ENFORCEMENT OF LAW AND ORDER

Held

The meeting which was announced from the various pulpits on Sunday for the better enforcement of law and order, in Port Hope was held in the office of the Department of Agriculture, Wednesday evening, April 15th, and about thirty-five citizens were present, Mr A Fulford was voted to the chair and Mr J C Honey elected secretary pro-tem.

Mr H Fultord explained that a meeting was held in St. Paul's Sunday School Hall a couple of weeks ago, at which the Rev T D Mc-Cullough acted as chairman. Messrs B Olver, H Fulford and J Whetstone were appointed a committee to arrange for this meeting and accordingly notices were sent to each minister to be read from the pulpit last Sunday. The object was to organize a citizen's league.

Rev A H Going said he was one who had suggested the move and he had done so through certain cond:tions which had come to his notice and to the notice of many citizens. He was talking to a couple of men on the corner one day when a man drove by with a very fine horse. Upon enquiring who this man was he was informed that the man in question ran Port Hope. He didn't like the sound of it, neither did he like the idea of any man running a town. Many towns and cities have leagues as proposed here and all had good effect upon the town. He thought every town should have some organization of this kind for the betterment and uplifting of the place. The idea was to see that the laws were enforced, to back up the men who were endeavoring to

Rev Going moved that this Asso ciation have under consideration the moral interests of the town and the enforcement of law and order in Port Hope. Rev McCullough did not consider the resolution broad enough. He thought it should include the securing of legislation that we did not enjoy at the present time. Rev Going told of the Citizens League in Hamilton and when the question of license reduction came up a meeting was called and a campaign committee organized for that purpose.

Rev Elliott thought it would be well to enunicate the object of the Association. If you set out on any of the law, as that law exists now, there will be difference of opinion.
Different men have different views. For instance, you start on the policy of reduction of liquor licenses. Good citizens have different views on this question. But it you say that the License Act is being vio at ed we all agree that it should be strictly enforced.

Mr Charles Scott thought it to be the duty of the league to bring out with the support of the association.

Rev Going stated that Mr Hayden was the first one to suggest the formation of such a society.

It was finally decided to elect a Committee with instructions to bring in a report recommending a President, Sec-Treas and five members for the executive.

Mr H Fulford said a citizen had approached him and offered a splendid suggestion along a certain line as soon as this society was formed. Mr Fulford took pleasure in nominating this gentleman, Mr Reginald Hayden, as a member of Rev J A Elliott and Rev Father O'Sullivan were nominated but both declined.

It was suggested by J S La Flair that Father O'Sullivan suggest a man from his congregation to act on the Committee.

Rev Father O'Sullivan pointed out that until the ways and means of the Association were more definitely set forward he would not act and in view of this he would not care to suggest any person from his congregation.

The Committee appointed to recommend the officers will meet next Wednesday evening and report at a meeting on April 30th.

BUTCHERS' LICENSES

and Why?

Does the Town Council intend to collect the butchers' licenses for 1914? Formerly the license was always collected at the first of March but as yet the collector has not made his rounds. We understand he has instructions not to do so. A week ago Saturday the two butchers at the market were selling meat by the pound, but were instructed to discontinue until such time as the by-law was passed. This proposed by-law was introduced last year and voted down so it seems strange that the Council has neglected to collect the usual licenses from the butchers.

A SHADY POOL GAME SHOWN UP IN COURT

$125 Was Bet on a Game Which Had All the Appearance of a "Frame-Up." - Something Went Wrong

And the Biter was Bit

Peterboro Examiner There arrived from Toronto a week or more ago, two expert pool players, who wished to pick up some easy money from the innocents abroad in this fair little town of ours. Just how well they succeeded was brought to light in the Police Court this morning. After sizing up the situation they finally picked upon a local young man as a side partner in the effort to walk away with the cash. The man they picked upon is no mean pool-player himself, but the slick young man from Toronto could close one eye, use his left hand, and still spot him 50 balls in a 100-ball game. However, it was arranged that the local young man would win, and he was given $120.00 to which he added $5.00 of his own money to bet, and the Toronto artist, who was ably assisted by his friend, hustled out to get another local man to back him to the extent of $125.00, and who would, it was supposed, lose the money by the local young man win-

However, the local young man not caring to have $125.00 leave the city these hard times, managed in some way to have what is known as the "double-cross" worked on the two Toronto boys, and agreed that he would lose the game that it was fixed he would win.

The Toronto man's money was bet against himself, and instead of $125.00 leaving the city, a like amount has been left by him in exchange for as many dollars' worth of experience he hardly expected to find here.

Peterboro, April 14.-About 9.30 o'clock this evening the mutilated body of a young man, whose name is thought to be Frank Lennox, was found on the middle span of the C.P.R. bridge which crosses Authors' Club in New York one east of the station here. The body intended going east. His home is thought to be in Tweed.

A man, supposed to have been with him, was arrested by P. C. Reid, but declined to say anything about the occurrence. He is believed to have come from Millbrook.

Ford, Ont., April 16, 1914 .- "It takes the combined outputs of the Mortgages Valued at $175,988 five next largest motor car manufacturers in this country to equal Ford sales," P. L. D. Perry, managing director of the Ford Motor Company of Manchester, England, writes in an interesting article on the growth of Ford business in England in the April issue of Ford Times, a monthly magazine published by the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited.

Mr. Perry tells of the organiza-October, 1909. He talks of the be built in Alaska. prejudice against American automobiles which formerly existed, saying that the American built Ford was regarded at first in much the same way as was the American built bicycle, impracticable for English users.

He describes the many contests and races in which the Ford proved its merit to the British public and names as the turning point of the public opinion the year 1911, when Henry Alexander, a dealer, drove a Ford to the top of Ben Nevis-4,600 feet-the highest point in of Bowmanville. "It was in 1905. The only means of conveyance was the horse-drawn hansom. The advent of the automobile suggested the possibility of a change. Many experiments were made with various forms of more or less weird vehicles, but it was left to the Ford to place on the streets of London that form of conveyance which has since come into general use. The chaffeurs of these original taxis had to be recruited from the ranks of cabmen bred for generations upon the knowledge of London, and it is worthy of special note that the simplicity of the Ford control, than as now, was such that these cabmen could and did pick up the art of driving with almost no difficulty.'

"With the opening of the Manchester factory, which took place in 1911, we produced and sold the first year more than three thousand cars, while last year more than six thousand cars came through, and were purchased in the United Kingdom alone. BRITISH COLUMBIA WELOMES RAILWAY BUILDING IN ALASKA

Despatches received at Grand Trunk Pacific headquarters at Montreal state that President Wilson's action in signing a bill authorising the expenditure of $35,000,000 for the construction of a railway in Alaska has been received in Prince Rupert and Prince George with great satisfaction. Both of these rapidly growing towns are likely to benefit by the development of the great territory to the north of them. MANY WILD DUCKS ARE FLYING NORTH

Mayor Buller states that he never saw so many wild ducks, nor saw them flying so low as those that flew past him in the vicinity of Mc-Kenty's Bay up in the Buckhorn Lake country, where he spent Tues-day looking after his wood supply. The Simple Life

In the smoking car the conversation turned to the merits and demerits of various ways of preserving health. One stout, florid man held forth with great eloquence on the subject.

