in this country.

Canon Cody of Toronto preached a wonderful sermon to the conference on Sunday morning. That evening addresses regarding their reasons for entering the mission field was delivered by young teachers of the Gospel about to set out into foreign lands. One gave as his reason the natural desire to spread God's word, and, secondly, because of the urging of his fiancée, who felt as he did about mission work. The second, a young girl, was going to take Christ into the hearts of young "heathens" in Turkey who have never known of Our Saviour. The third, a medical student, was undertaking mission service in China as his way of repaying his immense debt to God.

Dr. James Endicott, representing the Methodist Church in Canada, spoke of his miraculous conversion and his call to go to China, where he spent seventeen years spreading the Word.

Hon. Newton Rowell addressed the gathering on Monday, taking as his subject, "The Christian Spirit in International Relations." He told of his experiences in the Union Government and his connection with the League of Nations. Hon. Mr. Rowell paid high tribute to the late President Wilson for his stand in the League and the late war.

Dr. Robert E. Speer was the final speaker, and he took for his discourse, "The Call of An Unfinished Task." His speech dealt with the spirit of goodwill shown by the number of missionaries who go to far countries to aid their un-enlightened brethren. He pleaded that more and more speakers of the Gospel should undertake the work.

The conference was very successful from every standpoint, and those who were fortunate enough to be able to attend, learned much of the great missionary work of sending and teaching Christ in every corner of our world.

FINED FOR FAILURE TO PUT STAMP ON RECEIPT

Because he failed to affix a two-cent stamp to a receipt for $18.98, as required by the Federal Law, Aime Proulx was condemned to pay $100 to the Minister of Customs and Inland Revenue, by Mr. Justice Coderre in the Superior Court in Montreal yesterday.

The action was taken in the name of the King against Proulx, at the instance of the Dominion revenue officials.

It was alleged in the suit that Proulx, on June 29, 1924, gave a receipt for $18.98 to E. Bengt, without affixing a stamp as required by the amendment to the Special War Revenue Act of 1915.

PERSONAL

Mr. R. B. Cooper, Belleville, is spending a few days in town.

Mrs. L. Lockhart, of Peterboro, is visiting her sisters, Mrs. S. J. Isaac and Mrs. W. J. Scott.

Mrs. M. Garrett and two children, Walton street, went to Starkville to-day to visit her father. She was accompanied by Miss Mary Uglow.

The many friends of Mr. Richard Smith will be pleased to learn that his condition is somewhat improved. Mr. Smith was removed to the Hospital Saturday afternoon suffering from a severe cold and weakness.

Mr. Jim Stephenson's many friends will regret to learn that he is still unable to return home from Toronto as the condition of his hand in which blood-poisoning recently set in has not improved much.

The many friends of Mr. Joseph Richardson, Walton street, are congratulating him upon attaining the ripe old age of 86 years. Mr. Richardson is still very active and bright, and we all hope he will be spared to Port Hope and his loved ones for many more birthdays.

Married at St. Mark's.—A quiet wedding was solemnized at St. Mark's church on Saturday, Feb. 7th., by Rev. Canon Rigby, when Mr. Albert E. Bridges, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Bridges, Elgin street, was united in marriage to Miss Ada, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Smith, Dorset street. The bride has been for some years on the staff of the Bell Telephone Co. and the many friends of the courteous operator wish her and her young husband many years of happy wedded life.
