QUESTIONS WAY MONIES HANDLED

Councillor Stratton Raises Discussion Over Receipts From Market Weigh Scales

Councillor Herbert Stratton at Monday night's meeting of Council, strongly criticized the fact that no report had been received for two months from Tax Collector A. J. Chesher on the amounts received in revenue from the market scale, rent of market space and general rentals, declaring that the resolution requiring a monthly report had not been lived up to.

"There has been no report for two months and there's no report to-night," said Mr. Stratton. "Furthermore Mr. Chesher allows the man in actual charge of the scale to take the scale tickets and daily receipts home with him and square up the account monthly with some cheque received by the scale employee at the end of each month for work he does at the public library. The money and tickets should be handed over each night to the town treasurer; that's the way tickets are lost," concluded Mr. Stratton.

Reeve Elliott—"There's no danger about the money; Mr. Chesher is under bond. The report should be forthcoming and the matter looked into however."

Mr. Stratton—"Even if Mr. Chesher is under bond, the money should not be handled in this way."

Tax Collector Chesher was summoned by the Mayor and explained that the delay in presenting the report for the past two months had been occasioned through the loss of several tickets, the matter taking considerable time to straighten out. In regard to the weighman at the scale he pointed out that it frequently happens that farmers bringing produce to the scale to be weighed forget to bring the necessary money, and it was in order to avoid confusion that the weighman suggested that the full amount of miscellaneous weighing charges should be taken from his monthly personal cheque from another source.

Councillor Stratton—"He has no business to use the town's money."

Mayor Crowhurst vacated the chair and agreed with Councillor Stratton that the system in vogue was not the way town monies should be handled.

Mr. Chesher presented his report for the two months under review and same was accepted. Total collections for April were $37.75 and for May $46.45. The report also showed the number of transients given shelter at the Town Hall over night—April, 422 with 173 being given meals through the day, May, 237 with 46 getting food during the day.

Petition Received

A petition was received asking that the portion of Deblaque street between Francis and McCaul Streets be made trafficable at once. It was signed by Harry Black, Horace Groom, Mrs. W. Scott, Mrs. M. Isaac, A. Thompson, George Jamieson, William R. Harvey and Mrs. A. Darke. Referred to street and bridge committee.

Time Extended

The time for the collection of 1933 taxes was extended from July 15 to August 1, this being necessary in view of the regulations covering the date of the Court of Revision.

To Attend Meeting

Mayor Crowhurst was authorized as a delegate to represent the municipality at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Emergency Association of Ontario to be held in London, Ontario at which time the Ontario government will be again petitioned to assume administration of relief for the province and make a levy against the different municipalities for charges.

Moose Convention

H. G. Smith, secretary of the local Moose Lodge interviewed the Council with reference to the coming Grand Lodge Moose convention to be held here in August and made a number of requests regarding accommodations, such as the use of the town hall for meetings, the use of the beach park for a monster picnic and permission to erect booths on Queen Street for a street fair. The co-operation of Council was also asked in making accommodations for a band of forty pieces it is planned to have here for the occasion. The matter was referred to

MANY FEATURES DOMINION DAY

Excellent Program To Be Presented At Town Park On Saturday Afternoon

Plans for Port Hope's Big July 1st celebration are going rapidly ahead and new features are being added daily to round out an exceptionally fine program. This is Port Hope's own day and has been so ever since Confederation. Every citizen should lend his or her support to help put the celebration across and the committee are again asking the whole-hearted co-operation of the public. All that remains now to make the show a success is good weather and a good crowd.

Newly arranged added attractions include three acts of vaudeville and a horseshoe pitching contest between Englishtown and the strong Cavan street Club. Both organizations have some smart twirlers and no doubt the contest will attract a large following.

The program will start sharp at 1.20 p.m. with a girls' softball game between the Port Hope Alerts and Peterboro C.G.E. team. This will be followed at 3.15 with a Lakeshore League game between Port Hope and Cobourg while at the conclusion of this game the play-off between the two teams winning the morning games in the Men's Forum League will take place.

Cobourg Kilties Band will provide the music for the day and will head a parade from Walton street to the Town Park. This band is one of the finest in this part of the province and can be counted on to provide a program of marked excellence.

Horse racing in three classes, 2.16, 2.22 and 2.30 is one of the main attractions on the bill-of-fare and will no doubt see some of the best horses in the district in action.

Refreshment booths, a wheel of fortune and a bingo game are among the other amusements and with the price of admission reduced to 25 cents there are no obstacles in the way of anyone's attendance. Get behind the Committee and make the day a success.

FOREST STATION MONTHLY SHIFT

Work Spread Out So All May Benefit At Orono

Following the plan the Municipal body and the Ontario Forestry Division laid down early this Spring to provide jobs for unemployed in Orono section who had previously been employed at the Orono Forest Station, the station has provided work for all those registered for nearly two months—two weeks over the time limit set in the original plan.

In order that the work that remains to be done shall be divided among as many as possible, the Orono Forest Station has decided to employ these men during the summer months and has arranged a system of grouping whereby one third of the staff will be at work for monthly periods, the second group the following month, to be followed by the third and so on. In this way it is felt that the pay roll will be divided more equally among all the workmen, and not permanently out of a job.

COMMITTED IN LOCAL COURT

Toronto Trio Charged With Breaking And Entering Local Service Station

Charged with breaking and entering Sherman Gifford's Service Station here early on morning of June 17th, three Toronto men, Edward Campbell, Ann street, Agnew Barrie, Dundas street East, and Rocco Cassi, Elm street, were all committed for trial on being arraigned in police court at the town hall here Saturday afternoon before Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell. They were released on bail of $200.00 each. Col. F. D. Boggs, K.C., of Cobourg, prosecuted while T. F. Hall, K.C., of Cobourg, represented the accused.

Edward Campbell, who was previously listed as Edward Wells, was arraigned first and the evidence in this case applied to the other two men.

James Ball told that he was awakened in the morning of June 17th by the noise of a car and a dog barking in the garage next door. On investigating, he noticed a man running to the car. He described the man as darkly dressed. The car was driven west and three or four minutes later returned, when two men got out. "They went to the garage and the dog was barking fiercely. They ran across the road in great haste and departed by the Lakeshore road." Witness told that he then notified the proprietor, Mr. Gifford.

S. Gifford testified that entry had been made by smashing a window and then releasing the lock. Inside, a showcase was broken and a small quantity of cigarettes and tobacco stolen. He notified the police, who went to Oshawa and picked up the three accused.

Sergeant E. Staffer of the Oshawa police told that he stopped the car in that city and that it was being driven by Campbell. He looked in the rumble seat and found a wrecking-bar and a large hammer.

Provincial Motor-cycle Constable F. R. Blueher and Chief Constable Murphy told that they had proceeded to Oshawa in company with Messrs Gifford and Ball, and the three Toronto men were brought back to Port Hope. They told the police that they had rented the car in Toronto, driven to Cobourg and were on the return trip to Toronto. The window of the garage was exhibited in court and the marks on the frame were the same size as the wrecking bar. On the latter, were marks of green and white paint, similar to the paint of the garage, which had been recently painted.

In conclusion, the Crown contended that the evidence was sufficient to commit the trio but defense counsel argued that there was no evidence to support the contention that the men had entered the garage.

Magistrate Campbell—"I believe the men were there, but that has got to be proven. It is really a very flimsy case. I will commit them for trial and release them on bail of $200 each."

HARVEY LIGGETT WAS ACQUITTED

In County Court At Cobourg—Alleged Lien On Traded Car

Harvey Liggett of Hope Township was acquitted when he came before Judge L. V. O'Connor in County Court at Cobourg in connection with trading his car with Walter Fanning, then of Hope Township, but now residing near Warkworth. It was alleged by the prosecution there was a lien on the car which Liggett swapped and which Walter Fanning did not know of. Liggett on the other hand claimed that Fanning was aware of this loan. T. F. Hall, K.C., defended the accused and Crown Attorney F. D. Boggs prosecuted. For the prosecution the following witnesses were heard, Walter Fanning, Leonard Challice, Mrs. Mary Challice, Frank Schafar.

For the defence Harvey Liggett, Mrs. Anna Toers, Edward Toers and Samuel Liggett gave evidence. The defendant was acquitted.

EX-MAYOR GETS JAIL SENTENCE

P. A. McDonald, Oshawa Sentenced For Theft—Breaks Down And Weeps

P. A. McDonald, former mayor of Oshawa and until recently accountant for the Oshawa Public Utilities Commission, was sentenced to a term in the Ontario Reformatory of one year determinate and six months indeterminate by Judge J. Thompson at Whiteby Thursday afternoon.

McDonald, who had pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing $2,000 from the commission's funds, broke down and cried when he heard his sentence.

"My client has suffered enough already," J. P. Mangan stated in urging suspended sentence. "He has frankly admitted his offense and done everything possible to make restitution. If the court is lenient now he will have a chance of regaining the respect in which he was always held."

"The case was too serious for suspended sentence," Judge Thompson ruled.

ATTEMPT TO ROB STATION

Cobourg Constable Nabs Burglars—One Escapes—Find Revolver In Grass

Officers of the constable nearby, two men attempted to break into a service station canteen east of Cobourg early Saturday morning. Jas. McKee, a night constable, saw a car drive up and the passengers stealthily approach the canteen. A few screws were withdrawn from the door hinge and the pain were busy when McKee darted out and grabbed one, the other jumping into the car and driving off. McKee brought his prisoner to the police station.

A few moments after he had brought his prisoner to the police station, the constable, noticed a plitter on the grass outside the police station. It was a revolver. Police believe the man arrested owns the gun and a charge of carrying an offensive weapon was laid against him. Remanded, he will come up on June 30. He gave his name as Gordon Aseltine, Belleville.

FINN COMMITTED ON MURDER COUNT

Sent For Trial In Cobourg Court—Brutal Cavan Killing Described

Yyrko Laurila charged with the murder of Fred McLaren, Cavan Township farmer, appeared in Cobourg Police Court Friday and was committed for trial. He is defended by A. J. Skean, and Colonel F. D. Boggs, K.C., is representing the Crown.

McLaren's lifeless body was found by Thomas Raymond Seyers, first witness called by the Crown. He stated McLaren lived in a small house on Seyers' farm. Not seeing McLaren for some time, he made a visit and found the man dead. On a previous visit to McLaren's house he was introduced to Laurila, but at the time of finding McLaren's body, the Finn had disappeared.

Dr. Turner, Millbrook, who was called by Seyers to the scene of the tragedy, testified that he examined the body and found death was caused by a fracture of the skull. Dr. Nash, Millbrook, who conducted the post-mortem, stated eight or nine blows had been struck at McLaren's head. Provincial Constable Carey, with Inspector Gurnett of Provincial Police, Toronto, told of examining the scene of the tragedy. Carey produced a large stick and a small boulder, bearing bloodstains and hair. These were found near the body of McLaren, and bloodstains appeared on the wall near the bed and on the bedclothing.

"I found McLaren's bank book, which showed the last withdrawal Jan. 25, 1933, of $50," stated Carey. Seyers was taken to Peterboro to identify Laurila. When the Finn saw Seyers he dropped his eyes, declared Constable Carey.

At the conclusion of the proceedings, Magistrate Davidson committed the accused Laurila for trial.

WOULD ABOLISH GRAND JURIES

United Counties Council Endorses Recommendation From Frontenac County

In direct antithesis to this declaration of Judge L. V. O'Connor, when he upheld the Grand Jury system, the Legislative and By-Laws Committee of the counties of Northumberland and Durham council manifested its stand on the matter by endorsing a resolution from Frontenac County Council for the abolition of the Grand Jury.

Discussing the resolution from Frontenac County, members of the Legislative and By-Laws Committee expressed the view that the Grand Jury system was too expensive in comparison to its worth. A communication was read from W. E. N. Sinclair, M.P.P., relative to abolition of the Grand Jury and the clerk was authorized to write Mr. Sinclair and acquaint him with the fact that the council was opposed to the system.

After detailed discussion, Reeve F. S. Gray of Manvers moved that council do not approve abolition of Grand Juries; with the exception of Grand Juries; seconded by Deputy Reeve F. R. Ireland, Murray Township. The motion carried.

CROP REPORT

Agricultural Representatives report that rain is badly needed in most sections of the Province. Meadows and spring crops which looked very promising three weeks ago are not coming up to expectations due to the extremely hot weather in early June which has been followed by very cool temperature — frosts being reported in some sections. Alfalfa is the exception to the above and reports indicate satisfactory tonnage from this crop will be secured. Eastern Ontario reports pastures drying up and milk production falling. Haying operations have commenced and will be general in all parts of the Province during the current week.

SOUTHERN ONTARIO

BRANT—Fruit appears to have set fairly well. Strawberries from local growers being offered fairly freely. Exceptionally cold weather of past week has held up some work. There has been some damage done by frost. Crops are coming along very well, some spring grain does not look very promising.

