SHORT COURSE AT CENTERVILLE

Ends With a Banquet And a Very Merry Evening

At the conclusion of the short courses in Agriculture, sewing and domestic science, a banquet was held on Friday evening, at Centerville, (South Monaghan, P. O.) Fifty boys and forty girls attended the classes held in the same village under the auspices of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, Durham County Branch with the able direction of Mr. F. C. Patterson, our local representative.

The banquet which was attended by about two hundred, including the scholars, their parents and friends, was a sumptuous affair, with the following menu:

Fruit Cocktail, Cherries, Olives, Roast Chicken, Mashed Potatoes, Peas, Nut and Celery Salad, Angel Parfait, Iced Wafers, Cake, Mints, Cafe Noir.

Following the feast various toasts were proposed and responded to, the first being "The King," then W. S. Gilbert proposed a toast to "The Girls' Class." "The Boys' Class" was not forgotten and then came the address of the evening by the guest of honor, Wade Toole, Professor of Animal Husbandry, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. Other short addresses were made by prominent men among them being J. L. McCamus and A. J. Fallis.

The music was supplied by the Centerville orchestra composed of members of the class and they added much to the excellence of the program.

On conclusion of the banquet and toasts everybody went across the road to dance and community singing. They had a "wink of a time" for the entire evening.

LARGE VOTE CAST ON SATURDAY

Total Poll Now Reaches Two Hundred and Ninety-five

Saturday's vote on the Church Union question was the largest so far, with the exception of the opening night. A large number of out-of-town members cast their ballots during the polling period.

Seventy-seven votes were cast, bringing the total up to two hundred and ninety-five out of four hundred and fifty-two eligible.

Summary
Total number eligible	452
Vote of Thursday, Jan. 22	119
Vote of Saturday, Jan. 24, and Tuesday, Jan. 27	63
Vote of Thursday, Jan. 29	45
Vote of Saturday, Jan. 31	77

Total vote to date 295
 Still to vote 157

Great interest is being taken in the vote here, and very little hard feeling is shown between the opposing parties.

The poll will be open to-morrow (Tuesday) afternoon from 4.30 to 6.30, closing finally on Thursday, February 5th, from 7 to 8 o'clock. The regular congregational meeting will be resumed on this date.

BOY'S FINANCE WORK OF BOARD

Bond Selling Campaign January
 31 to February 10

From Saturday, January 31st, to Tuesday, February 10th, the fourth Ontario Older Boys' Parliament will promote a bond selling campaign to raise $8,500 for Canadian S. E. T. work in Ontario. C. S. E. T. is the four-fold program used by Trail Rangers and Tuxis Boys and is endorsed by every evangelical church in Ontario and the Y.M.C.A. To date it has proven the best boys' program ever carried on.

The Parliament sells "bonds" to raise this money, bonds selling at $1 each and paying their dividends in better boyhood and eventually in Christian Canadian citizenship. A man prominent in Toronto municipal affairs stated that the Parliament had convinced him that last year's bonds had paid dividends of 100 per cent.

Opinion is ultimately determined by the feelings, and not by the intellect.

 Them on Wednesday

The Women's Canadian Club is having a very brilliant man to address them, on Wednesday night, Professor Roy, of the Department of English, Queen's University, is speaking on "Conditions in Contemporary Germany."

Besides being an authority on English literature and a poet of no mean calibre, Professor Roy is well qualified to speak on political and social conditions in Europe, having served in Poland and the Balkan States during the war under the British Intelligence Corps, and having returned only last summer from a visit to Germany, where he had been studying post-war conditions. To many of us, Germany is a closed book, and to the best informed a great problem; so any light which Professor Roy can throw upon the subject will enable us to better understand the problems which agitate the world, and will be appreciated.

WEDDING BELLS

JOHNS—TROLLEY

At St. Peter's Rectory, Cobourg, on Wednesday morning a pretty wedding took place when Miss Vera Irene Trolley, elder daughter, of Mr. and Mrs. S. N. Trolley, became the bride of Mr. Stanley F. Johns, son of Mr. Aubrey Johns and the late Mrs. Johns, of Cobourg. Rev. Canon Sawers performed the ceremony. The bride, who was given away by her father, was attired in brown broadcloth silk. She was attended by her sister, Miss Gladys Trolley, wearing brown crepe de chene. Mr. George Campbell assisted the groom. Immediately after the ceremony a dinner was served at the residence of the bride's parents, after which the happy couple left on a honeymoon trip to Rochester and Albion, N.Y. They will reside in Cobourg—Cobourg Post.

