Abraham Robinson Said To Be Opposed to Line Crossing His Farm

Sergeant Roy Clarke of Belleville, and Provincial Constable Percy McCoy of Madoc, members of the provincial police left for the farm of Abraham Robinson in Madoc township on Monday, and all this week will be on duty there where the hydro electric work started last fall. Some threats, it is alleged, were made that the line would not be allowed to pass over the farm owned by Robinson but the officers do not contemplate trouble.

ALTERCATION IS AIRED IN COURT

Milton Carr of Cavan Township Is Fined $2 and Costs by Magistrate Campbell

As a result of an altercation over a line fence in Cavan Township, a charge of assault was laid against Milton Carr, a railway employe in that district, and the case was aired in Port Hope Police Court this morning before Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell. The defendant was found guilty and was ordered to pay a $2.00 fine, together with the costs of the court. Herbert Scott, the complainant, was represented by Joseph Wearing of Peterboro, while J. A. O'Brien of that city, appeared for the accused.

Carr pleaded not guilty to the following charge: That Milton Carr of Cavan, on Wednesday, May 9th, did assault one Herbert Scott by attempting or threatening by act or gesture to apply force, to said Herbert Scott, contrary to section 291 of the Criminal Code.

Considerable evidence was produced in court over this quarrel, and a number of curious spectators occupied the gallery.

Went to Fix Fence

In his evidence, Herbert Scott told that he went to fix a fence between his property and the premises occupied by Milton Carr and owned by A. Elliott.

"Whose fence was the gate on?" "On the line next the road."

"Who is supposed to own the gate?"

"Mr. Elliott, I suppose."

Witness stated that Carr picked up a portion of a nail, about four feet in length and proclaimed that if he laid a hand on the fence, he would knock his brains out. Scott told that he procured an axe and said, "I'll take the fence down," and he did.

"You got away?" "Yes, I was afraid he would hit me."

Cross-examined by Mr. O'Brien, counsel for the defence, Scott finally admitted after considerable recollection, that he had been convicted on two assault charges in Peterboro. He said that Mr. Elliott, the owner of the property came up and said to leave the fence alone. He was agreeable with this, and drove away.

"What did you pick up the axe for?"

"To take the fence down."

"And not to assault Carr?"

"No."

"You did not need any protection?"

"I thought Carr would strike me."

"Were you afraid Carr would hit you when getting over the fence?"

"Yes."

"Did he try to hit you when getting over?"

"No."

Cecil Scott, young son of the plaintiff, was present when the alleged altercation occurred. He said they went to fix the fence. Carr said he would throw the plaintiff out and picked up a rail and said he would brain him. Carr held the rail in his hand and took his coat off.

Mrs. Scott, wife of the plaintiff, was called to the box, but could give little light on the affair.

Defendant Testifies

Milton Carr, a resident of Cavan, and who is employed on the railway section there, told of leaving for work about 7.15 on the day in question. He saw Scott and his boy coming in the lane. He asked Scott what he was going to do and he said he was going to tear the fence down and put it where it should be.

Witness stated there was a lot of swearing by Scott, and said, "Wait until I get the axe," and he came towards the fence. Carr told that he picked up a piece of board and stood his ground and waited. He never raised one end but Scott did not approach.

"Did you intend to hit him?" Mr. O'Brien asked.

"Not unless he came back with the axe."

Carr denied that he mentioned he would brain Scott.

Mrs. Carr, wife of the accused, heard the discussion and gave her version of the affair. She said her husband was not hot tempered and

PRAYER BOOK IS APPROVED

Vote Was 20 to 3—Must Now Face Legislative Committee—Controversy Rages

Debate on the new revised prayer book will probably not begin in the British House of Commons before the end of June, but controversy over the changes Thursday was raging.

The prayer book measure passed the first preliminary stage when the ecclesiastical committee of both houses voted 20 to 3 to allow it to proceed. The legislative committee must now approve it before it is submitted to the House.

The principal contenders in the controversy so far are Sir William Joynson-Hicks, home secretary, who opposes the revision and Right Rev. Arthur Foley Winnington-Ingram, bishop of London, who supports it. The bishop precipitated the argument by circularizing London members of parliament urging them to support the measure. The home secretary announced that passage of the measure would be far more grievously regarded throughout the country than its rejection would be.

