Rev. and Mrs. Wilkinson Will Be Stationed at Koutou Station in French Sudan Field

Rev. H. C. "Bert" Wilkinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Wilkinson, Cobourg Road, and Mrs. Wilkinson, completed their study of French in Paris on June 30 and were planning to sail from Liverpool on July 11th, according to a recent edition of the Sudan United Mission News Letter.

They will land at Port Harcourt, Nigeria, travel by rail some 300 miles to the Benue River, thence by steamer up the Benue to Garoua, thence 300 miles of overland trek to our French Sudan field. They will locate for the present at Koutou station, with the probability of opening another station farther afield during the coming dry season. Several other stations and many more workers will be needed before this great district can be rightly occupied for Christ.

Dr. Hastings advises you to watch your health margin—important.

RICKARD LOSES ON BIG FIGHT

Financial Failure Blamed on Radio and High Federal Tax—Attendance 46,400

Tex Rickard's loss on the Tunney-Heeneey fight was announced by the promoter at $155,719.77.

Rickard attributed the financial failure of the bout to the radio and high Federal tax.

"This is the last big fight I will stage and permit the radio at the ringside unless they pay a handsome royalty," he said. "My contract with the radio people expires soon and I will not renew it unless they are willing to pay high for the privilege."

The estimated figures follow:—
Gross gate receipts first official check, $691,014.50.

State (5 per cent) and Federal (25 per cent.) taxes $156,193.00
Net receipts $521,422.23.
Tunney's guarantee $525,000.
Heeneey's guarantee, $100,000.
Estimated attendance 43,191.

Like the gambler that he is Rickard took the loss calmly. "I can take the bitter with the sweet," he said.

The promoter has contended all along that July was no time to hold a championship bout, but selected the date at the insistence of Tunney, who at the time wanted to fight in July and September.

WEDDING BELLS

HALL—TOMS

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at St. Peter's Anglican Rectory, Cobourg, on Friday, July 27th, 1928, Rev. Dr. T. Stannage Boyle officiating, when Annie Dorothy, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Toms, Cobourg, became the bride of Mr. Thos. C. Hall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hall, Port Hope. The bride who was given in marriage by her father was becomingly attired in a frock of noon blue silk flat crepe with hat to match. They were attended by Miss Inez Toms, sister of the bride as bridesmaid, wearing Goblin Blue georgette crepe with hat to match, and Mr. Jack Toms r. as best man.

After the ceremony luncheon was served at the bride's home when twenty-five guests were present. The tables were prettily decorated with silver baskets containing roses, lilies and fern. After luncheon, the bride donned her travelling costume of navy and beige ensemble with hat, hose and gloves to match. The bride was the recipient of many useful presents.

Amid showers of confetti, the happy couple left for Niagara Falls and western points. On their return they will reside in Port Hope.

LINGARD—BROMBY

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized on July 7th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bromby, 3208 Dundas street, west, Toronto, when their daughter Ethel, became the bride of Horace K. Lingard, son of Mrs. A. McDonald, formerly of Port Hope. Only immediate relatives and friends were present.

The ceremony was performed in the living room which was decorated with pink and white flowers. The bride who was given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely gown of white tulle and shadow lace. Her veil of embroidered tulle was caught to the head in a cap effect with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of yellow roses and baby's breath. Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Winnifred Bromby, who looked charming in a gown of pink tulle and ecru lace and carried a bouquet of pink roses and baby's breath. Mr. Charles Watkins was best man.

Following the ceremony a buffet supper was served in the pretty decorated dining room. Later the happy couple left for Brantford where they will reside.

The groom is a brother of Mrs. Thomas Dawley, of Port Hope.

Hops are largely grown in British Columbia and 50 per cent more workers will be needed to harvest this year's hop crop in the vicinity of Chilliwack, Sardis and Sumas than in 1927, about 2000, men, women and children will be required when the picking season starts in August.

BANKERS LOSE IN THRILLING CONTEST 9-8

C. N. R. Score Six Runs in Seventh Innings to Nose Bankers at Viaduct Park

After being held to three runs until the first of the seventh innings, Frank Bird's C. N. R. Softball artists awoke from their lethargy and drove McCannell from the mound by scoring five runs and continued their onslaught on Wade, to win a postponed softball fixture from the Bankers 9-8 at Viaduct Park Friday night. The win for Sir Henry's stalwarts strengthens their position in third place and the team is now but half a game behind the Bankers.

