OBITUARY

LATE MRS. WM. PEART

The death occurred on Tuesday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. E. Hyland, King street, of Annie Ridley, relict of the late William Peart, who departed this life in 1882.

The deceased lady suffered a stroke two years ago, and since that time has been an invalid. Four days before her death she lapsed into unconsciousness and remained so until she passed peacefully away on Tuesday.

Of a particularly bright and congenial disposition, she will be deeply mourned by a large circle of friends.

Mrs. Peart's father, the late John Ridley, arrived from England about the year 1805, landing in what is now Port Hope. Afterwards he went on to Frenchman's Bay, or Pickering, where he married and there lived all his life. Mrs. Peart has always been deeply interested in all work pertaining to the church. Their home was always open to visiting clergymen, her husband, the late William Peart, being a local preacher, having circuits in Brant and Oxford counties. They had born to them six daughters and one son, who are left to mourn her death—Mrs. Elizabeth Hyland, King street, Port Hope; Mrs. F. White, Toronto; Mrs. P. H. Gilbert, San Leandro, Calif.; Mrs. J. Chesher, Port Hope; Mrs. A. Brant, Caigary; Morley Peart, Anderson, Ind.; and Mrs. Geo. Rawlinson, Toronto.

FUNERAL OF LATE MRS. PEART

The funeral of the late Mrs. Wm. Peart took place this afternoon from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Hyland, King street. Rev. J. W. Baird conducted the service, the following gentlemen acting as pall-bearers:—A. J. Chesher, Morley Peart, Ernest Chesher, L. B. Randall, Clifford Chesher, and Harold Fulford.

Among those from out of town who attended the ceremony were: Mrs. Hathway, Mrs. G. Rawlinson, and Mr. Ernest Chesher, of Toronto, and Morley Peart, Anderson, Indiana, and Mrs. White and son of Toronto.

WOOL PRICE UP

The price paid for Western Canada wool is steadily increasing, and the last car shipped by the Manitoba and Saskatchewan branch of the Canadian Wool Growers' Association netted 34 cents a pound to growers at Regina shipping points. This is an advance of 16 cents over the average price in 1923 and 10 cents advance over the average price in 1924.

HOW COLLINS WAS TRAPPED

Summary of Sensational Rescue Activities to Date

Many of our readers have lately become interested in the peculiar case of Floyd Collins, entombed alive in Sand Cave, Ky., but not having followed the story from the beginning fail to understand the circumstances of his imprisonment. For their enlightenment we have prepared a summary of activities to date.

Trapped First on January 30th.

Floyd Collins, cave discoverer and explorer, 35 years old entered Sand Cave in Kentucky on January 30th. Proceeding feet first down a narrow tunnel for a distance of some 150 feet, he dislodged a large boulder, which fell from the roof and caught Collins' foot, pinning it securely to the floor without crushing it. For many hours workmen pecked away at the rock with chisels but failed to make an opening sufficiently large for Collins to remove the imprisoned member. Collins was alternately cheerful and downcast, and at last begged that his leg be amputated to secure his release. Despatches by United Press tell of the circumstances.

The imprisoned man was exploring a long, winding cavern near Mammoth cave in hope of discovering a new passageway into the caverns. Three hundred feet under the earth, his foot loosened the boulder which now holds him prisoner.

Collins lay for 20 hours face down in the icy mud before friends, alarmed at his non-appearance, entered the passageway and found him.

The crevice is so narrow only one man can work at the rock which holds Collins and he must sit on Collins' back. He works as rapidly as possible. When he tires, another takes his place.

Foot Freed, But Caught by Sandstone. As rescuers moved the rock pinning Collins in a sink hole of the cave, on Tuesday, Feb. 3rd, the roof of the narrow passage leading to the surface collapsed, showering rock and dirt into the passage and again shutting him off, this time completely, from those trying to save him.

It could not be ascertained immediately how long it would take to remove the new obstruction.