Some Conservative members of parliament questioned the propriety of the home secretary's action in identifying himself so prominently with the opposition since he was a cabinet minister.

The bishop in his rejoinder asked if the opponents of the measure were trying to drive the Anglo-Catholics out of the Church of England.

"No one," he said, "wants to drive out those who are ultra-Protestant in their doctrine. Cannot the people on your side be generous enough not only to keep within the Church of England, but to make happy in the Church of England those to whose work and devotion we owe so much?"

"Your present policy, if successful, can only lead to the disruption of the Church of England, and this I feel sure, no one would deplore more than yourself."

END OF STRIKE IS PREDICTED

Hope Plumbers and Tinsmiths Will Resume Work On Monday

Today there was every indication that negotiations were likely to be reopened between the Master Plumbers' Association and the Plumbers' Union.

The whole situation which has arisen in labor circles has developed from the decision of the journeymen plumbers to go out on strike, on April 1, and there is no doubt that if negotiations are opened between the masters and men in this trade, and some agreement arrived at, the situation as it affects other building trades will automatically clear up.

In spite of the ultimatum delivered to the Building Trades Council by the Master Builders and Contractors, the plumbers and tinsmiths did not return to work Thursday morning, but notwithstanding this fact, there is a more conciliatory attitude apparent on both sides and it is hoped that by Monday the strikers may return to work.

In her opinion was not hot tempered on that occasion.

Albert Elliott, owner of the property was communicated with and arrived on the scene while Scott and Carr were arguing. He related that there was nothing out of the way when he was there.

Mr. O'Brien—"I would like to offer some character evidence in Mr. Carr's behalf."

"Oh," proclaimed Mr. Wearing, "that is ridiculous. You would think it was a murder charge."

At any rate, two or three witnesses took the stand and testified that Carr was always law-abiding, etc. Magistrate Campbell, in summing up the case, said it was an unfortunate affair that these two people out there had nothing else to do but mix things up. "The altercation doesn't amount to a great deal," said His Worship, "and is merely a tempest in a teapot."

Carr was fined $2.00 and costs, and no witness fees were allowed.

RAIN WORTH MILLIONS

Hon. John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture, has returned to his office in Queen's Park after a tour of several days in Western Ontario. The rain of Wednesday night and Thursday was "he states, a general one, quite heavy, and worth millions of dollars to the province."

"Seeding was all in," said Mr. Martin, "and the farmers were all waiting for the rain—even praying for it. The wheat was coming up unevenly and the pastures practically dried up. This soaking will do a world of good."

BLAMES WOMEN FOR SITUATION

Sir Gilbert Horne Thinks Their Presence in Industry Causes Unemployment

Sir Robert Horne, M.P., former chancellor of the Exchequer, eminent financier and industrialist, speaking at Glasgow recently attributed a large proportion of the unemployment in that country to the fact that there were more women in industry today than before 1914 and there had been much less migration from Great Britain since the Armistice than was usual previously. Sir Robert said that although there were as many persons in employment as before the war, and much that was encouraging in the statistics of trade and the increasing prosperity of certain industries, there were still over a million persons without employment. The first of the conditions he had mentioned must be accepted as permanent.

The second had led many people hopefully to look forward to solving the problem by means of emigration on a large scale. He had himself investigated this problem in a recent voyage to Australia and New Zealand. He had found that as a result of local problems of unemployment New Zealand had for the time being shut her doors to all except juvenile immigrants and the States affected in Australia were likely to suspend the acceptance of new adult citizens for some months to come. It might therefore be assumed that there would be no outlet in the Dominions for the larger portion of those at present unemployed. But there were no types of immigrants whom the Dominions welcomed so readily and whom they would gladly take in large numbers as boys under the age of 17.

Societies which helped in the work of emigration were grievously hampered for want of funds. "By the Empire Settlement Act of 1922 which I, as the Chancellor of the Exchequer was the means of passing," Sir Robert said, "the Exchequer is under the obligation to provide 3,000,000 pounds a year to aid suitable schemes of emigration, but this provision is clogged with the condition that the Treasury will only give half of the money required for any particular plan. Somebody else must furnish the other half. The result is that only a comparatively small portion of the Exchequer's money has ever been claimed. I am strongly of the opinion that the time has arrived to dispense with all such restrictions and to make Treasury grants for this purpose possible up to 100 per cent in order to carry out a program of emigration whose success is vital to the welfare of Britain and essential for the development of the Dominions."

