THE GUIDE STORY

Clarice contrived to torment and enchant Greystoke. What their whispered conferences were did and train spire to the outer world. Certain it is that the young noble looked by turns fierce, miserable, and gloomy; certain it is also that the clacry of the party-my lord, my lacy, and Miss Brown-watched the wooing from a distance with anxious eyes and would each and all have been delighted if, some fine morning, Mias Keverly had vouchsafed to announce to them that her bridal mera was fixed . One service she did Effic Dangerfeld. Just as the first hot June days came in, there arrived at the manoion of Kevenly, invited by my lord at the instance of the marquis ,a certain renowned taeatrical agent, who was, in the language of Clarice, to put Euphemia through her paces as Lady Macbeth.

The sigent was asked to iunch and after that, Effe was draped as the wife of the Thane.

There were present, my brd, my lady, Miss Brown, Clarice, the marquis. There was no nervous acas about Effie. It seemed to the girl, ir her young enthusiasm, as if suc were more truly Lady Macbeth than Euphemia Dangerfeld- as if the star of her distiny had guided her to Kevenby Court, not far the convenience of Claricit and the shelter and comfort of hersels, but for the sole purpose of introducing her to powerful people, who ocald command a hearing for thet.

She stood up in a manker smple and true to the life. She spoke and her auditing themselves forgoi that

My Neve: ly, the gentle matton; Miss Brown the sensible judge; Clarice, the fanacatical, opoiled child of forsume-all bowed down with one accord to the majesty of genius. The sigent pronour ced Miss Danger feld's success complete: scarce any extra training would be required; and he engaged her at a handsome salary to act at first in a mimor part at a theatre in Edinburg, of which he was the lessee. Effie's fortune was made She stood at the open window that night and lacked at the moonlight and lis-

"Why, John, I believe this dog is lost !" exclaimed Mrs. Roberts, of Vancouver, as with her husband she discovered the tired animal beside their parked car, "Let's take him home and maybe we can find the owner."

I the owner." They gave the dog every comfort but still he was depressed. Finally an advertisement appeared in a Victoria paper sixty miles across the Strait of Georgia. Going to the telephone, Mrs. Roberts asked for the Victoria number. "Hello, Mr. Duncan, I think I have your dog." "What! You mean that you have him in Vancouver? How could he get there? PLOWING ADVISABLE IN SUMMER AND FALL

Fa.l-ploughing is generally considered a good practice in most parts of the country, if best results are to be obtained. In a section such as Northern Ontario, where the growing ber of motor-vehicle permits issued season is comparatively short it is On the other hand succession duties not only advisable, but it is imperative that the greater part of the ploughing be done in the summer or fall.

At the Dominion Experimental sta tion, Kapuskasing, Ont., it has been found that midsummer or early fallploughing has materially facilitated the completion of this work before the ground became too wet or was frozen.

teally all the common farm crops should be sown as early in the spring as the condition of soil will permit, and this is only possible when the land has been ploughed the previous fall, and better stil if it has been ploughed sufficiently early to disk a couple of times, and also open up proper water furrows before the freeze-up.

BABE GETS TWO HOMERS

Babe Ruth twice played the hero role Tuesday as the Yankees opened their series with Detroit by pulling out a 6 to 5 victory from a close duel between Ed Wells and Waite Hoy: In the third inning, the Babe hammered out his forty-third home run of the season, with Reese on base, to clima xa four-run rally and give the yanks a good lead. In the ninth, after Charley Gehringer's home run had tied the count, Ruth came through with a single with two on bases to drive in the winning tally. Two men were out and there were two strikes on the Babe when he broke up the game. The home run put Ruth eight games and 19 days ahead of his 1927 record.
