FOUR INJURED IN CAR CRASH

Peterboro Car Sideswipes Another vehicle On Highway North Of Here

Four persons, including a baby, received minor injuries and two motor cars were badly damaged at 8.15 Monday morning in an accident on the Port Hope-Peterboro Highway.

Benjamin Rogow, merchant of 440 1/2 George street, Peterboro, was held responsible for the crash by Highway Patrol Officer A. E. Hornick, who investigated. Mr. Rogow suffered a fractured knee cap and cuts and bruises in the crash.

It is said that while driving south Mr. Rogow tried to pass a car driven in the same direction by the Richards of Sandwich. He failed to clear the car ahead, sideswiping it and it crashed into the ditch. The Rogow car continued along a short way and then crashed into the ditch on the opposite side.

In the Richards' car were: Mr. and Mrs. Richards and their baby, Miss Nancy Richards and Miss D. Wilson of Young's Point. The baby had its mouth cut in the crash and Miss Wilson suffered a severe cut on her hand which required seven stitches to close. The Richards were returning home after visiting for the week-end at Young's Point.

In the Rogow car were Mr. and Mrs. Rogow and their son, Joseph. Mrs. Rogow had her glasses broken and suffered injury to her eyes.

CONTEST WINNERS ARE ANNOUNCED

New Brunswick For Beauty, B.C. For Size, Is C.P.R. Verdict

Extraordinarily beautiful, with a flare of Autumn coloring, ranging from light yellow to deep blood red, and of perfect symmetry and form, a leaf from a red maple sent in by Mrs. C. McConnell, Fredericton, N.B. No. 3, York County, N.B., has been awarded the first prize in the nation-wide "most beautiful maple leaf" competition conducted by the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The judges felt compelled to award honorable mention to three others in the most beautiful leaf phase of the competition. These awards were made to Miss Marjorie Gillespie of MacTier, Ont., who was also awarded the special prize of $5 for the most beautiful collection of maple leaves, Miss Emma DesRosiers, of Couvent, Maple Wood, Waterloo, Comte de Shegong, Que., and Mrs. Della McLaughlin, of Grand Falls, N.B.

British Columbia outstripped all the others in producing the largest leaf. The honors in this phase of the competition went to six-year-old Bobby Hume, 913 Mackenzie Avenue, Revelstoke, B.C. He surprised the judges with a leaf containing 222 square inches.

COBOURG HUNTERS ARE HOME AGAIN

Deer Plentiful And Weather Quite Severe—Plenty Of Snow

The Ruby Lake Hunt Club, made up of Cobourg hunters, have just returned and report deer very plentiful. They brought home their full allotment allowed the party, which was nine. They were camped on the shore of Ruby Lake, just 300 yards from the Canadian National tracks, sixty miles north of Parry Sound. It is stated this year's weather was quite severe and keeping the cottage warm was quite a problem.

The snow was quite deep, but was a great help to the hunters tracking the deer. They claim the deer-shoot is very tame sport without the dogs. The wolves are very numerous and many deer are destroyed by them, as several carcasses were found in the bush.

Another hunting party from Cobourg returned and were not so lucky as the Ruby Lake sports, as they were camped on an island about thirty miles up the bay from Pickering River. They also report deer very plentiful, but severe weather conditions made the trip very uncomfortable. They returned home without bringing their camp outfit and the deer they had shot, which will not be brought out until the lays are firmly frozen over to make the transfer safe.

MEETING OF PRESBYTERY

Morning And Afternoon Session Held—Meeting In Evening

The Cobourg Presbytery of the United Church met in the United Church, Port Hope, on Friday with regular sessions in the morning and afternoon and a public rally in the evening. In spite of sickness and conditions of weather and roads which affected attendance, interesting and profitable addresses and discussions characterized the sessions. Rev. G. D. Campbell of Camborne gave an impressive devotional address followed by a discussion led by Rev. M. L. Hinton of Castleton.

The work of the Evangelism and Social Service was specially featured under the direction of Rev. D. McTavish, convener, Rev. D. N. MacLachlan, D.D., of Toronto, speaking on the value of a religious survey.

In the evening, owing to the unavoidable absence of Dr. A. J. Irwin of Toronto, Rev. D. McTavish spoke on the "beer and wine situation." Luncheon and supper was served by the ladies of the church with much satisfaction to the delegates and a fine fellowship was enjoyed.

Death Claims W. H. Hall, Funeral Here Wednesday

(From Tuesday's Daily)

The death took place at the Port Hope Hospital on Monday, November 20th, of William Henry Hall, husband of Harriette Gray. Deceased was the son of the late William and Elizabeth Hall and was born in Port Hope on December 15th, 1862. He was in his 71st year and death was due to heart disease.

Left to mourn his passing are one brother of Port Hope, one sister of Flint, Mich., a wife, three daughters and a son at home.

The remains will rest at the Funeral Apartments of Messrs Jex and Smith until Wednesday morning. The funeral service will be held at the residence of his son-in-law, Jack Tweed, Hill street, on Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock, with interment at St. John's Cemetery.

The deceased was a carriage painter by occupation and was employed at Chalk's Carriage Works for many years. He was very fond of music and played in nearly every band that has been formed in Port Hope during the past fifty years. He was an excellent clarinet player.

Lime is known under several names: quicklime, burnt lime, caustic lime, stone lime, etc., chemically it is calcium oxide, that is, a compound of the two elements calcium and oxygen.

COBOURG COUPLE ACCEPTS CALL ESTATE TANGLE

Sister And Brother Contestants In $1,000,000 Estate At Geneva, Ill.

Mrs. Frank Benson, Cobourg woman, and George Minifie, her brother, contestants in a $1,000,000 will battle, are leaving soon for Geneva, Ill., where they will give evidence in connection with an action contesting the will of the late Mrs. Fannie Bishop Henderson, who died three years ago in Aurora, Ill., leaving her vast estate in the hands of William George, bank president and cotton mill owner.

Fifty witnesses are testifying in regard to the case and an attempt is being made to show that Mrs. Henderson was not of sound mind when she made her will, and that she had been unduly influenced by Wm. George. When the case previously came up in circuit court at Geneva, Judge Frank Shepherd took it from the jury. Counsel for defendant and contestants had battled throughout the case, objecting on many occasions to various points of the evidence. T. F. Hall, K.C., Cobourg, is looking after the interests of Mrs. Benson and Mr. Minifie.

Mrs. Benson told that the executor of the will was free to do what he chose with the estate. "He is not bound under the terms of the will to build the old people's home referred to in the will and does not have to convert the estate to that purpose," she declared.

Mrs. Henderson was an eccentric figure in Aurora, where, until her death, she drove about the streets in her electric car. She had an almost absolute disregard for the condition of her apparel, it is stated, but loaded her fingers with diamond rings and her wrists with bracelets.

She was the last of the pioneer Bishop family, her late father being a former mayor and wealthy citizen, who died in 1892. Mrs. Henderson was twice married; first to Christopher House, who died in 1888, and later to William Henderson, who passed away in 1923.

The famous will, around which all the litigation centres, was drawn up by William George in 1922. Her husband was living at the time, and under the terms of the will was to receive an allowance of $500 a month as long as he lived. The residue of the estate was to go to erect an old people's home on the old Bishop farm, just north of Aurora. In 1931, before her death, she added a codicil to her will, making further bequests of minor nature.

Although it is known that she was married twice, it was a sensation when Lionel Barbour, Detroit lawyer, claimed that he was married to her in 1925 and that she had made him her sole heir. This alleged will was never found.

ACCEPTS CALL LOCAL CHURCH

According to word received here to-day, Rev. E. K. Smith of Manitow, Manitoba, has accepted the call to become pastor of the Port Hope Baptist Church. Rev. T. E. Meldrum's duties ceased at the end of October and plans will now be made for the induction of the new minister.

Rev. Smith and his wife are both graduates of McMaster University and the members of the church here are looking forward to their arrival. Rev. Smith preached here on Sunday, Nov. 5th, and later in the week addressed the Prayer meeting and the B.Y.P.U.

SENT 300 CARS OF VEGETABLES

East And West Join To Supply Needs Of Relief Areas On Prairies

Up to the end of October 9,000,000 pounds, or 300 freight car loads of fruit and vegetables have been shipped into the needy prairie districts, the United Church's national relief committee announces. The report is for 1933 shipments only.

In British Columbia 22 car loads, five or six of them community cars and the remainder United Church shipments, were loaded for the prairies in recent weeks. Northern Saskatchewan has sent 100 carloads to southern parts of that province on a community basis with Rev. George Dorey, Regina, as organizer, Manitoba has supplied 58 cars to needy parts of the province under a community plan. The relief committee is awaiting reports of Alberta's shipments.

In the east, Ontario has supplied 110 cars and the Maritimes 10 cars under the committee's direction. In several cases a number of other church bodies co-operated with United Churches to supply the fruit and vegetables. Of the eastern total, 118 cars were shipped to Saskatchewan and two to Manitoba.

The United Church's committee has also sent 851 bales of used clothing this autumn from Ontario to the West. Shipments of food and clothing are continuing as there is a great need to be supplied. Christmas gifts for children in relief areas are now being arranged for.

WEDDING BELLS

KENNEDY—OLAN

A quiet wedding took place at the parsonage, Millbrook, when Estella Mary Olan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Olan, Millbrook, was united in marriage to Mervyn Albert Kennedy of Bewdley, the Rev. W. W. Jones, B.D., officiating.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Vera Olan and by Miss Edyth Patterson of Ardel and the groom was supported by Mr. R. Carr of Millbrook; Mr. Luther Olan gave his sister away.

Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy will reside on the groom's farm at Bewdley Rice Lake.

INCREASE IN FAIR RECEIPTS

Millbrook Society Pays Off Eighty Per Cent Of Prize Money

The Millbrook Agricultural Society held its regular meeting, the president, A. S. L. McCamus, in the chair, and the financial report presented by the secretary-treasurer, J. N. McGill.

Encouraging features of the report included the fact that gate receipts at the fall fair in October were up almost one hundred dollars above last year's figures; that the number of members retained is 169 as against 97 the previous year; and that the note held by the bank has been reduced by $450 in the last twelve months, chiefly by the successful street dances sponsored by the society last August. The prize list, however, is approximately one hundred dollars more than last year, and after considerable discussion, on motion of H. A. Fallis and L. W. Smith, it was decided to pay eighty per cent of the prize money, and the special prizes in full. For the past two years the society has found it possible to only pay seventy-five per cent of the prize money, so again there is an improvement in this year's showing.

The prize list was $1,244.75; foal club, $42; horsehoes, $10; speeding in the ring, $140—totaling $1,436.75. Gate receipts at the fair were $599.60; entry fees, $165.50 ($35 more than in 1932); booths, $37; government grant $291, while last year it was $380. Grants from Cavan and Millbrook council total $275. The concert and dance on the two fair nights netted $119.20. On motion of J. J. McKnight and T. W. McCamus the treasurer's report was adopted as read.

On request of the chairman of the grounds committee, H. A. Fallis, a number of men repaired to the fair grounds, at the close of the meeting, which adjourned on motion of L. W. Smith and A. J. Henderson, to remove some snow fencing which had been in use for the fall fair. During the meeting the secretary reported that, since the department did not furnish judges this year and the society had been obliged to secure those who served in this capacity, the majority of those who responded to the SOS for assistance had done their work, refusing any financial remuneration other than their meals and complimentary tickets to the grounds.

21ST BATTALION LINKED WITH AUSTRALIAN UNIT

Another link in the chain that binds the ex-service men of the Empire together has been forged by the 21st Canadian Battalion Association which has just arranged a fraternal affiliation with the 21st Australian Infantry Battalion Association of Melbourne.

The 21st Canadian Battalion was mobilized at Kingston in November, 1914, and proceeded overseas in the 4th Canadian Infantry Brigade, in May, 1915, arriving in France in September, 1915. It was the first battalion of the 2nd division to go into the front line, relieving a battalion of the East Surreys at Messines on September 19, 1915.

EASTERN FARMER FROZEN TO DEATH

John Little, 79, Meets Tragic Death On Highway Near Belleville

Falling faint in the darkness, within 25 feet of the place at which he intended to rest for a while to warm up before proceeding on his way home Tuesday night, John Little, 79, well-known Tyendinaga farmer, was found at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning, frozen to death, in the ditch at the side of No. 2 Highway, half a mile east of Shannonville Village.

The discovery was made by Andrew Maracle, who lives on the Slash Road. Little had been missing since Tuesday night, on his way home from a sale which had taken place in the afternoon five miles from his home and was walking back by easy stages.

During the night his family became anxious and conducted a search but as they live on a farm off the highway on Concession 1, it was difficult to trace his steps, for he had not gone directly home, but had come down the gravel road to the Provincial Highway to make his way back in easy stages.

No inquest will be held, Dr. Eckardt, Shannonville, decided. There were no marks on the body, and the aged man had evidently taken a weak spell or been overcome by the severe cold and blustering light snowstorm.

He leaves his wife, a granddaughter, Aletha Marie King, at home; one son, Archie, at home; another son, Robert, at present in Milltown; three daughters, Mrs. Samuel Jones of Latta, Mrs. Allan King of Holloway, and Mrs. James Jackson, Belleville. Three brothers, James, of Milltown, and Robert and Joseph of Oswego, N.Y., also survive. Mr. Little was a member of Shannonville United Church.

ACQUITTED ON THEFT CHARGE

Charged with theft of an electric clock, razor, shirts, etc., the property of J. C. Howell, of Montreal, who was visiting at the home of L. A. Ott, Victoria Street, Arnold Coughlin, Port Hope, appeared in County Court at Cobourg this morning and was acquitted. A second charge, that of receiving stolen goods, is proceeding this afternoon.

Bert Gibbs, formerly of Port Hope and who will appear here to-morrow, confessed that he had stolen the articles in question. They were left at Coughlin's home and he had never told the latter where they had been obtained.

Under the circumstances, County Judge L. V. O'Connor stated that he was obliged to dismiss the action.

ENGAGEMENT

The engagement is announced of Miss Kathleen Dorothy Leslie, only daughter of Mrs. Jean Leslie of Welcome and the late Mr. Norman Leslie of Manitowoc, Wisconsin, to Mr. Willard Randall, Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Randall, Brantford. The wedding to take place early in the Spring.

A breeding stud of Clydesdales is maintained at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, to provide replacements among the work horses and also material for horse breeding and rearing studies.

SUCCEEDS TO TITLE

Sir John Beverley Robinson, who succeeded to the baronetcy on the death of his father a few days ago. The new holder of the title, fifth in succession from the original Sir John, is 38 years old and conducts a real estate business near Burk's Falls, Ont.

35TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Presentation Made To Mr. And Mrs. John Bamsay—Address Read

Upwards of twenty-five friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Bamsay, Quay's Crossing, to celebrate with them the thirty-fifth anniversary of their wedding. The evening was spent in euchre and crokinole and at midnight lunch was served.

Mrs. Victor Austin read the address which appears below and Miss Ruby Austin presented Mr. and Mrs. Bamsay with a dozen dessert spoons and a large linen tablecloth. Both Mr. and Mrs. Bamsay made suitable replies.