Look at me! he said. Never a day's sickness in my life, and all due to simple food. Why, gentlemen, he continued, from the age of twenty to that of forty, I lived an absolutely simple regular life-no effeminate delicacies, no late hours, no extravagances. Every day, in fact, summer and winter, I was in bed regularly at nine o'clock, and up again at five in the morning. I worked from eight to one, then had dinner-a plain dinner, mark my words; after that an hour's exercise; then -

REGULATIONS FOR BAKERS POORER EACH YEAR

Present Budget Excuse For Borrowing, Says Mr. Robb.

AIKINS FOR FREE WHEAT.

Brandon Member Finds Himself Forced to Solit His Policy In Present Debate-Liberal M. P. for Huntingdon Condemns Building of Drillsheds and Battleships as a Cure for Hard Times.

OTTAWA, April 18 .- I a vigorous arraignment of the budget yesterday in the House of Commons James A. Robb said he had listened to three annual budgets from Hon. W. T. White. Each one had been more gloomy and discouraging than its predecessors. In 1912 the Minister of Finance had presented a rosy state-ment, owing to the sound administration of his predecessor and the splendld trade conditions Mr. Fielding's administration had developed. In 1913, after a full year of the Borden Administration, the pronounce-ment was not so good, w' ile the resent budget of 1914 was "an excuse for continued borrowings and unsettled trade conditions."

Mr. Robb (Lib., Huntingdon) in resuming the budget debate, said that the Borden Government had no remedy for hard times except to build drillsheds and give away Dread-noughts. The Finance Minister had stated that the Government could not hope to borrow money for years to come at less than 4 per cent. If that were the case why did it not pay 4 per out. to depositors in the postal savings and Government savings banks? If money was worth 4 per cent why pay ur own people less? The Conservatives believed in taxing everything The Liberals favored giving the farmers a wider market.

Mr. Aikins (Con., Brandon) said there was no effective argument, in his opinion, against the demand of the western farmers for free wheat.
"If the interest of the west," Mr.

Alkins continued, "are to be sacrific-ed to the interests of the eastern milters and the railways, then it is the duty of the Gove-nment to bonus the flour milling industry in the western provinces. For this purpose milling machinery should be admitted free of duty, and power be furnished the millers at reduced rates by the Dominion Government.

The Laurier Government, the member for Brandon continued, had neglected the west, while endeavoring to make the eastern people believe that they were making great sacrifices for the benefit of the country west of Lake Superior. That Government had only expended about $1,000,000 all of the National Transcontinental which ran through the Province of Manitoba. True, it had loaned ten million dollars to the Grand Trunk Pacific, but that money would be repaid. Mr. Buchanan (Lib., Medicine Hat)spoke earnestly in favor of free wheat. He said the population of Southern Alberta had become stationery and that settlers were leaving

OUR STORY

K**************

Cantinued from last week.

"Now, when I mentioned the noon, as one of my proofs that the man I have known for the last eight years in Australia was really Raymond Freymuth, do you know what his answer was?"

Neither of the ladies spoke, but the Frenchman saw Hermione lean toward him; and, in the perfect stillness of the evening he distinctly heard Mrs Freymuth's quickened breathing.

"Mr Cartwright said to me, 'This is a most extraordinary thing, Mr Lemaistre; for if what you say is correct, Doctor Deane was the one person who had it in his power to identify Raymond Freymuth beyond all doubt whatever; and yet the doctor was the man who brought Freymuth here to my office, directly after his return, and in a matter of speaking, stood sponsor for him."

The girl gave a short, sharp, little cry, and her face dropped forward into her hands This, then, was what his avoidance of her had meant; this was why he had shrunk so painfully from her offer of help on that memorable morning when he had come up to Pinehurst with the cousin just home from Australia; this was why her requests to be allowed to help with the sursing of his sick family had been rejected so persistently. Evil-doing was not natural to him-he was not hardened in it-and, in his sensitive horror of his own wickedness he had felt that the presence of the woman he had wronged so bitterly must bring a curse upon him and his.

"Is the world coming to an end?" Mrs Freymuth demanded, after a pause, her tremulous voice breaking the silence with a curious pathos as it travelled out from the darkness of the room. "Is nothing real? First, Pinehurst is lost to us: then Rav turns out to be not Ray; now we are asked to believe that one of the best men in the world is a swindler! I feel as if everything were slipping away from me - as if I must wake up presently and discover that I have been dreaming.

"There is no getting away from the fact that Doctor Deane must have known of this imposture," resumed Mr Lemaistre. "When all those years ago, Ray went to bid him 'Good-by,' he made some joking allusion to the scar; told Ray that he would carry it to his grave, and advised him, if ever his identity was in doubt, to have the scar photo graphed, send him a copy of it, and he-the doctor - would always be something wonderful has happened, able to swear to his own trade-mark. It was the most remarkable scar."

Hermione rose slowly, and stood, straight, tall, and slim, on the path- as others. Monsieur, I can bear way before Mr Lemaistre, her face looking very pale a bove her black dress in the weird gray light.

"What you have told us has untion of ways and means, to-night," she said; and then, apparently strong I am! You struck by something in his quick, quiet way of turning to bid her "How can I know the supply "How can I know for the trouble you have taken for us, dear friend, or that we feel the smallest doubt of you or your word. I almost wish we could," she continued, as they went together round me feel sore and sorry. To-morrow I shall be myselt again, and if you will come early, we will go into with the scar on his arm is not dead, matters in a proper businesslike way. Great Heaven!

She stopped suddenly, and gripped her companion's arm, at the same time uttering a stifled scream. In the gateway, with his head a little forward in an attitude which | ful as her own. suggested eager listening, stood the tall man who had attracted Ada's notice at the railway station. Before the girl could turn the Frenchman's attention from herself, the stranger had moved away quickly from the gate and disappeared toward the village. Mr Lemaistre, a good deal surprised at her agitation, lingered for a few minutes to learn the why and the wherefore of it; and, when he heard, he laughed gently at her for her nervousness. "What is it, then?" he asked in a spirit of raillery. "May not a poor man stop to admire the beauty of this lovely little place without your tmagining at once that he is some mysterious conspirator?" A little ashamed of her agitation, Hermione also tried to laugh, and returned to the discussion of their plans for the morrow. But she could not shake off the half-superstitious feeling which the appearance of the strange man had caused her

It was nearly dark when Mr Le-maistre bade the girl a final "Good night;" but even the stirring events story to Mr Cartwright this after- of the day were not over, for, as she shook hands, her fingers tightened spasmodically around his, and she whispered:

"He is there again! Look! In the shadow of the trees on the other side of the road!"

The Frenchman watched for an instant, until the tall, slightly bent figure moved out from the shadow and was outlined against the patch of stronger light in the northwest

Then he gave a cry of exceeding wonderment, doubt, and joy, all combined, yet each plainly recognizable, and dashed across the road after the stranger in such a state of uncontrollable excitement that Hermione caught her breath in sudden terror, and leaned, faint and dizzy, with fast-beating heart and shaking limbs, against the gate post, wondering, asking, doubting, questioningshe knew not what.

CHAPTER XXIV.

AFTER LONG YEARS.

When Hermione, still leaning against the gate in the silent dusk of the June night, recovered a little from the state of bewilderment and wonder into which the Frenchman's excitement had thrown her, she heard an approaching footstep on the same side of the road on which she was standing. Bending forward with she hardly knew what mad idea in her still startled mind, she saw the short figure of Mr Lemaistre coming hastily toward her, but that of the tall man with the stoop - was nowhere to be seen.

