'ROYAL SCOT' IN PORT HOPE

Crack Old Country Train Passed Through Port Hope Wednesday Morning

The "ROYAL SCOT", crack Old Country train, en route to the World's Fair at Chicago, passed through Port Hope on the Canadian Pacific Railway at 2.50 o'clock Wednesday morning. The train was due to arrive at 2.27 a.m.

Between 150-200 people were on hand to greet the arrival of the train which slowed down while passing the local depot. The shrill shriek of the whistle struck a happy note in the hearts of the numerous Old Country people amongst the crowd.

From Montreal to Chicago, the Royal Scot will traverse the rails of the Canadian Pacific Railway, with stops en route at Toronto, Hamilton and other points. On her return journey she will travel over the lines of the Canadian National Railways with similar stops for public inspection at various towns and cities. Details of the itineraries of this famous train en route to and from Chicago will shortly be announced.

"EYES OF LOVE" IS A WINNER

The Stamp Of Approval Is Placed On Y.P.S. Play By First Nighters

Again the talent of our Port Hope Young People scored when the United Church Y.P.S. came out with their latest production, "Eyes of Love" which won the audience on the first night when presented in the U.C. S.S. Hall before a well filled auditorium Tuesday evening.

In the first place "Eyes of Love" is a little play which was beautifully interpreted by a cast of talented players under the understanding and capable direction of the pastor, Rev. Duncan McTavish who seems to have a special gift to see character and bring it out.

Agnes Mann, as Carolina, the coloured servant took her part to perfection.

Helen White, as Gailia, an adopted daughter, had the role of the leading lady which she did most capably.

Ethel Kerman and Bev. Hancock had the characters no one is keen to take, for they were the deep dyed villains. We must say they did exceptionally well to play parts so different to their natures.

Judge and Mrs. Barry, the foster parents of Gailia, was played by A. C. Crowhurst and Netta Brownlee, excellently.

Elsie Blow, as Lora, the housemaid, a vivacious girl with a pert manner, was just made for the part.

Charles Snelgrove, the butler, had a wonderful disguise and had what you might call a three-fold part, the butler, detective and lover to Lora who'd lead any man along—and how.

Royal Manton, the successful suitor for Gailia's hand and rival of Burt Wade (Bev. Hancock) was well played by Stanley Morrison.

Last but not least was Jim Rankin, played by George Lewis, and we can't tell you much about him and his part for it would spoil the story for to-night as he is really the "king-pin" of the plot.

Between acts the audience had two treats when Gillard Darling sang "Out of the Dusk" and "Those endearing young Charms" and Maizie Bye sang "Glorinda". Mrs. W. Williamson playing the accompaniments.

Miss Helen Harcourt played the music for the third act.

The missionary fund was helped considerably by the sale of candy.

The young people and Mr. McTavish are to be highly complimented on the splendid presentation of this attractive comedy-drama and it is to be hoped their efforts will be rewarded by another full house to-night.

LIGHTNING BOLT KILLS CHILDREN

Double Fatality Near Warkworth—Three Children Escape

Lightning snuffed out the lives of two 7-year-old children Tuesday afternoon as they were walking home from school with three companions along a country road two and a half miles from Warkworth.

The dead are Howard Somerville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Somerville of Hilton, and Ellen Grills, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Akel Grills of the same village. The survivors are Russell and Rita Somerville, brother and sister of Howard, and Elmer Grills, young brother of Ellen. The tragedy happened about 3.15 on the gravel road near the point where the Somerville and Grills farms adjoin. The children were on their way home from school in Section No. 11, Brighton Township, apparently little heedful of the lightning and rain storm, which had begun a few minutes previously. According to Roy Morrow, who lives near there, the storm was by no means violent, until suddenly there was a crash and a flash of lightning.

Three of the children, Howard, Ellen and Elmer, were knocked over. Elmer soon recovered, and with Russell and Rita, ran to the nearest farm for aid, but his sister and the Somerville boy were killed instantly by the bolt. Dr. Dure, Crozier, of Brighton, has ordered an inquest.

The scene of the accident was a knoll on the road. The surrounding countryside is flat, and there are no trees near the road. Mr. Morrow recalled that a young man had been killed under similar circumstances within half a mile of the spot some years ago. The storm lasted only about twenty minutes.

GUN POSSESSION BRINGS $25 FINE

Ralph Harniss, Hope Twp., Found Guilty In Cobourg Court

When Provincial Constable W. J. Carey, of Cobourg, undertook to search a car last Sunday, it was an unlucky incident for Ralph Harniss, of Hope Township. Harniss was found in possession of a wicked-looking, snub-nosed .38 revolver. Appearing before Magistrate J. H. Davidson, at Cobourg, he was fined $25 and costs.

"I saw a suspected bootlegger getting into a car, and Constable Lewis Denton and myself searched the car and the occupants. We found this revolver on Ralph Harniss," stated Constable Carey.

"Where did you get this gun?" asked the Cadi.

Harniss replied he had found it. "So you found it. There certainly are a lot of lucky people in the world," was the comment of Magistrate Davidson in finding him guilty.

21 FATALITIES DURING MARCH

444 Injured In Accidents During Month, Statistics Show

There were 21 deaths in Ontario during March resulting from highway accidents, or 8 less than in the same month of 1932, statistics supplied by the Motor Vehicles Branch of the Provincial Department of Highways reveal. While the fatalities are lower than a year ago, the number of accidents increased in the month by 7.4 per cent., to a total of 551. There were 444 persons injured in the accidents, and a total property damage loss of $49,605 resulted.

In the death list of 21 are included 12 pedestrians, 7 passengers and 2 bicyclists. For the first time on record more persons were killed in non-collision accidents than in any other type.

William Yeomans, of Toronto, former local shoe repairer, was in town yesterday renewing acquaintances.

WM. E. FINLAY TAKEN BY DEATH

Funeral Was Held From Late Residence On Wednesday Afternoon

After a lengthy illness, William E. Finlay, a lifelong and highly respected resident of Port Hope, passed quietly away at the family residence Walton street on Monday night. For the past four years, the late Mr. Finlay had been suffering from angina pectoris and at times during his illness, he was able to be up and about. However, he took a serious turn Monday and died at 5.45 o'clock.

Deceased was born in the Township of Haldimand and after gaining his education entered the employ of the Canadian National Railway. For twenty-five years he served in the baggage department at the local depot where he was a faithful employee. He was widely known and highly respected and his many friends regret his demise.

In religion, he was a member of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church and was a member of Ontario Lodge A.F. & A.M., No. 26, Port Hope, being Master in 1925.

Left to mourn his passing are his wife, whose maiden name was Mary Dodd, and whom he married thirty-five years ago, and one sister, Mrs. Catherine Thompson, Port Hope.

COLBORNE WINS AGAINST APPEAL

Certain Products Going To Britain Boosted During March

F. A. Dallyn and Co. and F. A. Dallyn, Toronto engineers, were unsuccessful in an appeal to the Ontario Court of Appeal against the judgment of Mr. Justice Sedgewick, pronounced on December 2, 1932, directing them to pay $1,741.16 to the village of Colborne.

The sum represented the difference between $1,008.97 awarded to the plaintiffs in the case, for service as consulting engineers in connection with the installation of a water system in the village, and $2,850 awarded to the municipal corporation upon a counter-claim for alleged negligence on the part of the engineers and failure to comply with the terms of an agreement between the parties. The Court of Appeal, by a judgment pronounced at Osgoode Hall, dismissed the engineers' appeal with costs.

FRIDAY SESSION OF RELIEF BOARD

Rev. T. E. Meldrum Raises Question Of Admitting All Clergy To Board

At the regular weekly session of the Port Hope Relief Board at the Town Hall here Friday afternoon, Rev. T. E. Meldrum, pastor of the Port Hope Baptist Church, raised the question of admitting as members of the board all the local clergy. Mr. Meldrum pointed out the advantage of this procedure in order to centralize relief and to prevent overlapping. The subject was not discussed at any length due to the absence of the regular chairman. At a recent meeting, Rev. Meldrum was granted membership on the board.

H. Fulford occupied the chair and other members present included Mrs. J. F. Thompson, Mrs. M. S. Hawkins, A. J. Chesher, secretary; Rev. T. E. Meldrum, J. G. Jackson, F. W. Galbraith and D. C. White. Routine business was dealt with and the usual number of applicants appeared before the board for aid.

I.O.O.F. AT COBOURG

Cobourg Lodge No. 136 Independent Order of Oddfellows, will attend Divine service on Sunday morning next, at St. Peter's Church. It is very desirable that a large number of Oddfellows from Port Hope join in the service. Cars will be at the lodgeroom at 10 o'clock to convey any who wish to attend the service.

CORRESPONDENCE TO THE EDITOR

What's In A Name? Parcel Is Addressed To "Campbulcroft" Recently

The Guide does not hold itself responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents and invites its readers to use this column to discuss public questions and matters of general interest.

No unsigned letters or correspondence of libelous or personal nature will be considered.

April 21, 1933

To the Editor of The Guide.

Dear Sir:— I thought I would drop you a line to let you know that we are still thinking it will not be long until we get our mail direct from Port Hope, through Perrytown, to the village arriving here before dinner instead of the afternoon or sometimes not at all.

No one cares now what they call the station because a station that has no clock or even a telephone, isn't in it, to compete against trucks, when every truck man has a watch and a telephone, and you know just when he will be at your place.

I saw a box which came to the station the other day addressed to Campbulcroft and if the name Garden Hill had not been put on it also, it is hard to tell where the parcel would have gone.

It is time we got rid of the double-barrelled blunderbus name. No wonder people balk on buying property with such a Post Office name.

W. H. HAMMILL.

CANADIAN CLUB MEETING FRIDAY

Campbell McInnes To Present Program On Folk Song And Songs Of British People

Mr. J. Campbell McInnes will be the guest of the Woman's Canadian Club of Port Hope, Friday evening, May 5th, and will present a program on "Folk Song and traditional songs of the British Peoples."

Mr. McInnes needs no introduction to Canadian audiences. He was well known as one of the leading singers in England previous to the war, after which he came to Canada. He is generally recognized, not only as having a splendid voice but as also possessing a profound knowledge of folk songs and their music.

It is acknowledged that music in Hart House probably owes more to Mr. McInnes than to any other one person. It was he who in the early days stood behind the Sunday evening concerts and it is his enthusiasm and skill which have made the "Fingert" of real interest and genuine value.

Mr. McInnes addressed the Woman's Canadian Club of Belleville some time ago. The members were most enthusiastic and felt that they had enjoyed a very real treat.

PORT HOPE BRIDE Mrs. Stanley R. Newton, who was married at Cobourg last week, was formerly Edna Mary May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. May, Port Hope. Her husband, a Cobourg man, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Newton.

COUNCIL ADJOURNS ACCOUNTS UNPAID

Meeting Breaks Up In Disorder After Prolonged Argument

For the first time in the history of town council, for at least ten years back, Cobourg Town Council adjourned without the members waiting to pass the accounts on Monday night. Some of the guardians of municipal affairs, gave up in disgust at the turn of events transpiring at the council meeting. Councillor W. Maher threw up his hands and moved that council adjourn, in the midst of argument of Councillor Frank Lapp in connection with the right, or otherwise, of a councillor in regard to a committee of which he was not a member. Deputy Reeve Maurice Booth seconded the motion and most of the members stamped out of the chamber. The mayor, the reeve and Councillor Lapp were left regarding one another with amazement at the sudden move.

Monday night's stormy session was the sequel to an argument between Councillor Lapp and Councillor Archie Russell at a previous council meeting at which time Councillor Lapp mentioned the fact that Councillor Russell had refused him the right to look over the printing tenders, even though they had been opened in Council. Councillor Lapp at that time maintained he had a perfect right to see the tenders. Councillor Russell had contended that as the tenders had been left in the hands of his committee Councillor Lapp was not entitled to see them.

Referring to the foregoing situation, Mayor Jack Delanty announced that all tenders opened in council are the property of councillors.

"I am glad to hear that," commented Councillor Lapp, "because it shows that I was justified in seeing one tender which Councillor Russell had refused to show."

Mayor Delanty added that it was in order for any member of the council to sit in any committee, of which he was not a member, although he could not vote or take any part in the discussion.

"Is this a case of re-hashing and washing the dirty linen of something that happened in council some time ago? Are you going to make a special occasion of something which has happened in the past?" demanded Councillor Maher.

The mayor declared that he had asked Councillor Russell, chairman of the fire, water and light committee, if he might be present when the tenders in question were opened, and had been denied that privilege.

