COUNTRY ROADS IN BAD SHAPE

Paved Roads Weathered Winter Well—Many Sideroads Are Impassable

County roads in this district, in fact all through Durham and Northumberland counties, are in bad shape, with the frost of the past winter coming out of the ground. The heavy rain of late will help to settle the roads and should prove an eventual benefit.

Provincial highways are not in bad shape, though some spots have required the attention of the department's men. Highway No. 2, laid in pavement several years ago, has weathered this winter quite well. Some of the newer highways are still settling.

In the towns of Port Hope, Bowmanville, Newcastle and Cobourg, the paved streets are generally good, but the back streets are badly in need of scraping.

While some Eastern Ontario towns report the frost as heavy, Port Hope engineering department states that the frost in this district has almost entirely disappeared. The roads are quagmires in which travellers in all kinds of vehicles find it most difficult to navigate.

The rains of the past few days will also prove beneficial to the farmers, who have been waiting for some rain to get started ploughing.

MRS. R. J. EDMUNDS IS LAID TO REST

Passes Away Friday Night After Lingering Illness—In 57th Year

(From Monday's Daily.) The funeral was held here this afternoon of Mrs. Edmunds, Dorset St., wife of Deputy Reeve R. J. Edmunds, former Mayor of Port Hope. The services were in charge of Rev. T. E. The late Mrs. Edmunds passed away at six o'clock on Friday night. She underwent an operation last July and had been in failing health since that time. Deceased, who was in her 57th year, was born in Port Hope and moved with the family to Toronto while at an early age. While in the latter place, she was engaged in business and lived in Port Hope since her marriage in 1918. In religion, she was an Anglican. She bore her lengthy illness with cheerfulness and her death is lamented by a wide circle of friends.

The late Mrs. Edmunds, whose maiden name was Rosa Chinn, is survived by her husband, two sisters, Mrs. Agnes Wakely, of Toronto, formerly of Port Hope, Miss Maca Chinn, Hamilton, and two brothers, John Chinn, foreman of the Globe composing room, Toronto and Harry Chinn, of the National Showcase Company, Toronto.

COUNCIL PLAN RELIEF MEASURE

Cleaning Up Of Old Cemetery Makes Employment For Orono Men

As a temporary unemployment relief measure, the Cliffee township council have undertaken to clean up the old cemetery, a work that has been long delayed. This will give a couple of weeks' employment to about a dozen of Orono men thrown out of work by the closing of the Forestry Station.

The management committee placed in charge of the work by the council are: C. J. Hughson, Thos. Patterson and C. F. Aude.

The old cemetery is situated at Orono, at the head of Church Street, a half-block east of Mill.

Never manure ground for evergreens and never place manure around the roots when planting. Righteousness will not live without religion, as all human history shows.—Bishop William T. Manning.

STORE ROBBED EARLY SUNDAY

Garbutt's Grocery Scene Of Burglary—35 lbs. Of Butter Is Among Loot

Forcing an entrance through the transom in a back door, thieves entered Garbutt's Grocery, Wadd St., early Sunday morning and escaped with merchandise valued at $60. The proprietor in discussing the matter to-day stated that he would pay a reward to anyone supplying information that would lead to the arrest of the guilty parties.

RESURRECTION

Ye who fear death,
Behold the buds bursting;
Ye who fear death,
Hark, how the robins sing;
Ye who fear death,
Go, hear the crocus cry,
Eternal Spring!

Ye who fear death,
See how the trees are greening,
Risen to life before the April sun;

Ye who fear death,
Give way to joy and gladness,
New life's begun!

So it has been
Since days first had beginning,
Glad prophecies of Resurrection Morn;

Woe not before a closed tomb
In Joseph's garden,
Life is reborn.

TWO TRANSIENTS TOLD TO LEAVE

Appeared In Port Hope Court On Vagrancy Charges—Made Hurried Departure

Charged with vagrancy, Wilbert O'Shea, aged 23 years, a transient of no address and John McCallie, aged 22 years, also a transient of no fixed abode, were haled into Port Hope Police Court on Tuesday before Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell. They were found guilty and fines of $10.00 and costs were imposed or an alternative of thirty days in the county jail. However, sentence was suspended providing the pair left town within fifteen minutes. Needless to say, the pair took advantage of the opportunity and made a hurried departure.

According to the police, O'Shea and McCallie have been making Port Hope their headquarters for the past five days, sleeping at nights at a local railway station and in the morning, applying for food at the local lock-up. They also resorted to panhandling and then proceeded to get gloriously inebriated. As a result, the charges were preferred by Chief Constable Thomas Murphy.

OSHAWA YOUTHS IN COBOURG COURT

Given Suspended Sentence—Glide Was Former Local Resident

Pleading guilty to charges of breaking and entering the residence of Mrs. Catherine Miller, at Cobourg, Robert Glide, age 23, and Frank Jarvis, age 17, of Oshawa, were placed on suspended sentence for two years when they appeared before Magistrate J. H. Davidson, in Cobourg police court. The youths broke into the house on March 28, and one-half hour afterward were arrested by Chief of Police J. C. Ruse. The magistrate warmly reprimanded them in giving suspended sentence, and ordered them to report monthly to the chief of police in Oshawa.

Chief Ruse testified that he received a call at 2 p.m., March 28th, and went down to Mrs. Miller's house, which was vacant. He stationed Percy Maclellin, taxi driver, at the southeast corner, and with Inspector Fred Charman of the C.N.R. police went inside. While inside the large house he heard a shout from outside and learned that the quarry had escaped.

Maclellin drove them up George St. and at the intersection of George and University avenue, the chief noticed two young men walking along the latter street. He arrested them and brought them to the police office where they were searched. Glide had a small silver trinket and Jarvis a deck of cards and two bridge pencils. These, they admitted, had been taken from Mrs. Miller's home.

Speaking on behalf of her son, Mrs. Jarvis stated that he had never been in trouble before, but had been out of work for some time. Mrs. Glide stated that her son had had no steady work in two years, and that his father was also unemployed. Glide formerly resided in Port Hope.

DRIVER NAMED AS RESPONSIBLE

Student-Driver Responsible For Napanee Tragedy, Jury Finds

The inquest relative to the death of Paul Putman, son of Dr. and Mrs. Putman, of Oshawa, who met with a tragic death on April 2, 1933, was held Monday afternoon before Dr. L. M. Galbraith, coroner. The following verdict was returned: "We find that Mr. P. Putman came to his death on the morning of April 2, 1933, on the Provincial Highway No. 2 about one and one-half miles east of Deseronto, as a result of an accident, being thrown from the rumble seat of a car driven by Ward Casselman, and we are agreed that the driver named was responsible for the accident."

At the time of the accident a sports roadster carrying Paul Putman; Ward Casselman, final year student in medicine at Queen's University; Graham Young; Miss Croft, registered nurse, of Belleville, and Miss Avery, registered nurse, of Port Hope, was proceeding from Belleville to Kingston, where the young woman intended to spend the week-end. Putman and Miss Croft were riding in the rumble seat, and when the car left the road for the ditch, both were thrown out. Putman landing on the paved surface of the road, while Miss Croft was thrown into a field. Putman died before reaching Dr. Blackwell's office in Deseronto, while Miss Croft passed away next morning in the Belleville General Hospital.

There were several witnesses, and evidence was brought out that beer and liquor had been consumed during the trip from Kingston to Belleville; also that Casselman, the owner and driver of the car, did not have his operator's permit at the time of the accident.

After a lengthy illness, Mrs. George Bennett, Sr., a lifelong resident of this district passed away at the Port Hope Hospital Wednesday afternoon at 8:30 o'clock. Deceased was in her 81st year.

DEATH SEVERS LINK WITH PAST

Albert Sainsbury, Prominent Resident Died Friday—Funeral Sunday

A link with the past was severed here when Albert Sainsbury, widely known and highly respected resident of the town for many years, died at his home at 9:29 o'clock Friday morning. Deceased was in his 89th year and the funeral service was held from the family residence, Strachan street, on Sunday afternoon. Interment was made at the Port Hope Union Cemetery.

Up until three weeks ago, the decedent was in fair health and then suffered a general breakdown. His condition gradually weakened and death came quietly yesterday morning.

The late Mr. Sainsbury was born in Cleveland, Ohio, of English parentage and came to Port Hope when a year old. Since that time, he has been a resident of this town. At the age of 16 years, he joined the United States navy. He served in the Civil War as well as in the Boerian raid. His passing marks the last of those who participated in the Boerian raid from this district.

WHITBY CUTS GO IN FORCE

The Whitby town council has passed seven by-laws putting into effect the reduction made in the salaries of all civic employees, these taking effect on April 1st, as follows: John R. The saving effected amounts to over $800. When the reductions were made all employees were told by the council that their services were entirely satisfactory, but that the need for economy this year rendered the reductions necessary. They were given to understand that as soon as business conditions improved salaries would again be revised.

HUMANE SOCIETY ANNUAL MEETING ELECT OFFICERS

Mrs. J. T. Daley Re-Elected President — Reports On Year's Work Submitted

Mrs. J. T. Daley was re-elected President of the Port Hope Humane Society at the annual meeting which was held in the Public Library Hall Tuesday night and other officers of the society for 1933 include, Honorary President, Judge H. A. Ward, K. C., vice president, Mrs. W. A. Phippen, secretary and inspector, Miss Victoria Grant, Treasurer, Mrs. C. W. Connop and Executive, Mrs. Thomas Murphy, Mrs. H. W. Zealand, Arthur Choate, G. A. Ostram, Fred Southpole, Dr. J. N. Johnston, V.S. and Dr. James Harrington, V.S., Cobourg.

At the opening of the meeting, the President, Mrs. Daley, welcomed the members and briefly explained the work which the society is doing. She pointed out the value of teaching children to care for dumb animals and tendered her thanks to all who assisted in every way. Mrs. C. W. Connop, leader of the Junior Branch, told of the work of this section, which has thirty members.

During the evening, little Miss Vivian Jones gave a recitation 'My Pussy' which was enjoyed.

Provincial Inspector Nelson Baird, of Oshawa, briefly addressed the meeting and referred to the extensive work which Miss Grant was doing in her position as inspector.

This year, the speaker explained, there has been a decrease in the number of charges and that improvement has been shown by owners using trucks in handling stock. He cited several cases of cruelty which the society had dealt with and urged everyone to do their utmost in carrying out the work of the organization.

Secretary's Report
The secretary's report was presented by Miss Victoria Grant and the activities of the past year were fully reviewed.

The report is as follows:—
"I have the honor to submit the thirteenth Annual Report covering the work of the Port Hope Humane Society for the year ending April 1st, 1933.

"Lack of attendance at the monthly meetings as recorded annually in the past, has been evident in 1933 as in any previous year.

"We cannot however take it as significant of indifference in the face of the whole-hearted and enthusiastic support by members and citizens whenever appealed to concerning any undertaking or emergency. It is nevertheless desirable that the activities of the society from time to time should be more closely followed by those who are so willing to support the work when called upon to do so. Attendance at the monthly meetings affords such an opportunity.

"Very considerable increase is noted in the demands upon the society. We have carried on as economically and as effectively as possible, in line with the other organizations of the town for the purpose for which we are organized. None of the work has been curtailed. The additional work has been accepted as indicative of an encouraging change of attitude towards the use and abuse of animals and a wider knowledge of usefulness of the Humane Society.

"This together with a very definite decrease in the numbers of cases of cruelty and abuse in our vicinity should be reason for satisfaction.

"Funds at the society's disposal are becoming low but the work makes its own appeal and we trust that there will be ways and means of meeting requirements.

"We petitioned the Municipal Council and received a grant to provide care for stray dogs. The society makes only one public appeal annually to raise funds being the Garden Party held in the Summer. Members fees (50c), voluntary contributions and a percentage on calendars comprises the source of income.