When the Frenchman came up to her he stopped, and stood looking at her in a breathless kind of way, apparently too excited to speak. In silence he took both her hands. Each could see the other's agitation, and each felt the tremulousness of the other as they stood speechless for a moment, gazing at each other hand in hand.

"Come, mademoiselte," said Mr Lemaistre, atter a minute or so; 'you must not stay here a moment longer. Let me take you in to your mother!"

But, when he would have led her indoors, the girl retused to budge. "Mr friend," she said to him gently, with a queer little laugh, which was almost a sob, "do you know how oddly you are behaving? I and you are trembling as if you had had a shock. Ah, do not mistake me! There are joyful shocks as well it!" She plucked her hands from

"How can I know? How can I mother "Good night," she added be sure?"he asked anxiously. "You as they all laughed-"how did you hastily, "You must not think that have already gone through so much we are anything but grateful to you to-night! . If you faint, I shall not easily forgive myself." "Then I will tell the news to all?" you!" Hermione whispered, pressing her hands close - oh, so close ! together, and leaning forward until have known it before, when I saw his face this afternoon. The man somewhere while you break the news to me!"

The Frenchman made no answer eyes that shone with a light as joy-

"Ah, surely Heaven is good to me!" she cried; and, turning swiftly, she ran out of the gate, calling softly, "Ray, Ray! Where are you? My love! Oh, my love, come to me! breaks with the fullness of its joy!"

Mr Lemaistre listened just a moment-until he heard an exclamation in a deeper voice; then he turned his face toward the house and crept carefully on his toes-as if anything short of an earthquake would have 'disturbed those others just then ! - along the path and round the house to patient Mrs Freymuth, who was beginning to think that her daughter had forgotten her altogether.

The old lady looked a little surprised to see the Frenchman back again so late, but, after a second glance, the vivid joy that lit up his face caught her attention.

"What is it?" she inquired hastily. "Something is the matter! How gently; "she is happier at this moment than she ever hoped to be in this world again."

"There is only one event that would cause her to be so, Mr Lemaistre!"

"Well, that one event has happened!" he told her. "Ah," Mrs Freymuth remarked, after she had been persuaded into believing this last and crowning marvel-"I knew that something very extraordinary must have happened to make 'Mione forget my soup!" "Your soup!" exclaimed the lively Gaul, springing to his feet with a gay laugh. "Since I have robbed you of your cook, I shall take her place madame. I excel in soups. Ask Ray when he comes in;" and without paying the least attention to her remonstrances, he hurried off power of the cruel witch woman, into the little kitchen, where she and restore them at one touch of heard him presently giving his orders to the amused, if rather scangreatness and glory!"

it I should perchance humiliate you before your friends." dalized, Bertha.

When, in about ten minutes' time Mr Lemaistre returned, with one of Hermiene's large aprons on, bearing the daintily prepared soup, and with a serviette correctly disposed in garcon fashion over his arm, the greetings were already over, and Ray and Hermione were talking with a certain amount of composure to the elder lady.

The laughter over the Frenchman's appearance gave just the needed touch of relief to the situation, for it brought them down from their strained mental exaltation and set them at their ease at once.

"That was a near squeak you had this last year, my friend," remarked the Frenchman.

Ray smiled back at him cheerfully. "Very near!" he admitted. "In fact, there was a general impression among the people there that I was dead. They even sent a report of my disease down to Sidney in answer to some inquiries that were being made, and when I was strong enough to crawl out into the sunshine again, a month or so afterward folks were quite indignant with me for giving lie to their report."

"You haven't pulled round again

as quickly as you ought."
"No, I know — that was what brought me back. You see, I hadn't you there, Joe, to coax and bully and cheer me. As month after month passed, and I got weaker rather than stronger, a sudden homesickness, a longing to see the dear old place and the dearer faces, grew so strong upon me that I couldn't hold out any longer against it. I began to think that, if I delayed my return much longer, I should possibly not come at all." "Fudge!" cried Mr Lemaistre abruptly. "It was heart hunger that was keeping you down. Well, Miss Hermione will see after that part of your diet now! You'll be quite another man in a month, and, can't see you very plainly, but I can if you find the first winter or two tell by the tone of your voice that trying, why, you must do as the trying, why, you must do as the other Mrs Raymond Freymuth did known of the best of people, com--go to Mentone!"

"Ah, there will be trouble in that quarter!" Ray said, turning to Hermione with an amused look. "That strongly assertive lady will not give tears - "see how composed and hurst," on it. I began to wonderstrong I am! You need not fear to it she was Mrs Raymond Freymuth, who was I?"

"Tell me, Ray," said Hermione, come to know that we lived here? And why aren't you more curious to know how it is that we are here at

"Oh, I got all the particulars from the lawyers! Seeing that there was a very real and tangible Mrs Rayclaiming me as well as my name, hand went up caressingly to Hermione's soft brown hair, "but I beyond looking back at her with cared to have anything to do with such a heap of remains, she had the right to the first refusal, you know. Well, I went to the lawyers and sent in my card, and when I followed it, the man-a new fellow-lookat me as if he believed I was a ghost. Instead of doing the civil in Come to me! Come before my heart the usual way, the first thing he said was, 'Will you show me your right forearm?' Then it all camehow you had been there all the afternoon before, Joe, my dear old man; how you all believed me dead; how there had been another Ravmond in the field; how his widow was in possession, and you others were keeping body and soul together as well as you could on a mere pittance, and all the rest of the extraordinary story. Well, I had something to eat, and came on here and put up at the George, hoping to catch you, but you had just left for Mulberry-tree Cottage. So I waited till I thought it was dark enough to hide me even from your eyes, Joe, and then I came and stood at the gate and listened to the murmur of strange you look! Where is your voices, and then-then I was any vulgar curiosity, and are not

It has been my pride that has kept me away, 'Mione, my own! It never occurred to me that uncle would leave a farthing to me; and how could I come back to you, thinking myself a positive pauper?"

"Instead of which," she answered gently, more glad at this moment than she had ever been that she had persuaded her uncle into making Ray his heir, "you come back, like the prince in the fairy story, just at the right time, rich and powerful, to deliver your poor, faithful princess and her lovely old mother from the Ray drew her gently to him and kissed her with a tender pride. "Did I flatter her, foe?" he asked. "Is she not everything and more than I described her?" The Frenchman smiled and shook his head in an odd, wistful little fashion, as if he could say a great deal on the matter if he chose, but was restrained by considerations of told me," Ray continued, "that only expediency.

almost amounted to a warning. She saw in a moment that something more than ordinary politeness had prompted this early visit. Besides, "that detestable Hermione" was looking extravagantly happy; and the man with the keen gray eyes, too, who watched her so closely from the background - who and what was he? There was something enough to ring the bell marquis?" unpleasant coming, Ada felt sure, and consequently she proceeded to act on the defensive.

"I am not in the habit of granting private interviews to absolute strangers," she answered, with a hauteur which was curiously unbecoming because so palpably assumed. "You can say what you have to say here. My friends are above pounced upon first by one and then likely to overhear, unless you raise

Once more Ray bowed very gravely, and signed to Lemaistre to bring a chair for Hermione-a proceeding which Ada observed with a stony stare of astonishment, for she had not invited the visitors to be seated. She waited to hear the news that this dignified man, had to communicate, but still stood, thus conveying her intention that the interview should not last long.

