$7,500 JUDGMENT FOR EYE STANDS

Divisional Court Dismisses Appeal Against Sum Awarded to a Peterboro Girl

Cecilia Rogers, aged 18, daughter of a Peterboro widow, lost an eye in a collision between a car in which she was riding and that of Walter T. Bellegham, undertaker; and a jury awarded her $7,500. G. N. Gordon, K.C., who is the deputy speaker of the House of Commons, appealed for the defendant, and the first divisional court dismissed the appeal.

Mr. Gordon pressed the merit of the glass eye now used by the young girl, and Sir Wm. Mulock asked whether an eye was for looks or use. Miss Rogers had earned $12 a week at mechanical work, and Mr. Gordon regarded $7,500 as excessive. Sir William Mulock: "What do you think would be reasonable?" "$4,000," answered Mr. Gordon.

Mr. Gordon described the young lady as handsome, and he saw no reason to fear that the loss of the eye would hurt her marriage qualities. The chief justice did not think that $7,500 would.

In confirming the judgment the chief justice said that no hard and fast commercial value could be placed on a limb or an eye. Therefore, the appellate court would not interfere with the finding below.

NEW MARKER IS ISSUED

1925 License Plates Issued to Govt. Cars Monday—Premier No. 1

Issuance of 1925 motor marker licenses started Monday afternoon when 150 Toronto autos, chiefly Government cars, received their new plates. First marker to be issued was No. 1 to Premier Ferguson. The Ontario Motor League, as in years past, has for the Toronto district received the markers numbering from 50,000 upwards.

The new markers seen on Monday night, which are yellow figures on a black background, do not seem to show up very much under a dim light.

Markers issued to the public will number from 501 upwards. All markers from 1 to 500 are on Government cars in all parts of the Province.

A CONFERENCE AT WASHINGTON

Port Hope Honoured by Having Four Representatives at One of the Greatest Conventions in Years

An important gathering of church leaders from various parts of the world begins to-day in Washington, D.C., where the Foreign Missions Convention of the United States and Canada is being held, continuing from January 28th to February 2nd, inclusive.

According to the official announcement—"This convention will bring together from all parts of North America officially appointed representatives of the Foreign Mission Boards of Canada and the United States. There will also be in attendance Missionary leaders from Great Britain, Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin-America and other parts of the world."

"No assembly of a similar character has met since the World Missionary Conference at Edinburgh in 1910, nor has any such gathering been convened in North America since the Ecumenical Missionary Conference of 1900.

"Its purpose will be to give a fresh vision of the Foreign Missionary enterprise of the church as it is to-day, to arouse an enlarged enthusiasm for the task, and to deepen the conviction of Christian people regarding their Foreign Mission responsibilities."

At the opening session this afternoon an address was delivered by Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, and the program includes other very prominent speakers from the United States and Canada, together with leading representatives of the world fields.

Canada will be well represented in the convention personnel, both as to speakers and delegation. The convention sermon, "The Love of Christ Constrains Me," will be delivered on Sunday morning by the Rev. Canon H. J. Cody, of Toronto.

In the Canadian delegation are included four of our own townspeople—Rev. P. W. and Mrs. Anderson, and Mr. F. W. and Mrs. Galbraith.

Mr. Anderson is one of fifteen ministers selected to represent the Presbyterian Church in Canada, and Mrs. Anderson goes from the General Board of the W.M.S. Mr. Galbraith is an official representative of the General Board of Missions of the Methodist Church of Canada, and Mrs. Galbraith goes from the Methodist Women's Board.

SMALL POLL ON UNION QUESTION

Only 175 Out of Possible 452 Votes Cast So Far

The Church Union Question Poll at St. Paul's Presbyterian church has been open on three occasions to date, Thursday, January 22nd, Saturday and last night, but only one hundred and seventy-five of the possible four hundred and fifty-two on the list, have voted.

Returning Officer Walker is in charge, both sides of the question being ably represented at the poll, which is held in the Primary Class Room of the Sunday School.

Estimates made by poll officials indicate that the vote to date is very evenly divided.

The poll will remain open for others who wish to vote on this question upon the following dates:—

Thursday, Jan. 29—4.30, 6.30 p.m.
Saturday, Jan. 31—2.00, 4.00 p.m.; 7.30 to 9.00 p.m.

Tuesday, Feb. 3—4.30, 6.30 p.m.
Thursday, Feb. 5—7.00 to 9.30 p.m.

The poll will close on Thursday, February 5th, at eight o'clock, and the ballots counted. The congregational meeting will be resumed at this date.

Special to Cobourg To-night

The Bowmanville Junior team are running a special train to Cobourg this evening for their final fixture with the eastern town aggregation. The train is C.P.R., and stops at all points between Bowmanville and Cobourg. It will arrive in Port Hope at 7.03 p.m., reaching Cobourg at 7.15, return fare being 40 cents. The train will return from Cobourg at 11 p.m.