ESSEX—Hundreds of acres of strawberries have been practically ruined from drought and the crop will not average 30% of normal years. Many fields of tobacco have had to be set over the second time as the first set burned up in the extreme heat ten days ago. Owing to prolonged drought extending over a period of five weeks following the wettest spring in years, field crops in Essex County will probably be the poorest in many years. Oats will be nearly a failure and corn is coming up very irregularly.

LINCOLN—Strawberry picking is now quite well advanced and there is to be a good crop in most cases, although root rot is reported to be bad in a number of districts. This is a very serious disease and will cost considerable loss to many growers.

WENTWORTH—Considerable hay has been cut in Wentworth County. The crop is much heavier than usual. The men who own orchards report that their trees are heavily laden, and they expect a heavy crop.

PETERBORO—At the auction sale held on the Peterboro Exhibition grounds on Friday, under the auspices of the Ontario Yorkshire Breeders' Club, 19 head of purebred Yorkshires were sold. 10 hogs averaged around $30.00 with the top price $40.00 for an advanced Registry XXX boar. 9 bred sows ranged from $19.00 to $34.00.

PRINCE EDWARD—Rain is badly needed in all sections of the County. Strawberry patches are drying up and all crops are suffering for lack of moisture. Haying commenced this week. The alfalfa crops is only fair. 477 cheese were boarded on the Picton Board to-day and all sold at 10 7-8 cents.

NORTH SIMCOE—Good stands of fall wheat are noticed throughout the County and it is now heading out well. Practically all hay crops are above the average there having been but a small percentage of winter killing this last season. Strawberry plantations have not had too much rain recently and many growers on lighter land are not expecting too large a crop. Pasture is plentiful and stock is in good condition.

YORK—The setting of fruit, particularly apples, is quite promising in nearly all varieties. Strawberries are now on the market and the growers report a good crop of high quality fruit.

EASTERN ONTARIO

FRONTENAC—Pastures have dried up considerably and consequently have greatly reduced the milk flow. Fields that should at this time of year be yielding an abundance of pastures are practically burnt up by the continued dry spell.

GLENGARRY—Cheese factories generally report increased production but pastures being affected by the dry cool weather. Spring crops also are at a standstill as it has been very cold and backward during the past week. The white grub is beginning to do considerable damage to crops in various parts of the county.

GRENVILLE—The past week has been very cold with frost sufficient to freeze corn. Rain is needed badly for both hay and grain crops. It is rather remarkable to see seeding and haying operations going on in fields close by each other.

LEEDS—Lack of rain has become serious. Other than light scattered showers, which have barely settled the dust, the County has had no rain for four weeks. Pastures, hay and strawberries are most seriously affected. Pastures on higher, lighter soil are burned and brown. Mixed hay is not growing and will be short, particularly timothy. Cheese manufacture is apparently about 25% below normal, due to low milk production caused by poor wintering and

CAREFUL CHECK OF FOREIGNERS

Warning Issued To Judges And Clerks Of Naturalization Courts

Urging upon judges and clerks of courts the need of exercising "unusual care" in order to avoid "the issue of naturalization certificates to persons who should not be naturalized," Hon. C. H. Cahlan, secretary of state, has despatched a communication to these judicial officers wherein he outlines his reasons for this counsel. Increasing numbers of foreigners are at present seeking citizenship rights in Canada, a fact which demands "greater carefulness and closer scrutiny than in ordinary times," the minister says.

"This increase has arisen in many ways," Mr. Cahlan's communication sets forth. "Applicants for old-age pensions must prove their British nationality. Many large employers of labor require their employees to be British subjects. During the present financial stringency many local authorities decided that relief should be given only to persons of British nationality."

"This large number of applications require at the present time greater carefulness and closer scrutiny than in ordinary times. There are undoubtedly communist, bolshevist and other illegal agitators being carried on in various parts of Canada and many propagandists of these ideas apply for naturalization in order to camouflage their propaganda and also to preclude any proceedings for deportation," Mr. Cahlan said.

DRAMATIC CHANGE IN PLACING GOLD

May saw a dramatic change in the placing of Canadian gold bullion, says a report issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Prior to May not an ounce had been going for a long period to the United Kingdom, the entire export having been sent to the United States, but last month the situation was almost completely reversed, a heavy consignment of $8,717,606 in gold bullion being sent to the United Kingdom and only $119,983 to the United States. During the 12 months ending May the aggregate export to the United States was $44,479,411.

There was a small export of gold-bearing quartz to the United States in May valued at $188,655, but none to the United Kingdom, the 12 months' aggregate to the former country being $3,662,233 and to Great Britain only $300.

The export of all gold in May was valued at $9,026,244, compared with $2,828,377 in April and $5,275,102 in May, 1932.

HAIL THE HAIL!

It's a long time between hail storms in St. Thomas, one of the Virgin Islands, near the Canadian National's Canada-West Indies route. This spring official records showed the first fall of hail there in 105 years. Superstitious natives got so much excited as to offer prayers, fearing a world catastrophe.

prevalence of farrow cows.

LENNOX & ADDINGTON—Milk flow dropped a week ago owing to the scarcity of pasture and very warm weather. This week cheesemakers report slightly better conditions; pasture is not good in most sections.

PRESCOTT & RUSSELL—We are badly in need of rain. Grain fields are very patchy and meadows are burnt up. Some damage due to larva of the June beetle is being reported in the Southern section of Prescott and Russell Counties.

STRICT SECRECY RE EXAM PAPERS

Between One And Two Million Mailed From Department In Queen's Park

Behind iron-barted windows and steel-grated partitions thousands of examination papers to be used in the forthcoming departmental examinations in Ontario are being bundled up to be sent out to the various points to try the souls of 100,000 candidates.

The rooms at the parliament buildings, Toronto, where the papers are printed and where they are sorted and placed in mail bags resemble large cells in a prison. For every precaution must be taken against leaks and against theft. There have been cases in Ontario's history when examination papers were purloined before examination day arrived and as a consequence some students made an exceedingly high showing.

The thefts did not take place at the parliament buildings but departmental officials there make mighty sure that nothing of the kind occurs.

They print the papers themselves. They have a regular printing plant the sight of which would gladden the heart of the old-time printer, for there he can see the cases of type which adorned every newspaper office before the advent of the linotype. The papers are set by hand and there are special cases containing Greek and German type for the characters used in those languages. Then there are also presses and a paper cutter, making the plant complete.

Next door in the room adjoining a scene of activity meets the eyes. It is the mailing department. Every member of the staff is sworn to secrecy. Here they are at long tables sorting out the papers, inserting them into large square envelopes and sealing them with red wax. These envelopes after they go to their destined point are opened only the day set for the examination and in the presence of four witnesses, who sign a form that they saw the packet opened on that particular day.

The magnitude of the job can be realized when it is learned that between a million and a quarter and a million and a half of these papers are sent out.

But that does not end it all so far as the department of education is concerned. The answers to the questions and problems all come back again—30 tons of them, and these papers are marked by the examiners at the parliament buildings.

In this work too every precaution is taken to see that strict justice is meted out to the candidates. A competent committee has decided, just what the answers should be and standards have been set up to ensure that there is just as much uniformity in judging as it is possible to get, and all the work is checked and double checked.

If a candidate thinks he has not been justly treated he has an appeal and the papers are reviewed by another judge or judges. Following this and the sending out of the diplomas the names of all candidates are entered in a large book and opposite them are set the marks which they have made in various subjects so that for years back it is possible to ascertain the standing of any student who has passed through the schools.

LOCAL THEATRE TREASURE NIGHT

Miss Jean Stephens, Ridout Street, Is Winner Of Silver Tea Service

With every available seat taken, and several patrons obliged to stand, success crowned the inauguration of Treasure Night at the Capitol Theatre here Wednesday evening. Keen interest was manifested in the draw which was made at nine o'clock and besides this interesting event, those who attended were afforded an evening of real entertainment as the feature picture, 'Looking Forward' had such talking picture stars, as Lionel Barrymore and Lewis Stone.

Sharp at nine o'clock, the proceedings for the draw got under way with Oswald Rigby acting as the efficient master of ceremonies. The boxes were arranged in a row on the front of the stage and as the names of the lucky holders were called out, they advanced and chose a box. Miss Jean Stephens, Ridout Street, won the handsome six-piece silver tea service and as well, nine other pieces of Wm. A. Rogers silverware were given away. Incidentally, nine of the winners were women and only one gentleman won an award, and only one ticket holder, Miss Violet Dart, was not in the audience and consequently did not qualify for a prize.

The names in order as they were drawn and the prizes are as follows,—E. J. Hazell—Cake plate.

Miss Edith Ansell—Pair of bon bon dishes.

Mrs. J. C. Lowe—Pie knife.

Miss Willa Martin—Sandwich dish.

Mrs. A. Hagerman—Bread tray.

Miss Jean Stephens—Tea service.

PIGS IN PASTURE

Pasture for pigs may undoubtedly be made good use of on the average farm. This method of feeding, however, has disadvantages, particularly with the active bacon hog, owing to the opportunity for excessive exercise from the standpoint of fast finishing and the liability of little pigs to stunting through sunburn and the combined effects of sunburn and dew. With plenty of skim-milk or buttermilk, both the experimental evidence and that of practical feeders would indicate that growing bacon hogs may be fed for market more economically indoors or in well shaded pens, supplied with racks for green feed, preferably in the form of alfalfa or clover. Racks are essential to the prevention of waste.—Dominion Animal Husbandman.

AMUSING SIGHT AT GOLF COURSE

Player Has To Make Shot From Top Of Chevrolet Coupe

A peculiar and amusing incident was observed at the Downsview golf course at Oshawa when one of the golf enthusiasts used the top of a Chevrolet Coupe as a tee for one of his shots. At the ninth hole James M. Rennie sent his drive slightly out of bounds and it bounced squarely on to the top of the coupe and remained there. The golfer was in a quandary but proved equal to the occasion. He climbed up over the engine and the top of the car, where he sent his ball almost to the green with his second shot. The gallery of spectators derived much amusement from the incident.

Convicted on a charge of offering an indignity to a dead human body, Avaril Jelly of O'Leary, P.E.I., was sentenced by Chief Justice Mathieson to serve one year in prison. Evidence recorded at the trial was to the effect that Jelly, intoxicated and in a fit of rage, slapped the face of the corpse of Thomas McArthur, of Port Hill and used obscene language. THREE GENERATIONS OF PREACHERS

Pulpitery seems to run in the Addison family. Arthur Peter Addison, (1), one of the young men to be ordained into the ministry of the United Church on Sunday, is the son of Rev. Dr. A. P. Addison (2), who preached in pulpits all over Ontario from 1895 to 1929, when he retired. He is the grandson of Rev. Peter Addison (3), famous old saddle-bag preacher of the early pioneer days in Ontario, who was ordained in 1859 and died in 1925. Further back in the Addison family was another preacher—Rev. Robert Addison—an Anglican clergyman, chaplain to British forces in the war of 1812-14, chaplain to the first legislature of Upper Canada and officiating minister at the burial of Sir Isaac Brock.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 21.

Good morning! 'Tis a large day!
As a matter of fact this is the largest day of the year.

The engagement has been announced of Beatrice, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. G. McClung, of Garden Hill to Mr. Walter D. Jones, of Port Hope, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Jones, of Hope Township. The marriage will take place in the latter part of June.

Earl Cripps, manager of the meat department at the local Dominion Store has received notification that his department ranked highest over sixty-nine stores in the Toronto division for the highest increase in volume of business. As a result, a special award of $25.00 comes his way.

Despite police warnings on several occasions, motorists continue to park their cars on the highway in front of the Port Hope Pavilion. In order to put a check on this practice, several summonses have been issued and the guilty ones will be telling it to the Magistrate.

Anyone wanting some cinders are asked to Phone 51 and have them taken to where they are to be used as soon as possible.

William F. Brown, Lot 9, Concession 8, South Verulam, met with a serious accident when blasting cedar stumps. The full force of a charge hit his face, breaking his left cheekbone, breaking his nose, damaging his left eye and crushing the outside bone of his skull and injuring the inner skull bone.

Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Keats, from Toronto, are spending a few days at Wesleyville, the home of Mrs. Keats who was Eliza Barrowclough, and looking over what few friends are left. A joy it will be to cheer up old memories. Mr. Keats was also a resident of Wesleyville many years ago. Mr. Keats called on the Guide and on comparing notes with the editor it was discovered that Mr. Keats was conductor on the train from Toronto to Winnipeg when the editor travelled to the coast last time.

Albert Kelso pleaded guilty to the theft of a motor car from Poole's Garage, Bobcaygeon, and asked Police Magistrate Jordan to sentence him to Portsmouth Penitentiary instead of Guelph Reformatory. The Magistrate took him at his word and he will spend the next two years in Kingston. Kelso is the prisoner who confessed escaping from Guelph Reformatory, March 17, 1933, and was apprehended by Provincial Officer Joseph Nelson.