"At the 1932 Convention of the Ontario S.P.C.A. the Port Hope Humane Society won honors and a prize for the best representation at the convention and the most active society for its size operating over the largest territory. The prize was a stone bird bath on a pedestal which was accepted by the local Parks Commission and erected by the society in the Central Park.

"The Junior Branch of the P.H.H.S. is under the capable leadership of Mrs. Connop. We cannot proceed to consider the practical work of our animal protection and relief without mentioning the sad loss of the Society sustained in the death of Dr.

Zealand. The doctor had been closely associated with nearly every case handled by the society over a period of more than ten years and gave always generously of his best for the relief of suffering animals.

"Mrs. Phippen, Vice-President for several years, left Port Hope to live in Toronto. We miss her good work and faithful attendance at the meetings.

"The work done by Toronto and other societies is estimated by figures that represent all animals and birds. Here we reckon only the number of calls or investigations made. In 33 calls, made during the period from November 24th to February 6th, one call involved forty head of horses and others included farm stock so that a great number of animals received attention during that time. Provincial Inspector Baird and Inspector Weatherston have been employed to look after some cases in our district. Both are experienced and excellent officers and we appreciate their assistance.

"Chief of Police Thomas-Murphy gives very valuable service to the society in Port Hope and we are most grateful to him.

"When our work takes us to other and distant places we find the people willing to give assistance whenever necessary.

"Our farthest away call last year was, in my opinion, the worst case of suffering. It was several miles north east of Roseburgh. A horse was being compelled to work while suffering from acute founder. The condition of that horse was indescribable. To procure its release, I believe that a member of the society or any other person would have gladly paid a considerable sum of money. It was destroyed without delay.

"Previous to the last annual meeting, serious trouble had been experienced in the transportation of stock by truck. We are glad to report that with the exception of two or three cases which ended in Police Court at Bowmanville, Port Hope and Cobourg, there has been of late little cause for complaint. The co-operation of the Traffic Officers in this district is much appreciated.

"The old horse traffic is a subject on which I hardly dare to venture in this already lengthy report but the shipment by railroad of horses for slaughter at the end of the year required a great deal of our attention and trips to points distant from Port Hope. The horses were kept working so late last winter that, in some cases there was only enough strength left to get them loaded on the cars.

"I can assure you that no effort is spared by your society in doing what is possible in trying to effect changes in this very difficult and distressing situation; for the inspection of a carload of decrepit horses awaiting shipment for slaughter is surely one of the most ghastly duties of any humane officer at the present time.

"Starvation of farm stock in a section north east of Cobourg set in early in December. Mr. Baird made two trips to that place and ordered stock to be disposed of.

"Over two hundred calls and investigations were made. All cases were dealt with according to circumstances and we trust to the satisfaction of those persons who make the work possible by their interest and contributions.

"Our thanks are due to the Library Board for the use of the Hall each month.

"The many courtesies extended to us by the Press are much appreciated."

An exceptionally fine program on "Music of the Great German Masters," was presented at the meeting of the Music Study Club on Monday evening, held at the home of Mrs. S. Brickell, Ridour street.

The program was under the capable direction of Miss Frances Johnson, who gave very interesting and informative sketches of the lives of the outstanding German composers. Wagner, with his new and startling theories in music, was said to have been so advanced, his music was that of the present. Brahms was said to be gifted as a pianist and song writer and Liszt was noted for his original piano compositions. The last of the group was Johann Strauss well-known for his beautiful waltzes.

TWO COMPANIES NEED GROWERS

Toronto And Peterboro Firms Placing Contracts In This District For Tomatoes

Announcement is made to-day that two out-of-town companies, Canadian Packing Company, of Peterboro and Gosse and Blackwell, of Toronto, will contract for the growing of tomatoes with farmers in this district this year. The Peterboro company which is expected to require between 175 and 200 acres have started placing contracts already while the Toronto firm are expected to commence in a few days with a stated objective of 250 acres. The announcement will be welcomed by the farmers in view of the fact that it will be a cash crop.

BAILIEBORO

Among those from Bensfort and Bailieboro who attended the Laymen's Banquet at Fraserville, on Thursday evening, were Messrs E. Dawson, R. Dawson, W. C. Wood, William Wood, S. Thompson, W. Lawson, G. Robertson, C. Manley, J. Porter, H. Board, W. H. Burnard, A. Watt, F. Burnard, Rev. Moorehouse, of St. James Church, Peterboro, and Rev. Mr. Elliott of Saskatchewan, were the guest speakers. Mr. H. Hudson of Peterboro, provided music for the occasion.

The township roads are in very bad condition and almost impassable. The frost is apparently out of the road bed and many deep holes have formed.

Reports show that maple sap is flowing freely, and should the night frosts continue the syrup will no doubt be plentiful this spring.

Residents of the district are busily engaged in trapping their marshes but to date the catches of muskrats have been scarce. Trappers claim that indications point to a small catch this Spring as there are few signs of any quantity of rats in the marshes.

The members of the Centerville Dramatic Club staged their play "Ace High," in the Presbyterian Sunday School Hall on Friday evening. Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Perrin were visitors to Toronto on Friday.

MAKING PLANS FOR CONFERENCE

Port Hope To Be Well Represented At Bay Of Quinte Conference

Plans are well under way with the various women's organizations in St. Paul's and Trinity United Churches, Bowmanville, for the sessions of the Bay of Quinte conference to be held in Bowmanville in June.

Trinity Church is to be the conference church, but both churches will be used during the conference, which will last close to a week. Each church will take care of a portion of the billeting of delegates to the conference which are expected to number nearly 400. W. Ross Striker, superintendent of Trinity Sunday School and well-known barrister, is the chairman of the conference committee, which is busy laying the plans. Several meals will be served by the Women's organization of the two churches and much planning is needed before the conference starts.

Ministers of congregations from Whitley in the west, and Kingston in the east and from Lindsay and Peterboro in the north will be present together with lay delegates.

The Port Hope United Church will be represented at the conference.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 11

Where did you get those flowers, lovely lady?

Sir, replied the fair young maiden, these little snow drops sprung from the spot in the garden moistened by the melting of a snow bank.

On looking about we discover that both in Englishtown and on Protestant Hill the beautiful, delicate flowers have burst into bloom.

Contrast brings out the loveliness of the earliest bloom against the drab surroundings.

Horticulturalists all about town are starting to tidy up their gardens and it is to be hoped all our citizens will "put their best foot forward" this Spring so that we will have no untidy places or eye sores about the town to destroy the beauty of the whole place.

A storm, centred near the Bay of Fundy has caused heavy rain in the Maritimes and light rain or snow has fallen in some parts of Quebec, also in Saskatchewan. The weather has been fair elsewhere and comparatively mild east of the Great Lakes.

The Antique Shop which moved up Englishtown some months ago is returning to its former location on the south side of Walton Street just below the bridge.

During this time of year, with the laws about town being so strict, pedestrians and bicyclists would save property owners a great deal of trouble by not taking short cuts.

At five o'clock yesterday afternoon, a sedan in charge of A. Curtis was parked on the north side of Walton Street, and while the driver was away, the car was set in motion. It lashed across the street and struck the woodwork of the display window at John Curtis & Son's store. No damage was done.

COBOURG SITTING OF COUNTY COURT

Action Involving Port Hope Merchant Laid Over To May Court

Hearing of a damage action brought by William May against Mathew Brown, occupied County Court sittings at Cobourg. The case was adjourned at a late hour in the evening. The plaintiff asks damages of $350 as a consequence of an accident occurring last November, when his car collided with a truck owned by the defendant. The defendant has a counter-claim of $250. Archie Cochrane, K.C., appeared for the plaintiff, and Allan Field was defence counsel. Judge J. V. O'Connor presided.

Montgomery vs. Webb, a dispute over a lease, was adjourned until April 25th, and Shay vs. M. Stelmovitz & Co., was laid over to the May court.

In the other adjourned case, the Shay dry goods firm of Port Hope is suing M. Stelmovitz, Toronto, for $50. The plaintiff claims that a fur coat sent for storage to the defendant was damaged by moths while in the possession of the defendant.

MAKING THINGS OVER

"Maria," said Mr. Jones upon one of his worrying days, "it seems to me you might be more economical; now there's my old clothes, why can't you make them over for the children instead of giving them away?" "Because they're worn out when you're done with them," answered Mrs. Jones. "It's no use making new things for the children that won't hold together; you couldn't do it yourself, smart as you are."

"Well," grumbled Jones, "I would not have closets full of things mildewing for want of wear. If I was a woman, that's all. A penny saved is a penny earned."

That was in April. One warm day in May Mr. Jones went prancing through the closets looking for something he couldn't find and turning things generally inside out.

"Maria," he squeaked, "what's my gray alpaca duster?" "Made it over for Johnny." "Ahem!" Well, where's the brown linen one I bought last summer?" "Clothes bag!" mumbled Mrs. Jones, who seemed to have a difficulty in her speech at that moment. "Just made it into a nice one."

"Where are my lavender pants?" yelled Jones. "Cos them over for Willie." "Heavens!" groaned her husband then in a voice of thunder, "Where have my blue suspenders got to?" "Hung the baby jumper with them."

"Maria?" asked the astonished man in a subdued voice, "would you mind telling me what you have done with my silk hat; you haven't made that over for the baby, have you?" "Oh no, dear," answered his wife cheerfully, "I've put that for a hanging basket. It is full of plants and looks lovely." Jones never mentions the word economy or suggested making over—he had enough of it.—Detroit Post.

Representatives of the Globe Indemnity Insurance Co. appeared before the council to discuss highway insurance.

In motion by Coun. Greer, it was decided to take out insurance with the company. Reeve Smith, of Haldimand Township, and Mr. Larry, road superintendent, asked if council would rent the stone crusher. The council decided to consider it and agreed to meet Haldimand council in Cobourg on Saturday, April 22. T. F. McBride complained of being unable to secure an entrance to his property. As this belongs to the county he was referred to Mr. Meever, Port Hope.

Mr. Bard gave notice that he would introduce at the next meeting a by-law to close part of No. 5 con. lots 14, 15, and 16. Moved by Coun. Greer, seconded by Deputy Reeve Bard, that the time for the collector to return roll be extended to the first Monday in May, carried.

FORESTALLING THE ONION FLY

The first appearance of the earliest apple fly is a hint to the farmer of Eastern Canada that the female onion maggot flies are commencing to lay their eggs. This fact also coincides with the time when the onion seedlings are about one and a half inches high. According to a pamphlet issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture on the control of the onion maggot the young plants and surrounding soil should be sprayed with an oil emulsion four times during the early part of the season, just before the female flies commence to lay their eggs.

FOREIGN PESTS INTERCEPTED

Ten thousand four hundred and forty-eight separate shipments, involving 3,74,210 containers, of plants of all kinds and descriptions from all parts of the world were examined last year by the entomological inspection staff of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, at ten ports of importation and at two inspection districts to prevent the entry into Canada of insect pests and plant diseases. Among the most important pests intercepted were the European Earwig, the Brown-tailed Moth, Pine Shoot Moth, Granary weevil, bulb flies and greenhouse pests.

HYMNS WE ALL LOVE

What a friend we have in Jesus, All our sins and griefs to bear, What a privilege to carry Everything to God in prayer;

O, what peace we often forfeit, O, what needless pain we bear, All because we do not carry Everything to God in prayer.

Have we trials and temptations? Is there trouble anywhere? We should never be discouraged, Take it to the Lord in prayer. Can we find a friend so faithful, Who will all our sorrows share? Jesus knows our every weakness; Take it to the Lord in prayer.

Are we sick and heavy-laden? Are we cumbered with a load of care? Precious Saviour, still our refuge—Take it to the Lord in prayer. Do thy friends despise, forsake thee? Take it to the Lord in prayer; In His arms He'll take and shield thee—Then wilt find a solace there.