Lying on their faces and passing dirt back in buckets, rescuers had wormed to Collins and dug under him until he was released. He was wrapped in blankets and given a heavy dose of whisky.

As the rescuers backed through the tunnel to pull Collins out of his narrow prison, the roof between them and the explorer fell. A rock slipped with the dirt, blocking the tunnel.

Passage Way to Collins Sealed. Despatches received on Thursday, February 5th, stated that Collins was sealed alive in the cavern by the slow rising of the cavern floor and the swelling of the walls.

The slow rising of the floor within the cavern began shortly after midnight, a rescue crew, which entered at 1 a.m., finding that the floor apparently had swelled from below at the innermost "squeeze," only a few feet from Collins.

A third trip revealed that the slow rising had continued, and when the miners emerged after their fourth underground visit, they told Gen. Denhardt that the passageway had been completely sealed. There had been no more rock falls or cave-ins, it was stated. The swelling apparently had lifted solid rock from the floor to the roof of the cavern. This action closed the passageway for an indefinite distance.

Radio Pronounced Collins Alive. A new shaft, directly down to Collins was begun on Friday, February 6th, but Collins remained sealed in the vault. The first day ten of the fifty-five feet necessary to reach Collins had been dug.

However, radio had been resorted to in hopes the cave would give up its secret. A two-stage audio frequency amplifier was connected in the lighting circuit leading into the cave and known to be intact. The lights were turned off, and with head sets clamped to their ears, the experimenters listened for any sound that might be interpreted as coming from Collins. After the test, the men said that they had heard distinct sounds, believed by them to have been caused by the jarring of the carbon filament in the electric light bulb fastened about Collins' neck. It was commented that, if alive, Collins had probably

STRONGER BEER INSTEAD OF STRONGER O.T.A.

Premier Ferguson is not a good sign reader else he would have understood from the vote on the Ontario Temperance Act that the majority of the voters not only wanted the act continued but strengthened, as the promise of Premier Ferguson before and after the vote, would lead all fair minded people to believe was the intention.

We cannot find any promise made by Premier Ferguson to hint that the beer would be "strengthened" everybody insists upon believing that it was the O. T. A. that was to be "strengthened" and its enforcement made more vigorous. Perhaps Premier Ferguson made one of his mistakes, when he announced stronger drink, when he should have said stronger O. T. A. He should be allowed another say from "the Throne."

At any rate, he like the man in the fable, will please no one "and lose his ass in the bargain" as the story goes. People expect the man at the head of this Province, to be one whose written and spoken word can be accepted as true—as the statutes of Ontario have to be accepted as the law.

The "wets" are not appeased or satisfied with stronger beer—there are those who will never be content until the old flood of whisky, brandy and other liquors are let loose again upon the young and old of this country.

The "drys" have every reason to be displeased for the Premier has broken faith with those who elected him.

WHAT'S DOING IN COBOURG

Clippings of Interesting News From the Sentinel-Star and World

THE WORLD

Postponed for Eight Days

The charge brought by Dr. Adam Watson against Mr. Thomas Beazard of charging too much when making a seizure in connection with a mortgage came up in Court here before Magistrate Floyd on Tuesday. It was put over for eight days.

Died Sitting in Chair

Death came with startling suddenness on Saturday to Mr. Geo. Woods, gardener, a well-known citizen, who died sitting in a chair at the Balmoral Hotel. Mr. Woods was staying at the home of Mr. T. Rowe, Spring street. He left the house about noon and going down town went into the hotel, where his death took place almost without warning. He had been poorly for a couple of months. Mr. Woods had no relatives here. The funeral took place on Tuesday. Rev. R. F. Stillman conducted the services.