"How was the scenery on your trip?"
"It ran largely to tooth paste and smoking tobacco."

THURSDAY, JUNE 22.

Did you miss the first Strawberry Festival?

The rain kind kept a lot of people from getting out to the Welcome festival, but there was all the more for the rest of us.

Yes, sir, and Walter Staples, Charles Street, had new potatoes out of his own garden to-day for dinner.

Hydro services were disrupted in many places in the town and several persons were shocked by a bolt of lightning which struck in the vicinity of Ward street during the brief electrical storm Wednesday evening. George Harwood, a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Harwood, Ward st., was knocked down in the bathroom at his home and a towel was torn from his hands but he suffered no ill effects. At the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Quemy, Harcourt street, a blaze of blue flame was seen in the kitchen when the bolt is thought to have partly discharged after striking the chimney. The chimney, however, was undamaged.

Hailstones the size of small hen's eggs, driven by terrific wind and rain storm, hit the Madoc district Wednesday afternoon. The storm lasted for about ten minutes and trees were blown over and grain crops damaged. In Lindsay district, the storm was severe and several trees were uprooted.

The warden's picnic for Northumberland and Durham, sponsored by Warden W. F. Rickard and with the local members of Provincial and Federal governments and of Hastings and Prince Edward county councils as guests of honor, was held at Presqu'ile Point on Wednesday. It was marked by a program of brief addresses, sports and dancing.

The members of the Ladies Aid Society of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church were entertained at the home of Mrs. R. Ferguson, Provincial Highway East on Wednesday evening. Thirty two sat down to supper and a splendid time was enjoyed.

Bryant Scriver, 28, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Scriver, of Hastings, died at the Nicholls Hospital, Peterboro, Wednesday of injuries suffered in an accident Tuesday morning while at work in the factory of the Hastings Tanning Company. He slipped and fell between a cement pillar and revolving wheel and would have met instant death had it not been for the prompt action of fellow employees in throwing the belt off the wheel. Dr. Campbell after administering first aid had Scriver taken to the hospital. It was found that his left hip was fractured, his back was severely lacerated and there was also evidence of internal injury. He leaves a widow and two young children.

A clean-up week in Janetville resulted in the men of the village and surrounding country cutting grass, weeds and levelling the ground in the United Church Cemetery and also fixing up the village street. The church and basement was also given a thorough cleaning by the lady members of the church.

The Storm:
Friend—Where did you meet your wife to-day, Henry?
Peck—I didn't meet her. She overtook me.

FRIDAY, JUNE 23.

Good morning! 'Tis another fine day!

We've had a fine variety of fine days. Some are fine and hot, others fine and cool and then we heard on all sides the other day, "Isn't this a fine rain?"

Sure circumstances and conditions have a lot to do with our life's success or defeat, happiness or depression but there is more dependant upon our view of things and our ability to turn things to our advantage.

Let's make hay while the sun shines, yes, and there are a lot of farmers who are using the sun to advantage now it is beaming down.

The members of the local Boys' Work Board met in the Department of Agriculture rooms here last night and another meeting will be held on July 4 for the purpose of discussing the holding of a summer camp for boys. The chairman, J. C. Hayden, presided.

DURHAM COUNTY FARMERS PURCHASE GOOD STOCK

The Yorkshire Field Day held at Peterboro on Friday, June 16th, was a marked success with about two hundred farmers in attendance.

The program commenced at eleven A.M. with I. B. Whale, President of the Yorkshire Breeders' Association as chairman. With a half dozen carcasses of pork, Professor E. C. Stillwell, of Guelph, demonstrated the difference between a proper finished, and over finished and an under finished side of bacon. R. W. Wade, Director of Live Stock Branch and Secretary of the Yorkshire Breeders' also addressed the meeting. S. E. Todd, Secretary of the Industrial Meat Packers, stressed the heavy losses from bruising which reflected on the price received by the farmers. He also was strongly in favour of grading all pork on the rail, so that the man sending bruised carcasses or poor quality hogs to market would get paid accordingly.

The afternoon program consisted of a demonstration on a class of market hogs by L. W. Pearsall, Dominion Live Stock Branch. The proper Yorkshire type for a boar and sow was pointed out by W. P. Watson, Live Stock Branch and Professor R. G. Knox of the O.A.C.

An interesting feature was the Judging Competition for farmers. There were six sows in the class which were to be placed but no reason given. The prize, a beautiful pure bred Yorkshire sow donated by the Industrial Meat Packers was won by John Smith, Cavan.

The program concluded with an auction sale of ten Yorkshire Boars and nine bred sows which were consigned by purebred Yorkshire Breeders from different parts of Ontario. Nine of the boars carried a bonus of ten dollars each and one from an Advanced Registry sow brought the purchaser a bonus of fifteen dollars. The last mentioned boar brought $40.00 with an average of $29.55 for the ten. The high sow sold for $34.00 with an average of $23.70 for the nine sows. The following in Durham County purchased some of this good stock: Boars, Donald Lowes, Cavan; H. A. Cain, Pontypool Sows—Donald Lowes, Cavan; Walter Bowles, Ida and Victor Austin, Port Hope.

INTO YOUR DAYS

Into your days weave poetry,
Though not, perhaps, in words;
But learn the Agriil ecstasy
Of singing brooks and birds.
Let rustling leaf and whispering grass
Their secrets share with you,
And all the little winds that pass
Give you their dreams anew.

Through all your hours let music stray,
Not chords of harp or lute;
But thought's rapt harmonies that play
When viol and lyre are mute.
Weave song and music to and fro
Through all your hours and days,
Until the rhythmic patterns flow
Sensely, through your ways.

OPEN TWO CREEKS IN NORTHUMBERLAND

B. K. Williams Of Warkworth Instrumental In Bringing About Action

The Department of Game and Fisheries have completed arrangements for the opening of ten more creeks in the county of Northumberland.

B. K. Williams of Warkworth, has been instrumental in having the farmers signed up along these creeks, and has been met with almost 100 per cent co-operation. The work of signing up creeks started last fall, the following being a list of creeks opened and the men who will supervise the placing of speckled trout: Baltimore Creek, F. Noble; O'Grady Creek, J. O'Grady; Peggman Creek, R. Peggman; Black Creek, F. Black; Quinn Creek, Chas. Quinn; Duncan Creek, William Cleelock; Dartford Spring Creek, J. A. Darling.

In the past years these creeks were not stocked and in order to fish in them anglers were obliged to obtain permission from the land owners. For the next five years the Department will stock these creeks every year, and sportsmen can fish on any of them; that is they will be permitted to go along the streams, with the exception of the following lands whom they would have to obtain permission from: Baltimore Creek, J. D. Hayden, of Cobourg; Dartford Spring Creek, W. Cunningham, Dartford, B. MacDonald; Dartford, W. Carew, Roseneath; Duncan Creek, Mrs. J. Duncan, of Morganston; O'Grady Creek, N. Drumm, of Grafton; P. McCaigney, of Chicago.

It is expected that Deputy Game Warden will be appointed in the near future for each creek.

POUND LOSES, DOLLAR STEADY

British currencies hardly moved during Saturday's short session on the foreign exchanges at New York. Dealings were at a low ebb following the hectic trading in the earlier sessions of the week.

The pound sterling moved within a range of 5-8 of a cent and wound up at $4.22 1-8, off 1-8 from Friday's close. Sterling, however, finished with the largest weekly advance since the United Kingdom suspended the gold standard in 1931, Saturday's final rate of $4.22 1-8 comparing with $4.07 1/4 a week ago. In that period the Canadian dollar gained 1 5-8c.

CROPS STILL DRY FARMERS WORRY

Western Ontario Little Relieved By Light Rain

Root and grain crops over a wide area of Western Ontario are reported to be in a badly parched state despite intermittent and light rains which fell yesterday.

The drought—which was broken only technically yesterday and continues unabated as a field condition—has entered on its third week and already has virtually cut in half the strawberry crop.

In the Stratford area the precipitation of Monday barely moistened the top soil, and some farmers have begun to plow in their mangolds, while other root crops are believed to have been ruined. Conditions in the Galt district are almost equally serious.

Only in Ingersoll and Brantford was the rain of sufficient proportion to give rise to hope that the drooping root crops and grains might revive and continue normal growth.

FARMER IS AWARDED $750 FOR POOR SEED

Returning a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, a county court jury at Whitby allowed $750 and costs to Edgar Dure, well known Mara Township farmer, in his action against the Brechin Milling Co. of Brechin, Ont. Dure claimed $2,000 damage for injury to his farm caused by a noxious weed, field pepper grass, which, he claimed, was contained in red clover seed he had purchased from the defendant company in 1930.

When the action was heard before Judge Thompson without a jury last year plaintiff was allowed $1,200 and costs. An appeal was made, however, and a new trial ordered with jury. Judge R. Ruddy presided over the hearing this week which lasted four days.

at the corner of Homewood and Belmont avenues, Peterboro on a recent afternoon, when he was involved in a collision with a truck owned by Thomas Anthony. He was conveyed by ambulance to Nicholls Hospital, and had only recovered sufficiently to appear in court.

SPECIAL WEEK NEXT OCTOBER

Week, Commencing Oct 1st, set Aside As 'Fellowship And Friendship' Week

The week commencing Sunday, Oct. 1, is to be "Fellowship and Friendship" Week, a special committee of citizens headed by Hon. W. G. Martin, Minister of Public Welfare, decided at a noon luncheon, called by the Minister Thursday. The crusade for "better understanding" is to be Provincial-wide, but may be made nation-wide.

Mayor Stewart of Toronto promised a civic proclamation on the subject. All other Ontario municipalities are expected to fall in line in this respect.

Upon the Sunday commencing the week, special services will be held in churches and appropriate sermons delivered upon the subject of human fellowship. Senior grades of public schools, together with the high schools of the Province as well as service clubs and Boards of Trade, will all be parties to "Fellowship and Friendship" Week.

CANADA PILES UP EXPORT BALANCE

Canada's exports during the month of May totalled $46,108,730 and her imports $32,926,530, giving an export balance of $13,182,200. Of the exports $45,576,337 was for Canadian produce and $52,303 was foreign produce re-exported. A year ago the month of May showed an import balance. The total imports for May, 1932, was $44,361,312 and the total exports were $41,284,299.

For the first two months of the fiscal year the total exports were $66,420,687 and the imports $53,383,824. For the corresponding two months last year the total exports were $68,691,711 and the imports $74,155,606.

The figures were released recently by the Department of National Revenue.

Reductions in Dominion revenue during the first two months of the present fiscal year (April and May) are shown. The customs and excise revenue in the two months has dropped $7,101,405, as compared with the corresponding months last year and the income tax revenue has fallen $7,057,437.

For April and May this year the total receipts from customs and excise were $23,379,082, and in the corresponding months in 1932 they were $30,480,487.

During the month of May the revenue from customs and excise was $3,714,978 below the corresponding months in 1932 they were $30,480,487. The excise taxes are chiefly from sales taxes, and excise duties are principally on spirits, cigarettes, etc. The total receipts from income taxes during May, 1932, was $37,096,904 and for last May $30,500,378, a decrease of $6,596,525. For April and May, 1932, the total was $42,366,139 and for the past two months $35,308,708.

HAY AND STRAW INSPECTION

The Hay and Straw Inspection Act, 1933, which received Royal assent the other day, empowers the Minister of Agriculture to: (a) Establish regulations prescribing standards of class, quality and condition for hay and certify the class, quality and condition; (b) By inspection certificate to issue; and such inspection certificates issued by officers appointed by law shall be accepted in the courts as prima facie evidence of the particulars therein set out; (c) To prescribe the places where and the conditions under which hay and straw shall be inspected and the charges made for such inspection. Sections 156 to 165 of the Inspection and Sale Act, 1927, are repealed. These sections dealt with hay grades for the eastern provinces, western provinces and N.W. T.; standard weights for hay and straw in Quebec; grading of straw, reasons for grading, inspection of scales; imported hay, penalty for not affixing tag to bale of hay or straw, and penalty for putting foreign matter into bales of hay or straw. The Act declares that such inspectors may be appointed as are required for the purposes of this Act.

CUTS URGED IN TEACHERS' PAY

Northumberland And Durham Would Also Lessen Pupils' Expenses

Reduction of salaries of teachers in High and Continuation schools was one of the recommendations of the Schools Committee report, accepted at the conclusion of the June session of Northumberland and Durham Counties last week. The stand of the Schools Committee on the salary question was made evident when the members endorsed a resolution of Lincoln County, in which that county favored reductions of salaries among school teachers.

The Schools Committee felt that some should apply to all High and Continuation schools in the United Counties as well as to schools outside the counties to which the counties paid maintenance costs of county pupils. The committee recommended that this resolution be sent to all schools to which this applied. The recommendation of Bowmanville Board of Education to the effect that the government be asked to permit pupils unable to pay examination fees to try their exams without payment of same, was endorsed.