Never was a more thrilling game witnessed at Viaduct Park. Up until the seventh, the Railroaders were trailing by five runs and in the lucky seventh, they not only tied the count but added another for good measure. The coin jugglers were held scoreless in their half and the batsmen were retired in order.

McCannell journeyed along until the eventful seventh and only six scattered hits were registered off his delivery which accounted for three runs. In the seventh, five men hit safely and Wade was brought in when only two hits were secured. Francey proved McCannell's only strikeout victim while he walked two men, Hills and Jones.

Sherry went the route for the section crew and was touched up for ten hits. He was inclined to be a trifle wild and walked five men, Wade, McCannell, Brockenshire, Fitzsimmons and Palmer. Jones and Sherry were the best strikers for the winners and bagged three hits out of four attempts. Wade, for the losers, had a perfect average with three hits and a walk out of four trips to the plate while Melville had two hits to his credit.

The C. N. R. started their march to victory in the first frame and counted one run. Guy started the work with a hit through short, went to second on a passed ball, stole third and scored on Jones' hit.

In the Bankers' half, three runs were secured on three hits and two errors and added two more in the second and third with one in the fourth to fill their quota.

The Bankers' defence fell down badly in the fourth and the C. N. R. counted two runs without a hit. Three walks, one with the bases clogged and two errors by McCannell made it possible.

Entering the seventh chukker, five runs down, the under dogs went out to cinch the tilt. Jones and Highfield bunted safely and Bird scored both runners on a slashing double to left field which Melville did not field with any degree of celerity. O'Neill socked the pill to centre and Francey did likewise. O'Neill scored when Fitzsimmons threw wild to the plate to cut off a run, Francey going to third. McCannell was derricked and Wade was brought in. With no one out, Douglas dumped down a bunt and although he was retired at first, Francey brought in the tying marker. Sherry kept the good work up for his team and the devastating work for the opposition, by clouting a single to left. The red thatched pitcher was out at second on Guy's fielder's choice but Guy was advanced on Lil' Arthur Hills' hit. Hills made a dash for the middle sack and when Brockenshire threw to sphere to nip Hills, Guy came in with a run, which proved to be the winning marker. Jones was thrown out at second to end the rally.

Spurred on by their batting splurge, the dauntless C. N. R. kent the Bankers in check in the last of the seventh. Winfield bounced to Guy and Melville was called out on attempting to bunt on the last strike. O'Neill, batting for Martin, drew a pass but Hills, the agile little second

$266.22 A SECOND

Gene Tunney was well paid for the 32 minutes and 52 seconds he worked in retaining his heavyweight championship against the onslaught of Tom Heeneey. He drew $266.22 for each second's work. The champion's purse was $525,000 and he occupied 1,972 active seconds in making the title safe for another year.

HEARD ON THE STREET

What, more rain? Great guns we've had about enough for this week and it's about time the curtain of clouds would be drawn aside to reveal a clear blue sky for the week-end.

Well, perhaps when August starts next week we'll get a different brand of weather.

It's usually after the circus the kids try to do the acrobatic stuff so it seemed a trifle unusual to see them practicing at the beach yesterday, when the circus comes to Cobourg next Tuesday.

Among the changes the visitors will find in town is one on King street, where Mr. C. H. Wickett is altering the porch and south side of his home.

It pays to advertise! Thursday we mentioned about the efficiency expert who organized a surprise party and after all was over had a set of dishes the owner of which could not be found even after diligent search. The owner, however read the article in the Guide and now our friend will have to put on several other events to replace the loss to his "hope chest."

Approximately one thousand excursionists, bound for Rochester, N. Y., passed through Port Hope on the Midland Division early this morning.

There will be no dancing at the Port Hope Beach pavilion tonight.

Last week the Cobourg office of the Hydro Electric Power Commission signed contracts for power and light lines to Plainville and Bewdley, also another line to Harwood and Roseneath, via Gore's Landing. The line through to Coldsprings is completed as far as Camborne, and before fall it is expected that every small village in the western part of the county, with farmers along the line will have power and light. Hydro has made a wonderful stride in this part of the county this year.