Midnight Explosion

Citizens were sharply aroused on Monday by the explosion of a can of sodium near the Bird-Archer building. This alkaline, used by the Bird-Archer Company in manufacturing their boiler compound, is kept stored outside the building. Some boys removed a quantity of it last summer, but nearly all was recovered. It appears, however, that a can was left possibly beneath the barn and the fresher on Monday night swept this into the creek. When the sodium touched the water, there were a series of explosions, and a flame shot up into the air. The fire brigade was summoned by some of the people in the vicinity, but there was no fire and very little damage done. The explosion was sufficiently heavy, however, to prove alarming to residents of the immediate vicinity, and cause them to rise hurriedly. It was soon learned, however, that there was no danger.

Masonic Banquet Largely Attended

From two hundred and fifty to three hundred people were present at the Masonic "At Home" and banquet held on Friday evening. Mr. Harold Denton, Worshipful Master, ably presided over a most enjoyable program. It included enjoyable selections in the way of songs, skits and readings that were listened to with rare delight, by Mr. Bennett, entertainer, Toronto. But no less enjoyable were Canon Sawers stories told with characteristic wit, humour and fine understanding of what was applicable to the occasion and appreciated by the audience. Needless to say Canon Sawers was warmly applauded. Mr. Everett Winter sang and this also was greatly enjoyed.

There was dancing and cards afterwards and delectable refreshments were served at 11.30. Altogether it was a happy and enjoyable function.

Late Joseph Charles Barnard

The death took place at Peterboro on Friday evening of Joseph Charles Barnard in his 93rd year. Mr. Barnard, who succumbed after a short illness of about a week's duration, was born in South Monaghan in 1832, and lived practically all his life in that township and in Peterboro city, where he has resided for the past 25

DAMAGES ALLOWED IN MOTOR SMASH

His Honor Judge Huycke Gives Judgment For $850

His Honor Judge Huycke on Wednesday delivered judgment at Peterboro in an action brought by Mrs. Olivine Brooks, against William Baker, of Bowmanville, being an action arising out of the collision of two cars, in the Township of Smith.

Mrs. Brooks, with members of her family, was a passenger in a car owned by Mr. Hickey. The two cars collided, and some of the occupants of the car owned by Mr. Hickey were seriously injured.

Mrs. Brooks, through her solicitors, Messrs. Gordon and O'Brien, instituted an action against Mr. Baker, and the action came on for trial before His Honor Judge Huycke.

His Honor found that Mr. Baker was responsible for the accident, and awarded Mrs. Brooks damages in the amount of $150.00.

Mr. Hickey, the owner of the car, which was practically wrecked, also instituted an action against Baker, and the two actions were tried together, and Mr. Hickey was awarded judgment for $500.00, costs of both actions being given to the plaintiffs in both cases.

Mr. G. N. Gordon acted as counsel for the plaintiffs, Mr. M. J. Hickey and Mrs. Olivine Brooks.

Mr. D. A. J. Swanson, of Oshawa, acted for the defendants in each case.

As yet there are no new developments in the dog mystery. The kind old collie still keeps watch at the ice bergs and the theory that his master lies beneath the ice is growing stronger every day. The dog is made very comfortable at the home of Mr. Ray, King street, and every day he pays a visit to the lake. He crawls upon the ice and looks piercingly through the water, remaining for a long time and then returns to Mr. Ray's. The collie has been witnessed by over seven hundred visitors and is unknown to any who have seen it.

On account of severe winter, many dangerous ice jams have been caused at points along the St. Lawrence, which are threatening bridges, property, etc. Dynamite is being successfully used to break up some of these jams in the St. Lawrence near Massena.

The Canadian Girls in Training of St. Paul's have planned a nice little afternoon tea, which, according to the Coming Events column, is to take place on St. Valentine's Day.

A peculiar accident robbed E. Duggan, of Nelson Township, south of Milton, of a valuable cow. The

While the water in the Ganaraska is still high, there doesn't seem to be any danger of a flood due to the ice-jam below Spier's Mill.

