WOMAN KILLED IN CAR MISHAP

Mrs. Anna Hunt, Napanee, Killed When Car Overturns—Other Occupants Escape

Mrs. Anna Hunt of Hinch street, Camden Township, about 10 miles north of Napanee, was almost instantly killed and her four-month-old baby girl suffered undetermined spinal injuries on Saturday night when their car driven by her husband Dan Hunt, swerved in the road and turned on its side, landing partially in the ditch. Three other children, aged 2, 4 and 6 years, who were in the back seat, escaped uninjured, as did the father. The woman, with her babe in her arms, was trapped between the door and car body when the coach landed on its side. The accident occurred about 8 o'clock Saturday evening on the Marlbank Road, while the family was en route to Tweed to visit Mrs. Hunt's relatives. Coroner Dr. D. R. Hall of Napanee was summoned and ordered the infant rushed to the Hotel Dieu at Kingston, where reports state the babe is holding her own. The mother's death was caused by head and internal chest injuries. Mrs. Hunt, who was 31 years of age, was a daughter of the late Charles Mereau and Mrs. Mereau of Tweed, graduated in nursing from Smith's Falls Hospital and had practiced in Detroit previous to her marriage. The family had resided in Napanee for five years until this spring. Besides her husband and the children, Lorrain, Veronica, Donald and Mary Jean, her mother, two sisters and three brothers survive. Provincial Constable D. B. Gagar and Chief Constable Watts of Napanee were called to the scene of the accident, which has been termed purely accidental and Coroner Hall has decided an inquest unnecessary.

OSHAWA BATHER DROWNS IN LAKE

Mrs. L. Jamieson Meets Death At Oshawa — Body Recovered

Caught in the heavy swells and treacherous undertow of Lake Ontario at Oshawa Harbor shortly after 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon while playing a game of beach ball, Mrs. Louise Jamieson, of 635 Christie Avenue, who was unable to swim, was dragged into a hole 14 feet deep, where she met death by drowning.

The tragedy occurred less than 100 feet from shore, close to and on the west side of the West pier, while many bathers who thronged on the beach and water were unaware of it. Seven individuals, including William Cullings, in charge of the life-saving station, and Lifeguard James Everett endeavored to rescue the drowning woman, without success.

Dorothy and Helen Gaynor, two sisters, aged 13 and 16 respectively, of 171 Lawrence Avenue, Toronto, cousins of the deceased woman, with whom she had been playing water-balls, went to her assistance as soon as she got into difficulties. They managed to keep her head above water for a short time, and did not give up the struggle until they were overcome by exhaustion. Three youths, Harold Lesly, Phillip McCristall and A. Warren, all of Oshawa, arriving on the scene exhausted after swimming a considerable distance, were unable to render assistance.

Meanwhile an alarm had been put and when William Cullings arrived in, but when Lifeguard Everett reached the spot the woman's body had disappeared. He commenced diving for the body, but was unable to locate it, with the lifeboat, grappling operations were begun. Culling was delayed in reaching the spot owing to the fact that a would-be rescuer, in his excitement, had torn the steering wheel out of the boat.

A skiff manned by three firemen—Captains Ray Robbs, Milton Osler and Stanley Smith—which was assisting in the grappling operations, was capsized by the heavy swells.

One hour after the woman first screamed for aid, her body was recovered. Artificial respiration was immediately commenced by volunteers, but failed.

Coroner Dr. F. J. Rundle decided that an inquest would be unnecessary.

POOREST CROP IN 35 YEARS

Canadian Crop Yields Lowest On Record—Decline In U.S.

Canadian field crops will range from 16 to 57 per cent. below average this year, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics predicts. Drought and heat took heavy toll, especially in Ontario and the Prairie Provinces.

For all Canada crop yield prospects are the lowest on record.

Most damage during July was done to crops of flax, wheat, barley and oats. The flax crop, on a greatly reduced acreage, was judged to be a 43 per cent. of average at July 31. The condition of the wheat crop was shown to be 57 per cent. of average which, with the exception of 1931, was the lowest figure at that date in the records of the bureau.

Of wheat prospects on the prairies the report said for the fifth successive year conditions grew worse in July, compared with conditions at the end of June. The decline amounted to over 26 per cent. Manitoba's decline was 19 per cent.; Saskatchewan's, 30 per cent., and Alberta, 23 per cent. The report said Alberta's yield would be one of the lowest per acre in the history of that province.

Sharp Drop In Stalks
The crop reporting board of the United States Department of Agriculture forecast the lowest production of wheat and oats in 35 years and the second smallest corn crop since 1901.

The wheat crop for this year, Winter and Spring combined, was forecast at 499,671,000 bushels. Corn was listed at 2,273,019,000 bushels. A month ago the indicated corn crop was 2,384,032,000 bushels. Last year's production was 2,875,570,000 bushels. The combined wheat crop a month ago was forecast at 495,681,000 bushels, while last year's production was 726,831,000 bushels.

MAKE PROGRESS AT G. BEAR LAKE

High-Grade Pitchblende Being Bagged For Shipment

Gilbert LaBine, vice-president of Eldorado Gold Mines, now at the property, advised the Toronto office Tuesday that equipment for the concentrator and supplies for next year's operations have arrived at LaBine point. Everything is in good order, he stated.

Charles LaBine, president, states that with the mill equipment on hand no time will be lost in placing it in position. Foundations were completed some time ago and supplies are on hand for finishing the mill building. It is expected that that Eldorado will have its mill in operation before the end of the year.

The Eldorado crew is bagging high-grade pitchblende and silver ore for shipment this year. It is estimated that between 150 and 200 tons will be taken out before the close of navigation.

AGAIN A WINNER AT TREASURE HUNT

Miss B. Costain Is Another Double-Winner — Toronto Lady Gets Set

The Capitol Treasure Hunt was a particularly gay affair last night with both house and lobby filled with eager hunters. Fred Ough, the master of ceremonies kept the audience in the best of humor by his lively line of chatter and everyone seemed tremendously pleased to see who the lucky ones were. Two Toronto ladies winning prizes, Mrs. R. S. Powell, who got the Grand Prize and Mrs. W. H. Perryment, who received the centre piece, were Port Hope girls from Protestant Hill, the former was Miss Irene Marsh and the latter, Miss Ruby McCurdy. Friends here were glad to see the pleasure of their visit home enhanced by their success in the Treasure Hunt.

Another popular winner was Miss B. Costain, whose ticket flipped out of the box as if by magic, putting her in the double winner class for a lovely sandwich plate.

When Mrs. Arthur Smith's name was called out many wondered why Mrs. Smith, Toronto Road didn't arise on the occasion, but Mrs. Smith, John street, had the right stub to match the ticket and produced it for the comfort—so what's in a name when a number is attached. Other winners were: Mrs. J. T. George, pie plate; Mrs. W. J. Nesbitt, hon. hon-dish; Mrs. G. Mercer, butter dish; Mrs. R. Best, bread tray; Mrs. J. Rowe, flower basket, and Miss T. Thompson a lion bon dish. Only one man was called, Lorne Williams and he wasn't there or was too shy to come up when all the others were ladies.

"The Silver Cord" is a story with some striking truths marvelously well played by Joel McCrea as David Phelps; Irene Dunne his bride, Christina; Irene Linden, his brother, Robert; Frances Dee, the latter's fiancée and Laura Hop Crews, as the mother, who is insanely jealous of them.

Miss Dunne enacts the clear-seeing Christina who resists her mother-in-law's inordinate love for her son. A six months' bride, Christina and David Phelps' return from their honeymoon to Mrs. Phelps' household. Instantly Christina discerns David's mother's diabolic undermining of her son's affection for their woman. Masquerading as a paragon of mother love, Mrs. Phelps breaks her younger son's engagement. Her conniving is then bent upon poisoning David's love for Christina. She offers money and property to lure David from a proposed residence away from the maternal nest.

Christina refuses to endure Mrs. Phelps' malignant interference. Courageously she exposes the underlying motives in his mother's love for David. She refuses to surrender her husband to another woman, even if she be his mother, and dares David to decide if he wants to liberate himself from a mother's engulfing affection or to endure it until the day he dies.

OLD AND YOUNG JOIN AT PARTY

United Church W.M.S. Entertains Mothers And Babies Of Congregation

On Thursday afternoon, August 10 immediately after the usual monthly meeting, the United Church W.M.S. were tea hostesses to all the young mothers and babies of the congregation. In this hospitable gesture they were ably seconded by the members of the Mission Band.

Now, to the uninitiated, it is known that once a year the W.M.S. delights to entertain the mothers and small kiddies with a view to having the dears graduate from Baby Band and Mission Band to future worthwhile members of the W.M.S.

This year the festivities took the form of games on the church lawn and a short program by the Mission Band in the S.S. Hall. These were succeeded by tempting refreshments served as the wee guests sat in kindergarten chairs at low tables.

The more active among the W.M.S. members renewed their youth in joining the mothers and juveniles in the time honored "Here we go gathering nuts in May" and "I wrote a letter to my love", while the rest applauded from chairs on the lawn.

Though the Mission Band program was frequently punctuated with squeals of delight, no one was disturbed in the least. Indeed, the innocents greeted every number with the equivalent of "three hearty cheers", but this only added to the hilarity of the moment.

The youngest guest was only five months old, but it is wiser to investigate the age of the oldest present.

WEDDING BELLS

MORRISON—NORTON

A pretty wedding took place at "Ipperwash," the summer cottage of the bride's parents, at Victoria Beach, Colborne, when Gertrude, Alice Louise, youngest daughter of Rev. J. N. Norton and Mrs. Norton, was married to Thomas Morrison, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Morrison of Bannford, formerly of Welland. The bride's father conducted the ceremony, which took place on the prettily decorated veranda. Miss Nellie Norton, sister of the bride was bridesmaid, and Mr. William A. Holt of Welland groomsmen. After the customary luncheon was served. During the signing of the register Mr. Holt played a cornet solo. Mr. and Mrs. Morrison will reside in Bannford, where Mr. Morrison is a member of the teaching staff.

CAR SNAPS OFF TELEPHONE POLE

Motorists Escape Injury In Accident Near Port Hope Tuesday

Two American motorists escaped serious injury at 2.30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, when the car, in which they were riding, snapped off a telephone pole on the Provincial Highway opposite the south gates of the Port Hope Union Cemetery. The occupants of the car were Maitland Ballard and Rev. O. O. Douglas, Theresa, N.Y.

The former, the driver of the car, suffered a slightly bruised shoulder while Rev. Douglas escaped with a slightly scratched wrist. The front portion of the sedan was somewhat damaged.

The New York State motorists were driving to Toronto and on the outskirts of Port Hope, noticed another car following a wagon. The car in front suddenly slowed down, and Ballard, not expecting the move, applied his brakes too quickly and the vehicle jumped into the ditch. A telephone pole was snapped off at its base and a portion, some twelve feet in length was removed, while the top section of the pole remained suspended from the wires. The top part of the pole was jammed against the roof of the car, but it was not pierced, or the occupants would have, in all probability, sustained serious injuries.

The mishap was investigated by Provincial Constable F. R. Blucher, Port Hope.

The death took place at Chatham on Thursday, of Margaret M. Hamil, wife of Rev. Arthur H. Going, of Peterboro, formerly of Port Hope.

Cariboo Gold Fields Attracting Attention

The Mail and Empire to-day editorially says:— Another absorbing chapter in the romance of Cariboo's gold fields bids fair to be written about the pyramid of quartz that Amos Bowman, noted pioneer geologist of British Columbia, declared to be the very centre of the district's treasure deposits.

The Victoria Colonist reports the visit of a number of prominent mining engineers to the locality and adds: "The immensity of the ledge, which the engineers characterized as a true fissure vein, staggered the imagination of the members of the party, while its potential productiveness was such that an immediate start was ordered on the driving of a tunnel."

This party may be on the track of the mother lode which has lured prospectors for years to the Cariboo district in British Columbia.

JOHNSTON FAMILY HAS A REUNION

Came To Millbrook In 1842, Later Settling In Peterboro

United for the first time in twenty-five years, the family of the late A. J. Johnston and Mrs. Johnston is holding a reunion at Peterboro. The Johnston family has been long in the district, coming from County Monaghan, Ireland, to Millbrook in 1842, and later settling in Peterboro, where the great-grandfather built the first brick house and for years was the leading tailor in the town, while a brother, George, was the Chief Constable.

Rev. W. A. Johnston, who has just returned from six years' service at La Union, Colombia, South America, was the member of the family who came the greatest distance.

BELLEVILLE AS PORT FOR OCEAN VESSELS

Sir Alfred Cope, K.C.B., managing Director of the Amalgamated Anthracite Colliers, Limited, the largest miners of anthracite in the United Kingdom, favors the plan to make Belleville a port for ocean vessels, bringing British coal into the Bay of Quinte section and taking back farm products.