Ninety Minutes—No Score

The first goalless game of the O.H.A. Senior series this season was played in Kitchener Friday night, when Kitchener, the tail-enders, and Niagara Falls, group leaders, played 90 minutes of strenuous hockey deadlocked, neither team being able to tally. It was the best game seen on Kitchener ice this season, and though Kitchener had an advantage at times, the play generally was fairly even.

The Retort Courteous

The world has for so long heard of friction and hatred and fighting between Germans and Frenchmen that anything on the other side of the picture is decidedly welcome.

When the French authorities were working a large section of the German railways in the Ruhr region, one of the biggest gangs was at Ehrang. On New Year's Day the Germans sent a combined letter to the French saying:

"Our best compliments for a Happy New Year to all the French railwaymen who worked at Ehrang, with our gratitude for their comradeship, and to all the chiefs, for the kindness and humanity which they showed their subordinate German comrades. The recollection is lasting."—Kitchener Record.

Truth is the object of our understanding, as good is to the will.

Most Likely and Perhaps—The motor car has caused a revolution in the life of the woman and the child. Some complain that many use cars who cannot afford the cost. It is hard to say. Perhaps many are forced to do without other things in order to keep their cars running. But the freeing of a family from being tethered to its front step may be worth all it costs.—Toronto Star.

HEARD ON THE STREET

Good morning! So Old Bruin could see his shadow!

At the beginning of the day people said: "Not much chance of the bear seeing his shadow to-day." But a sudden change came o'er the scene and the sun shone out bright and clear.

If the old prophesy be true, we are likely to have winter hold out a while longer, as Old Bruin will crawl back when he sees his shadow.

"Where were you when the lights went out?" "Well, I wouldn't like to tell." The way the lights failed Saturday night without much warning left people stranded in the dark. The cause of the trouble is not known here, as it occurred on the high tension lines.

It doesn't look altogether like the end of winter to-day. In fact, it looks like the beginning of another little winter.

Oshawa's water supply was seriously handicapped on Friday, and will be for this week, owing to the breaking of the overflow pipe in the new tank north of the High School. City Engineer W. C. Smith stated that the extreme cold snap was responsible for the break, and as a result a large piece is out of the pipe.

The new millinery store of Mrs. A. E. Stevenson and Mrs. H. Eldridge, in the store of the late Mrs. Joan Ryan, was opened for business on Saturday and presents a very neat and modern appearance. The official opening takes place when the Easter claque comes in, and an announcement will appear in our columns.

Some mail which was sent out from Belleville about the fifteenth of last month appears to have gone astray, and it is thought that possibly one bag may have disappeared at a point between there and Toronto. This happened to contain mail from most of the banks there and valuable correspondence of individuals.

"Another eclipse," remarked Albert Lowes in Strong's when darkness suddenly descended on the store Saturday night. Merchants report that the falling light was a great handicap to business; and where no lamps or candles were available, business came to a complete standstill.

Lieut. Wilfred Desjardins, of the Montreal Fire Brigade, who was entombed in the wreckage of the flaming Lemoine street building for eight hours on Wednesday night and Thursday morning last, and who was finally rescued after devoted efforts on the part of his comrades, died Sunday in the Montreal General Hospital from shock and exposure.

A large number of local boys are engaged in the bond selling campaign to aid in carrying on the Boys' Parliament, which is the training school for our future statesmen. Your co-operation in helping them over the objective of $75 will be an aid to making better citizens.

When in Toronto on Saturday we noticed a rather startling early spring costume making its appearance.