The following address was read—To Mr. and Mrs. John Bamsay, Port Hope, Ontario.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Bamsay:—We, a very few of your friends and neighbours, have gathered here at your home to-night to extend to you hearty congratulations and well wishes on this your thirty-fifth wedding anniversary and we sincerely hope you both will be spared to enjoy many more years together and with your family.

"We could not let this evening pass by without letting you know that we fully realize what splendid neighbours you both have been all these years, ever ready to lend a helping hand, and may we ask that you accept these gifts from us as a kindly remembrance of your own family and neighbours.

Signed, RUBY AUSTIN, MARION AUSTIN, ET AL.

NATIVE OF PORT HOPE DIES IN TORONTO

Native of Port Hope and resident of Toronto, for four decades, Adelaide Toms, wife of William Toms, 212 Albany Avenue, Toronto, died Monday after a few days' illness with pneumonia, at the age of 78 years. She was a member of Olivet Congregational Church, Hazelton Avenue. Besides her husband, one daughter, Edna, at home, a son, William John Toms, and a sister, Mrs. E. Martin, Toronto, survive.

CROP REPORT

Extracts from reports submitted by Agricultural Representatives:

WESTERN ONTARIO
LUFFERIN—Nearly all roots are harvested but occasional fields are now buried under a foot of snow and it is doubtful if conditions to harvest them will become favourable at this season.

HALTON—During the past week we have had a rather intensive freeze-up, snow has fallen intermittently for three days and at the present time the weather is quite wintry. In the north end of the county many turnips are still to be lifted and unless the weather abates their quality will be decidedly impaired. Picking of apples has been stopped. A certain percentage of growers have been caught by the sudden freeze-up, although our marketable crop is going to be heavier than average.

SOUTHERN ONTARIO
BRANT—Quantities of red clover and alfalfa seed coming forward steadily. Red clover is selling at about 10c per lb. cleaned. Large quantities of apples being offered; price low at present due to much poor quality.

MIDDLESEX—At the sales of Pure Bred Shorthorns held during the week in the county, bulls have been in fairly active demand at prices ranging from $75.00 to $140.00 for best animals. Females have been slow sale, however, and in a number of cases have been withdrawn on account of low bids. Grade stock are returning very low prices at many auctions, good cows going from $20.00 to $50.00 and feeder cattle from 2c to 3c. Some cattle are still being exported each week with grade being at somewhat of a premium. Quite large numbers of cattle are being put in to feed that would have been sold under normal market conditions. Since the recent drop from 9c per qt. bottled milk in London has been holding fairly steady at 7c per qt. although there are some reports of price cutting even at that figure. Potatoes are selling at 75c per bag in the field and up to $1.00 per bag on urban markets. There has been particularly heavy movement of apples both by truck and by rail, over 80 cars having gone out by rail to date. Prices for cider and ordinary commercial apples, have been rather low, ranging from $5.00 per ton up, with best No. 1's netting around $3.00 per barrel.

CENTRAL ONTARIO

HASTINGS—Many cheese factories have closed for the season but a few continue to run. The average price will be about 10c for the season in this section.

PRINCE EDWARD—Winter weather has prevailed during the past few days and many young cattle are now being stabled. A real heavy rain is needed before freeze-up as many wells are dry. Egg production is good in well cared for flocks of early hatched pullets.

EASTERN ONTARIO

FRONTENAC—Drovers are only offering from $3.00 to $5.00 for dry cows in fair condition so that there are not many changing hands unless the farmer finds it absolutely necessary to reduce his herd. Eggs on local market are selling for 40c per doz with dressed poultry around 3 lbs. selling at 20c per lb. There has been considerable reduction in the amount of milk going to the cheese factories in the county. Farmers are looking for an increase in the price of milk as a result of this. Considerable hay has been purchased in the County at prices ranging from $10 to $14 per ton.

LENNOX AND ADDINGTON—Considerable fall of snow on Thursday has resulted in most cattle being stabled. Most herds are only in fair condition and some are quite poor. If the cold weather continues, farmers will be facing an abnormally long winter with a very short supply of feed.

NORTHERN ONTARIO

TEMISKAMING—Live stock of the district are in very good condition, having had fairly good pasture all fall and most of the young stock have been running out up to within the last ten days. Plowing has been quite general in the district up until last week and has been many years since so much plowing has been done in the fall. While there have been several carloads of stock shipped to the Toronto market, they are not offering as much as last year. Prices offered are somewhat disappointing to the farmers—two year olds are bringing from $15 to $25 per head. Poultry that is in fair condition is finding a ready market. Eggs are selling at around 40c per dozen.

Exports of Canadian butter and eggs to the British market have increased during the first nine months of this year.

FAIR FEATURES ALL PROVINCES

Day Is Set Aside For Each To Help Idea Of National Unity

"Canadian Day" is the designation chosen for the opening session of the Royal Winter Fair. The succeeding days are dedicated to each of the provinces, combining the three Maritime Provinces into one.

On each of the provincial days it is expected the various ministers of agriculture of their representatives will be present, and each province and its exhibits will be featured through parades of livestock in the arena and in many other ways.

The reason for featuring the provinces, according to Col. Harry McGee, president, is that it not only promotes the immediate needs of Canadian agriculture, but also contributes to the idea of national unity.

This year the order will be: Canadian Day, Wednesday, Nov. 22; British Columbia Day, Thursday, Nov. 23; Maritime Day, Friday, Nov. 24; Quebec Day, Saturday, Nov. 25; Alberta Day, Monday, Nov. 27; Manitoba Day, Tuesday, Nov. 28; Saskatchewan Day, Wednesday, Nov. 29 and Ontario Day, Thursday, Nov. 30.

ROSSMOUNT

On Monday evening about twenty-five gathered at the home of Mrs. J. C. Clunie to honor Beryl on the eve of her departure to Belleville, where she will continue her training in the General Hospital. Cards were played, prizes being won by Mrs. Harold McCallister and Herb Goodwin. Vocal solos by Miss Phyllis Goheen and Wm. Bateman. At midnight a dainty lunch was served by the hostess.

A surprise birthday party in honor of Hugh Foster was held on Tuesday evening at the home of his parents. Euchre was played. Prizes were won by Miss Margaret Clunie and W. R. Kinsman. A dainty lunch was served at midnight.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Foster and daughter, Muriel, of Niagara Falls, are guests at the home of Mrs. Wm. Foster.

Misses Margaret and Beryl Clunie and Hene Sopha spent Tuesday with Mr. and Mrs. John Cornelius at Bethel Grove.

Miss Beryl Clunie, has gone to Belleville to resume her training at the General Hospital.

C.P.R. Clerks Are Urged To Take 5 Per Cent. Cut

Acceptance by C.P.R. men of an additional five per cent reduction in wages was recommended by the executive committee of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handler, Express and Station Employees. A similar cut of 15 per cent was recently agreed upon between the running trade employees and both Canadian Railways.

Canadian National clerks have not accepted the cut and will present their claims before a board of conciliation, already appointed.

STRAW AS AN ABSORBENT

Straw when used as bedding for live stock will absorb from two to three times its weight of liquid, and if finely cut will soak up about three times as much liquid as when uncut, says the Dominion Chemist. Further, the absorptive capacity of dry sawdust and fine shavings is from two to four times that of ordinary straw.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. R. Lockhart and family wish to thank their friends and neighbours for all the kindness shown them in their recent sad bereavement.

EXPORTS REACH HIGH FIGURE

Trade Recovery Vigorously Continued As Depression Fades

The recovery in Canadian trade, which observers of commercial activities have already noted, was continued during October, when both Canada's imports and exports were greatly increased over the corresponding month a year ago. Figures issued by the Department of National Revenue show that a setback in wheat exports has been more than overtaken by semi-manufactured products.

Regarded in Government circles as reflecting the operations of the Imperial Conference agreements, a considerable upswing took place in the export of meats and forest products. At the same time unmanufactured nickel exports have been enjoying a buoyancy in the last two or three months that is reminiscent of the boom days of mining.

Copper has also experienced a resurrection recently, and although its increase for the export trade has not been quite so spectacular as that of nickel, nevertheless it has been decidedly marked.

In the past seven months nickel exports have risen from $3,868,563 to $15,908,761, while those of copper were boosted from $7,217,275 to $19,728,387.

In the same period meat exports have increased from $4,046,127 to $6,874,451. Planks and boards rose from $7,523,540 to $11,757,837 and wood pulp from $9,925,827 to $14,441,136.

Auto Exports Rise

Automobiles and their parts are also shared in the recovery, with exports rising from $2,000,000 in the last seven months to $6,794,578.

Wheat flour exports rose from $10,624,015 to $12,033,134.

Recessions of approximately $6,000,000 in wheat, about $1,250,000 in cheese and $5,000,000 in the export of newsprint were completely offset by the increases in other commodity groups.

In a statement Hon. H. H. Stevens, Minister of Trade and Commerce, declared October's exports to have been the largest of any month since December, 1930. Last month they were $9,213,000, while in the final month of 1930 they had a value of $66,829,690.

"Every month since April has brought a gain in exports as compared with a year ago," said Mr. Stevens. "Up to April there had been steady monthly decrease since 1929."

Returning buoyancy in trade is reflected in revenue receipts. Customs and excise figures for October were $19,503,483, an increase of 15 per cent over those for the same month in 1932.

A decline that had continued for the first three months of the current fiscal year was checked in July. August, September and October repeated the increase. Revenues for the seven months are now placed at $114,190,194, which a drop of $1,871,903 below those for the same period a year ago.

RELIEF SCHEME IS TURNED DOWN

United Counties' Council Declines To Leave Question For 1934 Council

At a special meeting at Cobourg Tuesday afternoon, the council of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham referred to the January session the Provincial Government's unemployment relief scheme.

Several factors influenced the council's decision. They were disinclined to undertake at this late period of the year an expenditure which would have to be provided for by the council of 1934. And it was also their opinion that the work proposed by the Government could be assumed just as effectively by the minor municipalities the towns, villages and townships.

Warden W. F. Rickard of Newcastle presided.

In its new work program the Government proposed that on any necessary construction projects such as the improvement of county roads, building of bridges and culverts and other similar undertakings one third of the cost would be borne by the Federal Government, one third by the province, and a third by the counties. In this scheme the province would also continue its usual grant to the counties of fifty per cent of the cost of labor.

A tentative program of county work that might be started under the Government's plans was submitted by George Greer, county road superintendent, but the council doubted the eventual economy of the scheme in so far as the counties treasury would be affected. The lateness of the season was one deterrent, involving extra costs that could be avoided by having the same work done during the summer.

Mr. Greer's estimate of the total cost of the various improvements he outlined was $25,000 of which the counties would have to pay less than $10,000. On the other hand most of the constituent municipalities are themselves carrying on unemployment relief work on which they receive the same grant provided for counties as a whole, except that the usual subsidy on labor is from 30 to 40 per cent instead of 50 per cent.

The council virtually turned down the scheme by their decision to "lay it on the table" until January.

LIST CARIBOO ON EXCHANGE

Cariboo Gold Quartz To Be Called For Trading On November 23rd

Shares of Cariboo Gold Quartz Mining Company, Ltd., have been approved for listing on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange, Toronto, and will be called for trading Nov. 23. Cariboo shares closed on the Vancouver exchange at $3.15 to $3.20 Thursday. The company is capitalized at 2,000,000 shares of $1 par, of which 1,211,833 shares are issued.

PASTURE DEMONSTRATIONS

Dairy cattle grazed on fertilized pasture yielded 823 pounds of milk per acre more than on unfertilized fields, according to results of standard pasture improvement demonstrations carried out on 26 illustration Stations established by the Dominion Experimental Farms. As typical examples of these methods of increasing the value of pasture, two adjoining fields of three acres each on representative pasture land were selected and fenced separately. One field was unfertilized, and the other received early in spring 100 pounds of nitrate of soda, 350 pounds of superphosphate, and 100 pounds of potash per acre. In June 50 pounds of nitrate of soda were added. On these fields the cattle were grazed alternately.

TWO TORONTO EXCHANGES JOIN

Toronto And Standard Markets Merge With 618,767,983 Shares

Official announcement was made by President Harold Franka of the Toronto Stock Exchange of successful negotiations which will result soon in the merger of the Toronto Stock Exchange and the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange under the name of the Toronto Stock Exchange.

The new exchange will be the largest in North America outside of New York, having total combined listings of 618,767,983 shares, while physical merger, however, cannot be accomplished for some time.

Concurrent with negotiations looking to this merger, efforts also have been under way to bring bond transactions into the exchange by establishing a bond section which would record all transactions now concluded in the various bond-dealing houses of Toronto.

While these plans are not associated, directly with the prospect of a central bank for Canada, as advocated by the Macmillan report, the exchange merger becomes an important item in the strengthening of Canada's financial mechanism.

Brokers agreed that a possible result of the merger may be union of several Toronto and Standard brokerage houses. The new exchange will be operated by a point-board until June, 1935. Until that time at least business will be conducted on the two floors as at present, so that member houses will be obliged to maintain two floor staffs. A series of house mergers would eliminate this expense and other overhead items, as well as providing superior service to clients and the investing public.

CARIBOO STRIKES SANDERS VEINS

First Of Objectives Gives Best Ore Found In Mine

Striking of the first of the group of the Sanders veins by Cariboo Gold Quartz on Cow Mountain is perhaps the principal mining news of the year in B.C. because it proves that ore showing on the surface goes to depth in that district. The find is particularly important to other large operators in that era and opens up vast possibilities.

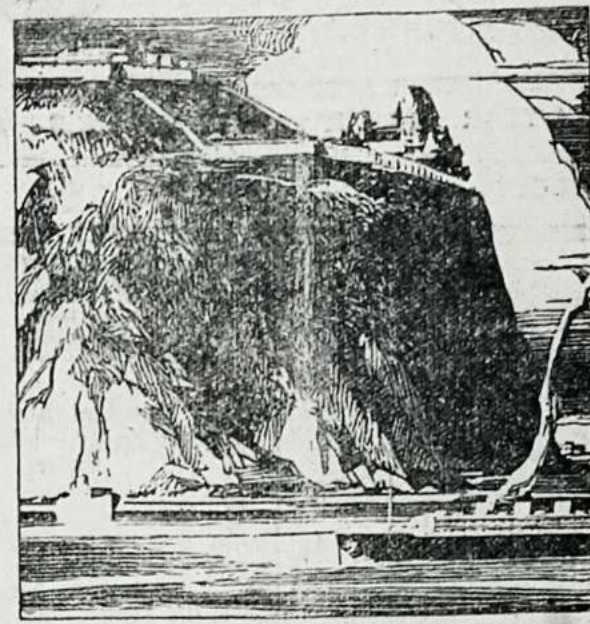

Several other veins were crossed by the main low-level tunnel now driving and while these in themselves constitute a mine, according to John D. Galloway, provincial mineralogist, the Sanders is the first of objectives reached, four more being still ahead. On the surface, the Sanders carried much free gold, and the depth of 600 feet it carries the same high-class ore. The strike was 2200 feet from the portal of the tunnel. Some magnificent samples of the ore were brought to Vancouver by Fred M. Wells, managing director.