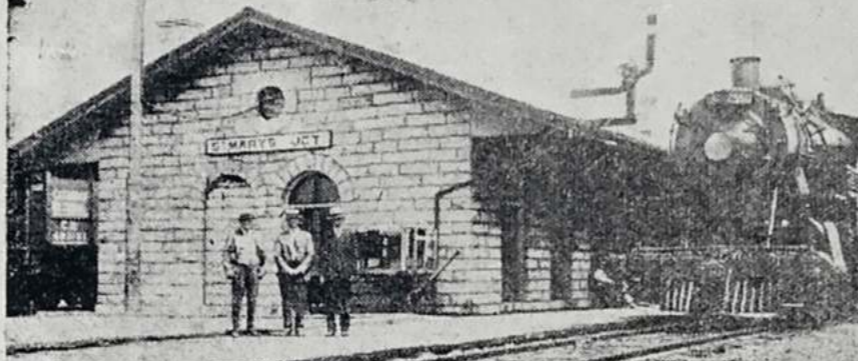

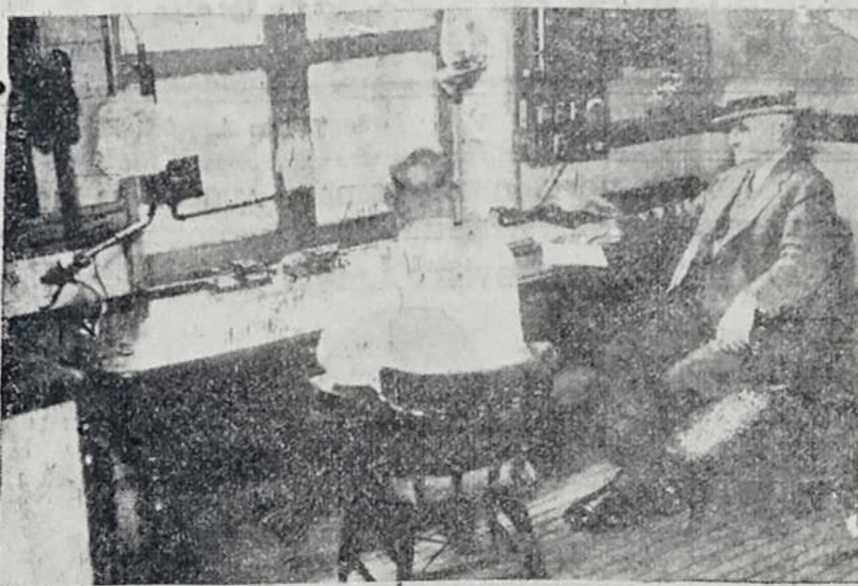

W. E. Schuster, who has been active in the effort to secure reduction of freight rate by rail on coal from Montreal to Belleville, in the plan to exchange British coal for Ontario farm products, has received from Sir Alfred Cope a cable from Swansea: "Many thanks your cable. Will endeavor work same. Regards, Cope."

Mr. Schuster explained that large ocean boats pass up the St. Lawrence River and Lake Ontario to Toronto and Hamilton and that there must be deepening of the channel at the Narrows to bring these craft directly to Belleville and Trenton. He suggests that for the present it is possible to lighten them at Picton and Deseronto to satisfy Belleville needs and then to bring the vessels up past Telegraph Light to Belleville, and Trenton.

"This is a direct hook-up in transportation of Bristol and Bay of Quinte ports," he remarked.

Empire supplies of sweetened whole condensed milk were augmented in the British market by a five-fold increase in imports from Canada, which headed the Empire list with 27,625 cwt. in 1932. Canada in that year was also chief Empire exporter of unsweetened condensed milk with 66,345 cwt.

HISTORIC DESK PRESENTED TO HENRY FORD

The venerable telegraph table used by Thomas A. Edison, the electrical Wizard, when but a lad of 16 years working as a telegraph operator for the old Grand Grand Railway, at St. Mary's Junction, has been presented by J. S. Hungerford, Acting President of the Canadian National Railways to Henry Ford, in a car magnate, for inclusion among the Edison exhibitions, at the Edison Institute, Dearborn, Mich. The desk has stood in the same position for 75 years and has been in daily use. The layout shows, at the top, W. A. Kingsland, General Manager of the Central Region, who personally went to St. Mary's to inspect the desk prior to its shipment to the Institute, with the present operator, William Jacobi, now working the old Edison trick. The lower picture shows the station, its architectural appearance unchanged from Edison's day. The first window on the right of the building was the one before which Edison sat and where the desk has stood all these years; while on the tuck, at the corner, is the new desk which will replace the old, historic one. In the foreground may be seen Mr. Kingsland, C. J. McKeough, Superintendent of the Stratford Division and T. T. Irving, Chief Engineer of the Central Region.

LOCAL TRAIL RANGERS HOME

John C. Hayden's Group Have Fine Time Near Alderville

Healthier in mind and body, twenty members of the Trail Ranger group of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church have returned home after a ten days' camp near Alderville, Northumberland County. The camp was under the supervision of John C. Hayden, Port Hope.

The camp was pitched on Vimy Ridge, a high wooded hill on the shores of Rice Lake, three miles from Alderville, on the Indian Reserve, dedicated by Chippawas to the memory of their fallen braves who gave their lives in the battle of Vimy Ridge during the Great War. From the camp could be seen the rice fields where Indian families gather in the fall 500-600 pounds for which they receive 35 cents per pound.

The Indians were kind to the Port Hope campers and often took the smaller boys on canoe trips. As well, the natives told the boys many tales about historic Rice Lake and their only regret is that their children are growing up, learning only the English language.

The Trail Rangers thoroughly enjoyed the ten day outing and time was spent in games, campfires, softball, swimming, etc. The camp daily, "The Mosquito Gazette" provided plenty of merriment.

LIMES VIE WITH LEMONS

Lemons are going to be hard put to maintain their prestige in the famous lemon pie. The competitor is the lime which it is claimed is many times juicier than the lemon, much tastier and makes better lemon pie than the lemon. A total of 250,000 limes, all from Trinidad, British West Indies, of which 100,000 are for the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto, arrived under refrigeration aboard the Canadian National freighter "Cornwallis."

LONG DISTANCE ANNIVERSARY

57 Years Ago Since First Such Telephone Talk Held In Ontario

(From Thursday's Daily)

The familiar Blue Bell emblem, symbol of Bell Telephone service, floats to-day from a mast above the Company's offices to signalize the 57th anniversary of long distance telephony.

On August 10th, 1876, power supplied by the Toronto batteries of the old Dominion Telegraph Company energized a one-way talking circuit between Brantford and Paris that enabled Alexander Graham Bell, the telephone inventor, to demonstrate the possibilities of long distance telephony over the eight-mile stretch. "This," to quote Dr. Bell, himself, "was the first long distance telephone ever in operation." To-day, telephone voices speed across Canada from coast to coast in one-fiftieth of a second and they can be flashed across the ocean with almost the speed of light.

Manager G. E. Sweeney of the Bell Telephone Company here, said today: "India was brought within speaking and hearing distance of Canadian telephone users a few weeks ago, yet the announcement of this service provoked only passing comment. The important component parts of the British Empire, with the single exception of New Zealand, are now all inter-communicating by wire and wireless telephony. Of the more than fifty different countries, with upwards of 30,000,000 telephones; that may now be reached from any Bell telephone, India is one of the most distant, yet voice impulses can now pass between Brantford and Bombay or between Poona and Paris in a split second. That is just one indication of the advancement in telephony since that Brantford-Paris test 57 years ago to-day, and particularly in the last six years since Janu-

512 MEN AT TRENTON CAMP

Expect 1,000 By Wintertime—Probably Some From Port Hope

Nineteen men from Oshawa arrived at the Trenton Air Camp during last week to swell the total of unemployed men at the camp to 512. It is believed the number will be increased to nearly 1,000 men before winter, and in all probability a portion of these will be taken from Oshawa, Port Hope, Cobourg and Belleville.

At present the "Foreign Legion" as the men are known, are in the best of spirits. Sports form a large part of the daily program, and the softball team operated by the legion is one of which the entire camp is proud. Work is proceeding on the construction of a new addition to accommodate the new men who will be arriving at the camp, and tennis courts are also being built. According to Trainer W. Adams, of the air camp, there are several promising boxers in the camp, and it is planned to hold several boxing nights during the coming fall and winter.

Work on the administration building is progressing favorably and the foundation is rapidly nearing completion.

LINDSAY YOUTH BELIEVED DROWNED

James Freeburn, aged 25, of Lindsay, is believed to have been drowned in Clear Lake, 13 miles north of Peterboro. He left Kawartha Park to go across the lake in a canoe on Friday and Sunday his water-logged canoe was found on the opposite shore. Dragging operations are under way under the direction of Provincial Constable David Porter of Peterboro.

CROP REPORT

GENERAL

While the outlook in Alberta is slightly improved by recent rains, heat and continued drought have caused further deterioration in Saskatchewan and Manitoba where crops are maturing too rapidly. Fair to good yields are indicated in Northern areas of Alberta and Manitoba and in Northeastern Saskatchewan. Other areas generally are poor with total failure and feed shortage indicated in many districts. Ravage by grasshoppers continues over Southern areas in Quebec rain which had been so badly needed of late fell during the past week with beneficial effect in many parts of the province. In Ontario the continued drought is taking a serious toll of crops generally and is causing some concern in many parts of the Province. Recent rains have been beneficial in the Ottawa valley and in certain Northern sections. In the Maritime Provinces with growing conditions good crops continue to progress satisfactorily, although rain is now needed. In British Columbia weather conditions have been favourable but rain would now be beneficial in some districts. Details follow:

PRAIRIE PROVINCES

ALBERTA NORTHEASTERN AREA—Wheat crop on summerfallow is average but stubble wheat and coarse grains are poor. ALBERTA SOUTHEASTERN AREA—Crops generally are poor and in some districts will return seed only. ALBERTA WESTERN AREA—Crops in the Northern districts are fair to good. With the exception of those on irrigated land they are poor in the South where feed shortage is imminent. Frost damage is heavy in a few districts. Sugar beets continue favourable. SASKATCHEWAN NORTHERN AREA—Crops are doing fairly well in Eastern districts but reports from the Central and Western areas are unsatisfactory and indicate that a serious feed situation is developing. SASKATCHEWAN SOUTHERN AREA—Yields of all grains will be poor except in isolated sections and farmers are cutting crops for feed in many districts. North of the C.P.R. main line from Moose Jaw East conditions are fair to good. MANITOBA—Due to premature ripening harvesting has commenced early. While some fair to good yields are indicated particularly in Northern districts, most of the crops over Southern and Central areas are poor. Coarse grains are generally light and in many instances are being cut for feed.

PROVINCE OF QUEBEC

Haying is nearly completed and the yield is below average. Oats are spotty promising a good crop in some sections and much below average in others. Indications point to an average yield of other cereals. Corn has improved and an average crop is expected. Prospects point to an average yield of potatoes and other roots. Pasturage is fair to poor.

PROVINCE OF ONTARIO

Threshing of Fall wheat is well advanced. The cutting of a short crop of Spring wheat has commenced and barley and oats cutting is general with threshing under way in some districts. Burley tobacco is spotty and badly burnt and indications are that the yield will be 40% to 50% of last year's. Flue tobacco is more satisfactory. Corn is generally satisfactory and an average crop is expected. Recent rains have helped root crops in some sections of Eastern Ontario but the growth in other districts is backward. Pasturage is badly burnt in many districts and lack of proper feed is affecting the milk flow adversely. Tree fruits are fairly satisfactory.

MARITIME PROVINCES

Cereals are coming along well and an average crop is expected. Potatoes and other root crops promise an average yield. Apples are sizing well. Pasturage is average.

PROVINCE BRITISH COLUMBIA

Timothy and second alfalfa are being cut and harvesting of a below average crop of hay is nearly com-

WEDDING BELLS

TERREBERRY — QUEMBY

The marriage took place in the Port Hope Baptist Church this afternoon at two o'clock of Ivy, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Quemy, Hope Street, Port Hope, to Laverne, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Terreberry, Port Robinson, Ontario, Rev. T. E. Meldrum officiating.

The church was attractively decorated with gladioli and dahlias and the wedding music was played by Miss V. Hales.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and she wore a gown of white crepe. Her veil was of silk net and was in cap shape, caught with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of premier roses. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. E. G. Hazell as maid of honour, who wore a frock of grey crepe with a hat of grey and shoes to match. She carried a bouquet of briarcliff roses. The best man was A. W. Quemy, brother of the bride, while the ushers were Messrs. Jack Pulford and Harry Van Everdingen.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where the bride's mother received, wearing a gown of brown crepe with brown accessories.

Later, the bride and groom left for a trip to points west. For travelling, the bride wore a grey gown, with matching accessories. They will reside at Port Robinson.

PROVINCE OF QUEBEC PLANS NEW HIGHWAY

Scheme Is Submitted For Approval Under Relief Legislation

The Roads Department of the Province of Quebec has practically decided to construct a highway from Senneterre in Abitibi County to Mont-Laurier and Maniwaki, according to a statement issued by Hon. J. E. Perrault, Minister of Roads. Mr. Perrault stated that the scheme has been submitted to Ottawa for approval under the unemployment relief legislation.