Before he began, Ray glanced at the two people at the tar end of the Ada flashed a vindictive look at Hermione, and the sudden pallor of her skin was visible under all Felice's artistic toilet preparations, while the sickening fear at her heart set her with an air of languid surprise, lips trembling and made speech difficult.

"I neither understand nor wish room to meet the trio. "How dare you!" exclaimed the infuriated woman, following him as he approached the startled strangers, and placing herself between him and them. "Marquis, will you ring the bell?"

But neither the "marquis" nor his companion moved. They, too, had evidently taken alarm from Ray's quietly confident manner, and were inclined to look upon their hostess as something akin to a swindling adventuress. This was the crowning point of Ada's humiliation. "How dare you traduce me to my I'll make you - ah, thank goodness, here is somebody to take my part !" she cr'ed, breaking into hysterical tears as Puttick opened the door and announced: "Doctor Deane!"

As the doctor entered the room, Hermione and Lemaistre moved toward him with a simultaneous ejaculation of relief; but he appeared not to see them. He stood for a and then moved forward to the weeping woman, now standing in the center of the room.

"What on earth is the matter, Ada?" he asked, with a passing has happened to upset you like this? What is it?" he added, with a helpless look in Ray's direction.

Ray, however, did not answer; he did not seem to know that he had been spoken to, but stood by the sobbing woman and looked at the doctor with a stern, questioning gaze.

Ada, misconstruing Ray's silence, ook sudden courage.

"Ah, he is silent enough now you have come!" she cried. "I believe it is a fraud from beginning to end! It is easy for him to come here, with his carefully coached backers, and frighten a poor, defenseless woman; but he is dumb as soon as he is faced by a man."

The doctor paid no attention to his sister-in-law's abuse. His gaze rested immovably upon Ray's face; there appeared to be something in the sourowful, earnest regard of this tall man with the dark eyes which seemed to hold Doctor Deane spellbound. Some instinct drew the others round, though still at a distance, until the two men and Ada formed the center of observation.

"This gentleman, whose name I do not know," she continued volubly, gathering hope every moment from Ray's continued silence, and unconscious that nobody was paying the slightest attention to her, owing to the absorbed interest in the two men, "has come here with some extremely absurd story about a disinherited cousin impersonating husband was the outcast, and that had broken his engagement. he himself is, in fact, the inheritor. But I don't think he will venture to repeat the story to any one who is as well versed in the family history

"Ada paused abruptly, impelled by the tortured horror she saw in. her brother-in-law's eyes to turn and look at the man by her side.

Ray was unbuttoning the wrist band-the right-hand one - of his shirt, but not looking at what he was doing, for his eyes were still fixed in sorrowful sternness upor Doctor Deane's. He fumbled slightly with the fastening of his shirt sleeve, and during that short pause the doctor's quick, sharp breathing was the only sound to be heard in the room.

"Doctor Deane will surely be the last person in the world to deny my identity," he said slowly and quietly, when the sleeve was at last free, and he began to bare his arm, "for he himself set the mark upon me which must always put it beyond question! What do you say, sir? Do you deny your own handiwork? Are you not prepared to swear that the man who bears that scar is Raymond Freymuth?"

Again there was a pause, while, moved by curiosity, all but Mr Lemaistre and the doctor drew nearer to the bared outstretched arm.

Doctor Deane passed one hand arpidly across his face, as if he would lessen the awful rigidity of his features.

"It is true," he muttered, uttering each word laboriously; as if the mere effort of speech distressed him horribly-"what you say is absolutely true. You are Raymond Freyyour influence to persuade her to muth-the other was Leopold; but Miss Brown?" "Without the lemon,

> "Come," ejaculated the Frenchman, pulling Ada away and pushing Hermione in front of him-"come! This is no sight for ladies!"

> > CHAPTER XXVI. FINAL SETTLEMENTS.

Although he insisted upon being taken to his own house the moment he recovered consciousness, it was some weeks before the unhappy doctor was sufficiently well to stand the mental distress inseparable from an interview with the people he had so wronged But during that time much had been settled and arranged to the complete satisfaction of the entire neighborhood.

One thing was, Hermione Freymuth's long-delayed wedding was fixed for the second week in July. She was to be married from Mulinvited guests were to be the Pentony's, the squire-who was to give away the bride-and Mr Lemaistre, Ray's "best man."

"We will do the entertaining when we come back," the girl said, in reply to the never-ending reproaches of her friends. "The fact is that Ray is not equal to the excitement a big wedding would entail upon him. He is deeply touched by the reception you have moment in the open doorway, with all given him, but I'm afraid a public an expression of the most unlimited | display of feeling just now would be wonder on his white, haggard tace, more than he could stand. He invited the boy to jump in the buggy, go to his home and have some refreshments before finishing his job, but the Swede said: No! I don't tank my fadder he lak it. After some urging he was driven to lunch at the doctor's home. But every once in a while he would break out with: I don't tank my fadder he lak it. The doctor lost all patience with him and said: I'd like to know what difference it makes to your father whether you are here taking lunch, or down there pitching hay. Does Away With the Entrance Examinations

The Chatham Board of Education has decided to do away, in part, with the entrance examination. For some time the trend of thought among modern educationists has been directed along this line of abolishing the entrance ex-amination and of passing pupils to the High School the same as they are promoted from one room to another in the public schools.

The entrance examination is not always a fair test of a child's ability as a student, and the results are not always an indication of a pupil's fitness to be promoted to the High School. A clever child may be of a nervous disposition, and may not do justice to the papers, especially it the mind is worked up to an exaggerated realization of the importance of the examination. A ild may be ill during the time the examinations are held. The excessive heat of the midsummer season when the examinations are usually held, has its effect upon the students, and altogether the examination is viewed with disfavor among those who have given the matter study, and whose experience has brought them into contact with specific instances where the examination has not worked out successfully as a fair and impartial test of the student's ability.

In the future the entrance to the High School will be determined on the record of the pupil during the school year. Those obtaining a certain high percentage during the term will be passed to the High School without an examination, while the doubtful ones will be given a chance through writing on the examination. The entrance examination will not be abolished entirely, but it will be held only for those pupils whose ability is in doubt as a result of the examinations during the year in the public school.

It is expected that there will be no trouble in getting the new ideaintroduced in Chatham. CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY

Mr. Beales, Counties Agent, Has Resigned

A meeting of the Finance Comsent did not warrant its continuation and Mr. W H Beales the inspector, at once handed in his resignation, which was accepted, though with much regret on the part of those most interested in the work. No definite plan has been outlined for future work, but it is probable that each local branch will endeayor to attend to cases in its own immediate neighborhood, as was done before the Counties' Society was organized.

This morning Mr. Beales handed

"To the members and friends of the Children's Aid Society of Northumberland and Durham.

"I wish to take this opportunity of thanking you for the interest you have taken in the attempt to place this much-needed work on a selfsustaining basis in the united counties, and to offer a word of explanation as to the circumstances which make it necessary to allow the matter to stand over for the present.

"When the question of a counties agent was first broached to the Port Hope Society, it was understood that the Government would make a substantial grant towards the expenses. Also, that a ready response would be met with from the municipalities. On this understanding, Port Hope Society undertook to act as an organizing centre. After a careful canvass of the counties, however, I have become convinced that it would take from nine months to a year to educate the people in the out-lying district as to the need of supporting this work.