Cobourg C. I. 5: P. H. H. S. 2

A hard fought battle all the way through, the local High School hockeyites failed to hold the Cobourg Collegiate Institute sextette here yesterday afternoon and they ran wild in the goal-getting line, tallying up a 5-2 score against P. H. H. S. Britton on right wing played the game of his career and starred for the locals. Gibson was the chief scorer for C.C.I. and did some very pretty work. This is the second game in the interscholastic series, in which the locals have figured, meeting defeat on each occasion. Better luck next time. Line-ups:—

Referee—V. Hanwood.

The standing of the Western Interscholastic Union group to date is as follows:—

Team	Won	Lost
Bowmanville	2	0
Port Perry	2	1
Oshawa	1	2
Whitby	1	2

Lakefield Preparatory School defeated Trinity College School's seconds at Port Hope yesterday, 8 to 3. Fawcett of Lakefield was the game's outstanding player, scoring five goals.

Peterboro Junior Team Meet

Bowmanville Next

Peterboro Juniors won their O. H. A. group last night by defeating Lindsay, 9 to 1. They will meet Bowmanville in the second round. Peterboro looked exceptionally strong in last night's game, and fans are of the opinion that they will go far in the play-offs.

The Merry Midnighters are up to pep for their big struggle with the Bankers to-morrow night. The game will be played from six to seven.

In Junior group No. 4, Bowmanville are winners and cannot be overtaken, even though Cobourg have two more games. The standing to date is:—

Team	Won	Lost	For	Agst.
Bowmanville	7	0	51	18
Cobourg	4	2	21	20
Oshawa	4	3	27	38
Whitby	2	5	15	21
Port Hope	1	7	19	29

Team	Won	Lost	For	Agst.

Oshawa	5	3	32	22
Bowmanville	3	5	30	43
Whitby	3	6	17	33
Cobourg	0	10	9	23

The Toronto Globe seems to forget that Port Hope still has a look-in on the group honors, as they say in this morning's issue that Group No. 2 is "cinched" for Trenton. Should Oshawa defeat Trenton, and Port Hope lick the Motor City team in turn, a tie for first place would be created. Oshawa are anxious to get revenge on Trenton for their tough game in the eastern town earlier in the season, so we shouldn't be surprised to see the victorious group leaders beaten Friday night.

Members of the Midnighters and the ladies' hockey teams had a very enjoyable slighting party to Cobourg last evening.

MOMENTOUS DAY FOR CHURCH

Action of This Congregation Cannot Hinder Progress of Great United Church

Before closing his services Sunday Rev. Robert Pogue read the following statement to the congregation at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Peterboro:—

"I have been your minister for seventeen years. Some are saying just now: 'If you want a change of minister, vote against Church Union.'"

"I do not like to think that there are many in this church who would allow any personal matter to influence them on so tremendous an issue as the present one; but lest there be such, I want to say to you to-day, that on or before the 10th of June, I am placing my resignation of this charge in the hands of the Session."

It has also been said that I have thrown myself into this struggle 'to save my job.' I should like to say to this, that Mrs. Pogue and I have strong hands and stout hearts, and an absolute trust in God.

I have thrown myself into this struggle for no other reason than to save this church from taking a most disastrous step, that of remaining out of the Union. It would break my heart after laboring these seventeen years to give you the vision splendid of unselfish service for Christ, if St. Paul's Church should shut her eyes to it.

The United Church has caught a vision of the Master's work at home and abroad, and is willing to sacrifice many of the things that are dear to it, in order to fulfil His words: 'That we all may be one as He, and the Father are one,' and that unitedly it might go forward in His service, spending and being spent for Him.

Whether you will have the privilege of sharing in this glorious task will remain with yourselves; but if you do not, you will not hinder the Union Church from going on in the strength of God to accomplish the glorious task He has set her, that of having a share in winning this land and all lands for Him.

Whether your children and your children's children, in the years to come, will rise up and call you blessed, because of your having had a share in this great Forward Movement, your ballot on the morrow and the days to come will tell.

May God bless you and keep you and guide you aright.

"For right is right since God is God, And right the day must win; To doubt it were disloyalty, To falter would be sin."

NEWSY ITEMS FROM WELCOME

Young Peoples' League Notes Special to The Guide by the Scribe

Last Thursday evening, Jan. 22nd, was citizenship night at Welcome Young Peoples' League. Mr. Melville McHolm, third vice-president, had charge of the meeting. His topic on the problem of rural depopulation touched a very live question which must be faced by the young people of today. He first explained the cause of the exodus of the rural people, which lies in the decline in the industrial life of the country and the resulting deplorable impoverishment of social life. In conclusion he advanced some very good remedies for the evil of today, stressing the fact that in the home and in the church lies the solution to the problem.