This simple little hymn, which bears the marks of extreme devotion to the blessed Saviour and of strong faith in Him, was given to the world by one who lived the Christian life of service to his fellows, openly, humbly and with great unselfishness, in a small town and outlying rural community in Ontario. Well educated, the possessor of an old country university degree and of some private means, augmented by his salary as public teacher and private tutor, he became poor through his beneficence and actually lived as a laborer at the end of his life.

His father was Captain John Scriven of the Royal Marines, who lived in county Down, Ireland. His mother was sister to an English vicar, the Rev. Joseph Medford, whose parish was in Wiltshire.

He was christened Joseph after his mother's father having been born in 1819 or 1820 probably at Sempark, Ireland. Joseph and his two brothers were all graduates of Trinity College, Dublin. About the time of the rebellion in Canada, which was also the year of the accession of Queen Victoria to the throne, Joseph Scriven left college midway in his arts course and entered a military college at Addiscombe, Surrey, to train as a cadet for the East India Company. It was decided, however, after two years of military training, that he was not adapted to Indian life, and he went back to Dublin to complete his college course.

He was when graduated, at the canonical age for ordination, twenty-three and appears to have had some intention of entering the ministry of the Church of England. Some years afterwards, however, after a serious disappointment in his private affairs, he turned up in Northumberland county, which borders on Lake Ontario, and for some years taught school in or near to the new thriving and important town of Port Hope.

A prominent citizen then engaged him as private tutor, and as such he is still remembered by many people living in the vicinity. But the chief recollection of him is that of a very eager philanthropist, anxious to relieve distress, and not always worldly-wise enough to escape being imposed upon. And his developed a strong desire to tell to all he met, even to crowds at fairs on the streets, the blessedness of faith in God and in the atoning merit of the sacrifice and death of Jesus Christ.

All his money gone in seeking to heal the wounds of humanity, he found pleasure in working as a laborer for the poor or afflicted. Sometimes he knew want and suffering, and he died practically indigent, and under sad circumstances, his dead body being found in a mill stream, in 1888.

A friend who ministered to him in his sickness found the hymn in his room and by enquiries found that Mr. Scriven had written it for his mother when she was in trouble and sorrow, hoping that it would comfort her. The plaintive tune was written for it by C. C. Converse of the United States in 1870, who received his musical training at Liepsic, Germany.

A Captain Pengelly gave him sepulchre in his family cemetery on Rice Lake in Monaghan Township, Ont., and in 1919, as some of our readers will remember, a movement was set on foot to erect a simple monument to mark the place where lie the mortal remains of the man who wrote this popular and pathetic hymn.

Of course, he was in life often criticized and sometimes found fault with. That was inevitable in an age when extreme earnestness is promoting religion is disliked and success is measured against dollars or worldly position. But none of his critics will live in the future, as he most certainly will through the hymn which he wrote, and which is in common use by thousands of Christian worshippers all over the world.

Canadian opinion places his hymn immediately after the first ten great hymns in the English language in popularity.—Montreal Family Herald and Weekly Star.

LESIONS ON THE LAWN

Methods Of Renovating Bald Patches

The soothing vista of fresh green lawns in the shade of leafy avenues is the one great asset of beauty that distinguishes Canadian residential districts from the drab suburban districts of towns in less enterprising countries. By the same token, this Spring is to be a busy one for the Canadian home beautifier. During the past winter with its comparatively light covering of snow, ice has played havoc with the lawns. Bare patches are gaping here and there.

In this connection, it is interesting to note the restoration methods of a leading Canadian horticulturist, famous also for the lawns around his home. First of all, he rakes the bare spots clean, and, if necessary, adds a medium of good, healthy soil. He sows the seed, rakes it gently into the mould, rolls it, and takes great care to keep the bald places moist, as indeed he does to the whole of the lawn. The slight raking and the rolling brings the soil and the seed into intimate contact, thereby ensuring rapid germination. By the time the grass is three or four inches high, it will have sufficient root-hold to withstand the operation of a lawn-mower in contact with the rest of the lawn.

For the first cutting of the new grass on the erstwhile spots, the machine is set rather high. The blades should be very sharp and well set to avoid pulling out the young grass. As a rule, however, the lawns of this horticulturist stand the winter well, for the simple reason that in the late fall, October or November, he takes the precaution to spread fertilizer-bone meal or commercial sheep manure—and roll the lawns thoroughly. If necessary, a sprinkling of seed may be opportune, followed by another intensive rolling.

For the renovation of old, worn out lawns, the use of a good fertilizer is imperative and as regards seed, the usual grass mixture sold by leading seed firms is generally satisfactory. A very good mixture for Canada, however, may be made of Kentucky Blue Grass and White Dutch Clover at the rate of 25 pounds of the former to one pound of the latter. In making a new lawn this is enough to cover half an acre, but for small lawns one ounce of this mixture is sufficient for three and a half square yards.

As a lawn is more or less a permanent factor, everything depends on the initial foundation. To make a fine lawn it is important that the soil is of a good class, enriched with well rotted yard manure. If this is not available there are many effective commercial fertilizers recommended by seedsmen, but a very satisfactory mixture may be made up of nitrate of soda, one half pound; sulphate of potash, one half pound; and superphosphate and ground bone one pound of each. This quantity mixed well is sufficient for 100 square feet of surface. In seeding either for renewing old patches or for making a new lawn, a calm day should be chosen.

HOLSTEIN CLUB SALE FINDS PRICES LOWER Average Per Head $7.25 — Bull Show Held And Prizes Given

The twenty-third annual sale of the Holstein-Friesian Breeders' Club of Belleville district was held in Belleville Wednesday when thirty head of cattle were offered, the grade being up to previous years, but the prices not as good as expected. The thirty head sold for $1,682.50, or an average of $57.25, a calf not being counted in the average. George O. Tice was the auctioneer and Dunham Foster the ring manager. The highest price of the sale was a cow owned by James Caskey of Madoc, selling for $172, which was not the price of a good grade in other years. In the morning a bull show was held, there being twelve males entered, the prize-winners being Percy Van Black, Napanee; Ward Brothers, Darford; E. O. Butler, Brighton; Ben Lovens, Bloomfield; T. Sirrett, Brighton; A. Paeks, Napanee; and Earl Weese, Carrying Place.

HEARD ON THE STREET

SATURDAY, APRIL 8. Is there trouble anywhere?

The public servants seem to be kept busy these days explaining.

There was never an age when governments, commissions, councils, boards, all over the world were having such a hectic time.

It keeps the common people busy these days figuring out how to pay increased taxation with diminished revenues.

It's nice to have a love for gardening, where you can busy yourself in the earth and forget the dirt.

People are carrying home rose bushes which don't look much now but in a few short months will be a delight with their fragrance and beauty.

Crazy people! In one part of the world they're asking for more children and another kicking because they continue arriving. In Italy the cities pay from $10 to $50 for each child and in this country authorities object to parents who unfortunately haven't money, being blessed with children.

Local issuers of bank cheques are reminded that cheques of $5.00 and under do not require a stamp until May 1st, when this ruling becomes effective.

A fair lady from the west-end is of the opinion that local butchers haven't heard of Eddie Cantor's "Try a Little Tenderness."

A drop too much cost Harvey Liggett of Garden Hill, $10 and costs, and the fact that he did not possess a permit, cost him $100 and costs in addition. Liggett was arrested by Provincial Constable W. J. Carey on a charge of intoxication. He appeared in Cobourg police court and was given the alternative of three months in lieu of the $100 assessment. He was unable to pay the fine.

Just What You'd Notice! "Mrs. Smith has wonderful poise," "Yes, and a couple of nice looking girls, too."

MONDAY, APRIL 10. Good morning! Did the sermon of the sunshine bring the gay smile?

Wasn't it good the way he handed it to Mr. X?

Did you ever see anything in a sermon which might be meant for you? Funny how some people feel that they're so good that no one could find a flaw in them. One of our troubles to-day is that we've got too many selfish, self-satisfied people.

Look for the worst in yourself and stamp it out. Look for the best in others and cultivate and encourage it.

Rev. Dr. K. H. Palmer, minister of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church is speaking at Bowmanville, to-night in the Soldiers Legion on the occasion of the celebration of Vimy Ridge.

Fifteen years ago to-day, the Canadian Corps, attacking for the first time with the four divisions side by side, took Vimy Ridge by storm, a position which the Germans said, "We can hold till Doomsday." Vimy Ridge remained in British hands and at the end of the war, was the one unbroken bastion on the western front.

They're telling the story now of a Scotkman, who, at 1:30 in the morning, unable to stay to the finish of the Bruins-Leaf hockey game, went to the box office and asked for a rebate.

Hon. Vincent Massey, former minister to the United States, was guest speaker Friday night at the Men's Canadian Club meeting, at Bowmanville. Mr. Massey delivered an impressive address on "Canada and the Outside World."

The furnace goes all day with one stoking, there isn't any snow to be shoveled and the grass doesn't need to be cut. Nice season, spring.

Dr. John W. S. McCullough, chief inspector of the provincial department of health, was guest speaker at two meetings in Bowmanville Friday, which he addressed, the Rotary Club on "war against cancer," and later a largely-attended women's meeting on the same subject.

Senate Board of Education has decided to apply the $500 cut recently made in salaries of collegiate teachers and Public school teachers, reducing $2,000 or more, to the principal of collegiate and technical schools and Public school inspectors, it has been learned. These officers were not included in the previous action.

Diffused Visitor (to baby boy): "And how old are you, my little man?" The Baby Boy (indignantly): "I'm not old at all. I'm nearly new."

TUESDAY, APRIL 11. Good morning. April is true form!

We seem to get 'em every day but they're what we need if we want to have the May flowers to beautify our homes and lawns.

It's looking very snuggery to-day with the benches out in the Central Park. Softball has started, the water rats are practicing at the Beach Park.

This side of the water's edge, there's activity at the Beach Park but we haven't noticed many enjoying a refreshing dip.

Over seventy gathered Monday night at the regular meeting of the United Church Young People's Society when Rev. D. McTavish again took the devotional topic. Misses May Foote and Hazel McCullough sang a duet. There wasn't sufficient time for W. A. Meadow's talk on early missions, which has been reserved for a future occasion.

Miss Beryl Thompson discussed the topic "What Deciding for Christ Means to Us," at the regular weekly meeting of the Baptist Young People Monday night. Miss Margaret Robinson rendered a solo which was greatly enjoyed. C. E. Eastman presided at the meeting.

WELCOME CHOIR GAVE CONCERT

Old Fashioned Costumes Gave Fine Setting For Program

The concert of old time choruses interspersed with solos, duets, quartets, instrumentals and recitations given Friday evening by the Welcome United Church choir of twenty-one voices under direction of Mrs. W. E. Honey was a delightful entertainment and showed the splendid talent which that organization has. The quaint old-fashioned costumes made a very colorful and picturesque appearance so that both eye and ear had a treat.

It was regrettable that bad roads kept down the attendance so that there were many who missed a really delightful evening.

YOUTH STEALS MILK CHEQUE

Cashes It At Cobourg Store—Obtains Full Value Of $47.00

Representing himself as a member of the Usher family, Wicklow residents, an unknown youth cashed a milk cheque at a Cobourg hardware store, the cheque having been stolen from the mail box of Melville Usher, and forged with his signature. The cheque artist, accompanied by another youth, his own age, called at the hardware store and made a purchase, after banking hours, presenting the cheque in payment. The cheque was for $47 and the hardware merchant, being short of change, gave him $20 and told him to drop in the next day for the balance. He did so, and has not been heard of since.

Meanwhile, Melville Usher grew impatient at the delay in receiving his milk cheque and wrote the Toronto dairy on whom the cheque was drawn, to be informed that it had been mailed several days previously. The hardware merchant, James Gillard, deposited the cheque in his bank, and the milk company finally received the cancelled cheque.