Deputy Reeve Maurice Booth asserted that he did not like the attitude of the mayor.

"You were present when the tenders were read and you took notes when they were opened in council. We, as a committee, stake our reputations on the fact that the lowest and best tender gets it. Your attitude is an unfavourable reflection on this committee," stated the deputy reeve.

At this point chaos entered into the general theme of things, culminating in Councillor Maher protesting that the meeting could not carry on under such conditions and moved an adjournment. It was quickly seconded and the majority of the members walked out indignantly.

WASHING COST $23.50

A washing which cost $23.50, proved a washout for a fisherman in Peterboro Court.

District Game Warden Peter Stevens saw a chap who looked suspicious near Fowlers' Corners. He was carrying a grip and making fair time. When questioned as to directions and distances he was asked also what he had in the grip. He promptly replied, "Clothes to be washed," but the Warden, being suspicious reached for the grip which had been put down during the conversation. The owner made a movement to prevent him, but the prospect of a body slam made him step back. When the grip was opened a fine specimen of the finny tribe, all ready for the pan was found to be its only contents. The fish were confiscated and the man paid $23.50 for his illegal fishing.

Daylight Saving Goes Into Effect Here May 20th

Town Council Adopts Fast Time for Port Hope from May 20th until September 30th—$500.00 Grant made to Hospital—Moose Deputation wait on Council

Daylight Saving will be observed in Port Hope from midnight on May 20 to midnight on September 30, it was decided at the regular meeting of Council on Monday night. The resolution in this connection was moved by Deputy Reeve Edmunds, seconded by Reeve Elliott and passed unanimously. The meeting was quiet and uneventful, with only a few questions beyond routine matters, being discussed. Mayor W. J. Crowhurst presided.

A grant of $500 was made to the local hospital in order that the institution might receive a similar grant from the Counties Council. At the January session of the Counties Council a resolution was passed to the effect that only municipalities who gave a grant to their hospital of at least $500 would be eligible for a County grant of $500. Last year the local council made no grant to the hospital.

A court of revision to hear appeals against the 1933 assessment will be held at the Town Hall on Thursday evening, May 25 at 7.30 p.m., with Mayor Crowhurst, Reeve Elliott, Deputy Reeve Edmunds and Councillors Bennett and Greenaway presiding.

The local Moose Lodge sent a deputation to interview Council with reference to arrangements for the Ontario Moose Convention to be held in Port Hope on August 4, 5, 6, 7, and to make a number of requests with regard to the use of town buildings, parks, streets, etc., for various parades and entertainments. The matter was referred to the whole Council and definite action will be taken at the next meeting.

It was decided to extend a civic welcome to Governor General Bessborough on the occasion of his visit to Port Hope on May 8, when his Excellency will be present at Trinity College School for the annual inspection of cadets. The Mayor and Council will meet the Governor General at the station and an address of welcome will be read.

Reginald Foote, Church Street, complained that his property was being damaged by diverted surface water. Referred to Street and Bridge Committee. The request of John Russell who asked that he be provided with a roadway from his property on "Monkey Mountain," was also referred to this committee.

By resolution sponsored by Deputy Reeve Edmunds and Reeve Elliott, the report of the government relief inspector of relief methods in Port Hope, will be included in the minutes of Council.

Relief Account The amount of $400 was granted to meet accounts for current relief disbursements.

Conference With Premier Mayor Crowhurst reported that the committee of Mayors appointed at a recent meeting in Hamilton waited on Premier Henry in Toronto on Friday last with regard to relief matters but little of a very definite nature was accomplished. The clerk was authorized to write the premier for a fuller explanation of the method of handling indigent hospital patients as a charge against direct relief.

IS VICTIM OF PECULIAR MISHAP

Flipping Knife In Air, Oshawa Man Has Appendix Pierced

Ralph Gardener, 393 Centre street Oshawa, was the victim of a serious and unusual accident. Employed at H. F. Ashbury's butcher store, Gardener was at the rear of the store and by himself at the time.

He was handling a large butcher knife, and gave it a flip in the air, and, in some unaccountable manner, the knife pierced his apron and clothes and entered his body at the right side. Mr. Ashbury was called from the front of the store and found Gardener standing up.

The injured man took the accident quite calmly, and although bleeding profusely, stated that he was not badly hurt. His employer examined the injury and then insisted that he see a doctor and Gardener wished to go alone. Mr. Ashbury, however, accompanied Gardener in a car to the doctor's office. On arrival there the injured man collapsed. He was rushed to the hospital and attended by Dr. C. E. Wilson. It was found that the blade had pierced the appendix and also the upper bowel.

An operation was performed and Gardener's condition was reported to be still critical, but with hope held for his recovery. The latest report from the Oshawa Hospital was that the victim was resting quietly and his condition was just fair.

HEARD ON THE STREET

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 26

Who'd have thought we'd have this fall of the beautiful?

'Twas a bit unexpected we'd have a snowstorm now with flowers bursting into bloom.

Several motorists looked as if they had come through quite a winter, as they passed through here about noon to-day.

There was a big meeting of the Durham Music Festival Committee in Newcastle last night when arrangements were completed for the Festival on May 17, 18 and 19 in Port Hope United Church.

Upwards of forty members of St. Paul's Young Peoples Society were entertained to a social program Tuesday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Gibson, Augusta Street.

Under the auspices of the Town Relief Clothing Committee of the I.O.D.E. a rummage sale was conducted at the Town Hall yesterday afternoon.

Chicken thieves are again active in the west end. Thieves raided the roosts of E. Angrove and removed four birds.

Purchasing money orders in favour of Ontario and Quebec newspapers for the sum of 30 cents and, by means of chemicals, erasing all writing and making them out for an even $5, an unknown person is victimizing individuals and stores in several Ontario cities.

A fisherman was looking for a frog for bait and spied a snake which had just caught a frog. He tried unsuccessfully by prodding and other means to make the snake release its prey; finally, he pulled out a flask and poured a little liquor into the snake's mouth.

Towns and cities in the Niagara Peninsula will adopt Daylight Saving Time more uniformly this spring than in previous years. On Monday morning residents of Port Colborne, Humberstone, Welland, St. Catharines, Niagara Falls, Ontario, and Niagara Falls, N.Y., will be operating on "summer time."

Bowmanville, Oshawa and Toronto will turn the clocks ahead this weekend. It isn't known yet whether Port Hope will fall in line or be lagging along behind.

Henry Hogan, Sandwich, may not drive an auto for a year unless his mother is with him. A police magistrate imposed this rule when Hogan was convicted of reckless driving.

Curiosity "No, sir," said the clerk, "I can't give you a room. The best I can do for you is to give you a half of a private dining room. There's a screen across it, and a lady has the other half, but I reckon she won't bother you."

Thirty minutes later he ran into the lobby, wild-eyed and pale. "Hey," he yelled to the clerk, "that woman is dead!"

THURSDAY, APRIL 27. A cool and frosty morning! Great was the disappointment of flower lovers who came out to find the promising buds on the ground this morning.

Golden daffodils and delicately tinted hepaticas blooming in local gardens had their petals cruelly nipped yesterday by a penetrating chill, accompanied by snow squalls.

Those who are again discouraging the efforts of our citizens to beautify Port Hope by stealing flowers, plants and bulbs should be punished so that a stop would be put to this sort of thing.

It might be a good idea to publish the names of any seen picking other people's flowers so that everyone might know who is so mean and small to stoop to such an action.

George Walker of Colborne will celebrate his 96th birthday on Sunday next. He is active and enjoys life. He has been a strict prohibitionist all his life.

Horace Lapp, former organist of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church was pianist and organist when a program was presented at 10.15 o'clock last night over Radio Station CFRB, Toronto. It marked the official inauguration of the station's new antennae system.

A new five-cent postage stamp will be issued on May 18, says an announcement from the Post Office Department. This will be a "pictorial stamp," but the nature of the design was not stated.

A. G. Sinclair of McMaster University, Hamilton, has accepted a unanimous call of the Cobourg Baptist Church and will assume the pastorate on May 14.

Richard—"That new girl doesn't seem to be very intelligent." Robert—"No, she didn't pay any attention to me, either."

Winter coats, discarded weeks ago, are now popular again in town as unseasonable weather prevails.

Rotarians of the district gathered with their wives and lady friends for a Ladies' Night in Cobourg last evening. It proved a big success.

Over miles of sodden country roads, William Rosebush was brought from his little home in the Chandos woods to stand trial at Peterboro for illegal possession of mash and spirits.

"I must plead not guilty," he told Magistrate A. O. Langley. "What is your religion?" the Magistrate asked kindly. "Destitute," replied the prisoner. The Magistrate looked puzzled. "Destitute," he repeated, "what do you mean?"

Falling from the lift bridge while taking a short-cut home to dinner, 10-year-old Betty Johnson was drowned in the Trent Canal at Campbellford Thursday afternoon. The body was recovered by Nelson Lloyd after having been in the water three hours. The little girl was with her sister Molly and two small boys, who were too young to call for help, but rushed home to tell their parents.

Looks as if the "Silver Dollar" might come into its own again.

What will they do when the United States collects all the gold and silver? Will they then gather in all the world's coppers?

Taking up their annual duty in Belleville four members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police arrived in preparation for the receiving of the district Dominion Income tax.

Who Won? "I've just been having a tussle with the dentist." "Which got the best of it?" "It ended in a draw."

At a meeting of the congregation of First United Church, Lindsay, it was decided to change the name to Cambridge street United Church.

SALT AND SWEET CREAM When cows have free access to salt they will keep in better health, will give more milk, and the cream from this milk will have a better flavour than cream from cows that do not get any salt at all, or receive it only at long intervals. Dairy Branch, Ottawa.

AID IS SOUGHT FOR RED CROSS

Citizens Asked To Be Generous In Response To Appeal

The year 1833 presents the greatest challenge to Red Cross since war days. Why? Because the whole fabric of life for thousands of Ontario people has been disrupted by present economic conditions that distress and destitution, with attendant loss of morale, have reached a stage unparalleled in this country.

Where the Red Cross had the privilege of acting as a kindly friend and neighbor to literally tens of thousands of unemployed men and their families last year by providing housing, food, clothing, and many other necessities, probably its greatest service was the method of distribution, namely, material help in one hand and kindly understanding in the other. The result was sustained courage and minimum loss of self respect to those assisted.

The present season sees the Red Cross relief and emergency committee well organized under the leadership of outstanding, public-spirited men and women. These committees are energetically striving to make the resources at their command develop a maximum amount of relief in every centre where Red Cross operates.

You, perhaps are unable to give personal help at this time—but are able to assist financially. Your generous response to this Red Cross appeal which is being launched will enable Red Cross on your behalf to lend a helping hand to thousands of needy people, who are in desperate circumstances, many of them ex-service men.

Red Cross stands for service to disabled soldiers, who have spent many weary years in the military hospitals of this province, of the 23 Red Cross Outpost Hospitals, which are saving the lives and bringing the only available nursing and hospital care to some 50,000 of our Ontario settlers; of Red Cross crippled children's work, by which little ones are brought from the far corners of the province to the best hospitals for expert treatment; of Junior Red Cross, the greatest child health organization in the world to-day and of the many other Red Cross services for the relief of suffering and promotion of health.

In the name of the Red Cross and all it stands for, your extra-generosity is bespoken in this exceedingly difficult year.

DAYLIGHT SAVING

Idea of Fast Time Originated In 1780

With reference to a despatch from London in which credit for originating the idea of daylight saving is claimed for William Willett in 1907, the idea actually originated with Benjamin Franklin, says Joseph Stein in the New York Times.

In 1780, in a letter written to the Journal de Paris, during his French mission, Benjamin Franklin pointed out that by using sunlight instead of candle-light between March 20 and Sept. 20 inhabitants of Paris could save 96,750,000 livres tounois annually, figured at the price of 30 sols (sols) the pound of wax and tallow. He also remarks, somewhat sarcastically, that, contrary to common knowledge, "the sun gives light as soon as he rises."

The whole letter is reprinted on pages 309-316 of Harper's Literary Museum of Early American Writing.