One detour. Port Hope to Bewdley and Welcome to Dale, road under construction. New detour established one mile north of Port Hope, two miles longer than highway. Signs erected to direct traffic. Bewdley to Ballochboro, good gravel road. Ballochboro to Peterboro paved road.

POLICE COURT

Following damage which was done at the Port Hope beach pavilion last May, six local youths, ranging in ages from 9-17, appeared before Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell in Police Court here this morning. They were defended by W. F. McMahon, and all but one pleaded not guilty to the charge of wilfully and maliciously damaging property.

Chief of Police T. Murphy told that windows had been broken at the pavilion and the group of boys were rounded up.

They were given their freedom after timely advice had been handed down from the Bench.

THE GUIDE STORY

That ball was talked of long afterward as the success of the Paris winter season, and the name of the heiress, Mademoiselle Katalinka, went the round of the papers. The English dailies had much to say of her grace, her talents, and the huge fortune she possessed in Siberian mines. The English society papers gave paragraphs touching her extraordinary charms, her majestic beauty, the splendor of her intellect, and the size of her diamonds.

As for Robert Dacre, he went home to dream of her all night—wild dreams, in which she seemed more siren than woman.

He had never believed until now that it might be a difficult thing to put the thought of one woman out of one's head. He was always fancying that he heard her low, caressing voice in his ear; that he felt the firm, soft pressure of her hand upon his arm; that he was gazing at the subdued fire in her eyes, or at the witchery of her smile.

Who was she, when all was said and done? The daughter of an owner of Siberian mines, so rich that she could afford to give one thousand pounds for an Egyptian idol.

Then the shirt of mail! It was one of the most delicate pieces of workmanship he had ever even heard of, much less seen. It was formed of links no larger than those in a lady's golden chain. He put it on the next afternoon, merely, as he said, to try the effect.

It was not a pleasant sensation by any means, that of this shirt of steel, although it was true it did not hamper him in the least, but gave with every movement of his frame.

Lord Dacre did not doubt that his life was in danger at this time. He knew that most of the European capitals possessed their secret bands of discontented men, and that Paris emulated St. Petersburg in smothered revolutionary fire.

He also knew, that, actuated by something nobler than mere curiosity, he had managed to creep, in disguise, into one of those assemblies, not with the intention of betraying the members, but for the sake of finding out what their aims were, and if they had just cause of complaint.

He knew that on leaving the house, calling a cab, and entering it, his mask had fallen into the street through the open window, and that a man (wearing a mask) had stood under the archway of the house entrance, had seen his face, started at finding it strange to him, and then had run again into the house to tell the fact to his fellows.

Whoever that man was, Lord Dacre knew enough of the society to be aware a man would be told off to kill him. Yet, knowing this, he had gone about carelessly enough, trusting to his good star, or to Providence, or to the Paris police, until Elizabeth Katalinka warned him of his danger.

Now he was no longer careless; he feared he knew not what. There was something fantastically horrible in the idea that the Russian heiress was linked in somehow with that terrible society, or, more likely, with the secret foes who were upon its track.

"A wonderful creature, one to be proud of, even as a—yes, as a wife, if one could teach her the gentler side of life. Where has she learned her creed of disbelief in all things noble, kind, and true? Can she have suffered? There is no trace of suffering in that calm face. It is not like the faces of the women of the day; it has no anxious lines; no dreams of the past lurk in the deep eyes. Its gloom now and anon is a mask donned at will to hide the emotions of the soul. I wish I could see into that soul. Can she love?"

Now, it will be seen that Lord Dacre was very near to loving this beautiful Russian, if he had not already begun to pour out the treasures of his heart at her feet.

At any rate, he was fascinated, most deeply fascinated. He sat in his own apartment in the Hotel Louvre.

It was a handsomely appointed bachelor suite which he had engaged for part of the winter. His own valet occupied one room in the set, and was always ready to attend him.

On this evening he had ordered a dainty little supper to be served at ten, and he expected Louis Brutone. He sat waiting some time. Ten struck, then the quarter, then the half hour.

"He can not be coming," said Robert, starting up; "it's not civil. I dislike this kind of thing, and I put her off for him; if he does not come I shall eat something, and then go out. Soon it will be too late for the theatres. Eleven struck, and then Viscount Robert Dacre sat down to a dainty little supper, which he could not relish, for he felt annoyed and mystified, perplexed, and almost nervous, if he would have admitted the possibility of such a condition to himself.