The new highway would start at Senneterre and follow a line close to that adopted some years ago by the Southern Abitibi Highway Company. At a point north of Mont-Laurier and Maniwaki, it would develop into two branches toward the latter towns.

The next time Gordon Hall, of Peterboro, acts as starter at a regatta he is going to make sure how the gun is loaded.

Hall officiated at the island regatta this week. At the close of the last event he fired off a couple of "blanks" he had left, pointing the shotgun at the bottom of the motor launch.

But one of the "blanks" was not blank. The buckshot tore the bottom out of the stern. Owners of the old launch doubt it will be worth raising.

gleted. Grain and roots continue to make satisfactory growth. Tree fruits generally are in good condition and present estimated yields are apples 80%, pears 95%, plums and prunes 70%, peaches 75%, apricots 50%. The cherry crop was disappointing, the yield being 60% of average. There is ample feed on the ranges and water for irrigation is plentiful.

One of the largest lunge caught this summer was landed by O. G. Johns of Cobourg, while fishing at Rice Lake. The lunge was caught with a double buffalo, and put up a battle that lasted an hour. Provincial Constable D. Silvester at the request of Reeve A. B. Mann, of Smith Township, stepped into the Chemong pavilion about 1 o'clock Monday morning and stopped the midnight dancing frolic that was then in progress. The dancers were hustled out of the pavilion. It is understood that Harry Porter, manager of the pavilion, had neglected to secure permission from the township council to operate the frolic after midnight Sunday and there is a township by-law prohibiting operation of such dances. Reeve Mann attempted to close down the frolic alone first, but Mr. Porter refused to shut down, and then Constable Silvester was called in.

The Lindsay Hydro Commission intends to protest the increase in Hydro rate—an increase that does not affect the consumer, but which will eat up between $8,000 and $10,000 of the commission's surplus each year. When it was announced that Hydro rates were to be decreased in 73 municipalities and raised in 10 others, information was given out there that Lindsay was not included. Since that time, however, the commission has been notified that it will have to pay $4 more per horsepower. This increases the rate paid by the Lindsay commission from $42 to $46 per horse-power. Last year the rate was increased from $40 to $42 there.

Isn't everything working out fine?
We thought the wheat and grain production should be reduced and nature has fixed it up.

Perhaps we'll have seven years' bad crops now, get the surplus used up, and raise the prices to the skies, then everybody'd be happy—except the hungry fellow without the price.

We'll know better just what the crop is when it's in and measured in actual bushels. There are still a few hazards which may add to the desired program of reduction.

Italians Land At Azores After 1,200 Mile Flight From Newfoundland

The Italian air armada, en route back to Italy from Chicago, arrived in the Azores Tuesday after a 1,200-mile flight from Newfoundland.

The sixth, seventh and eighth triads of the 24 planes landed at 1.12 p.m. E.S.T., to be welcomed by an enthusiastic populace, the salute of cannon and ringing of church bells. Start was made from Shoal Harbor, Nfld., at 2.45 a.m. eastern standard time, with a light westerly wind and clear atmosphere.

After a brief stop at the Azores, General Balbo intends to press on to Lisbon, thence homeward to Italy to be honored with the title of air marshal by Premier Mussolini for his achievement in bringing the squadron safely over the hazardous northern Atlantic route to Chicago and capturing the spotlight for Italy at the World's Fair.

The armada carried several thousand pieces of mail for delivery in Europe.

Letters posted in Newfoundland had 75-cent orange air-mail stamps surcharged to $4.50, making them the most expensive air-mail stamps in the world.

SONNENBERG QUITS MAT GRANTS WIFE DIVORCE

Gus Sonnenberg, wrestler and former Dartmouth football player, says he will go to Reno to establish residence so his wife, Judith Allen of the movies may get a divorce.

"And it may be the last big act of my life," he said gloomily.

"The doctors have told me I've got only six months to live.

"I'm through with the ring. I'll never wrestle again, he said.

"I've got a pulse rate of 140 right now and that means curtains.

"I've really got a broken heart.

"I'll stay in Reno six weeks and then let my wife sue and get the divorce.

"She's a great little girl and she's got her career ahead of her.

"Down deep in my heart I know she loves me—and I love her."

Sonnenberg's heart ailment—auricular flutter—sent him to a hospital after a body slamming bout with Jim Browning.

The actress said she was happy to hear her husband plans to carry out his part of their agreement to go to Reno.

"I have offered to share his expense of going if he would let me obtain the divorce, but he would not listen to that," she said.

"It is my understanding that his heart ailment will go away. I can't believe that he is through wrestling or that his life will be shortened by illness. I am terribly sorry about it all, but there seems to be nothing else for us to do."

FATALITY MARS RETURN FLIGHT

One Of Balbo's Officers Killed Leaving Azores—Three Injured

Tragedy marked the return to the European continent Wednesday of the Italian air fleet, nearing the end of the most remarkable mass airplane flights in the history of aviation.

One man was killed and three injured when one of the 24 giant seaplanes cracked up at the start outside the harbour at Ponta Delgada, on the island of San Miguel, in the Azores, the other 23 planes made the last phase of the daring transatlantic formation cruise without incident and the fliers' given a roaring welcome, slept in Lisbon saddened by the accident.

The man killed was Lieutenant C. Squaglia, youthful reserve pilot on the seaplane I-Rani, piloted by Captain Ranieri. The plane was in the squadron of three commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Uisse Longo. Captain Ranieri, Sergeant-Mechanic Cremaschi and Sergeant Boveri, the other men in the plane, were only slightly bruised.

General Balbo, air minister in command of the aerial armada, wireless Premier Benito Mussolini that the accident was caused by "an error in manoeuvring." He and the other 14 planes proceeded to Lisbon, arriving at 10.40 a.m. E.D.T. They were joined by the three squadrons led by General Aldo Pellegrini, second in command of the mass flight, who had remained at Horta, in the Azores, last night.

The other fliers at Ponta Delgada, blamed the narrow harbour at that place for the fatal accident. Most of the planes had to take off in the open sea because of the smallness of the harbour inside the breakwater they reported.

Both body sections of the seaplane were smashed when it started from the surface of the bay and then suddenly dropped back into the sea. The wings were intact. The wreckage is to be crated and shipped back to Italy.

Lieutenant Squaglia was thought suffering merely from shock when he first was taken to a hospital at Ponta Delgada, but a cerebral hemorrhage developed, causing death.

General Balbo said the planes made a good flight from the Azores, despite fog off the Portuguese coast. Balbo's squadron left Ponta Delgada at 2.30 a.m., making the flight of 760 miles in seven hours and 10 minutes, or a little better than 100 miles an hour. The fliers, exhausted after their flight from Newfoundland and only five hours rest in the Azores were given a short reception and then hurried off to hotels for a night's sleep.

FELLOWSHIP: We took sweet counsel together and walked into the house of God in company.—Psalm 55: 14.

According to geologists and physicists there are about 40 different ways of estimating the earth's age.

MRS. D. CAMPBELL 91ST BIRTHDAY

Was Born On Protestant Hill, Port Hope—Resides At Lindsay

Mrs. Dave Campbell, 13 St. Paul street, Lindsay, Thursday passed the 91st milestone in her life, having been born on Sunday, August 9th, 1842. At ninety-one, except for a touch of rheumatism and the fact that she is a little hard of hearing, she is as bright as the proverbial silver dollar, hale and hearty and enjoying life.

Thursday she was giving some wood and almost every day members of the family stop by in her household duties for fear she will overtax her strength. She has an exceedingly retentive memory, especially for the pieces of poetry and the songs she learned as a girl, and she sings them well. To-day she recited for a ninth hour the old poem entitled "Welcome, Ever Welcome to My Door," a few verses she first learned as a young girl.

Mrs. Campbell was born at what is known as "Protestant Hill," at Port Hope, and when a girl moved with her parents to a farm near Lindsay on what is known as Cunningham's Crossing. When she was 17 years of age she came to Lindsay to work and remembers working behind the counter in several stores, including Thickett's and Foley's stores. It was the time before there was a railway into Lindsay.

When she first went to that district there were no streetlights, but muddy roads and plenty of bush and swamp. Lindsay was built on a swamp, she said, and there were few sidewalks, mostly cow paths. The education she received was in a school in Port Hope, as there were none near her home at Lindsay. Mrs. Campbell married at the age of 20 and she has two sisters in Lindsay, namely, Mrs. William Stinson, Miss Maggie Parker. Her sons and daughters are Mrs. (Ethel) John G. Chambers, St. Paul street, Angus Campbell, Colborne street, Henry Campbell, St. Paul street, and Liz is Campbell, all of Lindsay. Mr. Campbell died some six years ago.

That Mrs. Campbell has been a Conservative was testified by the large picture of the late Sir Sam Hughes, hanging on the wall, a gentleman for whom she had the greatest regard, she said. She had been very handy with carpenter tools and in the dining room stands a tall wooden cupboard which she made entirely by herself 15 years ago. In religion she was a member of the Methodist Church.

CARD OF THANKS

D. Walton-Ball wishes to thank all the kind neighbors who assisted in saving the furniture at his old home which was destroyed by fire last week. He also wishes to thank them for the kindness shown to Mary Ann Neal, his mother's faithful old servant for fifty years.

Thomas Jarrett, has been appointed magistrate of Trenton, having acted as justice of the peace during the illness of the magistrate. Mr. Jarrett is editor of the Quinte Sun, which he founded 14 years ago, and is vice-president of the Trenton Rotary Club. He served two years in the Trenton town council, being chairman of the Court of Revision, and was formerly member for 10 years of the Trenton Board of Education, of which he was chairman.

Harvesting of fall wheat is nearing completion and threshing returns indicate a slightly under average yield of good quality. Cutting of barley and oats is general. The latter crop is light. Corn is doing well and prospects point to an average crop. Root crops and pastures have been benefited by recent rains but more moisture is required and a short potato crop is forecast. Meadows in some sections are dry and second growth alfalfa now being cut, is short.

Consolatory

Town Visitor—You're quite wrong in considering the birds a nuisance, they devour insects and caterpillars. Farmer—Thanks for telling me. It's a great consolation to know that they eat my fruit merely for dessert.

MONDAY, AUG. 14.

Where were you Sunday?

Once upon a time there wasn't much question or doubt as to where people spent Sunday, but now things have changed.

The cisterns throughout the land were up to-day as a result of the rain Saturday night and it looks as if they might make slight gains this afternoon or to-night.

A mild electrical storm, accompanied by torrents of rain, hit this district but in western Ontario, considerable havoc was wrought. From the damage caused by the storm, root crops and pasture lands will be greatly benefited after the long dry spell.

Rev. W. E. Morrow, of Dundas, occupied the pulpit for both services at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church on Sunday.

En route to Petawawa for 10 days in camp, the 14th Field Battery left Cobourg Saturday. The 4th Field Battery left Peterboro the same day and joined the Cobourg company at Ottawa. Both units are part of the 4th Brigade, which is commanded by Col. Cecil Pearson. The officers are Capt. R. C. Davidson, Lt. H. Massie and Lt. W. P. Ralston.

Relieving the necessity of employing two men to operate the signals in the western limits of the yards, a traffic panel has been installed in the Cobourg C.P.R. station. The approach of a train in either direction operates an opal light on the panel. As the train approaches additional lights go on and register on the panel, operating the diamond crossing in the west part of the town.

The Women's Missionary Society of the Cobourg Branch of the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church will hold a farewell evening, Aug. 15, at the Castleton United Church for Miss Lillian Hinton, R.N., who sails for Chengtu, China, early in September. Miss Hinton is a graduate of Oshawa General Hospital and United Church Training School, St. Clair and Avenue Road, Toronto.

Fire damaged the residence of William Henley on Angeline Street, Lindsay on Saturday. A coal oil stove got beyond control, and the fire had to be extinguished with chemicals and well water as the residence is outside the Corporation of Lindsay. Neighbors had difficulty getting water, as wells in the neighborhood have been dry for some weeks, since the establishment of artesian wells in Lindsay and the continued drought.

Search continued all Monday for the body of James Freeman, 25, of Young's Point, who is feared to have drowned in Clear Lake sometime Friday night. Freeman rented a canoe to cross the lake and has not been seen since. The upturned canoe and a paddle were found Sunday.

Joe Kilpatrick, Bowmanville, received a surprise the other day when he broke open a large duck egg laid by one of his ducks and found another complete egg inside the big one. The big egg contained no yolk, but only the white, while the inside egg, which was about the size of a hen's egg, was complete with yolk and white.

THE CLOCK

The clock across whose face time moves,

Knows more than all the rest

Of fears and hopes, of hates and loves

That battle in my breast.

The rugs, the tables and the chairs

Seem heedless and aloof,

Oblivious to my joys and cares,

Although they share my roof.

But, ah, the clock and I have gone

Through days of grief and pain,

Through nights so long it seemed the dawn

Would never come again!

And well I know the clock still keeps

In golden memory

That hour it brought when all life's deeps

Were bright with bloom for me!