Owing to certain changes in the Department at Toronto, also, it was found impossible to secure a government grant. This would mean that the Port Hope and Cobourg branches of the Counties' Society must assume the whole cost of organization for at least six months, when support from some of the municipalities might be expected. Upon laying the matter before the officers of the Society, it was decided that the burden would be too heavy to assume. Failing a substantial guarantee that the finances would be forthcoming to carry on the work, I was compelled to hand and Twenty Wounded.

YERA CRUZ IS TAKEN MAAS IN RETREAT

American Losses Are Four Dead | Mexican General Put Up a Stube

News of Fight In Seizure of Customs Port Comes From Admiral Fletcher and Causes Consternation Among Republican Senators . Who Held Up Resolution Justifying Speedy Action,

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 22 .-Four United States marines killed and twenty wounded.

These are the known casualties which accompanied the landing of United States forces from the fleet of Rear Admiral Frank F. Fletcher at Vera Cruz, Mexico, and the seizure of the customs house there last evening.

The casualties may be greater. Admiral Fletcher in his report of the landing stated that desultory firing from house tops and streets by Mexican federal soldiers was in progress.

Admiral Fletcher added that the guns of the naval transport Prairie were shelling the Mexicans out of their positions. It is presumed here that the Mexicans are retreating up the line of the railroad which runs to Mexico City. Admiral Fletcher will not attempt to pursue the Mexicans. He will establish his base at Vera Cruz and hold it. The foregoing is the initial step and first cost in the act of reprisal against Gen. Victoriano Huerta, dictator of Mexico, for his indignities to the United States.

What the next step will be whether one of war or just a mere seizure of the customs house and the holding of the same, only events can determine. In the light of the attack from the Huertaist forces the next step may be actual war, at least with one Mexican faction.

The news that Admiral Fletcher had landed a force of marines at Vera Cruz and seized the customs house there was received by Secretary of the Navy Daniels at six o'clock. The despatch stated:

"Tuesday, in face of an approaching norther, landed marines and sail-ors from the Ctah, Florida and Prairio and seized customs house. Mexican forces did not oppose landing, but opened fire with rifle and artillery after our seizure of custom house. Prairie shelling Mexicans out of their positions. Desultory firing from housetops and streets. Hold custom house and section of city in vicinity of wharves and consulate. Casualties four dead and twenty wounded."

When this statement had been is-sued Secretaries Daniels and Garrison left the White House.

"I hope it is all over," said Mr. Garrison. "I think they fired to save their faces in retreat. I do not expect ny more." : Startling was the news contained in the despatch even to those officials who were familiar with the admin'stration's plans and were prepared to receive such tidings, and despite the ontinued circulation of reports throughout the military departments of the Government after two o'clock esterday afternoon that something big had happened in Mexican waters.

Immediately the Congressmen took the news to the capitol, after which there were hurried conferences. With this information went the report that President Wilson did not care what Congress did with the resolution which was introduced in the House Monday which he desired should be adopted that night, and which was Brer. Wilson is to be congratulated Republican members. Consternation for his enterprising spirit and his seemed to strike those members reof the resolution in the Senate. It dawned upon them that they had not taken the President's counsellors at was on its way to Huerta on the Hamburg-American steamer Ira-quant, and that the seizure of the customs house at Vera Cruz before prevent that shipment of arms and ammunition from being delivered.

President Wilson, they admitted, did know this, as well as the fact that the arms, while going to Huerta, from a German port and from a German firm, were American made.

Landing at Vera Cruz Was Peaceful

Was Refused by Gen. Maas and Fighting Began-All Important Points Now Occupied by United States Sailors.

VERA CRUZ, April 22. - Vera Cruz last night was in the hands of forces from the United States warships, but the occupation of the port was not accomplished without loss of American lives.

Four Americans, bluejackets, and marines, were killed by the fire of the Mexicans, and twenty-one fell wounded. The Mexican loss is not known, but it is believed to have been heavy.

The waterfront, the Customs House, and all important plers, including those under the terminal works, from which extend the rail-ways to the capital, have been occu-pied. All the territory around the American Consulate is strongly pat-rolled and detachments hold other sections of the city.

The Mexican commander, Gen.,
Gustavo Maas, offered a stubborn resistance to the American advance, and for many hours there was fighting in the streets. Toward nightfall it was reported that the main body of the Federal garrison was in retreat to the westward.

Rear-Admiral Fletcher, in command of the United States warships, prefaced his occupation of the port by a demand, through the American Consul, W. W. Canada, for its sur-render. Gen. Maas promptly declined to accede to this demand, and shortly afterward ten whaleboats were sent off from the side of the transport Prairie, loaded with marines. These boats effected a landing in the neighborhood of the Customs House before noon, and a few min-utes later Captain William R. Rush of the battleship Fiorida, who was in ommand of the operations, brought his flag in.

The coming of the American forces was not heralded by any great excitement, but small crowds gathered to watch the landing. Scon the bluejackets and marines marched through the streets leading from the waterfront and along the railroad yards. Others proceeded to the American Consualte, while still others were deployed along the approaches to Central Plaza, in which Gen. Maas had concentrated his men. These manoeuvres were effected without opposition, but suddenly Gen. Maas challenged the advance with the first shots—a volley fired from a point three blocks from the marines and two blocks south of the main plaza. The marines replied immediately, but the action ceased in a moment. There was a lull for ten minutes and then another brief exchange from the west end of Montesinos street, where a Federal outpost was stationed. At 12.30 the firing became general, and at one o'clock the guns of the Prairie went into ac'on.

After Gen. Maas had been driver from his position in Central Plaza, the Americans found themselves the object of fusilades from the tops of houses, where small groups of soldiers and citizens had taken up positions. It was learned only last night that the greater part of those engaged in this resistance were civilians, who refused to accept the American occupation passively. They obtained guns and stationed themselves at points of vantage and did much to prolong the action. Towards the middle of the afternoon a large body of Mexicans eva-cuated their position and are now omewhere in the sand hills back in the interior, where it is reported from Mexican sources they are expecting to be joined by reinforcements sent down from the capital.

ON VERGE OF WAR

Huerta Flatly Refuses Demand of President Wilson.

HIS MESSAGE TO CONGRESS

Chief Executive of the United States Will Ask For Authority to Use the Armed Forces of the U. S. to Secure Recognition From the Mexican Government-Virtual Declaration of War.

WASHINGTON, April 20. - Gen. Victoriano Huerta, Provisional President of Mexico, flatly refused last night to accede to the unconditional demands of the United States that he salute the American flag, and Congress will be asked by Presiden Wilson to-day for authority to use armed forces to uphold the honor and dignity of the nation. Negotiations with Huerta over the demand for a salute in reparation for the ago Chaf American bluejackets at alo on April 10 came to a close ast night at six o'clock, the last hour given by President Wilson for a favorable response from the Mexican dictator. The final word of Huerta to Charge O'Shaughnessy was a refusal to comply unless the United States would guarantee in writing that his salute be returned. President Wilson at midnight was on his way to Washington from White Sulphur Springs, preparing to read a message to Congress in joint session as early as it can be arranged to-day. In the meantime American war fleets were moving down both coasts on their way to Mexican waters to carry out the President's plan for reprisals.