HENRI VILLAR

Officer of French Line Works Out Menu to Melody That Keeps Passengers Comfortable in Rough Weather
Henri Villar, commissaire of the S.S. Paris of the French line, has invented an anti-seasick menu and is trying it out this season on passengers who travel on his great liner.
"It is based on the theory that green vegetables will keep the body healthy if served without the addition of sauces and gastronomic 'trills,'" explains Monsieur Villar.
"A few light meats as chicken or lamb chops may be taken, but no milk, soup, eggs, fish or coffee."
With a twinkle in his eyes Commissaire Villar recalls that several years ago he recommended iced champagne to start the day for any one with mal de mer tendencies, but—now, he adds sadly, it is different!
Incidentally, Monsieur Villar suggests that it is better to take your meals in the dining saloon than in the cabin, since in the saloon you have a great aid to proper digestion in music.
"I am very careful about the musical programs," he declares. "On calm days we can stand a little touch of jazz, but when the sea is rough I always see that our programs are of the ballad and the semi-classic variety."
"Unconsciously, we masticate to musical tempo. One song made famous by John McCormack which I have played often is 'Somewhere in the World' (Dans Un Coin Du Monde) a fox trot ballad with a certain lilt that makes it a real enemy to rough seas."

H. A. Fisher, former British minister of education, who has been elected as warden of New College, Oxford. He made a tour of Canada last year.

If the roads program of the provincial highways department is carried out these counties will be able to have almost all their provincial highways paved at the end of 1925. The program for this year includes the paving of the highway between Bowmanville and Newcastle, from Port Hope five miles west between Cobourg and Grafton, and between Brighton and Trenton. This will leave only the stretches between Newcastle to five miles west of Port Hope and between Grafton and Colborne to be done after this year. The paving to be done this year will have a cement top.

Attended Annual Meeting And Banquet of Durham and Northumberland Fruit Growers Association

"Much has been heard of the decline in rural population in recent years," stated President J. B. Reynolds of the Ontario Agricultural College at the luncheon address of the Northumberland and Durham Fruit Growers' Association in Newcastle, Friday, "and a glance at the statistics of the past thirty years indicates that there has been a very decided trend of population toward the larger centres. In this period the towns and cities of Ontario have increased their population by close to 900,000, while the rural sections report a decrease of 70,000. One might naturally expect a decline in the morale of the rural people at the same time, but such has been far from the case, judging by the condition of agriculture in the Province today.

"While the population has been steadily falling off," continued the head of the O. A. C., "the capital invested in lands has increased 40 per cent., that in implements about 150 per cent., while the value of our live stock has more than doubled. Land, implements, live stock and buildings in Ontario were worth about $975,000,000 in 1893. They are worth nearly twice that, or $1,738,000,000, now.

"With the exception of sheep, which seem to have fallen off with the increase of dogs, all live stock has increased in numbers. Thirty years ago there were 800,000 milch cows in the Province. Today there are 1,200,000. Not only are there many more cows, but these are much better cows than those of yesterday, being worth at least $20 more per head. To my mind, it speaks well for the industry and morale of a people when, with fewer and smaller families, they can keep 50 per cent. more cows, which require milking morning and evening, Sundays and holidays for 365 days in the year."

More Self-Respect
Another improvement was stressed by President Reynolds. "Farmers in past years have been suffering from that terrible disease which experts term an inferiority complex, or, in other words, they were lacking in self-respect," he said. "It made my blood boil to hear men remark, 'Oh, you can't expect much from us; we are only farmers.' Whatever opinions we may hold of the U. E. O. movement, that same movement has given the farmers of this Province a great deal more confidence in themselves."

Self-Contained Farms
Mr. Reynolds urged farmers to depend more on their own farms for necessities, citing two or three cases where expensive things had been purchased which could have been grown at home, at a time when every agriculturist was crying blue ruin. "Trade between town and country is good business," he stated, "but there is no use carrying this to extremes. It is too expensive to buy milk, eggs, fruit and meats when you can raise these things yourself. Make your farm more self-contained and you will have less to worry about during dull times."

Eat More Apples
Some very sound advice was given in a rather humorous way by Dr. A. Farncomb of Newcastle. "We have heard a great deal about the producer in addresses here today," stated the doctor, "but very little about the fellow on the other side of the counter, Mr. Consumer. Both are absolutely essential in the apple growing business, and neither is worth a hill of beans without the other." Dr. Farncomb then proceeded to tell the growers something about the medicinal properties of the apple, claiming that it was a cure for many ills. He stated very definitely, however, that such a meeting was not the place for an address of this kind, but it was up to the producers to see that consumers heard more about such arguments. "Advertise your apples properly," he told the convention, "and you will have no trouble in selling all the fruit you can possibly produce."