Provincial Constable W. J. Carey was furnished with a description of the two youths and is investigating. "I was under the impression that they were 'fishy' boys or I would never have cashed the cheque," explained Mr. Gillard. "The two of them bought an axe, one with a new handle, it should be easy to spot, and the purchase came to $1.75. He handed me a cheque, saying that it was his father's milk cheque. It amounted to $47 and had the name Melville Usher signed to it.

"It looked all right to me and when the young lad explained that the bank was closed and he could not cash it, I accepted it without hesitation. It gave him $30 out of it and told him to drop back the next day. The next day he showed up and I gave him the balance. Some time later I found out that Usher had never got his milk cheque," he related.

It is believed that the theft and forgery is the work of some one familiar with the fact that Usher did his business with the Toronto dairy and knew what to look for in 'rubbing' the mail box.

FINE CEREMONY AT ST. JOHN'S SUNDAY MORNING

Bishop Of Toronto Officiates—Also At St. Mark's On Saturday

In a hushed church before a large congregation, twenty-eight persons knelt Sunday morning to receive through the outward sign of laying-on-of-hands, the inward grace of the spirit. It was the administration of the Rite of Confirmation. The candidates were confirmed by the Lord Bishop of Toronto, Right Rev. Derwyn T. Owen, D.D., and the class was presented by Rev. A. G. Emmet, rector of the church.

Those who were confirmed on Sunday were Keith Bayer, Richard Lock, Raymond Keating, Grover Newman-Jones, Elton Newman-Jones, Arthur Vahnsberg, Scott McCarthy, Frank Hills, Kenneth Grace, Richard Lenz, Reginald Taylor, Jack Mitchell, W. In his confirmation address, the Bishop brought a message of courage and devotion and based his remarks on the 9th Chapter of the Book of Acts—"And the Lord said unto him, Arise and go into the street which is called straight." "Get straight with yourself and before God. Visit the house of human relationships where there are all kinds of people and opinions. Visit the House of God and never lose touch with Him."

"You have come to the conclusion that you are going to live the right kind of life," stated Bishop Owen. "I would ask you to say to yourself—say to God—I mean this, I really mean this. How long is this blessing to last? How long is your confirmation to go on? For ever and ever. But the most important thing of all is to remember that hands you do not see laid upon you—the hands of Christ, who blesses you and gives you His Holy Spirit to live the right kind of life."

At St. Mark's On Saturday evening, the Lord Bishop of Toronto officiated at the annual confirmation of seventeen students of Trinity College School, which event took place at St. Mark's Anglican Church. FORUM HEARS COL. J. W. O'DELL

Addressed Regular Weekly Meeting Here Sunday Afternoon At United Church

In his opening remarks at the Forum Sunday afternoon the speaker, Col. J. W. O'Dell, of Cobourg, said he could not assume the role of a Cicero in his manner of addressing the ancient Forum of Rome, rather he would speak to his audience as a modern moralizer. Moralizing was good for the individual and caused him to realize and appreciate the wonders of the universe.

The speech of President Roosevelt a few weeks ago represented a personal contact of one man to a hundred million fellowmen. Human intelligence can direct machinery to automatically convert raw material to the finished product. And modern medical skill in "saving human life is beyond belief.

Nothing happens by accident; everything has a cause and cause must be greater than the result. We are divine products endowed with power by God. Our life is a growth and must be extended by contact with other lives, for no man can live unto himself. We must have acquaintance; know the other fellow, (not with the idea of taking advantage of his weakness) but to develop a better understanding. Acquaintance is the greatest thing in life, and Friendship is the oil and grease of life, because friendship can bring happiness in adversity.

The speaker stressed the necessity of studying one's self in a critical manner. "Endeavor to acknowledge your weakness and you will be less critical of the short comings in your fellow man." Study friendliness, and know the other fellow.

Friendliness means responsibilities; it assumes debts that cannot be paid in money but can be paid by meeting and exchanging responsibilities. While money has its use, sympathy and response of the heart is alone the active agent in relieving the suffering of our fellow men. It is only by a full realization of our responsibilities to our fellow men that we can alleviate our social and national ills.

In the following discussion the speaker defined a "friend" as "one who did to others what he wanted others to do to him."

The president announced that the resolution re Christian Socialism would be held over for two weeks for further consideration.

Another announcement was of the meeting for April 30th, which will be an open meeting with a special invitation to the ladies. The speaker on this occasion will be Hon. Vincent Massey and the subject of address "Canada and the Outside World."

CANADIAN FILES SELL IN BRITAIN

Export Sale Of Nicholson File Has Shown A Steady Increase

Within the past year Canada has become a substantial exporter of files, to England and other parts of the British Empire. The credit goes to the Nicholson File Company, Port Hope, the only makers of files in Canada, who have been manufacturing files for the Canadian market since 1891.

"Our export sales for the past year have shown a steady increase," says E. M. Thurber, manager of the company, "and they now constitute a substantial part of our total sales. In England and other parts of the Empire we are competing successfully with files of English manufacture, in spite of the fact that Sheffield steel tools have long been regarded as setting the standard for the world. This is all the more striking when it is known that our Canadian-made files cost the English purchaser more than English files. The reception accorded our files abroad justifies us in expecting a still further increase in our export business during 1933."

Historical Evening Planned For May 9th—Edward Abbott Passes

Despite bad roads, a limited number of the Young People League met on Tuesday and enjoyed a profitable evening. A quotation from the Proverbs of Solomon has been the custom in answering the roll call but at the next meeting, a pithy sentence from the Guide or other paper will be the pass word. The date for the proposed historical evening, was set for May 9th. The material for this meeting of intense local interest is being arranged by Mrs. Edgar Barrowclough and many old books and records are being searched so that facts concerning the "good old days" of Wesleyville and district and the building of the church will be set forth. The Guide is keenly interested in this project and is lending its influence to further its success.

The study subject for the evening was "What is Wrong with the Pathfinder?" (the official paper of the Young Peoples' League of the United Church). After an intensive analysis led by P. W. Hayden, a discussion followed in which Mrs. E. Bee, Mrs. Barrowclough and Wilfred Bee took part. It was unanimously resolved "that there is nothing wrong with the Pathfinder but it is a very ably conducted paper of which the United Church may be proud." Mrs. Arnold Austin conducted the opening exercises and owing to the absence of Dorothy Brooking, the secretary, Arnold Thornadyke, acted.

Edward Abbott Passes With great sorrow we record the death of Edward Abbott at Wellesley Hospital, Toronto, on April 24th. Mr. Abbott came to Wesleyville as a youth some 50 years ago and worked for some time in the neighborhood.

Going to Toronto, he engaged in landscape gardening and conducted a successful business. During the summer of 1931 and 1932 he, with Mrs. Abbott enjoyed a well earned leisure in this village renewing old friendships and making many new. His kindly nature and happy disposition endeared himself to all, and the many services he rendered to the church Sunday school and library will be treasured memories. We can truly say that with his wife "they went about doing good." Mr. Abbott was a member of St. Paul's Anglican Church, Toronto.

APRIL MEETING CANTON W.M.S.

Mrs. M. Birkle's Group In Charge Of Program—Cantata On Good Friday Night

(By Our Own Correspondent) The April meeting of the W.M.S. was held in the church schoolroom on Tuesday afternoon of last week, with somewhat meagre attendance owing to the terrible condition of the roads. The President, Miss A. L. Harris was in the chair and Mrs. M. Birkle's group was in charge of the program.

Mrs. W. Barrie, Mrs. Glat and Mrs. W. Birkle took part in the presentation of chapter of the Study Book.

A song service of Easter Hymns was greatly enjoyed. The Scripture selection, Luke 23:1-48 was read by Mrs. H. Austin. The next number was an Easter service of responsive readings and prayer in unison led by Mrs. W. Mason. Readings—"The Easter Message," "Chow Joe," "The Great King and Great Peace-maker," were given by Miss A. L. Harris, Mrs. T. G. Barrie and Mrs. J. Thomson, respectively. The meeting closed with another Easter hymn and the benediction by Mrs. W. Barrie.

Good Friday Cantata All lovers of music will be desirous to hear the Cantata on Good Friday night, as it comprises such a variety of parts. Besides a number of choruses, there is a soprano solo, an alto solo, bass and tenor duet, soprano and alto duet, ladies' trio, mixed quartette and Canton male quartette.

The choir has been to considerable expense in procuring the Cantata and has devoted much time and effort to its preparation so hope the public will be correspondingly generous in contributing to the collection.

Address By Missionary On Sunday, April 23, Miss O'Neill of Honan, China, will give an address on her work as a missionary there. The meeting which is under the auspices of the W.M.S. will take the place of the regular church service at 1 p.m. The Easter Thanksgiving offering will be taken at this service.

Personal Mr. and Mrs. Allan Peters, Mr. and Mrs. M. Birkle, Mr. and Mrs. W. Langdon, Messrs. J. F. Hawkins and W. Barrie attended the Cantata of the late Mrs. W. A. Peters, Cobourg, on Tuesday of last week. Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Dundas, Bethel Grove, were guests at Brantide on Sunday.

APRIL MEETING CHARLECOTTE W.I.

Mrs. W. McHelm Had Charge Of Program—Varied And Interesting

The April meeting of the Charlecotte W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. Geo. Henderson with 23 members and 2 visitors present. In the absence of the President, Mrs. S. Southorne occupied the chair. Everyone joined in singing the "Institute Ode." The May meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. C. Beighton, roll call to be an exchange of bulbs, roots and slips.

Mrs. W. Reynolds thanked the Institute on behalf of the sewing class members for making it possible to hold the course and also for the social time enjoyed on the last day of the course.

Mrs. W. Marvin, the Educational secretary gave a reading regarding different subjects taught in the schools, stressing the fact that there is a purpose for every subject.

Mrs. W. McHelm had charge of the afternoon's program and she asked everyone why they liked Spring. Mrs. H. Beckett read a paper on "The Lazy Farmer's Idea of Spring." Everyone joined in singing "Ginger Up, Ginger Up." Mrs. D. Wilson and Mrs. W. Reynolds gave readings on other ideas of Spring. Mrs. W. McHelm gladly welcomed Mrs. Johnston of Newtonville to the meeting. She has been present before and a hearty welcome was extended.

The meeting, before the social half hour, was closed by singing "The Little Brown Church in the Vale."

OTHER EDITORS' OPINIONS

The following editorial is taken from the Winchester Press. No man in any community, outside the big cities, gives as much time, as much brain work, as much energy, and as much real push to the welfare of that community as the man who controls the local newspaper.

But what's the use? The story is being repeated year after year. A wise man once said that "Wisdom comes with age." Sometimes, but not always, and so far as their personal interests are concerned years of experience don't seem to have changed the real newspaper man much.

Canada to-day is blessed with a public press that is its glory. It is keeping this country mentally sober and sensible, even against the influence of talented but mistaken men who would lead our people into a medley and confusion that would set us back a century.

LACK OF APPRECIATION

Almost every day The Post meets with a queer twist of human nature that is a source of irritation to every newspaper. It is displayed by the society head who comes to this office in search of free publicity for some event that is to be held and for a nice, complimentary write-up after the event, and, having got it, takes the work for which he pays to some other printing establishment.

Perhaps newspapers are to blame for this, to some extent. They have been so generous with free advertising that people often accept it as a matter of course, not realizing the value of what they receive.

There are other societies that frequently express their appreciation of a paper's services and make a point of mentioning: "You have been very generous with us in your news columns, so we have brought this printing to your office." All newspapers appreciate this show of appreciation and co-operation with such societies to the best of their ability.

We believe that the first-mentioned societies fail to realize that the price charged for a newspaper means but very little, and that the newspaper could not continue publishing were it not for the advertising and job printing that it sells.