This is regarded as a most important find, as it proves the greater enrichment at depth in the Cariboo. Extent of the new ore has not yet been ascertained, but values so far have been quite high. The width is between three and four feet.

The tunnel on Cariboo Gold Quartz is progressing at about 15 feet a day, with continuous work in the face, so that from now on successive results may be expected. The tunnel has yet 6000 feet to go, according to the original plan.

RESTORATION FUND DRIVE CONTINUES

Second Year Of Campaign Starts With Renewed Effort To Reach Objective

With approximately $800,000 subscribed out of a total objective of $1,076,250 the Church of England in Canada is starting the second year of its three-year campaign to replace the missing trust funds of the ecclesiastical province of Rupert's Land, to strengthen the Pension Fund of the church and to provide a sustentation fund for other dioceses in need of financial assistance.

Rev. Canon C. W. Vernon, acting director of the Campaign in the absence of Canon S. Gould, in appealing to church people throughout the Dominion for renewed effort stresses the vital necessity of pressing forward the work in order that the total objective may be secured "so that the $100,000 to strengthen the financial position of the Pension Board and the $200,000 to be applied to the relief of diocesan financial problems and needs may be assured."

Reports that the Restoration Fund had been over-subscribed were inaccurate, Canon Vernon stated in describing what had been accomplished. Subscriptions to the amount of about $200,000 were still required if the church was to go "over the top." In campaigns of this nature there was the inevitable shrinkage through subscribers finding it impossible to implement pledges made in good faith and it was likely that an even greater sum would be needed.

Contributions to the Special Maintenance Fund, established to provide the interest on the lost Rupert's Land endowments and so ensure continuance of Anglican work in the affected western dioceses, have reached over $90,000. This amount represents voluntary subscriptions by bishops and clergy of the church and a 7 per cent levy on missionary salaries and was necessary to provide stipends and pensions for three years or until income is assured from the invested proceeds of the Restoration Fund appeal.

Of the subscriptions already received for the Restoration Fund more than $400,000 has been in cash and practically all of this has already been invested by the Board of Finance of the General Synod.

SLEEPING MALADY SERUM INDICATED

Substances Found In Convalescents' Blood To Protect Mice

Discovery in the blood of St. Louis sleeping sickness convalescents of substances which protect mice against the disease was announced "Science" by the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research.

The announcement adds evidence for a hope generally expressed by medical men that in the serum of human beings or of animals by sleeping sickness, there will be found ultimately one of the immunizing agents useful for protection against encephalitis.

The institute studies have not advanced to the point of testing this serum on human beings. The immunizing agent was detected during extensive experiments of much greater scientific interest, which are also announced.

These appear to disclose the active cause of the disease. They are described by Leslie T. Webster and George L. Fite. These workers inoculated the brains of special strains of mice susceptible to encephalitis, with brain tissue taken last Summer from fatal cases of sleeping sickness both in St. Louis and Kansas City.

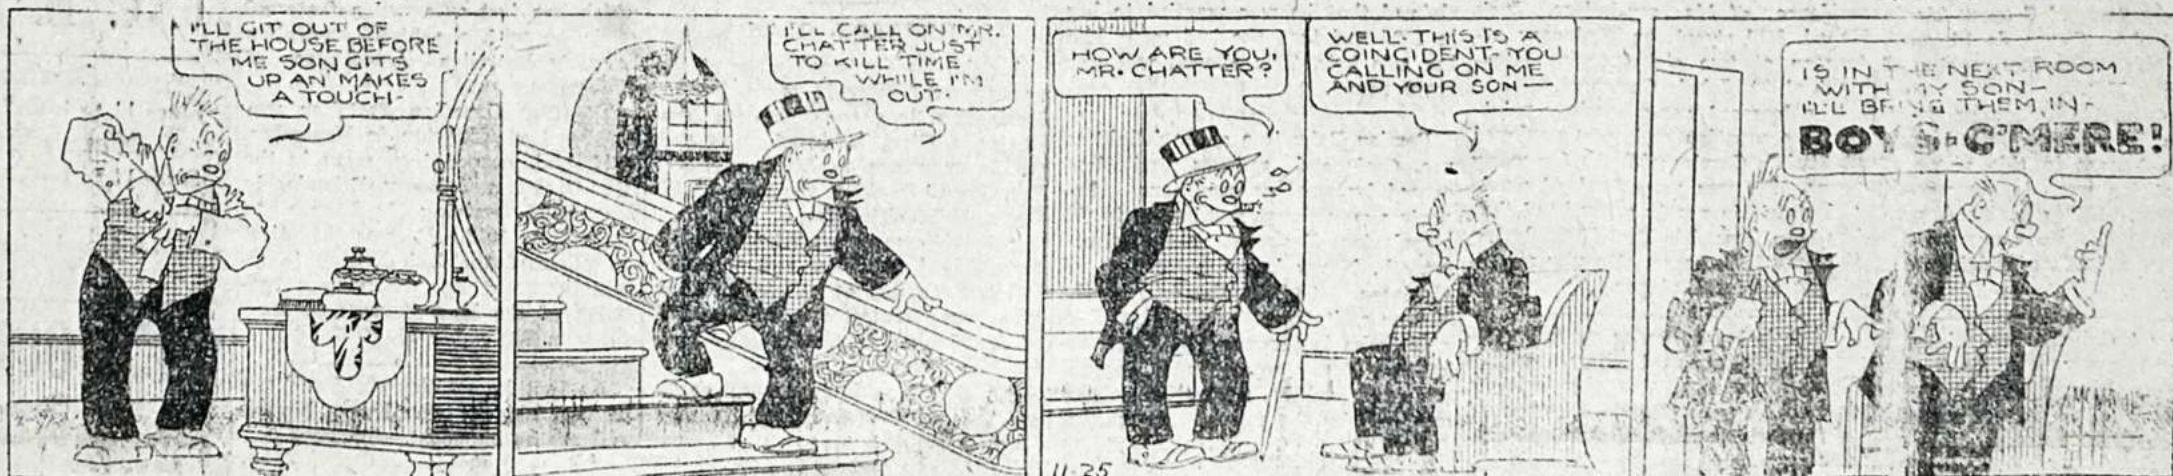

The mice mostly developed sleeping sickness. From these mice, brain tissues were removed and in turn give to fresh mice. This was repeated 15 times. At the end of the 15th transfer, the infection in the mouse brain was uniformly causing sleeping sickness.

The experiments indicated pointedly that the cause of the disease is a virus which cannot be seen under a microscope nor caught in the finest filter.

Especially significant is the fact that when this infected mouse brain was instilled into the noses of other mice, they developed virtually 100 per cent fatal signs of sleeping sickness. This bears out a common medical belief that sleeping sickness attacks through the nose and mouth.

The analyses of samples of milk of 142 mares at Edinburgh, Scotland, showed no marked differences in the composition of the milk of British and continental mares.

TWO GET OFF, ONE SENTENCED

Trio Of Lindsay Youths Face Court In Flaxseed Theft

Following a piece of clever detective work by Provincial Officer Nelson and Chief Lawlor, three young men appeared before Magistrate Jordan at Lindsay charged with breaking and entering the barn of Joseph Tracey and the theft of $60 worth of flaxseed. Robert Padgett and Thomas Zealand were let off on suspended sentence for two years, while Wilfrid Padgett, who had a previous conviction against him, received three months' definite sentence in the Ontario Reformatory and two years less one day indeterminate.

The three were apprehended when the officers were able to fit a piece of broken mica found near the barn into a side curtain used on the motor car in which the flax was carried away and sold in Peterboro. Robert Padgett and Thomas Zealand made restitution of the $60.

GELERT R.R. STATION DOING BIG BUSINESS

During the past two weeks the railway siding here has been a hive of activity. Several parties have been shipping lumber and ties. Green logs have been loaded on flat cars for shipment to outside points by Thos. Hamilton, H. H. Hill and E. E. McElwain have been shipping cordwood and pulpwood. The regular train has been unable to handle the business and the Railway Company was forced to send out a special wood train for the first time in nearly three years. H. H. Durham County Conservatives Organize at Meeting in Orono

Large Gathering of Party Followers Hear Stirling Address by Hon. William Finlayson, Ontario Minister of Lands and Forests—James Paul, of Fraserville, Succeeds Dr. G. C. Bonnycastle as President

"I appeal to you people that it is the duty of the Conservative party to stand together and see Canada and Ontario through the depression. Do you want to take a chance with any experiment? Do you want the C.C.F.? Do you want the Russian method?" proclaimed Hon. William Finlayson, M.P.P. of East Simcoe and Minister of Lands and Forests, at Orono, Durham County, Wednesday night.

"The President of the United States has a new campaign," he said, referring to the N.R.A. "and the rest of the world is sitting back and gasping. The experiment in the United States is one of interest and dangerous. The greater part of the world's supply of gold was collared. You cannot eat gold. There it is the source of embarrassment."

Mr. Finlayson's address was one of optimism. He referred to the surplus which the Ontario government had for the fiscal year ending in October and stated that the country was slowly and surely moving out of the depression toward better times and cited several instances to prove his contention.

From all parts of the historic riding of Durham, party followers braved icy roads and zero weather to attend the annual meeting of the Durham County Liberal-Conservative in the Orono Town Hall. The special speaker for the occasion was Hon. William Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests in the Ontario Government who for nearly an hour held the rapt attention of the large audience, while he related the accomplishments of the Tory governments, both federally and provincially.

Officers Elected After six years of service as President of the Durham County Association Dr. G. C. Bonnycastle, of Bowmanville, relinquished his post and the meeting unanimously endorsed the appointment of James Paul, Fraserville, veteran Conservative, as the succeeding President. Other officers were selected as follows.—1st Vice-President, W. F. McMahon, Port Hope; 2nd Vice-President, C. E. Rheder, Bowmanville; 3rd Vice-President, R. Waddell, Orono; Treasurer, R. U. Hayden, Port Hope and Secretary, Capt. J. C. Gamey, Orono; Executive, the officers together with the Presidents of the Township organizations.

Following the meeting, refreshments were served and a dance program was carried out.

In accepting the Presidency, Mr. Paul thanked the meeting for the honour and proudly proclaimed that as a young lad he followed the footsteps of his father in joining the Conservative ranks. He stressed the importance of early and complete organization and the injection of young blood into the service. He announced that Mrs. Howard Fallis of Peterboro, who was billed as one of the main speakers, was unable to attend owing to illness.

Fred W. Bowen, Durham County M.P., welcomed the followers from all points of the district. "Times are not just what we like," he said, "but we console ourselves by belonging to the Conservative ranks. This country is not the only one passing through difficult times. In the last three years we have gone through times which no other government has ever experienced and we have a man at the helm who has proven equal to the occasion." The speaker characterized Hon. R. B. Bennett as an outstanding man of finance and due to his experience and knowledge, the country stands in an enviable position, able to meet all foreign and domestic loans.

(Continued on Page Two) He was outstanding at the Ottawa Imperial Conference and the good of the treaties are beginning to be felt, with the speaker especially citing the preference on the shipment of apples to the Old Country. Mr. Bowen also commended Hon. George S. Henry, Ontario leader, whose government will show a small surplus despite prevailing conditions and pointed out that expenditures had been pared to the bone.

Milton J. Elliott, former warden of the United Counties of Durham and Northumberland, introduced Hon. Mr. Finlayson, member of East Simcoe and Minister of Lands and Forests.

NOV. MEETING MORRISH W.I.

Garden Hill Members Guests—Mrs. W. McHolm Had Charge Of Program

The November meeting of the Morrish Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Hanan with 45 present. In absence of the president, Mrs. W. T. Marvin occupied the chair.

Everyone joined in singing the Institute Ode. The December meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. W. Marvin. The president then welcomed the Garden Hill ladies, the guests for the afternoon. It was decided to leave Sunday evening service and supper over until the first of the year. Mrs. Williams was chosen as delegate to attend the convention at Toronto. A committee was formed to look after relief work. Mrs. W. McHolm gave a report on the blankets made out of old woollens.

Mrs. W. McHolm had charge of the afternoon program,—topic, League of Nations and Disarmament. Everyone joined in singing, "There's a Long Long Trail." Mrs. W. McHolm gave a paper on League of Nations. Mrs. A. Lewis gave a paper on "Is the League of Nations Worth While?" Reading, Mrs. W. Gray — Starless Crown. Mrs. G. E. Bamsey gave a paper on Essentials for Disarmament. All joined in singing one verse of O Canada. Solo, Mrs. V. Dunbar. Organization of the League of Nations, Mrs. W. McHolm. Contest on the word "Institute" won by Mrs. Lord. Demonstration on Singercraft given by Mrs. McHolm.

The meeting before the social half hour, was closed by singing, God Save the King.

LINDSAY PAYS FINAL TRIBUTE

Joseph Staples, Ex-Port Hoper, Buried At Lindsay — Born At Port Britain

Citizens in every walk of life attended the funeral at Lindsay Friday of Joseph Staples, who died on Wednesday in his 82nd year. The service was held from the home of his daughter, Mrs. Walter Calvert, St. Paul Street, to Riverside Cemetery, with Rev. A. E. Jones officiating.

Mr. Staples had been quite active until a few weeks ago. As a former member of the Town Council and school trustee, he was widely known throughout Lindsay district, where for many years he owned a store on the corner of King and St. Peter Streets, now owned by his son Harold. He is survived by his wife, Annie Spence, two daughters, Mrs. Walter (May) Calvert, Mrs. Allan (Olga) Blewett; one son, Harold, and a sister, Mrs. Ada Elliott, of Manitoba.

The late Mr. Staples was born in Port Britain, and received his early education in Port Hope. After attending finishing school in Omemee for the position of a public school teacher, he took up his first duties at Frankill, near Ennismore, and later at Port Granby. Nearly 50 years ago he came to Lindsay and started farming east of the town. Later he moved into Lindsay and operated a grocery business.

He was a staunch member of the Queen Street United Church and for several years took an active part in municipal affairs. On his retirement from active life about 17 years ago, Mr. Staples has been living in Lindsay with his children.

WEDDING BELLS

ARDRON — HALL

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Madison Hall, Orono, was the scene of a pretty wedding, when their daughter, Mary Catharine, was married to Frank B. Ardrion, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. James Ardrion of Toronto, in the presence of the immediate families. Rev. J. H. Osterhout officiated, and Miss Edra Best, cousin of the bride, played. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely gown of white satin, with lace coat, and carried Joanna Hill roses. Mums, in all the autumn shades, were used for decorations. Later, the bride and groom left for points east, the bride wearing a brown frock, fur coat, with suede hat and accessories to match. On their return they will reside at Toronto.

DIVISION COURT

County Judge L. V. O'Connor presided at the November sittings of the Division Court here and evidence was taken in five cases.

The case of Roy Dayman vs. L. Butson, of the Oshawa Laundry, for $25.57, was settled between the parties.