FORMER PORT HOPER DIES IN TORONTO

After a brief illness, George Martell Miller died Monday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. E. L. Sexsmith, 37 Sheldrake Boulevard, Toronto. He was in his seventy-ninth year and was taken ill recently while returning from Florida. Mr. Miller was an architect of note, having practiced his profession in Toronto since 1885. Buildings in that city which he designed include the Domestic Science Building, University of Toronto, Massey Hall, the Toronto General Trusts Building and the Deaconesses' Home. He also designed the original Ridley College, St. Catharines, the Ontario Ladies' College and the House of Industry at Whitby, and the Canadian General Electric Building, Peterboro. Mr. Miller, who was born at Port Hope, was a member of Eglinton United Church, and a life member of St. John's Lodge, A.F. & A.M. Surviving are his widow one son, William J., two daughters, one grandchild and one brother.

Reverend Gentleman Contributes To Traffic Court Coffers

The law is a non-respector of persons. In traffic court here to-day, Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell fined Rev. F. O. Ware, Picton, $10.00 and costs for stepping on the gas. The count was preferred by Provincial Constable A. E. Hornick.

Walter Shackleton, Peterboro, was assessed $5.00 and costs for speeding while Smith Transport, Toronto, donated $15.00 and costs on a charge of overbidding.

When a mother detects from the writhings and fretting of a child that worms are troubling it, she can procure no better remedy than Miller's Worm Powders, which are guaranteed to totally expel worms from the system. They may cause vomiting, but this need cause no anxiety, because it is but a manifestation of their thorough work. No worms can long exist where these powders are used.

Easter Examinations

The examination results for Form 4 at the Port Hope High School were as follows:—

Table with columns: Student Name, Anc. History, English Lit., English Comp., Latin Auth., Latin Comp., French Auth., French Comp., Spanish Auth., Spanish Comp., Physics, Geometry, Total, % days absent.

HOSPITAL GRANTS

At the January session of the United Counties Council a stipulation was included in the former system of making grants to county hospitals which makes it compulsory for the municipality in which the hospital is located to grant at least $500 in order that the institution may receive a similar grant from the County Council. The grants from the Counties will be made at the June session of Council and only those municipalities submitting a certificate showing that their local council has given them a grant of at least $500 will receive the $500 County grant.

Last year Port Hope Town Council made no grant to the hospital but as in the past continued to pay for indigent patients on the regular 50-50 basis with the Counties. In 1930 and 1931 Port Hope granted $600 to the hospital and also paid for indigents.

The Port Hope Hospital is an institution of which citizens are justifiably proud. It is efficient and economically administered and up to the present time has operated without a deficit.

This position, however, has been made possible only through grants and charitable contributions from wealthy supporters. In these times of economic stringency, the hospital cannot hope to receive the same amounts from individuals as in the past and the further curtailment of the former grant from the Town Council will serve to make the financial condition of the hospital less strong.

The hospital is doing a fine work and is recognized as one of the best for its size in the province. The citizens as a whole are behind the hospital and no doubt would strongly favour the $500 grant from the Town Council that would make the hospital eligible for a grant of the same amount from the Counties.

HEARD ON THE STREET

SATURDAY, APRIL 29.

Have you got your tackle ready?

There are a lot of our business men who will be late for work next week not because they slept in but because they stuck around the river bed a little longer.

Don't come home with just a fish story for breakfast Monday morning—it won't look so hot in a frying pan!

If the fish in the streams are like our corner friend the other day when the Scot told him a wee yarn, there'll be plenty of 'em drawn ashore, for they'll take hook, line and sinker.

Port Hope, refuses to be the early bird by staying on Standard Time. Oh, well, if we'd got a worm, a fish would have come along and grabbed it anyway.

Under the auspices of the Junior Guild of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, a bean supper was held last night.

In these days of depression everyone is familiar with all types of collectors, but E. B. Lingard, of Lingard Bros., Taxis, has discovered a new one—a collector of transportation tokens. Mr. Lingard is in receipt of a request from Walter Underwood of Sacramento, California, who asks to be supplied with a sample of the metal tokens used in the days of horse drawn buses in Port Hope. The bus which Mr. Lingard operated at that time was known as the "City Bus Line", with round trip fares from the station to downtown for twenty-five cents.

At 8:40 o'clock this morning, the local fire brigade received a run to a fire which broke out in a tow truck, owned by Messrs. Stephenson and Lent. The truck received a call to Hope Street, north of the Department of Highway's office to pull an automobile from the ditch. Evidently a short circuit occurred and fire broke out. The firemen responded rapidly but the blaze had been extinguished by water from a nearby well.

Effective May 1st, all bank cheques must bear a 3 cent stamp and all cheques over $100.00 must carry six cents. Cream cheques, however, are exempt from the ruling.

A customer who buys but doesn't pay is a liability rather than an asset.

"How like his father he is." "It's the cold weather," explained the baby's mother; "usually he looks quite cheerful."

MONDAY, MAY 1.

Did you catch any?

It is quite apparent that many of our fishermen didn't know just where to cast.

We'll believe you caught 'em but rally a sample would be more convincing.

Harry says that you have got to know where they are and provide the right bait and then with a little patience you may hope to hook 'em.

Now a good fish story is in season. Have you one?

Daylight Saving changes fooled a lot of people to-day who missed favourite programs because they forgot most broadcasting stations moved their clocks ahead.

When you have an "ad" be sure it is the kind that will draw rather than drive business.

If anything is worth while it is worth your attention and work. That is what gives it value.

Some people who inherited their religion and their politics are beginning to discover that their inheritances won't provide for them without their active interest.

You wanted to know why the Bell Telephone flag flew on Saturday. Well, April 29 marked the fifty-third anniversary of the incorporation of the company. Here's wishing them many more years of service to the public.

The winners of the three baskets of groceries at the local A. & P. store on Saturday were, Mrs. O. Douglas, Catherine Street, Mrs. G. McCall, Sullivan Street, and R. Woodward, Suffering severe head injuries, eight-year-old Lois Rogers of Norwood was admitted to Nicholls Hospital at Peterboro late Saturday afternoon, after being struck down by an automobile. Playing in front of her parents' home, the child is said to have stepped from behind a truck into the pathway of a car driven by Dr. J. H. Hess of Hastings. Her condition is serious.

A farm house and barn, lately occupied by Peter Nyvick and family, and owned by an Oshawa man, was burned to the ground at Hampton. Little information as to the origin of the fire is available, as it was not noticed until both house and barn had practically burned to the ground. It was too late to call the Bowmanville fire department, and the fire was left to burn itself out. No one occupied the house, and no cattle were in the barn. Loss is estimated at $3,000.

Gordon Gillis, Liberty Street, Bowmanville, was fined $15 and costs by Magistrate R. M. Cotton, when he appeared on a charge of reckless driving, preferred by Traffic Officer Ed. Purvis, of Bowmanville. Evidence was given that Gillis was driving all over the highway and a menace to the safety of other cars. Gillis was fined an additional $10 and costs for operating a motor vehicle without a driver's permit.

Isaac Turner, Toronto, was fined $25.00 and costs by Magistrate Purdy at Port Perry on Saturday on a charge of buying furs without the necessary license. The count was preferred by Provincial Game and Fishery Officers McNaughton, of Parry Sound, Revell of Toronto and Hills of Port Hope.

Check and double check your revenue stamps for cheques as all cheques now require stamps, 3c to $100, over that amount 6c.

Her Fear

Irate Passenger—"Madam, what do you mean by letting your child snatch off my wig?"

Mother (with a sigh of relief)—"Oh, it's a wig, it is? I was afeared for a minute that he'd scalpt ye alive."

TUESDAY, MAY 2.

Did you get wet?

Boy, oh boy! That rain sure came down in the night and there were many caught out without umbrellas or raincoats.

Miss Regina van der Hoorn, of Cavan, has won a general proficiency prize of $10.00 according to the awards announced yesterday by Guelph O.A.C.

The trout season opened yesterday and from all accounts most of the light rod and line men were out bright and early to their favourite haunts. Several good catches were reported.

Debaters from Ebenezer and Plainville met in Welcome United Church to discuss the resolution that "the Ontario Legislature should be abolished in favour of a Board of Control consisting of 5 members." The former team defending the affirmative side was awarded the decision. The church was filled with supporters who came with the teams and young people from Bowmanville and Port Hope.

A new ferry service between Kingston and Cape Vincent, N.Y., was discontinued this year by the Dominion Transportation Company of Owen Sound, if suitable docking facilities in Kingston can be procured. The Owen Sound Company have a boat not utilized in a regular schedule and wish to place it on the Kingston-Cape Vincent run, which was discontinued this year by the steamer Waubic, which is now making the run to Clayton, N.Y. The service has been in operation for more than sixty years.

President Varcoe, Secretary Black and seven other directors of the Lindsay Central Exhibition, who had voluntarily resigned, were unanimously reinstated at a general emergency meeting held Monday afternoon. This action was taken following a special audit made by the Government of the society books for 1930, 1931 and 1932. The audit tallied to a cent with the audit made from year to year by the society auditors.

Little Pam: Oh, just put "Your obedient husband."

OBITUARY

WILLIAM HENRY GOHEEN

On Thursday evening, April 27th, there passed away at his home in Hamilton Township, one of its well known residents. Apart from two years spent in teaching, the late Mr. Goheen lived his entire life on the farm that had been taken up, cleared and passed down by his United Empire Loyalist ancestors.

The deceased, who had just passed his eighty-second birthday, had been in failing health for the past two years when a brief illness set in. Converted as a young man in the Bethel Grove Methodist Church, he was a firm believer in the finished work of Calvary and leaned on his Saviour for daily guidance.

The funeral took place on Saturday afternoon from the residence. The officiating minister, Rev. T. E. Meldrum of Port Hope Baptist Church, gave a very fitting message from Mr. Goheen's favourite scripture, the tenth chapter of John's Gospel. The pall-bearers were cousins of the deceased, Messrs. Geo. Goheen, of Brighton, Irvin Goheen, of Colborne, William Goheen, of Pontypool, Henry Goheen, of Quays, John Goheen, of Cambourne, and Charles Goheen, of Port Hope.

He leaves his wife, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Beggs, three daughters and two sons, Ruby, Principal of the Niagara Business College, Sandie, teaching in Niagara Falls, Sadie and Winfred at home, and Raymond, Principal of the Waterford High School. Four grandsons, Allan, Ross, Vernon and Winston of Waterford also remain.

10 P.C. OF ALBERTA SEEDING COMPLETED

Approximately ten per cent of seeding has been completed to date in Alberta compared with the six-year average of 43.33 per cent, grain men say at Calgary. Snow and rain has delayed farmers getting on to the land, although quickening of seeding has been noted in the past few days.

OLDEST CHURCH

The oldest Christian edifice in the Americas is to be found at San German, in Puerto Rico, a United States insular protectorate in the Caribbean Sea, on the route of Canadian National "vagabond cruise" freighters from Halifax and Montreal.

Puerto Rico dates back to Columbus and was conquered and governed (in the 16th Century) by the famous Ponce de Leon, who sought the fabled Fountain of Youth for the Queen of Spain.

HERE IS A REAL ONE HORSE TOWN

There is at least one real one-horse town in Canada. Aklavik, within the Arctic Circle, boasts of one lone horse, according to the Tourist and Convention Bureau of the Canadian National Railways. Drinking water, which is very pure, is obtained from ice cut in October and packed until March. Water for other purposes is obtained by melting snow. Caribou meat and fish are the staple foods, along with frozen fish in the winter. When bread is made, it is put out to freeze and brought in as required. When thawed it is claimed to be the same as fresh bread. Wood is the principal fuel. During January and February the thermometer goes down to 55 degrees below zero. Numbers of tourists visit Aklavik during the summer season, where for six weeks ending July 15th, the sun refuses to set. Potatoes will not grow larger than marbles, while lettuce and radish flourish.

WEDNESDAY CLOSING EFFECTIVE IN MAY

Commencing with the first Wednesday in May, the half-holiday becomes effective and will last for the months of May, June, July, August and September. The half-holiday affects the drygoods, men's furnishings and boot and shoe stores.

THIEVES STEAL MEAT FROM BALTIMORE MAN

Forcing a padlock staple, thieves broke into a building used by James Bray, Baltimore drover, to store meat and made off with several quarters of beef and pork. One quarter of meat had proven too heavy a load and was thrown in the orchard, later being found by Mr. Bray. A quantity of chicken feathers adhering to some of the meat which had been left behind led Mr. Bray to believe that the marauders had visited somebody's poultry house. Provincial Police are investigating.

NORTHERN TOWNSHIP, NO RELIEF CASES

The Township of Snowdon, in Haliburton County, hasn't a single relief case—that the whole population of more than 600 souls is independent and seeking no charity. Relief Officer A. Stephens, of Gelert, has nothing to do and is open for another position. The township officials, including Reeve H. Hill, of Lochlin, are going about feeling very "chesty" as they compare conditions in Snowdon, where all are prosperous and happy, with conditions in a lot of the so-called wealthy townships. How is that for this "Terrible North."

