NUMBER THIRTY-ONE.

Rev. Canon Oswald Rigby, M.A., Taken By Death on Wednesday

Loved by All Creeds Alike, Eminent Scholar and Cleric, Succumbed Suddenly to Heart Attack—Was Rector Emeritus of St. Mark's Church and former Headmaster of T.C.S.—Ordained 50 years ago

Outstanding in the realms of education and the Church, Rev. Canon Oswald Rigby, M.A., L.L.D., rector emeritus of St. Mark's Anglican Church here and former headmaster of Trinity College School, passed away here Wednesday afternoon in his 75th year. The late Dr. Rigby suffered from a heart condition and while for the past week he had been feeling better than usual a sudden seizure was fatal. Only last September he celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination, retiring at that time to be succeeded a short time ago by the Rev. Bruce Jennings.

An eminent scholar and theologian, the late Dr. Rigby was well known throughout the Dominion and in Port Hope was universally regarded as a gentleman and friend by all creeds. Never before has such widespread regret been manifested as in the demise of Dr. Rigby who held the respect and admiration of all with whom he came in contact. He was Port Hope's most outstanding citizen even though his nature was one of quietness and reserve.

The body will lie in state in St. Mark's Church from 1 p.m. on Thursday until noon on Friday, the funeral service taking place at 12.30 p.m. on that day with interment in St. James' Cemetery, Toronto, at 3.45 p.m.

The late Dr. Rigby was born in Liverpool and educated at Liverpool College and at St. John's College, Cambridge where he obtained his B.A. degree, graduating with honours in Theology in 1882. It was in this year that Dr. Rigby received what he felt was the greatest distinction he ever enjoyed, being made president of Cambridge Union.

He was ordained at Ely Cathedral on September 24, 1882 and received his first appointment to St. Giles, Cambridge University extension lecturer. In 1886 he was made headmaster of Choir School of St. John's, Torquay, and senior curate of the Church. In 1891 he came to Canada as professor of History at Trinity University, Toronto, and also acted as dean of the college for twelve years. In 1903 he assumed the headmastership of Trinity College School, Port Hope and in the same year was given the honorary degree of L.L.D., by Queen's University. He remained in this position until 1913 when he resigned and returned to England for a few months. Returning in 1914 he was made vicar of St. Bartholomew's Church, Toronto. In 1918 he was asked to return to Port Hope as rector of St. Mark's, a position he filled until his retirement last September.

As headmaster of Trinity College School he is known throughout the length and breadth of Canada and many students passed through his hands that have and are taking prominent part in the destinies and business of the Dominion.

He is survived by three sisters.

Misses Edith and Ada, of Port Hope and Mrs. Arthur Rigby, of Brisbane, Australia. Two brothers, J. Kendall Rigby, of London, England and W. Edward Rigby, of West Kirby, England, also survive.

St. Mark's Anglican Church was thronged at noon Friday by a large congregation who paid their last respects to the memory of the late Rev. Dr. Oswald Rigby, M.A., L.L.D., rector emeritus of St. Mark's and former headmaster of Trinity College School, who passed away on Wednesday.

The service was simple but impressive with the final blessing being pronounced by the Rt. Rev. Deayn T. Owen, Bishop of Toronto. Rev. W. Bruce Jennings, rector of St. Mark's had charge of the service and other clergy in the chancel included Rev. F. H. Cosgrave, Provost of Trinity College, Toronto; Rev. Dr. F. G. Orchard, former headmaster of Trinity College School; Rev. A. G. Entnet of St. John's, Port Hope, and Rev. C. R. Spencer of Bowmanville.

The service opened with the singing of Hymn No. 280 followed by the reading of Psalm 90, with responses by the congregation, by Rev. Emmet. Provost Cosgrave read the Lesson which preceded the singing of Hymn 18, "Abide With Me." Rev. Orchard offered the prayer and the Bishop's blessing brought the service to a close.

Headed by the choir, who were led by the cross bearer, George Corbett, the cortege moved from the front of the church where the body had lain in state since noon on Thursday. The honorary pallbearers were Messrs. J. T. Freestone, Dr. A. H. R. Watson, Edwin Nash and Thomas Hutchings. The actual pallbearers were Messrs. L. T. Sylvester, C. S. Mann, C. P. Freeman, C. V. Brown, F. W. Bell and A. E. Andrews.

The funeral left by motor for St. James cemetery, Toronto, where the Rev. R. S. Tippett, of Trinity College School, assisted by Bishop Owen will have charge of the service at the graveside.

The local Ministerial Association was represented by the President, Rev. Dr. K. R. Palmer, while Rev. T. E. Meldrum of Port Hope and Rev. W. E. Honey of Wellesboro, represented the County ministers.

Rev. Dr. J. T. Daley, of Port Hope, was also among those present with Mayor W. J. Crowhurst as the official representative of the Municipality.

MURDER CHARGED AGAINST BRADLEY

Action Follows Inquest Which Holds Him Responsible

The arrest of Michael Bradley on a charge of murder was the latest development Friday night in the startling tragedy of one week ago today when five people, the family of Joseph Bradley, were shot to death at Demers Centre, a mile and a half from Chapeau.

While thunder and wind rocked the little community hall Friday afternoon and rain pounded on the roof so heavily that the voices of the witnesses could scarcely be heard above the din, a coroner's inquest found Michael Bradley criminally responsible for the deaths of his father, mother, sister, brother and uncle.

The accused man, who lives a mile and a half from the scene of the shooting, his father's farm, was called as a witness, but on the advice of his counsel refused to give evidence. He will be arraigned at Campbell's B.C. Que. next Wednesday and it is understood a prominent Montreal legal firm will take the defense.

Bradley has been in the custody of provincial police for several days as a material witness.

TRAFFIC COURT

The two charges against Percy Smith, of Toronto, driver of the Johnston Milk Company which followed an accident west of here in which the truck driven by Smith is alleged to have hit a parked car, were to have been heard here yesterday but were adjourned until September 11.

Arnold Sanderson, Peterboro, paid a fine of $15 and costs for reckless driving.

DECORATION DAY

The Oddfellows will hold the annual service of decorating the graves of their deceased brethren at the Union and Welcome Cemeteries on Sunday afternoon, August 6th.

DRAGGED TO DEATH UNDER HIS BINDER

Young Farmer Near Napanee Oiling Machine When Horses Bolt

While engaged in grain cutting, William George Dafoe, 35, a farmer residing three miles west of Roblin in Richmond Township received such severe injuries to his right arm and both legs that he died about two hours later while being rushed to Kingston General Hospital.

He was oiling the binder while it was in gear. When he was underneath the machine a clap of thunder frightened the horses. They started ahead and Dafoe, unable to free himself, was dragged until the horses stopped at a fence line.

Dafoe's father, shocking sheaves, witnessed the tragedy and sent for Dr. F. C. Burrows of Marlbank. The right arm was deeply gashed at the wrist and both legs severely lacerated about the thighs and death was attributed to loss of blood, shock and probable internal injuries. His wife, formerly Blanche Hart; his parents, and one brother and sister, survive.

PRISONERS QUIET AT KINGSTON 'PEN'

Penitentiary Disturbance Mild Warden Megloughlin Declares

Sullen silence enveloped Kingston penitentiary Sunday night as prisoners sweated in the terrific heat wave which has made even the iron bars warm. To-day the trial of convict Michael McDonald, charged with rioting last October, will continue.

There were no disturbances in the penitentiary after guards had found several convicts attempting to make home-brew from prunes and sugar they had filched from the dining-rooms, Warden W. B. Megloughlin said, and generally all was quiet in the big institution.

Saturday convict Tony Baker, testifying at McDonald's trial, declared he had armed himself with a sledgehammer on the day of the riot, smashed the lock on the mail bag department door and ordered the convicts to "Get out or I'll brain you." McDonald, he said, was among those ordered out of the room, "because I wanted him to go to the dome with the others and lodge a complaint."

He said McDonald did not break any machines in the mail bag room.

STOCK DISTRICT WITH PARTRIDGE

Twenty Pairs Of Hungarian Type Let Out — Pheasants Also Being Distributed

Hungarian partridge, a new species of game, are being stocked in this district under the supervision of the Department of Game and Fisheries. Several years ago birds of this type were set out in the vicinity of Garden Hill and have been successfully propagated since that time.

Game and Fisheries Overseer R. N. Hills, has placed ten pairs north of Bowmanville and a similar number in the vicinity of Uxbridge. The Hungarian type of partridge is the same in appearance as the Canadian type except in size but have proven to be of efficient hardiness to withstand the rigours of a Canadian winter. The male is best determined by a horseshoe marking on the breast.

In addition English Pheasants, which have been successfully introduced here for a number of years and multiplied greatly in numbers to an extent that a two-day open season was declared last year, are also being more widely distributed. Twenty-five pairs have been distributed in Darlington, Clarke, Whitby and East Whitby Townships and it is confidently expected that they will propagate with the same success that has been experienced in Port Hope and surrounding district.

As a vermicide an excellent preparation is Mother Graves' Worm Terminator. It has saved the lives of countless children.

QUEBEC POLICE SOLVE MURDER

Complete Solution Will Be Produced At Resumed Coroner's Inquest

A complete solution of the murder near Chapeau, Que., last week of five members of the Bradley family will be produced at the resumed coroner's inquest there on Friday, according to a report current in Montreal police circles.

While no official statement was offered by Quebec Provincial Police the expectation is that they will offer evidence at the inquest upon which a charge of murder will be laid.

Joseph Bradley, his wife, his son, Tom, daughter, Johanna, and his brother, John, were slain in or near the Bradley home on Allumette Island on Friday last. Neighbors heard a violent quarrel in the early morning hours and the sound of shots. The parish priest discovered several of the bodies when he investigated, and the others were found within a few hours.

Upwards of 1,500 members of the Loyal Order of Moose in the Province of Ontario are expected to attend the Grand Lodge Convention here over next week-end. The convention will be officially opened on Saturday when a civic welcome will be extended the visiting delegates at the Town Hall.

64-POUND TURTLE IS CAUGHT AT HASTINGS

CROPS SHRIVELL IN HEAT, DROUGHT

Rise In Price Of Milk Is Forecast By Minister Of Agriculture

A heavy decrease in milk production, with a consequent rise in milk prices, faces the Province of Ontario. "The people should be prepared for it," Hon. Thomas L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, stated Monday. "There are no 'ifs' or 'ands' about it."

So dry is the country that farmers have begun—long in advance of usual practice—to feed their cattle on grains.

Milk Volume Down
Milk, right now is, according to Col. Kennedy, "tremendously down in volume." If purchase of supplementary feed has to be maintained by the farmers for any length of time, the situation will be all the more aggravated. The only way out of the resultant expenditure "pinch" would be to reduce the size of their herds.

At the present time Ontario is in the grip of a drought which, according to James B. Fairbairn, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, has known no parallel in recent years. Every section is experiencing it. No particular area, he says, can be singled out as suffering more than any other.

Reports received from departmental officers would indicate that with the exception of fall wheat—a fair crop—the crops this year will run only 50 per cent. Spring grains, all vegetables, and all fruits, barring apples, which may or may not "come along all right," have been hit, and hit hard, by the dry spell. None will do better than the estimated 50 per cent.

The grains have not had enough nutrition to head out properly. The roots—turnips and sugar beets in particular—will, unless they get more rain and get it quickly, be considerably undersized.

"Two or three all day and all night rains, spread over the next month, would undoubtedly have an effect on the situation," declares Mr. Fairbairn, "but we have gone so long now without them that I'm afraid it wouldn't make much difference. They would help the pasture lands, but would be too late for the grains."

WOMAN DROWNS NEAR BALTIMORE

Hamilton Summer Visitor Thought To Have Fainted And Fell In Creek

Mrs. T. N. Lovejoy, Hamilton Summer visitor to Baltimore, was drowned in Baltimore Creek during the week-end, it was learned on Monday. Mrs. Lovejoy was fishing with her husband and had seated herself on the bank of the stream to remove her shoes and stockings, intending to wade. Mr. Lovejoy left his wife and went further up stream to fish. When he returned he found her lying with her head submerged in the water. It is thought she had fainted and fallen forward into the stream. Efforts to revive her by a physician called to the scene proved fruitless.

MEN ARE NEEDED IN ROAD CAMPS

Trans-Canada Highway Development Hampered By Shortage Of Labor

Work in the Trans-Canada Highway camps in the North Bay region is being hampered because of a shortage of men. The harvest in Western Canada is chiefly responsible.

Within the past few days a considerable number of workers have shouldered their packs, drawn their pay and headed for the West intent on getting in on the harvest. Desertions for one reason or other have reduced the working force from 2,800 camp capacity, to about 2,000 since the latter part of May.

In addition recruiting is at the lowest ebb with the recently opened airport camps drawing as many, if not more, volunteers than the highway camps. The rates of pay are about equal and living condition are on a par in the two branches of indirect relief. The highway camps offer $7 a month with board, while the airport workers get 20 cents a day and working clothes.