Tips From a Grower
"I am not in a position to tell you how to make more money out of your apples," said Paul A. Fisher of Burlington, "because during the past few years I have made nothing out of my own." However, Mr. Fisher, who is President of the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association, by encouraging discussion shed some new light on orchard practices. In the first place he urged very careful selection of the varieties most popular with the consumer in planting out an orchard. In his own, thinning was carried out in a limited way, the men using ten-foot step-ladders and covering all the tree within reach. "We are able to cover about two-thirds of the tree in this way," he said, "and under present conditions I doubt whether it would pay us to employ extra ladders and more help in order to make a complete job."

The three-legged ladders were advised for the job, it being a rather risky business to use the four-legged affairs on uneven ground such as is found in every orchard. In pruning Mr. Fisher advised a long saw, with teeth on both sides, tapered to a point. More expensive apparatus was not necessary in his opinion.

More Attention to Marketing
President J. B. Reynolds, of the Ontario Agricultural College, urged that the matter of marketing be given more consideration. "You have local fruit associations in every district, but there is no central control. As a result all these associations dump fruit on the larger markets at the same time. Prices are depressed and the growers suffer." Mr. Reynolds thought that the National Horticultural Council should look into this matter, regulating the flow of fruit to the larger centres and also directing some of it to the smaller cities and towns, which at present were largely overlooked by the growers' organizations.

Spraying Service
The spraying service which has been such a signal success in Durham and Northumberland Counties this year, and which will be extended into other districts this summer was described by Agricultural Representative F. C. Paterson and the work outlined for the coming year. A few representative orchards will again be selected and spraying in these carried out under the supervision of competent authorities so that growers may see for themselves the practical benefits to be derived from modern service.

Professor L. Caesar, of the Ontario Agricultural College; W. A. Ross of Vineland; R. L. Wheeler, Transportation Expert with the Fruit Branch at Ottawa; and Professor T. G. Bunting of Macdonald College, Quebec, also made addresses.

Officers Ake Elected
Officers were elected for the coming year as follows:—
Pres.—J. G. Wait, Colborne.
Vice-Pres.—W. J. Bragg, M.P.P., Bowmanville.

Secretary—Harry Sirett, Brighton
Directors—W. H. Gibson, Newcastle; E. H. Martyn, Port Hope; D. J. Gibson, Newcastle; R. J. Gill, Bowmanville; W. E. Hare, Cobourg; D. McDonald, Trenton; P. C. Dempsey, Trenton.

AN INTERESTING CASE
Employee Sues Employer For $10,000 Damages in Vancouver Case

Interesting developments are promised in a case to be heard this month in Vancouver, B.C. The plaintiff is Mrs. Lily Ralph, the defendant W. F. Hanbury, who employed her. Mrs. Ralph claims $10,000 general damages and $237 special damages for alleged injuries sustained on Oct. 19 last when, she says, she was ejected from Mr. Hanbury's Cartier Ave. residence where she had been employed as a nursemaid. The statement of claim recites that the plaintiff was seated in a chair, that Mr. Hanbury caught hold of her feet, pulled her from the chair and dragged her feet foremost along the floor, downstairs and out to the street. She was severely injured, she asserts. Mr. Hanbury, in his defence, maintained that Mrs. Ralph, being duly paid her wages, was requested to leave; she refused to do so and he "gently laid hands on her, using no more force than was necessary to remove her from said premises."

The Changing Press

Only a few years ago there was hardly a paper in Canada that didn't first find out what "the party" wanted before it had an opinion. Today the newspapers, with a few rare exceptions, wholly ignore partisan interests.

The press is getting to see that the serious business of Canada is the

ROMANCE

You often hear people refer to the "dear old days of romance"—to the time when knight-errants roamed the earth to do honor to a lady's blue eyes.
These folks say we are living in an age of realism!
An age of "realism" where the human voice is hurled across the world without wires; where the temperature of Mars is taken more than thirty millions of miles away; where tons of steel and people ride easily and safely through the air or under the sea!
An age of realism! Why this is the most romantic of all ages!
The advertising columns of this paper are full of romance—of the romance of men who have devoted their lives to bringing new comforts, conveniences and pleasures for mankind.
Advertisements tell these stories, not with the romantic exaggeration of a jongleur, but with the calm, simple words of sincerity. Here is a firm that spent millions to develop a product that makes your baby comfortable. Here is a company that has labored fifty years to cut a single hour of toil from your day's work. Here is a man who has searched the Seven Seas to produce a new flavor for your dinner.
Romance—this age is full of it. Not just empty romance, but the true romance of achievement, of progress, of the betterment of mankind.
Advertisements tell you what the romance of business is doing for you. Read them in the Guide.

