Good Business

Little daughter was sitting on her father's knee. She had a new little brother whom she regarded with wonder.

"To-day," said her father, "a man offered to give me a whole lot of money for little brother. Shall I sell him?"

The child shook her head. "But," said the father, "think how many nice things that money would buy."

"No," answered the little girl, "let's keep him till he's older. He'll be worth more then."

NEWSPAPERS AND CRIME PUBLICITY

People write newspapers complaining that printing details of crime brings about more crime. There is a deal of truth in the charge, says Toronto Saturday Night. The records of the criminal courts show that there has been of latter years a steadily growing lawlessness among youths from 16 to 21 years of age. People who have visited our penitentiaries latterly are shocked at the extreme youth of the serious offenders they contain. Experienced newspaper men realize that suggestion has a good deal to do with cases of murder. Murders are likely to follow one another in quick succession until perhaps three have been recorded in a given neighborhood, a good sized city, for instance, and then there will be a lapse, and perhaps for months there will not be another homicide. Then all of a sudden there will be another epidemic.

Such being the case, how much more powerful will be the suggestive force in cases, we will say, of hold-ups, where gain is the sole incentive? The criminal is an anti-social individual as well as a fool. If he were not a fool he would realize that honesty is the best policy. Crime never got anybody anywhere on the road to happiness or real prosperity. Admittedly there are a lot of people with latent criminal impulses. There must be or our penitentiaries would not be filled as they now are. It may be well to interject here the statement that such is not the case in Great Britain, where crime is minimized in the newspapers and where over a ten year period there has been a large falling off in prison population.) With this criminal instinct lying dormant the yellow peril press supplies the powder and ball, so to speak. With great detail we are told of the hold-up, the exciting getaway, of the stolen automobile and the rich loot. The near criminal thinks of luxurious living, good clothes and no work, and away he goes on the path of crime.

It is a nice question as to the duty of the newspaper in respect to the reporting of crime. Obviously the newspaper owes something to its readers. It must keep them informed. On the other hand, it owes something to the public in protecting it so far as is possible against crime. When a newspaper makes a hero out of a scoundrel like "Red" Ryan, as was the case some months ago upon the capture of that brigand it is involving itself seriously in the business of crime promotion. From what might have been a matter of fact story was evolved a tale, or rather a series of tales, that would have done credit to the author of "Deadwood Dick" as I now remember the yarn.

Obviously there was a middle course. The readers could have been given the facts, and at the same time the story could have been written in a manner that would have proved unattractive to people, with their savage instinct partially developed and who only required this extra incentive to enter a life of crime.

The best newspapers on this continent are now making little of crime stories. They give the details up to a certain point, but the "fancy" writing is left for purposes more worth while.

Italy's Varied Tongues

The varied languages and dialects of Italy render political campaigns somewhat unusually difficult for candidates of limited linguistic ability. In the towns of Lecce and Reggio di Calabria the majority of the inhabitants speak only Greek, while in other parts of Southern Italy and Sicily Albanian is the prevailing tongue. French is the mother-tongue of over 10,000 natives of the districts of Aosta, Pignerol and Susa, and German of some 12,000 in Piedmont and Venetia, while Catalan is largely spoken in Sardinia. German, Serbian, Slovenian, and other Slav dialects prevail in the provinces annexed since the war, where the inhabitants numbered 1,564,691 at the time of the 1921 census.

Had Quick Reply for General

One of the Earl of Athlone's most popular stories concerns Gen. Tucker, his former G.O.C., who was noted for his lurid language. In the South African campaign the general happened to meet a war correspondent who was carrying a camera.

"Hello! What the blankety-blank have you got there?" inquired the soldier.

"I'm sorry to say it's only a camera," replied the correspondent, adding: "If I'd known I was going to meet you I would have brought a phonograph!"

Her Immunity

After the epidemic had been checked an old negress protested vigorously when the health officers started to take down the sign they had put up on her house.

"Why don't you want us to take it down?" one of the officers asked.

"Ere ain't be'n a bill collectah neah dis house sence dat sign was nailed up. You-all please let it alone."—People's Home Journal.

Bride (consulting cook-book)—Oh, my, that cake is burning and I can't take it out for five minutes yet!—Jack o' Lantern.