ORIGIN OF SOIL

"Many people look upon the soil as a cold, inert, lifeless mass of mere mud or dirt, about which there is little to know, and in which there can be no interest," says Professor Summerby of Macdonald College. "Contrary to this, the true facts are that if it is teeming with life; its history is that of the history of the world; and its problems are so many and so deep as to challenge the best minds in the country. All soil was at one time solid rock. By a long series of chemical, mechanical, and biological changes it has been changed from the original rock into soil that now produces grain, hay, pasture, apples, potatoes, violets and geraniums. Many are the influences which have operated in soil formation. We are accustomed to think of rock as being unchangeable, but very slowly and surely, changes do take place. As measured in terms of the life of man, the soil is very cold. It has been estimated that the formation of one inch of soil from limestone rock takes about ten thousand years. The processes, which have changed rock into soil are still going on and now exert a very important influence on the fertility of our soils."

REGULAR MEETING OF TOWN COUNCIL

Board Endorses Percy Township's Stand Regarding Pensioners In Hospital

The Port Hope municipal council, at the regular session at the Town Hall Monday night, gave support to a resolution which was received from Percy Township, Northumberland County to the effect that persons, receiving old age pensions while confined to a hospital, should have the funds diverted to assist in defraying costs of care in the institution. In a resolution, sponsored by Reeve J. A. R. Elliott and Deputy Reeve R. J. Edmunds, the local board will forward the resolution to the United Counties for consideration and recommend action to be taken by the Counties' Pension Board.

Although the meeting was scheduled to commence at 7:30 o'clock, the members discussed several items of business in the clerk's office and the meeting in the Council Chamber did not commence until 9:40 o'clock and concluded 40 minutes later. Mayor Walter J. Crowhurst presided and members present included Reeve J. A. R. Elliott, Deputy Reeve R. J. Edmunds and Councillors, W. R. Jex, H. VanAlstine, H. Stratton, J. N. Greenaway and William Burley with Councillor George Bennett an absentee.

Tax Report

Reeve Elliott, as Chairman of the Finance Committee presented a report from A. J. Chesher, Tax Collector, to the effect that the collections under the four per cent. discount having been completed, the department has received the sum of $93,388.19, on which $3,718.94 was allowed for prompt payment. Members of council expressed appreciation on receipt of the report and were pleased with the amount collected, despite the prevailing conditions.

Will Attend Convention

A communication was received from Mayor Roland Denne, of Peterboro, advising of the 25th Dominion Convention of the Association of Fire Chiefs, to be held in Peterboro the end of this month. Fire Chief John Record of Port Hope will attend.

Indigent Patients

Advices from hospitals were read from the chair which showed that seven patients had been booked as indigents with the town liable for payment. Reeve Elliott spoke on the question and pointed out that he was not finding fault with anyone but stated that it was unfair to the council and ratepayers. "A person becomes ill, and down comes the bill. The doctors should first make an attempt to collect the bill from the patients. Some of the people can pay and some of them that get their bills paid, live in better houses than I do." The Mayor added that the persons in question would adopt different steps if there were not all the various avenues to resort to.

The Reeve also pointed out that there will be considerable relief this coming winter and advised the discussion of problems pertaining thereto at an early date.

Help for Asthma. Neglect gives asthma a great advantage. The trouble, once it has secured a foothold, fastens its grip on the bronchial passages tenaciously. Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy is daily benefiting cases of asthma of long standing. Years of suffering, however, might have been prevented had the remedy been used when the trouble was in its first stages. Do not neglect asthma, but use this preparation at once.

DEFECTIVE CAP CAUSES INJURY

Fraserville Youth Injured At Janetville — May Lose An Eye

The first shooting accident of the season occurred near Janetville Station when Gerald Staples, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Staples, of Fraserville, who is building a cottage at the lake was injured.

While firing a shot at a mark from a .22-calibre rifle, an allegedly defective cap on the bullet exploded in his face, a charge of powder entering the right eye. Mr. Staples was at once rushed to Lindsay where Dr. Gorman attended the injury. He is suffering intensely and all hope that the sight is not impaired and that a speedy and complete recovery will be affected.

ELEPHANTINE GANGWAYS

Canadian National Steamships are observing tests being conducted in Europe to establish the practicability of gangways that resemble elephant trunks. These covered-in gangways are pliable and curve in various ways so as to connect a dock doorway with any doorway or other opening in the side of a ship, without bringing the ship's aperture exactly opposite the aperture in the dock shed.

CULLING THE LAYING FLOCK

(Experimental Farm Note.)

With the general low price of poultry products now prevailing, it behooves the poultryman to keep his cost of production as low as possible. Present economic conditions call for the elimination of the undesirable and unprofitable hens from the farm flocks, thereby increasing the quantity and improving the quality of eggs produced and decreasing the cost of production by a saving of feed, housing and management wasted on the non-producing or low-producing hens.

It is important to be able to distinguish between the laying and the non-laying birds. If a bird is laying the comb will be red and full, the vent dilated and moist, the pelvic bones thin, pliable and wide apart and the abdomen large, soft and pliable, while if not laying the comb will be pale or whitish-coloured, the vent contracted and dry, the pelvic bones rigid and close together and the abdomen firm or hard. In a yellow-skinned bird the beak, vent and shank of a heavy layer are pale yellow or white in colour, whereas the beak, vent and shank of a poor layer or a layer that is taking a long rest are usually bright yellow in colour.

The health and type of the layers are also important points to be taken into consideration in culling. Only those birds that are healthy and vigorous and that have a wide back of good length combined with a deep body should be retained in the flock. One other important feature that should be kept in mind in culling is to note the time of the molt. As a rule birds that molt before the first of September are poor layers, while those that molt later in the year are good layers. The latter part of August is, then, an excellent period for culling the laying flock and at that time all hens that have quit laying should be culled.

The above mentioned factors are kept in mind when culling the laying flock at the Dominion Experimental Station, Lacombe, Alberta. A close watch is always kept on the flock for any outstanding boarders and these are marked and disposed of in the late summer or early fall.

Poles are Europe's lightest smokers.

Ready-made Medicine.—You need no physician for ordinary ills when you have at hand a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. For coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchial troubles, it is invaluable for scalds, burns, bruises, sprains it is unsurpassed; while for cuts, sores and the like it is an unquestionable healer. It needs no testimonial other than the use, and that will satisfy anyone as to its effectiveness.

Sports spotlight has been focused on a great number of events recently. As a matter of fact, many events of utmost importance have transpired. ABOVE are some of the principals involved. Take (1), for instance, Bunny Austin, young English tennis star, who along with Fred Perry carried Great Britain's emblem successfully against France to win the Davis

Cup, emblematic of world's tennis supremacy. (2) Mary Frizzell, who competed in the Canadian feminine track and field championships at Vancouver. (3) Eric Phelps, who is on his way from England to Canada to race Bobby Pearce for the world's professional rowing crown. Mildred Fizzell of Toronto, who, along with Mary Fizzell is competing in the track championships. (5) Rogers Hornsby scanning the baseball battle front. Rogers switched his allegiance from St. Louis Cards of the National League to St. Louis Browns of the American.

AN UNUSUAL VISITOR

He dropped into my office with a grin upon his face.

He talked about the weather and the college football race.

He asked about the family and told the latest joke.

But never mentioned anyone who'd suddenly gone broke.

He talked of books and pictures and the play he'd been to see.

A clever quip his boy had made he passed along to me.

He praised the suit of clothes I wore and asked me what it cost.

But he never said a word about the money he had lost.

He was with me twenty minutes, chuckling gayly while he stayed.

O'er the memory of some silly little blunder he had made.

He reminded me that tulips must be planted in the Fall.

But calamity and tragedy he mentioned not at all.

I thought it rather curious when he had come and gone.

He must have had some tales of woe, but didn't pass them on.

For nowadays it seems to me that every man I meet

Has something new in misery and moaning to repeat.

And so I write these lines for him who had his share of woe

But still could talk of other things and let his troubles go.

I was happier for his visit—in a world that's sick with doubt,

BELLEVILLE MASONIC TEMPLE

The following facts concern the Masonic Temple at Belleville and the prior meeting places of the Belleville Masons, as obtained from W. C. Mikel, K.C., who is compiling a history of Belleville:

The Temple has been the property of the Masonic Order since Oct. 19, 1874, when a conveyance was taken in the name of the late Thomas Kelso. It will thus be seen that in 1934 the Masonic Temple on Front street, Belleville, will have been the home of the Masonic Fraternity of Belleville for sixty years. In 1934 Belleville will also celebrate its centennial as an incorporated municipality, it having been incorporated as a police village by a statute passed by the Legislative Assembly of Upper Canada on March 6, 1834.

The Masonic Temple property is vested in the two surviving trustees namely, Charles N. Suttman of Belleville and W. S. Morden, K.C., of Toronto.

Three Blue Lodges, or Lodges of Craft Masonry, namely the Moira Lodge, the Belleville Lodge and the Eureka Lodge; two chapters of Royal Arch Masons, the Moira Chapter and the Quinte Friendship Chapter, and the King Baldwin Preceptory of Knights Templar, hold their respective meetings in the Temple.

The Moira Lodge was named after the Earl of Moira, who was an officer in the British forces during the American Revolutionary War. He afterward became the Viceroy of India, and was created the Marquis of Hastings, from which the County of Hastings derived its name.

The lodge was originally known as Thurlow Lodge, taking its name from the township of Thurlow, in which Belleville is situated. The lodge received a dispensation in 1801. It was started largely through the efforts of the late Captain John Walden Meyers, an officer in the British forces during the Revolutionary War, who settled in what afterward became Belleville, after the close of the war.

Meyers was made a Mason in the City of Quebec, Feb. 27, 1780.

It is said that Captain John Walden Meyers and others walked from Belleville to Kingston to obtain the dispensation for starting this lodge at what was then known as Thurlow Village, which later became Belleville. The first officers of the lodge were: Captain John Walden Meyers, W.M.; Samuel Sherwood, S.W.; John Bleecker, J.W.; Caleb Gilbert, S.D.; Alex Chisholm, J.D.; John Taylor, Secretary; Godlove Mikel, Treasurer; John Simpson, Tyler.

The following officers represented the lodge in York (Toronto) when the representatives of a number of lodges met on Feb. 10, 1810 John Bleecker, W.M.; William Wallbridge, S.W.; W. Harris, J.W.

This lodge met first in the Simpson Hotel at the southeast corner of Front and Dundas streets, at Meyers' Creek (later Belleville), until the hotel was burned down, after which they met at the hotel of John Everitt. When the Simpson Hotel was rebuilt the lodge again continued to meet there. Later a brick lodge room was erected on John street, and on July 9, 1870, the Masonic Fraternity acquired the old Methodist church on Pinnacle street, where

STARTING FROM HERE

Who cries: "We're starting over!" I remember long ago A score of treasured friendships that we hadn't come to know. Though we were young and hopeful when our fight for fame began, We'd less of faith and wisdom to support our little plan.

Who says we've fallen backwards? Here we are and here we stay. Proud possessors still of treasures we have gathered on the way. It is true we've lost some money, but we will not have it told In the years that lie behind us we've been working just for gold.

Who's the poor man of the morning? Just the traveling soul who thought Alone of yellow money and the tawdry stuff it bought Chance has stripped his purse of dollars and he's sorely now bereft. If he looks his long life over and discovers nothing left.

But we've friends to aid and counsel, and we've faith to hold us fast; We have countless happy memories we can cherish to the last. We are older, yes, and wiser in the lore of peace and pain, And with all the years have taught us we can go to work again. EDGAR A. GUEST.

REAL HELP TO FARMERS

That grading takes the guesswork out of buying is fully borne out by the monthly 3,000,000 pound sale of branded beef in the Dominion. "Steadily increasing sales of officially graded beef will have a very important bearing upon the prosperity of the farming community from which the cities draw much of their trade," says the Dominion Live Stock Branch. "If, in our eagerness to save, we are buying low quality beef we are penalizing those enterprising men who are putting brains and effort into their live stock operations. We are also penalizing ourselves by practising false economy, and retarding rather than assisting the return of more prosperous conditions. The man who sells his cattle thin at 2c or 3c per pound has no margin of profit, and is therefore not a potential employer of labour, or purchaser of goods the city merchants have to sell. On the other hand, if we help to increase the demand for good beef by demanding officially graded beef we make it easier for the man who has well-bred, well-fed cattle to dispose of them at a price which will give him a small margin of profit on his operations. He is the only class of farmer who has remained solvent and is able to pay for the goods he purchases."

A meteorologist says that there are many areas near the equator where the thermometer is never known to rise to 100.

The world's most renowned piece of antique statuary is the famous semi-nude year, the Venus of Milo, found in the year 1820 and now in the Louvre, Paris.

The lodges continued meeting until the present Masonic Temple was acquired.

OTHER EDITORS' OPINIONS

PORT HOPE TAXES

The Town Council of Port Hope, at a recent meeting publicly commended the work of its tax collector, A. J. Chesher, who has the remarkable record of collecting 97 per cent of the taxes for 1932. Port Hope has a grand total of taxes amounting to $177,063.45, considerable more than Bowmanville, yet the collections for the year were far in excess of those in Bowmanville.