He eat some breast of chicken and drank some Burgundy, then he put on his overcoat—for the wind was keen—and went out toward the Grand Opera.

It would be all over by now, and the theatres would be pouring their thronging crowds into the streets.

REGULAR PRICES FOR 'RAMONA'

Local Theatre Management Offers Theatregoers Real Treat Next Week

The announcement that "Ramona" the season's greatest screen success, is coming to Port Hope next week has been received with delight, even by those who only occasionally patronize amusements, for everyone has heard of this delightful photoplay and its unprecedented Toronto run, not yet completed. The fact that "Ramona" will be seen here so soon is not as surprising as it would be if the Royal did not always get the big attractions at an early date, but it is doubtful if anyone expected to see this tremendous hit at regular prices, which seems almost too good to be true.

However, as Manager Smart explains, the Royal has a lot of seats and—to put it mildly—they are not all occupied every night; contrary to general belief, very few theatres are. Mr. Smart feels that if there ever was a picture which should attract three capacity houses it is

"Ramona" and in the hope that fifteen hundred Port Hoppers will take advantage of a real treat, he announces "No advance in prices." Adding "we want to give Port Hope the best entertainment, at the lowest prices consistent with a reasonable profit such as any business is entitled to."

Everyone who can attend on Monday is asked to do so instead of waiting for a lessened rush; "Ramona" isn't that kind of a picture—the crowds increase instead of diminishing.

SOFTBALL

The C.N.R. and Mathews provide the attraction for Monday evening's softball while on Tuesday the Ganeraskas fulfill an engagement with the File. On Thursday, the Sanitary and Bankers will meet and one of their old time struggles is looked for.

League Standing

	Won	Lost	P.C.

C.N.R.	7	4	.636
Sanitary	5	4	.555
Mathews	4	7	.364
Ganeraskas	0	10	.000

The popularity of softball in Port Hope is evidenced by the large crowd that attends the fixtures for three and mostly four nights a week. The league is in fine financial shape and a considerable sum should be on hand at the end of the season.

The dashing finish by Frank Bird's C.N.R. softball artists brought the fans to their feet in the first of the seventh at Vinduet Park last night. Five runs down the C.N.R. went out to win and 99 per cent. of the crowd were with the underdog.

By a peculiar coincidence neither Spicer nor Winfield, third baseman and shortstop for the Bankers had any assists last night, according to the box score.

The remaining games of the softball schedule are as follows:—

"Miles Prentice," says a writer, "had a niece, Miss Simpson, daughter of Sandy Simpson, whose charms so captivated the embryo Admiral that when his vessel had sailed from port he clandestinely returned for the purpose of wedding the maid of the inn, which purpose was defeated by Mr. Alexander Davidson, then a Quebec merchant, who, with the assistance of his boat's crew, forcibly carried

I would add that my first visit to this incomparable height was made during the first considerable snowfall of the year. I believe some five feet of snow were down in relatively a few hours, and anything more bewitching than the whitened domes and pinnacles and the fairy-like scenes beyond the walls it is difficult to imagine.
But Quebec is the home of superb spectacles, and in the Chateau Frontenac possesses one of the most dominating hotels in the world. Here is a great hostelry like to no other one can name—majestic in the fashion of a mediaeval fortress, yet as up-to-date as any hotel in America and more comfortable than most. COLORFUL ALBANIA

A Visit to Scutari on Market Day Is a Delight to an Artist—An Open Beauty.

The picturesque of the women of Albania forms the theme of an article published in the London Daily Mail, by J. M. N. Jeffries.

Material progress, he writes, has laid its hand on Albania at last, especially the towns.

More is being done in Tirana than anywhere else. Tirana is, or was, little more than a large Moslem village in the middle of the country, about twenty-five miles from the sea at Durazzo. At Durazzo itself preparations for progress have been made; it is a place of dust, ruts, hovels and melancholy.

Tirana, where is the modest residence of the President of the Republic of Albania, is an open, rather straggling place, gathered round several painted mosques. Its few older roads are but mazy lanes, but a number of new ones are being pierced with a certain amount of despatch, broad and well planned. They are made after Peter the Great's style. Where the required road passes through a standing house, half or a quarter as much of the house as is mathematically necessary for the passage of the road is cut neatly away and the rest left standing.