Saved. Some lawyers seem to have no sense of honor in the means by which they try to discredit the testimony of those opposed to them; in illustration of which we need only adduce the following specimen of cross-questioning. Counsel: "Mr. Jenkins, will you have the goodness to answer me, directly and categorically, a few plain questions?" Witness: "Certainly, sir." "Well, Mr. Jenkins, is there a female living with you who is known in the neighborhood as Mrs. Jenkins?" "There is." "Is she under your protection?" "Yes." "Do you support her?" "I do." "Have you ever been married to her?" "I have not." (Here several jurors scowled gloomily on Mr. Jenkins.) "That is all, Mr. Jenkins." Opposing Counsel: "Stop, one moment, Mr. Jenkins; is the female in question your mother?" "She is."

LONDON'S PARKS.

There Are Twenty Miles In Green In the Big Metropolis.

Few people realize the extent of the beautiful metropolitan parks that surround Greater London, the largest city in the world, and it has occurred to few of the residents to chart a twenty-mile walk in the outer ring of emerald hue.

Though partly outside the postal district, it is perfectly fair to claim Richmond and Bushey Parks as belonging to Greater London. But by way of a beginning we will pitch up on Putney, which is easy enough of access from the city.

At the top of Putney Hill you come out on the Heath opposite the Green Man. Steering southwest, a half-mile walk over the grass brings you out on the Kingston road, which crosses by the King's Mere. Then, holding a little west of south, cross Wimbledon Common by way of the windmill. After a good mile of this travelling turn sharply to the right before reaching White Cottage, and plunge in among the undulating woodlands, making northwest for the Beverley Brook. Here cross the main road and enter Richmond Park by the Robin Hood Gate.

Nowadays one may roam anywhere except in the pieces of woodland fenced off as bird sanctuaries.

In crossing the park keep north-west past Spanner's Hill, between which and the Pen Ponds in front of you stands the oak which has been named after the park's famous ranger, Sir Robert Walpole.

Leaving the ponds on your right, go out past the Hamcross plantation, walk through the old oak tree which now forms a narrow archway near the Ham Gate — if you are thin enough—and turn southwest across Ham Common and fields to Teddington Lock.

The next stretch lies along the towpath to Kingston—one of the river's prettiest scenes. Over the bridge and through Hampton Court Park, through the Palace, across the road, and through the chestnut avenue in Busby Park.

To save retracing your steps, and to enjoy a little rest, get a lift on the first available bus, making your way to Teddington Lock again; cross the river, and take the towpath northwards by Ham House, to the Old Deer Park.

As little is gained by entering the park, most of which is given over to golf and a variety of sports, hold on by the pleasant towpath until Kew Gardens are reached.

Walk round the gardens, then leave by the pagoda gate and skirt the Old Deer Park's east side, passing the Observatory gates.

Work round the Star and Garter way, re-enter Richmond Park, which cross this time in an easterly direction, by Conduit Wood, Bog Lodge, the northern deer pen, and so to Roehampton Gate, making a short digression northwards at Sheen Cross Roads, to see the Shrew Ash, with its traditions of magical healing.

At Roehampton Gate, keeping inside the park, turn south and regain Robin Hood Gate.

Interrupted.

My employer is a golf enthusiast, and when he has played a good game he never fails to give the office full particulars, with demonstrations, as he keeps his clubs downtown.

One afternoon he left about four o'clock. Directly after I dragged out his clubs. Swinging the bag to my shoulder I advanced to the center of the large room. The force ceased working and watched me. I pulled out a stick, dropped a ball to the floor, and swung at it.

"Gaze," I commanded, "on the greatest golf performer who ever missed a ball. Last week at Hillside I went around in 150, and I will now—"

The door slammed behind me. He had returned.—Chicago Tribune.

Steeplejacks Defy Death.

A wager of 25 has inspired four steeplejacks, who have been repairing one of the tallest chimney stacks in the Melben bridge district of Yorkshire to extraordinary feats, according to the London Westminster Gazette.

They hoisted a bicycle to the top, and on a wooden platform one of their number balanced himself on the saddle, while a second sat straddle-legged on his shoulders with outstretched arms. Two other thrilling feats were performed. One of the steeplejacks stood erect on a narrow iron spike on the top of the chimney. Then he seized the topmost stave of a ladder, raised his legs to the sky and balanced himself for a few seconds on his hands as calmly as if he were on parallel bars on the ground. Thousands of spectators were thrilled by these extraordinary feats.