At the business meeting captains were appointed, sides chosen and all final arrangements made for beginning the contest in the reading of Missionary literature next Thursday evening.

The recreational period was rather better than usual owing to the introduction of two entirely new and excellent games.

On Monday evening, Jan. 26th, a large representation from Welcome League attended the first debate of the conference series held in Port Hope between Port Hope and Welcome Leagues.

All enjoyed the well contested debate and Port Hope League's gracious hospitality. Needless to say the local Leaguers were very much gratified at the result of the debate.

Personal Miss Christie Staples and Mrs. S. Sculthorpe, spent a few days in Toronto this week.

Mr. C. J. Staples has been visiting friends in Baltimore.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL A CRIME ANTIDOTE

Regular attendance upon Sunday School during the period of character-formation would cause the criminal courts and jails to close, for there would be no "raw material" to work on. This is not a platitude from the pulpit. It is an expression of belief of a judge who has had long experience. In the eighteen years that he has sat on the bench in two courts, Supreme Court Justice Lewis L. Fawcett, of Brooklyn, has had more than 4,000 boys less than twenty-one years arraigned before him, charged with various degrees of crime. But of this large number only three were members of a Sunday School at the time of the commission of their crimes. And, says Justice Fawcett, as he is quoted in the New York Herald Tribune.

"Even these three exceptional cases were technical in character and devoid of heinousness, so that they are scarcely worth mentioning. All three cases had a girl in them. In one, a young man who wished to make a pleasing impression on a new sweetheart, and not being well clad, stole an overcoat. In another, the young man was arrested for carrying a pistol without a permit. He said that he wished to protect himself against a gang member, who had become aggrieved because he had taken his girl from him. In the third, the young man drew a penknife on his opponent in a quarrel over a girl.

"In view of this significant showing, I do not hesitate to express the conviction that attendance by young men at Sunday School or other regular religious work, with its refining atmosphere, is signally preventive against crime and worthy of careful study by those who are dismayed by the increase of crime on the part of the young men of America.

"In 1,092 suspended criminal sentences, only sixty-two of the young men were brought back for violation of the conditions of their paroles. In each suspended sentence case I insisted upon the return of the youth, if he was a Protestant, to a Sunday School; if a Roman Catholic, to attendance at mass, and, if a Jew, to attendance at a synagogue or a temple. In each instance I had the earnest co-operation of the minister, the priest or the rabbi, and in each case I saw to it that the young man had a job to go to as soon as he was freed on parole. In virtually all of the suspended sentence cases the reform was quick and, I believe, permanent."

And the method that will produce the desired results in Brooklyn, believes Justice Fawcett, will produce them anywhere. Moreover, he is assured that what is good for the youth would be equally salutary with adults. He asserts: "The sustained, wholesome, moral atmosphere imparted through habitual attendance upon Sunday School and church will expel criminal impulses.

"Any man not contributing to support some church or organized religious work is living on charity—riding on some other man's transportation. If he really desires abatement of crime he should ally himself with those agencies which prevent or abate crime."

CANTON

Young People's League Met And Discussed Subjects of Interest

(By The Guide's Correspondent.)

The meeting of the Canton Y. P. L. opened by singing hymn 436—"Search Me Oh, God! And Know My Heart." Mr. Bunt led in prayer after which we repeated "The Lord's Prayer" in unison. The business part of the meeting was carried on and it was decided to have a box social.

The business part being over, Miss Idella Dundas took charge of the meeting and the President vacated the chair. A helpful reading was given by Miss Dundas followed by hymn 232, "Try Us Oh, God and Search the Ground." We then had responsive reading from 1 Corinth. 13, and in this reading we substituted "Love" for "Charity." The scripture lesson was taken by Miss Lula Graham from Rom. 12. Mr. Bunt gave us a talk and explanation of the chapter as a whole and stressed the fourth verse. To do good work we must do it with our whole heart. We must also have co-operation just as the members of the body are many, but all work together.

A duet was then rendered by the Misses Haw and Finnie, "I Came to the Garden Alone." Mr. Bertram Dundas gave the topic based on the explorations and life of Scott the explorer. The topic was an interesting one and instructive. Hymn 279, "Just As I Am," was then sung and all joined in the Mizpah benediction which closed an interesting meeting. The recreation period was spent in the singing of some new songs which we found rather amusing.

MY DEAR WIFE'S RELATIONS

An Ontario County Farmer writes:—We didn't go nowhere on Christmas Day, though we was all invited to Ma's sister's place. I like Julia as well as any sister-in-law I got, but, as I said to Ma, "What's the good of going to a place where the lady of the house spends the whole a.m. in cooking dinner and the entire p.m. in clearing up the dishes? What fun is there in smoking in a kitchen where the pot-walloping is a continuous performance? It may be a Merry Christmas for the housekeeper but it looks like merry hades to me."