The newest of the new roads contains a fresh hotel named the "Bar Palace," and not far away are the offices of two avokates, or lawyers, and a Partisierie Parisienne. Round the corner are the signs of dentists, or dentists, and groceries are making their appearance. Tirana has a reputed powerful wireless station also, which communicates with Brindisi, and a small paper is being produced by Albania's first journalist, M. Chekresi. So, after its long isolation, Albania is beginning to go the way of the world.

The artist would do well to visit Albania now, before uniformity is achieved. Never in Europe have I known such an embazoned scene as upon, say, the market day at Scutari. Indeed, it may compare with some of the most celebrated samples of the picturesque outside our continent. It has not the dark, well-like mystery of the deep, declining streets of Florence, nor can it show the blown robes and the Eastern errantry of Damascus.

But there is an open beauty about it without compare. It is as if a sower had come and scattered, and in the free places the human grain had come to flower. Like flowers truly are the banks of women, seated in winding rows and clumps as irregularly as wild flowers break, vending the cloths and lace and tissues they and their mothers have spun and woven and embroidered.

As you pass them in the countryside you will see that they are never idle; striding along erect or bent beneath some burden upon their shoulders, yet they are forever spinning as they walk. A skein is in one hand or both, and they go endlessly winding or turning after the manner of their craft.

And here below Scutari Castle they spread their goods, than which they themselves are perchance more wonderful. Some of them are in scarlet and some in yellow or snafakes of both, and many in white with variegated embroideries. Some are in black, the women of the Shoshi, unrelieved black, but with their skirts standing out stiff and turning upwards, so that with their rough woollen leg-coverings and sandals they look like so many Monks.

Here and there a woman customer in full dress walks amid them, though they are generally so close that you must push your way. Necklaces of gold coins swing upon her breast and heavy earrings from her ears; she is perhaps a recent bride.

Here and there, too, are Moslem women, closely veiled, with but one long slit to see by, so narrow and so regularly horizontal that it is like the slits in the conning-towers of warships. But most are Christian, and some wear their black hair in wild shorn tufts, thrust through either side of the kerchief which they wear over their heads.

Headed there are others, women and men, inconceivably shaggy and tattered, with bits of sucking and fragments of old cord flopping about them, in the garments of utter destitution, mere paradises of rags. All move and intermingled and jostle without thought, bending over the cloths or the squares of leather the tanners and the leaves of tobacco the curers alike spread upon the ground.

The last remnants of old rubber tyres are there, to be made into sandals, and provender in the folds of women's skirts or in vivid rough bags. It is a sight without a parallel, and I think that the hand of a true painter who came to paint it might shake as he saw it, shake with fear that it might suddenly tremble and pass from his sight, and join all that beauty and that squalor which ended in the western lands when the clouded sunset of the Middle Ages waned away. There is still time for the painter, but he must hasten.

Briar Root.

The root used in making tobacco pipes and commonly called briar, is not the root of a briar but of a tree found near the Mediterranean in southern Europe. The name of the tree is the French word "bryer," and the English name briar is a corruption of the French word.

Telephones In Coffins.

An experiment has been undertaken at the cemetery of San Jose, in Spain, for the installation of tiny telephones in each coffin. These are to be connected to an alarm bell in the porter's lodge, thus providing against the possibility of anyone being buried alive.

Beat Through Their Legs.
Some insects have their hearing apparatus in their legs.

IDEA PROVIDES NEW THRILL

Scenic Railway Two Miles High Under Construction—Will Give Wonderful View of Mont Blanc.

Think of swooping through the air, from Alpine crag to crag, on a real scenic railway over two miles high! This queerest of engineering projects, stranger than anything that has been attempted before, not only has proved feasible but part of the line is now in operation. It is under construction when the war broke out, but the suspended work has recommenced, and, according to press dispatches, the line soon will be open to tourists.

This unique railway, technically known as a teleferique, will run from Les Bessons in the Chamoni valley, France, up the Aliguille du Midi, 12,008 feet high, one of the jagged, precipitous needles in the Mont Blanc range. Tourists, in 20 minutes, will be transported from summer heat to the Arctic zone of Mont Blanc, swooping safely through the air while avalanches of snow and ice crash harmlessly by, hundreds of feet beneath the suspended cars.