The expectation of the Department of Northern Development that the North Bay-Chalk River section of the Trans-Canada route would be finished this Fall will be interfered with unless more steady workers are obtained, it is thought.

CROP REPORT

CENTRAL ONTARIO

HASTINGS—The apple crop indications are very good but rain is needed in the apple sections. 1161 cheese were sold on the Belleville Board at 10 1/2c, a decline of 3-16c from last week. 1998 cheese were sold the corresponding Saturday a year ago. Grain is very short. White grubs are doing some damage to grain in the Spring section.

MUSKOKA and PARRY SOUND—An excellent crop of hay is being harvested. Some of the early sown oats are past danger of injury from rust and promise good yields. Wild raspberries and blueberries are an excellent crop. New potatoes, selling at $1.75 to $2.00 per bag. While rain would perhaps have been beneficial crops have not suffered to any extent and up to the present we have experienced probably much better than average season, so far as the growth and progress of farm crops is concerned.

NORTHUMBERLAND—Haying is practically completed. Considerable percentage left too long before being cut, which has resulted in an inferior quality crop. Considerable portion of wheat and rye in county already cut, many farmers hauling these crops into barns at present. Quality of grain is better than anticipated in most instances. Straw not as heavy as usual, but grain fairly plump. Tomatoes have made excellent progress most fields are well up to average development for time of year. Tomato worm has put in appearance in alarming numbers in some patches, which means that growers must resort to spraying if control is to be effected. Apples continue to make excellent growth and apparently are unaffected by dry weather to date, except possibly there has been a heavier drop than is ordinarily the case.

PETERBORO—Fall wheat practically all cut and nearly 50% in barns. Straw not extra long but indications point to a fairly good yield. Drought situation partially relieved by showers during the week.

VICTORIA—Fall wheat harvest well along, yield will be average. Several light showers last week but not sufficient to wet soil. Berries only part crop of fair quality. Spring Grains heading out prematurely. Hoe crops need rain.

CEDAR BEETLE DOES DAMAGE

Observed in Hastings County—Owners Asked To Assist in Eradication

Dotting the shore line and woods of lakes in the northern sections of Hastings County even along the roads and highways and on the cleared farm lands of the front section, the casual observer may notice a cedar tree here and there appearing brown and burned, evidently killed by some mysterious growth. Each year the number of dying trees has increased noticeably. Land owners in many sections, have suddenly awakened to the fact, that whole groves of cedar trees owned by them are rapidly headed for extinction.

Once more warning is given by Mr. A. B. Baird of the local Dominion Entomological Bureau regarding the spread of the Cedar Beetle, which has made such inroads on cedars all through this central section. In Prince Edward County the situation has grown acute. Whole groves have been laid to waste by the voracious attacks of the beetle, and the trouble has become more marked each year.

Without the assistance of the land owner himself in fighting the beetles the local bureau is powerless against the pest, it is explained by Mr. Baird. About all the assistance that can be given is advice on how to keep the beetle under control.

Chop Down Infested Trees
"Infested trees, whether actually dead or not, should be chopped down and burned," warns Mr. Baird. "All slash should be burned on the spot where the trees are cut down, to check the spread of the beetle. If this practice is followed out, the chances of limiting the spread of the pest are very good," he explains.

Particular attention should be paid to the infested trees in isolated plots. When the host tree upon which the beetle feeds is dead, then the army of beetles go to the next one, whose resistance is not great enough to ward them off. Whole areas can be steadily laid to waste unless checked.

OTHER EDITORS' OPINIONS

DURING BAD STORMS

Persons who fear electrical storms, and there are many such, have had considerable cause for concern in the Ottawa area this summer. Electrical disturbances have been numerous, and quite severe.

The problem of what to do about them is an awkward one. The child who runs to its mother for encouragement, the adult who would hide under the bed if it weren't for the necessity of preserving a certain adult dignity, alike are helpless before this natural force.

For those who take reasonable precautions, don't seek shelter under trees or beside fireplaces, don't sit in front of open windows or doors, there is no "better ole." They are as safe one place as another. Worry about it is utterly useless. When the thunder crashes the lightning already has struck, and it's no good shrieking then. If one is hit one don't worry about anything any more, and if one isn't hit one might as well enjoy the spectacle.

So perhaps this is as good advice as any: conquer fear of storms and learn to enjoy them. The flash of lightning, the roll of thunder in the hills, the rapid movement of rolling black clouds, is something most of us would pay money to see if it were staged at the exhibition. Nature offers it to us free of cost.

Anyhow there isn't anything to be done about it.—Ottawa Journal.

STARLINGS

While there has been a certain amount of joking in the past about starlings in this district, more reports have been received lately to show that the birds are doing damage of a serious nature. If this is so, now is the time to take steps to stamp out the menace before it becomes as great as it has in other parts of the province.

One district man, The Post has been informed, had a nice cherry tree. It was well covered with fruit one night but practically all disappeared within the next 24 hours, stolen by the starlings.

Possibly some action similar to that at Brampton should be taken here. A news story from that point states that, headed by Mayor J. S. Beck, a posse of local sportsmen, armed with shot-guns, staged a mass attack on starlings in the neighborhood of Elizabeth and Nelson Streets Monday evening. After several rounds had been fired with good effect, residents were assured that the nuisance had been at least reduced to the minimum. A large turnout of citizens witnessed the annihilation of the winged army.—Lindsay Post.

PRINCE PRAISES BOND OF EMPIRE

No Narrow National Character, He Tells Empire Service League

"The British Commonwealth of Nations was one of the greatest powers participating in the World Economic Conference," the Prince of Wales declared in addressing delegates to the Sixth Biennial Conference of the British Empire Service League at a banquet Tuesday night.

"Because of our position we can never have any narrow, national character," he continued. "For one of the greatest powers in the world, to have no narrow, individualistic national character but yet be held by a great bond is a very great thing at present."

The Prince said that after 10 years the British Empire Service League had justified its existence among ex-servicemen and among governments in all parts of the commonwealth of nations. All parts of the Empire had suffered severely during the last 10 years. War veterans of the Empire had borne their burdens with great fortitude, he said, because they knew what service and sacrifice were and knew it was up to them to help others who had not been through the same grueling.

The heir to the throne read a telegram from the King wishing continued prosperity to the League.

"Danger clouds are showing in more than one quarter," declared Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill responding to a toast to the guests. "The glorious victory has not been followed by any slackening in the demand for exertion or any increase in the case of the lives of our people, but we can feel a certain satisfaction at the position we hold to-day."

EMPLOYMENT IN CANADA HIGHER

More Than Seasonable Increase Is Recorded In Statistics

Industrial situation in Canada showed further marked improvement at the beginning of July. Increase in personnel reported to the Dominion bureau of statistics by 8,125 firms were greater than those indicated by the firms making returns for any previous July in any year since 1920.

Establishments reporting data had 778,148 persons on their staffs July 1, as compared with 742,750, June 1. This pronounced increase of 35,398 employees caused the bureau's index to rise by 3.8 points to 84.5 as compared with the average seasonal advance of about two points during the past 12 years.

The upward trend of employment noted in the last three months, gathered momentum in its progress, has provided work for more than 79,000 persons, besides increasing the working hours of others previously employed.

The outstanding increases were reported in food, lumber, textile, iron and steel and non-ferrous metal factories. Logging, mining, except coal mining, communications, transportation, construction, services and trade also showed important increases in the number of persons employed.

Some 10,000,000 milk bottles go astray every year in England alone.

IMPROVING OF ALFALFA CROP

High Potash Fertilizers Pay Best On Alfalfa, Survey Reveals

Information of value to farmers in the Port Hope district is contained in a bulletin on the improving of Alfalfa yields, released by the Department of Agriculture. The bulletin consists of a report on a series of experiments on alfalfa carried out by the Ontario Agricultural College in different parts of the Province.

The bulletin reads in part: "Reports from most of the 21 farm demonstration experiments conducted in 22 counties by the Department of Chemistry, Ontario Agricultural College, are received. The figures bring out some interesting facts. 1933 growing season has been fairly favorable in many sections, but severe droughts during the past three weeks have reduced yields to a considerable extent. Nevertheless, results of great interest remain. An application of fertilizers of 375 lbs. per acre in the early spring resulted this year in an increase of 5,298 lbs. green alfalfa per acre. This was 31.2 per cent greater yield than that obtained from unfertilized alfalfa. The highest yielding fertilizer was again 0-12-15, which this year gave an average increase of 34.6 per cent over unfertilized.

"The average yield for the 221 farm fertilizer experiments on alfalfa conducted over the province during the past four years shows an average increase for fertilizers of 4033 lbs. or 29.2 per cent, and in addition valuable residual gain. "Three common analysis tested in all four years have given the following results: 0-12-5, 23.7 per cent increase; 2-12-6, 29.7 per cent increase; 0-12-15, 40.5 per cent increase. The cost of 375 lbs. of the fertilizers used ranged from $5.25 to $7.50 per acre.

"The 1933 figures again confirm the findings of the previous three years; high potash fertilizers pay best on alfalfa. Alfalfa being a legume has the power to extract nitrogen from the air and fix it in the soil by virtue of the structure of its roots. It is logical therefore to interpret the figures given to mean that when the alfalfa crop is established, it can supply its own nitrogen, but that it benefits materially from the addition of phosphate, and especially potash.

"Interesting residual results were obtained in the first cut this summer. The average yield from the most effective analysis on two farms, one year after the application of the fertilizer, was 15,360 lbs. per acre, against 11,010 lbs without fertilizers, showing a gain of 4,350 lbs. of green alfalfa per acre in the second year's crop. On one farm, two years after the fertilizer had been applied, there was a gain of 6,240 lbs. of green hay where high phosphate-potash fertilizer had been used two years previous. These residual effects are of special interest since they show definitely that the effect of fertilizers is felt not only in the crop to which it is applied, but also in succeeding crops for at least two years."

NEW INVENTION IN TELEVISION

Ottawa Scientists "Super-Eye" Said To Perfect Radio Broadcast Pictures

Invention of a "super eye", which it is claimed will make perfect television possible, revolutionize the speedy transmission of messages and action pictures, and multiply a thousand-fold the power of telescopes, was announced in Ottawa Thursday. The inventor is Dr. Francois C. Henroteau, head of the Astrophysical branch of the Dominion Observatory at Ottawa.

Dr. Henroteau has been working for 10 years on an apparatus which he hoped would facilitate astral observation. It is stated that application of the apparatus to television had not been contemplated until his research disclosed the possibilities in that direction. Use of the photo-electric cell is said to be the basis of the invention, which has been patented in the United States after a series of tests.

The inventor was indisposed Thursday and could not be reached for further details. Dr. Henroteau was the discoverer of the mysterious planet "Y", which was at first thought to be the planet "X" discovered by the Lowell Observatory in Arizona.

U.S. COMMENCES TO ENLARGE NAVY

Bids On 21 Ships To Be Built In Private Yards Are Opened

The U.S. navy department has launched the greatest shipbuilding program in its history designed to put thousands of men back to work and build the United States fleet to London treaty limits.

Bids for the construction of 21 vessels which are to be built in private yards were opened by Secretary Swanson and high naval officials.

Swanson said tabulation of the bids would be carried out with the utmost speed in order that actual construction of the ships could be started as soon as possible.

The ships which were bid on included two aircraft carriers of 20,000 tons each; one heavy cruiser armed with eight-inch guns which was authorized in 1929 under terms of the London treaty but which could not be laid down before January 1, 1934; one light cruiser to be armed with six-inch guns; eight destroyer leaders of 1,850 tons each; seven destroyers of 1,500 tons each and two submarines of 1,400 tons each.

ATTACKED BY EAGLE FISHERMAN ASSERTS

Three Peterboro residents report that they were attacked by an eagle having a wing spread of over nine feet while they were fishing from a boat in Little Lake shortly before daybreak.

Beaten off with a fishing pole wielded by Norman Manley, 44 George street north, the eagle returned some time later, accompanied by another bird of the same species. Apparently mindful of the warm reception it had received previously, the eagle flew off with its companion to the shelter of a clump of bushes in Little Lake Cemetery.

Manley, who was fishing in company of R. J. Byers and 15-year-old Melville Byers stated: "The eagle, after circling overhead, swooped down and was about to attack Byers when I reached for my fishing pole and beat it off."

The bird flew away, he said, but returned at about five o'clock with a smaller eagle. The two birds flew overhead and headed for the direction of some bushes.

MAKE PROVISIONS OWNERS ON RELIEF

Government Considering Giving Light And Water As Well As Taxes

Extension of the shelter aid at present given to the home-owner on relief is now being considered by the Henry Government and some definite decision is likely to be reached at the next Cabinet meeting.

There is a strong possibility, it is learned, that the home-owner may be placed on the same basis as the renting tenant, and that in future he will be paid taxes plus fifty per cent, and light and water, instead of just taxes as is the situation at the present time.

Considerable data has been prepared for the Cabinet in connection with this particular phase of relief assistance and distribution, and it is hoped, it is said, to have whatever extension of relief may be formulated in operation with the least possible delay.