When these societies see that the newspaper must have their co-operation to maintain its standard, and when they decide to give their co-operation to the newspaper that gives them so much free advertising through its columns, it will be a happy day for publishers.—Lindsay Post.

Stormy Session Relief Board Clergy And Press Criticised

Rev. T. E. Meldrum is Storm Centre in Heated Controversy—Announcement Made That Government Inspector will Review Situation—Strong Resolution Passed Deprecates Publicity Given in Press

Rev. T. E. Meldrum traded places with Rev. Dr. K. H. Palmer as the storm centre of the local relief controversy at the regular meeting of the Benevolent Society here Friday afternoon and for an hour and a half a heated discussion waged that at times reached feverish heights.

"The publicity occasioned by Dr. Palmer was a great mistake and one that I would not wish to be responsible for," said J. G. Jackson.

As soon as the meeting started Mayor Crowhurst opened the question of the presence of the press, declaring that a reporter had been invited to last week's meeting by a member of the Board and brought to to-day's meeting by a member of the clergy, Rev. T. E. Meldrum.

Mrs. M. S. Hawkins claimed that the presence of the press did not allow for unobstructed discussion and added that she would be afraid to say anything with a reporter present.

Mayor Crowhurst—"I have been accused of improperly handling the relief of the town from a source I didn't expect, learned friends and ministers. The press has never been present before, except at the last two meetings, being invited last week by one of our members and brought to-day by a minister. 'I'd like the board to decide regarding the presence of the press.'"

By a coincidence the reporter at Friday's meeting had just alighted from a car and happened to meet Rev. Meldrum on his way into the Town Hall where the meeting was held, both arriving in the room at the same time.

Rev. Meldrum—"I had nothing to do with the reporter. I'd like you to retract that statement."

Mayor Crowhurst—"You're spoiling around the street about me, morning, noon and night."

Rev. Meldrum—"You can't prove that and you've said other things you can't prove."

Mrs. J. P. Thompson—"I was told that I was responsible for having a reporter here. I deny that."

Mayor Crowhurst—"Last Friday when the Rev. Palmer left the meeting I had some figures on relief costs which I handed to the secretary, A. J. Chesher. Mr. Meldrum said at that time that he was satisfied and regretted having seconded the motion demanding the figures, which was sponsored by Dr. Palmer. On Tuesday he came and got figures from Mr. Chesher."

Rev. Meldrum claimed that he had incurred what part of the money spent for relief actually came out of the taxes and had been informed that in the last four months in round figures, $1,291 had been spent. The speaker emphatically denied that he had said at last week's meeting that he was satisfied with the figures given him and expressed the opinion that not more than half this amount had actually come out of the taxes and offered to supply proof of his claim. He was not asked for it.

Mrs. Philp—"We are expecting a Government Inspector here and no doubt the situation will be cleared."

Finally out of the barrage of comment emerged J. G. Jackson with a motion, seconded by P. W. Galbraith, deprecating the publicity given the chairman and officers recently and reading as follows:—"The members of the Benevolent Society exceedingly regret the adverse criticism openly and publicly made by one recently, who for only a short time has been associated with us. (Rev. Palmer) and in consequence of which, we believe, the criticism to be unprofitable, uncalculated for our edification. From its inception, over seventy years ago, the public have always been essential in their selection of men and women of unimpeachable character and business ability to care for the needy people of the town, and at the same time safeguard the interests of the public. This Society at its last annual meeting had very good reasons for unanimously electing Walter J. Crowhurst President for the ensuing year. The very many appeals for assistance thus far this year have of necessity called forth from the members wise and prudent discrimination and action. The President has been faithful and careful to assist the members in every possible way and this is also true of the other officers. We trust that although he was made a special object of unworthy criticism he will continue to render to this society the same service so much appreciated by us."

Mrs. Thompson—"I am in favour of the latter part of the resolution but not the first part. I have always been trained to have respect for the clergy and that is the reason I cannot support the motion."

When the vote was taken Mrs. Thompson and Rev. Meldrum voted against it while Mrs. Hawkins refused to vote.

Mrs. Hawkins—"People far and wide read these discussions in the papers. The least said the earliest mended."

Mayor Crowhurst (addressing Mrs. Thompson)—"You don't think the criticism of myself should be corrected. Do you think this minister is entitled to criticize me through the pulp and the press. You don't want the other side of the question discussed. I have been scandalously advertised. I took my stand to protect Mr. Chesher who was accused of receiving $80 as proceeds from the Forum Frolic. He didn't know at the time he was accused that a cheque had been issued which was for $25 and not the amount aforementioned."

The letter, which appears below, was given the Press, by an officer of the Post Hope Benevolent Society and explains matters of interest to ratepayers and that organization. To the Editor of The Guide, Dear Sir:—

It would appear from what one learns, that many take the view that the benevolent work of the Relief Board has only one side to discuss, yet every fair minded citizen knows for a fact there are many sides to every question.

With almost eighty applying every week for aid what would be the tax rate if the Board would grant aid according to the figures of Dr. Palmer? One family of thirteen children, who by the way are not all at home, have received through this Society a little over $1.00 a day for at least the last two months. Dr. Palmer says $1.00 a week is allowed for groceries and this statement is correct as far as it goes but there are also 14 quarts of milk per week one ton of fuel granted per month, besides clothing and shoes.

At a recent meeting many of the applicants were asked this question:—Have you had any work this week and if so how much money have you drawn? 25 had received wages in many cases pay for part time in two weeks. The total wages earned was $182.50 and of the twenty-five only one was refused aid that week.

It has been said our President has been over zealous in endeavouring to keep down the tax rate. The majority will agree that it is better thus, than otherwise as long as there is no undue suffering.

In the minutes of the Society I find the following Resolution dated November 9th, 1932.

Moved by H. Fulkford, seconded by Mrs. J. P. Thompson—"That this Benevolent Society does hereby express its confidence in the manner and method by which assistance has been rendered to those in need thereof, and we pledge ourselves to co-operate with the Chairman, President W. J. Crowhurst and Secretary A. J. Chesher in the duties imposed upon them during the present Fall and Winter months."

Also the following resolution dated November 25th.

Moved by Rev. T. E. Meldrum, seconded by H. Fulkford—"That the members of this annual meeting of the Benevolent Society place on record its appreciation of the value of the chairman's work during this year now closed and trust that Mayor Crowhurst allows his name to appear on the ballot for the coming year."

Now regarding the demand for a complete Financial Statement. This statement has in all its fullness been handed to the Board every year at its Annual meeting.

Is it not a reflection on the integrity of this board, at least to those who do not know the names of personnel of the board, to demand this statement at this time?

LOCAL MINISTER GIVES STATEMENT FROM HIS PULPIT

Rev. K. H. Palmer Again Denounces Relief Board At Sunday Evening Service

"It is the duty of the church to see that the hungry are fed, not with stinted hand but in a really sympathetic, loving way," stated Rev. Dr. K. H. Palmer from the pulpit of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church Sunday evening.

"And," he continued, "when will the people of this town be told just what relief is costing them, not what it is costing this society or that society, this government or that government, but what it is actually costing the town of Port Hope, that is all that we ask for in our resolution, but that is what we have not yet been told."

"Let me say, that if this organization which meets on Friday afternoon to deal with relief is a public organization, then all classes and creeds should be represented on it, and if it is a private organization, then it has no right to be handling and disposing of public funds."

For the second Sunday night in succession, Rev. Dr. Palmer has made a statement from his pulpit regarding the distribution of relief by the local relief board, hitherto known as the Post Hope Benevolent Society.

The relief pot in Port Hope is merely shimmering away, occasionally going into eruption, as at the last council session and the relief board meeting. The agitation was started when a resolution was unanimously passed by the board requesting that a complete financial statement be given covering the receipts and expenditures since January 1st in order to ascertain what it is costing the corporation. Subsequently, the Mayor, chairman of the Board, refused to divulge the same.

Council's Resolution "Since last Sabbath evening," said Dr. Palmer in opening, "much has been said and written regarding the matters which I then brought before you. I feel that it is only right that I should deal with some of these."

"At a meeting of the Post Hope Council," he continued "called half an hour earlier last Monday evening to allow the Mayor to attend an important engagement at the bowling alley, the following resolution was passed, one councillor dissenting, others since confessing they didn't know what it was all about...."

After taking into consideration and analyzing the constitution of the Benevolent Society, we feel that the actions of His Worship, the Mayor of this town, Walter J. Crowhurst, Arthur Mark, treasurer, and A. J. Chesher, secretary, who were lawfully accused of dealing wrongfully with relief measures in this town, are in no way open to criticism and we as a council wish to place on record our approval of the functioning of said officers."

"Now, surely," Dr. Palmer remarked, "you do not need to be told who drew that up. You don't need to be long in Port Hope to know who can put up something simply to be able to knock it down. The only shameful thing I know of at present is, the shameful disregard for the brains of the citizens shown by men who would try to camouflage matters by such an absurd resolution. I would not insult your intelligence by spending any longer time on that. But I would suggest that the framers of the resolution would do well to read over again his oath of office, and also suggest to the members of council that in future they use the brains which God has given them and not let others mislead them."

Re Friday's Meeting "I did not attend Friday's meeting," stated the Minister, "as so far as I am able to find out, they don't know who they are or what they are at that meeting. The Benevolent Society has a charter and that charter says that the affairs of the society shall be managed by the directors, who may elect certain officers, president, two vice-presidents, etc., from amongst the directors. Then it says that directors shall be elected at the annual meeting of the members, but all I find in reading the report of the last annual meeting is the election, not of directors, but of officers. Now is this meeting which is held on Friday afternoon a meeting of directors or is it a general meeting of Benevolent Society members, or what is it?"

"One thing I do know," he said "and you should know, that there is not a Presbyterian representative there except myself, and to use an Irish bull phrase, 'I'm not there,' though according to the statement of one member I may attend as a minister without any powers. And just here let me say that it has been reported that I asked for assistance for one of our Presbyterian families and did not get what I wanted, hence my action. This statement is without one shred of truth. I never asked anything for anyone, except for the report which I didn't get. I admit asking for that."

"With reference to the resolution passed at Friday's meeting of the 'I don't know what.' The vote was 3 to 2 and those who voted for that resolution also voted for my resolution asking for the report, which we didn't get. As for the resolution itself, well, it is in the same class as the one passed by the council, not worth spending any time on. I only wish to point out that it starts off with the words, 'The members of the Benevolent Society'. Well, that means YOU according to their charter if you are a ratepayer. When did you tell these folk that they could speak for you?"

Up a Tree Dr. Palmer then dealt with the letter which appeared in Saturday's issue of the Evening Guide. "Any time I write a letter," he stated "I'm not ashamed to put my name as it. If our friend had really wanted to get a suitable signature, he might have signed it, 'Zaccheus' for like another taxgatherer he is up a tree, the only difference being that the other Zaccheus got down, but this one is still up, and what with a crow pecking at him, and an Irish terrier waiting as he thinks to take a nip at him, the poor fellow is in an awful predicament, so I don't blame him for writing such an illuminating letter and signing ratepayer instead of ratepayer."

"With reference to the contents of this brilliant effusion, take the matter of the family receiving $4.00 for food. He adds say 80 cents for milk and then speaks of fuel and clothing, amounting in all to the munificent sum of $1.00 per day for a family of fifteen people. Well, why did he make such a holler when he got a cut in his salary if he thinks that $1.00 a day is a regular fortune for 15. He does not have to feed 18 children. Does he not know that $1.00 amongst 15 means less than 7 cents apiece for food, rent, and clothes, while we give 12 1/2 cents per meal for transients. Then listen to this...Is it not a reflection on the integrity of this board at least to those who do not know the names of the personnel of the board to demand this statement at this time? Who demanded the statement? Was it not the members of the board themselves by unanimous vote. This anxiety on our friend's part to protect the good name of the board is both pathetic and amusing."