Miss Mary Grandy, Port Hope, vs. Fred Brown, of Hope Township, for an account of $81.90 for taxes, stands, for written argument.

Mrs. E. McCurdy, Port Hope, sued W. J. Challis, of Bowmanville for $200 damages involving the sale of a car. Plaintiff was given judgment for $75 and costs while a counter claim of $25 entered by defendant was dismissed without costs.

The case of Mrs. Nellie Lowell vs. Sarah Caroline Clark, administratrix of the estate of the late Henry Badger, for a board bill of $210 was heard and judgment reserved.

E. Norman & Co., Toronto sued W. F. Babcock, a garnishee on the Bank of Montreal amounting to $377.65 and the case was adjourned to Chambers.

ACID STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Sufferers From Indigestion CUT THIS OUT

"Stomach trouble, dyspepsia, indigestion, sourness, gas, heartburn, food fermentation, etc., are caused nine times in ten by chronic acid stomach," says a well known authority.

Burning hydrochloric acid develops in the stomach at an alarming rate. The acid irritates and inflames the delicate stomach lining and often leads to gastritis or stomach ulcers. Don't dose an acid stomach with pepsin or artificial digestants that only give temporary relief from pain by driving the sour fermenting food out of the stomach into the intestines.

Instead, neutralize or sweeten your acid stomach after meals with a little Bisurated Magnesia and not only will the pain vanish but your meals will digest naturally. There is nothing better than Bisurated Magnesia, to sweeten and settle an acid stomach. Your stomach acts and feels fine in just a few minutes. Bisurated Magnesia can be obtained from any reliable druggist. It is safe, reliable, easy and pleasant to use. It is not a laxative and is not at all expensive.

MONDAY, NOV. 20.

It's rather sharp out to-day.

The young ladies and gentlemen are reminded they have a fine institution in the church societies. The way to keep them worth while is by attending and doing your part to the best of your ability.

Rev. T. E. Meldrum, former pastor of the local Baptist Church, preached both services at Oshawa Baptist Church yesterday. At the Port Hope Baptist Church, L. B. Randall conducted the morning worship and W. P. Tickell officiated in the evening. It is expected that Rev. E. K. Smith will take over the charge next month.

Under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, a successful rummage sale was held in the basement on Saturday afternoon. Mrs. J. Box and Mrs. L. Freeman were the conveners of the event.

Rev. John Line of Emmanuel College, Toronto, preached at the Sunday morning service at the United Church here and spoke to the Men's Forum in the afternoon. The crowd would have kept him talking to this moment had he not made his escape three minutes before train time at a quarter to five.

Brpton Basilia, world's record-holder for milk and butter-fat production, was the chief guest at a banquet given in her honour up at Brampton on Saturday night to celebrate the world's record which she recently established. We presume the contest was "in the bag" right from the start.

Practically the entire membership of Cobourg Hospital Board was re-elected at the annual meeting in the Town Hall. J. D. Hayden was re-elected chairman for his 33rd consecutive term. Vice-President is Judge L. V. O'Connor; secretary-treasurer, Harry Field; Directors, J. T. Field, Mrs. H. Higginbotham, Mrs. A. Fullerton, Harry Field, Monsignor A. F. Kelly, Rev. J. B. Rhodes, A. C. The crippled children's clinic sponsored by the Lindsay Rotary Club and held in the Ross Memorial Hospital and in the I.O.O.F. rooms of the Temple Building, has proved to be a blessing and a much larger undertaking than the other three that have been held in the past ten years.

At least sixty-five children from Victoria, Haliburton Counties were expected at the clinic, but there were more than that many tested for eye defects alone, and around twenty-five were examined by the orthopaedic surgeons in the hospital. Dr. McDonald of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto; Dr. Williams of Toronto; Dr. Sutton of Peterboro, with the assistance of F. Logan of Lindsay and other Victoria county doctors, conducted the examinations at the hospital.

Widening of Kingston Highway between Oshawa and Toronto for relief of congested traffic and to provide for employment of men from Oshawa and municipalities along the highway, is strongly proposed by Oshawa Property Owners' Association. The association will seek to gain cooperation of the City Council, Chamber of Commerce and municipalities along the highway in taking the matter before the Provincial Government. The matter was brought before the association by ex-Mayor John Stacey, who suggested the project should be undertaken under the projected plan of public works to relieve unemployment.

TUESDAY, NOV. 21.

Good morning! Where do we go from here?

World news has some more interesting points with U.S. buying more gold when they already have more than they know what to do with; the World Disarmament Conference breaking up; Spain taking an election seriously and the U.F.O. asking for a divorce from the C.C.F.

Now that the nations are in plenty of trouble the citizens are taking a more active interest in choosing men to govern them—where they still have the freedom to elect.

The members of the Young People of St. Paul's Church enjoyed a skating party at Beamish's Pond on Monday night, later returning to the church where lunch was served. Next Monday evening is Press Night and anyone having items are asked to leave them with the President, Bruce Gibson.

At the regular meeting of the Baptist Young People last night, Rev. Bruce Jennings was the special speaker and dealt with Coast Missions in British Columbia and his talk was most interesting. Harry Van Everdingen presided.

There was skating at Bowmanville rink on Saturday night, while in Peterboro last night, band was present at All Saint's rink.

James Lynch of Peterboro was elected president of the council of the Ontario College of Pharmacy, while M. R. MacFarland of Almonte was chosen vice-president at the opening session of the new council's semi-annual meeting, held at Toronto. Standing committees also were appointed.

Alderman Harold Armstrong, chairman of the Belleville Light Committee for the past four years has announced his candidature for Mayor. He will oppose the present Mayor, George O. Tice. Nominations will be held Monday.

Harry Smith of Rossmore believes he has developed an almost perfect breed of water dog. Three pups born to a mongrel mother owned by Smith have web toes. They are otherwise normal and healthy.

TELLS TALE OF EARLY PIONEERS

E. C. Guillet Addressed Women's Canadian Club Here Saturday Night

A lecture of unusual interest was given Saturday evening in the Town Hall, when E. C. Guillet of Toronto, addressed the Women's Canadian Club on "Early Days in Ontario."

Mr. Guillet, who is the author of the book bearing the same title, has made an exhaustive study of this subject and presented his material in a vivid and entertaining manner. He dwelt on the early life of the pioneers rather than on political events or constitutional development in the province.

The speaker described a number of institutions which have now passed away, but which played an important part in the early days and laid the foundation of the social life and intercourse of a hundred years ago.

Among these institutions were the "bees," those co-operative organizations which made it possible for both men and women to achieve what would otherwise have been impossible for two or three pairs of hands.

Election days, the travelling circus, parades of the militia, the National Societies and the Fire Companies were colorful events at which people met for miles around. These usually were brought to a close by a country dance in the rural parts and in the larger settlements like York and Kingston in grand military balls.

Mr. Guillet read several passages from his book, chiefly letters descriptive of this phase of pioneer life and at the close of his lecture showed a number of interesting slides, not a few of which were pictures of Port Hope and the neighbouring districts in the early days of their history.

EXTRA PLOUGHS CLEAR HIGHWAYS

Department Of Highways Keep Roads Free Of Snow

To cope with the heavy snowfall all over the province which threatened to make highways impassable, the Department of Highways borrowed four additional snowplows to augment their own equipment in clearing the traffic arteries of snow, Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Minister of Highways, said.

"We are sparing no efforts to keep the roads reasonably clear of snow," said the minister. "When we found that more plows were necessary we obtained four and if present conditions continue, we will borrow some more. There have been heavy snowfalls in the Guelph district with between a foot and two feet of snow packed down hard on the roads. Similar conditions prevail in many other sections. Our officials have instructions also to sprinkle sand on all slippery surfaces."

WEDDING BELLS

FOOTE—BURNS

A wedding took place at Cobourg Saturday with Rev. W. E. Woodger officiating, when Anna Kathleen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Burns, Carleton Place, became the bride of Mr. Howard E. Foote, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Foote, Lanark. The bride wore a becoming gown of blue velvet with silver and carried pink roses. She was attended by Miss Anna Poxon, of Toronto, who wore wine velvet. The groomsmen were Mr. Ernest Foote, Cobourg, brother of the groom. They will live in Carleton Place.

ORME GAMSBY MARKS SEVENTIETH BIRTHDAY

Orme Gamsby, of Orono, veteran sportsman of that village and widely known through the district, observed the seventieth anniversary of his birth on Friday last and was entertained by a number of friends. Orme is still going strong and his many friends wish him many more happy years.

Colborne Resident Dies.

Funeral Service Tuesday

The death took place at Colborne on Saturday night of B. H. Coyle, husband of Clara Henderson. The service, which will be private, will be held from the family residence on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, followed by service at Colborne United Church. Interment will made at Union Cemetery, Colborne.

ANNIVERSARY AT ST. PAUL'S

Rev. Palmer Preached In Morning And Rev. Rhodes Of Cobourg In The Evening

Large congregations, powerful sermons and extra music featured the annual anniversary services at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church here on Sunday. In the morning, the regular minister, Rev. Dr. K. H. Palmer preached while in the evening, Rev. J. B. Rhodes, of Cobourg, was the special minister.

At the morning worship, the choir, under the direction of the organist, A. H. N. Snelgrove, sang two anthems and at the evening service, the choir of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Cobourg, presented a delightful musical cantata. The local choir presided in Cobourg in the evening at St. Andrew's. In the afternoon, a special Sunday School service, with the Superintendent Arthur Mark in charge, was presented in the church auditorium. An illustrated talk, which proved very interesting, was given by the minister, Rev. Dr. Palmer, and in the first set of slides, views of the Holy Land were depicted while the second set dealt with the life of Joseph.

As far as is known, no record exists which establishes definitely when the first Presbyterian service was held in Port Hope. It is reasonable to assume that in the early history of the town, citizens of the Presbyterian faith became accustomed to meeting together from time to time for divine worship and that they were ministered to as opportunities offered by wandering missionaries or by the incumbents of neighbouring charges.

While the beginnings of Presbyterianism in Port Hope were thus vague, there seems to be no uncertainty as to the fact that the year 1827 witnessed the inception of a movement having as its object the erection of a church building and because this event marked the formal organization of the local Presbyterians into a congregation, it is regarded as the date of the establishment of the Presbyterian Church in the town.

The first church building, which was completed in 1831, was a frame structure, erected on Baldwin Street. At the time it was constructed, it stood in a pathless wood. It was not until 1835 that the church received its first permanent minister. Prior to the induction of Rev. John Cassie in that year, the congregation had been cared for by a succession of visiting preachers, prominent among whom was Rev. Robert Thornton, who was stationed at Whitby but whose ministrations extended from fifty miles beyond that town.

During the twenty-seven years that Mr. Cassie was minister of the church, its membership grew from thirty to two hundred and a new church edifice had to be erected. He was a leading figure in the community and when he passed away in June, 1861, his death was lamented not only by his own congregation but by his fellow-townsmen generally.

The new church built during Mr. Cassie's ministry became known as the First Presbyterian Church. It was erected in 1854 on the site of the old wooden church and was opened on October 1st of that year. In its day, it was regarded as a fine example of ecclesiastical architecture, having a large square tower with four pinnacles as its principal outward feature. After considerable opposition to the innovation had been overcome, a pipe organ was added in 1870 and from time to time, changes were made in the interior arrangements in keeping with modern ideas.

In this old church, following the death of Mr. Cassie, there ministered in succession, Rev. Dr. Walters, Rev. William Donald, Rev. R. J. Beattie, Rev. J. W. Mitchell, Rev. B. Canfield Jones, Rev. J. K. Smith, Rev. A. G. Sinclair and Rev. H. E. Abraham. During the ministry of the last named clergyman, the feeling which had been growing for some time that the interests of the congregation would be better served were a more central location secured and a larger church erected, reached the point where definite action was taken and in 1906, the present building on Walton Street was erected and dedicated.

Under the successive pastorates of Rev. T. L. McCullough, Rev. E. A. Eareham, Rev. F. W. Anderson, Rev. H. D. Cameron, Rev. J. Goforth Hornsby, Rev. R. B. Nelles and now Rev. Dr. K. H. Palmer, formerly of Hamilton, the church has greatly prospered and now stands free of debt, a monument to the sturdy spirit of Presbyterianism in Port Hope and district.

Canada comprises 27 per cent of the total area of the British Empire.

OSHAWA LAWYER SAVES THE DAY

Summons Served After Time Limit — Charge Dismissed At Oshawa

The failure to serve a summons within the required time limit set down by the Highway Traffic Act resulted in the dismissal of the case against Aaron Kates, charged with reckless driving in Oshawa Court. Kates is owner of a truck which was driven by Gerald Lawrence of Frankford. Lawrence was convicted on a charge of reckless driving and a fine of ten dollars plus court costs was imposed.

The charges arose out of an accident which occurred on October 27, at about 11.30 p.m. when the truck driven by Lawrence, proceeding east on the highway at Harmony crossed over to the wrong side of the road, striking the car driven by Don Kinlock of Oshawa.

The evidence of both parties was heard in the case against Aaron Kates and just as Magistrate Creighton was prepared to give a decision of conviction, the counsel for the defence, Louis S. Hyman, sprang a surprise when he objected to the case on the ground that the summons had not been served on Kates within the specified time. The summons was taken from the police files and it was found that it had been served on November 7, just eleven days after the offence and one day over the limit. If the accident had occurred about one half hour later, making it Oct. 28, Kates would have been convicted Magistrate Creighton intimating.

Lawrence was given a fifteen-day time limit in which to pay the fine or costs with the option of ten days in the county jail on default of payment.

SECOND DAY OF COOKING SCHOOL

Demonstration Of Various Dishes Given — Prizes Are Presented

Under the auspices of the Department of Agriculture, the second day of the Cooking School was held at the Town Hall here Tuesday. Schools will be held at Brighton on November 16th and 17th and at Napance on November 20th and 21st.

The session on Tuesday was largely attended, the auditorium being completely filled, while in the evening, another large contingent of women turned out. Demonstrations of various dishes were given by the two instructors being Miss M. E. McDiarmid and Miss Betty Wallace.

The classes were under the personal direction of J. B. Fairbairn, Deputy Minister of Agriculture and Tuesday afternoon, J. W. Purcell of the Ontario Hydro Commission briefly spoke.

On Tuesday afternoon, the instructors dealt with the preparation of meat dishes while in the evening, instructions were given on the preparation of refreshments for informal occasions.

Keen interest was taken in the draw for the various prizes, the lucky tickets in the afternoon being drawn by Mrs. J. T. George and in the evening by Miss Amber Morton.

The various prize-winners were as follows:— Pair of towels, donated by Fulford Bros.—won by Mrs. V. Coleman. Small server, donated by H. B. Rosevear—won by Mrs. A. Carr. Salt and pepper shaker, donated by C. M. Thompson, Selrite Store—won by Mrs. J. Lajoie.

For the purpose of electing representatives to the Thirteenth Older Boys' Parliament which will be held in Toronto on December 26, 27, 28, 29, 30 and 31st, a general election will be held on December 2nd. C. E. Eastman has been appointed Returning Officer for Port Hope. Frank Corbett is the present member for Port Hope.