The Government has still to sign its agreement with the Dominion authorities for next season's relief program. This also will likely be dealt with at the next meeting of the Cabinet. While it follows closely the lines of the agreement signed by Ottawa and the Province of Quebec, there are certain new features, it is said, on which more enlightenment is required before Queen's Park formally and finally approve of it.

HEARD ON THE STREET

WEDNESDAY, JULY 26.

Richard Halford, Hamilton Township farmer, lost a valuable horse during last Friday's storm by lightning.

Despite the warm weather, reports from Agricultural representatives in this district indicate that apples will be a good crop and practically unaffected by the hot, dry spell.

The "Mary Jane" of Olcott, N.Y., arrived in port here last night on a cruise of the north shore with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hamill, of Lockport, Mrs. Edmund Lee and son Edmund, Misses Marie and Charlotte Jones, of Syracuse, who were joined by Messrs. John Watson and Fred Walters, of Whitby, when they called at that port. They are having a very enjoyable trip.

"The edge is off the relief problem. A large percentage of Ontario's unemployed have been absorbed, and it looks as if we will hold that advantage and go on to further employment improvement." This heartening statement of Ontario's improving economic conditions emanated from Hon. Dr. J. D. Monteith, Minister of Labor, at Queen's Park on Tuesday. The Provincial employment figures show a gratifying improvement of from 20 to 25 per cent, in employment in June of 1933, as compared with June of last year. While some of the improvement may be seasonal, the bulk of it is deemed to be solid betterment of conditions.

Ray Shannon of Hamilton was released in Trenton Tuesday on bail, when he appeared before Magistrate Jarrett charged with reckless driving, after his car sideswiped a car driven by Mrs. H. Kennedy of Trenton Monday night. No one was seriously injured.

David Bush, 19-year-old inmate of the Ontario Hospital, Kingston, who made a sensational escape from that institution on Sunday, July 16, has thus far succeeded in evading capture. Since he left the car which he made his getaway from the hospital, on the Van Loven Farm, on the front road, and entered the bush, no real clue has been secured of the young man's whereabouts. The police in all the outside centres have been given a description of Bush. It is believed that since making his escape he has been keeping to the bush as much as possible to avert detection.

An unsteady number of prisoners at the Kingston Penitentiary went on a "hunger strike" at breakfast time Tuesday. The prisoners affected were housed in what is known as the female prison. Warden W. Megloughlin refused to confirm the number refusing to eat, which outside reports placed at fifty-four, and said the prisoners were all eating at lunch time.

"Never. She goes her way and I go hers."

THURSDAY, JULY 27.
Have you ever thumbed your way along?

It seems as if you can't go any place without continually seeing 'em with thumbs up!

There's a lot of people who just have to thumb their way through life, have to move on some one else's gas and eat of the fruits of other's labor.

We kind of have an idea there is more hitch-hiking done than is needed and it should be discouraged as motorists stopping to get them or turning out to avoid them are a constant cause of accidents.

A good crowd took in the moonlight excursion out of Cobourg Harbour Wednesday evening which was sponsored by W. F. Babecek, manager of the local Dancing Gardens. A feature of the occasion was the presence of two orchestras, for modern and old-time dancing and the Port Hope band whose music from the top deck added to the general enjoyment of the affair.

W. H. Horner, of Campbellcroft, has purchased the 150-acre farm of Harry Austin, Wesleyville.

Lindsay U.F.O. held their annual picnic at Birch Point, on Balsam Lake, Wednesday afternoon with between five and six hundred people present. The speakers included Walter Thompson, a farmer of pickering, who took the government to task for what he termed a "raw deal to the farmer." William Newman, M.P.P., delivered a short speech. J. J. Thurston, ex-M. P.P. for the U.F.O.-Liberals, stated that he was sorely disappointed because there was no speaker on the platform to represent the cause of the C.C.F.

At a recent meeting of the directors of the Lennox County Agricultural Society it was decided not to hold the annual Fall fair. Unfavourable weather conditions have considerably hampered the production of farm produce and suitable arrangements for a midway could not be made.

Good morning! Is it too good to last?

The clouds came with refreshing rain and just left enough to tease the parched earth.

The ladies section of the local golf club played Peterboro on Thursday afternoon in Peterboro and were defeated after a good day's play. The visitors were guests at luncheon and also at afternoon tea.

On Tuesday the Lady golfers held a picnic party at the local course and a two-ball foursome competition which was won by Mrs. J. A. V. Fraser and Mrs. C. S. Mann.

George Brown, 65, of Thornbury, was drowned early Thursday at Ragged Rapids in the north of Victoria County. The drowning was first reported to the authorities by a tourist who motored eight miles to notify provincial police, and Coroner Dr. Anderson of Kirkfield is helping in the investigation. The body has not yet been recovered. It is thought that Brown had been picking blueberries near the rapids about the time of the fatality.

Phillip Goodman, Arthur O'Reilly, Edward Wells, Rocco Gurossi, and Agnew Burlic, charged with shop-breaking, were all remanded till Aug. 3 in Toronto police court yesterday. Bail was set at $2,000 each. It is alleged by police that these men are the gang responsible for an epidemic of safe-thefts from gasoline stations and from Hunt's candy store. Three of these men were committed for trial here recently after breaking into Gifford's Garage.

Everybody has been asking who got the car at Bowmanville, well, Fred J. Ballantyne of St. Catharines is the lucky winner of the new automobile.

John Stavely, Toronto, pseudo Scottish, heir was sentenced to five years in Kingston Penitentiary by Magistrate J. Willis in Whitby Wednesday when he pleaded guilty to defrauding Mrs. Seymour Whitney out of $600. Representing himself as the heir to rich estates in Scotland, he secured money from Mrs. Whitney as well as from his supposed fiancée, Miss Lucy Stanning. Recently it was discovered that Stavely was a married man and in Toronto police court he was sentenced to three years' imprisonment on a charge of fraud. The sentence by the Whitby magistrate is concurrent with the other.

A Head For Business
A cheapjack on the corner the other night was trying to get his audience in good humor before offering his goods for sale.

"Now, ladies and gents," he said, holding up a quarter, "here's a real chance for everyone. A silver quarter—how much will you give me for it?"
As he expected, bids came quickly. Finally, a small boy said, ten cents.
"Very well, my lad," said the cheapjack, "the quarter's yours. Hand up your dime."

The boy shook his head.
"Take it out of the quarter and give me the change," he said.

That his country will continue to offer asylum for Jews fleeing to Hitler terrorism in Germany, was the message of Dr. Frantisek Soukup, president of the Czechoslovakian Senate, and close friend of Dr. T. G. Masaryk, president of the republic.

"Already more than 3,000 Jews have fled to our land," Dr. Soukup said. "Daily crossings over the frontier exceed fifty. We are doing our best to give them a chance to rain a livelihood." Dr. Soukup, who was minister of justice in the first cabinet set up

EMPIRE AGREES FIVE-POINT PACT ON CURRENCIES

Agreements Signed In London, Endorse Policy of Price Raising And Gold Standard

The British Empire announced Thursday night in London, England, a general agreement on a "sound" financial policy designed to facilitate stabilization of currency within the Commonwealth and indicating a single monetary policy for the United Kingdom and all the Dominions except the Irish Free State.

The 12-page statement on economic and financial policy provided:

- 1—Ultimate return to "a satisfactory international gold standard."
- 2—Possible participation by the United States and other nations in a wider agreement to stabilize monetary exchanges.
- 3—No favoritism toward either the dollar or the franc.
- 4—No commitments on future "management" of the pound sterling.
- 5—Furtherance of every effort to raise wholesale prices.

Sound Financial Policy
The British statement disavowed any intention of following anything other than "a sound financial policy" and said that this policy would favor neither the dollar nor the franc, which have been on opposite sides of the international monetary struggle since the United States abandoned the gold standard.

France has led the nations maintaining the gold standard and has urged return of all nations to that standard.

Coming immediately after the recessing of the futile World Economic Conference the statement was considered of great significance because the conference collapsed on the question of currency stabilization. Only the Irish Free State, which has been at economic war with the United Kingdom, failed to join in the statement.

Authoritatively, but unofficially, it was said that the policy was framed so that it might be widened to include other nations, thus permitting wide action on the vital currency question which has been an issue throughout the world since Great Britain and other powers abandoned the gold standard.

It was believed that the British hoped that the United States and other nations would enter into the currency understanding.

The statement emphasized that the ultimate aim is restoration of a "satisfactory international gold standard."

No Commitments
Britain, it was declared, has made no commitments to other nations regarding the future "management" of the pound sterling, which recently has gained widely in relation to the dollar.

The statement was signed by Neville Chamberlain, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, for Britain; G. W. Forbes, the New Zealand Premier; Jan Smuts of the Union of South Africa; Stanley Bruce of Australia; R. B. Bennett, Premier of Canada; and M. Strakoschen for India.

Joseph Connolly declined to sign for Ireland, referring the statement to the Dublin government.

The principles agreed upon at the Ottawa Imperial conference were emphasized as "sound" in the statement, which reiterated a desire to raise the world wholesale prices.

"In the last few months," the statement said, "the persistent adherence of the United Kingdom to a policy of cheap and plentiful money has been increasingly effective under more favorable conditions created for the time being by the change in policy of the United States. . . . The governments of the commonwealth should persist by all means in their power, whether monetary or economic, within the limits of sound finance, in a policy furthering a rise in wholesale prices until evidence of equilibrium is established."

Thursday's announcement marks the conclusion of weeks of negotiations conducted in the strictest secrecy—sometimes in private houses and sometimes in cabinet offices in Whitehall.

LAYERING ROSES

Some varieties of roses can be readily increased by layering, says the Dominion Horticulturist. Layering consists in bending down the branches and covering the bent part with from four to six inches of soil, leaving the tip and upper part of the branch exposed. In time the branch will root where it is bent, and the rooted part is then cut off. As a rule, rooting will be much more rapid if a branch is cut part way through at the base of a bud, where it will be bent, and then another cut made lengthwise of the branch through the bud for an inch or more. If this cut is held a little open with some coarse sand, the layers will come out more quickly.

CANADA CONTINUES TAX ON ROYALTIES

Privy Council Judgment On Income Levies Held Not Applicable

The Income Tax Department will continue to collect the tax on income accruing from royalties, it was announced by departmental officials on Friday, in spite of the adverse ruling delivered recently by the judicial committee of the Privy Council. This case, they declared, which was an appeal taken by Mrs. Katherine Spooner, involved peculiar circumstances.

It centred on an agreement whereby the moneys paid to Mrs. Spooner by an oil company in which she had invested were regarded as at return of capital paid into the property. This is not taxable under the act. Royalties, however, are assessable.

LAKE TROUT CAUGHT IN CROW BAY WATERS

A variety which has not been seen in these waters for many years was witnessed at Crow Bay, near Campbellford, when A. N. Mr. Knopp, who is a visitor at Dck Cole's summer resort, was fishing off Cole's point, where the river empties into the bay and at which place there is a great depth of water. Only in the memory of a few of the older residents have lake trout ever been landed from these waters.

AMOS, ANDY PROGRAM IS ALLOWED TO GO ON

A last-minute conference by Commissioner Maher of the Canadian Radio Commission in New York with NBC officials resulted in the "Amos 'n Andy program" being heard as usual over Station CRET Tuesday night. Instructions had been received earlier in the day by the Canadian station to ban the comedians' program because of their failure to apologize for alleged slurs against British and European countries in relation to their war debts to United States and to have been contained in the Amos 'n Andy program of July 4.

Just before Amos 'n Andy came on the air last night, Station CRET stated that "objections raised by the Canadian Radio Commission concerning the 4th of July broadcast" were "being taken up in New York by Commissioner Maher and a statement will shortly be released to the press."

"We do not expect a statement will be presented before some time tomorrow," Don Cogeland of Station CRET said Tuesday night. "It will probably be in the nature of an explanation. Mr. Maher, who is in New York, is taking the matter up with NBC officials."

The price of bread delivered at the door was increased from 9 cents to 10 cents by Oshawa bakeries Monday, and will also be effective in Whitby. The postmistress smiled delightedly. "How very kind of the bride to remember me. Did she know of my weakness for wedding cake?"
"She did," replied the youngster, coolly, "and she thought she'd send a bit of it this afternoon just to take the edge off your appetite before she posted boxes to her friends."

FURTHER RELIEF HOME OWNERS

150 Per Cent. Of Taxes And Light, Water To Be Given

Announcement was made Thursday by Premier Henry that cabinet council had approved of a further extension of the assistance now being given to home owners on relief, and that commencing immediately home owners will be on the same basis as renting tenants.

They will as a result of the government's decision, get 150 per cent of their taxes plus light and water, instead of 100 per cent of taxes, with no light or water, as is the situation at the present time.

The extension will mean an additional gross expenditure in Ontario of $1,000,000. The Federal Government, the Provincial Government and the municipalities affected will share equally in this expenditure.

BRITAIN CAPTURES THE DAVIS CUP

Bitter Battles Feature International Tennis Matches At Auteuil

Great Britain captured the historic Davis Cup for the first time since 1912 on Sunday, ending France's six-year international tennis reign with a three-two victory in the challenge round.