Either Port Hope has not been as hard hit by the depression as Bowmanville, or its citizens are more patriotic to their community. Frequent visits to Port Hope, revealed the fact that the hillside town's factories have suffered with the rest, so that it would seem that Port Hope has a type of citizen who wants to pay his way as he goes along.

In Bowmanville, it has been found otherwise. There is still a large sum outstanding on the 1932 taxes, and still large sums outstanding on taxes for several years previous to that. Perhaps it is the fault of the various town councils who have held office, in not making a big enough effort to collect taxes, but there is certainly something radically wrong, when Port Hope can make such a record, facing the same difficulties as Bowmanville.

For the first time in some years we now have a tax collector in Bowmanville apart from the treasurer of the municipality. Giving his full time to this work should give Bowmanville a better record in the future, and already the 1933 taxes have shown a considerable increase in collections. The new idea of a semi-annual payment of taxes, should prove another means of securing better collections, and if and when the town does get straightened away with its tax arrears, a real effort should be made to keep the books clean of delinquent taxpayers.—Bowmanville Statesman.

SLEEP

(From the Moncton Transcript)

For those to whom the poppy-crowned god Morpheus is a reluctant visitor, Dr. George L. Walton, neurologist, offers encouragement in his book "Why Worry" when he wrote: "It is astounding how much sleep can be lost without harm, provided its loss is forgotten." Again, he declared, that it is not work but worry which causes the nervousness which precludes sleep. Nor should the sufferer, he says, jump to the conclusion that it is loss of sleep rather than the worry which makes him wrecked. This expert, a consultant at the Massachusetts General Hospital, goes on to say that the best immediate preparation for sleep is the confidence that one will sleep and indifference if one does not.

DON'T FORCE THEM TO SWIM

A recent news item told of a mother who dipped her year-and-a-half-old baby in the surf at a beach resort, with the result that the baby died of fright. Whether fright caused the death or not, there is a lesson in the story that parents of young children should heed.

Many youngsters are timid about going into the water, and the well-meant efforts of older persons to teach them to swim frequently frighten them so thoroughly that they never learn to enjoy the sport as they otherwise would.

The former system of throwing a boy in over his head and letting him find his own way ashore worked in some cases, but it probably was responsible for more childish nightmares and injuries to young nervous systems than any torment that could be devised.

Left to himself, with proper supervision, it is a rare child that does not soon learn to swim.

Wise adults will let their juniors work out their own problems, ashore as well as afloat—not try to "break them in" with no more tact or consideration than a cowpuncher uses in breaking in a horse.—Detroit Times.

FALL FAIRS FADING FAST

Practically every day we read of some agricultural society in Ontario deciding not to run its fall fair this year. In Durham County Bowmanville Fair has ceased to exist and Port Hope did not have a fair last year and probably will not have a fair this year. In the list of Ontario rural fairs published recently only about half the usual number of fairs were listed.

Those who were against the decision of the old West Durham Society to merge with the Clarke Society, giving up Bowmanville Fair and concentrating on a bigger central fair at Orono, will now see the wisdom of this move. For several years Bowmanville Fair got deeper and deeper into debt and about two more years of operation would have placed their liabilities in excess of their assets. Even with the two societies merged it is hard enough to make a fair a success, and the Durham Central Society is to be commended on having come through the 1932 Fair showing profits of $300.

The Society still has a debt of $2500 on the building at Orono. The interest on this proves quite a burden without even considering the payment of principal. To wipe out this debt the Society is holding a big street dance in Orono on August 16th, and it is hoped that a large sum will be raised on that evening towards wiping out this millstone. If Port Hope would do the same as Bowmanville, and join in making a big county fair at Orono, the added support would probably solve the problem of making the fair successful, both morally and financially. Blackstock has such a good fair at present that the Cartwright Society will probably want to continue on its own, but it too could do worse than co-operate in the big county fair, which after all is the fair that the Department of Agriculture recommends.—Bowmanville Statesman.

As a safeguard against the export to Great Britain of apples infested with apple maggot, team-ship lines refused to load cargoes of apples from infested areas unless certified free of apple maggot by the inspectors of the Dominion Fruit Branch.

Exports of butter from Canada to the United Kingdom market, following a large increase in 1931, were materially reduced in 1932, and slightly smaller quantities were received in the United Kingdom from South Africa, but a feature of 1932 was the appearance of South-West Africa as a source of supply of butter.

WEDDING NOTABLE SOCIETY EVENT

Dr. F. G. Orchard Officiates At Eaton Wedding At Lake Rosseau

On the heights above Lake Rosseau, the wedding took place Wednesday of John David, son of the late Sir John C. Eaton and of Lady Eaton, and Signy Hilda, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Stefansson of Winnipeg.

Dr. F. Graham Orchard, the groom's old headmaster at Trinity College School, Port Hope, conducted the ceremony, assisted by Rev. William Swainson of Rosseau.

At the appointed hour the wedding march pealed forth from the organ screened by cedars and the bridal procession came down the aisle, which—in tribute to the groom's enthusiasm as a yachtsman—was carpeted in white sailcloth, marked off by ropes and anchors.

Miss Anna Stefansson, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, while Miss Florence Mary Eaton and Miss Evelyn Beatrice Eaton, sisters of the groom were bridesmaids.

Timothy Eaton acted as his brother's groomsmen, while ushers were Gilbert McCrea Eaton, Harold Stefansson, Mrs. Wynes Riddoch and Ross Jenkins of Winnipeg.

Mr. and Mrs. John David Eaton left for their wedding tour by automobile immediately after the ceremony.

JUNIOR JUDGES RETURN HOME

Durham Boys, Coached By E. A. Summers, Make Good Showing

Fresh from their triumphs at the World's Grain and Seed Show, Maurice Baker, Hampton, and Oliver Smith, Burketon, have returned from their trip to Regina, where they represented Ontario on the junior seed judging team with Clifford Marshall of Woodstock. Both boys, who made enviable records for themselves locally, were selected from judges all over the Province to represent Ontario at the fair.

Maurice Baker made one of the finest records of any junior judge attending the fair. Besides being a member of the team which was placed third in the international contest, Baker, himself, was placed third among all junior judges at the fair. Winning a first in two-rowed barley, a first in alfalfa and a third in timothy, Maurice won over $150 in personal awards, while he did his share in winning for his team $620. Oliver Smith, the Burketon boy, who was also a member of the team, secured fourth prize in Durum wheat, fourth in two-rowed barley and fifth in six-rowed barley, with a total of $50 in awards. Of the three boys on the Ontario team two were from Durham County and were coached by E. A. Summers of Port Hope, the Durham County Agricultural Representative.

The boys came up a rained stiff competition from practically every Province in the Dominion and many States in the United States. In the main judging event, the Durham County team was placed third.

The boys are confident that they could have won the championship of the fair had they been familiar with several Western weed seeds not common to Ontario. They also dropped on judging flax, another seed they are not well acquainted with. They did, however, win high points in the other seed and grain judging. Both lads are full of praise for Mr. Summers, who coached them. They have been under his wing for three years, and it was due to his coaching that they were chosen to represent the Province at Regina. The lads have both won numerous prizes in local fairs and at the Quinte Seed Fair each year.

APPLE PROSPECTS UNITED COUNTIES

Medium To Heavy Yield Likely In Ontario And Durham

Prospects for the apple crop in this section of Ontario are excellent for this year, according to a report of the fruit and vegetable branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Discussing apple prospects for the counties of Ontario and Durham the report says: "Weather has been very dry, but apparently has not affected the apple crop to date. Color prospects are good and the fruit is sizing well. The crop is much cleaner than usual and with the exception of sideworm is comparatively free from insect damage. A medium to heavy yield is anticipated on all varieties with the exception of Cranberry Pippin, which is light."

Regarding conditions farther east, in the Port Hope, Cobourg and Castleton districts, the report says: "Extreme heat and dry weather have retarded the sizing of the fruit although color prospects are regarded as good. A medium yield is anticipated on all varieties. Considerable scab is in evidence, as well as aphids and sideworm injury."

WILL EXTEND DREDGING IN BELLEVILLE HARBOR

Announcement to the effect that dredging operations at present under way in Belleville harbor would be enlarged to include 14,200 cubic yards of extra dredging, was made by W. E. Tammam, M.P., who had received notification from Hon. H. A. Stewart, Minister of Public Works. It is expected that the added harboring facilities will reduce coal rates on British coal. A depth of 14 feet will be made about the entire harbor entrance.

CADET TRAINING GRANTS SLASHED

Allotment For Juniors Eliminated—Seniors $1 Per Cadet Instead Of $2

With a view to effecting a further reduction in government expenditure, the amount to be allotted to the cadet services of Canada for 1934-35 will show a considerable reduction from that voted for the present fiscal year, says an announcement issued by the Department of National Defence.

As a consequence of this reduction the policy as regards the cadet services will require modification. This will become effective on September 1, the beginning of the school year.

Allowances heretofore paid to qualified cadet corps instructors at the rate of $2 per cadet up to a maximum of 50 cadets, and $1 for each cadet over 50 in each corps, whether junior or senior, will be reduced to a flat rate of $1 per senior cadet only. Senior cadets are those 15 years of age and under 18 years of age on September 1 of the school year. The payments in question are made subject to the condition that the prescribed standard of efficiency is reached.

Junior cadets (boys 12 years of age and under 15 years of age on September 1 of the school year) for whom no instructional allowances are authorized, may continue to belong to cadet corps and a free grant of miniature ammunition for rifle practice and competitions, and bonuses for those who qualify in signalling will continue to be made.

For the purposes of economy, the cadet services will cease to be administered by a separate branch and will be absorbed by the general staff branch at national defence headquarters and in the several military districts.

Physical training and first aid to the injured will continue to play an important part in the training of both senior and junior cadets.

SPECIAL STAMP TO COMMEMORATE STEAMER

Philatelists have received official notification from Ottawa that the special stamp which is being issued to commemorate the centenary of the departure of the Canadian vessel Royal William, the first to cross the Atlantic under her own steam power, will be ready for sale on Aug. 18. The Royal William set out from Pictou, N.S., Aug. 17, 1833, and in this commemorating the event, recognition is given the position Canada to-day enjoys in deep-sea trade and commerce.

In the sailing of the first Canadian steamship, which crossed the Atlantic in 21 days, tragedy mingled with triumph; increasing popularity of steam navigation sounded the death blow for the sailing vessel. With the ultimate progress of the steamship the "windjammer" lost favor. That flourishing industry of the Maritimes—ship-building—became history. Today throughout Nova Scotia, from whose shores sailed the Royal William, honored pioneer among Canadian steamships, there are to be found the ruins of shipyards, where in the days of prosperity were launched many sailing vessels that figured in the romance of the high seas, and whose captains achieved fame in the ports of foreign countries.

NOT AS A WATCHER

Not as a watcher, idly looking on At some vast play, for which the stage is earth Am I content; my joy can not be drawn From tasks my fellows do, nor from their mirth, But I must have my own allotted part, However weak and few my lines may be, And I must spend the riches of my heart Before time steals my hour away from me. In poignant pain, in toil, in ecstasy Let me my tides of life pour proudly out; The gifts I make, let them be full and free, Unmarred by one reluctance or one doubt; Not as a watcher, coldly drawn aside, Who, having feared life, lost it ere he died!

—Aline Michaels.

TAKE STEPS TO COMBAT CANCER

New Centre In Toronto Ready For Occupation About Oct. 1st

With establishment of an Institute of Radio-Therapy in London, Ontario, or which plans have been completed and which will be in operation within a year, one of the main recommendations of the Royal Commission investigating cancer, adopted by the Ontario Government, will have come into being.

It is just about two years ago that the death rate from cancer having become so alarming, the Provincial Government started wheels moving to seek means of fighting the disease. The first step was the appointment of a Royal Commission to investigate the problem. The second was consideration of the commission's findings. The third, now well under way, was putting into actual operation the commission's recommendations.

These recommendations were mainly three: establishment of institute at university centres where the public, especially those unable to pay their way, might have radio-therapy treatment; the purchase of radium and establishment of an emanation plant to provide radon or radium emanation and an education campaign among medical men and the public.

Two institutes of radio-therapy have already been established. These are at Toronto and Kingston. The third, at London, has been arranged, and will open within a year. This completes the first stage in establishing institutes, which the commission recommended should be placed in university centres before other places.

GROW MORE ALFALFA

Alfalfa, according to Dr. L. E. Kirk, Dominion Agrostologist, is a crop which should be grown more extensively than it is at present in Western Canada. It is rather difficult, he says, to understand the slow progress which has been made by this crop. In years gone by the high price of seed was a serious drawback, but this is no longer the case. The inferior results from imported seed have discouraged some farmers who have suffered losses through winter killing. This should no longer deter any one who contemplates growing alfalfa, since there is a surplus of hardy northern grown seed to be had at reasonable prices. In Dr. Kirk's opinion the two most important factors in keeping down the acreage of alfalfa are: (1) Improper management of the crop, resulting in winter injury, and (2) Attempting to grow the crop on fields that are poorly suited for the purpose. Both of these have tended to discourage the grower after a first or second attempt. Also the fact must be appreciated that alfalfa is not adapted to nearly as wide a variety of soils as some other legumes, for example, sweet clover. If alfalfa is seeded only on the best parts of the farm, it will be the most profitable crop on the farm, provided the district is otherwise suited for this crop.