"Well, what better is it," says Ma, "to go to your brother George's place, where there's no children to play with our kids, and where they take all the a.m. to cook the dinner and all the p.m. to fight over whose turn it is to wash the dishes?"

"And then another thing about Julia," I says, sticking to the pint, "is that she's such a double distilled good house keeper that you can't really enjoy your dinner. You keep thinking of some horrible international calamity, such as s'posin' you was to spill a drop of gravy on the dam—the on the damask table cloth."

"Now, Pa," breaks in Ma, looking mighty serious, "you'd best be careful."

"There's been 29 people, more or less," says I, "that's been begging and beseeching me to be happy at this festive Christmas season, and now you want me to be full of care, which is the plain meaning of careful, same as thoughtful is full of thought and joyful full of joy. It's pretty hard to travel in two directions to wunst, particularly when they are opposite. And then another thing about Julia," I goes on, still sticking to the pint, "is that she always acts as if the woodshed was good enough for anyone with a pipe."

"Well, you could smoke in the woodshed," says Ma. "I could smoke in a snowdrift," says I, "and I dunno but what it would be just as pleasant and cosy as Julia's woodshed."

Then Ma pitches into George and his wife, and we had it back and forth until instead of it being a peaceable farm house you'd think we was a unionist and an anti-unionist over in Toronto, that had got into the wrong House of God by mistake. Both good Christians, you understand, and full of the Christ Spirit, but not going to give one inch when it comes to differences of opinion. No sir-ee. You bet!

Presently our oldest boy John comes in with an armful of beech, which he dumps into the woodbox; and then, noticing how hard Ma banged down the iron that she was ironing Susie's pinafore with, he says, "What's the matter, Ma."

"Oh, it's your pa," she says, in a kind of mournful tone. "He's pitching into my folks again."

"Now, you lay off that Pa," says the boy. "I heard in High School last term that T. Carlyle said that all your relations ought to be hanged."

"What?" I roars. "Who is this T. Carlyle? The lying scawlag! Just let me see him and I'll show him where he gets off."

"Too late Pa," says John, "He was a Scotch writer, born in 1795 and died in 1881."

"Then a lot he knows about—"

"Oh," says the boy, "he said if everybody got what they deserved we'd all be hanged. And he didn't make any exception of your relations."

That seemed to cheer Ma up quite a bit, but I felt kind of mean. The way I look at it is this: If a man is good and hungry, and wishing to goodness the dinner would hurry up and cook, he doesn't put a shovel-full of ice in the kitchen stove; and so if he wants domestic happiness, the only bliss of Paradise that has survived the Fall, as the old school reader says, he oughtn't to say mean things to any one in the family, especially to his wife about her folks.

MARK TWAIN

Mark Twain was never ill—just colds. I would take his temperature occasionally, but he generally insisted that it was only a bluff and that the thermometer was put in his mouth to keep him from talking. He told me that old yan of the patient who obtained a prescription from his physician and, after looking at the paper, asked how much the medicine would cost. When the doctor told him that it would cost about two dollars, the patient requested his physician to loan him the two. The indignant doctor finally said, "Here are the two dollars; give me the prescription, I want to make an alteration. I'm scratching out the nerve tonic, you won't need that." Mark Twain observed: "I have always admired that man. That was a noble piece of graft. I have thought of trying the game on you, but I've never seen the time when I thought you had the two dollars."—(Dr. Clarence C. Rice, in the Mentor, New York.)

There is nothing so difficult as the art of making advice agreeable.