The idea behind this novel engineering feat is to transport tourists skyward to the land of eternal snow and ice. Hundreds of thousands of tourists have seen Mont Blanc from below, but by means of this teleferique line many will be transported safely and comfortably to a spot where only the hardest of alpinists have ever ventured, and where visitors wishing to escape the heat of summer may indulge in all kinds of winter sports.—Scientific American.

FAIR GIRLS SCARCE

Outnumbered by Dark, Who Get Along Better in Factories.

The chorus beauty of the traditional fair type is, various theatrical managers tell us, becoming increasingly difficult to find, writes a physician.

The fair-haired type of English beauty has long been famous, and yet the women with this coloring were comparatively late arrivals to England's shores, coming after at least two dark-haired races.

Unfortunately England, as a whole, does not possess the ideal conditions for the blonde types, and they are told by anthropologists that they are slowly and imperceptibly dying out.

However, this may be for the country as a whole, town life most certainly seems to be inimical to blondes. Thus it is found that there is a much greater preponderance of brunettes among the population of cities than in the country districts. Further, the dwellers in the most thickly populated parts of towns are darker than those who reside in the suburbs.

The cause of this is not definitely known. It is claimed for the fair northern type that being on the whole more intellectual they have more money and can therefore better afford to live in the suburbs.

But while making all possible allowance for such factors there is undoubtedly a progressive dying out of blondes in cities and a replacement by brunettes.

Blonde children are found to be more susceptible to disease such as diphtheria, scarlet fever and rheumatism, with its fatal sequel of heart troubles.

Blondes are essentially an open-air type, and are most unsuited to factory work.

Living in cities they often suffer from a peculiar dread of closed spaces and an unconscious longing for country life. The glare and heat of city summers is bad for them owing to the fact that they have less protective pigment in their skins. For the same reason they frequently suffer from neurasthenia.

The blonde type of beauty flourishes best in the cold, rather dark climates, such as the northern parts of our island, and especially the north of Scotland.

As the Scots sooner or later invade England there is a constant supply of the blonde type, and it is not so much our blonde England as a field for colonization for the fair flaxen-haired and blue-eyed type so justly famous.

Same Mace.

The British House of Commons mace has an interesting history attached to it. For a long time it was believed that, when Oliver Cromwell dissolved the Long Parliament and bade a soldier "take away that fool's bauble," the mace had gone for good. It was said to have been removed to Jamaica and used in the Assembly there.

The facts are that the Charles I. mace, being an emblem of royal authority, was removed within a few days after the execution of that monarch, and has not been heard of since. A new mace was ordered to be made by one Thomas Maundy and was first used on June 8th, 1648, and it continued in use until Cromwell dissolved the Long Parliament on April 20th, 1653. Its reappearance was made during the Barebones Parliament, and probably during other Commonwealth Parliaments.

On May 21st, 1660, at the Restoration, new maces were ordered to be made for the new House of Commons. The old mace was not literally carried out. The Commonwealth maces were converted by carefully eliminating all the emblems and devices of Commonwealth authority and adding the royal emblems. The shaft of the mace now in use is, therefore, identically the same as the one Cromwell ordered to be removed in 1653.

It is a tradition that the mace should be regilt at the end of every Parliament. No business can be done in the Commons without the mace. It goes away with the Speaker and comes back with him. When the mace is on the table, the Commons is a House; when under the table, it is a committee.

Nelson's Unlucky Love Adventure.

Writing in the London "Evening News," Max Pemberton, well-known English writer, says:—
"I read in an American journal a discussion as to which is the most beautiful city in the world; and I am not surprised that a writer names Quebec, and names it with emphasis.

We cannot wonder at the literary enthusiasm Quebec has provoked.

"The majestic appearance of Cape Diamond," says one writer . . . the fortifications the cupolas, and minarets, like those of an Eastern city, blazing and sparkling in the sun, the noble basin like a sheet of purest silver, in which might ride with safety the navies of the world, the graceful meanderings of the River St. Lawrence, the fertile valley dotted with picturesque habitant houses, the distant falls of Montmorency . . . the grim purple mountains, the barriers to the North, form a picture which it is no exaggeration to say is unsurpassed in any part of the world."