The conditions which awaited the citizen who was breaking new land in the Dominion were much easier than those which confronted the earlier pioneers, Sir Robert said, and it was impossible to suppose that the call of new and adventurous life would not in our day still sound in eager ears and echo in ardent hearts. The chances of fame and fortune overseas, for the youth of character and industry were not less today than at any time in the past. Not all would gain glory or leave imperishable names, but they would, at least, have a share in the praiseworthy and patriotic endeavor to establish and extend the fortunes of British people throughout the world and to maintain and strengthen the beneficent power of the British Commonwealth of nations.

GRAFTON CHURCH CASE APPEALED

Presbyterians Still Seek To Recover Property From the United Church

John W. Aird, whose suit on behalf of himself and all other non-union members of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church at Grafton, for recovery of the church property from the United Church of Canada, was dismissed by Mr. Justice Rose on May 4, has entered an appeal at Osgoode Hall.

Aird's action was directed against Wm. H. Johnston, J. C. Hutchinson and John Underwood, elders of the United Church in Grafton, who had taken over the church property and manse after a majority vote favoring union. His contention was that the property was deeded by the late John Glover to the Presbyterian Church which "made the Westminster confession of faith the rule by which public worship and divine service is directed," and submitted that as this is not a rule of the United Church the provision of the will did not allow that church to hold it.

He submits that the judge erred in holding that the property was subject to the provisions of the United Church Act and in holding that a vote by the congregation on this subject was unnecessary. He also claims his lordship erred in holding that Aird was not a member of a church "observing the Westminster confession of faith" within the terms of the Glover trust deed. At the trial the judge held that the heirs of John Glover were not proven as heirs and for that reason the deed was not proven as valid. Aird submits that this was a surprise and the judge should have allowed the admission of the deed as an exhibit.

ronto, and also Osgoode Hall. He was called to the Bar in 1913, and had practiced law with his father ever since.

When the war broke out, he was the first officer from Belleville to enlist for active service, joining the Second Battalion at Valcartier as a Lieutenant. He went to France and rose to the rank of Major. Returning home, he was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel and was in command of the defense corps till the close of the war.

In politics he was a staunch Liberal and carried the standard of that party in two Provincial campaigns in West Hastings constituency in 1919 and 1923, being defeated in both contests by the present member, W. H. Ireland. He was also president of the Hastings Liberal Association. The late Mr. O'Flynn served as an Alderman for the city in 1915, and at the time of his demise was a valued member of the Board of Education.

THE GUIDE STORY

The two men were standing in a small nondescript room that Hal called "the den." The old man looked keenly at Hal, and the latter threw his head up with something of the manner of his own horse.

"I'll come, dad, if you will remember that it's a kindness to let a sick dog alone. I'm pretty hard hit, I confess. Miss Fenton told me the other evening she is engaged to be married. I am not going to whine over it—but, you understand?"

"The little flirt!" muttered the squire, his face twitching in sympathy for his boy's troubles, and his clear blue eyes looked dangerous.

"Not even you must say that," said Hal sharply. "I thought last night I'd go off and travel for a bit; but, then, after all, it's a bit cowardly not to face her; so I've made up my mind not to sulk in a corner any longer, but to fight it through; only—no sympathy here, or up at the house, do you see?"

"Right, lad," said the old man, holding out his hand. "I'll muddle them up at the house, and back you up, too, boy. I've to be at the Manor House at eleven to meet Kemp about this affair. He promised to set the wires going this morning. Plucky girl, that Miss Ransome. Took the loss of the best part of her valuables as though she'd lost sixpence! Your mother's a sensible woman, but if it had happened her, she would have been raving all over the place! I should be glad of your help there this morning, but I suppose I must do without you. Lesley's gone off to London for a week or so—some sudden freak or another, though your mother thinks Miss Ransome is at the bottom of it. But, there, women love making mysteries out of nothing."