The British triumph robbed France of a chance of tying the U.S. record of seven successive Davis Cup victories, and took from Paris the silver bowl which almost had become identified with the national honor.

Frederick J. Perry, the galloping steed of the British squad, rounded off a great victory in the final and deciding match, beating cocky Andre Merlin, French youngster, 4-6, 8-6, 6-2, 7-5, after Henri Gochet had defeated H. W. (Bunny) Austin in a stubborn duel, 5-7, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4, to square the series count at two matches all.

The bitterness of defeat was softened somewhat for the French by Cochet's gallant come-back after his unexpected defeat in singles Friday, and by the plucky fight Merlin made against Perry.

SISTERS ARE RE-UNITED FIRST TIME IN 58 YEARS; ONE IS 84, SISTER 82

(Cornwall Standard-Freeholder)
Mrs. James Laurenceson, of Port Hope, Ont., arrived in Cornwall Sunday by motor on a visit to her sister, Mrs. Alex. Jarvo. Though the sisters have been living only a little over 200 miles apart, this is the first occasion on which they have met in 58 years and the meeting was a joyous reunion for both. Mrs. Jarvo, as a girl, was Margaret McMillan. She is now 84 years old. Mrs. Laurenceson, now 82, was Catherine McMillan, they being natives of the Township of Kenyon, Glengarry County.

Mrs. Frank Tricker, of Toronto, a daughter of Mrs. Laurenceson, and Mr. Tricker and son Cyril Tricker, and Harold Boughen, of Toronto, a nephew of Mrs. Tricker, accompanied Mrs. Laurenceson on her trip and all are enjoying their first visit to their Cornwall relatives. The two aged sisters, re-united after such a long separation, are naturally having a great time recounting incidents in their early lives, each also relating to the other experiences through which they have gone in their later lives and expressing wonder, now that they have met, that such was not done long ago and repeated at frequent intervals.

The visitors expect to be in Cornwall for a couple of weeks.

ONTARIO TO ADOPT NEW HEALTH PLAN

System Worked Out By Queen's Park, Hon. Dr. J. M. Robb Announces

A new health policy, with prevention of disease and promotion of health as its chief factors, and involving state aid in medical and dental treatment for those who, because of poverty or other circumstances, cannot supply the treatment themselves, is now being demonstrated in five eastern counties of Ontario, and will, if successful, be extended by the Henry Government to meet the requirements of the entire province.

Although the Department of Health has been quietly working on the new program since May, it was not until Wednesday night that Hon. Dr. J. M. Robb, minister at the head of the Department, speaking at Alexandria, revealed the demonstration or study that is being conducted with a view to giving Ontario "as near the ideal health program, as it is possible to achieve."

Representative Opinion
Personnel engaged in the demonstration comprises members of the departmental staff and local physicians and dentists, working in close cooperation with the Ontario Medical Association, the Ontario Dental Association, the Canadian Dental Hygiene Council and the Canadian Public Health Association. Dundas, Stormont, Glengarry, Prescott and Russell counties were selected for the study, as they, in the opinion of the department, represented a truly representative rural and semi-urban area of Ontario. Work was first commenced in Dundas, and a survey of that county has now almost been completed by a group of four Department of Public Health nurses specially trained for this type of work.

The object of this survey has been to obtain full information regarding health conditions and facilities for promotion and maintenance of health in that county—also to learn to what extent sickness prevailed requiring local or state assistance. This survey will be followed, it is stated, by a complete medical and dental check-up, this to be inaugurated about September 1. Contemporaneous with this will be launched a program of clinics, public addresses, and distribution of health literature, with the idea of improving the public mind on the subject of health in general, with particular application to the local area. This step will then be followed by the correction of defects found. Those who are able to finance their own medical and dental service will be dealt with in the usual way, through their own family practitioners, and the remainder will be offered service, insofar as possible, at the public expense, with local physicians and dentists supplying the treatment.

The methods by which this work is to be handled, Hon. Dr. Robb states, will reduce the public expenditure to a minimum, but at the same time will achieve satisfactory results. Dr. Robb made it quite clear that the purpose of his department and of the Government was not to place the responsibility for total medical care and disease prevention and health promotion upon the state, but, as he explained, to "retain that responsibility to those financially able to carry their own burden and to devise a plan by which those who are less fortunately situated financially may receive the necessary assistance and attention."

To Extend Plan
One thing that will be stressed in the demonstration—and as soon as the study is complete in Dundas the program will be extended to the other four selected counties in turn—is the prevention of specific diseases for which specific remedies are available, such as inoculation to prevent diphtheria. An interesting sidelight in this connection, as the Minister of Health pointed out is that in 1920 in Ontario there were 30 cases of diphtheria for every 100,000 of population. Since that year there has been a steady decrease annually until in 1932 there were only two cases per 100,000 of population.

A further interesting feature of the new policy inaugurated in the eastern counties area is the arrangement to provide, through the auspices of the Ontario Medical and Dental associations, a series of clinics to be conducted by specialists in medicine and dentistry from the various centres in the province, for the benefit of the local practitioners. Special cases showing interesting clinical features will be selected for these clinics.

FIND EVIDENCE LOST CONTINENT

Flourished Until 150,000,000 Years — Large As Europe And Asia Together

New evidence of existence of "Gondwanaland," mighty lost continent that flourished until 150,000,000 years ago, but now is nearly all beneath the South Seas, was put before the International Geological Congress.

Gondwanaland was as huge as all Europe and Asia, said Dr. Alexander L. Du Toit of Johannesburg, South Africa. It existed for 400,000,000 years from the time life got its start on earth until the Mesozoic era, when reptiles ruled the world.

Much of Gondwanaland is now believed to be sunk beneath the Indian Ocean, but it also included, most of South America, Africa and Australia, Madagascar, the peninsular part of India, Tasmania and the eastern part of the Antarctic continent.

Latest evidence of its existence comes from new study of rocks found in Argentina, Brazil, South Africa, India and Australia. It is believed certain all these points must once have been part of a giant continent. These rocks also contain fossil remains of animals much alike.

Though Gondwanaland carried no great civilization to its doom when it disappeared beneath the waves, as legend says the case with mythical Atlantis, it did carry much valuable information about the earth's past history.

CANADIAN PURE FOOD

The Pure Food Laws of Canada state "Canned fruits and canned vegetables are sound products made by sterilizing clean, sound, properly matured and prepared, fresh fruit or vegetables by means of heat, and keeping the same in suitable, clean containers, closed hermetically or otherwise, and to conform in name to the particular fruits or vegetables used in their preparation." No adulterant, preservative, or artificial coloring matter may be used in commercial canned fruits or vegetables. Therefore they contain only pure water, sugar and salt. Tomatoes may have no added water, and the juice must be the juice from the particular lot of tomatoes. There are on the market at present over thirty-five sizes of cans. Only eleven of these are standardized. All containers not of standard size must have the net weight and drained weight of solids plainly stated on the labels.—Dominion Fruit Branch.

CANNED VEGETABLE LIQUID

Canned vegetables as they come from the can are surprisingly good if turned, liquor and all, into a skillet and allowed to boil rapidly until nearly all the liquor is boiled away. Then the vegetable may be seasoned with butter, salt and pepper and served at once. Never wash canned vegetables before using, says the Dominion Fruit Branch. The liquid contains valuable mineral salts and precious flavour may be lost in washing. Use the liquid from these vegetables in sauce or soups if it is not desirable to serve it with the vegetable.

MAY RETIRE CIVIL SERVANTS AT 65

Dominion Expected To Give Decision Soon — 1,200 Affected

The question of retirement or superannuation of civil servants who have reached the age of 65 years, has again been under consideration by the treasury board and a decision is expected shortly, probably next week. Whatever action is taken, it is not anticipated that there will be wholesale retirements but that the treasury board will have discretion to retain for a time those having special qualifications for the duties they are performing and those who occupy positions which cannot very well be abolished.

It was learned that there are upwards of 1,200 civil servants of 65 years or over and in many instances they are entitled to full superannuation, namely seven-tenths of their salary. The retiring civil servant receives a superannuation of one-fifth of his salary for every year's service up to 35 years.

In the efforts to reduce expenditures, the Government has been studying the retirements of those civil servants over 65 years of age for sometime.

PRELAD WILFORD WORLD WHEAT KING

Signalling his ascent to the world's wheat throne, Frelad Wilford, of Staveley, Alta., won the coveted crown of wheat growing at the Regina World's Grain Exhibition now on.

Twice defeated by Herman Trelle, Wembley, Alta., at the Chicago World Grain Show in 1930 and 1932, the southern Alberta farmer placed first in the hard red spring wheat class with a reward strain of wheat. Trelle was second and four other farmers gave to the foothills province the first six places.

Third place went to Fred Haverly and fourth to Fred Haschetag, both of Wembley, Alta. Fifth place to J. H. B. Saith, Wolf Creek, Alta., and sixth to Paul Sebastian, 18-year-old grower from Wembley. Alberta captured 24 of the 50 prizes awarded. Saskatchewan farmers earned 19 awards, six went to British Columbia growers and one to Manitoba.

NARCISSUS IN JULY

Narcissus is the botanical name of all the spring flowering bulbs known as Chinese sacred lilies, daffodils, jonquils, and narcissus. Of these the Chinese lily and jonquils are not hardy enough in Canadian gardens. There is a very large number of varieties, many of which are expensive and obtainable only from specialists, but older and cheaper kinds are excellent for the border and are sold by Canadian seedsmen each fall. The bulbs as a rule live for years and increase in numbers in most places. If in a few years' time, the flowers begin to grow small, it may be because the bulbs may be overcrowded. In this case they should be dug up when the leaves begin to turn brown in July, stored in a dry place until September or October, and then divided and replanted. — Dominion Department of Agriculture.

TIED TIN CANS HORSES' TAILS

Two Youths Given Severe Lecture And Fined $10 And Costs In Bowmanville

Stanley Coverley, aged 26, and Lorne Annis, aged 18, two young men of Darlington Twp., appeared before Magistrate R. M. Cotton, in Bowmanville Police Court on a charge of damaging property as a result of tying tin cans to the tails of James Dudley's horses on Thursday night last.

The story, as told to the court, was that Mr. Dudley's horses had been pasturing on the roadside and were more or less of a nuisance, the young men having chased them away from their property on former occasions. Thinking to make an effective job of scaring the horses away, tin cans were tied to their tails. The horses became frantic and running up the road to the intersection at Tyrone they collided with a car driven by J. McRoberts.

The one horse slid under the front end of the auto, breaking a front leg, while the other horse did considerable damage to the front end of the car and the lives of the four occupants of the car were endangered. The police were informed and Constable W. E. Smith, Bowmanville, laid a charge against the young men.

In the meantime, Mr. Annis, father of Lorne, agreed to pay Mr. Dudley for the horse which had to be destroyed, owing to the broken leg, and also assumed responsibility of paying for repairs to the damaged car. The young men also apologized to Mr. Dudley for their rash act.

On the witness stand Mr. Dudley spoke very favourably of the young men and asked that the Court be lenient, but Magistrate Cotton gave them a severe lecture and regretted there was nothing in the statutes that would allow corporal punishment, such as they deserved. They both promised never to be a party to such actions again. They were each fined ten dollars and court costs of $12.25 to be divided.

Another young man, who was implicated in the affair will appear in court on Saturday next.

POLICE SHOTS FAIL TO STOP STOLEN AUTO

Driver Of Stolen Trenton Car Fired On In Cobourg Early Wednesday Morning

Fired on by Night Constable Gavin Reid as he passed through Cobourg about two o'clock Wednesday morning, an unknown thief made his escape in a stolen car. The car which was taken in Trenton, was a closed model and bore the license number LP-618.

Cobourg and Port Hope police had been notified to be on the lookout for the car and Constable Reid was stopping all westbound traffic. On the approach of the car in question he stepped into the roadway and flagged the driver to stop. Instead the driver stepped on the gas and when Reid saw the number, he fired two shots in the hope of hitting a tire.

The car sped westward with Constable Reid in a private car in pursuit. At University Avenue he stopped to pick up Provincial Constable Carey. In the meantime the stolen car had stopped just west of the Dye Works bridge and a second car that had joined in the chase returned to inform the officers of its whereabouts.

The lights in the supposedly abandoned car had been extinguished and it was thought that the driver had struck off through the fields. On the return of the police, however, the car and its driver had vanished.

The two constables searched back roads leading off the highway at the House of Refuge corner but were unable to find any trace of the missing vehicle. The Port Hope police were also on the lookout for the car but it failed to appear here.

10 CASES OF EGGS ARE STOLEN IN WARKWORTH

Believed to have been broken into by the same egg-stealing gang that has been active in Campbellford district during the past week, Boyce's Beehive Store was entered. The cases of eggs and about $5 in change were stolen. The lock on the gas pump of a neighbouring garage operated by Edgar and Anderson was also forced and about $8 worth of gasoline taken.