It is easy to applaud such chauvinism when one has set foot in Quebec and been received with that courtly hospitality for which its people are famous.

Naturally, romance is never far away from such a picture. There is a story told of the Lord Nelson and of one Miles Prentice, who served under Wolfe and subsequently served beer. This fellow opened an inn to which the soldiers and sailors resorted . . . and among them in the year 1782 came the Captain Nelson, then commanding H.M.S. Albemarle, of 26 guns.

"Miles Prentice," says a writer, had a niece, Miss Simpson, daughter of Sandy Simpson, whose charms so captivated the embryo Admiral that when his vessel had sailed from port he clandestinely returned for the purpose of wedding the maid of the inn, which purpose was defeated by Mr. Alexander Davidson, then a Quebec merchant, who, with the assistance of his boat's crew, forcibly carried the amorous captain on board his vessel."

This seems somewhat drastic treatment, hardly likely to be popular in our time, when captains ashore to marry maids are usually welcome and other people hasten to buy confetti. But Quebec ever was and ever will be a city of the strictest proprieties.

THE HIGHWAYS OF BUYING . .

"Follow the highway markings and you can't go wrong." . . . That's the advice the Automobile Club gives you before starting on a motor trip. You follow the well-known, well-marked roads. And you reach your destination the safest, most comfortable way.

Why not follow the same rule in your shopping? Why not stick to the "highways of buying?" They have been just as carefully plotted and are just as carefully marked as the great motor roads you've come to depend on. Marked by the trade-marks of reliable, advertised products.

The next time you go shopping follow these "highways." Before you start, look through the advertisements in these columns. Pick out the products you want. Notice the names and trade marks that identify them. And then ask for them by name.

The advertisements are the sign-posts to guide you to the best merchandise.

Inspection of the "Duchess of Bedford," new 20,000-ton Canadian Pacific liner, which recently made her maiden trip to Montreal, at once disclosed the extreme suitability of these "Duchess" ships for tropical travel. Ventilated under the Ball-Louvre system of individually controlled outlets, cool air is forced under gentle pressure to every part of the vessel. Broad sun-decks and an open-air swimming pool add to the luxurious appearance of the ship and it has now been decided that the "Duchess of Atholl" shall be used on the South America-South Africa cruise next year.

OUR SENSE OF HUMOR

It pleases a facetious columnist in an American daily of wide circulation to refer to Canada as "that non-humorous country." His comment upon our national inability to appreciate a humorous situation is about as funny a hit as we have noticed among his intended witticisms.

Ordinarily the risibilities of the Canadian people are not called into question. Our sense of humor may not boast the slapstick qualities of the American brand but it is not marked by any lack of development.

The average Canadian is as quick to perceive an amusing twist in action or speech as anybody else. Our appreciation of the ludicrous is possibly not quite as subtle as the English trend nor is it as hilarious and lacking in restraint as the American. It strikes a happy medium that fills the bill to a nicety.

We are not so dumb but that we can raise a laugh over a tourist from the States who arrives on a sizzling July day in an Ontario city fully equipped with snowshoes, toboggan, and other adjuncts of twenty below zero. We can even raise a smile at the expense of the booming American citizen who boasts of a free country—with prohibition. It doesn't always take a feather to "tickle us to death."—Kitchener Record.

GOD BLESS MY MOTHER

God bless my dear old mother,
Who in my infant days
Watched o'er me in my cradle
And sang sweet lullabies;
From childhood up to manhood
Kept me with tenderest care
And asked God's blessing on me
In faithful, earnest prayer.

Ah! Well do I remember
When leaving childhood's home
Among cold-hearted strangers,
In the wide-world to roam;
To seek my place and fortune,
Life's short, swift race to run;
Her tears and prayers were mingled
With blessings on her son.

Her blooming cheek is faded,
Deep furrows mark her brow;
The steady hand now trembles;
Her step is feeble now;
Long year's life's heavy burdens,
Their impress deep have made;
The mind once clear, unclouded,
Is dimmed by evening's shade.

God bless my dear old mother—
Tears blind my eyes tonight
As memory recalls the past—
I can no longer write.
God bless my dear old mother,
And bring her safely o'er
The swelling of the tide of Jordan,
To Heaven's peaceful shore.