"If you think I could be any good I'll come with you to the Manor House," Hal said. Squire Pett looked rather dubious, hesitated, and cleared his throat.

"All right, lad; but in all probability she will be there, remember."

"Naturally. There is no reason why we should not meet today as well as a month hence," answered Hal quietly, as they walked up to the house.

Wondering at the courage of his son, the squire said nothing, and within a few minutes the two were quietly trotting down the road, Hal mounted on one of his father's horses, and the squire jubilant over his prediction having come true, that the sharp frost had given place to mild weather.

On the road, they came suddenly upon Firefly, cycling toward the village. Of the three, she, wonderful to relate, showed the most embarrassment. Hal, whatever his feelings, looked calm and unruffled. When she jumped off the machine he reined in his horse, and spoke in his old manner.

"Good morning, Miss Fenton; can we do anything for you?"

"Good morning, Miss Fenton," the squire said, but in such a gruff tone of voice that she promptly realized the proposed riding lesson would probably not take place that morning.

"I want to tell you," she said, rather shamefacedly, then the light in Squire Pett's eyes restored her mental equilibrium and self-possession, and, with a laughing look at the grave face of one rider and the angry face of the other, she continued: "I am afraid our ride will have to be put off this morning, Mr. Pett for we are upset at the Manor House. One of the servants is ill, and we want Doctor Forrester. We sent for him early this morning, with no result; I mean he has not answered the note in person. Miss Granby is getting nervous, so I am going to find him."

"Would you like me to go to Woodlands for you?" Hal asked. "It would not take me long and the wind is a bit strong for riding."

"No, thanks; I like pedalling against a good strong wind," answered Firefly; and, throwing a glance at him which made him wonder why he should promptly feel like a culprit, instead of an aggrieved lover, the girl mounted her machine and rode off.

When she said that the Manor House was in a state of mental disturbance that morning, she spoke truthfully. Olwen was beginning to feel anxious and troubled, partly because Miss Granby had a restless night, and was consequently tired and upset, partly because she was being forced to the conclusion that her maid was ill, and partly because she herself was feeling a strange longing to hear Doctor Forrester's cheery voice.

He might be had tempered, aggravating, even perplexing, yet she thought he was a tower of strength in trouble or illness. Why had he not answered the urgent note she had sent him before eight o'clock that morning? If he had been out then, he must have returned in time to have answered it before now, nearly eleven o'clock.

THE IMPORTANCE OF STORES IN SPRING

The amount of surplus honey that a colony of bees can store depends upon the strength of its field force at the commencement of the main honey flow. The greater the number of bees available for field work when nectar is available the greater will be the harvest. The bees that are to gather the honey crop must be reared during the spring and in early summer, therefore, the object of the beekeeper during his period must be to provide conditions by which his colonies may produce the largest number of bees possible. In addition to having good queens, proper protection and sufficient room for brood production, each colony must have an abundant supply of food. It has been estimated that one comb of stores is required to produce one comb of brood and it requires approximately seventeen combs of brood to produce a force of 100,000 bees, which represent a real strong colony. It is quite apparent then that food is an important factor during the spring brood rearing period. Early fowling supply a certain amount of nectar but this amount is altogether insufficient to maintain maximum brood production and must be supplemented with food given by the beekeeper. No colony should have less than fifteen pounds of stores available at any time during the spring. Any shortage tends to retard brood rearing and this in turn affects the crop produced. Honey or sugar syrup can be given to make up any shortage that occurs, but never give honey from an unknown source for fear of disease.

The Merchandise Mart of Chicago, Twice the Size of the World's Largest Business Building. Cost $30,000,000.

GIGANTIC MERCHANDISE MART IN U.S. TO BE TWICE THE SIZE OF THE WORLD'S LARGEST BUSINESS BUILDING

Chicago is to have a gigantic Merchandise Mart housed in its own building, which will be twice the size of the largest business building in the world. This mammoth structure, two city blocks in length, 18 to 23 stories high, is planned for the service and convenience of merchandise buyers of the world. It will cost $30,000,000. Construction will begin immediately.

Within the walls of this huge edifice the retail merchants of the United States, Canada and foreign countries will be able to see, under one roof, hundreds of lines of the world's best merchandise.