Dr. Palmer stated that he was informed by one who attended the last meeting that one of the children of the particular family he referred to, is according to the mother's statement at the meeting, in the hospital through under-nourishment; and that he understood there is a boy from another family there with pneumonia that might have been prevented were there the right kind of inquiry made and supervision exercised regarding the needy.

A Newcomer "As for the criticism of myself," said Dr. Palmer, "the argument is that I am only a newcomer. If I were a visitor to the town and saw someone drowning in the lake, it would be nice, wouldn't it, for me to say, 'My friend, I'm only a stranger here, so I dare not do anything to help you.' I am speaking at a Vimy Ridge banquet Monday night and I can imagine one of the soldier boys saying when the order came 'forward'—'Excuse me, Colonel, but I only landed a few weeks ago from Canada, I'll have a crack at the Germans when I get to know them better.'"

From The Church "And someone else says, 'Oh, he should not speak of these things in the church.' I know some people like to hear us speak of the sins of Abraham, Isaac or Jacob, but don't mention theirs. I was in one town and there was one of those Holy Wives there who said that his citizenship was in Heaven, and he would have nothing to do with the ordinary things of the town's affairs, but the council raised his assessment and it was not very long until his citizenship was on earth."

The Guide Story

"Get in," he said, "and I'll drive you wherever you want to go. Unless you come into the hotel and have lunch with me first?"

Elvira shook her head.

"It's too early," she said. "Besides, I must go home at once. I was on my way to the station."

"This will be quicker than the train," Frank said soothingly; and when they had left the town traffic behind, and were out on the country road, he turned to his silent companion.

"What's the trouble?" he asked kindly.

"It's Janetta."

"The same old trouble?"

"Yes." And she told him about the events of the previous evening. Frank took one hand off the steering wheel and gently patted her arm.

"Poor old girl—it is hard luck, especially as you had reason to hope she was cured. But I don't think there's any need to be too despondent. If this Lord Goodwell is a decent fellow—as I fully believe he is—he'll understand and be quite ready to hush the matter up."

"Yes, I'm sure he would if it were possible, but you see the matter may have gone beyond his power. Someone else may have discovered that the ruby is missing and there'll be a terrible uproar. The servants and jests and everyone will know."

"There is that possibility, of course, but I'll drop you at your cottage and take the ruby, and go on at once to St. Anne's Court. I'll explain matters to Lord Goodwell, and will see what can be done."

"Oh, Frank, will you really? It's very good of you."

"Not a bit of it," said Frank cheerfully and he accelerated and sent the car bounding forward, while Elvira sank back in her corner with a sigh of relief.

There was silence for a few minutes, but the question which the young man had been dreading was bound to come.

"How did you leave Martin?" asked Elvira in a low voice.

She felt Frank move uneasily and the car swerved ever so slightly.

"He was very well when I left."

"Had he been ill?"

"Well he had a nasty accident some time before. Perhaps you hadn't heard about it?"

"I've heard nothing at all."

Frank told her about Martin's accident and illness and she listened with strained attention.

"Who looked after him when he was ill?"

"Well—the people he was staying with, mostly, of course. And I used to help a bit myself."

"But I don't understand, Frank. I thought he was going into partnership with you, and going to live on the ranch. Has that idea fallen through?"

Frank hesitated.

"No—not exactly," he said. "I suppose—at any rate, I hope—he will, eventually. But you see those people at Pinestead—Pretlyman is their name—well, Martin helped them when the old man was laid up; and somehow he has stayed on there ever since."

Elvira had gripped her hands together and was staring straight before her at the road.

"You're keeping something from me," she said quietly. "Is there a girl there? Is Martin—is he engaged, or perhaps—married?"

"Not as far as I know," said poor Frank uncomfortably. "But there is a girl there—Hester Pretlyman."

"Is she attractive?"

"Yes—at least, I think so. I've been in love with her, myself, for years," said honest Frank ruefully.

"Is she in love with Martin?"

The young man was silent. Before his mind's eye flashed a picture of the interior of the shack—the sick man in his low bed—the girl with her dark face and stormy eyes. He saw her open the stove and thrust something into the crimson cavern this wretched. Without looking at his companion, he said gently—

"Yes, I believe she is."

"And Martin?"

There was anguish in the low voice and Frank checked the indignant words which rose to his lips, and answered in the same gentle way—

"You don't know Martin very well, Elvira, if, if you think he could change. But after all, you sent him away—you nearly broke his heart. I don't think Martin will ever love anyone but you. But if you ask me whether he is likely to marry this girl—I must answer, 'yes'."

and presently they stopped beside the bridge.

"Will you come in for a minute, Frank, while I fetch the ruby? Eunice took it from Janetta's room last night and put it away."

The cottage was wrapped in a morning sunshine languor, but Eunice had heard the car and met them at the door, almost weeping with delight and astonishment on beholding young Frank. Janetta was still in bed, she told them. She had said she was tired and had lain quietly all the morning, either dozing or humming gently to herself. She had not said a word about the ruby, or indeed about anything else. Mr. Eldred had called round about eleven o'clock to inquire if the young ladies were tired, but he had not come in.

Elvira went into the sitting-room. "Where did you put it, Eunice?" she asked wearily.

Elvira opened the drawer indicated, and thrust in her fingers.

"It's not in that drawer," she said pulling back her hand.

"But, Miss Elsie, I put it there; I'm not making a mistake. It was the drawer I put it in, for sure."

The old woman had grown pale, and Frank strode across the room.

"Here, let me look, Elvira—it may have slipped behind."

"It was wrapped up in tissue paper," wailed Eunice, "and I put it there with my own hands, Mr. Frank—laying—laying—I should say Sir Frank."

Frank had pulled out the drawer and turned it upside down, but there was nothing in it except a few pennies. He took out each of the drawers in the bureau and looked behind and underneath them. Then he turned a blank face upon the two women who stared at him in consternation.

The Goodwells' famous ruby had completely disappeared!

CHAPTER VI

Janetta lay in her little white bed, looking like a charming child, but she was humming gently to herself, and with one hand from time to time she bestowed a little pat on a gray kitten which was curled up beside her up the bed. She opened her eyes with a tiny frown of annoyance as Elvira came quickly into the room.

"Janetta. Are you awake? What have you done with the ruby?"

There was a silence, while the two girls looked at one another—then the younger closed her eyes again and turned her face away from her sister.

"Go away, Elvira. I'm sleepy."

But Elvira came up to the bed and took her sister firmly by the arm.

"Don't pretend, Janetta. This is serious. Where is Joyce Goodwell's ruby?"

"I haven't got it replied Janetta reluctantly.

"But you know where it is? You've hidden it away?"

"I haven't. I don't know what you are talking about."

Elvira gazed at her in despair.

"Listen to me, Janetta. This is a serious matter—far more serious than—than any of the other things that have happened. You must know what you've done with the ruby!"

But did she? Even as she spoke, Elvira felt a pang of helplessness. She remembered those other times—Janetta's little secret smile of triumph—and then the apparent blackness—the pretended oblivion of all that had occurred. Was she pretending now? Or did she, indeed, recall nothing of the event of the previous night? There was a gentle tap at the door, and Frank entered.

"Hallo, Janie!" he said cheerfully. Janetta turned around and stared.

"Why, it's Frank!" she exclaimed.

"Sure enough," said her cousin. "Now look here, old girl, you've got to tell us at once what you've done with that ruby. There's no time to lose, so pull yourself together and tell us all about it, quick!"

Janetta stared from one to the other. She was beginning to look frightened and suddenly began to cry.

"I don't know where it is," she cried.

"But you remember taking it last night and bringing it home?"

"Yes."

"Then where is it now?"

"I don't know! It was, and sold or caught as they would, she only sobbed and repeated the same thing. Not another word could be extracted from her."

Frank went out to the car with Elvira, white-faced, at his side.

"It's better to go to Lord Goodwell, all the same," he said gravely. "Though, of course, this makes things more difficult. Is she generally like this—afterwards?"

"Yes, more or less; but of course there has never been anything so serious as this before. Just little things like teaspoons and very trifling ornaments—" Elvira's voice broke.

"But she wouldn't realize the value of this? She'd just be attracted by its colour and shape?"

"Yes—that's so. Shall I come with you, Frank?"

"No; you go back and have a good look around. She must have hidden it somewhere."

Sir Frank's car soon covered the few miles between Gray Cottage and St. Anne's Court. He stopped before the imposing front entrance and pulled a massive bell. But when the man-servant appeared he received a shock.

"Lord Goodwell is not a home, sir. He has gone up to town."

"And Lady Goodwell?"

The whole family has gone, sir. They expect to be away some days."

Frank felt dashed. He returned to the car, got in, and turned the horn towards the gates. Then he stopped. A small army of men were engaged in taking down the tents and removing the decorations; no doubt the Goodwells had gone away to escape the inevitable debris of the festivities.

The lawn and garden were a jaded look; but the house itself, looked sedate and calm. Frank stared at its many windows, and wondered what he could do. He could not very well ask the servant if a valuable stone was missing. As he was lecturing in the clutch again, a slight, dark man emerged from the ground on the lawn and came towards him.

"Do you want to see Lord Goodwell?" asked this person, in suave accents. "Perhaps I can be of some service? I am the agent—my name is Eldred."

"Thank you," said Frank. "but my business was with Lord Goodwell. I am sorry to have missed him."

He nodded to the agent, started the car and glided away along the avenue.

"So that's the agent," he mused. "The man who took them to the dance last night; the man who advises Janetta! Well, if Elvira wants to choke him off, she'd better tell him the truth. But if only someone would marry poor Janie, the way would be clear for Elvira and Martin—if it's not already too late."

He drove absentmindedly, his thoughts far away with his friend.

"I wonder if I can do anything," he said to himself. "But what is there I can do? And yet—I'm pretty sure Elvira realizes she has made a mistake."

He felt more sure of this later on in the day, after a conversation with Eunice. The old woman was of the opinion that Elvira was breaking her heart for her lover; and that after the recent catastrophe she might be persuaded to place her sister under proper control. Frank listened; and a great longing seized him to try, in put matters right, both for his cousin and Martin—and also for himself. For if Hester were to realize that Martin definitely belonged to someone else, her wayward heart would turn to himself. He had loved her so long. Suddenly he got up to go and promising to see if there were any fresh developments, went out to the car.

"Don't lose heart," he said to Elvira; "there doesn't seem to be any rumour of the ruby being lost at present, and it's just possible that it hasn't been missed. You see, Janetta didn't take the case, and if it were closed, the people who packed up the presents may have taken it for granted that the ruby was inside. In the meantime, you go on hunting for it and to-morrow, if you think it best, I'll motor up to town and see Lord Goodwell."

Frank went to the post office as soon as he reached Dafford, and after much anxious thought as to the wording, despatched a cablegram to Martin Gaymer as follows—

"People sometimes change their minds. Advise you return at once."

Simple honest Frank felt the world of this cable to be a masterpiece of astute diplomacy. Nevertheless when it had been despatched, his conscience knew some uneasy twinges. He felt sure that Elvira would be very angry with him if she knew about it; and as for Martin—would he feel justified, on the strength of that cryptic message in crowing over his work, leaving the Pretlymans in the lurch and setting sail for England? Frank did not feel very easy in his mind; nevertheless, he had done what he thought best, and he consoled himself with the reflection that at least his action could do no harm.

Meanwhile, at Gray Cottage, Elvira and Eunice instituted a desperate search for the missing ruby. At last, when they were both tired out, Elvira went to Janetta, who had relapsed into a sullen silence and seated herself beside the younger girl's bed with an air of decision. She realized that even at the risk of throwing Janetta into a fever the time had come for plain speaking.

"Look here, Janetta," she said quietly. "We can't go on like this—you've got to listen to reason. You've stolen a very valuable jewel; whether you're capable of realizing what you've done, I don't know—but the fact remains. Now make a great effort and try to remember what you've done with it."