Portia's father was old-fashioned

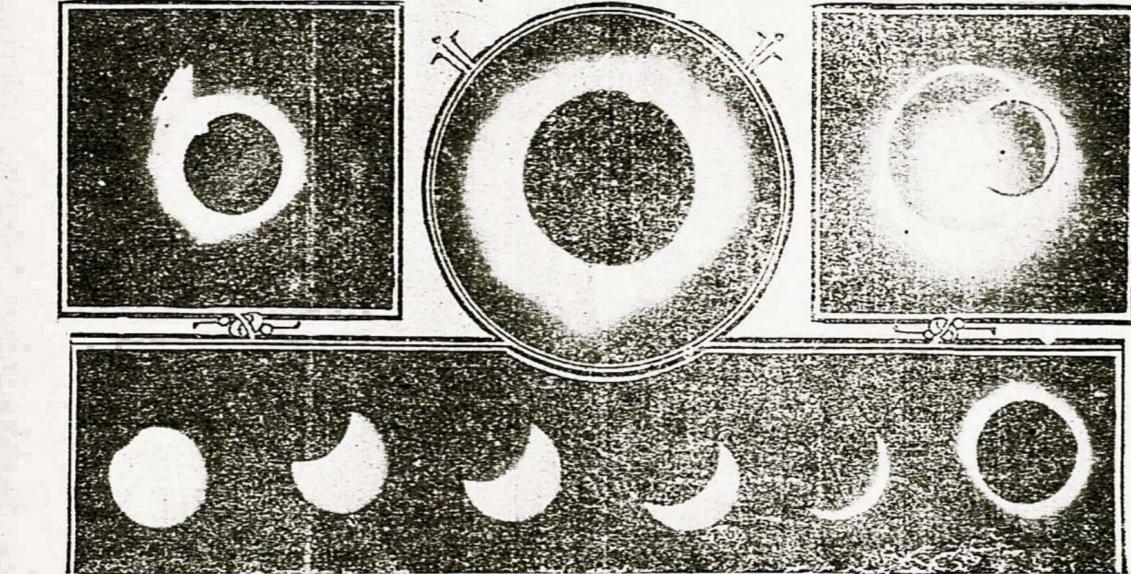

In the days of Shakespeare's famous heroine, buying and selling were contests of wits. In Venice, haggling and dickering were the vogue. Along the Rialto, sharp practice was the rule. Every purchase of silk or spices was made at the buyer's risk. One had to be a shrewd judge of values and one's fellows to escape trickery.

Portia's father—a merchant—was used to the ideas of guess, luck and accident. So much so, indeed, that it seemed natural to him to entrust the choice of his daughter's husband to three closed caskets and a lucky guess!

Nowadays, we do not transact business blindly—nor leave important decisions to chance. It is not necessary for us to gamble when we buy. Commodities are identified for us by trade-marks. Manufacturers go to the advertising columns to tell us about their products. Merchants describe their merchandise—price, quality and service.

By reading advertisements, we get a knowledge of goods and stores that we can depend on. Advertising reduces chance, in buying, to a minimum.

Do you read the advertisements in the Guide?

DAVID MAKES A NEW FRIEND AT THE ZOO

"G-N-U" David spelled the letters aloud, then he looked around to find the owner of such a queer name.

"I'll bet if he looks like his name, he's a funny-looking fellow," he mused. "Oh, Mr. Gnu, come out and let's have a peek at you. I won't harm."

Before David could finish his sentence, out came a queer-looking animal.

He looked like a combination of three animals. His head and horns looked like those belonging to a bull, his mane looked like that of a horse, and his body and limbs were just like those of an antelope. His horns were bent downwards, then upwards, with quite a bold curve. His tail was long and covered with hair. This he switched back and forth like a flag of truce as he came down to the fence near David.

"Well, take a good look at me," he laughed good-naturedly. "I love to be stared at. It shows folks are interested in you. Did you ever see anything like me before?"

"No, Mr. Nnu, I don't believe I ever have," David laughed. "I hope I don't seem too rude, staring so. But you are some combination."

"That's what they tell me, or rather that's what I hear from every side almost every day," said the animal behind the wire. "Well, you've missed half your life, then. For it's a wonderful sight to see a herd of us in the wild state." "I should think a herd of you would look pretty swishing your tails around like you did yours just now," David agreed.

"I'll say we switch our tails when things upset us!" laughed Mr. Gnu.

"Take a Good Look at Me."

"When there is a herd of us disturbed, we all begin switching our tails, jump suddenly into the air, and when we come down to earth again, we begin to paw the ground, then all run around in a circle like a lot of silly things. Have you heard how they catch us?"

"No, I don't believe I have," David replied. "But I hope they don't hurt you."

"Well, they didn't harm me. I was so very young they just slipped up and grabbed me before I had a chance," laughed Mr. Gnu. "But I remember, Mother and I were out with the herd, when Mother spied something bright red tacked on a stick. She told her friends and they all decided to go an find out what it was and why it was there."

"You know there's not many animals can beat the Gnu when it comes to curiosity. Well, they all rushed over to see what it was.

They found out—but some of them never moved again. I don't know whether they got Mother or not, they got me; and after much shifting from place to place, I landed right here in this Zoo, and here I've been. Why, I wouldn't go back to that wild life again for anything in the world!

"You see, those hunters had just fastened a red rag on a stick and my people had too much curiosity for their own good. I'm glad I happened to be in the herd, for I have a nice home and plenty to eat. I'm going in my den for a nap now. Come and see me again some time," and with a switch of his long white tail, Mr. Gnu scampered out of sight and David went on to the next cage.