WAY FAMILY REUNION

About one hundred and seventy members of the Way family gathered at Presqu'île Point for the annual picnic of the family, which was represented from Detroit, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Rochester, Bancroft, Tweed, Corbyville, Prince Edward and the Trenton district. Glen Way of Niagara Falls was appointed chairman, Blake Way, Trenton, was elected president, and three vice-presidents were appointed, Ed Way, of Tweed, Edward Blake Way, of Corbyville and Thomas Mikel, of Concession.

KILLS PORK PARASITES

The June News Letter of the Dairy and Cold Storage Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture states that for many years it has been known that the freezing and subsequent cold storage of pork destroyed any trichinella larvae contained therein but no one had studied the influence of the rate of freezing and the ultimate temperature reached on the viability of the parasite. In 1916, B. H. Ranson of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, studied the destruction of this parasite by ordinary slow-freezing and refrigeration at the usual cold storage temperatures. His results indicate that ten days' refrigeration at 5 degrees F. was sufficient to kill the larvae. However, he recommended a 100 per cent factor of safety—viz., ten days' additional storage at 0 degree F., or twenty days in all, so that there could be no question that all the trichinella organisms would be killed by the cold.

The Guide Story

"Of course, you will write to Sir Cecil, Miss Ferrars?" the housekeeper asked Cissie, as the party stood prepared to depart.

"I suppose so," answered the girl. "But we don't mean to let her come to the Priory—at any rate, till her papa and mamma return," said Lilith. "In fact"—glancing mischievously at her brother—"I rather think we shall adopt her and keep her in our family altogether."

"Well, miss, you will excuse me for saying so, but I think her own sunny face will make her welcome wherever she goes." And Duke quite endorsed that opinion.

Lilith had taken fast hold of Ivy's hand, preparatory to their start, and seemed resolved not to be left alone with Mr. Meredith, whom she had not forgiven for his masterful tone in the gallery. But Ivy was not to be restrained when they were once started on their homeward way, and it was in vain that the elder sister promised to relinquish all her own spoils to the little girl.

"Oh, Lil," she entreated, "let me run by myself, dear I do love you, but I want to go by myself"—dissengaging her hand. Lil, with a little sigh, let her go and looked round for other means of escaping from the long tete-a-tete walk home; whilst it was very evident her companion noticed her struggles and delighted in them. She felt more than half inclined to take to her heels, but a glance from under her lashes did not satisfy her that even that would shake Edgar off and would be irresistibly comic and undignified.

"Please let me go by myself," she at length entreated, using the very words which Ivy had previously used and mimicking her little sister's manner.

"Yes, you shall go by yourself, Lily, if you will say the whole of Ivy's speech," he returned, gravely. "I have," she returned mendaciously. But the remembrance of the second clause rushed to her mind, and fired the usual train of blushes on cheek and brow.

"No"—quietly, "you have said only the first part. Shall I remind you of the second?"

"I have said all I mean to say," she returned defiantly. "I won't speak another word all the way home."

"I am quite content to be by your side, dear—it is a pleasure I have not enjoyed for a long time. Won't you say the same?"—a world of loving entreaty in his dark eyes.

Lilith only shook her head laughingly, and closed her red lips in mutinous obstinacy and so they proceeded for almost a mile. Not a word was spoken. Lilith felt too much like a chidden child to attempt to make up a quarrel which, after all, existed only in her own imagination.

Suddenly, without a word of warning, she was lifted on one side, and, with a quiet, swift movement, Edgar Meredith brought his stick on to the head of a small poisonous adder which had been directly in her path. The danger being over, the young man leaned, pale and trembling against a tree. Lilith was by his side instantly, crying, in trembling tones—

"Edgar, you are not hurt? Say, dear, you are not stung?"—clasping both hands tightly round his arm, and gazing into his face with loving solicitude.

"Would you care, Lily?" he inquired, drawing her closely by his side. "Oh, Edgar, how can you ask, when you know so well?"—and then the proud young head was bowed upon his broad chest, and Lilith's emotion found relief in a hysterical burst of tears. Edgar soothed her with loving words and caressing touches, and the passion of sobbing exhausted itself, but left the girl pale and trembling, and thankful for the strong arm which supported her with so gentle but so firm a touch.

CHAPTER VI

On Cissie's return, Danvers met her in the hall, with a woe-begone expression of countenance, holding an open telegram in her hand.

"What is the matter?" inquired the girl in much alarm, wondering what fresh calamity had overtaken her.

"Only my sister, miss," replied Danvers with well-simulated emotion. "She is ill and wants to see me. Would you spare me for a couple of days?"

"Your sister?" queried Cissie, peering into the extreme.

"Yes, miss, her, that's housekeeper at General Norton's—perhaps you don't remember?"

Cissie shook her head, but took the proffered telegram mechanically and read the following message—

"Your sister is very ill, and wishes much to see you. Come at once, if you would be in time?"

"Of course you can go, Danvers. I suppose"—turning to Duke, who had remained a little in the background—"you will let me stay a few days longer?"

"Why, the fact of Danvers' leaving will make no difference, of course. We don't intend to let you leave us for a very long time," returned the young man earnestly.

Danvers noticed with satisfaction his empressment and said respectfully—

"Then you will let me go, ma'am?"

"Certainly," replied Cissie.

"There is an up-train at five o'clock from the junction," said Duke.

"If you are quick, you can catch that. Wallis shall drive you to the station in the car," he continued kindly. "I will go and give the order myself." And, not waiting for any thanks, he hastily left the hall on his errand.

"I shall return the day after tomorrow," Dan whispered, hurriedly. "Here is your locker—take great care of it."

"Oh, Dan, when will all this mystery cease?" asked his sister. "It is so dreadful to be involved in this web of deceit."

"Mind your own affairs—whatever happens, you are innocent."

"But what should happen?" anxiously. "Let me go back with you?"

"Never mind—it is nothing to do with you—you stay here, and behave like the little lady that you are. When I return, I hope I shall be able to tell you more about Sir Cecil—that is the principal reason I am going to town. Good-bye, Cissie, and don't be a little fool." And, hastily leaving her side and hurrying up the broad stairs, Dan soon reappeared, cloaked and bonneted, with a small bag in his hand. Another moment and the car was gliding down the avenue, whilst Duke and Cissie stood under the colonnade watching it disappear.

Dan was quickly driven to the station, and was just in time to catch the five o'clock express to town. A fee, slipped into the porter's ready palm, procured him the advantage of an empty compartment, where, as he confided to Wallis, he could sleep without being disturbed. But no sooner had the train started and an adieu been waved to the chauffeur than he proceeded to take from his bag a time-table, which he closely consulted.

"Ah," he muttered, "just so! Get out at Croxted Road, and wait there for the down express at seven-fifteen—that'll do and land me at Priory North at seven thirty-five. Nothing could be better. And now to rid myself of these encumbrances."

He then proceeded deftly and quickly to undress, taking off spectacles, wig, and bonnet and gown. He was under-dressed in an ordinary workman's suit of corduroy, and, taking out a small looking-glass, he soon had erased the delicate pencil-lines and shadows from his face. Then he adjusted a caroty wig and beard, proceeding to colour his sickly-looking face till it had assumed a look of ruddy healthiness. A coloured handkerchief tied loosely round his neck, and an old greasy-looking seal-skin cap, completed an admirable disguise. Then, neatly folding his discarded garments, he placed them in the bag, ready to be resumed when requisite, and, lastly, from one of his numerous pockets he drew forth an old sack, in which he wrapped his handbag, and tied the parcel round with a piece of old cord, thus making his luggage appear suitable to his changed appearance.

By the time his disguise was completed, the train drew up at the little roadside station, where it was found that a mechanic, who appeared to be hopelessly drunk, had lost his ticket, or, as was surmised, travelled without one.

On being made to understand what was required of him, he threw down some money, with an imprecation, saying he had plenty of coin and could afford to make the railway company a present of some. He reeled away, and, having watched his opportunity, managed to get into the down train without being observed.

On reaching Priory North, he alighted, and in a civil manner told the porter he had come from Croxted Road, but had managed to lose his ticket. The man charged him the usual fare for that distance, and he left the station, taking the lane which led into the village, and away from the Priory. But, having walked about half a mile and doubled and come out on to the turnpike-road which ran past the ruins, he walked leisurely on, whistling cheerfully, but never relaxing his grasp on the parcel which he carried, and which appeared to be wonderfully heavy for its size.

He entered the Priory grounds by a small swing-gate and proceeded cautiously towards the house, keeping well within the shadow of the trees and walking upon the velvet grass. His steps, though cautious, were light and swift, and he had soon skirted the gardens and stood upon the terrace upon which the doors of the picture-gallery opened. But it was to a broken window that he directed his way, first having carefully hidden his parcel. Then he proceeded to climb the buttress with the agility of a cat. The broken pane proved large enough to admit him.

As he stood ready to enter, the village church clock rang out the hour of nine, and, with quiet haste, he dropped into the room. He intended to catch the half-past ten train to London at Priory North, and the work he had in hand would take him a full hour to accomplish.

Taking off his mud-encrusted boots and provided with a dark lantern and a sharp-pointed knife, he proceeded along the polished floor with cat-like tread. But there was little to fear, as the housekeeper's apartments were far away. Besides, it was more than probable that the worthy woman and her husband were preparing for rest, if not already asleep.

With dexterous hands, Dan cut the portrait of Sir Cecil from its frame and then proceeded to do the same by a dozen other masterpieces. He rolled the canvases tightly one over the other and then, with his spoil in his hands, again passed through the window and stood once more upon the terrace.

With haste he put on his boots, and with quick, firm, but quiet step, regained the spot where he had placed his wallet. Slinging it over his shoulder, he walked briskly away, still keeping under the shade of the trees until he passed out of the little swing-gate, and was once more on the high road.

By the light of his bull's-eye he divested himself of his wig and beard and, turning his coat collar up and pulling his cap well over his ears, very little of his face could be seen, as, in a gruff assumed voice, he answered the sleepy porter who spoke to him. He was fortunate enough to find an empty compartment, into which he jumped, and, as the train sped on its way, he again changed his clothes and emerged at the terminus in the disguise which he had assumed to accompany Cissie on her journey.

It was early in the morning when he reached Asphodel Terrace, but his grandfather was wide-awake and welcomed him in his cracked, shaking voice.

"Ah, my dear boy, glad to see you. I expected you, of course, after your telegram. Have you good news?"

"I expect you will think it so," returned Dan, grinning, as he opened his bag, and took from it first the roll of pictures, at sight of which the old man rubbed his deformed hands together and chuckled with horrible, ghastly mirth.

"Genuine, my lady—all genuine?" he muttered.

"Of course. Should I be likely to risk my liberty for trash?" questioned his grandson, in harsh and snarling tones.

"No, no, my boy—no, no. You have been too well taught to make a mistake at this time of day. Good lad, good lad—my only consolation. But these are beauties, beauties! This is a Rembrandt, and here's a Murillo, a Rubens, and this portrait a Gainsborough. There is the man, Dan, who made of me what I am. Curse him—curse him!" striking with impotent fury the painted face of Sir Cecil Ferrars. "Now tell me what you have done?"—when his blind rage had somewhat spent itself.

And Dan recounted every incident of the past two days, interrupted by many a question from the cracked and querulous voice.

"See here," said Dan, in conclusion—"what do you think of this for a haul?"—and then, before the old man's wondering and delighted eyes, Dan poured out the remaining contents of his bag, which proved to be the jewelry that had been given in charge of Lilith Lloyd-Lytton by her mother at the railway-station.

The abstraction of the contents of the case had been most quick and dexterous, also the substitution of various small cakes of lead to make up the corresponding weight—all accomplished in those few minutes when Lilith and Cissie had stood out side the carriage door looking at the bookstall.

"Dan, my boy, I am proud of you—I am, indeed"—as he held the jewels up one after another. "What do you intend to do with them?" demanded the old man, "floating beer the spoils.

"Take them straight to Moses—they are too valuable to be left here.

If an inkling of suspicion should be aroused, this place will be the first searched."

"Why? Cissie would never betray you," asserted Jonas.

"I don't know that"—dubiously. "I would not trust her, anyhow. She is too simple and would be as wax in any one's hands. She's only a pretty fool, like most of them"—contemptuously. "And yet how many a brave fellow—ay, and a clever one, too, has lost his life through such playthings!"

"That'll never be your case, my boy," chuckled the old man, in triumphant tones.