Go Over Requisitions
The committee also recommended that Deputy Reeve C. Boyce of Percy Township, chairman of Schools Committee, with Reeve J. A. R. Elliott of Port Hope, be a special committee to go over the High and Continuation Schools requisitions.

A recommendation was made that a substantial reduction be effected in the fees paid presiding examiners, as well as those who read the answer papers for the Department of Education, in order that the fees charged pupils writing departmental exams may be reduced to a nominal sum per paper and also that preference selecting presiding and reading examiners be given to teachers not having permanent positions.

WATCH THE CHILDREN

At this season of the year, accidents involving children become increasingly serious. The total of 120 children killed or injured while playing on the streets during April is abundant evidence (if any were needed) of the danger of this practice and parents and motorists are again warned to take added precautions during the coming months. Parents are again reminded that streets are built for traffic, not for play. This fact, however, does not diminish the crime of the motorist who, through carelessness, negligence or thoughtlessness, injures or kills a little child. Care is essential and is demanded of both parents and motorists.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SPEND

Never was the slogan "Prices are booming. Buy now!" truer than right now.

Recent inflation activities and the change in the gold backing of the dollar are the most powerful price stimulants in three years. It really is time to buy now.

Best of all, by buying now, and building and repairing now, you can do your bit in the most dramatic stage of the war against unemployment and distress and at the same time obtain the greatest return on your dollar in more than a generation.

A dollar in property improvement means a dollar touching the lives of a thousand dollars' work.

Repair the steps, paint the house, remove fire hazards, renovate the garden, renew rotting foundations with concrete — do any of these things, and you will be a factor in the work of recovery.

It is not prophecy to say that in your lifetime you'll never have the opportunity to get work done as cheaply as now. It's fact.

The price structure is abnormally low. It is lower than even the intenseness of depression justifies.

As demand increases, the rate of climb will be sharply accelerated.—Lindsay Post.

SAVING SCHOOL BOOKS

Some of the school classes were dismissed on Friday and others will be let out from time to time in the next week. Some of the pupils will go back to school next fall and others will not. A few of the pupils will be able to use the same text books but the majority of them will have to buy a complete set of new books.

All this leads up to the question of the disposal of the old books. Many students place them on market, selling them at a reduced price to younger students, but other books are thrown away.

Next September there will be many pupils going to school whose parents cannot afford to buy them new books or even old ones at a reduced price. It would be a great help to these students if books which pupils are through with this year were bundled up and saved until school opens again. There will almost certainly be an appeal for assistance at that time in buying poor children books and much money could be saved if this term's old books were saved for those who will not be able to buy them at the start of next term.—Lindsay Post.

GULF OF MEXICO LINKED TO LAKES

$102,000,000 Waterway Is Officially Opened At Chicago

The joining of the Great Lakes with the Gulf of Mexico 1,000 miles away by a $102,000,000 inland waterway was completed officially at Chicago on Thursday.

Half a dozen squat freight barges were pushed up the Chicago River, a stream made to flow backward by means of engineering genius and entered Lake Michigan.

It was the first cargo of freight, enough to fill 69 railroad cars, to arrive in the northern lake waters from the Southern United States and from foreign ports via the waterway.

Officialdom of the United States government and of a score of cities greeted the barges. They hailed the opening of the waterway as placing the landlocked Mid-west on a closer transportation parity with the coast seaports and as providing industrial stimulus for the entire Republic.

The waterway proper extends 96 miles from Lake Michigan at Chicago to the Illinois River at Utica, Ill. Five powerful locks capable of lifting and lowering 30,000 tons of freight a day and separated by miles of virtual lakes, make possible the operation of the channel.

WORLD'S FIRST ELECTRIC STOVE HAS AN OVEN

It all comes about as an adjunct to the advent of electric street cars which were first introduced into Canada at Ottawa in the fall of 1892 by the young electrical contractors, Messrs. A. Ahearn and W. P. Soper. Critics (as is ever the case with any radical advance) declared electric cars could not be operated during the winter in Ottawa—the passengers would become human icicles.

When some of the more daring critics ventured on one of the new cars during an intensely cold snap, they were almost "shocked" to find not the frigid atmosphere they had expected, but rather the balmy atmosphere of the sunny south—with this difference, however: that the warmth came not from the sun overhead, but from under the seat. This was too much; their scepticism "melted" and they knew that a miracle had occurred before their eyes.

But more was in store for them. A banquet was held in the old Windsor Hotel to honor a number of visitors who had flocked to the Capital to see the new electric heating equipment used in the cars. Their credulity almost failed them when, after extolling the hospitality of their two young hosts, Ahearn and Soper, and the excellence of the cooking, they were told that everything had been cooked electrically.

They fairly gasped and, like doubting Thomases, just had to see. So they were shown the great electric oven, large enough to roast at one time half an ox; with vegetables and desert—a complete banquet. That was an April 3rd, 1893—just forty years ago.

As for many years past, the Hon. Thomas Ahearn, P.C., is to-day a director of the Northern Electric Company, Limited.

YOUNG STUDENT GOES TO NORTHERN WILDS

Probably the first student—and certainly the first young girl student—to go into the north country to study birds, is Miss A. E. Heydweiller, who left recently over Canadian National lines for Churchill. Armed with a degree from Cornell University, she is bent upon getting material for a Ph.D. thesis in science. It all came about from Miss Heydweiller's study of this subject at the university and her decision to specialize in bird history. The winter habits of birds were easily observed at Cornell, she explained, but no one could study their summer habits without visiting their breeding place in the north. Labrador might have been suitable as an observation point, but due to the passage of the ice, an abode could not have been taken up until July, which would have been too late as the young student needed three months' study. Cornell University has done much to advance the study of ornithology in the north.

The Oil for the People.—Many oils have come and gone, but Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil continues to maintain its position and increase its sphere of usefulness each year. Its sterling qualities have brought it to the front and kept it there, and it can truly be called the oil of the people. Thousands have benefited by it and would use no other preparation.

The Canadian delegates to the World Economic Conference and Canada's high commissioner to Great Britain called upon the prime minister at No. 10 Downing st. the other day. Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Rt. Hon. Richard Bedford Bennett and Hon. Edgar N. Rhodes are shown in the above picture.

WHO WILL GIVE CITY CHILDREN A HOLIDAY

Jim's life has not been a happy one. His father is dead and his mother works in a laundry to earn enough money to feed him and his little brothers and sisters. Jim is a fine-looking, manly little chap, but his heart is heavy with worry and responsibility. Last year two of his sisters were invited to spend a holiday in country homes. How delighted they were! And what a load was taken off Jim's small shoulders! Of course, Jim realizes he can't leave the city for who would look after the other little ones while his mother is at work? But he does hope Elsie and Jean may go away again.

Bob is another boy just Jim's age who lives with his mother and father in a large brick house. For two years Bob's father, who is a book-keeper, has been out of work and, because they have not been able to meet payments on their house, they know that some day soon they will lose it. The strain is beginning to tell on both parents and, where once there was a happy home, there is now discord, frayed nerves, and a tense atmosphere that Bob doesn't understand. Home has been like this for months and months now and Bob prefers to spend as much time as he can on the street. What a difference a holiday in the country would make!

What a large number and variety of children in Toronto need holidays this year! It is one means of keeping hope and happiness alive and we ask your help. A letter to F. N. Stapleford, Neighbourhood Workers Association, 22 Wellesley St., Toronto, along with a letter of reference, asking one or two children to spend two-weeks' holiday in your home, will bring untold happiness and benefits beyond measure. We arrange transportation and each child is medically examined before leaving the city. There is no remuneration but we know that those who help will find it well worth their while. May we hope to hear from you?

PILLOW-EATING SQUIRRELS

Country homes and summer cottages closed during autumn, winter and spring months, are not infrequently entered by squirrels which seriously damage such articles as mattresses, pillows and cushions. Houses adjacent to park areas are also entered at times. "In this connection," says the Dominion Entomologist, who has all sorts of pests under his jurisdiction, "complaints have been received of injury to window woodwork, apparently from attempts made by the animals to regain their freedom. The common red squirrel is the species most responsible for injury in houses. Before vacating summer homes, it would be a wise procedure to cover the tops of chimneys and other openings through which the animals may gain entrance."

DEBATING TEAM IN SEMI-FINALS

Belleville Defeats Oshawa Team In Debate At Cobourg

Belleville debaters took the semi-finals in the debate being conducted by the young people of the Bay of Quinte Conference when a team from that city defeated Oshawa in a debate held in Trinity Hall, Cobourg, Wednesday night. Belleville had the negative side. The subject was "resolved that much reading of newspapers and magazines is an intellectual dissipation which, in the interests of sound knowledge, should be discontinued."

The affirmative was taken by Miss Louise E. Courtice and Arthur Found, Oshawa Presbytery, and the negative was upheld by Miss Mary Drummond and Miss Isabelle Hinds, of the Belleville Presbytery. Judges were: R. N. McKenzie, principal Cobourg Collegiate Institute; Dr. W. McMullen, Albert College, Belleville; and R. A. Hopkins, Oshawa. W. J. Fletcher, Belleville, presided as chairman. The finals will be held in October at the annual gathering at Cobourg of the young people of the Bay of Quinte Conference, at which time, Belleville will meet Cavan in the finals.

FOUR MEN PAY FINES FOR ILLEGAL FISHING

Fishing in the private preserve of R. S. McLaughlin brought police court appearances and fines to four young men of Oshawa. The men were apprehended by Deputy Game Warden N. Whitney, game keeper for the preserve. Geo. Sugdeen, who had 12 large fish taken from one of the best trout streams in the county in his possession when caught, was fined $10 costs by Magistrate Creighton. Arthur Hubbel of Oshawa paid a similar penalty.

Giving the gamekeeper wrong addresses resulted in heavier penalties for Ernest Brown and Allan Brown, both of 68 Wilson avenue, Oshawa, who were each assessed $20 and costs. Last year many arrests made in the same premises were not followed by convictions because no fish were found in the possession of the accused when arrested. This year because of recent amendment to the Game and Fisheries Act, persons found with rod or gun on forbidden premises may be fined even if caught without fish and game.

GROUND-NESTING BEES AS APPLE POLLINATORS

It is usually claimed that the hive bee is the main agent in apple pollination. In the four years survey (1928-32) of apple pollination in the Annapolis Valley, the results of which have just been issued in a voluminous publication by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, the investigators state that unfortunately their studies show that, as a result of widespread poisoning from the use of poisoned sprays and dusts, the hive bee has ceased to be a factor in apple pollination in the Annapolis valley of Nova Scotia. The danger of poisoning hive bees, they say, may be reduced, though not entirely eliminated, by refraining from spraying and dusting during the blossoming period, and by moving the bees into the orchard only when the early apple trees have come into bloom, removing the bees before the after-blossom sprays are applied. Dusting is usually more fatal than spraying, but severe losses may follow either practice when poisons are applied to apple bloom, or to the blossoms of other plants growing in or near the orchard.

Careful investigations have shown that pollination at present is mainly effected by various small, solitary bees that nest in the ground in the neighbourhood of orchards, especially along roadsides, pastures, dykes and similar situations. They have been reasonably plentiful in at least most orchards during the years 1928 to 1931 inclusive. In 1932 there was an apparent decrease, and this, combined with unfavourable weather for bee activity during the blossoming period, had a noticeable effect on fruit setting. Bumble bee, while sometimes abundant locally, were of minor importance in most orchards during the course of the survey. While, therefore, under favourable conditions, may arise when it is desirable to supplement their efforts. This can be done only by supplying hive bees for the purpose.

MILKING MACHINE PARTS

Sterilization of milking machine parts may be satisfactorily affected by treatment with steam, hot water, or chemical solutions. The Dominion Bacteriologist in his investigations of milking machines found that while heat and chemical methods are both effective from a bacteriological point of view, the former has a more deleterious effect upon the rubber parts, necessitating more frequent replacement. This is particularly true of the steam and the hot water methods in which the tubes are allowed to remain immersed between the milkings. Consequently, the most satisfactory heat treatment from all standpoints was considered to be an immersion in water at 170 degrees F., for twenty minutes only, after which the parts were hung up to drain and dry.

TOWN BENEFITS ON COUNTY RATE

Reeve Elliott Explains Saving Made By Reason Of Fractional Rate Cut

Reeve J. A. R. Elliott, chairman of the finance committee of the United Counties Council, in an interview to-day points out that Port Hope will save over $1,200 by reason of the fractional reduction in the County rate of .295.

"Any reduction in cost of municipal government at this time is welcomed," stated the Reeve, "and this reduction is made possible only through drastic economies and a general paring of estimates," he adds.

The reduction in the County rate, while only fractional is a step in the right direction and of course reflects itself in the reduced rate effected by the local council for the ensuing year.