The crisis thus reached does not mean that there will be a formal declaration of war, because the United States Government would not declare war against a Government which it does not recognize. President Wilson will seek authority, however, to send armed forces into Mexico to seize first the ports of Tampico and Vera Cruz and the railroad trestle leading to Mexico City.

Secretary Tumulty announced just before 11 o'clock last night that President Wilson had instructed him over the long-distance telephone to call a special meeting of the Cabinet for 10.30 o'clock in the morning.

Mr. Tumulty also announced that the President was preparing to deliver a special message to Congress to-day, and that a joint session would be held at the earliest hour the Congressional leaders could arrange for it, probably three o'clock.

"The matter is closed," said Mr. Tumulty. Huerta, he added, had asked for no continuation of the negotlations, and refused flatly to accede to what he called the demand for an 'unconditional" salute.

Incompatible With Dignity. MEXICO CITY, April 20. - The

Mexican Foreign Minister, Senor Portillo y Rojas, announced last night that it would be impossible to agree to the demand of the United States that the flag of that country be unconditionally saluted, because that flag was not insulted, because it was not flying from the launch, and because the marines were set free before an investigation, and the officer responslble for the arrests were himself arrested and held for trial.

The United States Government, Sepermission to Charge O'Shaughnessy to sign such a protocol, and demanded an unconditional salute from Mexico, which Mexico felt was incompatible with her dignity.

In conclusion, the Foreign Minister said: "Mexico has yielded as much as her dignity will permit. Mexke trusts to the fair-mindedness and spirit of justice of the American

BRYAN ON THE JOB

State Secretary Conducted Ne gotiations Over Sunday.

WILSON OUT OF CAPITAL

His Lieutenant In the Cabinet Kept Him Posted by Telephone - Officials Around Administration

Offices Had an Anxious Day-Crowds Watched Bulletins

and Feeling Ran High. WASHINGTON, April 20 .-Throughout the day the Mexican crisis occupied the absorbing attention of officials, dispelling the usual calm of a beautiful midspring Sunday. President Wilson arrived at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., early yesterday, after a night ride from Washington, and there : ined Mrs. Wilson. Secretary Bryan remained up practically all Saturday night, awaiting some definite word from Mexico City. He was at the State Department until after midnight, and on going home continued telephoning to those in the cipher room at the State Department until four o'clock yesterday morning.

Shortly after nine o'clock hr. Bryan had received two messages from Mexico City. Both were from Charge O'Shaughnessy. The first was merely formal, stating that the message of President Wilson, giving Huerta until six o'clock Sunday to yield, had been communicated to Portillos a Rajos, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, and that a reply would follow. The second despatch was in the nature of a reply, although the officials quickly perceived that it was not clearly responsive and definite as to the demands made by this Government, but raised a new issue as to the U. S. agreeing in writing to return the Huerta salute.

Mr. Bryan summarized the Huerta reply in a telegram to the President at White Sulphur Springs, and soon thereafter held a long distance conference with the President, going over the points Huerta had raised. While the reply was considered favorable in the general purport as to saluting the American flag, yet it again parleyed over details and conditions. As a result of the long distance talk. Mr. Bryan despatched a further message to Mexico City, making it plain that President Wilson would listen to no counter-proposals or suggestions, but must have unequivocal acceptance of the American demand at the time stated, six o'cl- 'c last night.

While these exchanges were going on by cable between Washington and Mexico City the Navy Department was centering its attention on further preparations for an eventuality which might occur. At 10.30 o'clock, shortly after Huerta's dilatory message had been received, orders were sent to the battlest p Mississippi, with an aeroplane corps and six hundred marines and the torpedo flotilla at Pensacola, Fla., to get under way at once, joining Admiral Badger's fleet as it entered the Gulf of Mexico, and proceeding vith the fleet to Tampico. The torpedo flotilla consists of 22 destroyers, the tender Dixle and the scout cruiser Birmingham, but several of the destroyers are in reserve, so it is probable only 14 will sail.

cable messages began to come in he changed his plans and went to the State Department. There he was joined by Governor Lind, the President's personal representative in Mexico, and the two went together to the private telegraph office of the State Department to consult over a difficult piece of deciphering in the latest message from Huerta.

The secretary and Governor Lind joined Secretary Tumulty at the White House, and the latest exchanges were further gone over in de-

Later it became known that the messages showed that Huerta was not raising objection to the salute itself, but as to the details under which the salute would be returned. The main condition was that the United States agree in writing that the salute be fired, instead of relying on the assurance given by Admiral Mayo for a return salute. This was construed by officials as a wily and adroit move on Huerta's part to obtain an assurance direct from the American Government, which would be capable of being construed by him as a recognition of the de facto Mexican Government. News from Mexico was awaited by the people of the capital with the keenest interest. All through the evening the streets were thronged, and crowds gathered in front of the newspaper offices. In the hotel lobbies the crisis was the one topic of conversation and some of the crowds, inspired by the playing of the "Sar-Spangled Banner" and "America," engaged in patriotic demonstrations.

Senators and representatives, anxious to receive some official word, besieged the White House and the State and Navy Departments with requests for information.

In his second at-tempt, when the circle was about half completed, Niles' machine slipped back and earthward for nearly 1,000 feet, when an unusually heavy gale struck it. A third attempt also failed, owing to the wind that made another loop the loop impossible. Niles ended his day's thrills by flying upside down for nearly half a

The woman had been acting strangely for about a week, and it is thought she committed the crime in an insane frenzy. The cause of the c-ime, it is believed, was the mother's objection to a young man, an acquaintance of her daughter. So far as known there were no witnesses to the events leading up to the crime. The screams of the girl were heard by a neighbor, Felix Charron, who reached the house, but was too late to save her. He held the woman until the police arrived.

The body of the girl was horribly mutilated, though she lived a few minutes after Dr. Belisle had reached her. She was, however, unable to make any statement.

Mrs. Massie vas immediately taken into curtody by a squad of price. and on being placed in a cell at headquarters tried to suicide by battering her head against the wall. She appears to be violently insane.

Liberal Member for Northumberland Offers Suggestions to Minister of Lands and Mines Regarding the Opening Up of the New Section of Province-Minister Is Very Well Satisfied.

TORONTO, April 17 .- Yesterday's principal discussion in the Legislature was devoted to the affairs of New Ontario and Sam Clarke (Lib., Northumberland) offered a resolution favoring the appointment of a commissioner of lands and a staff to make a more aggressive campaign for settlers.