A.Y.P.A. GUESTS AT BOWMANVILLE

St. John's A.Y.P.A. Visited Bowmanville Groups Monday Night

A novel program was presented in St. John's parish hall, Bowmanville, on Monday night when the A.Y.P.A. entertained about 80 members of the A.Y.P.A. of St. John's Church, Port Hope. President B. H. Mortlock presided for the devotional and business opening, and extended a hearty welcome to the visiting young people. Rev. C. R. pence, rector, also extended a welcome to the visitors.

With Mrs. Gunn at the piano, a period of community singing was held and this was followed by a number, "The Gypsy's Warning," with accompanying dramatization. Mrs. Forrest Dilling was the vocalist, Mrs. Gunn the pianist, with Jack Graham and Mary Wallace taking the other parts.

The feature of the evening, however, was the "Cuckoo Hour," based on Raymond Knight's presentation each Saturday from New York. Mrs. George P. Pennyfeather's part was taken by Miss Marjorie Smith. The regular cuckoo opening was held and the main program, which was given behind the stage curtains, with a radio in front, consisted of numbers by so-called, guest artists for the evening. John M. James took the part of Bing Crosby; Oscar Jamieson, that of Rubinoff and his violin; Newton Hackney, as Archie Cunningham and Charlie Richards as Accordeon Sam.

Two skits also featured the program one an interview with Queen Isabella with regards to the pawning of her jewels to finance Columbus across the ocean. Miss Marjorie Smith was Queen Isabella. B. H. Mortlock took the part of Ali Ben Oli, the Turkish horoscope reader, and read the horoscopes of several Port Hope visitors.

Following the program, the social committee, with Miss Ruth Hayman, as convener, served refreshments and the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing. On behalf of the visitors, Miss Doris Hancock, president, moved a vote of appreciation to the Bowmanville A.Y.P.A. for their hospitality.

WHITBY SETS 42-MILL RATE

Council Reduces Tax Rate By One Mill Over Last Year

The Whitby town council passed a resolution that the tax rate for 1933 be 42 mills. This is a reduction of one mill from last year, and, according to the treasurer, marks the beginning of an era of lower taxation in Whitby. The reduction was made despite the fact that council must provide a sum of money equivalent to two extra mills on the rate to meet county expenditures, the town's equalized assessment having been raised last year by the arbitration board which heard the appeal of Reach Township. The council last year, in order to bring about a reduced rate, cut salaries, slashed estimates and general expenditures. The Board of Education also reduced its budget by $2,500.

HOPE TOWNSHIP MAN ARRESTED

Harvey Liggdt Arrested On Fraud Charge—Remanded Until May 9

Harvey Liggdt of Hope Township was arrested by Provincial Constable W. J. Carey of Cobourg Monday on a charge of fraud. Police charged that Liggdt traded in his car on one owned by Walter Fanning of Warkworth, without notifying Fanning that it had a lien on it. He was remanded until May 9th.

Street guards have been devised to prevent automobile bumpers from "locking horns" with other cars and to make the bumper more effective.

DRINKS AND BATHS FOR PIGEONS

A constant supply of pure drinking water is always of primary importance in keeping pigeons healthy. The fact that impure or dirty water is one of the most prolific causes of the spread of disease among pigeons must never be lost sight of, states the Dominion Department of Agriculture. The water should be changed every day and syphonic drinking water vessels used. A few iron filings or rusty nails may be placed in the drinking water with advantage. Baths are absolutely necessary, and where pigeons have no access to a running stream, can be provided by means of large basins nearly filled with water and placed inside larger basins, to prevent overturning or undue splashing on to the floor.

DAFFODIL TEA WELL ATTENDED

Held at Home of Mrs. L. T. Sylvester—Under Auspices of St. Mark's Guild

What was lacking in warmth and sunshine yesterday afternoon, was fully compensated by the warmth of the greeting within at the Daffodil Tea held at Mrs. L. T. Sylvester's home, Pine Street. The tea was under St. Mark's Guild of Service auspices. The beautiful rooms, were aglow with scores of lovely daffodils. The cosy fires, burning in the fire places, and shaded lights, made a gracious setting for a springtime tea. Mrs. Sylvester, assisted by Mrs. E. Edgar, received the guests, who thronged in mostly at the tea hour. Miss Rigby, Mrs. S. C. Bennett, Mrs. F. W. Bell and Mrs. C. P. Freeman poured tea and coffee. Mrs. J. B. Holland was kept busy showing guests to the small tables, whilst a bevy of efficient helpers supplied all the needs required. Mrs. W. H. Peacock, Mrs. A. G. Dawson and Mrs. R. J. Clark presided at the talent table. Mrs. E. M. Thurber was the convener of the tea. The tea was a real success, and a nice sum was realized.

TRANSPORT MEN GIVEN WARNING

Disregard Of 10 Hour Rule To Bring Prosecution, Says Macaulay

Warning has been issued by Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Minister of Highways, to all operators of transport vehicles in Ontario that any disregard of the drivers' hours-of-employment regulation is in future to be followed by prompt departmental prosecution.

Commenting on the situation responsible for the warning, Mr. Macaulay stated: "Complaints continue to be received or required to operate their vehicles longer than a period of ten hours in 24—the maximum permitted under the law. This information however, usually comes to us from a source which makes it difficult, if not impossible, to prosecute. Drivers, although they are prepared to complain to this department, are unwilling to give evidence against their employers because of the fact that it will undoubtedly result in them losing their positions.

"As intimated in the circular letter which is being forwarded to the transport men, it is our intention to prosecute in every case where there is any evidence of a disregard of this very necessary regulation and if it is found impossible to secure a conviction by reason of the fear of employees losing their positions, then the department will not hesitate to suspend or revoke licenses, which will have the effect of putting such transport men out of business. This law was designed primarily in the interests of safety and humanity and under present-day unemployment conditions there is absolutely no need for employers to require their drivers to exceed the prescribed hours of employment. It is not only unfair to the employee but to the hundreds of other qualified drivers who are out of employment. The operation of heavy transport vehicles by persons for periods longer than ten hours in 24, constitutes a real hazard on our highways and the department does not propose to countenance it."

Every duty omitted obscures some truth we should have known.

CAR HIT TRUCK DRIVER FINED

Toronto Motorist Failed To See Truck Parked On Highway—Slight Damage

Leo G. Anderson, of Toronto, pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving in Police Court here Monday morning following an accident 600 yards west of Welcome Corner Sunday night and was fined $10 and costs. Anderson was proceeding west and failed to see a large Metropolitan Transport parked on the north side of the highway. Anderson's car hit the left rear side of the trailer, car and trailer being slightly damaged. The accident was investigated by Provincial Motorcycle Constable A. E. Reilly.

HEAVY DAMAGE IN FARM FIRE

Damage estimated at $13,000 was suffered Monday by A. J. Henderson, ex-Warden of the United Counties, when fire destroyed the large barn, with its contents, on his farm on the Falls Line, near Millbrook. Consumed in the blaze were 14 head of pure-bred Holstein cattle, 19 hogs, 3 valuable horses, a large flock of poultry, 340 bushels of seed grain and much valuable farm machinery. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

At the first alarm, Leonard Henderson, son of the owner, entered the barn in an effort to save his own driving horse. Although burned about the hands and face, he succeeded in bringing the animal from the blazing barn. A colt followed Mr. Henderson and the horse out, but then turned and ran back into the flames. Mr. Henderson collapsed soon after and required medical attention.

Miss Anne Brown Gives Splendid Dramatic Recital

Former Port Hoper Appears Before Oshawa Women's Association

At the April meeting of Oshawa Women's Lyceum Art Association held on Thursday afternoon, the main feature of the program was an excellent dramatic recital by Miss Anne Laurie Brown, of Toronto, formerly of Port Hope. She charmed the audience by her winsome personality and thrilled it with the intensity of her dramatization of historic scenes from Tennyson's "Thomas A. Beckett," and Shakespeare's play, "King Henry VIII." Miss Brown was accompanied to the meeting by William J. Stanislaus Romain, of whom she is a pupil, and during the intermission between her recitals, he gave a brief address, dealing with the necessity of a thorough understanding of the technique of the theatrical art world by those undertaking to present plays. The meeting was well attended, and a warm expression of thanks was extended to Miss Brown, on motion of Mrs. C. M. Mundy and Mrs. C. W. Carr, at the close of the program.

In her dramatic recital, Miss Anne Laurie Brown displayed remarkable talent and showed sound and careful training. The scenes from Tennyson's Thomas A. Beckett, culminating in the tragic scene with the bowler of Rosamund, clandestine sweetheart of King Henry VIII, were enacted with striking realism and intensity. The scene from Shakespeare's Henry VIII was that of the divorce trial of Queen Catharine of Aragon, and Miss Brown's interpretation of the role of the sauve Cardinal Wolsey and that of the heart-stricken Queen, held the audience spell-bound. In spite of the limitations imposed on her by the cramped space at her disposal, and the lack of a proper stage, Miss Brown gave a remarkable performance, and was warmly applauded, many appreciative comments being heard on her work.

HEAVY FINE IS IMPOSED

Local Inspector Searches Caesarea Premises—Hotel Keeper Fined $75.00 And Costs

Frederick Harran, proprietor of the Caesarea House, at Caesarea, pleaded guilty in police court at Bowmanville, to a charge of having maskinonge in his possession during a period of closed season. Harran, who made no defense in the case, was fined $75.00 and costs, a total of $78.00, and was given a severe lecture by Magistrate Cotton. The evidence which was adduced by the court showed that the premises of Mr. Harran had been searched by Provincial Game and Fishery Officers, Neil MacNaughton, of Parry Sound, and Robert N. Hills, Port Hope. In his ice house they found four filleted maskinonge and portions of a fifth fish.

In pleading guilty to the charge of having the fish in his possession, Mr. Harran said he had not killed the fish himself. He refused, however, to give any information as to how they came into his possession.

Magistrate Cotton, in passing sentence, told the accused that he ought to realize that, in his position, it was expected that he would assist the government officials in protecting the fish, not alone to uphold the law, but also for the sake of inducing patrons to stay at his hotel during the fishing season. By allowing the wanton destruction of fish out of season he was defeating his own ends. Under the Ontario Special Act, he pointed out, the penalty provided was a fine of from $10 to $100 for each fish he had in his possession. The magistrate fixed the fine at $15.00 for each fish, plus costs of $3.00, making a total of $78.00.

FINE TRUCKER AT BOWMANVILLE

Trenton Man Crowded 30 Cows And Calves In Truck

It took three hours of Magistrate cotton's time to decide a case brought into Bowmanville Court by Nelson Baird, Oshawa Humane Inspector, against Cecil N. Roberts, of Trenton, and Francis Britton, of Brighton, cattle drovers, charged with cruelty. Inspector Baird received word on Monday that a truck overlaid with cattle was proceeding towards Toronto. He stopped it and found it loaded with no less than 30 calves and two cows.

The animals were piled in so tight, the inspector stated, that it was difficult for him and Chief of Police S. Venton to count them. He stated that the cows were treading on a number of the calves, and that the whole number were being trucked cruelly.

W. Ross Strike, who appeared for the defence, and A. W. S. Greer, who appeared for the Humane Society, argued for over two hours on the merits of the case. After patiently listening for three hours, Magistrate Cotton fined Roberts, the owner of the truck, $10 and costs, and dismissed the charge against Britton.

DRIVER INJURED IN CAR CRASH SATURDAY

J. Veram, Toronto, sustained a badly cut finger and two broken ribs when a car he was driving crashed into the ditch at the corner of Ridout and Victoria streets early Saturday night. The driver was proceeding in an easterly direction and apparently lost control when about to round the sharp curve. The car crashed into the ditch, turning over on its side. The vehicle was damaged and was towed to Sculthorpe's garage, Cavan street.

The driver was arrested by local police and charges will be laid.

ROTARY CABARET IS BIG SUCCESS ON FRIDAY NIGHT

Many Enjoy Program—Good Acts—Draw Is Made For Prizes

Attended by upwards of three hundred persons, the cabaret party staged at the Town Hall here Friday night by the Port Hope Rotary Club was a decided success. There was not a dull moment from 8.30 until 2 o'clock in the morning and everyone received full value for the money.

The committee in charge of the arrangements for the cabaret included, Rotarians W. L. Saunders, chairman; George V. Strong and William Bissett, and the proceeds will be used for the welfare work carried on by the organization.