HUGE STURGEON CAUGHT

One of the largest sturgeon ever pulled out of the Petewawa river, caught by Mrs. H. Ross of Toronto, near the militia's summer training camp. The fish was landed only after a fight of over an hour and tipped the scale at 93 pounds, only 18 pounds less than Mrs. Ross' own weight. The fish is a valuable one, as both its meat and roe are a highly prized delicacy. A husky Army Service Corps driver is shown holding the monster.

SET BY-ELECTIONS DATE OCTOBER 16

Federal Contests In Yamaska, Mackenzie And Restigouche-Madawaska

Federal by-elections in three widely-separated constituencies will be held Oct. 16, it was learned on the best authority on Thursday in Ottawa although formal action fixing the date will not be taken until next week. In the Saskatchewan riding of Mackenzie, a vacancy was created by the appointment of Milton Campbell, Progressive, to the Tariff Board. Yamaska, in Quebec, was vacated through the unseating of Aimee Boucher, successful Liberal candidate in the 1933 elections, and the death of Maximilien Cormier, Conservative, left a vacancy in Restigouche-Madawaska, New Brunswick.

The vacancy in South-Oxford, caused by the death of Thomas M. Cayley, Liberal, was formally reported to the Speaker of the House only a few days ago, and six months may elapse before a by-election is called.

Considerable activity has already been manifested in the Mackenzie and Yamaska campaigns, with the likelihood of a three or four-sided fight in the Saskatchewan riding, where L. St. G. Stubbs, former Manitoba judge, will be the candidate of the C.C.F. party.

In Yamaska Aimee Boucher will again contest the riding for the Liberal party, and his Conservative opponent will be A. Comtois, whom he defeated in 1930, and who took the action that, after an appeal to the Supreme Court, brought about Mr. Boucher's unseating. It is reported that a third candidate may also enter the campaign.

BOOM FERGUSON FOR THE CABINET

Queries From British Papers Indicate Trend Of Thought In London

Queries reaching Ottawa from British newspapers indicate that the question of the Canadian High Commissioner being a member of the Dominion Government is again under discussion in London. Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, High Commissioner in London, is a member of the Canadian Privy Council as was his predecessor, Hon. Peter Larkin. As such he may attend a cabinet meeting but evidently in some quarters the proposal is being made that Canada's representative to the British Government should be a full fledged cabinet minister.

During the war Sir George Perley, before he became High Commissioner, represented Canada in London while a member of the Borden Government.

The argument has been advanced that a High Commissioner could more effectively serve Canada if he had the authority of a member of the Dominion Government. Under the present arrangement, the High Commissioner is responsible to the Minister of External Affairs, whereas if he were a cabinet minister he would be responsible to cabinet as are the holders of the other portfolios.

GERMAN INVENTS NEW MODEL PLANE

Craft Will Hover And Fly In Reverse—Has No Wings Or Propeller

Adolf Rohrbach, famous German aviation designer, has disclosed some of the secrets of a unique new airplane which he said would fly forward, backward, hover motionless or rise and descend almost vertically.

Rohrbach calls the new craft an "umlaufflugel flugzeug." It has no propeller. It has no wings. It resembles a flying reaping machine. Its designer expects it to solve some of modern aviation's most perplexing problems, extending the benefits of the auto-gyro type.

Locomotion and lifting power are provided by revolving contraptions which sprout from the fuselage of the plane at the point where other airplanes have wings. These contraptions are six blade-like horizontal fins, three on each side, which revolve in a circle around two axial bars connected with the motor, which is inside the plane.

Carry 4 Persons
The first plane built on this design is a cabin ship which will carry four to seven persons and do 100 miles an hour.

"There is no reason why these planes cannot fly at 175 to 200 miles an hour," Rohrbach stated. "The first plane is intended purely for experimentation. With a more powerful motor it should reach speeds comparable to those of modern commercial craft."

The direction of flight is changed by reversing the motor, so that backward speed will be only slightly less than forward. Descent and ascent are regulated by the angle of the blades.

CROP REPORT

CENTRAL ONTARIO

NORTHUMBERLAND—Orchards have continued to make favourable progress in spite of dry weather. Many orchards as yet are practically unaffected by lack of moisture. Cheese graded at the Campbellford Grading station last week totalled $29, as compared with $78 the same week last year. This is the first week of the season on which an increase over last year has been reached. Reports from some of the cheese factories for last month's settlement are on the basis of 25-26c per lb. butter fat when the milk was hauled by contract and at some of the factories where the milk was delivered by the patrons 27.4c per lb. was obtained for the butter fat content of the milk.

ONTARIO—Fall wheat is a splendid crop, has for the most part been well saved and in many cases is already threshed. Yields of from 35 to 40 bus. are frequently reported and quality is good. Roots, both mangels and turnips, are the nearest to failure they have been in many years in this country. Early potato crop is not over 50% and the late crop will probably also be considerably below average although recent rains have helped.

PRINCE EDWARD—Drought has become extremely serious. Pastures the only exercising grounds and all crops are in a serious condition. In many herds milk yield has dropped from 1-3 to 1-2 of the June flow.

EASTERN ONTARIO
GRENVILLE—Damage from white grub is becoming quite a common complaint. Several corn fields have been noticed showing a rusted appearance and upon investigation as many as eleven grubs have been found under one hill of corn. One old meadow has also been noticed to have been damaged considerably. Later potatoes also suffering and entire amount of damage not reached as grubs are still working.

RENFREW—Cutting and threshing of spring grains started this week. Approximately 100 growers of registered seed have applied for inspection. Spring crops are spotty but on the average crops will be up to last year's average. Many fields are a little short in the straw but well headed, giving promise of a large plump grain.

MEMORIAL CAIRN TO BE ERECTED

To Mark Site Of First Presbyterian Church In Oshawa District

Dr. T. E. Kaiser, of Oshawa, is now in possession of a model of the memorial cairn which is to be erected this summer to mark the site of the old log church first occupied by Rev. Dr. Thornton when he established the first Presbyterian Mission in the Oshawa district just a hundred years ago.

The proposed cairn will stand approximately fifteen feet in height, and is proportionately massive, being built of large boulders.

Emerging from the centre of the base, and in fact bearing the cairn itself on its shoulders, is a replica of the old log church itself, while under the church is a suitable inscription and an open Bible.

The design gives one an impression of grace dignity and restfulness.

C.C.F. START IN COBOURG ATTENDED BY VERY FEW

With an attendance of only a few the first Cobourg meeting of the C.C.F. was held at the home of W. H. D. Ariss, George street. Details of the new political movement were discussed after which the meeting adjourned for another week. Officers will be elected at a later date.

W. H. D. Ariss anticipates a lively interest in the C.C.F. among Cobourg townspeople.

"Economic conditions have already reached a point that is arousing the need for a government that can cope with it. C.C.F. is the answer out of our present difficulties, declared Mr. Ariss.

Mr. Ariss, who has been a student in economics, stated that he knew Mr. Woodsworth in Victoria and was confident that the C.C.F. was in capable hands.

At one time the C.C.F. organizer was a member of the Liberal party but had abandoned it.

"I found that Liberalism was not as 'liberal' as formerly. There is no real Liberal party, except the C.C.F.," declared Mr. Ariss.

25-POUND MUSKIE CAUGHT AT BEWDLEY

After an hour's struggle, William Kennedy, proprietor of the Kennedy Hotel, Bewdley, landed a twenty-five pound muskungee at Rice Lake yesterday. The huge fish put up a stiff battle but the veteran Kennedy, who had landed many in the past, was equal to the occasion and brought the battle to a successful conclusion.

CARELESS WALKING IS SCORED BY WYSE

Careless walking was indicted in a radio speech by J. F. H. Wyse, General Manager of the Ontario Safety League. Claiming to hold no brief for either motorist or pedestrian, Mr. Wyse asserted that beyond doubt he latter must bear a large share of responsibility for the accidents in which he is involved. The law of self preservation, backed up by the certainty of coming out second-best, should produce cautious pedestrians, but this, the speaker declared was not always the case.

"Cross only at intersections and in accordance with signals," Mr. Wyse advised. Rural pedestrians were urged to use the left-hand side of the road, walking toward oncoming cars and figures supporting his advice were offered from studies in city and country. Walking, the speaker claimed, was a natural habit and the less occupied mind of the pedestrian should be concerned with safety. Should the motorist fail to observe the pedestrian's rights, it was hardly wise to insist on them in the roadway.

NORTHERN BRITISH COLUMBIA MINING

Increased production from the gold deposits of Northern British Columbia, and the profitable absorption of more men, particularly in placer mining, may be expected following the results of operations in that area during 1932, according to the Department of Mines, Ottawa. The general migration of prospectors to the gold-fields is regarded by the Department as a real asset, chiefly because it involves the return of experienced men to the area. Old placer fields, including the Atlin, Cassiar (Dease lake), Strikine, and Omineca benefitted largely by this migration. Though no spectacular discoveries of either placer or lode gold are reported, there was a general increase in production of placer gold.

SECTION 98

There has been much discussion of late about "section 98" but who knows just what this law is, for it is never published, only referred to by number?

Two weeks ago this fact was brought to our attention by a local man with a keen interest in the many references to this act and two days later some one wrote a Toronto paper about the self same thing, asking why it was never published in full so everyone will understand.

Believing our readers would be interested we have copied out this much-talked of section and present it herewith for your careful reading, consideration and inward digestion:

PROMOTING CHANGES BY UNLAWFUL MEANS

Section — 98

(1) Any association, organization, society or corporation, whose professed purpose or one of whose purposes is to bring about any governmental, industrial or economic change within Canada by use of force, violence physical injury to person or property, or by threats of such injury, or which teaches, advocates, advises or defends the use of force, violence, terrorism or physical injury to person or property, or threats of such injury, in order to accomplish such change, or for any other purpose, or which shall by any means prosecute, or pursue such purpose, or professed purpose, or shall teach, advocate, advise or defend, shall be an unlawful association.

(2) Any property, real or personal, belonging or suspected to belong to an unlawful association, or held or suspected to be held by any person for or on behalf thereof may, without warrant, be seized or taken possession of by any person thereunto authorized by the Commissioner of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and may thereupon be forfeited to His Majesty.

(3) Any person who acts or professes to act as an officer of any such unlawful association, and who shall sell, speak, write or publish anything as the representative or professed representative of any such unlawful association, or become or continue to be a member thereof, or wear, carry or cause to be displayed upon or about his person or elsewhere, any badge, insignia, emblem, banner, motto, pennant, card, button or other device whatsoever, indicating or intended to show or suggest that he is a member of or in anywise associated with any such unlawful association, or who shall contribute anything as dues or otherwise, to it or to any one for it, or who shall solicit subscriptions or contributions for it, shall be guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for not more than twenty years.

(4) In any prosecution under this section, if it be proved that the person charged has—

- (a) attended meetings of an unlawful association; or
- (b) spoken publicly in advocacy of an unlawful association; or
- (c) distributed literature of an unlawful association by circulation through the Post Office mails of Canada, or otherwise; it shall be presumed, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that he is a member of such unlawful association.

(5) Any owner lessee, agent or superintendent of any building, room premises or place who knowingly permits therein any meeting of an unlawful association or any subsidiary association or branch or committee thereof, or any assemblage of persons who teach, advocate, advise or defend the use without authority of the law, of force, violence or physical injury to person or property, or threats of such injury, shall be guilty of an offence under this section and shall be liable to a fine of not more than five thousand dollars or to imprisonment for not more than five years, or to both fine and imprisonment.

(6) If any judge of any superior or county court, police or stipendiary magistrate, or any justice of the peace, is satisfied by information on oath that there is reasonable ground for suspecting that any contravention of this section has been or is about to be committed, he may issue a search warrant under his hand, authorizing any peace officer, police officer, or constable, with such assistance as he may require, to enter at any time any premises or place mentioned in the warrant, and to search such premises or place, and every person, found therein and to seize and carry away any books, periodicals, pamphlets, pictures, papers, circulars, cards, letters, writings, prints, handbills, posters, publications or documents which are found on or in such premises or place, or in the possession of any person therein at the time of such search, and the same, when so seized may be carried away and may be forfeited to His Majesty.

(7) Where, by this section, it is provided that any property may be forfeited to His Majesty, the forfeiture may be adjudged or declared by any judge of any superior or county court, or by any police or stipendiary magistrate, or by any justice of the peace, in a summary manner, and by the procedure provided by Part XV of this Act, in so far as applicable, or subject to such adaptations as may be necessary to meet the circumstances of the case.

(8) Any person who prints, publishes, edits, issues, circulates, sells, or offers for sale or distribution any book, newspaper, periodical, pamphlet, picture, paper, circular, card, letter, writing, print, publication or document of any kind, in which is taught, advocated, advised or defended, or who shall in any manner teach, advocate, or advise or defend the use, without authority of law, of force, violence, terrorism, or physical injury to person or property, or threats of such injury, as a means of accomplishing any governmental, industrial or economic change, or otherwise, shall be guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for not more than twenty years.