The Coroner's jury which inquired into the death of Fawel Demerski, who was killed on the crossing of the Canadian National Railway at Ontario road, in Crowland Township, when a locomotive struck the truck in which he was riding, returned the following verdict last night: "That Fawel Demerski came to his death while riding in a motor truck struck by a Wabash engine. We consider if the approach to the crossing had been in proper condition the accident would not have occurred."

Here is shown the entrance to Sand Cavern, Cave City, Kentucky, from which point efforts were made to rescue Floyd Collins (inset), who for a week was pinned in a narrow crevice eight inches high. During rescue the wall fell in and the prisoner moved when the light went out, thus shaking the filament. On the other hand, it was pointed out that other noises might have caused the sounds heard in the head sets. Thus, nothing definite was determined.

Fissure Leading to Collins Found
A fissure which apparently leads near the underground prison of Floyd Collins, was found Saturday three feet below the floor of the shaft being sunk in an attempt at rescue.

This crevice is eight inches wide and about eight feet deep, soundings indicate, and may have an outlet in the great cavern which Collins says he found before he was trapped eight days ago.

The electric light about Collins neck was still burning Saturday and the shaft was sunk about 25 feet.

Gas Used to Locate Crevice
Radio tests taken Sunday showed Collins to be still alive, while the shaft being dug toward him had progressed 35 feet. A harmless, pungent gas introduced into the cave by engineers revealed another crevice, but the digging of the shaft was thought the best way to reach Collins. A probe was begun by military and county authorities into rumors that the affair was a gigantic publicity hoax.

Death Threat Received by Reporter
Very few new developments were reported on Tuesday, February 10th. Collins being pronounced as still alive by experts via radio. The shaft was down 38 feet. The court of inquiry declared rumors that no one had ever been in the cave as asinine. but were puzzled over a threatening note received by Thomas Killian, Chicago Reporter to the effect that if he did not discontinue writing about some person interrupting the rescue work and leave town, death would result.

Bulb About Collins Neck Smashed
Although miners engaged in digging the shaft to Collins had progressed within a few feet of the cavern roof on Wednesday, Feb. 11th, the bulb about Collins neck which had been used with a radio amplifier to keep in touch with the imprisoned man either burned out or became loose in the socket. The court of inquiry revealed that a second death threat had been received by reporters warning them to keep out of the cave and say nothing as to anyone hindering the rescue operations.

Sixty Hours Estimated Until Rescue
Dispatches by United Press of Thursday, February 12th, stated that about 30 feet of the 70, between Collins and his rescuers still remains and at an average rate of ten feet a day, the diggers should reach the cavern in sixty hours.

Discovered New Crevice Today
Just below the fifty foot level, a small crevice supposed to lead into the main cavern, was discovered by the diamond drills employed by the rescuers. Engineers in charge however are concentrating on the main shaft, a cave-in yesterday afternoon delaying the work to a small extent. The Court of Inquiry rendered their finding yesterday to the effect that no one had ever been warned to keep out of the cave except for safety's sake and the feeling between parties conducting the rescue was chiefly rivalry rather than jealousy.

EXPECTED TO REACH COLLINS THIS AFTERNOON

According to late despatches received this afternoon, rescuers of Floyd Collins were within a foot of the place where he was entrapped. His rescue was expected to be effected this afternoon.

English Production, "The Sporting Earl," Drew Capacity Crowd

The big English comedy-drama, "The Sporting Earl," drew a capacity audience at its first showing at the Royal last night.

A gripping plot, excellent acting, and a sprinkling of peppy humor makes the "Sporting Earl" an extremely interesting picture to watch. The story is taken from a famous English novel, and deals with the plan of Sir Horace Filkington to discriminate between his two heirs in dividing his estate. Two thrilling horse races, clever situations and startling denouements keep the audience gripping their seats with excitement right up to the final fade-out.

A screamingly funny Christie comedy, "Nerve Tonic," and the adventures of Gale Galen, Nate Shapiro and Kayo in "Babes in the Holly-wood," and the tenth round of the Fighting Blood series, make up one of the best all round entertainments of the season. The program will be presented to-night, and both Saturday afternoon and evening.

