HOW GT. BRITAIN IS FED CAN BUY ALMOST ANY KIND OF FOOD IN TINS.

The Growth of This "Ready to Serve" Food Industry Is a Business Romance Which Only Goes Back One Generation.

On the shore of a Norwegian fiord, .533 one of those deep, dark arms of the .500 sea which push their water far inland, men are working on their farms.

Suddenly a shout is heard-flocks of gulls have been seen over the fiord. A look-out boy had given the signal. The men hurry down to their boats. They are fishermen as well as smallholders. Brisling have come in from the sea. The opportunity must not be lost. Out come nets, oars are plied, sails are holsted. They are as busy now on water as they were a short time back on land.

When you open a tin of these lit the fish for tea or supper, you don't, I expect, see that picture with your mind's eye, writes Hamilton Fyfe, in Answers:

Now, if you continue your meal with fruit salad out of a tin, do you think of the sun-steeped Californian orchard where the peaches ripened, the apricots on hot Italian hillsides or Australian valleys, the pineapple getting in Hawaii or Singapore, the harvest of American vineyards, the cherry-trees which in spring fill whole districts with their snowy blossoms.

Yet if you don't ever let your imagination move among the scenes where your food comes from, you miss a great part of the romance of life. All over the world there are men and women working for you, sowing and planting, pruning and picking, catching salmon and lobsters, pilchards and sardines, netting the nimble brisling on the Norwegian flords.

Part of the romance of food lies in the story of the industry last named. Thirty-eight years ago a young man called Angus Watson was shown a tin of fish, roughly packed, and not at all appetizing, in a grocer's shop at Newcastle-on-Tyne. In spite of the shortcomings of the sample, it suggested great possibilities to him. He went to Norway as soon as he could. He inquired whether 1,000 cases could be supplied to his em-ployers during the year. The order created consternation. An annual output of 400 cases was about the average then. Now the pack in a good season exceeds 1.000.000 cases.

Mr. Watson did a great deal more than anyone else to develop this trade. He started a business of his own. He named the fish "skippers," after an action had been brought to prevent them being called sardines, and sold vast quantities.

At the same time he imported and distributed many other foods in tins, and later he started as a "packer' himself. His company, with $10. 000,000 capital, is now one of the largest concerns in Newcastle, England. It sends its ready-to-serve foods not only all over Britain, but simost all over the world.

Not to the United States, however. There the secret of "putting the July" 1923, £3,019,601,063; 1924, £2,912, .580

THE SEVEN SEAS CLUB.

Monthly Dinners Are Set In a True Atmosphere of the Sea. The Priace of Wales has accepted the invitation to become patron of Neb.

the Seven Sean Club. The club is ungo: It was formed six years ago, which four mercantile marine officers who had not met for many years dired together in ; restaurant in London. All were mor who had been through the training ship Conway. They hlt upon the idea of forming a club for all old Conway and Worcester boys, and wrote to all the officers of mercantile marine inviting them to become members. The only rules with which the club started were that there should be a dinner once a month, and that each member should bring as many of sailor friends as possible who happened to be visiting the port o Gendon.

From four members six yours age it has grown until now it has eve 800 members, including admirals commanders, captains still in activ service, and white-haired sailing-ship captains who reefed many a topsai half a century ago.

The monthly dianers are set in : true atmosphere of the sea. The chairman's gavel was made out of bolt of the Conway. No clock tick in the dining-room, but a brass bel announces the hours. This bell, it is said, once clanged on/ the fo'c'sie of the famous Cutty Sark when the eld ship was in the hands of the Portuguese.

When the cutty Sark was sold to the Portuguese, the story goer, a sailorman who had shipped in her as a boy, and whose ship, the Shake speare, happened to be lying alon. side the Sark at the time, determined 29, 9, that, though the "furrfners" might get the old ship, they should not get the bell.

That night he rowed to the Cutty Sark and climbed the rope ladder to the deck. Stealthilf he crept to th Po'c'sle, removed the ship's bell, sutstituting the Shakespeare, and raced back to his ship.

ownership, the bell was handed back to the Cutty Sark; and its is the Shakespeare's bell which now rings during the Seven Seas Club dinner.

R.CH MEN OF BRITAIN.

There Are 188 With More Than $500,000 4 Year Each. There are 562 millionaires in Great Britain and Northern Ireland. The latest blue book of the Inland Revenue Department gives this as the number of taxpayers who have incomes of £50,000 a year or more. Out of the total of 562 there ar 138 persons who have incomes of more than £100,500 a year. Their total income is £27,532,452, so that the average income of the group is nearly £200,000. The number of the very rich are not increasing. In the year 1925, indeed, there were 140 men with £100. 000 a year and their total income was £28,173,000. It is shown that the total national income, also, is not increasing. The figures for the last five years are:

Frank Gremo, 9, died from heart~ failure and fright when chased by man at Berwick, Pa.

Overturning of automobile 'caused death of two students at Beatrice,- Trapped in loft two small boys burned to death from lamp explosion at Springfield, Mass.

THE HIGHWAYS OF BUYING

"Follow the highway markings and you can't go wrong." . . . That's the advice the Automobile Club gives you before starting on a motor trip. You follow the well-known, well-marked roads. And you reach your destination the safest, most comfortable way.

Why not follow the same rule in your shopping? Why not stick to the "highways of buying?" They have been just as carefully plotted and are just as carefully marked as the great motor roads you've come to depend on. Marked by the trade-marks of reliable, advertised products.

The next time you go shopping follow these "highways.' Before you start, look through the advertisements in these colums. Pick out the products you want. Notice the names and trade marks that indentify them. And then ask for them by name.

The advertisements are the sign-posts to guide you to the best merchandise.