The project will be the largest single development of "air rights"—the privilege of building over rail road tracks. The property of the new building, except for caissons, begins twenty-three feet above "datum."

This great Mart, which will house sales quarters and merchandise displays of several hundreds of the country's foremost manufacturers, wholesalers and importers will be located in the rapidly developing new river district, and will occupy a distinctly conspicuous position just across the street from Wacker Drive at Wells Street, where the southern facade of the structure will be visible for blocks. The site was formerly that of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway Company's passenger station. The building will extend 724 feet on Kinzie Street, 577 feet on the river front and 324 feet on Wells St., with a diagonal frontage facing Orleans and Franklin Streets. It will be set back from the river about 80 feet to accommodate a broad upper level drive extending from Wells to Franklin. The main entrance of the building will face the river and the drive.

The Merchandise Mart will have a total floor space of about 4,000,000 square feet as compared with slightly less than 2,000,000 square feet, which is the floor area of the Furniture Mart, the next largest building. Each of the eighteen main floors will have an area of more than 200,000 square feet.

On all floors of the Mart will be great corridors, with the appearance of boulevards, more than 650 feet in length, on either side of which will be the shops displaying their varied lines—veritable "business streets." These great corridors will be impressively treated architecturally and with the large space available it will be possible to house the selling activities and warehousing of many allied concerns on one floor, thus attaining the advantages of concentrated groupings.

Probably no building in the world will have such facilities for receiving and shipping merchandise as the new Merchandise Mart. The entire ground level below the street floor will be a modern freight station. Private tracks for incoming carload freight will extend under the centre of the building. The Chicago and Northwestern Railway will operate an inbound freight station for less than car load lots, as well as an outbound station, which will connect with all other roads through its new Proviso yards. The merchandise as it comes into this big freight station will be loaded into high speed conveyors and transported immediately to the exact floor and aisle of the merchant for whom it is intended.

FINE WEEK END BILL AT ROYAL

Action, Fun and Plenty of Variety in the Program—Capitolians Coming

Friday and Saturday patrons of the Royal Theatre will be well entertained this week, with one of their favorite stars at his best in the feature, a new serial, a delightful comedy and a novel athletic subject.

Tom Mix and Tony have never been better than they are in "Horseman of the Plains," a picture that is different from the ordinary run of western films, as its highlight is a cross-country race. Tom's new leading lady, Sally Blane, is a real beauty, while a negro comedian furnishes much laughter. Incidentally this will be Mix's last picture for a while, as he is now appearing in vaudeville.

The new serial, "Hawk of the Hills," has an outdoor setting and a fascinating story. It features those prime favorites, Allene Ray and Walter Miller, whose serials are the most popular ones produced. Among the different brands of comedies, there are none more popular than those of the Smith Family, whose latest laughter piece is entitled, "Smith's Pony," while a Grantland Rice Sportlight, "Amidst the Millions," completes the program.

On Monday and Tuesday, Al Stagg and his Capitolians will present their farewell revue, "Good-bye, Folks." This will be their twentieth appearance and they are sparing no effort to make it a memorable treat.

hour lead Andrew Payne of Claremore, Okla., holds over the field in C. Pyle's Bunion Derby.

Salo finished third in yesterday's 44.2 mile trek from Jamestown, N. Y., to Bradford, covering the distance in 7.49.01. Payne was fourth in 7.50.11.

The day's heat went to Sam Rich man of New York, who required but 6 hours 47 minutes and 39 seconds for the jump. Frank von Flue of Kernan, Cal., was second in 6.49.01.

The Derby is scheduled to end at Madison Square Garden, New York, May 26.

Louis Perrella of Albany, N.Y., finished in a tie for fifth pace with Phil Granville of Hamilton, and Seth Gonzales of Denver in 7.52.33. Perrella moved from sixth to fifth place in the standing when Giusto Umek of Italy, who was hampered by illness, dropped back with the trailers of the field.

Umek held sixth place only because he had an eleven hour lead over William Kerr of Minneapolis when they started.

Most of the runners took full advantage of the refreshing rain that beat down on the Allegheny foothills jogging easily on the lap to save their strained muscles for the final spurt into New York.