"Never," asserted Dan steadfastly. After a pause, during which Dan had been deeply sunk in thought, he touched the old man on the shoulder to attract his attention. That being gained, he continued, with swift movement of his fingers, which, however, Jonas Hardacre's dim and sunken eyes found no difficulty in following—

"Is it at all possible that Sir Cecil Ferrars might have married my mother?"

"Pshaw—married her?"—in bitter irony—"what for? What had he to gain by that?" queried the old man, his face working with the remembrance of his wrongs.

"For mother—poor unhappy mother!" murmured the young man. "It seems hard—cruel, even—that Cissie should suffer for her parents' sins. I love Cissie," said Dan, after another pause. "She is all I care for in the world, and if I could see her happy, I would not care what became of myself. If Sir Cecil could be induced to acknowledge her—she is his very image—there is no doubt but that she would soon find a good husband and a rich man, too. She is pretty enough, and good enough too, to marry a duke."

"And for that very reason, perhaps, totally unfitted for the position," sneered the old sinner, with a chuckle.

"Nothing," returned the other. "She left her husband, who was an honest man enough—your father, Dan, but rather strict, and strait-laced for a young thing like her, perhaps—who can tell?—at any rate, she went away with a gentleman who called himself 'Mr. Cecil.' Your father went melancholy mad, and in a year or so shot himself. In the meantime I had to go into retirement for my health, Dan—for my health—with a ghastly grin—and knew nothing of her whereabouts till I met an old chum at Portsmouth. He used to be a sweetheart of Nell in the old days, but I wouldn't let her have him—he was too poor—and he told me where I might get news of her. I went to the place he directed me to, and, after a lot of bother and hunting—for you'd moved so often, you know—"

"Yes, I know. I remember all the miserable time!" said Dan.

"And then I found you, Dan—you remember—when you came home from following her, my girl, my bright-faced Nell—to a pauper's grave!"—breaking into a fit of sobbing which ended in attack of coughing, nearly strangling the old fellow.

The morning being now pretty far advanced, the young man decided on taking the proceeds of his burglary to the Moses whom he had previously mentioned, and, having satisfactorily transacted his business with the Jew, he returned to bid his grand father good-bye before proceeding again to Knowlesmere.

"Do you think a letter, telling Sir Cecil of Cissie's existence, and forwarding a photograph, would be of any use?" Dan questioned as he stood equipped for departure. "I have his address, 'Hotel de l'Europe, Heidelberg'—reading from the letter which Mrs. Warner had given to Cissie.

"Well, you might try an anonymous letter"—dubiously—"and give an address where you could send for an answer."

"Well, I'll think it over," replied his grandson. "If the affair I'm now engaged in turns out triumphs, it's the last thing of the kind I'll indulge in, for, whoever was Cissie's father, the same mother bore us both, and, for her sake, I'll try to lead a respectable life for the future—after this time."

"Certainly—after this time," assented the old man—for the plans had all been so nicely arranged and involved too many people to withdraw from the attempt at the last moment. "Besides, Dan, they would call you a coward and chicken-hearted."

"That's a lie, and they would know it!" returned the younger man hotly. "However, I'm not going to back out now—even if I should get nabbed for it."

"That's the right spirit, my boy," checked his grandfather, "and you can take my blessing with you, if it's any good, for you've always been a pride to me ever since I first took you, in training myself and showed you all the mysteries of the brotherhood. I promised I'd make a man of you, Dan—don't you remember?—and I've kept my word. Yes, my boy, I'm proud of you!"

And then the two men gripped hands and Dan, once more attired in female apparel, started on his return journey to Knowlesmere.

CHAPTER VII

Mrs. Warner, the housekeeper at the Priory, was always astir early; but the morning after the impromptu luncheon, she rose a full hour before her wont, and stood at the gate awaiting the glazier whom she had sent for on the previous evening.

Leisurely, not the least in a hurry, he came, and, after the usual morning compliments, Mrs. Warner desired the man to accompany her to the picture-gallery. Straight to the broken window they went and, as he proceeded with his work, the housekeeper to occupy her time, opened the windows and drew up the blinds. As she passed down the room a cry of horror burst from her lips, and caused the man to stop his work and stare at her in astonishment.

"Why, Mrs. Warner, ma'am, whatever's the matter?" he demanded at length, as she neither moved nor spoke.

"Matter? Matter enough!"—rushing wildly through the several rooms and counting as she went. "Ten, eleven, twelve—a whole dozen gone—clean gone, and Sir Cecil's picture in the bargain! Whatever shall I do? Thieves—murder!" she shrieked at the top of her voice and rushed from the room.

The workman scratched his head, then rubbed his eyes.

"Pe she out o' her senses, or be it? He ejaculated. But his wonder on this point was soon settled by the hasty return of the housekeeper and her old husband, both deeply pale, and in a few words they explained that thirteen pictures in all, the gems of the collection, had been cut out of their frames and stolen—of that there was not the slightest doubt.

"Some thief must have got through that window in the night," suggested old Warner, rubbing his head blankly. "Eh?" returned the glazier. "And so amun."

"But what's to be done?" demanded the housekeeper. "Whatever shall I do? What will Sir Cecil think?"—appealing to her husband, who shook his head in a dejected manner.

"Nay, nay, wite—he won't do that surely," he returned. "And even if he does we shan't be the first to be imprisoned unrighteously; so don't lose heart, wife—don't lose heart."

"Let's lock up the house and go and see Miss Ferrars about it, and Colonel Lytton," at last suggested the old dame. "He's a magistrate, and no doubt he'll know how to set about finding the thief. Oh, if I had him here, the villain, I wouldn't leave him a whole bone in his skin!"

The news caused consternation at Lytton Hall. The Colonel immediately telegraphed to London for a smart detective to be sent down to investigate the case, and wrote to Heidelberg to acquaint Sir Cecil with his loss.

Cissie had turned very pale when she heard the news, but, in the general confusion, her agitation was not noticed, nor her hurried murmur of half-incredulous doubt and horror. She pressed her slender hands tightly over her throbbing temples, and in vain tried to shut out the ghastly doubt which in spite of its absurdity would keep obtruding itself—"Dan is away—can it possibly be Dan?"

So many times had she vainly striven to pierce the reason of their mysterious journey to Knowlesmere for the thin veil of romance which had been sufficient to blind the inexperienced schoolgirl had been rudely torn away by contact with the inhabitants of Lytton Hall, with their wise human sympathies and strong common sense. Then, too, the swakening love which she scarcely analysed and yet knew existed in her heart, ake in its innermost recesses, made her deny with honest scorn the base counterfeiter which Dan had told her it was necessary to use to ensure him a welcome from the woman who had promised to be his wife.

Even allowing the absurdity, where was this mysterious female whom Dan had come down to visit, but had made no effort to see and at the first opportunity had left the neighbourhood, where to go he had not confided to his sister? At length she retired to her chamber and bathed her temples, till Lilith, instigated by her brother, came in search of her.

"Let me darken the room, Cissie," she urged, having installed her friend upon the couch. "You will soon be better dear. I don't wonder this dreadful news has upset you. I suppose Sir Cecil will hurry home post-haste. I wonder if your mamma will come with him. It seems awfully doesn't it, that a robbery should have been committed at our very doors, as you may say? What a blessing those jewels of mother's are not in my care! I should be always having the nightmare."

"But are they safe—are you sure?" asked Cissie, starting up.

"As safe as dad's strong room can make them," returned Lilith with decision.

"But are they all right?" persisted the younger girl. "I wish, Lilith, you would see that your mamma's diamonds are quite safe"—with strange earnestness.

"Well, to satisfy you, I will," returned her friend.

The two girls descended the stairs and entering Colonel Lytton's study, found him busy with his newspaper. He looked up with a cheery smile and welcomed the intruders.

"Well, young ladies, have you come to beard the lion in his den?" he inquired. "What is it, Lil—in fond indulgent tones. 'A new dress, a bonnet, or a five-pound note?'"

"None of these frivolities, dad, procured you the honour of this visit," replied Lilith gaily. "If you're not busy"—roughly glancing at the paper—"Cissie wants you to show her mamma's jewels."

"Well, I'm not busy,—not very, that is,—I wouldn't be bothered with little girls. However, Cissie's wish shall be gratified," and he drew a bunch of keys from the table drawer, and having selected a very small one, opened what appeared to be a portion of the wall, but was, in reality, an artfully contrived door leading to his strong room where all articles of value were kept—title deeds of the property, family plate and jewels.

"I forgot—mamma has the key," said Lilith at this juncture.

"But I have a duplicate"—unfastening it from his watch-chain. It was inserted in the lock, but refused to yield to the ordinary pressure. At length it turned, and the lid flew up, revealing the interior, beautifully lined with rich white satin and divided into compartments of various sizes. But the top tray was empty.

Lilith's eyes opened wide in incredulous wonder, and she hastily lifted it, but the second tray was also void of jewels, and so also was the bottom one.

"What does it mean, papa?" she gasped, while Cissie leaned, faint and trembling against the table.

"The jewels are all gone, at any rate," responded Colonel Lytton, staring at the empty case. "When did you see them last?"—sharply. "This is the work of some practised thief. See"—and he held up several small plummetts of lead. "These were evidently put in so that the box should be about the same weight."

"Were the jewels very valuable?" demanded Cissie, speaking in a half-crazed manner.

"Worth about five thousand pounds," returned the Colonel. "What is of more consequence, they were family relics and have been handed down from father to son for two hundred years. It is quite incredible," he muttered. "There must be some dexterous thief here, right in our very midst."

"But all the servants have been with us for years," said Lilith, indignant that such a slight should be put upon any of their faithful old retainers.

"I am the only stranger," exclaimed Lilith, putting her arm caressingly round her friend. But the Colonel only noted the strained, eager, trembling tones, and the ghastly hue of the youthful face, and did not speak a word. The omission stung the girl, who shivered as his eyes, cold and stern, rested on her face. "Why, father, how you look at Cissie," Lilith added.

"I beg your pardon," returned her father. "This is the time to act and not to talk. When did you see the jewels last, Lilith?"

"At Prince Albert Road, Kensington, papa," returned the girl. "My mother opened the case and said, 'There, Lilith, you see they are all right, new. Take care of them and don't let them out of your sight!'"

"And you did not," inquired her father, "till I took the case from the carriage at Knowlesmere?"

"Well, papa"—hesitatingly—"not exactly—but—"

"What do you mean?"—sharply. "Did you, or did you not?"

"I put my feet upon the box," replied Lilith, "and wrapped the fur rug round me. We had ten minutes' wait at Westover Junction, and, as the carriage stopped directly opposite to the bookstall, Cissie and I got out to stretch our legs, but never moved from before the carriage door, papa—did we Cissie?" The one appealed to shook her head. "Besides papa, Mrs. Danvers was there all the time. She took my place, and I wrapped her up in the rug for fun, papa."

"Oh, Mrs. Danvers was in the carriage along the whole of the time?"—meditatively stroking his chin.

"Yes, papa"—eagerly. "But I could swear that no one went into the carriage—couldn't you, Cissie? We had to ourselves all the way down—didn't we?"—turning again to her friend for corroboration.

"Yes, indeed!"—earnestly. "No one was in the carriage but Lilith, Danvers, and myself, the entire journey."

"Well, the matter is certainly full of mystery," said the Colonel, to which both girls assented. "I have sent to London for a detective, and, no doubt, he will be able to unravel it and find the thief. Your mother, Lil, will be more grieved at the loss for Marmaduke's sake than for her own. There—there, children, leave me now. I must try to think this matter out for myself, although, no doubt, the detective will be able to throw some light upon it."

The two young girls left the room, but no amount of thought served to elucidate the mystery. Colonel Lloyd-Lytton looked considerably relieved when, some hours later, a card was brought in to him bearing the name "Mr. Edgerson, Scotland Yard." He acceded the detective a very cordial welcome, ordering some food to be brought to the study, and saying that he should be too busily engaged to see anyone for the next two hours.

"Now, Mr. Edgerson"—when the detective had discussed the substantial repast—"give me your best attention, please, and I will tell you in what way you can be of service to me," began the Colonel. And in brief, clear words he put the detective in possession of the few facts relative to the robbery at the Priory, also the loss of his wife's jewels.

Mr. Edgerson, looked serious, took off his spectacles and polished the glasses, peering about with his bright bird-like eyes, which seemed to be always on the watch.

"These two robberies are evidently the work of one and the same hand," he at length remarked, whilst, reading his glasses.

"You think so?" demanded the Colonel.

"I was sure so, sir," the other answered decisively. "And it is a very cunning old hand, too—the work is so perfectly and quickly done in both cases. Now, your servants—are they honest?"—fixing his bright eyes inquisitorially on his host.

"As myself," returned the Colonel.

HIGHWAY CRASH, MAN INJURED

Mishap Near Wicklow Investigated By Provincial Motorcycle Officer Blucher

Suffering from lacerations, a badly-bruised arm and other injuries, Jack Inmie, of Colborne, was brought to Cobourg hospital following an accident which occurred on the provincial highway near Wicklow, at 9.30 p.m.