Music for dancing was supplied by Charlie Doney's band and included Charlie Doney, mandolin; Ed Brandwood, piano; P. Rowden, violin; C. Rowden, violin and, Arthur Connell, drums. Hugh Bird acted as caller-off for the old time dances.

A feature of the evening's program was the performance of Clair Rouse, Toronto entertainer. His display made a decided hit with the crowd and rounds of applause greeted his efforts. He had a good line of chatter and his skillful playing of the many instruments went over in fine style. Miss E. Sindlicio, Port Hope, contributed two vocal numbers which were enjoyed. The accompaniments were ably handled by E.L. Brandwood.

Late in the evening, keen interest centred in the draw for five prizes which were—Bird bath, 2 pounds chocolates, electric iron, two pounds coffee and silver salt and pepper shakers. The winners were Miss Josephine Cook, George Trumper, William Nelson, Cecil Croft and Mrs. R. S. Brown.

The annual edition of the 'A.Y.P.A. Shocker' was published and read to the members at Monday night's meeting of St. John's A.Y.P.A. and proved both interesting and amusing. Everyone is interested to receive a few jolts on Press Night, and the way to prove that one is a good sport is by one's own appreciation of a joke on one's self.

ST. GEORGE'S DAY OBSERVED

Rev. Dr. K. H. Palmer, Port Hope, Gave Address At Cobourg

Englishmen on memory trains were carried back to the land of their birth, in song and reminiscence at a banquet held Monday night to mark the commemoration of St. George's Day. The banquet hall of St. Peter's parish building, Cobourg, was filled to capacity. The banquet gathering, while one of good cheer, was also one of reverence to the Motherland.

Rev. Dr. K. H. Palmer, of Port Hope, delivered an eloquent address, bringing his listeners vivid recollections of the land of their birth.

Dr. Palmer is an Irishman, whose fiery oratory has made him well known in lectures all over the continent. His address touched on the historic past of England, her immediate past and her future.

It is found that sudden noises raise brain pressure to a greater extent than powerful drugs used as shock-agents.

THE PUBLIC FORGOT

For business men who appear to think the public does not need to be constantly reminded of who they are, where they are, and what they have to sell, the well-known story of what happened to a product called Pyle's Pearline will bear repeating.

In the early years of this century, Pearline, a cleaning material, was used by most of the housewives of the country. In 1904 the company spent $500,000 in advertising. Then the advertising was greatly curtailed, and about 1907 it was discontinued altogether, as the company thought the product was so well known that no further advertising was necessary.

Sales fell off rapidly, but the company's owners persisted in their non-advertising policy until 1915, when the whole concern was sold for $12,000. Pearline was dead.

Many other products whose names were household words a few years ago are no longer sold, because the manufacturers failed to keep up their advertising, and consequently the public forgot them.

Business men should remember that new generations of potential customers are coming along all the time, and that these new buyers must be sold on a product or a store, as their fathers and mothers were before them.

The only time it is safe to stop advertising is when one is ready to go out of business.—Bowmanville Statesman.

ENCOURAGING GOOD DRIVERS

The announcement made by the insurance companies that they had decided to lower the rates of insurance for careful drivers ought to have a beneficial effect in reducing accidents. Those who have driven their cars without claims for one year will get the benefit of a 10 per cent. reduction, which will be increased in the case of longer terms. These reductions, ranging from 10 to 30 per cent. on premium rates of automobile insurance, and increased bonuses for careful drivers, is a movement in the right direction. Careless persons should be made to pay heavily for their follies, and careful motorists should be given the greatest possible benefit of their strict observance of the rules of safety.

At present in Ontario insurance is not compulsory. If, however, a driver becomes involved in an accident in which he becomes liable for damages, his license is automatically cancelled until the judgment is paid, and he cannot drive his car afterwards without insurance. Perhaps this is as far as the law can go at the present time, but there are many good arguments why no one should be allowed to drive on the highways who does not carry insurance against accidents.

A short time ago the Expositor mentioned the fact that the Safety League of the Province of Quebec had presented rewards to twenty-nine drivers of the Canadian Express Company at Montreal for completing a year's work without accidents. The ceremony was a notable one and was attended by a very large number of chauffeurs. Mr. Gaboury, secretary of the league, emphasized the necessity of carefully observing the traffic rules, and promised a very special reward to those who gained the gold medallion for having operated their vehicles during a period of three years entirely without accidents. The rewarding of careful, considerate drivers ought to go side by side with the punishment of those who are careless and reckless.—Brantford Expositor.

THE ANNUAL MIX-UP

The yearly period of confusion caused by the haphazard adoption of daylight saving by most of the larger cities is upon us again.

These bigger centres on both sides of the international line go on summer time on Sunday, and the result is that with the rest of the country operating on standard time there is a great deal of disturbance, particularly in business and industrial circles.

In order to meet this development a number of Peterboro industries are practically forced to adopt daylight saving time, starting next week, and thus there is the unsatisfactory situation that the employees of these particular establishments have to regulate their activities in accordance with one system of time, the rest of the community, including the other members of their own families, are governed by another time system.

If the whole country were to adopt the daylight saving time and it were put into force on the same day throughout Canada, most of the confusion and disturbance would be averted; but with rural Canada firmly opposed to summer time and the politicians not anxious to run foul of the farmers over this controversial question, it looks as if we have to put up with the annual mix-up, seeing that the people of the larger communities seem determined to adopt daylight saving no matter how disturbing the action may be to the rest of the country.—Peterboro Examiner.

HOW DEBTS PILE UP

An evidence of the way governments of all lands have been barging ahead during the past few years, piling up taxation, which in times of prosperity caused little worry, but which in these days constitute a burden almost impossible to bear, is supplied by an American who has been investigating statistics in this regard in the United States. He states the case in a colorful and expressive way, as follows:

"Tax money for 1932 could employ, at the $15-a-week rate paid by relief agencies, no fewer than 17,948,711 men for a whole year.

"The combined annual cost of our army, navy and air force equals less than three weeks' tax impositions for 1932.

"The tax burden averages $500 for each family in the land.

"If all the paper currency in circulation throughout the country were added to all the gold, we still owe the tax collectors as much more again—and more.

"This year's taxes could pay off every farm mortgage in the land, with enough left over to donate almost a thousand dollars to each of six million farmers.

The total salaries and wages being paid this year by two hundred thousand manufacturing establishments to some eight

MORE GOLD, SILVER IN ONTARIO MINES

Total Production For First Quarter $11,229,617, Increase Of 362,076

Though the grand total of production by Ontario gold mines during the first quarter of 1933 was only slightly above the figure for the corresponding period of the previous year, the value, after exchange was added, was more than $500,000 in excess of the value of the period in 1932, according to the report to the Ontario Department of Mines.

In the Porcupine belt 261,973 ounces of gold, valued at $5,415,460, were recovered, as well as 61,555 ounces of silver, valued at $15,233. In the same period of 1932 this district reported recovery of 246,598 ounces of gold and 48,659 ounces of silver, total value, $5,112,248.

The Kirkland Lake Belt did not quite equal the production of the first three months of 1933 this district recovering 262,417 ounces of gold, valued at $5,424,655, and 39,220 ounces of silver, valued at $9,645. In the same quarter of 1932 the recovery was 275,436 ounces of gold and 44,681 ounces of silver, total value of $5,706,905.

Production in Northwestern Ontario showed a fair increase this year. Recovery of gold was 17,358 ounces, valued at $358,824, while the silver amounted to 22,808 ounces, valued at $5,800.

The total value of gold and silver produced in the Province during the first quarter of the year was $11,229,617, compared with a total value for the same period of 1932 of $11,167,541.

ENTRANCE CERTIFICATES URGED FOR TRUSTEES

Many trustees throughout the province have never secured even their high school entrance, yet are administering education in the districts in which they live, it was pointed out at the meeting of the Federation of Women Teachers' Associations of Ontario held in University College, Toronto. To eliminate this condition the women teachers decided to request the department of education to provide legislation making it necessary for all trustees to have entrance certificates or their equivalent in the public school system.

million executives and employees will not match the nation's tax claims.

"Thirty-six Panama Canals could be built with one year's tax receipts."

This illustrates the big problem of the present day not only in the United States but in all countries. When it is easy to collect money, governments are too inclined to establish services and incur further indebtedness which becomes a burden when the wave of prosperity begins to ebb. It takes time to effect retrenchment, but it will have to be done, as rapidly as possible, before a reasonable degree of prosperity can return.—Chatham Daily News.

BETHESDA

The Easter thank offering of the Women's Missionary Society was held in the church last Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Harry Tinney presiding. The front of the church was very beautifully decorated with attractively arranged lilies, ferns and potted plants.

The first part of the program was the responsive worship service, "We Would See Jesus". The four group leaders, Mrs. Robert McCullough, Mrs. Stanley Macklin, Mrs. Arthur Hoskin and Mrs. Ed. Maguire read short Easter Messages and Mrs. Maybee read the devotional leaflet, after which Mrs. T. Philp offered prayer. The musical program consisted of a solo by Mrs. Norman Dawley, a duet by Mrs. Edgar Philp and Mrs. Albert Davey and a boys' quartette from the Sunrise Mission Band. Four little girls from the Mission Band gave a pretty Easter dialogue.

The guest speaker was Mrs. David and her beautiful and impressive message was taken from the text "And their eyes were opened and they knew him." After the receiving and dedication of the Easter Thank offering, which amounted to thirty-three dollars, the meeting closed with prayer. Afternoon tea was served at the close of the meeting and a social half-hour spent.

OATS FOR POULTRY

Many poultry keepers do not give oats its proper place in the ration to their fowls. This, probably, is due to the fact that much of the oats placed on the market are not well filled and when offered to the poultry are not eagerly eaten. Oats have a fibrous hull, and it is probably largely on that account that the birds take more readily to wheat or corn. However, when oats are of a good quality, they are an excellent feed as has been demonstrated by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, and as soon as the flock becomes accustomed to oats they will eat this feed greedily.

CANTON

Joyous Time At Comrades And Sunshine Weavers Banquet

The Sunshine Weavers and Comrades have been showered with compliments and congratulations anent the success of their banquet, held in Community Hall on Friday night, April 21.

Bethel Grove Orchestra, composed of Archie Kidd, Ervin Moon, Morley McCallister with Miss Moon as pianist, provided music throughout the evening, thereby greatly enhancing the pleasure of the occasion.

Not one member of either class was missing who could possibly be present. And nearly all officers and teachers of the school who were guests of the classes were in attendance.

When all were seated "Be Present at Our Table Lord" was sung, followed by some remarks from Rev. A. S. Doggett who proved an ideal master.

The orchestra played between courses and community singing preceded the toast list which was as follows:—

The King—Proposed by Miss Marjorie Austin, response, National Anthem, followed by community singing.

Canada—Proposed by Mr. J. Bourne, response, Miss Mildred Bickle; song, "O Canada."

Officers and Teachers—Proposed by Mr. Leslie Knight, response, Mr. F. R. Currelley, Supt. of Schools; song, "Work For the Night is Coming," followed by the orchestra.

Sunshine Weavers—Proposed by Mr. George Stapleton, response, Miss Aline Athey; solo, "Alright," Mr. Will Watkins; Community singing. Comrades—Proposed by Miss Jean Hawkins, response, Mr. Donald Bourne, former member of the class and guest speaker of the evening.

Another guest of honor was Miss Bertha L. Cooper, for two years teacher of the Sunshine Weavers during her residence here as public school teacher and who was inspirer of the first class banquet.

Upon invitation of the toastmaster, Miss Cooper made a brief speech expressing her pleasure at being once more with them, adding words of praise and encouragement, stressing, as had previous speakers, the thought of service.

Scarcely had Miss Cooper resumed her seat when Miss Jean Hawkins an ex-president rose and gave glowing tribute to Miss Cooper's work in the class and among the young people. Endorsation cheers from the audience followed to all of which Miss Cooper bowed acknowledgement.

A vote of thanks to the toastmaster and orchestra, moved by Mr. Alfred Evans and seconded by Miss Helen Anderson, was carried with energetic hand clapping.

The orchestra played the final number and Rev. A. S. Doggett closed the program with prayer.

Thank-Offering Service
There was a large congregation at the W.M.S. Easter Thank-offering service last Sunday evening.

Easter lilies adorned the communion table and the same sentiment was voiced in the selection "Easter Bells are Ringing" sweetly sung by several girls and boys of the Blue Bird Mission Band.