No boy will be eligible to vote who has failed to have his name placed on the Returning Officer's voters' list by Saturday, November 25th. Any boy who has passed his 12th birthday but not his 21st birthday on December 2nd, 1933, who is a member in attendance for at least twenty-five per cent of the meetings of a Sunday School class, Trail Ranger or Tuxis Boy group that is duly registered with the Ontario boys' Work Board, is eligible to vote.

WESLEY TROUPE MINSTREL SHOW

Presented Here Tuesday Night Under Auspices Of Port Hope Lions

The Wesley Minstrel troupe, from Wesley United Church, Toronto, scored a success at St. Mark's Parish Hall here Tuesday night, when they presented their ninth annual minstrel show. This is the second occasion that these boys have appeared in Port Hope and a capacity house warmly applauded their efforts last night.

It is estimated that over 400 persons attended the show and the committee from the Lions in charge was President William Giddy, Arthur S. Smith, Ralph Hodgson and C. M. Thompson, chairman. The entire proceeds will be used in the relief program here this winter.

The Master of Ceremonies for the program was H. G. Thurston with the director of production being Harold G. Williams, organist of College Street Baptist Church, Toronto.

A feature of the show was the clever interpretations by Charles Pooley, well known Toronto xylophonist, who contributed generously to the program. The end men of the show turned in real good performances and included Jack Valiant, Ted Hill, Tom McReynolds, Max Guthrie, Ralph Richmond, Stan Valiant, Jim Arnott and Art Cusick. The singing chorus of thirty voices rendered southern and popular melodies which were well received by the crowd.

LOCAL W.C.T.U. HOLDS MEETING

Oshawa Young People Will Present Play Here On November 21st

The local W.C.T.U. held a meeting in the United Church primary school room on Tuesday afternoon, with the President, Mrs. T. G. Hutchinson presiding, and conducting the devotional exercises.

The President then gave an interesting report on the recent W.C.T.U. convention at Peterboro, at which she was the official delegate. This convention was considered one of the best in years, large delegations coming from outside points. Remarkable on the work of the Travellers' Aid Branch of the W.C.T.U., she said that in Toronto alone 16,000 travellers had been assisted in various ways during the past year.

ENGAGEMENT

The engagement is announced of Viola E. Cruse of Peterboro, daughter of Mr. W. J. Cruse and the late Mrs. Cruse of Bewdley, to Edmund S., only son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis E. Jones, of Port McNicoll. The marriage to take place early in December.

HOG INDUSTRY SUBJECT OF TALK

Drivers And Truckers Of Five Counties Meet At Peterboro

"We are faced with the need of action of some sort in the swine industry because of the opportunities now open to us on the English market," H. J. Maybee, of Toronto, acting director of Ontario Hog Graders told a group of more than 50 hog drovers and truckers of Peterboro, Victoria, Hasting, Northumberland and Durham Counties gathered at a dinner at Peterboro as guests of Canada Packers Limited.

G. S. Matthews, manager of Canada Packers, explained that under Ottawa agreements Canada was now allowed to ship up to 60,000 hogs per week to England, although now Canada was only shipping 15,000 per week.

All agricultural representatives stated that they would heartily support the new policy to improve the hogs in the district. Others to endorse the policy were: Vivian Milburn, managing director of Peterboro Exhibition and M. Wilson, hog shipper of Campbellcroft.

FINE MEETING LOCAL REBEKAHS

School Of Instruction Here Thursday Afternoon—Degree Conferred In Evening

With members of the Rebekah order present from all parts of District No. 18, a School of Instruction was held in the local I.O.O.F. hall on Thursday afternoon under the direction of Ganaraska Rebekah Lodge. About 65 members attended with Whitty, Oshawa, Bowmanville and Port Hope being well represented.

Sister L. Freeman, Port Hope, District Deputy President, was in charge and after each Lodge had taken part in the work, the various phases of the work were enlarged on by Sister May Thomas, of Lindsay and Sister Mabel Disney of Oshawa, both Past Presidents of the Rebekah Assembly. The session proved interesting and instructive and at the conclusion, lunch was served.

Activities resumed again in the evening when the meeting was augmented by more members, with the total gathering over the 125 mark. The staff of Oshawa Lodge No. 3, with Bro. Caverley as Captain of the Degree team, initiated five candidates. The work of the evening was cleverly executed and won the plaudits of the members.

Following the lodge room ceremony, a banquet was served with the usual speeches being made and various toasts honoured.

During the ceremony, beautiful bouquets of mums were presented to the District Deputy President and the two Past Presidents.

CADET QUESTION TO BE REVIEWED

Matter To Be Fully Discussed At Future Meeting Of Local High School Board

Some discussion took place at the regular meeting of the High School Board Tuesday night in regard to the School Cadet Corps and the advisability of retaining or abolishing the corps. It was decided to postpone future discussion to a later date when the matter will be fully considered.

The matter of obtaining a safety deposit box where the board's documents and records might be safely stored was considered. At the present time the books and records of the board are in the vault at the Town Hall. It was suggested that a lock should be obtained for the board's compartment but finally the matter was left in the hands of the Finance Committee.

A proposition whereby the boilers at the public schools and the high school could be inspected on a joint basis was presented and the matter was referred to the finance committee to confer with the Public School Board.

C. E. Eastman and H. J. Dignan, of the teaching staff addressed the board requesting the purchase of basketballs for use by the boys. Their request was granted.

The Board adjourned to meet the first Tuesday in December.

COBOURG BATTERY TO HOLD SMOKER NOV. 27TH

On Monday evening, November 27, it is expected that the Armouries in Cobourg, will again be crowded with artillery men, but, on this occasion, they will be renewing old acquaintances and listening to the stories of the days in the muddy Ypres, of the interesting events in Amgre and it is within the realms of possibility, that the story of life in French and Belgian Estaminets, where the war was won and lost in the minds of many several times will be related.

On the occasion those of this district, who enlisted with the "Cobourg Heavy" are extended an invitation to come to Cobourg and spend an evening with their former comrades. The committee in charge are Lieut. Col. A. E. Hopper, Bert Banks and V. J. Butler.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS EARNINGS

The gross revenues of the all-inclusive Canadian National Railways System for the week ending November 14, 1933, were $3,028,114 as compared with $3,000,627 for the corresponding period of 1932, an increase of $27,487.

ASS'N ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

Rev. A. G. Emmet Heads Ministerial Association Of United Counties

At the regular monthly meeting of the Ministerial Association of the United Counties of Durham and Northumberland, an election of officers was held with the following results: President, Rev. A. G. Emmet, Port Hope; Vice-President, Rev. J. B. Rhodes, Cobourg; secretary-treasurer Rev. W. F. Banister, Canton. The retiring officers were: Rev. W. E. Honey, President; Rev. T. E. McDerm, vice-President, and Rev. A. J. Jackson, secretary-treasurer.

During the meeting, Rev. W. P. Woodger, Cobourg, gave an excellent resume of the philosophy of David Grayson, and afterwards conducted a general discussion. Plans are being made for the winter meetings and all ministers are invited to attend.

PLAN FORMATION OF POLICE ASS'N

Lake Shore And Central Towns And Cities Solid In New Association

Police chiefs and constables throughout Eastern and Central Ontario are solidly behind the newly-organized Police Association of Ontario, according to Chief Constable Samuel Newhall, of Peterboro, who recently made a tour of the district. Chief Newhall is a past president of the Dominion Association of Chief Constables and he has been one of the prime movers in the organization of the new association.

Purpose of the new association, according to Chief Newhall, is to make for closer co-operation between the municipal forces throughout the province, to improve police methods and to secure a better understanding among the public of police difficulties and problems. One of the chief purposes is to endeavour to secure a pension upon retirement for municipal police officers. Not only will membership in the association be open to police chiefs but also to constables of cities, towns and villages.

All members of the Peterboro police have joined the association and many village constables in the near-by district. Chief Newhall said that the policemen of Oshawa, Bowmanville, Port Hope, Cobourg, Belleville and Lindsay have been interviewed and have expressed their intention of joining the association.

AID STATIONS UPON HIGHWAY

Survey Along Highway Being Made To Reach Decision

Under a plan mooted by the Ontario Motor League roadside emergency first aid stations will be established at principal points along the route of number two highway between the heavily travelled section of Montreal and Toronto. A survey is already being made with a view to selecting the points, according to W. H. McIntyre, vice-president of the Ontario Motor League. It is hoped to have the Red Cross Society and the St. John Ambulance Society cooperate in this work.

It is expected that regular attendants will be selected by the St. John Ambulance Society which will train them and equip the first aid stations with stretchers, blankets, a first aid kit and other necessities for the injured. The O.M.L. will extend its activities in this line each year if the scheme meets with success until all the principal roads in the province have been so equipped.

Whether a site for the first aid station will be chosen in the immediate district of Belleville, one of the local points of the Ontario Motor League is not known by the officials of the League or the Belleville Chamber of Commerce.

BETHEL GROVE

Over 130 people attended the presentation and dance at Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Cornelius' home recently. The evening was spent in dancing, music being supplied by Messrs. Walter Rose and Percy Maybee. Lunch was served at midnight after which Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius were called to the centre of the living room and Miss E. Barkwell read the following address.

Bethel Grove, Ont. Nov. 4th, 1933.

Dear Ossia and Thelma:—
 "We, your friends, have gathered here this evening to extend to you our most sincere wishes.

"We are glad to know you will be our neighbours and will mingle with us in social and business ways.

"During the years we have known you, Ossia, you have proved yourself a kind and helpful neighbour and we feel that you have chosen a partner who will help you to continue as such during future years.

"As a symbol of our friendship and esteem, we take this opportunity of presenting to you these articles which we hope will always serve to remind you of the friends present with you to-night."

Signed on behalf of "THE CHIVARI BOYS"

Bert Lightie presented the bride and groom with a handsome cabinet of silver. Both Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius thanked the boys for their gifts and invited their many friends to pay them another visit but to come in smaller numbers.

Everyone joined in singing 'For they are jolly good fellows' and dancing was enjoyed until the wee small hours of the morning.

It will allay inflammation in the bronchial tubes.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Roger Lockhart, who passed away at Port Hope Hospital on Sunday, was held from the residence of her son-in-law, Arthur W. Fisher, King street, Tuesday afternoon with the Rev. D. McTavish, of the United Church, and Rev. Dr. J. T. Daley, officiating.

The late Mrs. Lockhart had been practically an invalid for the past ten years but her condition became serious some time ago following a fall. She was born at Welcome, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Grimison. Her father was one of the pioneers in this district and for many years conducted a carriage shop in the village of Welcome.

She is survived by her husband, one daughter, Mrs. A. W. Fisher, Port Hope, one sister, Mrs. Robert Little, Hamilton Township, and one brother, Thomas Grimison, Peterboro.

The funeral was largely attended and the pallbearers were, Messrs. J. D. McMillan, W. D. Stephens, J. A. R. Elliott, B. Hudson, J. Freestone and W. Woodcock.

ROBERT K. BALL

The death of Robert K. Ball occurred suddenly at his home at Lynn Valley Sunday evening following a heart attack. He was born at Hamilton Plains, near Cobourg, March 14 1852, and had lived at Lynn Valley for the past 22 years, having also resided in Port Dover and near Peterboro. Surviving are four sons and two daughters, Frank and Bruce, Port Dover; John, Lynn Valley, B. W. Ball, Simcoe; Mrs. James Field and Mrs. Harry S. Austin, Simcoe. Also remaining are two sisters, Mrs. William Wright, Garden Hill, and Mrs. Alex Pratt, Port Hope, and a brother, O. T. Ball of Ayr. He was predeceased by his wife in 1914.

DAVID JAYNE

David Jayne, prominent Haldimand Township citizen, who died on Saturday in his eighty-eighth year, was a son of Stephen and Elizabeth Jayne, and descendant of a pioneer family, who emigrated from the United States to Hay Bay in 1784. Deceased was married in 1871, to Abigail Philp of English descent, but like her husband, a lifelong resident of Haldimand. His wife, one son and two daughters, predeceased him, but Mrs. Jayne lived to celebrate with her husband their golden wedding. Surviving their father are three sons: S. L. of Cobourg, Norman on the homestead, and Herebert L. Jayne of Osborne, Idaho; two daughters, Laura E. and Mary A., at home. Mr. Jayne was the last of a family of eleven brothers and sisters. After a service at the family home in Haldimand, the remains were interred in Cobourg Union Cemetery.

THE SPEED LIMIT PROBLEM

Proposals to increase the automobile speed limit in Ontario do not fit in very snugly with the announcement that a survey is being made for the purpose of establishing first-aid stations along highway No. 2 between Toronto and Montreal for the purpose of rendering assistance to injured motorists.

This step is equivalent to an admission that serious automobile accidents are increasing to such an extent that it has been found necessary to provide emergency treatment for the victims.

There are many motorists who declare that the present speed limit is too slow, but the fact remains that high speed is the cause of a great many accidents, and that most mishaps caused by fast driving are of a very serious character.

This has been found to be the case in Great Britain where no speed limit is insisted upon, and where fatal motor accidents have been increasing until there is a daily average of twenty deaths from this cause.

The result is that the British authorities have come to the conclusion that excessive speed is the main cause of these fatalities, and a dispatch the other day stated that the British Government is considering imposing an arbitrary speed limit.

Ontario's motor accident record, bad as it is, is better than that of other Canadian provinces and the States of the Union where fast driving is legalized, which goes some distance toward proving that the present speed limit has its usefulness in keeping down accidents.—Peterboro Examiner.

BRITISH WAYS

Those who inspected the Royal Scot here last week manifested an interest which could scarcely have been expected when 6,585 persons passed through in the space of five hours. To inspect the train meant the formation of a line in a chilly winter's day and evening, but that did not daunt the interest of Canadians, who, knowing what Canadian trains are, wanted to know what the far-famed British trains are like.

The Royal Scot is British and satisfies the demands of the British public. It is peculiarly fitted for the physical conditions of England and Scotland. Engineers know that.

But the sociability of this train is what might have been expected of British Coaches. The sociability that is so much a characteristic of the English and Scottish people finds expression in their trains.

Conditions are different in Britain and in the New World, trains are not alike both from the standpoint of engineering and the demands of the public. Just as Gothic temples fit into the landscape of the countries where the fir and pine grow and where mountain peaks and hills rise, so the Royal Scot fits into the country through which it runs. That is from an engineering standpoint. From the social standpoint the train is admirably suitable.

Whether Canadian and United States trains can be built in the style of the British train remains for engineers to show, but there does not seem any doubt that the British train is more sociable.

There is a strong probability that future construction of trains on the North American continent may absorb some of the points so marked in the Royal Scot.

A Canadian or U.S. passenger train spanning the wide expanse of the prairies, climbing the Rockies, and passing through the rich agricultural lands of the east is a majestic sight. Those who have visited Britain know how British trains fit into the landscape.—Belleville Ontario-Intelligencer.