(10) Any person who imports into Canada from any other country or attempts to import by or through any means whatsoever, any book, newspaper, periodical, pamphlet, picture, paper, circular, card, letter, writing, print, publication or document of any kind as described in this section shall be guilty of an offence and shall be liable to imprisonment for not more than twenty years.

(11) It shall be the duty of every person in the employment of His Majesty in respect of His Government of Canada, either in the Post Office Department, or in any other Department to seize and take possession of any book, newspaper, periodical, pamphlet, picture, paper, circular, card, letter, writing, print, publication or document, as mentioned in this section, upon discovery of the same in the Post Office mails of Canada or in or upon any station, wharf, yard, car, truck, motor or other vehicle, steamboat or other vessel upon which the same may be found and when so seized and taken, without delay to transmit the same, together with the envelopes, coverings and wrappings attached thereto, to the Commissioner of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Any remarks you have on the subject for the Editor's Correspondence will be carefully considered and presented to the public if not of a libellous nature.

STORY OF VIMY RIDGE AT C.N.E. ART SHOW

Due to arrive in Toronto within the next few days to be given a place of honor at the Canadian National exhibition art gallery, is one of the modern masterpieces in the Dominion, and a painting of great Canadian historical interest. It is the striking symbolic study of Vimy Ridge, which shows the towering Canadian memorial erected there with the wraith of Canadian heroes who fell in that engagement rising upward against the deep blue background. Presented to the Dominion by Lord Dewart, it has been hanging in the house of commons on Parliament hill and the public showing of it here was possible only by special permission of federal officials and at the express wish of the original donor.

OTHER EDITORS' OPINIONS

SECTION 98

From the London Advertiser

Defenders of Section 98 of the Criminal Code talk as if it were part of the Constitution of Canada and as if there were something revolutionary in the movement for repeal. It is not part of the Constitution, nor of British Law. It is an anti-British innovation passed in a moment of panic 13 years ago. In the first succeeding election, in 1921, the party which supported it elected only 51 members in a House of 235. After that a bill repealing it was passed several times in the House of Commons and rejected, not by the Senate, as is sometimes said, but by a small party majority in the Senate. In 1929 it was passed by the House of Commons practically without opposition, no division being called for. Mr. Bennett made a mild objection, his argument being that the section had done nobody any harm, as no prosecutions had been made. A similar argument was used in the Senate. On the Liberal side it was said that this showed that the section was not necessary; to which it was replied that it had acted as a preventive. This argument is now abandoned, as prosecutions have since taken place. It is remarkable that while the section was superfluous and unused in nine years of Liberal administration, it is represented as a necessity in three years of Conservative administration. It is one of the things that the people of Canada get instead of the prosperity that Mr. Bennett promised.

As we have said, the repealing bill was rejected, not by the Senate, but by a bare majority of that body. In 1929 the majority was only three. In Parliament as a whole, Senate and Commons together, there was an overwhelming majority for repeal. In the early life of Section 98 it was contended that there was grave danger of the spread of Russian Communism in Canada. This danger, if it ever existed, has now disappeared. Communism, so far from making headway, has lost ground all over the world. In Italy and in Germany it is banned, and Communists are treated with the utmost severity. It cut no figure in the British election of 1931 or the presidential election of 1932. There is still less ground for fearing it in Canada, and steadiness of whose people has been proved by nearly a century of peaceful progress along constitutional lines. This section is an insult to Canadians. It is revolutionary and anti-British. It violates the principles of Magna Carta in the powers of espionage and repression which it bestows upon the police. It violates the British rule that a man is to be deemed innocent until he is proved guilty. Its spirit is that, not of British institutions, but of bolshevism, fascism and Hitlerism.

80,000 MORE AT WORK

A report from Ottawa showing nearly eighty thousand more persons at work in 8,125 industries reporting that a year ago, was the most encouraging sign following upon last week's market crash. It shows that whatever may be said of share markets the conditions are improving. Whatever stock markets do the people must not be forgetful of this fact.

Markets were trying to forestal the improvement and did it so magnificently that they went far in the van of the recovery. With unsettled conditions in the past to think of as possible indicators it was no wonder that on a sign of weakness thousands plunged in to unload.

No one is foolish enough to say things are going back to where they were in June 1932. Recovery seems actually to be on its way and the market like other forces will feel the effects of this betterment. Individual effort and the labor of smaller units have wrought a great deal—what even a congress of the world

GANDHI PREPARES TO RESUME DRIVE

Will Start New Disobedience Campaign With A Few Followers

The Mahatma M. K. Gandhi, spiritual and political leader for millions in India, on Sunday dramatically announced he intended to start a new civil disobedience campaign with a march through the countryside preaching opposition to British rule. The drive will start Tuesday.

Gandhi prepared for arrest by the Indian government declared he intended otherwise to march through the villages preaching individual disobedience to British laws.

"If our sacrifice is pure," Gandhi stated, "it will generate the power for putting India within reach of swaraj (independence)."

The leader in India's fight against British control of India moved in the face of the government's strict order against continuance of the civil disobedience campaign which caused his arrest over a year ago. He was released several weeks ago when he started a 21-day fast in jail at Poona for the "untouchables" of the Hindu cast.

"Without the civil disobedience campaign," Gandhi said, "there can be no safety or freedom. If the Englishmen want peace and real friendship with the India congress, the only way is not to attempt to rule, by ordinance."

Gandhi ordered his disciples at hram, or sanctuary, to be ready to start marching Tuesday. He said he planned also to preach against "untouchability" in the campaign, in the hope that he might relieve millions of persons now living in this lowest of Hindu castes.

Prepares for Arrest

If arrested, Gandhi said his 82 companions would continue the march spreading his gospel. He enjoyed the local municipality with his rich, excellent library and gave his cattle to a charitable society for protection.

Gandhi worked until after midnight when, owing to his custom of observing a day of utter silence each Monday, he continued, writing instructions for the disposal of pending affairs.

He remained at work until arrangements for the march were completed and then returned to his temporary residence, declaring he was ready for arrest if the authorities wanted to halt his march.

Mrs. Gandhi and the Mahatma's nephew, Narandas Gandhi, will join the march, which includes 17 men and 15 women.

PETERBORO YOUTH STABBER'S VICTIM

Knifed By Strange Man As He Unlocks Door—Mysterious Call

Aubrey Patterson, Peterboro, 21 years old, who was mysteriously stabbed in the chest by an unknown assailant as he was unlocking the door at this boarding house at midnight Wednesday night, is resting easily and no serious consequences are feared unless infection sets in.

His escape from death was a close one, Dr. W. D. Scott stating that Patterson owed his life to the fact that the assailant's knife glanced off a rib and was deflected from the heart.

There is no clue to the identity of the attacker nor any known motive for the assault. Patterson had been visiting a girl, and was in the act of inserting his lock key in the door of his boarding house when he heard a step on the verandah, and was immediately seized, twisted round and then stabbed.

"Whoever it was that grabbed me was an enormously built man," said the victim. "He grabbed my left arm, twisted it up to my throat, and with the same hand clamped my mouth shut. With the other hand he stabbed me through the coat with some very sharp knife, trying for my heart. The first stab didn't go all the way so he tried again. I sank down on the floor, and I can remember him running away up the street."

Patterson declared that he has no enemies. A bewildering angle to the affair is that while Patterson was at the home of the girl, Audrey Johnson, the girl received a mysterious phone call asking her to come to a street intersection. The two went to the place named, and a motorist who answered to the description of Patterson's assailant appeared on the scene, asked how to find a certain street number and then drove off.

Aubrey Patterson, aged 21, of Peterboro, who Thursday claimed to have been the victim of a murderous stabbing assault by an unknown assailant, has admitted to police that the entire story was faked. Chief of Police Samuel Newhall stated Friday afternoon. The supposed stabbing wound close to Patterson's heart was inflicted by Patterson himself with a butcher knife, the Chief declared.

Skepticism with regard to Patterson's story arose when several flaws and contradictions appeared from investigations made by police and reporters Thursday afternoon and Friday morning. Patterson claimed that he was attacked from behind as he stooped over to insert the key in the front door of his boarding-house about midnight Wednesday night. He stated that the assailant clutched his wrist, twisted it up to his jaw, and with the other hand stabbed him, reaching over the left shoulder.

Suspicion was created by the report of Dr. C. M. Scott that the wound in Patterson's breast inclined slightly upward. It was considered an impossibility that such a wound could be inflicted by an assailant reaching over the shoulder.

Chief Newhall declined to reveal whether Patterson had given any reason for inflicting the wound, and concocting the highly imaginative story of a monstrous attacker. It is thought that the entire affair was a publicity stunt on Patterson's part. Dr. Scott said Friday afternoon that the wound was by no means as serious as first reported Thursday and that he had given Patterson permission to leave his bed Thursday afternoon. The gash extended only to the rib bone and not to the vicinity of the heart as first indicated, he said.

TWO MONTREAL WOMEN MAY INHERIT 20 MILLIONS

Upon their ability to prove relationship to Edward Albert Ridley, elderly millionaire found murdered last May in a New York basement office, depend the chances of two Montreal women to inherit an estate valued at approximately $20,000,000.

The are Miss Edith English and her sister, Mrs. W. H. Brocote. "We have no proof yet that we are related," said Miss English in confirming a report that her mother was Charlotte Grace Ridley, daughter of Robert Ridley, who is believed to have been a nephew of the murdered eccentric. Investigations into family history were being made, Miss English said.

WESTERN CROP IS 70 PER CENT.

Early Prospects Blighted By Adverse Conditions In June And July

Continued uncertainty as to the prospects for crops on the prairies is noted in the ninth of a series of 15 weekly telegraphic reports on conditions in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, published by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Excellent wheat prospects in May were generally blighted in June by drought and July brought a further decline, the report states.

The unsatisfactory conditions are regional, however, the report explains and the effect on the whole wheat crop will depend upon the acreage affected.

Report Summarized

The following is a summary of the detailed report: Manitoba crops are best in the west, centre and north. Southern areas suffered severely in June, and subsequent rainfall, although more plentiful, has not effected a recovery. Growth is well advanced and harvest will be early. Some cutting will be done this week.

Saskatchewan prospects are decidedly mixed and the ultimate harvest cannot yet be placed within narrow limits. Crops are still of near-average promise on a fairly large acreage mostly east of Moose Jaw, in the Carrot River Valley and in some northeastern districts. Some extreme southern districts and a widespread western territory are drought-stricken beyond any possibility of recovery.

In Alberta

In Alberta promising grain crops are found on the Foremost line, in the Blindman Valley, in a considerable territory branching in all directions from Edmonton and in the Grande Prairie district. Light crops will be harvested on the Lethbridge, Macleod and Aldersyde lines, and fairly generally in the whole territory east of the Calgary and Edmonton line and between the main lines of the two railway companies.

Staff inspectors' and correspondents' reports would indicate Western wheat prospects about 65 to 70 per cent of an average crop. Flax, rye and oats have been severely damaged recently and the feed situation is serious in some southern areas. Local showers have been the rule during the week, when general rains are the need. Frost has further damaged the light crops south of Calgary. Temperatures have been variable but usually moderate.

MANY SEEK WORK AT CORDOVA MINES

Hundreds of men, many of whom had hiked from the ends of the province, have applied for work at the Cordova mine since its recent activities were broadcast through the newspapers.

According to one villager, the number has been in the thousands. Signs have been posted along the road front such as "no admittance" and "keep out". The management had left the property open to visitors but when some of them dropped stones down a shaft where men were working it was decided to exclude most of them. Persons having any business are admitted, but the original freedom of the property has been considerably restricted.

ONTARIO WINS AT REGINA FAIR

W. M. Weaver, Turnerville, Gets Corn Prize—Trelle Gets Hard Wheat Title

Ontario and New Brunswick broke into the winning places at the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference in Regina on Wednesday and British Columbia took a first in rye. Two first places in the corn classes went to the United States.

In Flint corn, requiring more than 110 days to mature, first place went to W. M. Weaver, Turnerville, Ont., and in the same grade of corn requiring less than 110 days to mature, the Dominion Experimental Farm at Fredericton, N.B., was first.

Floyd Hiner, Lewisville, Indiana, was first in the general corn requiring more than 110 and less than 130 days to mature, and Theo M. Thompson, Fergus Falls, Minn., took first in the general class requiring less than 110 days to mature.

First place in the class for small field peas, white or yellow, was won by R. S. Lee, Chatsworth, Ont., and M. S. Middleton, Vernon, B.C., took first in rye any variety.

Although New Brunswick took first in the fast-growing flint corn class, Alberta carried off the majority of the prizes, taking seven; Ontario, three; Manitoba, three; British Columbia, two, and the United States, one. Robert Dawson, Niagara-on-the-lake, Ont., was second and R. J. Johnston, Chatham, Ont., was third. Fourth went to Alfred J. Strachan, Carman, Man.

Ontario and the United States divided the class for varieties of flint corn falling longer to mature. The first nine places went to Ontario, the eight following Weaver, the winner, being Donald H. Laird, Blenheim; Stewart Campbell, Blenheim; A. S. Campbell and Son, Blenheim; Max Campbell, Blenheim; R. J. Johnston, Chatham; J. S. Vaughan, Chatham; R. Maynard, Chatham, 19.