Rev. A. S. Doggett conducted the service but instead of the sermon Miss O'Neill gave an interesting address on "A Day's Journey in Honan." The speaker touched lightly on the dark side, but talked cheerfully of the progress that is being made. Miss O'Neill reminded her audience that upon the United Church of Canada rests the entire responsibility for the spiritual welfare of eight million people in Honan, as denominational mission work in China is divided into zones to prevent overlapping.

She pleaded earnestly for more workers and above all for more believing prayer instancing in this respect. The China Inland Mission which makes no human appeal for anything. In 1931 this society prayed for two hundred new workers and now have the number asked for with the addition of three, likewise the funds for their support.

COMMITTED TO HIGHER COURT

Toronto Motorist In Bowmanville Court Following Newcastle Crash

Sheldon Churchill, Kingston Road, Toronto, was committed for trial at the next Court of General Sessions at Cobourg, when he appeared before Magistrate Robert M. Cotton in Bowmanville police court, to answer a charge of criminal negligence, following an accident at Newcastle on April 12.

Evidence for the prosecution, which was conducted by Col. F. D. Boggs, K.C., county crown attorney of Cobourg, was given by several witnesses.

Provincial Constable W. E. Smith, who made the arrest and laid the charge, stated that in his opinion, Churchill had been drinking. In a statement made to him, Churchill had admitted this fact. The accused had stated that he purchased 6 quarts of beer and two quarts of wine that afternoon, and this had been consumed by him and five other friends in Trenton. The statement also went on to say that the wagon which he struck, and on which George Clarke, of Clarke township, was seriously injured, did not have a light on it at the time of the accident.

He claimed that he was blinded by the glare of the lights of an oncoming car. Traffic Officer Hornick, of Peterboro, who was shortly on the scene of the accident, gave evidence as to measurements showing that Churchill had skidded some 30 feet before striking the wagon, had then skidded along the side and finished up ahead of the wagon, which was loaded with potatoes. It was shortly before midnight when the accident occurred.

Mrs. Alec Bagnell, sister of the injured man, who was unable to attend, stated that she heard the crash and went out and saw her brother lying injured on the roadside.

Dr. J. Clarke Bell, of Bowmanville, who examined Churchill, gave evidence to the effect that Churchill had been drinking and that he was "none too steady." "The man admitted to him that he had had a drink."

Harry Farrell, a Newcastle garage man, gave evidence that he was on the scene about ten minutes after the accident occurred and that the lantern on the wagon was still on. Several other witnesses gave evidence of seeing Clarke's lantern alight previously in the evening.

It was brought out in the evidence that the impact of the crash sent the wagon some 50 feet along the highway, and Churchill's car finished up 19 feet ahead of that.

Dr. J. C. Bell gave evidence of the injuries to Clarke, which consisted of a wound at the base of the skull. He is still in a serious condition in Bowmanville Hospital, where he was taken following the accident.

George Watson, Toronto, counsel for the accused, argued that there was insufficient evidence to have Churchill sent on for trial. Magistrate Cotton pointed out that he could do nothing else but send him on. "There has been an accident, a man has been injured, it was Churchill's car that was in the crash, therefore I must send him on to a higher court," Magistrate Cotton said.

PLANTS FATAL TO LIVESTOCK

With reference to the fact that poisonous plants, principally death camas (of the lily family) accounted for 11.2 per cent of the deaths of sheep in Western Canada during a survey of 1929-31 and that recently cattle were poisoned by larkspur (but-treup family), the following are some of the more common plants dangerous to live stock:—

Horses—ergot, bracken, horsetail, darnel, purple cockle, locweed, water hemlock.

Cattle—ergot, bracken, darnel, purple cockle, cursed crowfoot, larkspur, locweed, poison hemlock, water hemlock, parsnip, laurel, white snakeroot, ragwort.

Sheep—ergot, darnel, death camas, purple cockle, pasque flower, lupine, locweed, poison hemlock, water hemlock, laurel, white snakeroot.

Swine—darnel, purple cockle, water hemlock.

Poultry—ergot, darnel, purple cockle, and other injurious seeds in screenings.

Scotland's utmost length is but 280 miles, and its utmost breadth 140 miles.

The total value of the trade of France in 1932 was 49,519 million francs, compared to 72,641 million francs in 1931, a decrease of 23,122 million francs or nearly 32 per cent.

Gas in the Stomach Is Dangerous

Recommends Daily Use of Bisurated Magnesia to Overcome Trouble Caused by Acid Indigestion

Gas in the stomach accompanied by a full, bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from any druggist a little Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloating right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder form—never in liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

TWO SENT UP FOR TRIAL ON CHARGE OF ROBBERY

Jesse Hickerson and George Whitaker of Mountain View were committed for trial on a charge of robbery with violence, when they appeared before Magistrate A. E. Calnan in Picton Friday afternoon. Gordon Walmsley conducted the case for the Crown and F. C. Lane for two accused men. The alleged robbery took place a week ago, when it is charged, accused picked up Patrick Barry, who was h'king from Picton to Belleville, and going down a side road, beat the aged man, taking his wallet and throwing him from the car. At the preliminary hearing Barry identified the men as those who offered him the lift, while William Fry told of having seen the car alleged to have been used pass by him while going at a fast speed.

HAIRLESS PIGS AND IODINE

Goitre in calves and lambs and hairlessness in pigs are prevalent in districts where there is a deficiency of iodine in the soil. In such districts the use of potassium iodine in the form of iodized salt is advised by the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Commercial iodized salt can be procured, or if it is desired to mix at home, the procedure is simple. Spread out 100 pounds of dry common salt on a clean floor and after dissolving two ounces of potassium iodide in sufficient water, sprinkle the liquid evenly over the salt. A good rule in feeding salt to swine is to feed one-half pound per pig per month, varying this according to the size and age of the pigs.

The Guide Story

The next few days were full of suspense and sorrow for Iris. Then Bertie turned the corner and began to mend very slowly. At his own wish he was taken back to the attic-flat which he shared with friend Carlton, as soon as possible.

"You and Carlton won't have to waste so much time coming up the river to see me," he said. Angela Lyndon had only been twice and Iris felt rather sore about it. "I shall be so much nearer to you," Bertie went on. "Has no end of a nuisance, aren't I?"

"Not to me," Iris assured him tenderly. "Yet it will be lovely to have you back in town again."

The doctors said Bertie Raymond had sustained a shock to the system which must needs affect his health perhaps for the next few years. The launch party responsible for the accident had turned out to be people of straw. Quite useless to bring an action to recover damages against them. It only remained to make the best of a bad job.

Had Angela Lyndon returned his love for her, Bertie would have felt braver and have made a more strenuous effort to get well.

Her gentle coldness and aloofness, though, fretted him secretly, left him dull and depressed. To Angela was only her friend's brother, in whom she took a mild sort of interest. The knowledge of this bitter fact, combined with his injuries, kept him weak and ailing.

Even his beloved music had lost most of its charm for the young composer. And yet he could not afford to be idle. Money was needed to pay his share of the expenses. He hated the idea of sponging on Carlton or Iris. The keen zest of life, the urge to succeed, might have left him, but money must be earned by some means.

Still too languid and unfit to get about much and manage his own affairs, he asked Denis Carlton one evening when they were alone in the flat to transact a business deal for him.

Carlton had a date, and was in evening clothes, ready to go out. He glanced rather dubiously across at Bertie, stretched on the wide, shabby settee, wearing an old lounge suit.

"Don't mind being left on your own for a bit, old man?" he asked. "Iris can't come round, I know, owing to her pupils."

"I shall be all right," Bertie shifted his position wearily. "Denis, I want you to do something for me tomorrow."

"What is it?"

"Take that song of mine, 'A Love Letter,' round to Westcombe's," Bertie went on. "I don't feel equal to going out yet. He's the new man in the music-publishing line. He has brought out some very successful things lately. Should he entertain my song, make the best terms you can for me. I'm getting hard up,"—with a jerky laugh.

"My dear fellow, if you want a few pounds to go on with—"

"That's not the point"—irritably. "I'm hanged if I'll either borrow or borrow. It's time something was done with the song. Lucky for me I'd kept the first rough copy, the other being at the bottom of the Thames."

"Of course I'll see Westcombe, if you wish it," Carlton glanced at his watch. "Do I understand that you give me a free hand in trying to place your work?"

"Certainly. Make the best bargain possible. You are acting for me. Tell Westcombe this. I leave it entirely to you."

"Afraid I must be going now. If you feel tired don't wait for me, dear boy. I may be late."

The next day Denis Carlton kept his word. He went to the premises of Mr. Eric Westcombe in Bond street and asked to see the head of the firm. Bertie's song was played and sung by a competent member of the staff. Westcombe, a young man with a strong, keen, clever face, always on the watch for good things in the shape of songs, considered it carefully. Then he made an offer.

"You are acting for the composer?" he said to Carlton.

"Yes." Owing to an accident, Raymond is badly crooked at present," was the reply. "I'm his friend and business-agent."

The interview lasted nearly an hour. Westcombe said he should be pleased to have the refusal of other songs by Bertie Raymond. Carlton came away without the manuscript of the song, and with Westcombe's cheque in his pocket-book. He had accepted the offer on Bertie's behalf. He had signed the contract respecting it.

"Well?" Bertie, who had been gazing listlessly from the window of the flat giving on to the street, turned as Carlton joined him.

"I've sold your song, old chap," Carlton's inscrutable dark eyes rested on the composer's haggard young face. "Westcombe has taken it, but on his own terms."

"How much did he offer?"

Carlton named a sum—a few guineas. Bertie started. The gleam of hope irradiating his thin features died out.

"Only that?" he exclaimed. "Well it can't be helped. No doubt you did your best. Yet I thought the song was worth more."

"You see, lots of songs fail to catch on," said Carlton. "I suppose this makes music-publishers cautious. I tried, but I couldn't screw any more out of him."

CHAPTER III

"Oh, all right," Bertie's voice was flat and toneless. "For this mess of pottage I've sold not my birthright, but my copyright. No royalty for me should the sales run into thousands."

"My dear fellow, I rather wish I hadn't agreed to act as your agent in the matter—" Carlton began.

"I'm not blaming you. But Westcombe has driven a hard bargain," Bertie said bitterly. "That song has the best melody I've ever composed. Words don't count for much. It's the music that makes or mars a song. Must have overrated my own efforts. Well, a little's better than nothing. Did you try any others?"

"Yes, Westcombe's was the best offer."

"I must get busy and turn out more hot-boilers. Suppose it's all I'm fit for. I've got an inferiority complex over this deal."

Bertie gazed at the small cheque handed to him by his friend—Carlton's cheque, drawn in his favour, and left uncrossed.

"I can pass Westcombe's in through my account," he explained. "Thought this would be easier for you, dear boy, since—"

"I've no banking account to boast of. Very kind of you. Iris will feel a bit disappointed over this. It's hoped more from the song than I did."

Iris was more than disappointed. She was angry when she heard how little Bertie's latest effort had fetched.

"Eric Westcombe must be a miracle of meanness," she declared. "And Bertie has sold it outright—his best song."

Angela Lyndon said it was "a shame," but she spoke with no force behind her words. She and Iris were drifting slowly apart. Nothing had been quite the same between them since the day of the accident on the river. Iris knew this, and felt sorry for it—sorry for Angela.

That Denis Carlton should have rescued Iris first was a fact Angela could never forget. It showed all too clearly how well he loved her. In that moment of peril the truth had flashed out, vivid as lightning. And this great treasure of his love bestowed on her Iris failed to value. Crowning bitterness of all!

Iris knew she was not to blame, but circumstances had tangled things up for the four of them. Would they ever get sorted out rightly? Coming on the top of all the other troubles was the poor price paid for Bertie's song, on which they had built such lovely castles in the air. Truly, life had its seamy side, though on the other side it might be passing beautiful.

Ill-health and want of the golden spur of success kept Bertie Raymond from putting much heart into his work.

Had Angela Lyndon loved him, he might have made an effort. But her gentle indifference cut him to the quick. Bertie tortured himself with surmises as to whether Angela cared for Carlton.

If so, she, too, was doomed to unhappiness. Carlton wanted Iris with every fibre of his being. And Iris had told her brother, in confidence, that his friend did not stand the least chance with her. At least, Bertie was spared the bitterness of seeing a conscious rival in Carlton.