"I haven't got it," said Janetta sullenly.

"But you know where it is?"

Janetta was silent, and her sister rose to her feet.

"Very well," she said heavily, "things will have to take their course. You'll wish you had behaved differently when the police arrive. But it will be too late then."

Janetta looked up suddenly.

"Do you mean they'll put me in prison?"

"No," answered Elvira with a sudden inspiration. "They don't put people like you in prison. They'll send you to a sort of asylum—a Home for people who are not quite mentally sound."

It was cruel—but it had the desired effect. Janetta began to cry stormily.

"I haven't got the ruby," she wailed.

"Then where is it?"

"Mr. Eldred has it."

"Mr. Eldred?"

"Yes—I gave it to him. He came this morning when you were away, and Eunice went to the door to him, and then she went back to the kitchen. But he didn't go away. He came round to my window, and I said I had better let him have the ruby because it was too valuable for me to have lying about, and it didn't belong to me, I told him it was not in my room, but I would get it for him."

"How did you know where it was?"

"I guessed Eunice would have put it in your bureau, because she always does put anything there—any money or anything she finds lying about."

"Yes; so what happened?"

"I fetched it and gave it to him through the window, and he told me not to worry about it, and not to say anything to either of you; and that everything would be quite all right. Then he bade me good bye and went away."

"How did he know you had it, in the first place?"

"I suppose he saw me take it."

Elvira stood in the doorway; her hands pressed together over her fast-beating heart. After a moment she went away without speaking. To Eunice she said later—

"It sounds incredible, but I think she was speaking the truth. I'm going to see Mr. Eldred at once. I shall make him give me the ruby, and then I shall go up to London by the last train, and take it back to Lord Goodwell."

There was a kind of hard desperation in the girl's face and manner which precluded argument. Eunice brought her a warm coat, gave her some food, put her gloves and purse into her hand and saw her set forth on her dreary errand.

It was a warm, pleasant evening. A soft crimson light was just fading in the Western sky, and Elvira knew that she must hurry if she wished to catch the slow train which connected with the late express at Dafford. Alight running, she crossed the meadow by a field-path which made a short cut to the agent's house and in a few minutes was knocking at the door of Woodbine Villa. It was opened by Susan Eldred.

"Why, Miss Raymond, the agent's sister exclaimed.

"Is Mr. Eldred in?"

"No, I'm afraid not."

"Do you know where he is?"

"I couldn't tell you, Miss Raymond; he's gone away."

"Gone away!" echoed Elvira, in consternation, her fears and suspicions leaping up into sudden vigour.

"Where has he gone?"

"I really don't know," said Elvira's sister, staring at her. "He was rather mysterious about it, like he often is. He's one who likes making a mystery about nothing and always does. All I know is that he packed a little bag and got into the car and away he went—about two or three hours ago—as soon as he'd finished his work. But is anything wrong, Miss Raymond?"

"Yes," said Elvira slowly. "But I can't wait to tell you about it now. Please, Miss Eldred, can you give me, Lord Goodwell's London address?"

Staring in much bewilderment at her visitor, Susan Eldred scribbled down the address, and Elvira, with a bid down the address, thanked her and turned quickly away. But the older woman hurried after her, and walking beside her along the path said—

"Miss Raymond, forgive me, if what I'm going to say is an impertinence. But if your trouble is anything to do with my brother—and Miss Janetta, I want to say that I think it would be a pity to come between them. I don't suppose you consider Charles to be your equal—and I know he's got a strange secretive kind of nature—just, Miss Raymond, whatever he is or is not, he loves your sister very truly. He'd make her a good husband if true love counts for aught."

"I shouldn't come between them," said Elvira shortly. "He wouldn't want to marry Janetta if he knew all about her."

But to herself she was saying bitterly that perhaps they were birds of a feather. Charles Eldred had the ruby, worth, perchance, thousands of pounds; and where was he now? What was he going to do with it? Even now he might be at the other side of England, perhaps on his way to the safety of a distant land. And then everything must come out. Janetta must be pitilessly exposed. She, Elvira, had sacrificed everything for her sister; she had given up her lover and any happiness which life might have held—and it was all in vain!

CHAPTER VII

Lord Goodwell's town house was a handsome edifice in a quiet road near Regent's Park. It was nearly midnight when Elvira's weary figure emerged from a taxi at the front door, but, fortunately for her, lights were still burning, and it was evident that some sort of entertainment was still in progress. From the windows on the ground floor issued the sound of many voices and the cheerful blare of a gramophone came forth into the quiet night air.

The front door was opened after a considerable interval by a sleepy footman, who stared in surprise at Elvira's shabby figure and looked dubious when she inquired for Lord Goodwell.

"Is lordship is at home," but I don't know if he'll see anyone so late."

Elvira drew herself up and her manner assumed the hauteur which Charles Eldred had so much resented.

"I think he will see me if you ask him, Miss Elvira Raymond."

The footman asked her to step inside, and after closing the door withdrew through a doorway at the back of the hall.

Elvira stood, an incongruous figure in the rather ornate magnificence of Lord Goodwell's hall, for her worn broad coat was past its first youth and, in her haste, she had caught up and old woollen muffler and a disreputable pair of gardening gloves.

Almost at once, however, the footman returned, with behind him the bird-like head and face of his master. Elvira found her hand taken in a firm clasp, and before she could say anything Lord Goodwell was leading her across the hall and into a small book-lined study at the back, where a cheerful fire of sweet-smelling logs made dancing shadows on thick crimson curtains and comfortable leather arm-chairs. Lord Goodwell drew one of these nearer the fire, and invited her to be seated; but Elvira remained standing, her face raised tremulously to his.

"Lord Goodwell, I have something very dreadful to tell you—" Her voice broke and the man gently took her hand and bade her sit down in a big chair before the fire.

"I don't think you need tell me anything, Miss Raymond."

"But the ruby—oh, is it possible that it has not yet been missed?"

"Now, you are not to worry yourself about it, my dear young lady. I know all about the ruby, and I understand everything."

Elvira stared at his kind, unbraced face in amazement.

"You know about it? That my sister told it?"

He nodded.

"And that she hasn't got it any longer? That it has disappeared again?"

Lord Goodwell's face changed.

"No—I did not know that. You say it has disappeared? Then you don't know where it is now?"

Elvira opened her lips to say—"Your agent has it," when the door was flung open and Charles Eldred came quickly into the room.

"I'm awfully sorry to arrive so late, my lord," he said, "but I had a break-down on the way and had to hire another car to come on. But I've brought you the ruby, safe and sound."

He held out a small package as he spoke and at the same moment his eyes fell upon Elvira. She stood stock-still, staring at her in speechless amazement.

"I'm very much obliged to you, Eldred," said Lord Goodwell.

"But I don't quite understand," said Elvira. She gazed pitiously at his lordship. "I don't understand how you know all about it."

Eldred glanced at his employer.

"Will you explain to her, my lord?" he said quietly, and silently faded from the room.

Lord Goodwell came and sat down opposite his visitor, and his voice was very gentle when he spoke.

"I can explain in a few words, Miss Raymond. Eldred has behaved very well and considerably. He was your sister's take the ruby. They had gone, at her wish, to look at the presents after supper. There happened to be no one in the room but themselves at the time, except the detective in charge. Eldred says he was talking to the detective, who noticed nothing; but Eldred saw Janetta take the ruby out of its case and conceal it in the palm of her hand. He says he did not quite know how to act at first, but while you were putting on your wraps he came and told me about it. He said he would be responsible for the safety of the ruby, and I want to the billiard-room myself, and removed the case, telling the detective I was putting it away. Well then, Eldred evidently induced your sister to let him have the stone had brought it safely back, as you saw. There is no need for anyone to know anything about it, so don't look so terribly downcast, my dear."

Elvira raised her sweet, tearful eyes to his.

"You've been extremely kind, Lord Goodwell. It is now my turn to explain. My poor sister is a kleptomaniac. Since her earliest childhood, anything bright and colourful always attracted her. In all other ways she is as sane and normal as you or I. The doctors thought that the mental disease was connected in some way with the spinal trouble from which she suffered and that she might grow out of it. And indeed we thought she was practically cured—nothing of this sort had happened for so long. But I did my best to prevent her going to your ball."

"You poor child! It must have been a terrible anxiety for you."

"Yes. You see, I was afraid to let her out of my sight. When she was a child and went out to tea, I've known her to take a silver tea-spoon or a bright ornament off the mantelpiece. That was before we realized what was the matter with her. Then all the time while she was so delicate it was easier to watch and guard her, but now that she is so much stronger—"

She stopped and wiped away a gathering tear.

"But Lord Goodwell, I don't know how to thank you for your forbearance. You didn't know all this, and yet—"

"But I did know, I knew that your sister was a kleptomaniac."

"How did you know?"

"Eldred told me. He told me about it when Janetta took the ruby; thus, it explained things you see."

Elvira gazed.

"But how could he have known?"

"Ah, that I can't tell you—but he did know. Now, Miss Raymond, I'm going to order some supper for you and then you are going straight to bed. My family have some sort of a party going on but no one will disturb you in here. It's strictly against orders. My daughter calls this room 'The Hermit's Lair'."

He rang the bell and without waiting to hear her expressions of gratitude quietly went away.

Elvira had eaten some sandwiches and drunk some wine, and was leaning back in the big chair gazing dreamily into the fire, when Charles Eldred entered the room. She turned her eyes upon him without moving.

"I must thank you very much for all you have done," she said; "but there is one thing I must ask you. How did you know—about Janetta?"

For once Charles Eldred met her eyes frankly.

"I'm afraid I must plead guilty to sending a letter of yours which was not meant for me to read. During that first visit of yours, your examination rather surprised you; you know, Miss Raymond. You dropped the letter then and I suppose I had rather a sort of feeling that I wanted to be even with you. That letter of yours, which I kept, gave me a sort of hold over you. And then, after I had seen Janetta I—well, I loved her from the first moment I saw her."

"You know all this about Janetta, and yet you loved her?"

"I love her; and I want to marry her. Janetta loves me in return. I believe I can cure her of this malady. Or, if not, I want nothing else but to give the rest of my life to guarding her and making her happy."

A servant came in to say that a room was prepared for Elvira and she rose wearily and stood leaning against the arm of the chair.

"It is too late to discuss this matter any more to-night," she said slowly; but she gave him her hand with a faint smile, and did not repeat him when he pressed it warmly in his own. Perhaps he felt, secretly, that she owed him a little reparation for having more than half-suspected him of being a thief.

Looking back in after years on this time, Elvira realized that her troubles were intensified by the undercurrent of her own private sorrow; but she gave him her hand slowly; but she gave him her hand with a faint smile, and did not repeat him when he pressed it warmly in his own. Perhaps he felt, secretly, that she owed him a little reparation for having more than half-suspected him of being a thief.

On the night she spent at the London house, contrary to her expectations, she slept well—she was, indeed, worn out in body and mind. Morning light revealed the sunlit atmosphere of the room in which she lay; brought also an acute perception of the difficulties which confronted her. And beneath all her present absorption with the recollection of Frank Raymond's words—"If you ask me whether I think he is likely to marry this girl, I must answer 'yes'."

After a luxurious breakfast in her room, word was brought to her that she was to rest as long as she desired, and that when she was ready to leave Mr. Eldred hoped she would allow him to drive her home in the car.

Elvira had no desire to rest and was soon ready. Lord Goodwell said "Good-bye" to her in the hall, and urged her to put the whole matter out of her mind, and not to worry. He was so kind that the tears came into the girl's eyes and she had difficulty in finding words with which to thank him. She hurried out to the car, where Eldred was already in the driving-seat, a footman standing by, ear on arm, to help her in.