THE LEGEND OF A BELL

The bell of the Episcopal church at Williamsburg, Va., has a legend to account for its sweet tone. The foundry in which the bell was being made in 1761 was situated outside of London, Eng. Queen Anne visited there with the Duchess of Marlborough. As the composition was being heated, the queen asked if it was possible to add to the sweetness of the tone. Her Majesty was informed that silver in the metal in the rim of the bell would mellow the tone. She immediately gave the workmen all the silver she was wearing and commanded her attendants to do the same.

WILL ATTACK COST OF PRINCE'S TOUR

An attack upon the cost of the Prince of Wales' forthcoming tours to South Africa and South America is to be made in the British House of Commons by David Kirkwood, Labor member, according to present plans. Kirkwood, a fireeater, who was deported in 1916, and who has been prominent as a strike agitator, will move reduction by £100 of the additional £2,000 sought by the government towards defraying the Prince of Wales' expenses.

BAG OF MONEY LEFT IN STREET

"Home Manager— Purchasing Agent— Art Director—Wife"

Just a slim girl, maybe, or a motherly woman with sweet eyes and white hair—but what a responsibility is hers!

She is the active partner in the business of running a home. She buys most of the things which go to make home life happy, healthful and beautiful. Through her skill, safe fingers goes most of the family money.

And wisely and well it is usually spent too—far better than the average man could spend it himself. For women are better purchasing agents than men. They compare prices, weigh values and shop carefully.

They read advertisements regularly. Every day you'll find the wise little home manager searching the advertising columns for news that will add to the comfort, convenience and improvement of her home. You will find the same clever purchasing agent studying the advertisements to find where and when to buy, and what and how to buy most economically. The advertisements, too, tell this responsive art director how she can make her home more beautiful, more individual—the kind of home that a man appreciates but never knows how it is done!

Advertisements are the wise counsellors in the spending of money that the clever housewife heeds daily.

The business of running a home is made easier by reading the advertisements in the Guide.

AGENTS FOR LOVERS FORM CORSETS

THE GUIDE STORY

(Continued from Yesterday) General Dent was standing on the rug, with his hands clasped behind him and his back to the fire. The lurid glare of the fire, behind and below him, cast up the shadow of his form nearly to the ceiling, giving it a frightful and repellent look, and casting up the shadows of his features the wrong way, giving them a weird and ghost-like expression. She sunk there at the door, and gazed stealthily and in anguish upon the man toward whom her whole being tended with an almost irresistible force—the man whose affection, now that it was lost to her forever, had become of such irremediable value; the man to whom, under God, she owed every blessing she possessed on earth; to whom she owed all love and duty, yet against whose life she had just raised her hand. Horror! could she endure this thought! Haughty and selfish though she was, could she endure this thought! While she gazed, the flickering flame of the fire died away, and the dancing shadows on his face were still. She looked upon his countenance. It was very stern, but it was the sternness of grief, not the sternness of resentment. An impulse like forked lightning darted into the gloom of her sky. She would fly to him; she would grovel at his feet; she would implore his pardon. She started to her feet with the first impulse; but, ah! her dastard heart was trembling, fainting, dying in her bosom. And her traitor limbs! They were failing under her. She leaped against the door for support; an instant, and in another she was at his feet, clasping his knees, bathing his hands with her tears, imploring pardon, entreating him to do what seemed good to him with her, but not to drive her from him, and not to desert her.

Sheba

her night of romance will never be forgotten. Well, you won't forget the comedy we'll show Monday, either.

ROYAL THEATRE

Yes, this was Juliette—no more a friend, no more a sorceress—

"But 'e'n a woman! and commanded By such poor passion as the maid that milks And does the meanest chores."

Such tapers are love and grief!