Besides Thompson's win in the Dent corn class requiring less than 110 days to mature, the United States carried off 10 other prizes. Second went to Theo Mellum of Ulen, Minn., and third to George Hoffman, Illif, Colo. I. D. Heckman, Cerro Gordo, Ill., was second to Hiner in the longer maturing Dent corn class, while Ralph Moffitt, Knightsown, Indiana, was third.

The Dominion Experimental Station at Beaverlodge, Alberta, placed second to Lee of Chatsworth in the class for small field peas, white or yellow. Donat Rivard, Clairvaux, Que., was third and R. Lacroix, St. Simon, Que., was fourth. The awards in this class were scattered among Quebec, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Ontario, Manitoba and British Columbia.

Herman Trelle, Wesley, Alberta, winner of the 10-bushel title for hard red Spring wheat earlier in the day, took second to Middleton of Vernon in the rye, any named variety, class George C. and L. C. Hutzler, South Manitou, Mich., took third.

Saskatchewan and Alberta took the bulk of the rye prizes, but they were scattered throughout the list.

The Guide Story

CHAPTER II

A glorious spring morning—the May sun shining brightly through the open windows of the breakfast-room of No. 9, Prince Albert Road, Kensington. A small round table laid for two, the morning papers neatly folded, and a couple of letters placed upon them. A girl's cheery voice was speaking outside to her dog, and then the door opened with a brisk movement and Lilith Lloyd-Lytton entered the room. She was in her eighteenth year, tall, with a full, supple, rounded figure and deep blue Irish eyes. Her hair was dark and glossy, brushed straight away from her low, broad brow, and simply plaited in two heavy Marguerite-like braids.

"What a lovely morning!" she exclaimed, going to the window and inhaling the fragrance of a box of mignonette which stood on the sill, and proceeding to gather a "button-hole" from its contents. "Oh, Dandie!" to her dog, which seemed in its bright spirits as Lilith herself—"isn't it glorious? No more school—no more books—and away to dear old Lytton! I do believe!"—holding his nose in her hand—"you're as glad as I am," to which asseveration Dandie gave a bark of delighted assent, and commenced frolicking with his mistress, who seemed to enjoy the game as much as he did.

"Why, Lil, my child, are you going mad?" demanded a voice at this juncture, and the girl left her four-footed companion, and threw her arms lovingly round her mother.

"Well, dear old mother, I must own I feel a little maddish!"—with another embrace!

"There, then, child, don't quite strangle me in your joy," laughed Mrs. Lloyd-Lytton, greeting, and gently disengaging herself.

Having escorted her mother in a cosy armchair, Lilith proceeded to pour out the steaming coffee.

"There's a letter from Doctor Dobell," she announced, when breakfast was nearly over. "I think he might have waited till after the holidays before sending his bill, don't you?"

"This cannot be the bill," returned her mother, breaking the seal. "He always sends that three times a year. Oh, Lilith!"—as she glanced over the first few lines.

"What is it, mother—is Regy ill?"

"The scarlet fever broken out at the school and the Doctor fears that Regy has it!"—holding the letter towards her daughter.

"What's to be done?" inquired Lilith, having skimmed the brief announcement. "Poor boy, how disappointed he will be! What shall you do, dear?"—turning to her mother, who was lost in thought.

"Go to Slough at once, as I intended," she announced.

"And bring Regy home," concluded Lilith.

"No, but stay there and nurse him. He must not return home till the danger of infection is past, on account of the twins."

"Let me go. I could nurse him just as well as you. At least, I could do my best, and Regy is very fond of me."

"No, dear, that wouldn't do at all!"—decidedly. "You shall go home by the train that we intended to travel by. You won't be afraid to go alone?"

"Of course not, mother, but I don't like leaving you."

"And I am quite as disappointed as you, my child, but in illness we must all give way. A taxi will be at the door to take us to the station in an hour."

"It does seem so hard, mother dear, Regy being taken ill just now—after all our plans, too," said Lilith, mournful tones. But the buoyancy of youth reassured itself as she rushed the lines away from Mrs. Lytton's forehead. "I dare say he isn't very bad, and you'll both be coming home in a day or two."

"Well, dear, we'll hope so, at all events, and you must do the best for Regy and the boys till my return. The thing that bothers me, Lil, is my eye-case. Of course, I was obliged to bring it to town for the soiree at South Kensington, and all the diamonds which your father ordered to be re-set are in it, too. It is a great responsibility to keep it with me. Do you think I may trust you with it?"

"Of course you may, darling. I'll never let it out of my sight till I hand it to dad at the station," promptly replied Lilith, imprinting another kiss on her mother's face.

"Well, I think it must be safe, Lilith. You can use the case as a foot-stool in the train—that's what I always do when Warren is not with me."

But I am always glad to get rid of the responsibility."

"Oh, 'twill be all right!" responded the girl, reassuringly.

Another breakfast-room, in quite a different locality—No. 16, Asphodel Terrace, Walworth. The sun shone as brightly, but the atmosphere was totally different. The sunbeams certainly did their best to struggle in through the dirty window, of which the yellow-holland blind was drawn up awry, and fastened with a crooked pin, but they only served to reveal the general shabbiness of the apartment.

That the inmates of the dwelling were poor was apparent. A chair-bed at one end of the room supported an aged-looking man, with unkempt hair and beard, who was trying to help himself to the contents of a plate which was placed for his use on a chair beside him. As the old man was partially paralyzed, his efforts were unavailing, and in a weak fretful voice he called out continually for "Dan."

It would have required more than a casual glance to recognize in this prematurely-aged, broken-down man the grandfather of Dan Nugent. But it was, indeed, he once so upright in figure, bronzed in face and Herculean in form, now bowed, pallid and stricken by illness, and premature decay. He could still talk, in a shrill, piping, querulous voice, and his brain was clear and active as of yore, but he was very deaf and to converse with him it was necessary to use either a slate or the fingers. Strangers usually adopted the former.

At the repeated calls upon his name, Dan, at length, entered the room and demanded, not unkindly, what his grandfather required. On being told "his breakfast," the young fellow proceeded with care and dexterity to raise the paralyzed man, and, propping him up against his own shoulder, administered the food as to an infant.

Ten years had worked a great change in Dan Nugent. The eyes were still the chief attraction, but the pale lashes detracted from the beauty they would otherwise have possessed, and by their peculiar droop they seemed to exclude confidence. His skin was pale and delicate-looking as a girl's and his hair had still the same pale golden hue of his youthful days. His lips were thin, but well-formed and close with a determination which agreed with the watchful expression of the eyes. It was not a pleasant face and, though girlish-looking, all the youth seemed to be gone out of it. But then, as Dan used to say when he was a lad, "he was born old," and his life so far had been mere help to others than to himself.

His grandfather certainly had given him a good education, but in return had required such service from him as counteracted all the elevating influences of study, and, though without this assistance the lad might have starved in body, in the society of his repressed relative a moral starvation had silently but surely taken place. Gradually the craving for something better and purer had been undermined and some base passion substituted.

He was the head of an organized gang of reprobates, whose business in life was to rob, forge and if necessary, murder. The advent of a mere child amongst them had been hailed with delight, and from his first introduction to the sworn brotherhood Dan Nugent had far more than earned his own living. He was, in point of fact, the most useful member and was used as a scout or a decoy, proving himself an apt pupil in all cases where finesse and deft fingers were necessary.

Two years ago, in a scrimmage with the police, old Jonas Hardacre had received an unlucky blow on the head with a life-preserver, which had rendered him insensible for a length of time and gradually his powers seemed to relax, until, eighteen months ago, a paralytic attack had reduced him to the living death which he now endured.

Since his seizure, luck seemed to have been against the gang, and the police had never entirely been off their trail, so it had been necessary to double and twist to outwit them. Hence the reason of their present residence in Asphodel Terrace, Walworth.

At the conclusion of his meal, Hardacre asked where Cissie was.

"Dressing for her journey," replied Dan. "I don't believe, with all her boasted affection for me, she is to be absent."

"Absent?" exclaimed the old man with supreme scorn in his shaking, reed-like voice. "You are a fool still, Dan. Make her put her own liberty in danger, get her to pass one of our beautiful 'filmsies,' and then you can play upon that string freely enough and with success, too—with success!" chuckled his grandfather.

"I can't help wishing there were some other alternative"—musingly; "but as there seems to be none—"

"There is none," exclaimed the old man, in sharp, decided accents, "so don't be a fool, Dan Nugent. It's rather late in the day for you to be particular!"

"It's not for myself, grandfather, and so you ought to know"—the young man spelt out the words in quick succession on his taper fingers, "but you know I promised my mother I would always take care of Cissie and—"

"And haven't you taken the best care of her? Haven't you educated her—sent her to school and made a lady of her?"

"No, grandfather, she was a lady, without being made. Cissie was always a little lady, even as a child, and mother did all she could, before she died, to foster every dainty desire, which the child had in plenty. It doesn't seem right to drag her down to our level."

"Oh, she'll do rightly enough," returned the other. "She'll marry some swell and be too proud to own us!"

"Would to Heaven some good man might take her!" said Dan impulsively. "But who would marry a girl with such connections as you and I, grandfather, even if she had a name which rightfully belonged to her? Poor child—poor little Cissie!" The last words he murmured aloud, but was interrupted in his reverie by the advent of his sister, who entered the dingy room at this juncture.

"Well, what about poor little Cissie?" inquired the young lady, putting her arms round Dan's neck and giving him a fond kiss.

Dan's eyes lighted with pride and love as he gazed at the fair-like form before him. In figure Cissie was slight and almost child-like, but despite her sixteen years she was a woman in thought and feelings. Hers was a sweet face, with fresh, pure tinting like the heart of a wild rose. The dark eyes were bewitching and gave a peculiar charm to her dainty face, when taken in connection with the sunny radiance of her hair, which was, indeed, like "threads of sunlight."

"And what about 'poor Cissie'?" again demanded the little lady.

"Nothing, pet. I see you are ready so I will go and prepare. You won't know me when we meet again."

"Dan, I do wish so much that this disguise wasn't necessary. If the lady loves you as much as you say, surely she will be only too glad to see you, no matter how you got to her."

"Cissie, I must be the best judge of that," replied her brother sternly. "If you will not help me in this harmless escapade, say so, and no doubt I can arrange to do without your assistance."

"No, no," returned the young girl, the ready tears springing to her bright eyes. "Of course you must know best, and you do know"—earnestly—"that I would do anything for you, even give you my life, if that were any good!"

"Yes, it is easy enough to say that," he retorted, "but this is no question of such intense self-sacrifice—only a little harmless jest between the girl who loves me and myself, to avoid unnecessary fuss and bother. There, pet, dry your eyes and wait until I ask you to make some sacrifice. If everything were not so far arranged, we would alter things even now, but it would disappoint my poor little girl too much to see me—"

"It's all right, dear," returned Cissie, once more twining her arms round his neck. "I am sure you would never ask me to do anything you thought wrong."

"No of course not," replied Dan, with a sinister smile, which, however, his sister did not see. "I shall not be long, and will call you when I am ready. I will write to you, grandfather, and report progress"—turning to the invalid, who only nodded, as the young man left the room.

Jonas Hardacre glanced critically at his granddaughter from head to foot, then muttered, with satisfied content—

"Yes, she'll do—she'll do."

The sound of a taxi and her brother's voice calling from above, caused Cissie hastily to make her adieux and run up the flight stairs and take her place in the cab, without looking at her companion. When she did so, a slight scream issued from her lips, for instead of the accustomed form and face of her brother, an elderly woman, dressed with Quaker-like simplicity, was seated by her side. Her gray hair plainly parted on her forehead and smoothly brushed behind her ears. A pair of smoke-colored glasses concealed the eyes, and hid it not been for the lip-lipped mouth, which was twitching with a smile at her bewilderment, the young girl would never have recognized her dearly-beloved brother, although, in a measure, she had been prepared for what he termed "a harmless masquerade."

"Well, Cissie, is the disguise good one?" at length inquired Dan Nugent, pleased with this testimony to his cleverness in "make-up," which was indeed such a talent with him that his nickname amongst his confreres was "Lady Nugent," and for which his delicate hand, his smooth skin and slender, undersized figure peculiarly adapted him.

"I should never have known you, Dan," the girl confessed, in earnest tones, still gazing in wonderment at him.

"No, I suppose not," he returned coolly, drawing on his gray gloves. "I'll teach you the art some day, perhaps. Now, there are two or three things you have to remember and you may as well learn them before we reach the railway station, as we have a good long drive."

And then Dan Nugent proceeded to instruct his sister in what he told her were merely harmless jokes, to keep up the character which, on account of a love affair, he had assumed, but which in reality was only part of a deeply laid scheme for another of those daring robberies for which that gang of burglars to which he belonged were so justly notorious.