Roses, peonies and orange blossoms made a lovely background to the chancel in the chapel of Victoria University, Toronto, for the marriage on Saturday of Marjorie, daughter of Mr. J. C. B. Horwood, Toronto, and the late Mrs. Horwood, and Howe Martyn, son of Dr. and Mrs. H. G. Martyn, Stratford. Rev. Dr. R. L. Rickard, uncle of the groom, officiated, the bride being given in marriage by her father. Mr. Reginald Godden was at the organ. Miss L. Golden, Bracebridge, sang. The bride was charming in pearl satin with tight-fitting sleeves and bodice with the skirt trained in back. Her veil was caught behind her tight-fitting cap with orange blossoms. The bridesmaids were Miss Florence E. Martyn, Stratford, sister of the groom, and Miss Winnifred Horwood, Toronto, sister of the bride. Their costumes were pale green and yellow organdie, with hats, shoes and muffs and old-fashioned nosegays to match. Mr. G. Frank Perkin was groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. Charles Carscallen of Oshawa and Mr. William Horwood of Toronto. An informal reception followed afterward at Wynilwood, where the bridal party received the guests. Mrs. Horwood wore a flowered chiffon gown with black hat and corsage bouquet. The groom's mother, Mrs. Martyn, was gowned in grey lace and hat with shoulder bouquet of crimson roses. After the reception the couple left on a motor trip through the Muskoka district, and will also spend two weeks at Lake Couchiching. The bride travelled in a French blue wool suit with navy hat and accessories. On their return they will take up residence at 226 Delaware Avenue, Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Martyn are well known here having visited his uncle and aunts, E. H. Martyn, Mrs. L. B. Symons and Miss T. Martyn, King's Highway West and friends here will wish them every happiness.

FEWER U.S. TOURISTS ARE VISITING CANADA

American tourists to Ontario last year were not as plentiful as the year before. How will it be this year? Two unfavorable factors suggest themselves. America is now selling beer by the glass. Formerly even the system under which this province now sells beer and spirits, proved a big selling point to the arid visitors in encouraging them to come to the province. Fishing and hunting, in many cases, was a secondary consideration. Now that beer in the States is no novelty, Ontario has lost a major selling point. The second point not in our favor this year is the fact that the World's Fair, in Chicago, will attract thousands. Rather than take a lengthy trip to Canada, Americans will stay home and see the Fair. Thousands of Canadians will also cross the border en route to the Fair. So it looks like a tough year for summer resort owners and tourists homes — unless we can offer them what they get at home.

NORWOOD MAN LOSES FINGER AT FACTORY

William Clark, an employee at the Norwood Cheese Box Factory, met with a painful accident. While working around a heading saw, his right hand became pinched between a cement block under the machine and a block of timber supposed to have been thrown by the saw, with the result part of the forefinger had to be cut off, and the three remaining fingers left in a very mangled and bruised condition. Dr. Sutton attended to the injured hand, which is doing well.

OTHER EDITORS' OPINIONS

LEARN TO SWIM

The Ontario Safety League wisely warns people to be careful when bathing or swimming, stressing the following points:

- In a safe place.
- With others, never alone.
- Never in less than one hour after meals.
- When you are not too tired.
- Dive only in water you know is deep enough.

All this is wise advice and should be impressed on people through the province, because if everyone took the precautions listed above there would be but very few drowning accidents.

Every boy and girl should learn to swim. There is no excuse for not learning, because it is so easy, and the ability to swim is wonderful value as so many people spend their vacations near water. Unless a person can swim, much of the pleasure is taken away from boating and one is apt to be a helpless spectator while a child drowns within a few yards.

Swimming gives more pleasure in summer weather than almost anything else that can be named, and is only another one of many reasons why people should set themselves the task of learning to swim at the first opportunity.—Lindsay Post.

THE REPORTER'S PART

DEPRESSIONS COMPARED

The depression has been along the same lines as previous slumps, says Walter W. Price, Wall Street authority, in a recent publication, "We Have Recovered Before", and has not exceeded past depressions in the depth and intensity it reached. He treats four major depressions, those of 1837, 1857, 1873, and 1893, and quarrel with those who ignore the history of slumps. He points out that it is not true that previous slumps were limited to the United States. He paints a picture of the course of a business cycle and indicates the part public psychology plays in boom and depression. He discovers parallels for the banking troubles, unsoundness of principles in financial and political schemes and closes with the expression of hope that as past depressions have passed and been followed by greater prosperity than ever, he will not be surprised to see the present condition pass and the succeeding years a period of unexampled progress.

In the latest depression, everyone, of course, was talking and discussing it, with more or less faulty knowledge of facts while the depression is really to be explained on principles which are as old as trade.—Belleville Ontario-Intelligencer.

BEAUTY OF ENGLAND

Sometimes the beauty of England quite overwhelms one; and this year the green vitality of the country seems to have penetrated into the heart of the towns. There have been nightingales in Portman Square and, of course, at Kew, which is always a sort of epitome of the country. Young wild duck peep out from the bushes beside the lake and the croon of the wood-pigeons is wholly persuasive as it floats down from the fine trees in St. James Park. How English are the green spaces between the trunks! In one respect the "purple patches" are more English than usual. All the tulips, massed closely and in broad belts, are English-grown, illustrating the extension of a more or less new industry, that begins to make South Lincolnshire and Cambridge-shire more and more like Holland. You feel that you are in the same valley and the shallow scoop of the North Sea that intervenes is no more than an accident.—(London Spectator).

STILL IMPROVING

That conditions in Oshawa are really improving is evident from the statistics of the Oshawa Public Welfare Board. During the last two weeks no less than sixty-three Oshawa families have removed themselves from the relief lists, and have placed themselves in the position of being self-supporting.

These figures are very significant. They show the greatest decrease that has been shown in any two weeks period since the month of December in last year, just after the General Motors of Canada went into production. They show that the economic situation of many Oshawa families has been improved by the return of the breadwinner to remunerative employment.

This is good both for the city and the individuals concerned. Stress should perhaps be laid on its effect on the individual families, for it means much to them to be able to support themselves, and to be able to shake off the feeling that they are dependent on the community for their subsistence. They have gained a new feeling of independence, a stronger morale, that will stand them in good stead.

And from the city's standpoint, this record is encouraging. It leads the welfare board to believe that conditions are definitely on the upturn, and that there is a definite hope for reduction in the heavy relief costs which have had to be born in the past year or more. And if this record of improvement continues, there is reason to hope that the total expenditures for relief for the year 1932 may yet fall considerably short of the amount of over $400,000 which had been estimated in some circles in the early part of the year.—Oshawa Times.

Trinity College School Holds Annual Speech Day

Service at St. Mark's Church in Morning is Followed by Presentation of Various Awards at the School in the Afternoon — Bishop of Toronto Officiated — Many Visitors Present

With many distinguished visitors in attendance, the one day of the year—Speech Day—was impressively observed at Trinity College School here on Friday and following divine service at historic St. Mark's Church in the morning, the presentation of the various awards was made in the dining hall of the school during the afternoon. Throughout the day, Old Boys and friends of the School from all parts of the Province, visited the institution not only to witness the exercises but to bid a last farewell to the Headmaster for the past twenty years, Rev. Dr. F. Graham Orchard, who is retiring this month.

The day was perfect and long lines of cars were parked about the buildings. The imposing buildings, basking in the bright sunlight, surrounded by the green sward, and overlooking the blue waters of Lake Ontario, indeed formed a pretty setting. Speech day is a happy day and it is also a sad day. Not only does it mark the end of the academic term but it marks another milestone in the history of the famous educational centre. Some students will return and some will go out into the many avenues of life, but all always retain very pleasant memories of the days at Trinity and its hoary and honourable traditions.

Morning Service

St. Mark's Anglican Church was filled to capacity when the students, parents and friends assembled for the divine service at 11.30 o'clock. Seated in the chancel were Rt. Rev. Derwyn T. Owen, Bishop of Toronto diocese, who officiated at the closing; Rev. Canon Shatford, of Montreal, who preached the sermon; Rev. Dr. Orchard, the Headmaster who read the lesson and Rev. R. S. Tippett, of T.C.S., who conducted the opening part of the service. Mr. Edmund Cohn, organist of St. John's Anglican Church, presided at the organ.

Rev. Shatford brought a stirring message of loyalty and bravery to the students. He took as his text, Ezekiel, Chapter 1, Verse 6— "And every one had four faces." "The face of every person is a fortune," said the speaker in opening. "The face is the manifestation of character and on the face is written the character of the individual. It is the mirror of the soul." The face is the index of character and it depends on what kind of face life is fought with.

The end of all education, stated Canon Shatford, is character with its high ideals and noble aims. The vision noted in the text was vouchsafed twice, by the prophet Ezekiel and Apostle St. John and both faced life at an important epoch of the Christian era. The times demanded that life be faced and we need manifestation of life in the rigorous times through which we are now passing.

Four Faces

"If we make a contribution toward mankind," he told, "life must be faced in a four-fold way. To the lads of Trinity College School, we need the face of a Lion, which always denotes bravery and loyalty and there is something supreme about a lion. No matter what else is required, courage is indispensable in fronting life and bravery is an essential qualification. Fear is the obsession of the present day—persons and nations are in paroxysms of fear—and courage is needed."

The second face described by the preacher was the face of the Ox, continually plodding and nothing can be gained without it. Many are defeated within the sight of their goals but persistence and perseverance is needed. The third face mentioned was that of the Eagle, soaring high, which brings quality of vision to make a success of life. The speaker urged a complete vision. "There will be times," he said, "when you become tempted and engrossed with material achievements when the ideals suffer, but you must be able to soar above. Never lose the ideals learned on the old hill and keep them unobscured and above the material issues in the arena of life."

The fourth face was the face of a man. "Do not be arrogant," Rev. Shatford warned the boys, "and never have a feeling of superiority. A superiority complex is a most hateful thing. It is a glorious thing to be in a place where character is built."

"If you students face life with the four faces," claimed the speaker in ringing tones, "nothing can defeat you or dismay you."

In closing, Canon Shatford paid a glowing tribute to the work of Rev. Dr. Orchard. Hundreds of students have been sent out as a contribution to humanity and his name will stand amongst the educational leaders of the country.

Afternoon's Proceedings

The afternoon proceedings opened in the dining hall shortly after two o'clock and the auditorium was taxed to capacity with parents, students and interested visitors. In a brief address, Dr. Orchard introduced and welcomed Rev. Derwyn T. Owen, who was loudly acclaimed.

The latter, who has officiated at four speech day proceedings in the past four days, expressed pleasure in coming to T.C.S. "The School stands for much—it stands for something real, high, and in the light of the Church may make a greater contribution to the Church than it has in the past. Speech Day is a sad day, for to-day, we are bidding good-bye to one who has given twenty years of service and words cannot express our gratitude for him. The greatest thing is what he is,—Dr. Orchard is a Christian gentleman, a clergyman, and a Headmaster."

Bishop Owen added that next fall the school will be under a new Headmaster and asked all to give him his support. "Trinity has done a great deal of service and it is the responsibility of every boy, the governing body and staff, to put into the work of the School the best that they can."

Prior to the afternoon exercises, the members of the governing body and visitors were entertained to luncheon.

Tenders His Thanks

Rev. Dr. Orchard gave a report of the year's work and was visibly affected. It was hard to imagine his emotions, standing before the audience in his beloved School on this—his last Speech Day. The erection of the Memorial Junior School building, the temporary removal of the senior school to Woodstock following the fire in March, 1928, placed heavy responsibilities upon Dr. Orchard. Owing to his intimate knowledge of the school's requirements, it became increasingly necessary for him to assume almost the sole responsibility for the new buildings in co-operation with architects. As a result, he expressed the desire for a younger man to take over his duties after the 30th June, and he will then live retired in England.

He referred to the many associations formed in his twenty years as 'Head' of T.C.S., and tendered his thanks to all who had assisted and supported him. At the close, afternoon tea was served and together with Mrs. Orchard, he personally bade a last farewell to the visitors.

The various winners were called to the front and the presentations were made by Bishop Owen, assisted by the Headmaster and W. Ogle of the teaching staff.

At one point, the new Headmaster, P. A. C. Ketchum, was called to the front and was warmly greeted. It was his honor to present the Margaret Ketchum prize to C. Traux, the donor of the prize being his mother.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Percy Henderson, Mr. G. Strathy, Mr. and Mrs. F. Gordon Osler, Mr. and Mrs. Harcourt Vernon, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Baldwin, Mrs. P. A. C. Ketchum, Dr. and Mrs. Armour, Rev. J. Scott Howard, Prof. and Mrs. W. R. P. Bridger, Mr. H. C. P. Stikeman, Mrs. Whitehead, Mrs. Cutler, New York; Rev. T. Crosswaite, Mrs. Wotherspoon, Cadet R. Wotherspoon, Mrs. Archbold, Mrs. Keefe, Mrs. Kortright, the Misses Bilkey, Mrs. Jemmett, the Misses Kerr, Mrs. MacDonald Cobourg; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Newman, Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland, Mrs. R. C. H. Cassels, Lieut.-Col. and Mrs. Morrissey, Mr. and Mrs. Hadley, Dauphin, Man.; Col. and Mrs. Norman Perry, Mr. and Mrs. Fortye, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan McLaren, Mr. W. W. Southern, Dr. and Mrs. Mackenzie, Mr. Fowkes Jemmett, the Misses Rigby, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. E. Williams, Mrs. C. W. Bell, Mrs. Hughes Hallett, and many others.