"I hope you'll be comfortable," said Eldred; "but this is only a hired car. Mine is still at Reading. It's a lovely day, so, at any rate, you'll be warm."

There was a new humility about Eldred to-day which could not but impress Elvira favourably; and throughout the drive his manner was perfectly considerate and tactful. He did not allude to his hopes with regard to Janetta until they were very nearly at Stoke St. Anne; then he said—

"Are you going to give your consent, Miss Raymond?"

JESUS TRANSFIGURED

(International Uniform Sunday School Lesson, April 16)

GOLDEN TEXT: "And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth." John 1: 14.

LESSON PASSAGE: Mark 9: 2, 8, 17, 18, 25-27.

And Him evermore I behold
Walking in Galilee,
Through the cornfield's waving gold,
In hamlet, in wood, and in world,
By the shores of the Beautiful Sea,
He toucheth the sightless eyes;
Ere long the demons flee,
To the dead He sayeth: "Arise!"
To the living: "Follow me!"
And that voice still soundeth on
From the centuries that are gone,
To the centuries that shall be!

THE SCENE, 2
There is fairly general agreement that the scene of the Transfiguration was Mount Hermon. This mountain has three peaks, towering up nine thousand feet above the sea level. It is quite near Caesarea Philippi where Jesus and his disciples had been. Attempts have been made to explain what the disciples saw there by the sudden lifting of the mist, and the rising of the sun. The significance of the event, however, was not so much outer as inner. The raiment of Jesus appeared white as snow, but something more striking by far was taking place in the experience of Jesus. In the discussion as to whether the incident occurred on Mount Tabor or Mount Hermon, it has been said that the Transfiguration was not a matter of geography. In like manner as to the method, it may be said that it was not a matter of lighting. It is what the incident meant to those that is of importance to us.

THREE FAVORED DISCIPLES, 2, 7
Peter, James and John went up the mountain with Jesus and shared in his experience. Several times they were chosen for the special privilege of being the sole companions of Jesus. They had qualities of sympathy and insight which fitted them to be with him in such an hour. High honor, indeed, was it for them to be invited to belong to the inner circle of Christ's friendship. It had its dangers, also. Peter's self-confidence and the ambition of James and John may have grown out of this recognition of their worth above that of the other disciples. Privilege always requires great power of self-control. IN HEARTS, NOT IN HUTS, 5, 6
During the Transfiguration experience, Jesus communed with Elijah and Moses, the great representatives of the prophets and the law. Peter wished his experience to be prolonged, and if possible, made permanent. He suggested that three booths or huts might be built to mark the spot. It was a suggestion well meant, but ill-advised nevertheless. He did not know what to say, but felt that he must say something. This great hour, however, could not live on in huts, but only in hearts. That it did live on we know from the written words of Peter. Long afterwards he wrote: "We were eye witnesses of his majesty, for he received from God the Father honor and glory when there came such a voice to him, 'This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased.' And this voice which came from heaven we heard when we were with him in the holy mount." Peter never forgot the Transfiguration.

THE VOICE, 7
The voice from heaven said: "This is my beloved Son." It was a word of reassurance to Jesus. He was certain of the Father's favor and the Father's will. It had become clear to him that he must die. To the disciples came the word: "Hear him."

$1 GUN LICENSE CHALLIES' PLAN

Legislation Also Limits Trapping Permits To British Subjects

Establishment of a provincial-wide gun license, with the fee cut from $2 to $1, is provided for in the annually-proposed changes to the game laws, which were brought down to the Legislature, by Hon. George H. Chalmers, Minister of Game and Fisheries.

Two other features of the Chalmers amendments provide that trapping licenses shall not be issued to non-British subjects, and that in future bear may be taken only under authority of a license except in the cases of farmers trapping or hunting on their own lands.

As forecast yesterday, the Government had paid no attention to the two leading recommendations of this session's Game and Fish Committee, and has declined to amend the act to the extent of altering the opening dates of several of the deer seasons, and of setting up a back law with department-regulated penalties for the shooting of does and fawns.

They too were to follow Jesus. His was the voice which they wished to hear. His was the voice which spoke with authority above all others. To us to-day there is need to hear this word: "Hear him." Christ speaks to us. His words are spirit and they are life. We may share this transfiguration experience by listening to the voice of Christ. "We, too, may go apart with the Master of our souls and walk with him on higher levels. We may breathe that upper, purer air. We may know and enjoy the divine mood. We may be lifted into the sense of exalted fellowship. And our faces may be illuminated by the radiant strength of our devotions."

HEAVEN'S VOICE AND EARTH'S NEED, 17, 18, 25-27

During all this public ministry, Jesus was never allowed to be very long away from the appeal of human need. A much greater contrast could hardly be imagined than that between the Transfiguration experience with the voice from heaven, followed by the sight of an epileptic boy in convulsions as Jesus and his three disciples regained the plain. Certainly there is realism in the gospels. They do not gloss over the ugly and unpleasant facts of life. The grandeur of Jesus is seen in the way in which he could turn from an hour of communion with God to help the most distressing cases of need. Prayer did not make him isolate himself from human kind. Our collective worship fails unless it makes us ready to minister to individual cases of need.

PAYING THE PRICE, 23, 29

The disciples who had been left on the plain had tried to heal the epileptic boy and failed. Jesus came down from the Mount of Transfiguration and at once succeeded. When they were alone, the disciples asked Jesus, saying: "Why could not we cast him out?" His answer implied that they had not disciplined themselves enough. Spiritual power cannot come apart from spiritual discipline. For every follower of Christ the law still holds true. If we would do any service in the name of Christ, we must seek power from God, and we must discipline ourselves.

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION

1. Why did Jesus give to Peter, James and John an intimacy which the other nine disciples did not receive?
2. May we have experience of exaltation corresponding to the Transfiguration of Jesus?
3. Jesus prayed: can we expect to be at our best without prayer?
4. Why do ministers to-day leave healing to doctors of medicine?
5. What is the connection between worship and service?

COUNCIL STRIKES 1933 ESTIMATES

High And Public School Figures Sharply Criticized In Bowmanville

At another lengthy session of Bowmanville town council estimates for 1933 were struck, but not before each estimate came under the careful scrutiny of council. The estimates from the Public School Board came within one vote of being sent back to that body for reconsideration, and it was only after a warning from Finance Chairman Strike that the council would be brooking trouble that the matter was dropped.

The Public School Board asked for $17,000, which was the same as last year, despite the fact that cuts in salaries were effected and other economies made. The difference was accounted for in the fact that the board started 1932 with a surplus of over $2,000 and that surplus did not exist this year.

The High School estimates also came in for sharp criticism when that board asked for $8,610.82, which is $200 less than last year. Councillor Ward went into every detail of the High School budget, and was the sponsor of a motion calling for the board's attention to certain increases in expenditures in certain lines. The motion also asked the board to use a cheaper grade of coal to bring the fuel bill below the $1,100 mark, and also to check up on the large lighting and power bill, which amounts to $450.

Estimates of other committees were: road and streets, $4,500, an increase; public property, $6,300, same as last year; cemetery committee, $1,100, a decrease of $100; printing, $500, decrease of $20; relief, $3,000, an increase; health, $4,500, a decrease; fire, $5,000, decrease of $150.

The insurance of the Durham Textiles and Canada Slicer Corporation buildings owned by the town, will be investigated with a view to having it equalized.

The subject of the roadway to the West Side Beach, which gives access to some 60 or 70 cottages on the lake front, which has been closed by the Brookdale Nurseries, who own the roadway, was the main topic of debate during the evening. The public property committee will approach the Government with a view to having a bridge built across the harbor, as a relief measure.

Other items of business included the re-appointment of A. H. Bickell as road superintendent at a salary of $550. His services will also be used by the Public Utilities Commission at probably a similar salary. It was decided to purchase a car for the road superintendent at a cost not to exceed $150. An amendment sponsored by Councillor Ward that not more than $50 be allowed was defeated.

NEW RULES FOR TRUCK DRIVERS

Proposed in New Bill in Ontario Legislature By Labor Member

No operator or driver of a commercial motor vehicle shall work more than a total period of ten hours in twenty-four consecutive hours, proposed legislation introduced in the Ontario Legislature by Earl Hutchinson (Labor, Kenora) provides. Such period of ten hours shall include the time in which the operator has been engaged in any other work for himself or any other person.

It was proposed that where any trip or round trip exceeds a distance of 200 miles, the employer shall place not less than two operators in charge for the whole of the trip, and no operator shall drive for more than one-half the distance or for more than one-half of the time. Penalties for contravention of the act are provided both for drivers and their employers.

EXPECT VERDICT SOON ON COBOURG PAY CUTS

Some time this week, at a date which has not been set yet, the municipal servants of Cobourg will learn the verdict of the salary-slashers. The council, it is stated, has embarked on a campaign of economy by making substantial reductions in the salaries of town officials. It is believed that the present night constable, Hamilton Brown, will be given his notice at an early date and a successor appointed.

The matter of salary cuts was brought up in council at its regular meeting last Monday, but owing to the illness of the town clerk the question was laid over to a date on which he can be present.

THEFT THWARTED BY LOCAL CLERK

Burglars Scared Away After Attempt Made To Enter Local Clothing Store

Three unidentified robbers escaped early this morning after an unsuccessful attempt to rob the clothing store of S. Hodge, Walton Street. The theft was prevented by Frank Tutton, night clerk at the Queen's Hotel who appeared on the scene and the early morning visitors made a hurried departure.

At first, the trio looked over the clothing store of Messrs. Whetstone and O'Neill, on the north side of the street and then decamped to the south side. A Jimmy was used in an attempt to force the door at the Budge store and three or four deep marks were made in the woodwork. At this stage, the marauders were frightened away.

"It was around three o'clock," Mr. Tutton told the Evening Guide to-day, "and while I was on duty in the hotel, I saw a sedan drive up to the north side of the street. The car parked in front of Mitchell's drug store and three men got out. They went to Whetstone and O'Neill's store and looked the situation over. Then they came over to the south side of the street. Two of the men wore peaked caps while the other wore a hat. I thought I noticed a Jimmy sticking out from under the coat sleeve of one of the men."

Mr. Tutton added that after he saw the three men cross the street he went to the front of the hotel to investigate. At this juncture, one of the would-be robbers, who remained in the car to be on the look-out, hunked the horn. The other two made a hurried dash to the car, which departed in a westerly direction. As the visibility was poor, Mr. Tutton was unable to discern the entire license number but two of the figures were 57.

The night constable was called and on arriving in a few minutes, the robbers were out of sight. Nearby points were communicated with in an endeavour to round up the trio.

TRAFFIC COURT

As a result of a vigorous check-up in this district by Provincial Constable A. E. Reilly, several truckers have been summoned on charges of overloading. Monday in the traffic court here, Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell fined Metropolitan Transport, Toronto, $15.00 and costs for overloading. William H. May, Cobourg, faced two charges of overloading and paid $10.00 and costs on each count.

Charged with speeding, Thomas P. Parker, Hamilton, to-day paid $5.00 and costs and William Lyon, Toronto, was assessed $2.00 and costs for failure to stop at Date before entering the highway.

A DOG'S TESTIMONY

There is an old saying around newspaper offices that it is not exciting news if a dog bites a man, but if a man bites a dog—that's something.

In Milan, near Ann Arbor, Michigan, bandits bound two women and forced them to reveal the hiding place of $500 in cash.

A collie interfered with the thugs, and one of them struck the dog. A suspect was captured and when the dog was led into the presence of the man it growled and tried to bite him.

That's the kind of a story that arouses the enthusiasm of reporters—a dog as a witness against a bandit—man's faithful friend serving the ends of justice.

Of all the lower animals, only the dog voluntarily attaches himself to our species. Any story that demonstrates for the intelligence and loyalty of a dog in dramatic fashion is a good story.—Orilia, News-Letter.