Hon. Mr. Hearst, in reply, declared his belief that the present policy of the Government was keeping pace with the development of the country and reviewed the work of his Depart. ment

In opening his address Mr. Clarke said he was not doing it in a spirit of censure but of suggestion for the agricultural prospects of the north. The Minister of Lands and Mines had too much work on his hands properly to look after northern farm lands. The Government should appoint a commissioner and a group of assist ants-the best men that could be engaged - to take prospective settlers out and show them the land and help them to decide what locations they would take. The grant of two million acres to the Canadian Northern, who he said had not brought in one single settler up to this time had kept these lands "tied up." He enlarged upon the favorable opportunities which New Ontario offered for settlement and declared that 5,000 people in the city of Toronto would locate there if the proper inducements were offered. In addition there were hundreds of hardy, honest men in the rural portions of Old Ontario who would be far better off on the new land than on the sandhill farms which they now occupied. He believed it was a mistake to encourage immigration of mechanics and laborers to Ontario. What New Ontario needed was settlers, who would do for the new territory what the forefathers of the present generation had done for the older parts of the province. "When we have the settlers," he said, "on the land, like the father to the child, look after him until he is

Mr. Hearst, in replying, said he appreciated the manner in which the resolution was put and the kindly manner in which the subject had been treated. On a great many points he was in thorough accord with the West Northumberland member, but he took exception to some of his statements on the score . his limited knowledge of north country conditions. He maintained that practically every one of the suggestions mentioned by Mr. Clarke had been put into effect by the Government and were being carried out. Referring to a suggestion as to colonization along the Ontario route of the Grand Trunk Pacific, he pointed out that the line was still in the hands of the contractors. He had taken the matter up and they promised to co-operate with the provincial authorities to bring in settlers as soon as the line came under their control. He declared that Mr. Clarke was wrong in his statement that vast quantities of land were tied up against settlement. He compared the present Government expenditures for bridges and public works with that of the former administration, and found the former 408 per cent. greater in the same period of time, while the road expenditure

showed a like growth of 293 per cent. In moving an amendment to Mr. Clarke's motion Albert Grigg (Con., Algoma) eulogized the work of the Government in the north but suggested that it might prove a good policy to check the large departmental stores which were being established in all parts and corralling the retail trade. The influence was felt in the north. A further amendment was moved by Mr. Elliott (W. Middlesex), approving, in turn, of the $5,000,000 grant, and more if necessary, but expressing regret that the funds from this loan had been applied for other purposes than those set out in the OTTAWA, April 18. - When Parliament met resterday afternoon Mr. H. H. It will be recalled that several months ago several Hindus tested in the courts the validity of the orders in council which said that Asiatics could not enter Canada unless coming by direct steamship from their native land.

Judge Hunter upset the orders on the ground that they did not conform with the act. The Government then repealed the orders and new ones were passed which it was believed would meet the technical objections raised by Judge Hunter.

However, outside of these orders, there is at present an order in council, passed March 31, and to be in force for six months, which prohibits the entrance of all artisans and laborers into British Columbia. It is believed that this order, at least, will effectually bar the entrance of the coming Hindus,

MAYOR IS SHOT AT.

Crank Misses John P. Mitchel But

Wounds Corporation Counsel. NEW YORK, April 18. - Mayor Mitchel narrowly escaped assassination just outside the City Hall yesterday afternoon. Frank Folk, corporation counsel, was badly wounded in the jaw.

The shot was fired by an old man just as Mitchel, Folk and Arthur Woods, the recently appointed police commissioner, were entering an auto. Some think that Woods may have been the intended victim.

Only the quick work of Detective George Neun, acting as chauffeur for the mayor's automobile, saved the man under arrest from firing a second shot. Neun overpowered him and took from him a six-shot 38-calibre revolver.

The would-be assassin was almost instantly seized by a policeman, and was taken to the police station in the basement of the City Hall.

The man who fired the shot was Michael P. Mahoney, who declared in the course of a disjointed statement extracted from him last night, because he felt aggrieved at the city executive "extravagant expenditures," and because he was incensed at being turned back from the door of the mayor's room in the City Hall on two occasions his week when he came to apply fo- a municipal job.

CHARGED WITH CRUELTY.

Six Philadelphia Vivisectionists Face Trial In Criminal Court.

PHILADELPHIA, April 16. - Advocates and opponents of vivisection, many of whom are medical men and society women, crowded the criminal court here yesterday to hear the testimony in the case of six members of the faculty of the medical school of the University of Pennsylvania who are charged with cruelty to dogs after vivisection had been performed.

Those under indictment are: Drs. Joshua E. Sweet, Alfred N. Richards, Allen J. Smith, Richard Mills Pearce, Alongo Engleburt Taylor and Dr. Ed. Reichert.

Dr. Sweet was the only one placed on trial yesterday. He pleaded not guilty. He had charge of the housing of animals.

The prosecution of the medical men was brought by the Women's Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Counsel for the society said that the prosecution is not necessarily an attempt to deliver a blow at vivisection, but was brought as a cruelty to animals.

HE FEARS EPIDEMICS.

Boston Doctor Says Panama Canal Opening Will Be Costly.

BOSTON, April 16 .- Fear that the opening of the Panama Canal may be followed by a world-wide redistribution of yellow fever and cholera, which will threaten very great commercial loss, was expressed yesterday by Dr. Richard P. Strong, head of the Harvard Medical School of Tropical Medicine. Dr. Strong was formerly at the head of the Government biological laboratory in the Philippines, and later became prominent through his work in combating the pneumonic plague in Manchuria. Last year he led the Harvard Medical School expedition to Peru, where an extensive study of tropical diseases was made.

"The troubles lo be feared from the spread of tropical diseases by traffic through the Panama Canal," he said, "are rather heavy financial losses through disturbance of trade than any great loss of life. Modern medicine has so far mastered the ways of checking infectious diseases that in many civilized countries no great mortality is to be feared from the introduction even of plague, yellow fever and cholera. It is necessar, however, to hold up trade in order to check the diseases."

Sardinia Has Remarkable Trial of Several Women.

ALL ARE FREED BUT SIX

The Alleged Leaders of a Powerful League of Treasure-fin ers, Miracle Workers and Necromancers-

Prison Governor spent Money to Have Escaped Brigand Brought Back to Prison.

MILAN, April 20. - Stories of witchcraft which the most highly imaginative modern novelist would hesitate to print were related at the Assize Court at Sassari, Sardinia, during the trial of several women. Only six of the alleged witches were in the dock of the twenty-five orig-inal companions discharged during the secret magisterial examination. Their plea was that they acted under the powerful spell of the other six:

The existence of an influential witches' league was revealed by the evidence of some members professing mystic power for locating hidden treasure, working miracles and calling up the spirits of the dead. They victimized several hundred dup-es to the extent of thousands of dollars, and eighty victims gave evidence. One of them, a former prison governor who was being threatened with dismissal because of the escarpe of a ferocious Sardinian brigand, spent all his private means with the witches. The women undertook to have the brigand seized by demons in the mountain fastnesses, translated through the air, and set down :securely in the prison cell again.

Returning emigrants from North and South America were despoiled of their savings and deluded by the cunningly devised app ritions of lost relatives. Some families have been content to forfelt not only money and jewelry but every bit of household furniture for the benefit of the witches. One prisoner, Rosa Attu, a venerable matron of imposing appearance, and known as the Saimt of Sassari, refused a lawyer's aid, saying that Saints Thomas and Augustine had been sent from heaven to defend her. In an eloquent speech she claimed to possess supernatural powers, which enable: her to heal scores of so-called incurables and even raving lunatics. The case is still proceeding.

WASHINGTON, April 20. - Sir Cecil Spring-Rice and Secretary Bryan yesterday discussed the outline of the peace commission treaty to bind the United States and Great Britain to submit to a commission for examination any issues between. the two countries which may not yield to diplomatic adjustment. The ambassador visited the Department twice, and on his last call was able to lay before the Secretary of State a tentative draft of the convention as prepared in the British Foreign Secretary Bryan expressed satisfaction with the British suggestion to adopt as a basis for the British-American treaty the convention already concluded between the United States and the Netherlands. It will take a little time to perfect the new convention, because of its application to Britain's five great colonies, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and Newfoundland, each of which has to be consulted.

OVERCHARGE IS PROBED.