"HOME OF READY-TO-WEAR"

THE GUIDE STORY

Juliette arose, bathed, dressed and breakfasted. When, at last, she was seated in her boudoir, she sent, for her purse, and taking from it three or four pieces of gold, she placed them in the hands of Fanchette, saying, "Here are two months' wages in advance. Go and seek another service."

"Miladi!" exclaimed the girl, in painful surprise.

"You have given offense. You are discharged."

"Miladi! how have I been so unfortunate?"

"You have offended me. It is enough. You are dismissed. Leave the room."

The girl looked, and saw such unrelenting determination upon her lady's face, that she courted and retired in silence. In fact, Juliette would not endure the sight of one who had witnessed her humiliation. Another weary day passed. Because she could not rest, she had appeared at the saloon of the Empress. For the same reason, she attended the opera in the evening. Returning home late, and not wishing to betray her anxiety by inquiring for him, she merely said to the servant that admitted her:

"Let Colonel Dent know that I have come home."

"Colonel Dent has not yet returned, madam."

Juliette suppressed a rising groan and went into his dressing-room to await him.

Colonel Dent, upon the morning succeeding their quarrel, had gone to a diplomatic dinner, as we have seen. Immediately after coffee, he had arisen to take leave, declining the pressing invitation of his hostess to remain for the evening's masque. He hurried back to Paris in much anxiety upon Juliette's account. Her image was haunting him—not as she stood before him in her dressing-room, her form erect and elated, her lips writhing, and eyes flashing with pride and scorn as she defied him; not so; but as she lay upon her bed, all disordered and disheveled, in the heavy death-like sleep procured by opium, with the beautiful hair he loved so well all torn and tangled about her. He wished to return and tell her that she was forgiven. It never occurred to him that there was anything to forgive in his own conduct. He wished to kiss away the shadow from her brow, to smooth the bright hair back into its lovely waves. He felt by inspiration that she also yearned for a reconciliation, and he resolved besides that nothing on earth should induce him to spend such another unholy and comfortless night. So he reveled in the dream of his restored beauty as he rode to Paris, as he entered his own hotel. Passing up immediately to her rooms, he found them vacant. Then he sought her in the saloon, in vain. He rang the bell. A servant entered.

"Go and tell Mrs. Dent's maid to let her lady know, wherever she is, that I have returned, and am waiting for her here."

"Oui, monsieur, mais madame a alle a la bal-masque a Versailles."

"Heartless!" thought Colonel Dent, as the man bowed out of the room.

"Heartless! more—impertinent, after all I told her—insolent, impudent! You shall repeat this, my lady!"

And, disappointed and angry, he passed the night alone in his dressing-room. It did not happen to occur to him that she had gone to Versailles to seek him. A quarrel is very properly called a "misunderstanding," for, certainly, misconception and misconception have most to do with beginning and perpetuating a feud. As soon as he had arisen the next morning, he found a messenger and a letter from Monsieur de Cadore awaiting him. The letter requested his instant presence at Versailles upon business of urgent importance. He returned to Paris in the afternoon. State affairs occupied him the whole remainder of the day. Yet twice he had found time to go home. Upon both occasions he found her out. "Gone to court," "Gone to the opera," were the answers given by the footmen to his questions. His heart was hardening toward her. "She does this purposely. She defies me! She must learn a different lesson. Hester could never have doted this." Just see the unconscious injustice of the man. Why had not he said, "Hester would never have done this." He began to devise means to bring her "to her senses," as he expressed it, to humble her, to bring her to his feet, thence to his arms—he meant in his heart. He need not have troubled himself—nature was doing all that for him. Juliette was awaiting him in her dressing-room. She had exchanged her heavy velvet robe, her gems and plumes, for a graceful negligee of India muslin, a white, soft, delicate dress, charmingly relieved by her black ringlets. He admired her most when she was splendidly attired, but she loved her best in this simple and elegant demitoylette; and this, of course, she knew, and never, perhaps, had Juliette's tact been so worthily revealed. She was sitting in a deep crimson chair near his dressing-table, at the end of the room. It was a long room, and at the opposite end was the door leading into the passage. The thickly carpeted passage returned no echo to the heaviest tread, so she did not listen to hear his footsteps, but watched the door nervously. At last, late, near two o'clock in the morning, it opened, and Colonel Dent came in. He walked half across the floor before he saw her, and then, with a surprised and surly "Oh!" he turned on his heel, walked back and opened the door, before he felt the thrilling clasp of the soft arms he loved around him, and the rippling music of Juliette's voice, saying:

DORIS MEETS A HAPPY LITTLE ARCHITECT

DORIS caught a flash of yellow as a bird with a bright bit of yarn in its bill flew from the ground to the elm tree beside the dusty road.

"Well, now, who in the world is that building in our elm tree, I'd like to know!" Doris mused as she stepped closer to the drooping elm. "He isn't singing at his work, but still he looks very happy. Oh, dear, I wish—"

"There you go, there you go!" chuckled a merry voice in the grasses at her feet. "I'm glad you made that wish just now, or I'm sure you would have stepped all over me," and Doris's wee elfin friend from Joyland hopped up, his face all smiles.

"Oh, Squeedee!" and Doris grabbed the wee elfin and gave him a great big hug. "I hope I didn't step on you. I'm so glad you happened along. I—"

"Indeed, Mrs. Baltimore Oriole, I'm delighted to know you," Doris said, as she shook the wee bird's claw. "But I never saw an Oriole dressed like you before. And I took you for a male because you were doing the building."

"Pshaw!" laughed Mrs. Oriole, good naturedly. "If I waited for my mate, I'd never have a home. He does the singing, and I do the building. No, Daddy Baltimore Oriole dresses mostly in black. His head, throat and the upper part of his back is glossy black. So are his wings, with the exception of a few white spots and edgings. The rest of his suit is orange, shading into almost a flame color. "No, he always comes North ahead of me, picks out the spot for the home, then I build it."

"I see you have used bits of Mama's yarn," Doris laughed as she peeked in at the dear little swinging cradle hanging from the branches of the elm tree where Squeedee, with his magic, had whisked them. "I should think you'd be afraid of getting wet."

"What? In a rain proof house? I should say not!" laughed Mrs. Oriole. "Nor can the heavy winds tear it from its place."

"You see, I tied it to the limb with horse-hairs. It's mostly made from milk-weed stalks and shreds of bark. We don't always build the same kind of nests. It depends on our location."

"But there are not many hawks around here, so my nest isn't quite as deep as some. Now, I'm all through except the top. I like to have the top closed so folks can't see me sitting."

"I won't get through if I don't hurry, so if you'll excuse me, I'll go on with my work." And Mrs. Baltimore Oriole flew through the air to hunt for more thread.

Doris and Squeedee watched her until Doris heard her Mama calling—then thanking Squeedee, she hurried back to the house.

MOTORISTS OF ONTARIO

Advice to Motor, Truck and Motor Cycle Drivers of Ontario

During 1923, in Ontario, there were 236 people killed, and 2,348 lesser accidents caused by motors, trucks and motor cycles. The Hazard is in your hands. We want your co-operation to help reduce these fatalities and lesser accidents. You can do so by being careful always.

Read, remember and act on the following:

Keep brakes and steering gear in good order.

Never start or stop suddenly.

Always keep well to the right, and drive, as far as possible, in a straight line.

When making a right turn, always pull to the curb before reaching the corner.

Never pass another car at a safety island or street intersection.

Always slow down for every street car crossing; the street car has the right of way.

Always keep a safe distance behind the car ahead.

Never get squarely behind another car. Follow where you can see the traffic ahead.

Always watch oncoming traffic. It may cut you off.

Dim your lights when meeting other vehicles.

Always assume that nobody but you knows how to drive properly, and give everybody else the right-of-way.

Stop, look and listen before crossing a Railway track.

"Drive your car as you would like everyone else to drive."

The Ontario Safety League Want You To Know That:

Every motorist is a pedestrian at times, and pedestrian victims of auto accidents, through contributory negligence, sometimes share in their own untimely deaths.