According to police, Inmie was driving east and sideswiped a car driven by Victor Tyler, 1000 Logan Avenue, Toronto, which was going in the opposite direction. Inmie's car, it is stated, went out of control and knocked down a Hydro pole with a supporting pole. Spectators feared to remove Inmie at first, because of the fallen electric wires. He was finally taken to Cobourg hospital. Provincial Constable F. R. Blucher, of Port Hope, investigated.

SAMUEL

(International Uniform Sunday School Lesson, August 20th)

GOLDEN TEXT: "Serve the Lord with all your heart."—1 Samuel 12: 10.
LESSON PASSAGE: 1 Samuel 3: 1-10; 12: 1-4.

O give me Samuel's mind,
A sweet unassuming faith,
Obedient and resigned
To Thee in life and death.
That I may read with childlike eyes,
Truths that are hidden from the wise.
NO OPEN VISION, 1

There are cycles in religion just as in business, times of stagnation, alternating with periods of progress. There are tides of the spirit, both ebb and flow. So far the twentieth century has not been altogether favorable to spiritual religion. The achievements of science tended to make man have confidence in himself rather than in God. The war released passions and accustomed human minds to cruelty and the effect upon religion was adverse. Then came a period of prosperity when to many people business was religion and prosperity was God's smile. Suddenly in October, 1923, hard economic facts brought a crash and man's confidence in his own wisdom suffered eclipse. Since then there has been much honest searching of heart. Many have discovered the truth of the old teaching that life does not come from what we have or what we do but from what we are. Many have felt anew their dependence upon God, and have turned to Christ for guidance. The tide is beginning to ebb in. There is more honest, frank discussion of religion this year than there has been for many years. Men are talking religion in trains and in offices; women are telling their experiences over the teacups. Ministers say that they find people more responsive to preaching and that they are having many interviews with stargazers after religious peace and power. These periodic cycles were observed in ancient Israel. Under Eli there was no open vision. Then came Samuel to speak fearlessly in the name of the Lord.

SAMUEL'S CALL, 2-7
Could you recount your most vivid religious experience in less than two hundred words? Would you require to use objective language to describe a subjective experience? Would you use Samuel's figure of a voice or would the word of Jesus about the felt and unseen wind blowing upon the soul be more appropriate? So crates heard a voice speaking from within. Augustine heard a voice speaking from without. Language is clumsy and inadequate for describing deep spiritual experiences, but the story of Samuel makes it clear that in one night the great experience of firsthand dealings with God was unmistakably known. Samuel was probably twelve to fourteen years of age at the time. The peak age for church membership is now about fourteen. Formerly it was sixteen, but it has been gradually coming down. It is in adolescence that young people are most idealistic and altruistic. It is then that life's great decisions are made; religious, vocational and social choices influencing the rest of life are fixed. If young people do not join the church by sixteen, the chances are thirty to one that they will never join. So state modern church records.

TESTS OF RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE, 9, 10
A business man sleeping in a hotel two thousand miles from home, had a very vivid experience of Christ coming to him in a dream. He woke up at three o'clock in the morning and analyzed the experience and concluded that it was a nightmare. So, he stated frankly though half regretfully, "I turned the Lord Down." If he had probed a little deeper he might have seen that it was his own hunger of heart that led to the challenge coming, even though the dream was caused by dietetic indiscretion. In any case, it was not meaningless and

SAMUEL'S CHALLENGE, 12: 1-3
We are familiar with the days of our youth, but often we are curious wondering about our old age. In this lesson about Samuel we have two close-ups, one in youth and one in age and the two are closely related. In laying down his public responsibilities, Samuel challenged his constituents to convict him of one dishonest or dishonorable action. Had he been avaricious? Had he been unjust in his decisions? Such confidence did he have in his integrity that he offered to restore anything that he had taken without warrant in right and equity. In recent years there have been many investigations into the conduct of public men. Stark graft has been uncovered. Suspicious actions intended to remain secret have been exposed. Honored names have become speedily dishonored. Men on financial thrones have abdicated hurriedly. Sometimes business actions are classified in three categories, honest, dishonest and law-broken. All things legal are not necessarily morally right. As a rule, if we follow our own consciences as to what is right we do not need to fear the judgment of others. A safe guide is, "When in doubt, don't."

SAMUEL'S VINDICATION, 12: 4
In a law court, sometimes when the verdict is "Not Guilty" it only means that the charge is unproved. There is still a measure of doubt and suspicion remaining for street corner adjudication. In the case of Samuel, there was no border land of doubt. After long years as a judge and teacher, he was given an absolutely clean bill of moral health. He had neither defrauded, oppressed or grafted. He could hold up his head, honored in old age. Those who are able to maintain their integrity from youth to age have great reason to thank God for his lifelong help.

Speak to me, Christ, amid earth's sin and riot,
That I may hear
Thy Love's sweet pleading near,
Bring my spirit quiet.

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION

- 1. Which has greater influence upon a child, teacher or mother?
- 2. Are early or late conversions more effective?
- 3. Is temptation in middle age as dangerous as in youth?
- 4. How may the next generation be made honest?

YOUNG SWIMMER HAS BACK BROKEN

Resting under a tree after bruising his head in some manner while swimming proved fatal to Billie Maynard, 11, of Brooklin, when a limb of the tree fell on him, breaking his back. After his companions had removed the limb and summoned aid he was removed to Dr. J. H. McKinney's office by a traveller.

Dr. McKinney then had the boy taken to the Oshawa General Hospital, where an X-ray was taken. He was then taken to the hospital for Sick Children, where, despite frantic efforts to save his life he succumbed.

might have been capitalized for decision and action. A New Testament writer told his converts to test the spirit. We are not to be at the mercy of every whim and impulse. We expect to receive guidance but we have to check our guidance. Is it unselfish? Is it for the good of others, as well as for ourselves? Is it in keeping with the teaching and example of Christ? Is it spasmodic or is it an advance upon previous trends? Samuel heard God's voice three times and became so convinced that it was a great hour of the soul that he replied, Speak; for thy servant heareth. This dramatic midnight experience does not discount the influence of his godly mother, the teaching of Eli and the temple associations. They all were contributory to his crisis moment. A young person may attend church and never become an active Christian, but a young person who does not attend church is almost certain not to be a Christian. Environment counts.

Would you use Samuel's figure of a voice or would the word of Jesus about the felt and unseen wind blowing upon the soul be more appropriate? So crates heard a voice speaking from within. Augustine heard a voice speaking from without. Language is clumsy and inadequate for describing deep spiritual experiences, but the story of Samuel makes it clear that in one night the great experience of firsthand dealings with God was unmistakably known. Samuel was probably twelve to fourteen years of age at the time. The peak age for church membership is now about fourteen. Formerly it was sixteen, but it has been gradually coming down. It is in adolescence that young people are most idealistic and altruistic. It is then that life's great decisions are made; religious, vocational and social choices influencing the rest of life are fixed. If young people do not join the church by sixteen, the chances are thirty to one that they will never join. So state modern church records.

TESTS OF RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE, 9, 10
A business man sleeping in a hotel two thousand miles from home, had a very vivid experience of Christ coming to him in a dream. He woke up at three o'clock in the morning and analyzed the experience and concluded that it was a nightmare. So, he stated frankly though half regretfully, "I turned the Lord Down." If he had probed a little deeper he might have seen that it was his own hunger of heart that led to the challenge coming, even though the dream was caused by dietetic indiscretion. In any case, it was not meaningless and

SAMUEL'S CHALLENGE, 12: 1-3
We are familiar with the days of our youth, but often we are curious wondering about our old age. In this lesson about Samuel we have two close-ups, one in youth and one in age and the two are closely related. In laying down his public responsibilities, Samuel challenged his constituents to convict him of one dishonest or dishonorable action. Had he been avaricious? Had he been unjust in his decisions? Such confidence did he have in his integrity that he offered to restore anything that he had taken without warrant in right and equity. In recent years there have been many investigations into the conduct of public men. Stark graft has been uncovered. Suspicious actions intended to remain secret have been exposed. Honored names have become speedily dishonored. Men on financial thrones have abdicated hurriedly. Sometimes business actions are classified in three categories, honest, dishonest and law-broken. All things legal are not necessarily morally right. As a rule, if we follow our own consciences as to what is right we do not need to fear the judgment of others. A safe guide is, "When in doubt, don't."

Speak to me, Christ, amid earth's sin and riot,
That I may hear
Thy Love's sweet pleading near,
Bring my spirit quiet.

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION

- 1. Which has greater influence upon a child, teacher or mother?
- 2. Are early or late conversions more effective?
- 3. Is temptation in middle age as dangerous as in youth?
- 4. How may the next generation be made honest?

CANTON

Lawn Social Well Attended And Enjoyable Program Presented

Canton church grounds have been the scene of larger crowds and more imposing functions on many memorable occasions, but for genuine enjoyment the lawn social held there last Wednesday evening, stands second to none.

The whole proceedings seemed to fall naturally into four periods—gossip, in the original meaning of the term; Sports—literary and gastronomic. During the first interval, the people strolled about, seeking affinities, greeting friends or patronizing the various booths.

Next, under the joint leadership of Mrs. M. Biddle and Rev. W. F. Bannister, came a crisp program of musical games, in which young people of varying ages participated.

By this time, the shades of night had declined with the sun to a point necessitating wraps for out-door warmth, folks gladly forsook the lawn for the comfort of Community Hall and the pleasure of the concert.

Rev. W. F. Bannister presided for the first time and proved as efficient on the platform as in the pulpit for the "Chairman's Address" was a model combination of merit, courtesy and confidence.

Centreton string orchestra presented the major portion of the program, and that the audience thoroughly enjoyed their performance was evidenced by the victorious applause which greeted each selection, while the members of the orchestra on their part generously responded to every encore.

But the star performer was the juvenile member, Master Hayden Smith, who, accompanying himself with the guitar gave two comic songs, replied to the encores and each time brought down the house, despite the fact that he was handicapped by the absence of his boy partner, Master Neil Nicholl, who was in Cobourg general hospital, having undergone an operation for removal of tonsils.

Miss Jean Hawkins delighted the audience by her splendid rendition of two readings, one humorous, the other dramatic.

A song-dialogue, "The Quarrel," by Mrs. Leslie and Mr. E. Marlyn, welcome, brought down the house and the singers responded to the vociferous encore.

Canton male quartette contributed a song and encore response. A highly appreciated number was a solo by Mr. Houston and after he had kindly responded to persistent applause, the program closed with the National Anthem, led by the orchestra, and all adjourned to the basement where coffee and a delicious lunch were promptly served.

The orchestra boys departed, led in their praise of Canton ladies kindness and cooking, but lamenting that lack of time prevented them from getting introductions to "those pretty girls that seem so plentiful around here."

TO THE LADIES
Nowadays every woman recognizes the value of cosmetics in enhancing and preserving their youth and beauty. However few women realize that eyeglasses have a definite cosmetic value. If you fail to wear glasses and need them, wrinkles and crowfeet will follow, and your eyes will lose their youthfulness as a result of needless squinting.

There is no denying the importance of the compact. But it may be glasses will contribute immeasurably more to your comfort and youthfulness.

In keeping with the times the cost of glasses is considerably less, with the same high standard of examination and service.

BALBO MADE AIR MARSHALL
Italo Balbo, youthful air minister and commander of the Italian aerial armada on its flight to Chicago was created Italy's first air marshal Sunday in glamorous state ceremonies during which the Roman populace gave him and his daring comrades on the Eky Odyssey a thunderous ovation.

I congratulate you in the name of the Italian people," Premier Benito Mussolini said warmly as he placed the marshal's helmet on Balbo's head and embraced him. "Your flight will remain indelibly in the memory of man as an historic milestone in aviation.

"Your greatness is enhanced as pioneers of the ocean's pathways. Our thoughts go to the two brave comrades who lost their lives that aviation might proceed along its irresistible destiny. The nation mourns them.

"You have proved yourself worthy sons of Italy, making her name known throughout the world and carrying an expression of our fatherland to all."

Il Duce presented medals to the other members of the flight of 21 seaplanes amidst the cheers of the people packed about the Palatine Hill where the ceremonies took place. The rousing shouts of acclaim drowned out his words as he and the people paid tribute to the fliers.

King Victor Emmanuel received the men in a half hour's audience at Quirinal Palace. He congratulated each individually and conversed with them on their adventures.

THE YEAR
I thrilled with joy in May
When all the land was gay,
When all the multitude
Of birds in field and wood
Lifted their songs in glee
From hedgerow and from tree!
When every road up-hill
Lured me to journey still,
To climb each swelling crest,
Better to view east, west
The sun-sweet world, so fair
No sorrow could be there!

But springtime could not stay,
Nor the child-heart of May,
Though in this summer-time
The deeper notes must chime,
They sound a braver tune,
Ringing through golden June!

And mellow in the fall
The songs of living call,
Richer for memory
Of joys that used to be,
Each season as it goes
To some sweet measure flows;
Winter though grim and chill,
May move to music still!

THE WORD OF GOD
MORE THAN CONQUERORS: All things work together for good to them that love God. If God be for us, who can be against us? Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us.—Romans 8: 28, 31, 35, 37.