THE GUIDE STORY

The prince rose with surprise, yet with graceful self-possession—turned to meet—Colonel Dent—just as the latter replied to Juliette:

"Doubtless His Highness will render you that service, with pleasure, madam. I go to meet the Duc de Cadore in the closet of the Emperor." Colonel Dent turned away, as Juliette arose with graceful dignity to accept the proffered arm of the prince. Not one word was said. People in good society never have the "shocking bad taste" to commit such a solecism in manners as to betray surprise, distrust, or anger "before folks." The fete was over. It had been an evening of high triumph to the beauty; sovereign queens, and royal princesses had graced the revels, yet she had been the "observed of all observers"—she had been the real queen at the brilliant assemblage. Never had she felt so proud a consciousness of the power of her charms as now. The fete was over, and Juliette reclined in her luxurious dressing-room, before a large cheval mirror, and under the hands of her maid. Made-moiselle Fanchette was untwining from her glossy tresses the strings of topazes that had bound them. The door opened, and Colonel Dent entered. He walked up near Juliette, and stood with folded arms and moody brow, contemplating the gorgeous beauty. From time to time, her fine eyes were raised with pride to meet her own reflection in the mirror, or her rich tones heard in giving some direction to her maid relative to the disposal of her ornaments. At last, coming to her side, he said, in deep, cold tones:

"Send your maid away, Juliette. I want a few words with you alone."

Now, with a presentiment of what was coming, a perverse spirit entered into the beauty, and she answered, coolly:

"I have not done with her."

"Dismiss your attendant at once, madam! or you will oblige me to do it for you," he said, sternly.

"Will madam permit me to re-ture?" pleaded the girl, in some embarrassment.

Juliette arose and with quiet dignity remarked: "We will give you up the possession of this room, Colonel Dent, since your convenience seems to require it. Fanchette, precede me to my bed-chamber."

"Not so, fair Juliette; you do not leave this room yet."

She passed on, unbending him. He stepped after her, took her hand, and led her back to her chair. Too proud to resist, she gracefully yielded the point, and seating herself, inquired:

"To what happy circumstance am I to consider myself indebted for the pleasure of this interview with Colonel Dent?"

Without replying, he turned and walked slowly up and down the room, with folded arms and head bowed upon his chest. She followed him with her eyes; she saw the thunder-cloud lowering on his brow, the chained lightning in his eyes, and the hue of the typhoon on his cheeks. She was watching intently to see the white rage break forth in fury. She was disappointed. He walked and walked until he had perfected his self-command. Then he came and sat beside her. He spoke:

"Juliette, you are at this moment as perfectly well aware of the cause of my disturbance as I am myself. You have not failed to observe, I have not failed to see that you have observed, the uneasiness your conduct has given me. I had hoped that your knowledge of my anxiety would have, in some degree, influenced and modified your conduct, and I was silent. This hope has been frustrated. And I have now to violate my own delicacy and yours by speaking, perhaps by acting. Much, Juliette, have I felt inclined to extenuate your culpable levity by reflecting that the striking change in your position and circumstances has somewhat turned your brain."

"This really piqued the proud woman, who replied, haughtily: 'I am unconscious of any such striking change' of position—at least; of any calculated to elate with pride the last of the noble house of Nozzolina."

"That is all wretched assumption, Juliette! You know nothing about the nobility or ignobility of your family, and I care less. I speak of the change that plunged a young girl, a beautiful girl, accustomed to the sober domesticity of our country life, or, at best, to the elegant courtesy and delicate reserve of our metropolitan society, at once into a vortex of fashionable dissipation, in the most licentious city, and the most splendid court in Europe. That is the change I speak of, and I see that it has been too great for you; I should not have thus exposed you; I should have denied myself and left you at the Vale, rather, but that you have a noble presence, Juliette, and I had hoped that in this gay and frivolous capital you would have nobly illustrated the calm dignity of the American matron. You have disappointed, wounded, humiliated me."

"Oh, you are jealous, jealous as a lemon, a lime, a crab-apple, verjuice, virgiris, or anything else particularly sour, bitter, and cankerous," said she, with a taunting smile.

"Jealous? Yes, I am jealous; not of any one, that were contemptible, but for you and of my own honor. Do you happen to have heard, madam, the flattering sobriquet bestowed upon you by the gallants of the French court?"

"Yes," replied the beauty, with gay assurance; "they call me La Americaine—pretty conceiv'd, is it not?"

GREAT INCREASE IN TEA DRINKING

The last few years have witnessed a tremendous increase in tea drinking. Production has fallen far behind demand. Tea now costs more than at any time in the last 75 years. It may even reach $1.00 per pound, for the price is expected to rise still further. When such profits are being made by the tea plantations, over production and a sudden drop in prices is bound to come. It may take a year or longer or the price might fall when least expected. Not even experts can foretell what will occur.

Solvent For World Problems

When Canon Alexander of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, declared, in a recent address, that the problems of today were not to be solved either by material force or by any kind of social or economic change, taken in itself, but that they required nothing short of a spiritual revolution, he uttered a truth which should be echoed and re-echoed around the world. And when he urged the Government to take courage to maintain what it saw to be right, recollecting that it was one of the greatest lessons of history that idealism was the root of all genuine and constructive reform, and that without it there could be no progress, he gave some really practical advice. The ideals of brotherhood, liberty, co-operation, and justice are essential to true Christianity, and unless they are applied to the working out of the problems of the world, those problems will never reach a satisfactory solution.