And Ernest Dent—how did he receive this sentence? He stooped and raised her, supported her, an instant in his arms, while he glanced around for the nearest chair, seated himself, and drew her on his knees, and laid her head against his bosom, parting the tangled hair from her pale brow, and wiping the fast-flowing tears from her haggard cheeks.

But he did not kiss her, nor press her to his bosom; he pitied her, and he forgave her; but he did not, could not love her yet. The tempest in her bosom was subsiding, but had not yet subsided; and still she raved about forgiveness and still she abjured the idea of parting.

"Forgive me, Juliette! I do, as I hope to be forgiven," at last he said; "it is not for me, sinful man that I am, needing mercy as I do, to withhold it from you."

"Ah! yes, you will forgive me! you will forgive me! but you will forgive and leave me!"

"Leave you, Juliette! Leave you, my young, fierce, stormy Juliette, to beat your soul out against the rocks in this world! Leave you to your own guidance! How little do you know me, to think so! Why, I never even dreamed of such a thing."

Raising her from her resting-place on his bosom, he set her before him, and looking with a sad, earnest, almost breathless gaze upon her beautiful, though haggard, face, he murmured, as if to himself:

"Leave you! Why, what in that case ever would become of you? With your beauty and temperament, what would become of you?"

She dropped her weary head upon his chest again, and whispered: "Oh! then, Ernest, kiss me once more; fold your arms about me, and let me feel that you have forgiven and can love me still."

He did fold her in a close embrace; he seemed to feel for her so much; he seemed by sympathy to suffer all her remorse. What a depth of forgiveness, of pity, and of tenderness was expressed in the words he whispered so earnestly in his deep tones:

"Poor Juliette! my poor Juliette!" while he gently smoothed her disordered hair and dress.

This gentle and generous forgiveness, and for such an enormous offense—it would have subdued a rock—it subdued Juliette. Never had she been in such a gentle, womanly mood; never had she been so softened, so nearly changed.

Deep as had been her despair when she sank at his feet, great as had been the revulsion of her feelings as he raised her to his bosom, it was not yet joy. The memory of her awful offense was too vividly present with her. It was a stronger, deeper feeling of astonishment, gratitude, and veneration—at first; but her feelings soon changed, as you will see. Now she murmured:

"How can you forgive me; where can you find mercy for me?"

"Where? From my own experience of sin and suffering, dear wife; because I know the smart of every wound that is bleeding in your heart. Besides, even if I did not pity your anguish with my whole soul, I have too much need of mercy myself to refuse it to you."

Stroking back her hair, and gazing gravely on her face, he resumed:

"No; I am twenty years older and stronger and harder than you are; and should be twenty years wiser, which is doubtful. But this I would have you believe, Juliette; and upon this rock I would have you found your faith; and in this truth I would have you find your peace—that your husband is quite strong enough to bear with you; that though you may yield to ungovernable passion, that though you may draw down every other evil fate upon your head; yet, while you live and he lives, you cannot cast yourself beyond the pale of his care and protection; no more, with deep reverence be it spoken, than he can throw himself beyond the limits of his Maker's providence."

KEEPS MEMBERSHIP TO 111

Redistribution Will Not Increase Number of Seats

County boundaries and the claims of population, declares Premier Ferguson, will be the fundamental considerations governing the redistribution plan of the Ontario legislature, which the government announced recently in the speech from the throne. Through it all the membership of the chamber will be unchanged in its total. Toronto and other large cities are assured additional seats.

Premier Ferguson indicated the question was one of readjustment and not of an increase in the membership of the chamber.

Good Night Stories

DONALD AND DEE SEE A REAL-FOR-SURE GOBLIN

"SHOOT!" exclaimed Dee as she closed her story book. "Who ever saw a goblin? I'll just bet there —"

"Sure there is a goblin, and he'll get us if —" began Donald, when a queer noise sounded in the back of Dee's book and out came a funny little hand.