Produce on the district markets this week was unchanged. As Spring approaches, potatoes become scarcer but with very little change in values. Farmers report that with feed selling at the present high rate, it is cheaper to feed potatoes in preference to bringing them to market at 80c a bag.

To win ten gold medals, three silver cups, a pair of silver skates and shatter four world's speed skating records within one week, has been the experience of 16-year-old Lella Brooks, of Toronto. "I eat a big steak before every race," she said when questioned as to how she had done it. Oatmeal porridge, fresh fruit and vegetables are other articles of her diet, while candies, tea and coffee are scrupulously banned. To keep in championship trim she retires every night between 9 and 10 o'clock.

ROMANCE

You often hear people refer to the "dear old days of romance"—to the time when knight-errants roamed the earth to do honor to a lady's blue eyes.

These folks say we are living in an age of realism!

An age of "realism" where the human voice is hurried across the world without wires; where the temperature of Mars is taken more than thirty millions of miles away; where tons of steel and people ride easily and safely through the air or under the sea!

An age of realism! Why this is the most romantic of all ages!

The advertising columns of this paper are full of romance—the romance of men who have devoted their lives to bringing new comforts, conveniences and pleasures for mankind.

Advertisements tell these stories, not with the romantic exaggeration of a jongleur, but with the calm, simple words of sincerity. Here is a firm that spent millions to develop a product that makes your baby comfortable. Here is a company that has labored fifty years to cut a single hour of toil from your day's work. Here is a man who has searched the Seven Seas to produce a new flavor for your dinner.

Romance—this age is full of it. Not just empty romance, but the true romance of achievement, of progress, of the betterment of mankind.

Advertisements tell you what the romance of business is doing for you. Read them in the Guide.

Intermediates May Play This Week

If present arrangements are concluded satisfactorily, the local Intermediates will play in Peterboro Thursday or Friday for the Brown Cup. This cup is up for competition between Peterboro Intermediates and any team in the Lakeshore group. Should we win it, other teams in the group would have to challenge the locals to get a chance to carry off the trophy.

Take Hockey Seriously

Intermediate hockey teams in Peterboro are taking the game seriously this year. When Havelock and Lakefield clash at Brock street rink to-night in a sudden-death game in the O.H.A., both will run specials, expecting crowds of supporters from their respective villages.

Harry Sander's Merry Midnights turned the tables on the lady hockeyists Friday night after their defeat a week ago, 4-2. The girls put up strong opposition, but were outskated by the Night Hawks.

Ninety Minutes Play—1-0 Score

Peterboro Collegiate Institute and Cobourg C. I. hockey teams battled in a ninety minutes' game at the local rink Saturday morning to a 1-0 score. The game was the semi-final play-off in the local Inter-scholastic group. The two teams were excellently matched and played extremely snappy hockey. In the first sixty minutes of play both teams broke away in brilliant rushes, which only failed to tally because of the good work of the goalies. The defence back-checked and robbed like professionals, and the forward lines played a superb game.

Cobourg had an easy edge on the Petes in their attack, with the weak spot in centre ice. Upon the substitution of Gibson at centre for Cool in the overtime, the team loosened up and played together like clockwork. With fifteen seconds to go in the final overtime, Waldon, star de-

BABY GIRL DISCOVERED

Found in Unclaimed Club Bag on the North Bay Train by a Lindsay Man

Mr. A. G. Bruce, travelling inspector for the Mothers' Allowance Board, spent the week-end at his home in Lindsay, and related a remarkable experience which he had while on the North Bay train on Friday. A six-months-old babe was found on a rear seat of the passenger coach, inside of a club bag, and covered with a newspaper. Mr. Bruce picked the infant out and was instrumental in delivering it to the Children's Aid authorities.

It appears that the baby was placed in the coach by a young mother at North Bay. It was asleep and not a sound came from the club bag. Mr. Bruce got on the train at a station lower down on the line, and was sitting with a traveller when the traveller noticed the paper over the opening in the club bag moving. A few seconds later, and a baby began to cry. The traveller got the conductor, and Mr. Bruce lifted the tiny, bright little infant out of its hiding place.

A label was pinned to the child's dress, read: "In care of the conductor; see instructions inside." On the little under shirt was found a note stating that the baby's name was Olive Martin, and that the mother wanted it left at St. Mary's Home, Toronto. The baby was a cute little tiny tot, full of chuckles and fat with wrinkles. It was given over to the authorities of C. A. Society.