Oranges Puzzled Him

Affable Stranger—"If you had twelve oranges, and I gave you one more, how many oranges would you have?" "Boy,—I don't know, sir; we always do our sums in apples."

Liberty, when it begins to take root, is a plant of rapid growth.

He that loses his conscience has nothing left that is worth keeping.

COMMIT THY WAY unto the Lord; trust also in him! and he shall bring it to pass.—Psalm 37: 3, 5.

It is little the sign of a wise or good man to suffer temperance in order to purchase the repute of a generous entertainer.

There is not any vice incident to the mind of man against which the world has raised such a loud and universal outcry as against ingratitude.

We ought to regard books as we do sweetmeats, not wholly to aim at the pleasantest, but chiefly to respect the wholesomest.

The talent of success is nothing more than doing what you can do well, and doing well whatever you do, without a thought of fame.

Our part is to choose out the most deserving objects, and the most likely to answer the ends of charity, and, when this is done, all is done that lies in our power.

Take heed of jesting; many have been ruined by it. It is hard to jest, and not sometimes jeer, too, which oftentimes sinks deeper than was intended or expected.

Observe what company you keep. Be not too easy to gain acquaintance, but stand off, and keep distance yet awhile, till you have observed and learnt touching them.

The ways of well-doing are in number even as many as are the kinds of voluntary actions; so that whatsoever we do in this world, and may do it ill, we show ourselves therein by well-doing to be wise.

Though man a thinking being is defined, Few use the great prerogative of mind. How few think justly of the thinking few! How many never think, who think they do!

Petty thefts in the lakefront district now include a new kind of spoil. Recently thieves broke into the warehouse of J. V. Hill, hardware merchant of Oshawa and made off with a thousand or more cement bags, which it is stated formed practically the available contents of the building. It is reported that empty bags have been stolen also from other dealers.

Lieut. Thoret, the French aviator, carrying a passenger in a regular army aeroplane with the propeller locked and sealed, remained aloft at Saint Remy De Provence on Saturday two hours and 26 minutes. This breaks the record for motorless flight with a passenger, which was established by Lieut. Thoret at Biskra, Algeria, last year, by more than one hour.

What the World Is Doing

As Seen by Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Lamps Show if Factory Machinery Is Working

In a camera never having seven red-pecking machines the manager has installed a little device near his desk to indicate whether or not all seven are working properly. The device consists of a panel on which seven miniature lamps are mounted, each of which is connected to one of the machines. So that every time a can passes to the filling machine it causes a lamp to flash. As long as the lamps keep flashing, the manager knows that everything is going well, but if any lamps fail to flash it is a signal to him that he is perhaps needed to the factory to untangle some difficulty. A switch is, of course, provided so that the current can be turned on or off.

Silencing Automobile-Door Noises

Squeaking automobile doors can sometimes be silenced by cleaning the rubber bumpers and the parts they touch with gasoline, wiping dry and powdering liberally with talc dust. Oil should never be used as it ruins the rubber. If the door rattles, see if the rubbers are pressing against the door. If not, readjust them with the screw, or by forcing small pieces of inner tube under them with a screwdriver. New bumpers may be needed. A few minutes' attention now and then will eliminate the annoyance.

Ventilating the Kitchen

In the construction of many houses the kitchen is built without much thought or consideration for the cook. The storm windows usually do not permit much ventilation and no pipe is provided to carry away the smoke and fumes from the gas stove. A good method of providing proper ventilation is shown in the drawing. A wooden box incorporating

Newspaper Pages Flashed by Radio Is Prediction

Transatlantic transmission of photographs and newspaper pages by radio is a development likely to become a reality in the near future according to Maj. Gen. J. G. Harbord, president of the Radio Corporation of America. Two-way talk by radiophones he also regards as an imminent possibility. A ticker that will actually print words on paper from a central broadcasting point, thus greatly amplifying present news-distributing agencies, is another of the objectives of radio-research engineers, and control of airplanes, submarines and other ships from a remote land station is, he believes, a possibility certain to be realized in view of the astounding progress already made in radio accomplishments.