Donald and Dee almost jumped out of their boots when another little hand appeared, and out tumbled Squeedee, the Joyland elfin-thing into Dee's lap.

"My, you almost strangled me when you closed that book," the elfin laughed. "Who said there were not any goblins?"

"I did," laughed Dee. "That is, I mean to say I've never seen one."

"A good many things you've never seen," chuckled Donald, "but that's no sign someone else hasn't seen one. Have you, Squeedee? Tell us about him if you have."

Dee was on the verge of saying something, when both youngsters began to feel a wee bit dizzy. When they opened their eyes they were standing under a tree out in the woods.

"Not bad for fast travel," laughed Squeedee. "We're in the Philippine Islands, and if you're real good we may see a real-for-sure Goblin. But don't be frightened. These Goblins won't hurt you. They are dear little — There he is now! Come on over, Mr. Malmags, and meet Donald

"Your Eyes Look Like Glasses," and Dee from America. They've never seen a Goblin."

Out from a hole in the tree came a weird-looking claw, followed by a funny little furry head, the great big eyes blinking and winking at the light looked so comical Donald and Dee both laughed.

Mr. Malmags crawled out of the tree trunk and shook Squeedee's hand with his queer claws. "You'll have to excuse me for blinking," Mr. Malmag giggled. "I very seldom come out in the daylight."

"I guess that's why your eyes, rimmed like they are, look like glasses," suggested Dee.

Mr. Malmag was just about the size of a small rat, covered with soft, thick fur. His long tail was quite bare all but the tip; it had long hair on it that waved like a plume. His eyes and ears took up most of his face, for his nose and mouth were very small and reminded Dee of her pug dog's face. His hind legs were much longer than the front ones, and little pads were on the end of each toe, just like Mrs. Treecoad's feet.

"Now you may run back to finish your nap," laughed Squeedee, and before Donald and Dee could ask any questions at all they discovered they were alone.

Dee turned to the picture in her story book, and there was where they were when mama called them to lunch.

SAY SONG WRITER FILCH THEIR TUNES

Man Representing Music Industries Opposing New Copyright Bill

Plagiarism was charged against the modern song writers when opponents of the new copyright bill urged by the Authors' League and the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers appeared before the House Patents Committee at Washington recently.

Those fighting the bill declared that; song writers, instead of depending upon the creative faculty which they contend should be strongly protected by copyright, had filched their motif-strains from tunes of long ago, some of these catchy refrains even being taken from classical and religious music.

"Musical experts say that the particular theme which made 'Marcheta' a hit can be found in the overture of 'The Merry Wives of Windsor,' by Nicolai," asserted Alfred L. Smith, representing the Music Industries Chamber of Commerce.

"That appetizing and inspiring song, 'Yes, We Have No Bananas,' may be found almost note for note in part of 'The Messiah,' by Handel, and in part in 'I Dreamt I Dwelt,' from 'The Bohemian Girl,' by Balfe. 'I'm Always Chasing Rainbows' in its main theme is note for note like parts of Chopin's Fantaisie impromptu, Opus 66.

"These are but a few of many examples which could be cited. Such is the creative genius which the advocates of this bill say must be protected by drastic extension of copyright monopoly in order that we may be assured of progress in the musical art.

"Much of the current popular music is based upon works of the old masters," Mr. Smith continued. "The repetition of a single theme taken from an old symphony or opera, or perhaps themes from several original sources, a change in time, a different accent, adaptation to the modern dance rhythm, makes a popular hit which may earn thousands of dollars in mechanical royalties.

ULTRA-VIOLET RAYS FOR THE LONDON ZOO

Quartz Lamps to be Used to Protect Birds and Animals from Fog

After a recent fog in London a number of casualties were reported from the London zoo, where fog often proves fatal to weakly tropical birds, writes a zoological authority in the London Daily Mail. Nearly all the birds go off their feet through lack of light and sunshine and their reduced vitality is not improved by sulphurous impurities in the air. Dark patches were found in the lungs of recent victims, due, of course, to carbon. Still, a healthy, hungry bird should have the strength to resist fog, but it was rather depressing recently when the superintendent took a bag of meal-worms to the birds and only one in ten was bright enough to take these great delicacies.