NIGHT OF TRAGEDY

A young Queen's university student, who has just completed a medical course, was acquitted by a jury on a charge of manslaughter, arising from the death of two companions in a motor accident. He was the driver of the car and it was brought out in evidence that the mortoring party of six, en route from Kingston to Belleville, had consumed six bottles of beer and a bottle of gin; also that the speed of the car was such that one of the young women had remonstrated with the defendant and that he had slowed down the pace. Here was a night of tragedy. Two young people with splendid prospects lost their lives. A third went through the harrowing experience of a court trial, knowing that, if convicted, there would stretch ahead, instead of the career in medicine for which he had worked, a term in prison. The jury, however, took a lenient view and gave him the benefit of the doubt, and it is to be presumed that the Queen's university authorities will now give him the graduating certificate which had been withheld, pending the outcome of the case.

Other youngsters, starting out on gay trips, who might be tempted to take aboard a supply of alcohol to enliven their outing, might pause and consider how this particular party to which we have referred was "peppered up"—by two deaths and a court trial.—Hamilton Spectator.

TRUE SPORTSMANSHIP

Six hunters who went to the north for game and helped a poor fear-stricken cow moose out of the muck of the river-bed, near Millbridge, the other day, to allow her to lope into the woods without their firing a shot at the retreating animal are sportsmen of the class who make hunters welcome in any hunting ground.

Of all men this could not be told. But of the true sportsman this is what is to be expected. Theirs is not the passion to kill, kill, kill, for the mere sake of destroying life. Theirs is to help an unfortunate animal, and to observe the laws.

Of course the heroism of the cow moose in the desperate struggle she made to release herself called out the best instincts in the men. Not six armed hunters against a poor caught animal, but six unarmed hunters saving the beast from slow death by exhaustion!

Could the poor creature in her dumb way have expressed her opinion of such generous hunters, how would she have expressed her feelings? It is difficult to say. Even this act of generosity and sportsmanship, no doubt, did not quite assure the King Winter swept the Great Lakes Nov. 15, and the day before and set up his throne on the Kindersley. After buffeting strong winds and a gale all night the 250-foot freighter docked at Toronto harbor, unloaded a cargo and set out late in the afternoon for Porth Arthur and Port William. Waves raged far above the wheelhouse and formed a six-inch "skating rink" on the decks. The photographer was on the scene at the waterfront while men were unloading the cargo and removing the ice with choppers. Here is shown a view of the ice-clad Kindersley.

JURY PROBES HIGHWAY DEATH

Reeve Edwards, Employer Of Dead Man Unable To Testify

Mute evidence of the tragedy that took the life of Charles Corbyn, the Colborne bookkeeper whose body was found on the highway just west of Grafton, a car door handle and several pieces of glass were produced at the inquest at Grafton. The exhibits were found at the scene of the accident by police, who are making an exhaustive investigation with the door handle and glass as their clues. Reeve Ira Edwards, who is stated to have been with Corbyn, an hour before the latter left a tourist inn, is in Belleville hospital suffering from a nervous breakdown. An affidavit of his doctor which stated that he could not be called as a witness for at least two weeks, resulted in the inquest being adjourned until December 1st. Attorney Dr. G. Ferris presided and Col. F. D. Boggs, K.C., examined the witnesses.

Reconstructed from the evidence of witnesses at the inquest, it seems that Corbyn had called at a tourist establishment a few miles east of Cobourg, accompanied by Reeve Ira Edwards, his employer. At 7.15 on the evening of the same day, Nov. 4, Corbyn left the place after stating that he was going to catch the bus and go into Cobourg. Soon after a bus stopped outside and it was assumed that he had boarded it.

William Oulahan, however, passed a man on the highway at 8.00 p.m. on Nov. 4th, who signalled him to stop his car. Oulahan was forced to drive around him and stated that the man was well cut on the centre of the road. Further east on the same highway, one-half hour later, John Cullen of Grafton found Corbyn's body, face downward, feet six inches from the pavement and head pointing south. He turned him over and when he observed that his head was cut, despatched John Slater, who in the meantime had arrived at the scene for a doctor. Another farmer, John Aird, viewed the body and verified its position as described by Cullen and Slater.

LOCAL MEN'S CLUB AT BOWMANVILLE

Port Hoppers Win By 24 Points—Newcastle Here On December 12th

About twenty-five members of St. John's Men's Club braved the cold weather of Tuesday night and visited Bowmanville to play the scheduled game of Carpet Ball in the Deanery Carpet Ball League.

While the teams were preparing to make a start, everyone present was surprised by the unexpected entrance of Rev. C. R. Spencer, who was given a great ovation. The Rev. C. R. Spencer, who has been ill for the past six months is now making splendid recovery and the sincere wishes of all those in this district go to him in wishing him his former health and strength to carry on his duties.

After a brief delay, the games got under way, the Port Hoppers being on the aggressive from the start, hoping to wipe away the deficit of 28 points Bowmanville handed them last month. At the end of the first quarter, the locals held a lead of 19 points but weakened in the second quarter to drop the lead to 18.

After the change of carpets, both teams made a few changes in their line-ups, and had it not been for the skillful play of the team captained by H. Freeman, who piled up an advantage in the second half of 20 points, the locals would have been on the short end of the deal. However, the locals finished up a hard fought game to lead by 24 points.

After the game refreshments were served, after which a few melodies were played on the concertina by W. Piper and were well received and enjoyed.

The results of the game was as follows:—
Bowmanville—
... 48 41 49 52 34 38 37 56—355
Port Hope—
... 51 57 55 45 28 45 50 48—379
Port Hope's next game will be on Dec. 12th when they play hosts to the "Geordies," their old rivals from Newcastle. St. John's Men's Club meets every Tuesday night and the officers and members extend a hearty welcome to all men who wish to avail themselves of the opportunity of a good social evening.

STILL SEARCH FOR MISSING FARMER

Posse Fears Young Nestleton Man May Have Died From Cold

Despite ten days' intensive searching by farmers of the district, no trace has been found of William Hamilton, 27, who disappeared from his parent's farm near Nestleton. The country within a radius of 25 miles has been combed several times.

Groups of searchers in cars are now travelling over all roads in Central Ontario in the belief that Hamilton has wandered a considerable distance. Tuesday there were search parties at Sunderland, Port Hope and the district west of Peterboro.

TWO SENTENCED IN LOCAL COURT

Gibbs Goes To Burwash For One Year And Kelpy Off To Guelph

Bert Gibbs, formerly of Port Hope, was sentenced to one year at Burwash Farm and J. Kelpy, of Toronto, aged 20, was given a year at the Ontario Reformatory at Guelph when they appeared on theft charges in police court at the Town Hall here this morning before Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell. The pair were arraigned on Monday and pleaded not guilty but when Gibbs admitted the theft in the Coughlin trial at Cobourg on Wednesday, both men changed their pleas here to-day.

They were charged with stealing a clock, razor, two suits of clothes, etc., the property of J. C. Howell. Both Gibbs and Kelpy were given a year at the reformatory on October 26th at Whitby on being found guilty of entering E. Cook's garage and as a result will now serve two years apiece.

The Bench first sentenced Gibbs to the Guelph Reformatory but the accused expressed a desire to go to Burwash and Burwash it was.

LOCAL RESIDENT GETS 9 MONTHS

Arnold Coughlin Goes To Ontario Reformatory—Sentenced At Cobourg

Arnold Coughlin, Bramley Street, was sentenced to nine months at the Ontario Reformatory at Guelph when he appeared in County Court at Cobourg on Wednesday before Judge L. V. O'Connor on a charge of receiving stolen goods, the property of Donald Stevens, Bowmanville garageman.

Another charge, that of stealing an electric clock, razor, clothes, etc., the property of J. C. Howell, of Montreal, was dismissed when Bert Gibbs testified that he had stolen the goods in question.

Coughlin was in the court-room here this morning when Gibbs and Kelpy were sentenced but did not take part in the proceedings.

HALIBURTON GIRL DIES UNDER CAR

Pleads With Escort To Lift Wrecked Auto—Crash Near Lindsay

Pinned under a wrecked auto, Miss Beryl Beatty, young Haliburton County girl, died early Thursday while her escort, Brant Sisson, 25, sought assistance to rescue her.

Thrown through the car window and caught under the car when it turned over, after careening madly down a long grade, the girl was conscious and pleaded with her friend to lift the car off her.

Sisson, who said he was thrown through the windshield, tried to lift the car but could not so left her to get help. While he was gone she died. Immediately after the accident an inquest was opened and adjourned until a later date.

Sisson said he could not see because the windshield was frosted over.

ENGINE FAILED, TRAIN DELAYED

Breakdown In Engine West Of Port Hope And Traffic Delayed

When a breakdown occurred in the oil-electric engine on Canadian National Train No. 10, four miles west of here Thursday afternoon, the train was about an hour and a half late in arriving at Port Hope. No property damage occurred and the break centred in the mechanical end of the engine.

The engine off train No. 95, on the Port Hope-Peterboro run went west to tow the stranded train to Port Hope, and then left on its scheduled run to Peterboro around 5.20. Its usual departing time is 4.10 p.m.

NOTED CURLER IS DEAD AT 81

Evans Bradburn Also Was Business And Political Leader

Evans Bradburn, former M.P.P. for Peterboro West, died there Thursday after a lengthy illness. Mr. Bradburn, 81 years old, was born there and for the greater part of his life was engaged in business as head of Bradburn's Limited.

As a young man he was an ardent curler and did much to popularize the game both there and in Lindsay. He was vice-skip for many years on the J. D. Flavell rink, Lindsay, which first brought the Governor-General's Tankard Trophy to Ontario; and twice he represented Ontario curlers in the Dominion finals in Winnipeg.

During the regime of Sir James Whitney he was one of his followers in the House. Two sons, Col. Frank Bradburn of Peterboro and E. O. Bradburn of Vancouver, and one daughter, Mrs. Cyril Currier of Ottawa, survive. W. H. Bradburn, former M.P.P. for Peterboro West, is a brother.

FORMER MILLBROOK MINISTER PASSES

Rev. James Awde, for many years active in the Methodist Church, died at his home at Hamilton, aged 87.

Mr. Awde was born in Cumberland, England, and when a boy came to Canada with his parents. He entered the ministry in 1869 and held charges at Omamee, Millbrook, Hamilton, Portsmouth, Kempton, Prescott and Montreal. He also served in Brantford and in several churches in the Niagara district. Lately he had been retired, although he was active and in full possession of his faculties.

FORMER PORT HOPER DIES IN VICTORIA

John Longwell Grimison, 61, of Springfield Ave., Victoria, B.C., died suddenly there recently while holidaying at his Summer Home, Shawnigan Lake. When he left Victoria, he appeared to be in the best of health and his death came as a great shock to his family and wide circle of friends.

Deceased was born in 1872, at Port Hope and served as a telegraph operator and druggist in his home town. In 1888, he went to Victoria and entered the services of the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway as a telegraph operator. He advanced with the organization to become its general accountant. He severed his association with the railway company to enter into his own business as a public accountant. He was auditor for the city of Victoria for many years. Later, he joined an automobile firm and was secretary at the time of his passing.

Surviving are his widow, two daughters, Misses Alene and Beth Grimison, two sisters, Mrs. Sherman Gifford, Port Hope, and Mrs. J. Fortune, Victoria, and one brother, Ernest Grimison of Victoria. Interment was made in the family plot at Ross Bay Cemetery.

The Guide Story

"Meaning, I suppose," suggested Berron, "that a pretty face always goes with an empty head."

"According to that, then," said Molly, "no folk can be clever unless they are hideous and we are handsome we must of necessity be fools. That's rough on the good-looking people! Now, you, Mr. Wynne, are an undeniably good-looking man—must we apply your teaching to yourself. Because you have a straight nose a good chin and most expressive eyes, does it inevitably follow that you are a—"

"Fool!" interjected Berron, seeing her pause for a word.

"Thank you," she said, smiling sweetly at him. "That word will, perhaps, do better than the particular one I was going to use."

The men all laughed and Lloyd raised his cap and looked at Molly.

"You have turned the tables upon me," he said, "but, at any rate, I suffer in good company."

"Oh," cried Hargraves, "Miss Wynne is just the exception which is always needed to prove a rule! She is the exceptional combination of wit and beauty."

"You are too complimentary, sir," murmured Molly, smiling wickedly as she made him a sweeping courtesy.

"I had inclined to shock all the young women of neighbourhood by vertising myself in the county paper as 'Miss Wynne, the Wonderful Exception! Combination of Wit and Beauty! Reference to Conyers Hargraves, Esq.' Wouldn't it look well with capital letters? May I use you as my reference, Mr. Hargraves?"

"Is such a question necessary?" returned Hargraves, bowing with exaggerated fervour.

Molly was conscious, however, that Lloyd had left the circle and was tramping off in company with his head-keeper, so she resumed her natural character at once.

"What nonsense we talk!" she said. "Now, good-bye all of you until to-morrow evening."

She stood still for a minute, watching them until the high clumps of brambles hid them from view, and then she went to Jael and sat by her side.

"Jael," she said presently, taking off her hat as she spoke, and passing her fingers through the loose waves of hair upon her temples, "Mr. Hargraves says that Lloyd Wynne has studied for the Bar, and is a full-fledged barrister."

"So he is," returned Jael, watching the weary expression on Molly's face gravely. "Have you a headache, my dear? You look so tired and fagged!"

"No headache—only a little tired. How that girl hates me!" she added, with a smile, half mischievous, half regretful, as one of Jael's friends, who had been sitting by her side, came and left them. "All right, Mrs. Berron!—as she laid her hand lightly upon Jael's lips. "I know it is my own fault. I'm not grumbling—I'm only stating a fact. Do you think, Jael, if I were to turn over a new leaf now—never show any more airs, never talk slang, never lay myself out to attract the men—do you think I could ever recover my lost ground, and become a popular character?"

"Why, Molly," cried Jael, in genuine surprise at the real earnestness in the girl's tone. "I thought you cared nothing at all for the opinion of the Fyllertyn folk!"

"Neither do I!" answered Molly, in her usual manner. "At least, I don't care enough about their opinion to give up my own wicked will for it. But, Jael, about this barrister business—I wanted to ask you why a young man in Lloyd Wynne's position should have gone to the trouble of studying a profession at all?"

Jael hesitated before replying. In spite of the absence of all proof, she knew her father was still inclined to believe that Mr. Wynne, of the Dame's Cottage and John Wynne, the missing heir-in-law to the Druce-Wynne estate, were one and the same. He had tacitly admitted as much to her, by hinting that the delicate generosity which kept Mr. Wynne passive was another point of resemblance between him and the Druce-Wynne family. Remembering this, Jael Westmacott felt a little reluctant, while in doubt on the matter, to touch on the private history of the people who were possibly Molly's own relatives.

But Molly held to her point and persisted with her question until Jael, wondering meanwhile if the girl had any inkling of the truth, was compelled to answer her.

"It was by his father's wish that Lloyd studied a profession," she said at last, hoping that that meagre piece of information would satisfy her companion. But it had the opposite effect, and only served to whet her curiosity.