It will surprise Guide readers to know the oil production in the Lower Valley field of Alberta is approaching 2000 barrels per day of light crude and high grade naphtha. Total production during May was 55,985 barrels of high quality bringing nearly $4 per barrel.

Winter wheat harvest has started in Southern Alberta. John Ross of Chin has five binders at work on a large field. The crop promises heavy yield. Winter wheat will, however, not return as heavy yields as last year, owing to very dry weather in May. Spring cutting will start in about three weeks, some early fields showing signs of ripening. The crop is one of the heaviest on record.

Old Gentleman—Mr. Brown, I believe? My grandson is working in your office.
Brown—Oh, yes. He went to your funeral last week.

CROP REPORT

All sections of Ontario except Algoma have been very wet. This has further delayed haying which is much behind schedule. The rains have hastened the ripening of Fall Wheat and many Western Ontario farmers will be obliged to cut this crop before completing the harvest of the first cut of Alfalfa hay. Wheat cutting has commenced in Essex and Kent.

Moisture and heat have forced remarkable growth and crops generally are very promising. With excellent pastures and good prices beef cattle men are appreciating a more favorable turn in the wheel of fortune. Milk production has decreased somewhat owing to excessive heat and fly annoyance, however, the supply of grass is keeping production above normal and with cheese around 22c a pound dairymen are in a better position than in some recent years.

BRANT—Generally crops in district are looking exceptionally well. Farmers have work well in hand although later than usual. Hay is on the average a much heavier crop than was indicated earlier in the season. Root crops looking very well and corn improving very rapidly.

BRUCE—Fall wheat is heading out well and is ripening very rapidly. Spring grains are in excellent condition and show promise of a bumper crop. Many fields were flattened by the recent heavy rains but are commencing to straighten up and will likely show up better after a few days of warm weather. Dry weather is urgently needed for hay making and hoe crop cultivation.

DUNDAS—Frequent rains have held haying operations at almost a standstill—the ground is excessively wet and in some instances corn is being injured—however, the bulk of the crops are making rapid growth and indications point to a good yield of all crops.

DURHAM—A few of the farmers have finished haying operations, although wet weather this past week has retarded haying, to a great extent. We expect the first wheat will be cut the beginning of this week as it has been ripening quite rapidly this past week.

ESSEX—Cutting of wheat and barley is well under way and a few fields of mixed grain are being cut. Threshing outfits are being put into shape and threshing of wheat and rye will be quite general next week. Tobacco and corn is growing very rapidly this damp warm weather. The sugar beet crop promises to be a bumper one.

FRONTENAC—Crops have made excellent growth. There has been more spring wheat sown this year than for a number of years and the crop is now heading out and promises a big yield. Oats and barley are also heading out and are very promising.

HALDIMAND—Reports and observations would indicate that the wheat and oat crops are rusted to some extent. The farmers will be exceptionally busy for the next month as the wheat harvest will be right on top of the hay and the spring harvest follows the wheat, plus the harvest of alsike and blue grass.

HURON—Hog prices are improving the situation considerably. As was to be expected there is now a demand for breeding stock. Considerable interest is being taken in the treatment of sheep for both internal and external parasites. Spring grains and fall wheat are generally very fair. Heavy rains have caused some wheat and barley to lodge. One of the best fields of oats we have seen this year is O.A.C. 144 variety. The bean crop is very fair except on low land. Apples are not plentiful and some scab is present.

TEMISKAMING—There is considerable interest at the present time in the market for Alsike seed. We received inquiries almost every day as to the prospects for this commodity. Most of the farmers are of the opinion that there will be a fair set of seed in spite of a great growth of straw.

WELLINGTON—Haying is becoming general. While alfalfa was killed out to quite a large extent, yet we have seen more real good alfalfa hay fields in the county this year than ever before. There wasn't a township in the county where we cannot find at least 20 farmers with real heavy crops of alfalfa hay mixed with a little timothy.

LAMBTON—Haying has advanced very satisfactory. This week although not completed. Fall wheat cutting has started. Both crops together will make the next two weeks a very busy time with farmers. Some grass cattle have been shipped. No big movement of heavy cattle has taken place. A large number of the export cattle have been sold to buyers who are leaving them on the pastures. The price of new potatoes is very disappointing for this season of the year, only about one-third of the regular seasonal price being offered—$1.10 a bag.