Action Follows Accident On Highway Involving Port Hope Persons

Amended from $500 to $1,500 on the ground that the infant plaintiff John Herbert Brown, of North Monaghan township, receiving injuries of a permanent nature, an action opened before His Honor Judge L. V. O'Connor at Peterboro Tuesday.

The action is a sequel to an automobile accident on Port Hope-Peterboro Highway on November 16th, last, following a heavy snow storm. John Herbert Brown was coming from Fraserville school, on the afternoon of the accident and as a result of being struck down by a car, sustained a fracture of both his legs. According to medical testimony, one of the boy's legs is permanently bowed. The boy is suing through his father, Harry Brown, North Monaghan township farmer. Plaintiffs are represented by G. N. Gordon, K.C., of Gordon and Elliott.

Defendants are C. T. Sherry and Francis B. Sherry, Port Hope business men. The latter was driving the car, which was owned by his co-defendant, C. T. Sherry. Defendants are represented by J. A. O'Brien.

Some eight or nine boys from the school, including the infant plaintiff, were at court throughout the morning and afternoon and gave evidence regarding the accident.

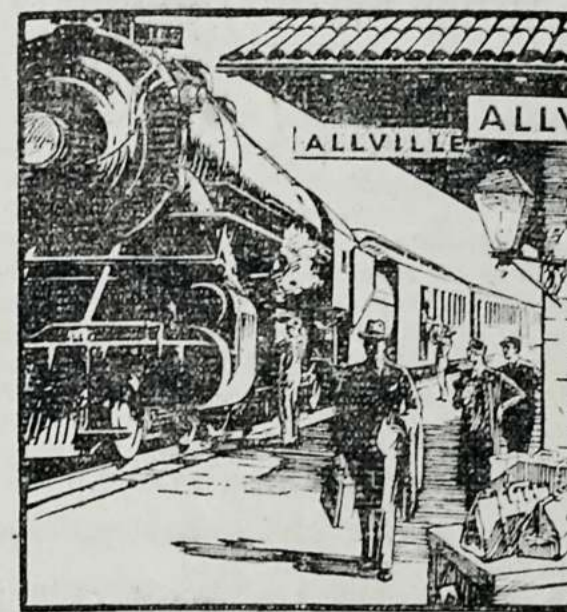

All the youthful witnesses were agreed that as they came out of school, a large motor truck laden with logs was approaching from the south, while at the same moment the Sherry car was coming in the opposite direction.

Manson Cathcart, 13, stated that the truck and the car had passed each other going in opposite directions, before the accident happened, under cross-examination by Mr. O'Brien.

He added that immediately before the accident the Brown boy was standing still and looking over his shoulder to the south. He turned as the car struck him.

Garnet Whitfield, 11, was going from school when he heard a dinner pail strike a headlight. He turned and saw the little Brown boy was carried along on the bumper for a few feet, before falling off under the front axle of the car.

When the car came to stop, one of the wheels of the car was resting on the shoulder of the road, he said in examination. Cross-examined, witness said the highway was covered with snow.

Miss Vivian Brown, went to the scene of the accident and after seeing her brother taken from underneath the axle of the car, ran home to tell her mother. The car came to rest, she testified, on the gravel on the shoulder of the road. It was right off the pavement, she said.

Judge O'Connor Finds Driver Of Car To Blame For Accident

His Honour Judge O'Connor gave judgment at Peterboro for $393.50 in favour of little Jack Brown and his father, Harry Brown, for injuries suffered by Jack last October, when he was run over by an act mobile driven by Frank B. Sherry of Port Hope and owned by C. T. Sherry, his brother, a taxi cab owner, opposite Caino School near Fraserville on Highway 28.

Nearly a dozen school children were called to show that Jack Brown was standing on the shoulder of the road when he was run over by the automobile, which was passing a truck load of logs, which attracted the attention of the school children.

Judge O'Connor said he preferred to accept the testimony of the children as it was given with frankness, and the the answers to unexpected questions with a readiness, which indicated the truthfulness of their statements. The judge said he did not accept the testimony of the driver and the occupants of the automobile.

Harry Saunders, a hardware merchant of Port Hope and his brother Eugene P. Saunders and Mrs. Eugene Saunders gave evidence for the defense.

The Judge awarded Supreme Court costs to the plaintiffs from the 18th of March, 1933, which was the date the amendment and the date upon which it was ascertained there were permanent injuries, suffered by Jack Brown and County Court costs previous to that date.

J. A. O'Brien acted as counsel for the defendant and Hon. G. N. Gordon K.C., acted for Harry Brown and his son, John Brown.

TAR APPLICATION ON CANTON BOVINE

Police Investigate Inhuman Act To Cow Owned By Rev. A. S. Doggett

Provincial Police and district humane society officials are investigating the "tarring" of a cow owned by Rev. A. S. Doggett, Canton United Church minister. Details regarding the case are scarce but it is alleged that a party of Canton residents gathered by night and covered the minister's cow with a quantity of tar, causing considerable annoyance and suffering to the animal.

Provincial Constable W. J. Carey, of Cobourg and District Humane Society Inspector Nelson Baird, of Oshawa, are investigating and it is hinted that a number of Canton residents are involved with several arrests pending.

Rev. Doggett refused to discuss the matter in view of the investigation and when asked by The Evening Guide if the occurrence was a case of spite said, "I am told that I talk too plainly for some people."

It will be recalled that Rev. Doggett gave a press interview some time ago expressing his views on dancing, card playing and general conduct of the younger generation.

LOADED TRUCK UPSETS YOUTH DIES OF INJURIES

William Coo, 20-year-old Trenton resident, succumbed in Belleville General Hospital Tuesday afternoon to injuries received in an accident on Sunday afternoon when a truck driven by Fred Allore of Trenton, overturned near Trenton. Coo sustained a fractured pelvis and internal injuries, according to Dr. J. A. Faulkner, who attended him at the hospital. He was one of 15 passengers on the truck, all of whom escaped injury excepting him.

Simple Remedy For Bad Stomach Gives Swift Relief

No Need of Strang Medicines or Diet. Safe and Simple Home Recipe Keeps Stomach in Fine Condition

If you are a victim of Stomach Troubles—Gas, Sourness, Pain or Bloating—you may have quick and certain relief by following this simple advice. Don't take strong medicines, artificial digestants or pull down your system with starvation diets. For within reason most folks may eat what they like if they will keep their stomach free from souring acids that hinder or paralyze the work of digestion.

And the best and easiest way to do this is to follow every meal with a teaspoonful of Bismarck Magnesia—a pleasant, harmless, inexpensive, form of Magnesia that promptly neutralizes acidity and keeps your stomach sweet and clean. A week's trial of Bismarck Magnesia, which any good druggist can supply at trifling cost, should quickly convince you that 90 per cent. of ordinary stomach distress is absolutely unnecessary.

The Guide Story

"Poor little girl, poor darling!" Slowly, tenderly, the lips murmuring the words were laid on hers in a long, long kiss that satisfied the hunger of her lonely, craving heart. "Dearest, I ought not to have spoken yet," he whispered, presently. "It may be years before I am in a position to marry, with Betty to educate and think of. But your sweetness has been unfolded to me day by day as I have watched your devotion to your mother; and I cannot bear to think of you all alone and friendless in the world. So if you are content to wait for me, as I for you—"

"I would wait for you until the end of time," she whispered softly, her beautiful eyes beaming with the light of affection. "Only—only—" "Only what? You have not called me Basil, yet," he suggested. "Only, Basil," she said, colouring deliciously, "do you think we might keep it to ourselves—just for a little while? Of course you could tell your sister—Betty is her name, isn't it? And I should like Mrs. Smith to know—she has been so kind to me; but I should feel shy about strangers like the Bennetts knowing; always supposing I get this post."

"As you will, sweetheart, so long as I have the right to look after you in the surgery hall," he broke off the unromantic round reached their ears. "One moment, dearest."

He hastened away, to return quickly with the announcement—

"A new patient, my darling! A good omen and good luck. But now, this is the Bennetts' address," hastily handing a few scribbled words to her. "Fortunately, the brother, Eustace Bennett, returned from Egypt the very day of the accident, just in time to look after his poor sister. If you can, get your kind landlady to go with you this evening at seven o'clock and I will telephone through, meantime. Now, one more kiss!"

After which, Basil Knight ushered his newly-betrothed out one door, before admitting his fresh patient by another into the surgery that had just been the setting of so unusual a scene, his wondrously steady head in a bit of a whirl with the feeling that he had done at once the wisest and most foolish thing he had ever attempted in all the twenty-eight years of his life.

The wisest, because though Margaret had said little, those eyes of hers had told him that he had won once and for all the priceless pearl of her love; also the kisses of her lips were to him—Margaret, who would give no kiss unless her heart went with it.

The most foolish, because the two of them were as poor as church mice and there was little Betty, with the most expensive years of education, clothing, and the rest still ahead of her, until she, could be fitly trained to earn her own living.

Furthermore, there was a shadow of distrust lurking in his heart with regard to that half-brother of poor Lillian Bennett, who had turned up on the very day of the terrible motor-accident.

True, he had shown nothing but affection and concern for the sister who had lost her fiancé, and in part her own eyesight, in that dreadful hour, but it was easy to see his affection was not reciprocated. Of course, as a doctor, Basil was well aware that people in sickness often turn against those they had loved best when in health; but he himself did not much take to handsome, smooth-voiced Eustace Bennett.

For the two girls, however, it would be difficult to make a better arrangement.

Poor Lillian could have no more desirable companion than sweet capable Margaret Mayne; while the sea air, nourishing food, and freedom from money worry would do the latter all the good in the world.

Margaret herself, seemed to walk on air back to the dingy lodgings in Camden Town, where she had so devotedly nursed her sweet mother during her last weeks and months of life.

She had started out that morning, knowing that when she had paid Basil Knight's bill, the undertaker and her landlady, she had nothing left in the world but three pounds nine shillings and five pence between herself and her utterly unknown future.

While now—! Once inside the door, she sought out the landlady and breathlessly poured her wonder tidings into the kindly ears of the good soul, who promptly promised to accompany her on her errand.

So quite punctually, at seven o'clock they found themselves face to face with Mr. Eustace Bennett in the luxurious Hampstead flat of which Basil had given Margaret the address.

CHAPTER II

The room into which they were shown was quite charmingly furnished with its Rose du Barri tinting in curtains, carpet and upholstery, which made an effective setting for Eustace Bennett's "type of beauty."

For he was good-looking—very—with his azure blue eyes, fresh complexion, and a small black moustache half-revealing, half-concealing a mouth of which the lips were remarkably red.

"You are Miss Mayne?" he said, advancing to meet her as the well-trained servant closed the door. "Doctor Knight got through a telephone message to say you would call; and—this?"—with an inquiring lift of his brows at her companion.

"Mrs. Smith, a kind friend of mine, who has come to vouch for my respectability," said Margaret, with a little nervous laugh, not quite sure that she liked the expression in Mr. Eustace Bennett's very blue eyes; as they scanned her closely through their long, black lashes. "Because, you see, except for Doctor Knight, who attended my mother so assiduously through her illness, and the clergyman, I am afraid I cannot offer any reference."

"You have not been working in any way, then? Not holding a post of any sort, hitherto?"

"Not the sort of thing your sister needs, nor companion or anything like that. My father was a black-and-white artist of sorts, and when he died, three years ago, my mother started a millinery business with his insurance money. She was clever at it—I got trained, and we were doing quite well when she fell ill, six months ago. Of course the business fell to pieces while I nursed her, and now—" Margaret broke off, biting her lip; she was not wont to give way to her feelings, but the strain on her nerves had been severe.

Mrs. Smith rose and went nearer to Mr. Bennett to say in a low tone—

"Nicer ladies that Miss Mayne and her mother never entered a house, and if it's kindness and attention your sister needs, Mr. Bennett—"

Though she paused, Eustace Bennett did not immediately reply; instead, he stood, looking from one to another, and Margaret could count her heart-beats of sickening suspense, before he said, slowly—

"Kindness and attention are all very well; but they do not make up for experience."

Sick though she was with anxiety, Margaret put up a brave fight at this point, saying—

"Yet sometimes kindness and attention count for more than experience, Mr. Bennett; and Doctor Knight said I was a born nurse."