"But why, Jael," she asked again—"why should he have wished the future owner of such a property as Druce-Wynne to study a profession at all? It looks as if he expected his son would be turned out—doesn't it?—as if he thought there was a chance of Lloyd's losing the property, some day? Had he any such notion, do you know?"

Jael looked keenly at Molly's perplexed face, and, seeing nothing there but simple curiosity, answered—

"I believe that was his notion. Lloyd's father always insisted that his elder brother, who ran away to Australia when a lad, was still alive, and that he would return some day to claim his own. That was why he persuaded Lloyd to fit himself for earning his own living. 'It can do you no harm,' he told him, 'and, in the event of John's return, it would be of distinct service to you.'"

"John?" repeated Molly very quietly, not turning her eyes from Jael's face. "That is my father's name, you know, Jael."

"I know it is, childie," returned Miss Westmacott, trying to speak as though there was nothing striking in the fact. "It is not an uncommon name, you know."

This attempt at diplomacy was a miserable failure, for Molly had already formed her own opinion on the subject. She was glad Jael's attention was called away from her just then, for her thoughts were following each other rapidly—so rapidly that she wanted to be alone.

She rose and wandered away into the depths of the wood beyond the clatter of the dish-packing and the chatter of the ladies, as they retailed the gossip of the luncheon-hour. That her father was the John Wynne who had run away to Australia all those years ago she had not the least doubt. If not, why had he chosen this unknown corner of Herefordshire for his residence immediately on his arrival in England? It was plain to the dullest understanding. It was easy enough, she told herself, knowing her father as she did, to account for his odd conduct in standing quietly by and allowing another to hold possession of what was rightly his. He was not a greedy man. He had enough and to spare for his own and his daughter's wants. Lloyd—as he had taken the trouble to assure himself—was a model proprietor and landlord.

Why, in all these circumstances, should he disturb the existing state of things. There was only one reason why he should do so, and that was the position of Molly herself. By not proclaiming his identity, her father was imperilling her inheritance. Not that she wanted Druce-Wynne. Only, she could not understand how her father, with his keen sense of justice, could commit himself to a course of action likely to result in loss to her. Perhaps he had made a will clearing up all doubts, so that she would, after all, inherit the property. She earnestly hoped not. After her hateful conduct to Lloyd, what an overwhelming Nemesis it would be to find herself turning him out of house and home! She would not do it, she told herself flatly. Nothing should induce her to take possession of Druce-Wynne.

Then, coming she knew not whence or how, another explanation of her father's conduct presented itself. Had he come down here expressly that she and Lloyd might get to know each other, in the hope that something warmer than mere friendship might be the result of the meeting, and thus, by uniting the interests of the two branches of the family, do justice all round without harming any one?

Alone as she was, Molly felt herself flushing crimson at the thought. She believed she had solved the enigma at last. She recalled her father's disappointment of her openly-declared animosity against Lloyd when he had first called at the cottage. She remembered how a sudden look of regret had clouded his face at her expression of violent dislike and how he had objected to her ill-natured remarks about the young man.

A feeling of penitence and shame came over her now as she recollected her wanton ungraciousness, which was rapidly followed by a resolution to make amends by behaving with due amiability in the future. He was, and had always been, such a dear father—so indulgent, so gentle and tender, so thoughtful for her welfare—that she had scarcely felt the want of a mother, and the first time she had it in her power to please him in an important matter she had held her chin in the air and marched off in the very opposite direction to that which he desired her to follow.

Well, she would amend her ways. She would honestly try to be civil to Lloyd Wynne the next time she met him. And even as she made the resolution she recalled his recent look of regret and a touch of feeling, which made her half indignant, half happy, set her heart beating wildly at the thought of the difference her civility might make in her intercourse.

"If I were not quite sure of myself," she thought, as she turned back to rejoin the others—"if I were not absolutely certain that I could never be so foolish as to care for a man until he had gone through the proper amount of abject groveling and supplication, I should be half inclined to think I liked this generally-adored youth in spite of my efforts to the contrary. But, as that is utterly impossible, it must be the thought of pleasing the dear old dad that makes me feel so ridiculously glad at the idea of dropping the offensive towards this unacknowledged cousin of mine. What a mean thing I should feel if I ever came into possession of Druce-Wynne, after snubbing the poor boy like this! It would be too awful to finish up my hateful conduct by robbing him of his entire inheritance! Such an arrangement must be prevented at all costs, yes!—with a sigh of resignation—"at all costs, even at the cost of my independence and liberty!"

Once or twice during the walk home, Jael Westmacott was puzzled by Molly's behaviour. She was strangely quiet and subdued and yet Jael decided that she did not look dejected. On the contrary, she seemed to be in a state of peaceful happiness. There was an entire absence of her usual high spirits and excitement, and in their place was a restful placidity and gladness which set Miss Westmacott wondering as to its cause.

If the final result of the day's doings had been peace and gladness for Molly, it was otherwise with Lloyd Wynne. When Molly had so openly resented his mute protest against her objectionable behaviour, he had been astonished at the sudden bitterness of his own anger. She had only acted as she always did towards him in not missing an opportunity of showing how much she disliked him. Why then should he have been so desperately annoyed by it? In his heart he knew it was because he had hoped, after their encounter at the gravel pit, that some genuine touch of friendship might spring from the feeling she had shown under the influence of her fear.

Hitherto, Molly's indiscretions had not affected him at all. He had occasionally thought what a pity it was that such a pretty girl should have such an objectionable manner, but the thought never remained with him long. He had considered neither Molly nor her actions worth a serious thought. But now, for some unknown reason, he had taken offense at her nonsense and when he turned away from her side that afternoon it was with a bitter determination to hold absolutely aloof from her for the future—to show her nothing beyond the barest civility—for he had recognized the fact that there was danger for him in her society—the danger of conceiving an unrequited affection.

CHAPTER IV.

On the evening of the following day, Lloyd Wynne gave his first formal entertainment to the society of the neighborhood. Hitherto his hospitality, since his father's death, had been of the informal order, and his guests had been expected to take him as they found him. But he had at last thrown open the doors of his fine old house and issued cards for this evening for a "costume dance," thereby creating great local excitement—an excitement wholly pleasurable as far as the ladies were concerned, though among the men its nature was open to question.

Their host was a person of good standing in the county, and was besides a pre-eminently popular man, and as this was his first attempt at a regular entertainment, the general feeling—in spite of a strong disinclination among the male part of the community to make guys of themselves—was that Lloyd Wynne must be well supported. And so it came about that there were very few refusals indeed to his invitations and the whole affair promised to be a great success.

When Molly received her card she had at once decided her intention of going in the character of "a little savage," as a compliment to her host's penetration. Jael had remonstrated with her, but as usual, to no purpose.

"You know Jael, he dubbed me 'a little savage' before he ever saw me," she had answered, "and he ought to take my fulfilment of his prophecy as a gross piece of flattery!"

Much as Jael had tried to persuade Molly not to carry out the idea, she was perfectly reconciled to it when she saw the realization.

With her bright, brown hair lying in a thick, curly mass on her pretty white shoulders, with rows of many-coloured beads on her throat and arms, with a close-fitting cloth bodice ornamented fantastically with large beads, shells, pipe-ends, and cock's feathers, with the snort skirt covered with many fringes of long-haired fur, with the enchanting little leather moccasins, also fur-trimmed, with strings of wampum attached to her waist-belt, and her bow and arrows and bright blanket slung over her shoulders, Molly looked the sweetest, brightest personification one could wish to see of Longfellow's Minnehaha. Indeed Jael suggested this title, but Molly scouted it at once.

"I am going as 'a little savage,'" she said, "and I will be announced as nothing else!"

It was true that, now she had made up her mind to drop her old antagonism to Lloyd, she would have rather gone in any other character to his dance, but there was no time to alter things and she must soften down her part as best she could. Most unfortunately, Lloyd did not receive her friendly advances in a like spirit.

When she entered the large inner hall with her father, they found their host just close to the door, talking with pleasant animation to a group of Faust, Marquerite, and Mephistopheles—evidently a family-party—who had just arrived.

A sudden shyness, caused perhaps by the lights and movement and the unusual scene, did more likely by her doubt as to how Lloyd would take her change of manner, fell upon Molly, and she held on desperately to the furred sleeve of her father's long gown—a stately Latimer—as he went forward and greeted Lloyd who looked well in a splendid Toreador dress.

"How splendid you look!" exclaimed Molly, smiling up at him, as he took her hand for a moment only, and let it drop at once. "But ought you not to have dyed your hair and moustache? I suppose there are some fair men though, even in Spain. Anyhow, the dress becomes you marvelously!"

"You are very kind," he answered gravely and without another word without even a glance at her dress, he turned to her father and greeted him warmly with a smile and a hearty hand-clasp.

For a moment Molly felt snubbed. "At least, he might have given me back my own compliment, and told me my dress becomes me!" she thought. And then she remembered how badly she had behaved the day before, and told herself that he, perhaps, expected a renewal of hostilities and would not give her an opportunity to attack him. "I must reassure him," she said to herself compassionately.

"Do you know," she said, as soon as she could with propriety join in the conversation, "we girls are all so awfully obliged to you for giving us this chance of airing our vanity? One always fancies oneself so much in a costume a little out of the common."

"A little out of the common!" echoed her father, with a smile. "I think your get-up is very much out of the common, my dear."

Lloyd smiled at Mr. Wynne without even glancing at the girl.

"But that won't prevent Miss Wynne from 'fancying herself,' I hope," he said to Molly's father, in a tone which expressed his conviction that nothing would prevent it, and the next moment he was greeting a large party of new arrivals and Molly and her father moved a few steps onward.

Molly was so angry that she would have liked to box his ears. How dared he openly assert that he considered her intolerably conceited! That was what his remark amounted to she told herself. Nor was her amiability at all restored by what followed.

"What a pretty little girl that is in the Indian dress, Mr. Wynne!" Molly overheard one of the fresh arrivals say. "Why is she and what is she supposed to be? What character does she represent?"

"Her own, I believe," answered Lloyd.

"Her own?"

"Yes—a little savage!"

"Oh—shocking!"

"Not at all," remarked Lloyd. "I am not bitter in saying it. Lady Edith, for the young lady poses openly in the character and reveals in her own barbarism."

"She is jolly good-looking!" observed Lady Edith's cavalier. "You must introduce me by-and-by, Wynne—I should like a dance with her. Who is she?"

"A Miss Wynne. And, with regard to introducing you by-and-by, Meesom, it will be of no use. Her card will be full before the second dance is over."

"Is she so popular, then," asked Lady Edith. And Molly, with her eyes fixed upon a convenient mirror, saw Lloyd shrug his shoulders in a way that made her face burn.

Had he known she was still so near him, he would certainly have lowered his voice, but his back was towards where Molly, half-hidden behind her father and a friend to whom he was speaking, was standing, and every word of his reply fell distinctly upon her ears.

"Yes—she is popular with some of the men here who like their fare highly seasoned. My taste does not lie in that direction."

"Dear me—you don't say so!" observed Lady Edith, with visible surprise. "Is she pronounced?"

"She doesn't look it," said Sir John Meesom, in an abrupt way which betrayed his incredulity—and poor little Molly felt she could almost love him. "She looks as if she could hold her own, but she doesn't look a bit fast."

"Try her," answered Lloyd. And then, to Molly's intense relief, her father—who had been talking too busily to hear what was going on—moved on towards the dancing-rooms and she suddenly found herself in the midst of an eager group of suplicants and, with her cheeks still burning with the remembrance of Lloyd's contemptuous words, she plunged recklessly into a desperate storm of chaff with her would-be partners.

She would not acknowledge to herself that she cared in the least for her host's uncomplimentary opinion of her and yet it was really the cruel pain his words had caused her which drove her on all through that evening to the commission of the most reckless actions.

She cut out three dances running with Con Hargraves, hidden behind the curtains in the big window of the room where refreshments were being served, and when her indignant partners remonstrated with her afterwards she declared, with laughing audacity, that she had been so pleasantly occupied that she did not care to be interrupted.

"Well, upon my word," cried Berron, led to their retreat at last by the sound of loud peals of laughter, "if I have not been hunting high and low for the last half-hour for you! And I should not have unearthed you even now," he added, rather sulkily, "if I hadn't heard Hargrave's giggle behind her."

"We were watching you through the opening," returned Molly, smiling up into his face as if she were certain his enjoyment of the joke would equal her own. "You've no idea how absurd you looked wriggling in and out among the people at the table, with your eye-glass in one eye and an awful glare in the other. Are you really savage with me?"

At this direct appeal, put in a pretty fashion, Berron was obliged to give in.

"I'll forgive you if you'll give me another dance in the place of the one I have lost."

"But I can't Captain Berron. My card is full."

"Besides," interposed Hargraves, in his most professional manner, "it would be creating a dreadful precedent. If you do it for Berron, you will have to do it for the other two disappointed ones as well."

"You don't mean to say you've kept her hidden up for three dances!" cried Berron in a tone of intense disgust. "You ought to be flogged!"

"How badly that girl behaves!" murmured Mrs. Prys-Thomas to Lloyd, as they passed the group on their way out and overheard Berron's remonstrance. "I believe she glories in making herself conspicuous."

Lloyd glanced swiftly at Molly—an attention which she repaid by a smile of defiance—and he turned to his partner with a remark of which Molly caught the words, "Educated in the bush, you see," in spite of his carefully-lowered voice.

"Looks bored, doesn't he?" said Berron, seeing the direction of Molly's glance. "It's rough on the poor old fellow, having to do the amiable to the big guns the whole night through. All his dances to-night have been duty dances."

"And Mrs. Thomas, the lady he is with now, expects such a lot of fusing," said Molly. "She has never forgiven me because Mrs. Whitmore asked me to sing as Josephine in the performance of The Pinafore they are getting up at Whitmore's Chays. You see, they made the awful mistake of asking Mrs. Thomas to sing the smaller part, and she considers herself the leading amateur soprano for miles round, you know."

"And are you going to sing?" asked Hargraves.

"No. The dad didn't like the idea. Your father? I thought he always let you do as you liked!"

"So he does, nearly," she answered promptly. "He did not forbid my doing it, you know. Only, I saw the notion was distasteful to him, and so I dropped it at once."

"No!" exclaimed Berron, with some show of surprise. "I should not have thought meek obedience to the paternal rule was much in your line!"

"Do you know, Captain Berron," said Molly, standing up straight before him, "you have a preposterous habit of passing opinions upon matters about which you know absolutely nothing. It makes you look merely idiotic when the matter is one open to discussion. But, when you venture to give your judgment upon private affairs which don't concern you, you show downright bad taste. Shall we go back to the dancing, Mr. Hargraves? I think I've committed myself quite enough for one night, even to satisfy my enemies. I won't disappoint any more partners."

Berron stood for a few minutes just where they had left him, looking around in blank astonishment.

"To think that, after knowing her for a fortnight, I could offend her like that!" he said to himself ruefully. "She has always taken chaff so well before that I never expected her to turn vicious. I suppose it was because I touched upon her father. Every one has a tender point and her father must be hers. Well, I'm awfully sorry I've put her out, and, by Jove, I'll go and tell her so!"