Future fogs are to be fought in the tropical bird-houses by an installation of quartz electric lamps, which do not cut off the stimulating ultra-violet rays. This form of artificial sunshine should keep the small birds feeding and so give them strength to go on living.

Even incandescent gas-mantles are of value. Snakes and lizards in the lighted reptile house laboratory make every effort to crawl into the rays and show signs of recovering their fog-killed appetites.

An electric main is to be laid down the board walk in Regent's Park and from this the zoo hopes to bring light to the unit cages where the ultra-violet rays are most needed.

OLD PORT HOPER GIVES RADIO FANS ADVICE

Trenton, N.J., Feb. 9, 1925

To the Editor of the Guide.

Dear Sir,—Bring a radio fan and an ardent reader of your dear old Guide, I notice that several Port Hoppers are experiencing trouble with their receiving sets.

If you will get in touch with the telephone company I believe you will solve the problem of what is making all the noises. The ringing machines more than likely are the cause of the trouble, and it can be done away with by placing a few coils and condensers in the central office. This is a suggestion, and is based on the fact that we have had the same complaints from all over our territory, and the matter, in all cases, has been remedied as stated above.

I certainly do appreciate your paper and keep up to date on all that happens in Port Hope.

Wishing you every success,

I am, yours very truly,

Roy Stephens.

ALLEGED FRAUD BY ARMENIAN

Charged With Conspiracy in Getting Aliens Admitted to Canada

An extraordinary conspiracy, involving fraud and impersonation against the department of the Secretary of State, the Immigration and Colonization, and External Affairs, in illegally obtaining certificates of naturalization passports and immigration permits for the entry of relatives or friends of foreigners, from American and other countries, has just been unearthed by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

As the result of investigations by the police, G. H. Alexander, an Armenian, was arrested at Galt, Ont., and appeared in the Ottawa Police Court Thursday morning on a charge of conspiracy. He pleaded not guilty, elected to be tried by a jury and will come up again next week for preliminary hearing. It is alleged that Alexander has been concerned in securing illegal admission of aliens to this country.

Presbyterians 6; Methodists 2
The first real clash between the anti-Unionists and the Methodists took place at the rink last evening, when the Presbyterian Tuxis Boys outplayed the "Uniteds" to a 6-2 score. The ice was a little soft and rough, but the boys worked hard, the Presbyterians bring a little the more aggressive team throughout. Britton and Melville showed up well for Topsy Tozer's gang, Young and Sneyd for the Methodists.

DEATH OF G. E. MITCHELL

Was Chief of Police in North Bay for Seven Years

The death occurred Tuesday at his home, 13 Hewitt avenue, Toronto, of Geo. Ellis Mitchell, a resident there for the last 15 years. He was district court bailiff, chief of police and member of the town council in North Bay for seven years. He was also chief of police at Smith's Falls for some time. Deceased was an organizer for the Royal Templars with which he had been associated for many years. He was interested in all out-door sports and was an officer of the Oakmount Senior Baseball team and honorary director of the West Toronto Senior Baseball League.

Deceased was born in Baltimore, Ont., 55 years ago. He is survived by his widow, his mother, eight children, three brothers and four sisters.

ARTILLERY OR AIRCRAFT

The Senate has very properly rejected the plan for expending $6,500,000 for the elevation of big guns on thirteen battleships.

Aside from the question whether the elevation of the guns would involve structural alterations which are prohibited by the Arms Limitation Treaty, it would be unwise to expend such a large sum for gun elevation while more urgent and necessary measures for national defense are neglected for lack of funds.

Until the army and navy are provided with suitable air forces they can not be expected to take the field or the sea against an enemy equipped with air forces.—Washington Post.