Public Accounts Committee Investigates N. T. R. Payment.

OTTAWA, April 18 .- The public accounts committee of the Commons yesterday morning continued its enquiry into the matter of the terms of settlement arranged between the present National Transcontinental Railway Commission and J. S. Mc-Arthur & Co. fcr work done on contract No. 21. The total contract was for upwards of $18,000,000. The board of arbitrators, after going over the contract, decided that there was an overcharge of $983,000, and recommended a reduction of payment of that amount. Under the settlement finally made the amount deducted from the McArthur account was $150,000.

W. C. King of the Auditor-General's Departmen., said the settlement had been agreed to on the part of the G. T. P. by Mr. Kelliher.

Major Leonard, the present N.T.R. commissioner, was then examined by Mr. German.

The chief engineer of the commission, he said, is responsible for the estimates and the classification. If they change their minds from time to time, he assumed that they have a right to do so.

Mr. German proceeded to ask Major Leonard to verify various documents. The major said they related to happenings before his day, and the examination was useless.

Mr. German persisted in the examination, and was upheld by the chair-

Township Funds. SOUTH INDIAN, Ont., April 18 .-W. J. W. Lowrle, former clerk of the Township of Russell, was yesterday committed to stand his trial on a charge of embezzling $300 from the township. It is alleged Lowrie retained a check for $300 received while clerk for his personal use. The accused maintains that the matter was a personal one between himself and J. Winstanley, of Morrisburg, who, preliminary evidence showed, had given the check as a deposit on a contract, making it out in favor of Lowrie. Restitution has since been made, but the three magistrates hearing the case decided to send Lowrie to trial at the L'Orignal Assizes.

LONDON, Ont., April 17 .- Thomas

When the Arizona broncho wishes to be safe for you and for himself he is the safest thing in the world, and when he wishes to be unsafe life is a merry chance. I went up and down trails in Arizona which were almost perpendicular and rough and stone strewn too. But there was little danger, for the broncho has, not the "ten pound," but the "thousand pound" look. His nose is to the ground, his eyes fastened on the trail, his footstep the most beautifully careful thing the mind can conceive. One foot placed before the other eases and preserves the balance, adjusts the weight for another, and all this wonderful machinery of equipoise, stability and safety you feel working under you like a delicate machine.

Yet this sage pioneer of the trail, with his meticulous care of you and himself, was just a wild range pony, hunted down by the range rider, driven, coaxed or duped into a corral, broken, saddled, bridled and ridden all in one hour; wrenched out of his wildness, having his heart broken and made into a slave while you would eat your breakfast.

He is not a beauty; he is just a mongrel. But his legs and his feet are made of iron and steel, and the work he does over awful trails, in a rough and ragged country, strewn with stones and flints and bowlders and lava and scrub, week after week, month after month and year after year. would spoil the legs of a thoroughbred in three days.-Gilbert Parker in August Metropolitan.

A FORTUNATE BLUNDER.

The Result of Putting a Couple Wires In Wrong Terminals.

A large number of the world's greatest inventions have been the result of some accidental union of forces, the nature of which the person who started them neither understood nor suspected. The working of dynamos at long distances apart when properly connected was discovered by accident

A scientific journal says: "Soon after the opening of the Vienna exposition, in 1873, a careless workman picked up the ends of a couple of wires which he found trailing along the ground. He fastened them in the terminals of a dynamo, to which he thought they belonged, while they were that was running in another part of the grounds. "The dynamo to which he fastened the wires was not running, but as soon as the wires were placed in its terminals it revolved as if a steam engine was driving it. The workman was amazed. The engineers and electricians were astonished by the discovery that a dynamo electric machine (turned by steam power) would turn another similar machine a long distance away if properly connected to it by electric wires. Thus originated one of the most revolutionary, applications of electricity." The fact that power can be transmitted for miles by electric wires is one of the most important factors in nodern civil engineering achievements

NEEDN'T BE SENSITIVE.-Kingston is always careful to reter to the "Portsmouth Penitentiary" rather than the "Kingston Penitentiary." Oh, well, Kingston needn't be so sensitive as all that; the prisoners probably prefer life at Portsmouth to the monotony of Kingston. The drive through Kingston from the outer station is what reconciles 'em to the isolation cells at Portsmouth.
You Can't Tell. - Over at

Vancouver the Mayor has made the astounding discovery that when the moon is full and the skies clear that the electric lights are not need ed, and so thinks they can be left dark during that period and some expense saved the city. Some time that mayor, and, perhaps some others, will discover the effects of the laws of gravation.

MORAL: LEAVE PIES ALONE. - Last Saturday night the residence of W. Manicom, on the Baltimore road, was entered by sneak thieves who cleaned out the larder, taking pies, cake, meat and nearly everything eatable in the house. The empty pie tins were found under a bridge near by. Suspicion rests on certain parties and it would be advisable for them to make amends .- Co-

EXPENSIVE POOL GAME.-A few days ago we published a story from the Peterboro Examiner of two sharpers from an outside point who were looking for a "soft roll" from a poo! game but it turned out to be a case where the "biter got bit." As a result of this, however, information was laid against the proprietor of the pool room, Raymond Sullivan, for keeping a common gambling house, and he was BARGAIN COUNTER PRICES. Twenty-three suits for damages for deaths in the Triangle shirtwaist fire, in New York, were settled recently by the payment of $75 per death. It seems like a bargain counter price, when it is recalled that the building where the workers met their death was a veritable fire trap. The incident, however, seems to illustrate the fact that all men are not of the same stamp -the proprietor of the Binghampton - factory having been cast in a different mold. He did not invoke the technicalities of the law, but, instead, turned over to the surviving defendants of the victims all the property he possessed, taking a position of travelling salesman himself to begin life anew without a dollar. "I life anew without a dollar. "I would rather sleep nights than have all the money in the world," he said. After all there are some real men in the world, although the New York affair gives our faith in humanity a severe jolt.

MRS. DUNFEE AS HOSTESS .- Last evening, the staff of the Bank of Montreal gave one of their delightful dances to forty of their friends in the bank chambers, Scarth street, in honor of Mr. F. G. H. Mannville, who is spending a few days with the boys before leaving for his home in Prince Albert. Mrs. James Dunfee acted as hostess and was very charming in a gown of blue shot silk. The spacious drawing and dining rooms were gaily decorated with flowers and Japanese lanterns and with entrancing music, everybody thoroughly enjoyed themselves. HE STOPPED THEM .- An Irishman with a very thick head of hair was one day the centre of a ring of English farmers, who were endeavoring to crack jokes at his expense. "Why," said one of them, "you've got a head of hair like a stack of hay." "Ah," returned Pat, ruffled, "that's just what myself was thinking. That accounts for my having so many asses around

A BITUMINOUS BILLIONAIRE. -Greene County in Western Pennsylvania 'has eighteen townships. Their total coal acreage is calculated at 340,000 acres. In seventeen of these townships Josiah V. Thompson, of Uniontown, Pa., owns 120,000 acres, probably the largest holdings of coal by a single individual in the world, unless the Czar of all the Russias surpass this ownership. All this coal is virgin coal, for Thompson, the coal king, does not personally attempt the development of these huge areas. Now the value per acre averages at $200, so that the value of the property is $24,000,000. But the marketed value of coal is $10,000 per acre; and so the value of the Thompsonion holdings, if ready for sale, would be $1,200,000,000.