In a very short time Eric Westcombe's firm published Bertie's song. A famous singer sang it at Albert Hall. It sprang into popularity at once. It was the waltz-song of that season. Orchestras played it, bands made a feature of it. "A Love Letter" was broadcasted. The gramophone records sold like hot cakes. Pianolas gave the haunting yet elusive melody on their rolls. Then it came down to street organs and pianettes. Errand-boys whistled it melodiously. It was in the air and beat out to the rhythm of dancing feet.

Bertie Raymond, hearing of the success of his latest song, was artist enough to feel pleased, while conscious of the little he stood to gain, in a solid sense, by the fame thrust on him.

At any rate, other compositions of his would meet with a better reception from the publishers than "A Love Letter" had done. Unluckily, his mind was giving him very few original ideas just now.

"It's something to feel that a creation of yours is being sung and danced to all over the place," he told Iris once, when she had mounted to the attic-flat to see him.

Her dark-blue eyes flashed angrily. "Bertie, it's monstrous—that you should have got so little for the song," she exclaimed. "Why, it must be bringing in a fortune. There are the American rights and gramophone royalties—not to mention the performing and newspaper rights—"

Bertie held up his hands in whimsical protest. He was still on the old settee, where he spent so many hours each day, with a dull, throbbing pain in his head, not to speak of the pain at his heart.

"Spare me the rest of the list," he entreated. "It's like having luscious grapes dangled before parched lips, just out of reach. I've spent the few guineas my song brought me. I must try to get to work again soon. If I didn't feel so listless—so empty!"

"It's a burning shame," Iris was not to be diverted from her theme. "There are times when I feel I must go round to Eric Westcombe's splendid premises, and ask him how he can reconcile it with his conscience to reap a fortune from 'A Love Letter' when the composer of the song hardly knows where to turn for a pound. I shall do this some day—I know I shall."

Bertie suddenly sat up in alarm at her threat.

"Don't you do anything of the kind," he commanded. "Denis manages my affairs while I'm out of action, old girl. You mustn't butt in."

"I should say he has mismanaged this," Iris insisted.

"No one could possibly tell that the song would score such a success," Bertie said temperately. "And publishers have to take risks. I'm not grousing—only I wonder Westcombe hasn't approached me so far with regard to further work."

"Why don't you let Denis Carlton approach him if I mustn't interfere?" Iris asked.

"He will, in due time. The matter is in his hands, and there it must stay. Denis would be hurt, and perhaps offended, if you let him feel he had not done his utmost for me."

Iris was far from satisfied. The wheels of life's chariot were driving heavily. Bertie needed change of air and scene, nourishing food, little luxuries it was difficult to get for him. Iris would have spent her last shilling on her brother, but Bertie saw through her love-prompted devices and refused to take her hard-earned money.

Neither would he accept advances from Carlton. Iris was seriously worried about him as she walked home from the Academy of Dancing one moonlight night, glad of the fresh air and the exercise after being pent within four walls, with an extremely awkward squad of raw new pupils.

Denis Carlton met her on the Embankment, not far from the rooms she shared with Angela Lyndon.

"Is Bertie worse?" she asked anxiously, as Denis came up to her.

"No—just about the same." Carlton's dark eyes rested on her sweet, vivid face. "But he makes no headway. He ought to be down by the sea in this sultry weather."

"It's where he should be, if that Westcombe man had any sense of right or justice," Iris said indignantly. "Isn't anyone going to put it to him that he ought to give Bertie more for his song than was originally agreed upon?"

Denis Carlton started. They were standing by the wall of the Embankment. The leaves of the plane trees made curious patterns on the pavement. Barges with red lights stole softly past on the "silent highway." The mystery and magic of the moonlight affected Iris subtly.

"It would be rather difficult to do that," he replied. "Of course, if you and Bertie wish it, I'll see him—"

"Bertie has told me not to interfere," Iris went on. "Otherwise I might have a hard time of it. I don't believe I am acting for Bertie."

Carlton's manner stiffened. "And you are dissatisfied?"

"Can you wonder? Is it fair that Bertie should be so hard up—with his song bringing in a golden harvest for others?"

"Perhaps not." Carlton's lips were compressed. "Have a little patience, Iris. Westcombe may make an offer soon. That would be far better than anything wrung from him against the grain. Promise me you won't try to see him without first telling me."

"Oh, I'll promise that," Carlton looked relieved. "But while the grass is growing the steed is starving. Bertie wants heaps of things to make him well and strong. And he's not getting them."

Carlton turned to her swiftly.

"I do what I can," he said. "Or rather, what Bertie will let me do. He's such an obstinate beggar, Iris!"

—his voice took on a tender, impassioned tone—"do you know why I came here to meet you to-night on your way home?"

She did not answer. She knew only too well why he was there. She wished he had been anywhere else. Why was he so bent on getting himself hurt? She had tried to avoid this moment. Iris let her eyes follow a fussy little tug on the river, towing a number of barges in its wake.

"It's no secret," Carlton went on, "that I love you, dear, I've made this plain enough for ages past. Tell me if I may count on your love, in return. It means so much to me—so much."

His hand beat a nervous tattoo on the low wall as he waited for her reply.

"I'm sorry," she began, with a tired little sigh. "I don't care for you in that way, Denis. I can never be your wife. In fact, I've never yet met a man whom I wanted to marry. Single life suits me admirably. As a friend, a man may be much nicer than another girl—less narrow and more reliable. As a lover—Oh, please don't let us refer to this subject again. It leads nowhere."

"You don't realize what you are to me," he struck in sharply.

"You can't hold me responsible for your love bestowed on one who would rather be without it," she replied. "Oh, yes," as he made a remark, "I daresay Bertie would like his friend to marry his sister, but it simply can't be done."

Denis Carlton's face gleamed whitely in the moonlight.

"I must accept the inevitable, I suppose," he said slowly. "It's a blow to all my hopes and dreams. I had thought that you would let me share your efforts to improve things for Bertie. And it's not to be. Your sentence me to a lonely life. There will never be anyone else."

A sudden sense of remorse swept across Iris. Did she not owe her life to Denis Carlton? Her refusal to share what he had saved with his was giving him pain.

"I wish I could have given you a different answer, Denis," she said, earnestly. "Yet I must be true to myself—and to you. You—you wouldn't have me marry you without love?"

"I would—sooner than lose you. A starving man is grateful for crumbs."

"Oh, it can't be." She raised her face to his. "Denis you will get over this. You will meet the right girl."

"Don't let us indulge in truisms." His features were contorted for a moment. "You are the girl I want. If I can't have you I must go my solitary way. Well—with a change of tone—you'll be glad to get rid of me now. And Bertie may want me."

"Did you tell him—what you were going to ask me?" she faltered.

"I did—and the dear old chap wished me luck. But that's neither here nor there. Good night, Iris."

"Good night."

They went their several ways. When Iris went indoors, Angela Lyndon glanced up from her typewriter. In her spare time at home she typed MSS. for authors.

"How flushed you look!" she said. "Have you been walking quickly?"

"No." Iris took off her hat and preened her hair a little in front of the looking-glass. She ought to avoid questions.

"Did you meet anyone on your way home?" Angela studied the graceful reflection.

"Yes—Denis Carlton. He was on the Embankment."

"Waiting for you, of course. I believe"—Angela started to her feet, a crimson spot burning on each pale cheek—"that he has proposed to you to-night. You can't deny it, Iris?"

"Why should I?" Iris swung round. She had tried to avoid questions. "I'm more than ready to be his wife," she went on. "I told him he might as well ask for the moon. He knows I'm not likely ever to change my mind in his favour. And that's that."

Angela drew a deep breath. Relief, envy, jealous misery, were making a chaos within her breast at the moment.

Iris had sent Denis Carlton away, a disappointed wooer. She could afford to let him go. She was heart-whole, fancy free. At least, her rejection of him was less hard to bear than if she had responded in the way he wished. Yet Angela, as she put the cover on her typewriter, felt furious with her friend for having won a treasure that meant nothing to her.

"Rather a poor return for his act in saving your life," she said, with an unsteady laugh.

"For the matter of that, he saved yours also."

"Oh that doesn't count—with him. Well, Iris, you are the best judge of your own affairs. Do you want any supper? I've put the tray on the side-table."

Things quickened soon after this. Bertie took a turn for the worse. The doctors said an English winter would probably kill him. If he could spend a year or so in Egypt he might recover. It was his only chance.

Iris felt desperate. She owned nothing on which the money for this purpose could be raised. She racked her brain in the effort to devise ways and means of raising so large a sum and failed. The young composer himself, aware of his failing health, accepted the fact with quiet philosophy. Not so those around him.

Denis Carlton came to Iris on a day late in October. A set aim shone in his face as the two shook hands.

"I've come into a bit of money," he announced abruptly. "An old aunt of mine down in the country has died and left me a few hundreds. I've just fixed things up at Cook's. Bertie will winter in Egypt, after all. The sooner he starts the better. Wind's beastly cold to-day."

Iris caught her breath. She was staring at the neat little book of tickets and coupons which Carlton had taken from his breast-pocket.

"But we can't let you spend your legacy on Bertie," she gasped.

"I'm sure he wouldn't hear of it."

CHAPTER IV

"Are these to be wasted, then?" Denis Carlton held out that fascinating book, the magic carpet which was to whirl Bertie Raymond away from regions of fog and gloom and chill rain, of leaden skies, to Eastern warmth and sunshine and beauty.

"You should have put it to him before going to Cook's," she said, her brain in a whirl.

"Then he would have refused outright," Carlton replied. "I mean to rush him. A stay at Biskra will give him back health and strength. Hotel expenses and all are arranged, with a first-class passage out and home."

Iris was still bewildered.

"I never heard you speak of this aunt of yours till now," she said. "Where did she live?"

"Oh, down in Wiltshire. She hadn't much to leave, poor old soul, but I've got it all. Her solicitor wrote me to this effect."

"And you're spending your legacy on Bertie. I—I don't know what he will say when you break this to him."

Iris felt grateful, but as if Denis Carlton were loading her down with favours—and after she had refused to marry him, too. It was an irksome situation.

"The main thing is to get him off quickly," was the reply. "The Transatlantic sails on Thursday. He could be ready by then."

Iris was thinking hard. Carlton had saved her life once, up the river. Now, in a sense, he was saving Bertie's life also. What had she done in return but give him pain and disappointment?

It was not as if she cared for another man. Thus far she had never been in love. Only in one way could she hope to repay him.

That hard streak which she fancied she had seen in Carlton, his want of fine ideals of conduct, might have been due to imagination only. His present act certainly betrayed no low or selfish standard.

"I don't think Bertie will consent to take your money," she said at length.

"That's all nonsense. You must help me to persuade him," Carlton told her.

"He might be induced to take it," she went on slowly, "if—if you and I were engaged—not otherwise."

Carlton flushed dusky.

"You don't think I'm trying to give a bargain with you?" he asked.

"Of course not. That would be to insult you, horribly." Her voice faltered. "Still, all the favours should not be on one side. Denis"—she raised her wistful, lovely face to his—"if you could be content with liking? Love it is beyond me to give. I suppose some people never fall in love. On these terms I take back what I said lately, I'm willing to be your wife."

Carlton's features grew tense. He wanted her, the sweet, graceful young creature, so rich in qualities of heart and mind, with every fibre of his being. Yet, now that she was willing to give herself to him, a strange hesitation held him back.

"You need not become engaged to me," he said, almost roughly. "I seek no return for this trifling service rendered to your brother, Iris. Bertie is my friend. To be married from a sense of gratitude—"

"Oh, it's more than that," she interposed. "If I can make you happy, Denis, no doubt the rest will come right. And we have known each other a long time."

He drew her to him with both hands and kissed her on the forehead. She tried not to shrink away.

"Oh, my dear, it's I who must try to make you happy," he said, almost vehemently. "Iris, I did not dream that you would give yourself to me in return for such a poor not a mou uenay parapour epinas wish to draw back—"

"I don't." She spoke gently and grimly. Carlton had said her surrender to his wooing was undreamed of. Yet he knew well that her high, proud spirit would seek to reward him at any cost, for what he was doing for Bertie. "I am yours if you want me, Denis"—with a fleeting smile that had no reflection in her eyes.

To her relief, Denis indulged in no further tokens of affection.

Iris gazed on her hat and coat and went round with him to the attic-flat. They burst in upon Bertie, sitting at the piano making a languid effort at composition, like a couple of bombshells.

"Iris and I are engaged, old chap," Carlton began, leading her forward. "And you sail for Egypt on Thursday."

Bertie started, then gave the pair a whimsical glance.

"Lunatics both—but quite harmless," he remarked.