Most street accidents occur when people are on their way home at the end of the work day. Then they are tired and less alert, mentally and physically.

The summer months are the worst in the year for auto accidents. Be on your guard.

You lose if you observe safety rules at your work, and are careless when you reach the street.

It is better to spend money for gasoline, comforts and happiness than for hospital bills, repairs, court fines and cemetery lots.

To cause a death takes the joy out of your life—to be killed brings sorrow and hardships to others.

Two ways to reduce accidents: Drive with less speed and more care. Watch your step when walking.

A second of carelessness may destroy a lifetime of carefulness.

Begin today to drive and walk carefully.

Whose Turn Next?—It is reported that the radio is restoring the home-life that the automobile disrupted, but not in those homes where there is only one set of ear-phones and a large family.—Hamilton Spectator.

HEARING ENDS IN COMMITTAL

No Funds in Bank to Meet Cheques Merson and Sherman Gave 32 Farmers

On agreement of counsel, Nathaniel Merson and R. Sherman were committed Friday morning in Peterboro police court, after a preliminary investigation, before Magistrate Langley, for trial before a higher court, Merson to be tried on a charge of obtaining goods under false pretenses and both to be tried jointly on a charge of conspiracy to defraud, under Section 44 of the Criminal Code.

Merson and Sherman were arraigned on charges laid by a score or more farmers of Peterboro County, from whom they obtained cattle, giving in exchange cheques which afterwards proved to be worthless.

The court-room was crowded, the majority of the spectators being farmers from the districts where the two men operated. Crown Attorney G. W. Hutton, K.C., conducted the case for the Crown with R. R. Hall, K.C., an interested companion, and Joseph Wearing appeared for the two men.

In the first hearing, on the conspiracy charge, James Healey of Westwood, Asphodel township, was the first witness called. He testified with regard to transactions involving the sale of a cow and a calf to Sherman and Merson, in a total account amounting to $62.50. The sum of $25 was paid in cash, and a cheque given for the balance, $37.50. The cow which formed the basis for the last payment was afterwards traded by Merson to a neighbor, Joseph Welsh, and did not join the carload of stock collected from the neighborhood of Indian River by the two men, and shipped to Montreal about the first of November.

A certain unfamiliarity with business transactions and a laxness in noting important items was apparent in the testimony of the witness and his father, who was in the stand later. The cheque tendered them in payment for the animal was post-dated, a fact not noted at the time of receipt, and the spelling of the payee's name was incorrect. The cheque afterwards was refused at the bank, with "no funds" as a reason. Explanations in later conversations with the men, had been to the effect that they were in financial difficulties for the time, on account of an attachment of their cattle in Montreal, but would make matters right at a future date.

Mortimer Healey, father of the first witness, also testified to practically the same thing. Mr. Healey, senior, shook hands with Sherman and Merson on his way back to his seat.

The manager of a Peterboro bank testified that the two men had an account with the bank for about eight months back. He produced a sheet from the loose-leaf ledger of the bank, showing entries during that time. On Nov. 1st, the day that the cheque in question had been issued to Healey, there was an overdraft in the Sherman and Merson account of $373.61. On November 4th, the day when the post-dated cheque was due, the overdraft was $420.11. On November 5th a deposit of $3,795.60 was made, but two cheques for $1707.75 were marked at the bank on the same day, leaving the account again overdrawn to the extent of $40.61. This amount was covered on November 8th, leaving a balance to the credit at present of $116.

In reply to Mr. Wearing's questions, the manager admitted that cases of this kind, of men operating "on a shoestring," were common enough, "unfortunately," and that, as far as the bank was concerned, it had no reason to doubt the honesty of the men or of their intentions. He related a telephone conversation, when Sherman had called him up, told him that they were shipped, and that cheques in the neighborhood of $2,000 were being issued, dated 3rd of November, and payable on the 6th, allowing the usual three days of grace. Funds, however, to cover these arrangements were not forthcoming at the proper time, and consequently cheques presented had to be refused.

The hearing in connection with the second charge, against Merson, was very brief. James Hey was recalled to the box and repeated his former testimony, counsel deciding to agree to commit for trial on both charges.

Enthusiasm starts the race but perseverance wins it.

The greatest pleasure life is love, the greatest treasure contentment, the greatest position is health, the greatest ease sleep.