"You were born with a ready tongue, weren't you?" he retorted, and his eyes gave a queer little glint behind their long lashes. "Do I understand that you are quite alone in the world? No relatives, and not many friends?"

"Not many friends, and no relatives in England," replied Margaret, shortly, with heightened colour.

"So that you would be able to devote yourself to my poor sister without distraction from outside? Well, we will take that as a set-off against the want of reference and experience, Miss Mayne. So, the post being an easy one, and no fashionable frocks needed on Tamarisk Island, I presume a salary of fifty pounds a year would content you?"

Margaret's heart gave a leap within her. She had not expected nearly so much, and suddenly the thing looked like being settled, without tramping day after day in search of work, with clothes and shoes growing shabbier and shabbier, and she herself more and more hungry as the wolf howled ever nearer the door. No more dreadful fear of being alone in London.

She tried not to show all it meant to her, as she answered, quietly—

"Thank you, yes—I should be content with fifty pounds a year."

"Very well, then," he continued, coldly, his eyes never leaving her face. "I must rely on Doctor Knight's recommendation and my own judgment of character. So there remains only one other small matter to settle. Your own good sense will tell you that, in my poor sister's state of health, any upset is bad for her. The specialist is very emphatic that she should go to a quiet place and remain there for twelve months; so, as Tamarisk Island was already rented by me, it seemed the ideal place to send her to. Now, it may be a bit dull, but I want you to sign on for a year. Poor Lillian is a sweet and gentle girl with no tricky tempers, and you will be doing a Christian deed if you help us to effect a cure. Also, if you stick it through, you shall receive an honorarium of another fifty pounds."

He paused for the offer to sink in—the offer of one hundred pounds to a penniless, friendless girl!

Let all the same there was a queer little feeling deep down in Margaret which seemed to whisper, "Take care, take care—a lot of things may happen in a year!"—so that, instead of jumping at it, she said slowly—

"I suppose your sister is not here, Mr. Bennett, so that we could see each other for a few minutes? It would be awkward if she took a dislike to me after—"

"Impossible to imagine any one taking a dislike to you, Miss Mayne," came the swift interruption, with a sudden flash of white teeth in a smile meant to reassure her. "While, as a matter of fact, the nurse has taken her into the country to visit old friends to-day, and it is not certain when they will be back."

"And if she should be cured before the time?" persisted Margaret.

"If she should be cured before the time," he repeated, with a charming bow, "of course you are released from your bond, and go away with one hundred pounds in your pocket. But, come now," with a glance at his wrist-watch, "I am expecting other applicants for the post—shoals of them probably, having advertised before Doctor Knight mentioned your name to me, for the specialist presses me to get Lillian away as soon as possible. In the next room I have ready a very simple agreement prepared for the signature of any one with whom I come to terms. If you say 'yes,' I will fetch it. If you say, 'no'—it will doubtless come in handy for one of the young ladies I hear busy with the bell."

What madness possessed penniless Margaret—now that the post was within her grasp—that she still hesitated? And there was Mrs. Smith gazing at her sleeve, whispering excitedly—

"Surely you're not in two minds, dearie! Why, it's a chance in a thousand for you and plenty others to grab at it."

Which Margaret knew quite well; also that Basil Knight had sent her hither; also that only three pounds ten shillings and five pence stood otherwise between her and starvation.

All the same, it was with the queerest feeling of reluctance when, with a nod at Mrs. Smith, squeezing her hand tightly, she turned back to say to the owner of those watchful eyes—

"Very well, Mr. Bennett, thank you. I agree to accept your offer and to sign the paper you mention."

"Made up your mind at last, have you?" was his response, smiling down at her with his hands in his pockets. "I perceive you are a very cautious young lady, Miss Mayne. I shall feel my poor Lillian is in most careful hands;" and leaving them with that, he returned in two minutes, bringing a document with him, and accompanied by the maid who had admitted them.

"Nothing so formidable, you see," he said, smoothly, spreading the paper on the table. "Just run your eye over it to see there is nothing dreadful or dangerous before you sign your name. Then your friend and Morgan here can witness it."

It was, indeed, most simple. Just the terms he had stated; yet, as she signed her name, binding herself to remain with "Lillian Bennett on Tamarisk Island for a year from this date," a sharp, uncanny shudder ran through her, as of one who says— "Some one is walking over my grave."

Duly signed and witnessed, Eustace Bennett held out his hand.

"Good-bye, or rather au revoir, Miss Mayne. I am so glad I shall not have to interview any more young ladies. When I have had a talk with Lillian and made her happy by telling her all about you, I will write you word when, and how and where to meet her. Ah by the way"—and he turned aside to a writing-desk to take out ten one pound notes and count them into her hand—"here is something in advance. No, no receipt necessary but there are sure to be things you need to get. Good evening, Mrs. Smith. Au revoir, Miss Mayne."

Thus dismissed, having tucked safely away those precious notes, Margaret departed with her head in a whirl.

So much of a whirl that, as she and Mrs. Smith turned to leave the flat, she never noticed a shadow that passed them by in the falling dark—the little shadow of a man, dark of skin and dark of eye.

But he noted her, took in every detail of her with those dark eyes that had a catlike vision in the dim twilight.

When she had turned the corner with her companion, the latter chattering away volubly, he entered the flat they had just left by the door Morgan held open for one after another of the disappointed applicants, and passed into the room where Eustace Bennett still stood with the agreement in his hand.

"Choice made?" inquired the newcomer, nodding towards the document, and taking a cigarette from his case.

"Yes, sealed, signed and settled," returned the other. "You must have passed the girl. She was dressed in black and an older woman in tow; all discretion and modesty."

"Yes, I had a good look at her as I passed her—been half-starved, hasn't she?"

"I should say so. But she's confoundedly cautious. Didn't half jump at the offer, as I thought she would, and boggled more than a bit over the agreement. However, she has neither friends nor relatives, so ought to serve our turn all right. Wanted to see Lillian."

"Did you let her?"

"Not I. Said the nurse had taken her into the country. It might have put her off, you see, and time is too precious to be wasted, Friend Rael! The sooner the girls are down on Tamarisk Island, and Lillian away from your conscientious colleague, the sooner we can get to work. Good money will keep the Taylors safe, and if I play the devoted brother to Lillian and perhaps a little of the devoted lover to the other girl, all should go very well."

CHAPTER III

The sight of a black shade over the eyes of a girl standing under the clock in the great London station sent Margaret hurrying to the spot, for Eustace Bennett's promised letter had told her when and where to meet Lillian; and now as she was making her way along the busy platform, a bigger and taller girl than the one wearing the shade came to her saying pertly—

"Good morning, Miss Mayne. You remember me, don't you. I am Doris Morgan, who witnessed your signature the other evening. Mr. Bennett could not spare time to come himself, so is sending me along with you to see you and Miss Bennett through all right. I suppose you know," she went on, lowering her voice to a whisper in Margaret's ear, "I suppose you know she is only half there—to my thinking?" Then, turning aside to address the invalid in the sort of tone a nurse uses to a rather troublesome child, "Now, Miss Bennett, here is Miss Mayne, who is going to be so kind as to keep you company a bit. You'd like to shake hands with her, wouldn't you?"

But the limp and lifeless hand put into hers was a bit of a shock to Margaret, and when she said, "I am very glad to see you, Miss Bennett, and hope we shall be happy together," the only answer she had was a spiritless—

"Thank you," from the pale lips that were nearly all she could see of Lillian's face under that big, disfiguring shade.

But Margaret was brave and she was kind and her heart ached with pity for this poor girl who was said to have had her full share of health, happiness and good looks till that fatal hour and accident which had robbed her of them all at one fell swoop.

But had not Basil—her Basil—said that good air, quiet and cheerful companionship would work wonders? So she fought the first shock of depression over the dull greeting Lillian gave her. Besides, there was the cheerful Morgan, who announced at that moment with an air of importance—

"Well, I've got to take the tickets. First class, too, with plenty of papers and chocolates. Mr. Bennett said; so we're going down in fine style, Miss Mayne. You two stay right here, will you, while I go and get them all."

"Very well," agreed Margaret, and at that moment her heart gave a great leap of joy, for as Doris turned away she caught sight of none other than Basil Knight himself hurriedly threading his way towards her along the crowded platform.

"Oh, how did you get here," she exclaimed, her face and her eyes alight with joy at the miracle that had turned the great noisy station into a wondrous paradise.

"By the skin of my teeth," he laughed, his eyes answering hers, the while he held her hand as if he could never let it go. "But I was determined at all costs to see my two most important patients off on their travels. You look as if that last tonic I gave you had done you a world of good, Miss Mayne. Miss Bennett, how goes it with you, your brother not here to see you, off?"

"His tone was full of indescribable tenderness when he finally let go of Margaret's hand to turn to the other girl and clasp her lifeless fingers. It would seem that he, at least had power to rouse her a little, for there was almost a smile on the faded lips that answered him.

"No, Eustace said he was too busy."

"Too busy, was he?" returned the young doctor, drily. "Well, I was a bit that way myself. But what about the nurse, then? Surely he did not leave you two—"

"Morgan, the maid, came with Miss Bennett to the station, put in Margaret, quietly. "She has just gone to take the tickets."

"Oh, well, that's better. Yes, to be sure, here she comes. Good morning, Morgan, glad to see you have these two young ladies in charge," was his comment, as the lively and capable Doris returned, laden with chocolates, books and papers, as well as the tickets and they all passed on through the barrier to the waiting train.

"First class? Splendid!" he exclaimed, as he and a porter together ushered them and their baggage to their respective places; and then, when they were comfortably settled, "I only wish I could come the whole way with you, and get a good sniff of the air of Tamarisk Island, for I am told it is super-excellent, and the islet itself a gem of beauty; so I hope it will do you both a world of good. You will let me have word how you get on, will you not, Miss Mayne—a full medical report. Good luck and good health to you, Miss Bennett. Good morning, Morgan, take care of them both, and when you get back to Hampstead just telephone through to me will you?—as to how you leave Miss Bennett."

His last hand-clasp was for Margaret, but there was nothing in that or in his glance for quick-witted Doris to get hold of. If his little sweetheart wanted to keep their engagement to themselves why keep it they should. Much better the maid should imagine his chief care was for the wealthy patient around whom all those plans centred.

So Margaret was able to keep her lovely secret in sacred silence; but, as the train slid out of the station behind the powerful engine, her happy heart sang—"Basil, Basil, Basil!" to the throbbing of the mighty monster's pulses.

That he had contrived to come and see them off had transformed all her world. True, it was in part for poor Lillian's sake, but that look in his eyes—when for a moment he had stood with his back to the keen-eyed Morgan—that clasp of his hand!

No longer was she all alone and unloved in this great wilderness of a world. Come what may, she had him to think for her, to care for her!

With a quick little shake, however, she roused herself from her hidden dream of bliss; for she was there to think for, and take care of, that other girl who had lost her own lover and all that made life dear; while at the same moment Morgan handed her a book and such a box of chocolates as had never come her way before.

Girl-like, she was as delighted with them as with the luxury of travelling first class. But Lillian pushed aside the box offered her, and with the pettishness of a spoiled child, said—

"No, I don't want them. I'm sick of chocolates. They leave one's mouth so horrid after."

"Oh, do they?" giggled Morgan. "Well, I guess my mouth's built differently from yours, Miss Bennett. Mr. Bennett said I was to get a box a piece, but if you don't like them I guess they won't come amiss elsewhere, eh, Miss Mayne?"

"Thank you, but I am quite content with my own box," smiled Margaret, settling down in her corner, and rather wishing good-natured Morgan were going to remain with them on Tamarisk Island.

Under that deliquishing shade it was not easy to tell whether it were sleep or apathy that held the invalid silent during the rest of the two hours' journey.

Twice when they were passing through especially charming tracts of country that sent Margaret's own pulses leaping for joy, she laid a hand on the other girl's to draw her attention. But she might as well have laid it on a mannikin, so slight was the response, and at the second venture Morgan quietly shook her head.

"Better leave her alone when she's like that, Miss Mayne. Now and again she'll pick up a bit, but often as not she'll sit for hours and not getting a word from her. You're a sport, I do think, to be going to look after her all away on a desert island. It's a job I'd not like, not for five pounds a week."

All this in a stage aside which would have made Margaret extremely uncomfortable, only that the subject of it seemed not to heed or hear.

So she gave herself up to the increasing charm of the scenery; the first fresh tang of salt-laden air lovely coast round about, was a soul-satisfying sight as they glided smoothly over the waters.

"It is beautiful, isn't it, Miss Bennett?" she said, squeezing the other girl's hand, certain now that she was awake. "And, look, that must be Tamarisk Island over there! How entirely beautiful!"

"Yes—it is very nice," came the slow answer, with a deep breath, and with satisfaction, Margaret noted that Lillian tilted the shade a little, as if desirous of taking in the scenery around her.

In less than a quarter of an hour they had crossed the harbour and were running along the side of the island to where a wide, steep flight of steps was washed by the tide and led up to a quite imposing house, built to look rather like a castle.