Preventing Snow from Sticking to Shovel

It is usually somewhat difficult to use a metal shovel for scooping snow as the snow has a tendency to stick to it. This trouble can easily be prevented by first cleaning the shovel so that it is absolutely free from dirt, heating the metal part, and then covering it well with melted paraffin or wax. When the paraffin is cold, the shovel can be used, and it will be found that the snow will not stick. Of course, this will last only as long as there is a film of wax on the shovel, but it is surprising how long it takes before this film is worn off. Wooden shovels may be treated with grease or rubbed with soap.

the storm window is built around the window on the outside. This box is made about 5 in. longer than the storm window, which is allowed to rest on the lower edge of the box, thus leaving a 5-in. space at the top. A right-angled wooden damper is made to fill this space; it is hinged to the upper end of the storm sash, and long enough to rest on a length of angle iron screwed to the upper edge of the inside sash. Opening or closing the inside sash automatically opens or closes the damper. Whether the damper is open or closed the space between the two windows is practically tight all the time. The box itself can be used as an iceless refrigerator during the cold months, small shelves being built on the sides so as not to shut off any light, if the box is made wide enough for this purpose.

WOMEN'S MUSIC STUDY CLUB

"A Night With Elgar"

The members of the music club who braved the elements last night and attended the regular fortnightly meeting held at the home of Mrs. E. M. Thurber, Dorset street, were well repaid. "A Night with Elgar" was the title for the evening's program. Elgar is perhaps the greatest living English composer of the day. We listened with keen interest to the story of his life as told by Mr. Unitt. It is the first time in the history of the present club to have the phenomenal experience of having the speaker of the evening, one who knew personally and studied under the composer chosen for the evening's program. Such was the case on Tuesday evening and therefore Mr. Unitt was able not only to give us an historical sketch of the life of Elgar but was also in a position to give a personal touch to the talk which was indeed intensely interesting.

The musical part of the program was also very delightful. Elgar's beautiful works as interpreted by our local artists were rendered perfectly, the only regret being that a larger number of the members were not present, only twenty-eight being there. Miss Burnham, Mrs. W. C. Williamson, Master Fred Skitch, Mr. Fred Winfield, Mr. D. A. Shay, Mr. J. T. George and Mr. Leslie Unitt, who with Mrs. M. S. Hawkins, Mrs. Howard Reeve and Miss Jessie Hawkins, members of the club gave the program as given in detail below. To those outside of the club we wish through the press to endorse the sentiment as expressed by Mrs. Ryan, who presided. The social half hour provided by the hostess, after the program was greatly appreciated and enjoyed.

The Program

ENGINEER EMPEY'S WORK COMMENDED

On the Provincial Highways Between Bowmanville and Belleville Show an Expenditure of $750,000 Since His Appointment

Since leaving St. Marys to take his new position as Highway Engineer at Port Hope over 260 miles of roadway, Engineer J. M. Empey has had few opportunities of visiting the old town where he spent the few past busy and enjoyable years, as the same fidelity and zeal in his work which characterized his tenure of office in this district has been displayed to an even greater extent in his new field of labor.

It seems but yesterday since he left and yet there stands to his record in the eastern part of the province to which he has gone, an amount of finished work which is simply amazing to the ordinary layman. He has already spent $750,000 covering several sections of roadway but on one section alone, that between Bowmanville and Oshawa, 26,000 barrels of cement and 23,000 field tiles were used in the road bed, completing nine miles of asphalt and concrete highway. Between Cobourg and Port Hope they constructed 4 1/2 miles of gravel and concrete pavement in which they laid 22,000 field tiles, the lines of tiles being 33 feet apart. Between the city of Belleville and Trenton they built 4 1-10 miles of crushed stone and concrete roadway, laying therein 10,000 six-inch field tiles. At Foxboro village, north of Belleville they laid six-tenths of a mile of penetration asphalt. North of Bloomfield in Prince Edward County they graded four miles and at Crofton in the same county they macadamized 2 1/2 miles of highway. In addition to all this they built extensions to three bridges, treated 105 miles of surface with tar and stone chips and did a large amount of maintenance work. The fact that there are no less than forty-eight municipalities within Engineer Empey's district gives some small idea of the amount of territory it covers. Bowmanville, Oshawa, Port Hope, Cobourg, Trenton are all within the territory over which he has jurisdiction and the plans he has in his office show few idle days for 1925.—St. Marys Journal Argus.

FEATHERED HERO OF VERDUN DIES

Carrier Pigeon Was Cited in Order of Army and Decorated

A hero of the war cited in an order of the army and decorated for exceptional bravery and gallantry at Verdun has just died at Tours, France, of old age. He was ten years old.

His name was Carrier Pigeon No. 183-14 AF and attached to one of his legs he proudly wore a ring equivalent to the Medaille Militaire awarded to him June 1916, with the following citation:

"On three different occasions, during the battle of Verdun, under heavy fire ensured the rapid transport of very important messages. In particular carried to headquarters the communications of Major Raynal, 1916, at a time when the major's defender of Fort Vaux, on June 3, troops completely surrounded were deprived of any other means of communications. The fights were done under most unfavorable atmospheric condition."

Since the armistice the pigeon has been kept as an honored guest in the army dove-cotes.

Sincerity and honesty carry one through many difficulties which all the arts he can invent would never help him through.