A Smart Ply Suit That Baffles The Warmest Weather

LITTLE JANE is the envy of every grown-up at the beach. So delightfully cool and comfortable, she plays from morning till evening along the shores without feeling the heat at all! Whether paddling in the cool water or digging shells from the sand, the short rompers and wide brimmed hat to match form ample protection from the sun. A tiny turned back collar and tie and patch pockets trim her extremely comfortable and smart play suit. Its brief straight legs, so characteristic of French rompers, afford opportunity for a healthy amount of tan and give ample room for the exercises that such an alive little person indulges in. Made of a sturdy washable cotton such as chambray, this outdoor costume for the littlest tot is ever so serviceable, too. (Copyright, 1928, by Butterick)

THE STORY OF TWO LITTLE SHOES

What could those little shoes tell us? If they had the power of speech? Where do the tiny feet wander? When out of mother's fond reach.

Over the dusty, white roadway, Pattering slowly to school; Loitering through the green meadow, Lingering, perhaps, by the pool.

Reaching the quaint little school-house, Tip-toeing up to the pegs, Then, like two pendulums swinging, Go the boy's sturdy brown legs.

While the small brain tries to grapple Grave problems of A, B and C, Restless feet anxious are waiting To follow the bird and the bee.

Homeward once more in the noon-tide, Bounding through garden and hall Glad to be finished with learning, Ready for marbles and ball.

Playing at horses and soldiers, Loud stamping with martial tread Two little feet growing weary, At last, must be tucked up in bed.

And the silent shoes standing silent, Here mother whispers a prayer—That her darling's feet keep always The path that is straight and fair.

Choking on piece of food, Amos Kelper, 87, died of strangulation at Stroudsburg, Pa.

Mrs. Sophie Peters, Chicago, died from burns received while drying her hair near gas oven.

Somersworth, N.H., man has a watch 350 years old, which is operated by chain, and is now going.

Spontaneous combustion caused loss by fire of two barns and 80 pigs on farm near Kewanee, Ill.

Ruth and Gehrig Homers

The Yankees ran their winning streak to seven straight games Thursday by taking the first of four engagements from the St. Louis Browns 4 to 3. The game was featured by Ruth's twelfth and Gehrig's sixth home run but these drives were matched by circuit blows from the bats of Lu Blue and Otis Brannon.

After the home run battle had ended in a draw, Crowder relieved Harold Wiltse with the bases filled in the 9th and forced the winning run home by walking Combs after Durst had struck out. Stanley Coveleskie went the route for the Yankees for the first time this year.

Leafs Idle

Although idle yesterday afternoon the Toronto Leafs lead in the International league race was increased by half a game when the Orioles swamped the Royals at Montreal and Newark defeated the Red Wings at Rochester in a 10 inning battle. The O'Hara-ites are now one and a half games ahead of Montreal but this lead may prove too slim in the series which opened at Rochester this afternoon. It is a four game set and the results will be awaited with interest.

Although retaining their hold on first place, the Leafs haven't exactly covered themselves with glory in the last nine games, winning only three when they were expected to ride roughshod over Jersey City and Reading. They will have to hit their stride and the ball as well, in this series against the strong Rochester team.

John Prudhomme, "Rip" Collins, Clarence Fisher and "Jess" Doyle are likely to work in the games across the lake and if their teammates can get going with the willow the Leafs should turn in two or three victories. In his present form, it is very doubtful if any team in the league can stop the winning streak of "Rip" Collins who has been victorious in five consecutive games, starting and finishing them all.

Baseball Practice

All baseball players, young and old, are asked to be out at the Town Park tonight for practice. Port Hope plays a scheduled engagement on May 24th which is less than a week away, and a large turnout tonight is expected.

For having a still, Felix Courneyea of Huntingdon Township was fined $200 and costs before Magistrate Casement of Madoc. On a charge of having liquor he was also fined $100 and costs. All fines were paid. Also at Bancroft, before Magistrate Jarman of Madoc. Wm. Collins and Wm. Whitefoot were each fined $200 and costs for having a still. The men took the six months in the reformatory, in default. Whitefoot was found guilty of the theft of a copper boiler, part of the still, and was given three months, to run consecutively and further indeterminate sentence of not more than two years less one day.