"Welcome home to uncle!" said the lively Morgan, turning to give Lillian and Margaret a hand. "My word, Miss Bennett, you'll soon get right as rain here—the air's gone to my head like anything. No champagne needed! Halloa! I'm not so sure—what price the oldrums in yonder?" she finished, in a lower tone, as half of the two-leaved door was opened by a person whose appearance had the effect of checking even her volatile tongue.

Clad in severe black, with much-starched cap and apron, the apparition looked a cross between an irreproachable housekeeper and a hospital nurse; but it was a something about the dead white of her face, her cold, dark, watchful eyes, that checked the flow of flippancy on Morgan's tongue, though, Cockney-like, she sought to hide it.

"Here we are!" she announced pertly. "Here is Miss Bennett, leading lady; Miss Margaret Mayne, of the chorus and Doris Morgan, the auxiliary force—temporarily in charge, otherwise Mr. Bennett's housemaid, and we're all positively dying for tea."

The personage in black met this flippant introduction with a glance that could only be described as withering, before, addressing Lillian she said—

"If you will come this way, Miss Bennett, I will show you and your companion to your rooms; while perhaps you"—addressing Morgan—"will give Mr. Taylor a hand with some of the baggage," and at her words, as if she had conjured him out of the shadows, appeared one of those remarkable, shabby-looking individuals always attired in other men's "cast-offs," who get so frequently taken into service with his wife in these undomesticated days.

He was the first specimen of his kind that had come Margaret's way and she frankly did not like him. Colourless and washed-out, he would have passed all right had he been trim and clean, but hair, beard, teeth and clothes were all more or less in need of brushing; and the side-way glance of his pale eyes was shifty.

However, here he was, and here she was, and she had bound herself to Lillian Bennett and all her sort that had visited her nostrils for many a weary day, and, finally, the first glimpse of the sea itself.

Oh, it was good—very good—as she feasted her senses with it! Very good, too, to have Morgan taking all the trouble off her shoulders for the time being—those poor thin shoulders, so burdened with the weight that had pressed on them this many a long day.

Very good not to have to think of sorely-needed shillings, and pencilled out, as Morgan magnificently hailed porters and two taxis to convey themselves and their luggage through the quaint, old streets of Harbour Town to the still quieter quay, where a trim little launch waited to take them across the lovely old harbour to Tamarisk Island, yonder.

"Mr. Bennett said I was to do everything in style, so I'm doing it," giggled Morgan in Margaret's ear. "Tophole business I call it, spending other folks' money!" and her gles was so contagious that Margaret laughed with her.

It certainly was a novel and cheering experience to have things done, for one, regardless of expense. While the harbour, with its life-giving air, variety of shipping, and roundings for a full year, unless she were to forfeit that much-needed one hundred pounds.

So with a little shake, she pulled herself together, and stepped bravely along after Morgan and "Mr. Taylor" to the rooms prepared for Lillian and herself, opening out of one another.

CHAPTER IV

Nothing to find fault with there, for they were well and daintily furnished, with windows looking right over the Channel and the harbour mouth, where boats large and small, of every shape and kind, from stately sailing barques down to the lively hydro-racer, went to and fro continually.

Never had Margaret dreamed of sleeping in such a room as the one allotted her, and she had just drawn a deep breath of delight when she turned to find the cheery Morgan as her elbow, with the greeting—

"What ho! A bit of all right, this, eh, Miss Mayne?"

"Oh, Morgan, it is just lovely!" And then, with an irresistible impulse, "Only I wish you were going to stay on here with us."

"What—me!" exclaimed the lively girl. "My stars and garters! Why, I'd go melancholy mad inside a month! No pictures, no buses, no shops, no best boys; and only those two death-head and cross-bones downstairs, not to say anything of—" And she jerked her thumb significantly in the direction of Lillian's room. "However, everybody to their taste, Miss Mayne, as the old lady said when she kissed her cow, and you're one of the quiet, old-fashioned sort, so I daresay it'll be all right for you. Now can I give you a hand with your own or Miss Bennett's unpacking? No? Then I'll run along and see if that stiff-and-starched graven image downstairs is going to give us tea."

JOSHUA

(International Uniform Sunday School Lesson, July 2nd)

GOLDEN TEXT—"Be strong and of good courage; for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest."—Joshua 1:9.

LESSON PASSAGE—Joshua 1:1-9, 23:1, 2, 14.

I will go forth among men
Not malled in scorn
But in the honour of a pure intent.
Great duties are before me and great songs,
And whether crowned or crownless
when I fall,
My matters rest so as God's work is done,
I've learned to prize the quiet light of the
And the applauding thunder at its heels
Which men call Fame.

A CALL TO LEADERSHIP, 1, 2
As the people of Israel were undaunted by the consolidation of tribes into a nation, they had especial need of a strong leader. Virtually their safety and faith depended upon one man. After the death of Moses, the responsibility fell upon Joshua, who had been the helper of Moses, in a sense his "chief of staff." He was the son of Nun, of the tribe of Ephraim. Originally he was called Jehoshua, which was changed by Moses to the more significant form, Jehoshua (Jehovah is salvation). He had been related very closely to the work of Moses—after the manner of Elisha to Elijah—and this experience was an excellent education for the future leader of Israel. In addition he had been consecrated by the laying on of hands.

Different men are needed for different tasks. Joshua could never have done the work of Moses, and Moses could not have done what Joshua did. Moses excelled as a law-giver, while Joshua was brilliant as a military commander and political administrator. Moses was patient and strong in leading the people through the wilderness, but Joshua was strong and resolute to lead them across Jordan and succeed in the conquest of Canaan. Joshua displayed a wonderful combination of strength and sympathy. Even in the midst of long campaigns he preserved his spiritual faith. A priestly heart beat beneath the warrior's armor. "In his unswerving faith and obedience to the call, in the incorruptible righteousness of his administration, in the gentle severity of his rebuke, as well as in his life's work, Jesus (Hebrew 4:8) the son of Nun, is a veritable type of Jesus the Son of God."

THE PROMISED TERRITORY, 3
The promise of the possession of the land of Canaan that had been made to Moses was renewed to Joshua. The boundaries on the South and Southeast were "The wilderness," on the North, Lebanon; on the Northeast, the Euphrates; on the West, the Mediterranean or "Great Sea." These boundaries, though the natural ones geographically, were only attained for a brief period during the reign of David and Solomon. For this territory, Joshua was to wage a long, and in the end successful warfare. Around this land, the bones of Israel were to centre for thousands of years. The promise is still held as valid by ardent Zionists and to this day Jews look upon that narrow strip of territory as the home of their race. It was a small stretch of territory, but it has been more in its influence upon the religious life of mankind.

ASSURANCE OF HELP, 5, 6
In addition to the guarantee of territory, Joshua was given a promise of divine help personally. Consider the difficulty of the task to which Joshua was addressing himself. He was at the head of a host that lacked discipline for war. The Israelites had been shepherds and then they had been slaves. Their traditions were not military. Their hopes had been broken by the prolonged delay in the wilderness. In the land which they were es-

GUARD AGAINST POISON PLANT

Now that picnic time is here and the family seek the beauty spots wherein to eat their lunch, precautions should be taken to guard against that insidious plant, Poison Ivy. One of the best remedies is alcohol, which may be carried in a small bottle, and some cotton swabs.

Dip the cotton into the alcohol and soup up the poisonous oil, throwing each pinch away as soon as used and being careful not to allow the alcohol to dry on the skin. The alcohol should be frequently changed. About fifty applications are usually sufficient for a small patch of poison. The first thirty applications should not be rubbed, merely sopped. After that, it is well to rub with the wet cotton each time. At the last, rub vigorously to bring the dissolved poison out of the pores, and to break any small blisters that already may have formed. The more extensive the poison patch, the more swabs will be needed, and the more treatments with relatively varying degrees of pressure are necessary. Fifty swabs are sufficient for a patch the size of a silver dollar.

saying to capture were strong warriors, and fenced cities. Joshua needed the assurance of God's help, for, judged by military estimates, the situation was unfavorable. His chief strength was God's promise, "I will be with thee: I will not leave thee nor forsake thee."

THE BOOK OF THE LAW, 7-9
God's favor was made conditionally upon Joshua's obedience to the law. Joshua was to set the example of obedience to the people. The law which had been given to Moses was to be his guide. He was not to turn from it to the right hand or to the left. If he did this faithfully, he could be assured of good success wherever he went. The book of the law obviously refers to the "law" described in Deuteronomy 31: 9, as written by Moses and delivered to the Levites and elders. The law was to be one of the factors in welding the tribes into a nation. The security of the nation depended upon their obedience, and Joshua's chief duty was to uphold the law. Studying Joshua's attitude as he undertook his life work, we naturally seek to relate his decisions to our own Christian experience. With both Old and New Testaments as our heritage, we have a much more helpful guide for life. As Joshua trusted for direction to the book of the law, whatever part of the Pentateuch it included, so does every true Christian depend upon the Bible for teaching and guidance. And the promise of the divine presence is our inheritance too.

A FAREWELL ADDRESS, 23: 1, 2, 14
In the opening verses of the book of Joshua, we see the successor of Moses beginning his task of leadership. In the twenty-third chapter, he looked back over the way in which he had come and was convinced that God had kept faith with him. His task was nearly done. The nation had rest from foes. Old and well stricken in years, he called the leaders together and recounted their successes and ascribed all the glory to God who fought for them. They had trusted in God, and had not been put to shame. Their helper in the past was their hope for days to come.

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION
1. Judea was taken from the Canaanites and North America from the Indians. Can you justify such conquests?
2. "The hero of the Book of Joshua is not Joshua but Jehovah." Explain.
3. Palestine has been called "the bridge of the world." Why?
4. Is the Old Testament a help towards the ideal of a warless world?
5. Which did more to make Israel a nation, the law or the prophets?

Following a recent windstorm in Louisiana it was reported that a red rooster was carried 30 miles and deposited safely on a farm in another parish.

POLICE COURT

Vagrant Sent Down For Two Months — Milk Thefts Believed Checked

Pleading guilty to a charge of vagrancy, R. J. Peters, Port Hope formerly of Colborne, was sent down for two months on being arraigned in police court here Saturday morning before Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell.

Peters was taken in the early Saturday morning by Night Constable W. Harvey and placed in the lock-up. With the apprehension of Peters, local police believe that a step has been put to the pilfering of money from milk bottles, especially in the eastern section of the town.

Shortly before six o'clock Saturday morning, Peters was seen on Harcourt street. He told the court that he had slept in the open near the C.P.R. station and merely went for a walk to get warm. "Needless to say, this remark didn't do over so 'hot," C. R. Hoops, proprietor of the Port Hope Dairy and R. Croft, driver, testified that practically daily, money of customers had disappeared.

In sentencing Peters, the Cadi issued some timely advice, admonishing him that a life of crime does not pay and due to the fact that he was still young, he had a good chance to make something of himself.

Gets Suspended Sentence
J. P. Sherrin, local stock salesman, appeared on a count of illegal possession of liquor and was given two months' suspended sentence. The case has been hanging fire for several weeks, following the arrest of Sherrin by Chief Constable Murphy. He was represented by D. H. Cishohn, K.C.

Gets Two Months
Charged with vagrancy Fred Watson, Port Hope, was sentenced to two months imprisonment at Cobourg when he appeared in police court here Monday morning before Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell. He pleaded guilty to the count which was preferred by Chief Constable Thomas Murphy.

It is alleged that the accused is a companion of R. J. Peters who was given a similar term here Saturday. Watson was arrested Sunday afternoon on Shuter street and attempted to escape through the long grass on the arrival of the police.

A crowd always thinks with its sympathy, never with its reason.—W. R. Alger.

CAMPAIN OF ROAD SAFETY

Department Of Highways Launches Aggressive Campaign

Again the Minister of Highways, the Hon. Leopold Macaulay, through the Motor Vehicles Branch is inaugurating an aggressive, widespread publicity campaign in an effort to stem the tide of disaster on the streets and highways of the province.

Despite an educational program which the Highways Department have carried out over a period of years, deaths and injuries caused by motor vehicle traffic are alarmingly, unnecessarily high.

The Highways Department this year is utilizing daily and weekly newspapers, the trade press, school teachers, the radio—every available means—to improve conditions. This publication bespeaks the thoughtful co-operation of every motorist and every pedestrian in the interests of safety.

DEFECTIVE EYES SAP ENERGY

Did you ever hear of eye energy? There is such a thing. You do not go away and leave the lights on in your house because it would be an expensive waste of energy. But you do waste your eye energy.

How? Defective eyes usually require a constant strain on certain muscles while reading or doing close work. This strain uses up energy which should be put to other purposes. To save this energy the defect must be corrected. The optometrist with his precise equipment can do this accurately.

In keeping with the times, the cost of glasses is considerably less, with the same high standard of examination and service.