CHAPTER III

Lilith Lloyd-Lytton was duly escorted in a first-class compartment, labelled "Ladies only," of a railway-carriage on the London and North-Western Railway. She had not yet started on her journey home. Her mother had driven with her to the station, and was now standing on the platform.

"Be sure to take good care of the Jewels," Mrs. Lytton whispered through the open window. "It seems strange that no other ladies are going to take advantage of this compartment."

"Oh, mamma, what a lovely girl!" interposed Lilith, whose gaze was wandering along the platform. "I wish she would come in here." And, as if in answer to her speaking face, the young lady whom she had singled out for admiration, at a word from her elderly attendant, came straight towards the carriage.

Mrs. Lytton moved away, and the servant opened the door and assisted in the young girl, who returned Lilith's smile with one equally bright and frank. The respectable-looking domestic then advanced to Mrs. Lytton, and in a respectful manner asked if the young lady was going to travel all the way.

"Yes," replied that lady. "My daughter goes as far as the train-to-Knowlesmere Junction, where her father will meet her."

"My young lady also gets out there," said the woman. "If the young lady should require anything, I hope she will make me of service. Miss Ferrars is going to the Priory, about five miles from the station. I dare say you know Sir Cecil's family, madam?"—with a keen glance from behind the smoke-colored glasses.

"The Priory family are our nearest neighbours, when they are at home," returned Mrs. Lloyd-Lytton, "but I was not aware that they had returned. It must have been very unexpected, as I have been in town only a week, and there was no news of their arrival before I came away."

"There, Miss Constance, what did I tell you?" said the woman, reproachfully.

"I am sure I don't know, Dan—ver," responded the young girl, turning her smiling face towards the servant, and speaking with a kind of foreign deliberation. "You tell me so many things. Is it anything fresh?"

"Only that your papa is still abroad."

"I only said that I had not heard of his return," corrected Mrs. Lloyd-Lytton. "But he may be back, for all that. Now I had better introduce myself before the train goes," she continued. "We are your nearest neighbours at Knowlesmere, and live at Lytton Hall. I don't suppose you remember us—you were so young when you went to school and have never been home, even for the holidays, since, have you?"

And Miss Constance Ferrars, looking a good deal bewildered at so simple a question, replied, "Never."

"Take your seats!" shouted the guard at this juncture, and, after a tearful embrace, Mrs. Lloyd-Lytton shut the door upon her daughter.

"If Sir Cecil has not returned, Lily," she whispered, "Miss Ferrars must come to us. Of course you will make her as comfortable as possible till I come home myself, which—with a little sigh—"will be before long, I trust. My dear Miss Ferrars," she continued, "I have been giving my daughter instructions that, if you and mamma have not come back from the Continent, you are to make Lytton Hall your home until they do so."

"Indeed, you are too kind, dear madam," demurred Miss Ferrars, as a tide of crimson suffused her neck and face.

"Not at all," returned Lilith eagerly. "We shall be only too delighted to have you."

"I am sure, madam, that Sir Cecil will be immensely obliged to you for your kindness to Miss Constance," asserted Danvers, with a reproving look at the emotion exhibited by her young charge. "And if you will permit me the freedom of remarking, madam a few days in the society of such a charming young English lady as Miss Lytton will do Miss Constance a world of good. She has been so long at that French school that she has quite forgotten her English bringing-up."

"Once more, dearest child, farewell," said Mrs. Lytton, smiling at the compliment. "Be sure not to lose sight of the box. I don't suppose you will have any intruders during the journey. Send me a telegram to Doctor Dobell's. Good-bye."

"Good-bye, darling," returned Lilith and with a heavy heart she settled herself in her corner, with her feet upon the jewel-case.

"Allow me, miss, to settle your rug for you," said Danvers, folding it as she spoke round Lilith's feet and dexterously tucking in the ends. "There, is that comfortable, Miss?" she inquired anxiously.

"Oh, beautiful," answered Lilith. "Thank you very much. Won't you come and sit here, Miss Ferrars?"—turning to the other occupant of the carriage, who was gazing abstractedly out of the opposite window, and took no heed. When the question was repeated by Danvers, she turned with a little start.

"I beg your pardon, but I did not hear you speak."

"Won't you sit here"—pointing to the opposite corner—"and then we can have a quiet chat, whilst your servant indulges in a nap, I dare say"—glancing at Danvers, who had settled herself at the further side, and taken out of her bag a roll of knitting. "You have been at school in Paris and I want you to tell me all about it and I will tell you all about our home and the neighbourhood generally. For you are quite a stranger there, are you not, Miss Ferrars?"

"Yes, indeed. I don't know the least thing about the Priory or its surroundings," replied the young girl, with a deep-drawn sigh.

"Of course not"—promptly. "Your papa being such an invalid, I can understand that your mamma's letters would be rather brief and not filled up with gossip. Besides, Sir Cecil and Lady Ferrars are so much abroad that they are quite strangers, altho considered one of our resident families"—laughing lightly. "I think you are wonderfully like your papa, Miss Ferrars."

"Oh, pray don't call me by that name!"—energetically, whilst a flood of crimson again dyed her fair skin. "Call me as they always did at school," she entreated in coaxing tones—"Cissie. The other seems so unnatural."

A heavy frown crossed Danvers' face, but it was unnoticed by the two girls, and would probably have been accounted for, if seen by the dropping of several stitches in her work.

"Miss Ferrars, would you be so kind as to take up these stitches for me?" she asked, in suave tones. But there was a threatening look in her eyes and in the grip which in transferring the work she managed to give Cissie's fingers. "My young lady is always so good to try to save my weak eyes," she explained, glancing at Lilith, to see if she had noticed any of his by-play.

"I should fancy it would be much wiser not to try to work," said Lilith. "Are your eyes very bad?"

"No, not usually. But the bright smothering tries them, so I think I will take your advice and rest them."

"Well," continued Miss Lytton, "if I call you 'Cissie,' which I am quite ready to do, you must call me 'Lil'—my name is Lilith. The eldest daughter is always christened by that heathenish name, just the same as the eldest boy is always called Marmaduke—of course, to us all he's only 'Duke.' Oh, you will like him immensely, Cissie. He's just splendid! All the girls at school were in love with him, you see he's so handsome!"

"Like you?" inquired her listener, looking admiringly at the animated face before her.

"Why, no—not a bit, except that there's a family likeness among us all and we all follow the father as far as height goes. Duke is six feet four and broad in proportion. He looks like a young giant among the ordinary run of pignies. And then, Cissie, he has lovely curly brown hair, just like mamma's and laughing brown eyes, and the dearest nose in all the world. Now don't you think you will like him?" Miss Lytton demanded, looking at her companion's lovely face.

"For, besides Duke, and a little sister—our baby. They're all handsome. I'm the worst-looking of the lot"—with a charming frankness in resistibly winning, as there was not the slightest conceit in the statement.

"Wait here for five minutes!" was shouted by porters hurrying past and unfastening doors, as the train drew up at the platform.

"Would you like to get out, young ladies?" demanded Danvers.

"I mustn't leave this blessed box for a single instant," replied Lilith, with a rueful look, "but I should like a glass of milk, if you would be kind enough to get it for me. Wouldn't you like one, Cissie?" A boy happened to pass at that instant with a tray of refreshments, so there was no occasion for any one to leave the carriage.

"Such a nuisance, this jewel-case," explained Lilith, giving the unoffending article a little kick. "It's the plague of the mother's life. I do believe they'd never see the light of day if it wasn't for him. Don't I wish they were mine, that's all. I shouldn't need much entreaty to wear them!"

"Perhaps your mamma will lend you some of them," suggested Cissie. "Not a bit of it!"—promptly. "Of course, Duke's wife will have them."

"Oh"—in surprise—"is he married?"

"No, not yet—why he's only twenty five—but of course he will be some day. I declare, Cissie, you'd be the very wife for him. I wonder the marriage wasn't arranged by the families."

"Is your other brother very ill?" asked Cissie, when the train was once more in motion.

"I don't know. We only received a telegram asking mamma to go to Slough, and so she decided to send me on home, as she didn't care to leave me in our 'diggings' in Kensington, and wouldn't be persuaded to take me with her."

Presently there was another stoppage of the train—this time for ten minutes.

"I'll get out and look at the book-stall. See Cissie, it's just opposite to us. If we shut the door and leave Danvers inside, to keep out unwelcome intruders, the precious jewels must be safe?"

"Certainly, Miss Lytton," agreed Danvers. "What possible harm could come to your box?"—opening the door as she spoke and descending to help the young ladies to alight. The door was then shut and Danvers took Lilith's place in the corner and placed her feet upon the jewel-case.

The journey was shortly resumed, and another hour brought them to Knowlesmere Junction, where Colonel Lloyd-Lytton was awaiting his daughter's arrival, a handsome motor-car standing outside the little country station.

Colonel Lloyd-Lytton was a fine looking specimen of a middle-aged country gentleman. He welcomed his daughter with the brightest of smiles and Lilith drew Cissie forward.

"Papa, this is Miss Ferrars of the Priory—come home from school. The colonel looked rather bewildered, as he shook hands with the young lady, but muttered the usual "Pleased to make her acquaintance."

"Yes"—in reply to Lilith—"but I thought Miss Ferrars was in Paris?"

"And so she was, papa—but she has come home, and mamma said she was to stay with us, if Sir Cecil had not returned."

"Oh"—in a relieved tone—"then your mother knows the young lady! Certainly, my dear." Turning to Cissie, whose brown eyes were fixed upon the fast-receding train, and whose rosy mouth drooped sadly—"We shall be delighted to welcome you at Lytton. No doubt, it is a disappointment to you that your father is not here to welcome you himself, but we must try to make up for the deficiency, eh, Lil?"

Lilith's answer was a beaming smile. "Now, my dear, you will have to come home with the luggage. Have you much, Lil?"—taking the jewel-case from his daughter and placing it beneath his own feet, then carefully tucking the rugs round his young companion and starting the car.

"Oh, dad, how delightful to be home for good!" exclaimed Lilith. "And how glorious the country is looking! What can we do, papa?"

"Are you fond of hay-making? But of course"—not giving Miss Ferrars time to reply—"you have never indulged in its delights."

Fancy, father, Cissie has been at school ever since she was six years old! Isn't it dreadful?"

"Dreadful, indeed," laughed the Colonel, and then, having satisfied his daughter's innumerable questions he pointed out the ruins of the old Priory to Cissie.

"What a pretty place!" commented Cissie.

"Yes, wasn't I right in calling it a romantic spot?" put in Lilith. "Ah, there's the dear old Hall!"—with a little cry of delight, as a sudden turn in the road revealed the fine pile of buildings.

When Colonel Lytton drew up at the entrance doors, they were quickly thrown open and an eager band of brothers, with tiny Ivy in their midst, rushed down the steps to welcome their sister.

A few seconds were taken up in embraces and joyous words, and then Duke turned to the stranger and held out his hand with a courteous smile.

"You must really excuse our rudeness, Miss Ferrars," he exclaimed, "but Lil has not been home since Christmas, and we are all fond of our eldest sister."

"I am sure you are," returned the girl.

"But I hope," he continued, "you will soon get accustomed to our country manners which are, I fear, rather rough, and make yourself at home at Lytton Hall."

"You are all too kind," murmured Cissie.

Lilith told the boys not to bother Cissie, as she was tired and drew her into the house, Ivy clinging tightly to her sister's hand.

"Come in here, dear, and have some tea before you take off your things. Send nurse down, Ivy, and then we shall know what rooms you are to have. Our old nurse is now mamma's right hand," she explained to Cissie, as Mrs. Mason entered.

After a cup of tea, Lilith led her new friend to the rooms assigned to her.

"This is your room," she announced, as she threw open one of the many doors, "and mine adjoins it, but the door is round the corner." Then after a pause, she added—"We don't dine till eight, so we can enjoy a cosy chat. Shall Danvers see to your unpacking now, Ciss? I dare say you are somewhat tired yourself," she added, turning kindly to the old woman. "Follow me, Mrs. Danvers," and the woman, after a hurried whisper, which sounded almost like a threat, did as she was directed and closed the door upon the two fair girls.

CHAPTER IV

The evening was a pleasant one to all concerned. After dinner, the whole party repaired to the white drawing-room, the favourite meeting-place of all the household, furnished in a simple, pretty fashion, and containing all those elements which go far to make home happy.

Into this pleasant home-circle Cissie came, straight from the hard-and-fast rules of a French school. Her introduction to the house in Asphodel Terrace, Walworth, had much distressed her, for she could not understand the seeming incongruity of her own expensive bringing-up and the poverty discernible in all the arrangements of her grandfather's lodgings.

She felt very wretched, surrounded as she was with luxury, and, as she returned Lilith's caresses, she told herself she was a double traitor, and only hesitated in making a clean breast of the imposition which had been passed upon to family by the remembrance of her brother's bitter eyes and hurried, angry words as he left the room.

"I am afraid you have a headache," said Lilith, when all her efforts had failed to rouse her friend, who had sunk into a painful reverie during her young hostess's plating of the "Moonlight Sonata."

The production of British cars has been trebled in ten years and last year 232,719 motor vehicles were turned out.