"Both announcements are correct," Carlton told him. "Iris and I want your congratulations. I suppose you are her guardian, in a sense. If you dare to forbid the bans, though, we shall set you at defiance."

Bertie left the piano. Iris and Carlton pounded him with hard facts. He realized they meant what they said.

"I'm no end glad that you and Iris have fixed things up," he told Carlton. "I've always wished that you two might make a match of it. About this trip to Egypt, though? How can I take your money, old man? It's so decent of you." His voice shook. "But you'll want it when you start housekeeping."

Carlton tossed the book of tickets and coupons to him.

"Those are your sailing orders," he said. "We shall see you off at Southampton."

"But this dark horse—your aunt?" said Bertie. "I'd no idea she even existed."

"Why should I talk about her?" Carlton derided. "I hadn't seen her since I was a small boy. Miss Wilkins of Wiltshire. And I haven't spent the whole of my legacy on your trip."

Bertie realized that he was to have a chance for life. He might get better in that sun-warmed, glorious climate and come home eventually to take up his work again.

"You won't be getting married till I'm back to give Iris away," he said huskily.

"Of course not." It was Iris who spoke. Their engagement could not be too long for her. "And you'll write often to tell us how you are improving in health out there?"

Some hurried shopping was done and a few additions made to Bertie's limited wardrobe. Thursday came round all too quickly.

When Carlton and Iris had seen him off, waving to them from the upper deck, they went back to London.

Carlton declared the flat to be very lonely without Bertie. He often came round to see the two girls, or else he and Iris met by appointment, when her work admitted of it, to sample a new play or go to a concert.

"I shall soon be a fully qualified solicitor, dear," Carlton told her often, if the firm's likely to offer me office, if the firm's likely to offer me a partnership later on."

"Yes?" Iris knew very little of her future husband's private affairs. He seldom alluded to them. He had taken her to see his people, who lived at Wiltshire, and she had stayed with them once.

"Of course not. That would be to insult you, horribly." Her voice

itor. The family, conventional and middle-class, struck Iris as being very dull, while quite unaware of this failing. They all shared a slight distrust of artistic people, as being not quite the correct thing.

She knew that her own position as a teacher at an Academy of Dancing told against her with the Carltons. Still, they were nice to her on the whole. Denis had asked her not to mention his old aunt to the family at Crowhurst. She inferred they might feel vexed at the use he had put his legacy to. She obeyed the injunction strictly.

'Denis as a lover was very different to Denis as Bertie's friend. It had been so easy to get on with him in the latter capacity. But, as the man whom she had promised to marry, of her own free will and consent, she rather dreaded being left alone with him.

He seemed to divine this. He was not a demonstrative wooer, and for this she was grateful. The little tokens of affection bestowed left her gently unresponsive. She did not regret what she had done, but she mourned for her lost freedom in secret.

Bertie's letters, soaked in sunshine had a good effect on her. He was getting well rapidly in that warm, dry atmosphere. He had made friends with people staying at the same hotel. In short, he was having the time of his life at Biskra.

"But for Denis this could not have been," she mused. "I was bound to make some response to his generosity."

Angela Lyndon had received the news of Iris' engagement with an ironical smile.

"So you changed your mind respecting Denis Carlton, dear? Well, that is a woman's privilege."

Iris gazed at the girl wistfully. She would have liked to open her heart to Angela, to tell her just why she had decided to marry Carlton, but Angela's icy front made this impossible.

"She can't forgive Denis for not caring for her," Iris told herself, "or me for being the object of his love. Poor Angela!"

JESUS FACES THE CROSS

(International Uniform Sunday School Lesson May 7th)

GOLDEN TEXT: "And it came to pass, when the time was come that he should be received up, he steadfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem." Luke 9: 51.

LECCON PASSAGE: Mark 10: 42-45. "Small service is true service while it lasts:

Of humblest friends, bright creature! scorn not me; The Daisy, by the shadow that it casts,

Protects the lingering dew drop from the Sun."

To a Child: Written by Her Album.—Wordsworth.

FORSEEING THE WORST, 22-34

Jesus was on his way to Jerusalem. Deep in thought he walked ahead of his disciples. In distance he was but a few feet away from them, but in moral purpose he was continents removed. The separation was not one of miles but of moods. Jesus knew full well the treatment awaiting him. His two hour did not take him by surprise. It was an act of sublimest courage when he steadfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem.

Forewarned is forearmed. Jesus shared with his disciples his predictions of his fate. He wished to give them opportunity also for mental and moral preparation. He would not allow his disciples to go to the Passover Feast thinking that it was an occasion for celebrating a great national festival; he deliberately announced to them what was going to happen to himself, foretelling that he was to be betrayed and killed. As the disciples saw the look upon the Saviour's face and heard his words they were amazed and became afraid.

WHEN FRIENDS DISAPPOINT, 35-40

While Jesus had been predicting his death, two of his disciples had scarcely listened; they were thinking of themselves and making plans for their advancement. James and John, the sons of Zebedee, came to Jesus and tried to lead him to pledge himself to grant their wish before he knew their request. He asked them graciously what they wanted and they replied asking that they might sit one on his left hand and one on his right hand in his glory. They all along had been the spokesmen of the twelve, and it may be that the two brothers resented the prominence of Peter and thought in this way to get ahead of him. This request of James and John showed how little they had grasped the teachings of the Master. For months he had been sharing his thoughts with them. They had heard his Sermon on the Mount, but their minds had not grasped the spirit of the Beatitudes.

Although two of his closest friends were grievously disappointing him, Jesus showed no anger. He was more concerned about them than for himself. He asked them if they could drink the cup of which he was to drink, be baptized with the baptism of suffering with which he was to be baptized. With unthinking self-assurance, they said that they could. Christ's cup was martyrdom, and at this time James and John were not equal to martyrdom. "No one knows how he will bear up under fire." In fairness to James and John, it must be said that they redeemed themselves afterwards. James was the first of the twelve to meet the Martyr's death (Acts 12: 2); John the last, according to some traditions. On the road to Jerusalem, however, they were thinking about thrones, while Jesus was thinking about a Cross.

SERVICE IS GREATNESS, 40-44

When the ten disciples heard about the selfish ambition of James and John they were very angry. Their displeasure was not so much because James and John had failed to enter sympathetically into the mood of their Master, but because these two privileged disciples had thought to steal a march on the other ten. They had the decency not to quarrel in the presence of their Leader. Possibly he overheard their angry voices and he called them to him, and gave to them his great speech about service. Out of evil good may come. The ambitious request of the sons of Zebedee was the occasion of his words: "Whosoever of you will be the chiefest, shall be servant of all."

Jesus said that personal ambition was a pagan ideal. The Gentile rulers sought lordship. They wanted place and power. He might also have said that the Jewish leaders were guilty of this same selfish ambition. The disciples themselves at times hoped that Jesus would be a great leader setting up a kingdom on earth, overthrowing the Roman Empire and making the Jewish people dominant. Jesus absolutely repudiated this Jewish ambition to conquer and rule the pagan world. His ideal was, "Great servant—greatest slave." As a student John R. Mott had the expectation of a successful career in law. One day the spirit of God spoke to him through this verse of scripture: "Seekest thou great things for thyself? seek them not." From that day to this his life has been devoted to Christian service.

THE SON OF MAN, 45

It was no empty assertion when Jesus said, "I am among you as one who serves." Christ's whole life was sacrificial. When he said that the way to greatness was through service, he was not talking idle theory. He had tried it out and was able to give this teaching as a personal testimony. What a contrast to the self-seeking of the disciples!

Jesus is the Son of Man. He is representative or typical or ideal man. He came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many. A ransom was the price paid to set a slave free. Christ was willing to give his life as a ransom to free people from their sins. He was willing to wash his disciples' feet to teach them the spirit of lowly service. Whether teaching by the wayside, healing in the sick-room, praying in the garden, or dying on the Cross, Christ thought not of himself, but of service to fellow-men, whom he loved and whom he asserted God supremely loved.

QUESTIONS TO DISCUSS

1. Why was Jesus patient when his disciples were slow to understand?
2. Knowing that he faced certain death, why did Jesus go to Jerusalem?
3. In what ways is ambition legitimate for a Christian?
4. Would the ideal of service have become so popular of late, if it were not thought of as a means of profit?
5. How far do we judge people by ownership?
6. How did Christ minister to mankind?
7. What is the true goal of life? Why do we so often reject it?

ARMENIAN FAITH IN BOY SCOUTING

"We feel that Scouting is yet the best means of showing the world that in spite of all the difficulties of the present time, one can attain love and peace in the world by common law and sincere brotherliness." — Kourkene Medzadourian, Chief Commissioner, Armenian Boy Scouts.

OXFORD GROUP TEAMS HERE

Life Changers At Church Services And Speak At Men's Forum

Sunday, April 30th, 1933, may be an historical day for Port Hope, only time can prove that. Teams of men and women who have been won by the Oxford Movement visited Port Hope to witness what these Christian principles have meant in their lives.

We can only barely outline their activities here and cannot be expected at this time to give any idea of the effect or results of their visit here. Twenty-five came to Port Hope and Cobourg, of which the following were detailed to Port Hope: Misses Barbara Beale and Margaret Follett, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Partridge and Harold, Jr., Messrs Bert Life, Bob Wilber, Grier Baynum of Toronto; Misses K. McCullough and K. Doullittle, Hamilton, and Miss Janet Miles and Taylor Franklin of Belleville. These represented people from all walks of life—a good cross-section of any community.

The first meeting was held in St. Mark's Parish Hall Saturday evening and was well attended. Then Sunday morning and evening they appeared at the various churches concluding with an after meeting at the United Church where the entire team in Port Hope gave testimony.

Men's Forum

In the absence of the president the meeting of the Port Hope Men's Forum fell into the capable hands of vice-president, Jim Moir.

In reporting on the sports Mess Hewson and "Mitt" Fleming showed that the committee have been very active in preparing to provide clean sport for our youth and about 80 boys have been signed to the teams. It was suggested that any parents anxious to have their children take part have them register with Mr. Fleming.

The quartette of the Bowmanville Forum gave the men a fine treat both at the beginning and at the end of the hour. They will be received gladly again.

Next Sunday the ladies are cordially invited to join the men in hearing the Hon. Vincent Massey, who is to be the speaker and the season will close the following Sunday when Rev. D. McTavish will be the speaker by the unanimous request of the men.

Taylor Franklin, leader of the Oxford team and present assistant principal of Albert College was called upon to introduce his colleagues. He said that they had found a definite solution of troubles and worries which they had brought here to help those in need and assured the men that they could find the same sure solution by surrendering to Him. He said that it is the same religion in a new setting and continued by giving his experience of gaining this new life though being rather skeptical at first of the possibility of living up to the standards which is only possible by a complete surrender to God and two-way prayer.

Frazer Raney, a lawyer, when called upon said that it can't be half way, you must decide for God or mammon and gave further witness of to the difficulties to be overcome and the joy and happiness of the rebirth through surrender to God and acceptance of the four absolutes.

Bob Wilber, a civil engineer, had quite a different experience than the two previous speakers as neither he nor his wife were Christians and he found as their purchasing power decreased their pleasure in life diminished but they found the Oxford Movement had something they wanted—happiness.

Bert Life, a labourer, told of his experience of the power of God of which he had become convinced.

Harold Partridge, a salesman, said you really have to have the rebirth to appreciate it and he told how he was completely sold on the idea. There was neither time nor room for discussion so the meeting was closed and the men went home to reflect on the first contact with one of the greatest of modern movements which may be the cause of changing the people and helping them undo the knotty problems which now baffle the world.

Its Quality Sells It.—The fact that 30 many thousands of intelligent people continue to use Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil speaks volumes for its healing efficacy. Ever since it was first introduced it has grown steadily in public favor owing entirely to its manifold usefulness in relieving and healing sickness. As a specific for cuts, burns, scalds, and various inflammatory pains its record is beyond reproach.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

APRIL 26, 1913
RESCUES A BOY
The four-year-old son of Mr. King, residing on Jacob's Ladder had a narrow escape from drowning on April 26th, 1913. While playing near Mr. Galbraith's residence on Mill Street, he toppled into the creek and was instantly carried down the swift current, Charles Cancellia hurried to the rear of his store just in time to snatch the lad from his perilous position. The rescue in 1913 was the second performed by Mr. Cancellia.

APRIL 27, 1913
Passed Their Examinations
Mr. Clarence S. Dickinson, son of Dr. S. S. Dickinson, Ontario Street, returned home after successfully passing his final examinations in Department of Veterinary Science at Toronto University.