But before he could find her he was due for the next dance, and, when he hunted her out afterwards, circumstances were not propitious for the making of a friend if he had seen Miss Wynne lately, he was told she was in the gun-room with her father, and, going there, Berron found an anxious group round Mr. Wynne, senior.

Lloyd especially was looking distressed and Molly was kneeling at her father's feet gently chafing his hands. Her face was colourless and her eyes were fixed upon her father's face with a touching expression of anxious fear.

"What is it?" inquired Berron of Hargraves, who was near the door. "A fainting fit," he answered. "They've only just got him round. He has been unconscious for a quarter of an hour."

"Is he subject to them?"

"Is seems so. Miss Wynne says his doctor in Australia advised this trip home because they were becoming so frequent out there."

"How frightened the poor little girl looks!"

"Yes, it scared her terribly. This is the first time he has fainted since he left Melbourne last March, she says, and she thought he had quite got over the weakness that causes these attacks. She went almost out of her mind when they fetched her to him, and said it was all her fault for persuading him to come here to-night."

"She's tremendously fond of him."

"Yes," said Hargraves pitifully. "I never saw a father and daughter more devoted to each other! Hush—he's speaking."

"I shall be obliged to stay with you, if you won't stay without me, my dear."

"You will do nothing of the kind, dad," answered Molly, with gentle decisiveness. "Mr. Wynne is going to lend us a car and we are both going home at once."

"But, my child—"

"But my parent," interrupted Molly, with half-playful, but tender wildness, "you will just keep quiet and do exactly as you are told." Then, with quiet determination, "Don't be foolish, dear! You know very well I could not enjoy myself a bit with you out of sight, so what would be the good of my staying?"

He smiled affectionately at her, and, raising his tremulous hand caressingly to her cheek, gave in without further argument.

"The car is ready," said Lloyd.

quietly, going to Molly with a wring in his hand. "I know you are anxious to get out of the noise and bustle so I won't try to keep you. Put this on, Miss Wynne. There is a thick mist outside."

But Molly shrugged her pretty shoulders petulantly and turned from him.

"I sha'n't hurt," she said—"never mind about me."

But he quietly insisted, putting her bare arms into the sleeves of the fur-lined mantle and carefully securing the clasp at her throat before he let her go back to her father.

"I am dreadfully worried at not being able to go with you," he said, at the car door. "But Hargraves will be the best of substitutes. He once nursed me through a bad illness. Don't distress yourself so terribly," he added gently, keeping by her side as she followed her father into the car. But he might as well have spoken to the wind. The girl had no cars, no eyes, no thought for anything but her "dear old dad."

Lloyd saw that she neither heard his words nor was conscious of his proffered assistance, and, when they had driven off, the young man stood on the steps in the chill, autumnal, right air, with a strange feeling in his heart at the memory of the yearning love and fear in the girl's eyes.

What was it about her that attracted him so, in spite of his own better judgment? All the other young women in Herefordshire might display their devoted affection for their fathers to any extent without rousing such keen sympathy as he was feeling for poor little Molly Wynne! The queer part of it was that she was not at all grateful for this wonderful sympathy—estimated it so lightly in fact as to ignore it when offered to her! A sharp sense of his own folly smote Lloyd as this bitter thought presented itself, and with a bitter laugh, he went back to his house and resumed his duties to his guests.

Mr. Wynne's illness did not turn out so seriously as Molly's fright had led her to expect. He was about again in a couple of days, and the Fyllertyn doctor only repeated the advice of his Australian predecessor—regular habits, early hours, and no undue excitement. In the reaction following her terror, Molly went to the other extreme of false security, and flitted about as blithely as a bird, thinking at odd moments a good deal about the relationship she believed she had discovered between herself and Lloyd, secretly longing to be friendly with him, but determined not to make any further advances after the manner in which he had received her last.

OTTAWA MINT BUSY MEETING COPPER DEMAND

C. E. Campbell, Comptroller of Currency for the Department of Finance, has a problem. He wants to know what happened to the 20,000,000 new bronze coins minted at Ottawa in the past 12 months. There are now 25 "coppers" for every man, woman and child in the country and yet the Mint is being taxed to meet the demand. It is all very perplexing to Campbell.

"I wish the banks would tell me what is being done with them for the Mint is being hard pressed to meet the demand," Campbell told.

In the past month the Mint was forced to issue 2,500,000 coppers, swelling to 264,000,000 the number in circulation.

Officials of the Finance Department have searched in vain for a possible explanation of the heavy demand. It might be the odd-salt sales put on by retail stores in an effort to stimulate buying or it might be any of a dozen explanations. But one thing was certain: It wasn't because the coppers could be melted for profit because they are 95 per cent copper 3 1/2 per cent tin and 1 1/2 per cent zinc.

THE WORD OF GOD

GOD IS LOVE. Beloved, let us love one another, for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God.—1 John 4: 7.

PAUL IN CORINTH

(International Uniform Sunday School Lesson, November 26th)

COLLEEN TEXT—"I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified."

1 Corinthians 2:2.
1 CORINTHIANS PASSAGE—1 Corinthians 1: 10-18; 2: 1-5.

Harps are we, silent harps that have hung on the willow trees, Don't till our heartstrings swell and break with a pulse divine.

AN APT LEADER
The Apostle to the Corinthians

As we see some of the problems of the early church. Paul had carried on his mission in Corinth for a year and a half, and several years later, when he was in Ephesus, he heard of the difficulties of his converts. Apollos paid him a visit and the members of the household of Chloe reported the trying circumstances of the church in Corinth. So Paul wrote to them wise counsel and stern rebuke. The first six chapters, mainly speaking, deal with what he has been told and the remainder of the book replies to a letter that he has received from the Corinthians. The probable date of the epistle is 58 A.D. "The first epistle to the Corinthians, written at the close of the third missionary journey may be said to transport us, as on a magician's mantle, back over 2000 years, and stationing us in mid air above a great Greek city, in which there was a Christian church to take the roof off the meeting house of the Christians and to permit us to see what was going on."

A PAGAN CITY
There was constant danger that some of the Christian converts would fall back into their heathen environment. For Corinth was a gay city, thronged with sailors and merchants. Corinth had two seaports and much of the merchandise was transferred from one to the other by land so that there were many transients crossing "this bridge of the untiring sea." It was the capital of the province and also the centre of the worship of Aphrodite and in Corinth there were one thousand priestesses devoted to her immoral cult. The population was one third composed of Jews and the remainder of pagans. A large number of Jews resided in the city but they were greatly outnumbered by the Greeks. The proximity of the Isthmian games made the city festive and pleasure-loving. The epistle to the Corinthians throws a clear light on the life of the Christian church in such an unpromising society. Paul's converts, recently emerged from such unfavourable surroundings and imperfectly taught, were greatly in the minority. Speaking of the Corinthian degenerates Paul said frankly, "And such were some of you."

A DIVIDED CHURCH
As long as Paul remained in Corinth his leadership was unquestioned, but after he had been away for several years the Christian community divided into several groups. Some followed Apollos who was teaching in Corinth, others claimed allegiance to Paul, their former teacher. Certain ones held that Peter was the authoritative guide while others kept separate, claiming to be the only genuine followers of Christ. So Paul pleaded with all in the name of the Lord Jesus to speak the same thing, to remain undivided. He asked, "Is Christ divided? Was Paul crucified for you?" The peace and progress of the church was endangered by rivalry between different groups.

A WISE COUNSELLOR
In the midst of such racial and theological disputes it was fortunate that there was one clear sighted man who could direct these immature Christians. With his exceptional versatility and sympathy, Paul laid down wise principles of guidance. He explained that the chief purpose

THOS. LINGARD TAKEN BY DEATH

After an illness extending over a period of two years and a half, the death took place at the family residence, Margaret Street, Friday afternoon about four o'clock of Thomas Lingard, a lifelong resident of Port Hope.

Two years ago last June, the late Mr. Lingard suffered an accident on the highway just north of Port Hope and never recovered from the effects. As well, he suffered from cancer and during the past two years was forced to undergo no less than five operations. He bore his illness with fortitude but his condition gradually weakened. For the past three weeks he had been confined to bed and lapsed into unconsciousness on Thursday.

The late Mr. Lingard was in his 69th year, and was born in Port Hope, where he resided during his lifetime. By trade, he was a teamster and was well known throughout the district. Surviving are his wife, one sister, Mrs. William Cook, Port Hope, two brothers, William Lingard, Port Hope, and Henry Lingard, Cobourg, two daughters, Lillian and Sarah, both of Port Hope, and three sons, William, Howard and Fred, all of Port Hope. The funeral was held from the family residence, Margaret Street, on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock with interment at Welcome Cemetery.

of public worship was to edify and that all practices should be subjected to that test. In this way he sought to restrain the more sensational manifestations of their spiritual life. "In its protest against discord and faction and its plea for holiness and unity within the church, in its emphasis upon bodily purity and the maintenance of an inexorable moral standard in matters affecting the relations of the sexes, in its fine combination of tolerance for all that is not inimical to the spirit of Christianity with practical consideration for the brother whom that tolerance might mislead, in its lofty sense for the place and power of public worship and of the obligation of each member of the Christian community to contribute to the good of the whole, in its emphatic assertion of the resurrection, and in the supreme place which it assigns to love, the message of the epistle is immortal."

A MORE EXCELLENT WAY
After rebuking and exhorting the Corinthians Paul offered a higher solution of their problems, the solvent of Christian love which would overcome the antipathies of race and sect. The epistle reaches its climax in the thirteenth chapter, "perhaps the noblest assemblage of beautiful thoughts in beautiful language extant in this our world." Into that chapter Paul poured all that he had learned of the spirit of Christ. A happy Christian church cannot be established by argument or authority, but only by love and kindness. Even before faith Paul placed the necessity of Christian love. His remedy was the only one for the troubled Corinthian ecclesiastical organization and it is the one thing needful for a troubled world. Hatred, jealousy and rivalry breed war—but friendship, kindness and consideration can overcome the barriers of race and religion. Truly did Henry Drummond sum up his exposition of this chapter in the title of his booklet, "The Greatest Thing In The World Is Love."

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION

1. What was the environment of the Christian Church in Corinth?
2. What are the gains and losses of religious controversy?
3. Wherein lies the power of the cross?
4. What demonstration of power is religion giving in the twentieth century?

REPORTS GIVEN ST. JOHN'S A.Y.P.A.

Conference Reports Presented In Unique And Interesting Way

Sixteen new members were initiated into St. John's A.Y.P.A. on Monday night by the rector, Rev. A. G. Emmet. The initiation service followed the business and devotional meeting which was in charge of the President, Miss Doris Hancock.

Rev. Bruce Jennings was a very welcome visitor to the Branch. He said that he hoped St. John's would give their usual co-operation to the Local Council banquet which will be held at St. Mark's early in December.

The programs for the year had a Conference Post Mortem listed as the special subject for the night and was in charge of the delegates, Miss Dorothy Davidson, and Cecilia Bennett and Mervyn Lawson and what a post-mortem it proved to be. Herbert Winfield was to have acted as Coroner but had to be out of town so Rev. Emmet presided in his stead and Dr. Diamond could have learned things about coroners that he never saw or heard before if he had been present. Mervyn Lawson was the deceased St. Hopeless A.Y.P.A., Scott McCarthy was the brawny policeman and there were witnesses, jury and everything.

When the jury had retired to decide on a verdict, the Coroner asked Cecilia Bennett who had been called home from the A.Y.P.A. Conference to tell about the said conference and her enthusiasm aroused the tiny breath of life that was left in St. Hopeless A.Y.P.A., so when the jury found that it was not dead, they sent it off to the conference and they all came back full of enthusiasm and gave splendid reports. It was an original and unique way of handling Conference Night.

POLICE COURT

Three Peterboro Youths Sentenced In Police Court Here Monday

Charged with stealing a motor car, three Peterboro youths, Wilfred Schweizer, 20, Cecil Hulley, 16, and Harry Halcor, 16, were each given reformatory terms of one year on being arraigned in Port Hope police court Monday afternoon before Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell. The youths pleaded guilty and their sentence will run concurrently with the year's sentence imposed in Peterboro where another car was stolen. The boys were not represented by counsel and Crown Attorney F. D. Boggs, K.C., of Cobourg prosecuted.

The three accused stole a car in Peterboro on November 2nd and the machine broke down at Dale. Arriving at Port Hope, the youths stole a sedan on Mill Street, while the driver, James Houghtaling left the vehicle for a few minutes. The culprits journeyed eastward and were picked up by police when the car crashed at Gananoque.

Praises this Asthma Remedy.—A grateful user of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy finds it the only remedy that will give relief, though for thirteen years he had sought other help. Years of needless suffering may be prevented by using this wonderful remedy at the first warning of trouble. Its use is simple, its cost is slight, and it can be purchased almost anywhere.

Now is the time of year we begin to think of Christmas Gifts. What to get that is helpful; that is the question in these days of stringency. What would be more appreciated by Mother and Dad than a pair of properly fitted glasses?

You didn't know glasses could be supplied as a Christmas Gift? Let us tell you how we can arrange this without the recipient knowing anything about it.

Spring a surprise! Treat your parents to something beneficial and lasting.

BAILIEBORO FRIENDS HONOR MISS V. DAWSON

Miscellaneous Shower Given By Friends Before Wedding

About one hundred of the friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dawson gathered at their home at Bailieboro and tendered a miscellaneous shower to their daughter, Miss Vina Dawson whose marriage to Mr. John Nurse, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Nurse of Otonabee, will take place this month.

Although the bride-elect was taken by surprise, she replied in well chosen words to the appropriate address read by Miss Audrey Barnard. The gathering then sang "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow."

The evening was pleasantly spent in playing games and group contests. The younger folk enjoyed a dance to music provided by Messrs. R. Acheson, C. Emberson and H. Nurse. A sing-song, conducted by Mrs. C. Barnard, was also an enjoyable feature of the evening's program. A delightful luncheon was served by the ladies.

Many useful and beautiful gifts were presented to Miss Dawson.

Rub it in for Lame Back.—A brisk rubbing with Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil will relieve lame back. The skin will immediately absorb the oil and it will penetrate the tissues and bring speedy relief. Try it and be convinced. As the liniment sinks in, the pain comes out and there are ample grounds for saying that it is an excellent article.

IN MEMORIAM

FISHER—In loving memory of our dear son, Ray, who passed away, Nov. 15th, 1920. In our lonely hours of thinking, Thoughts of you are always near. We, who loved you, sadly miss you. As it dawns another year.—Sadly missed by Mother and Dad.

INSTRUCTION IN SMILING

A course in smiles is the strange instruction given to the pupils of twelve to fourteen years by a French school-mistress in a commune near Marseilles.

The story of this discovery reads like a novel. The inspector reported the strange class to the Ministry of Education and was surprised to find that she was not only not reprimanded and dismissed, but was commended for the innovation which might be copied in all the secondary schools with a view to introducing it throughout the republic of France.

Soon France will be a smiling nation, not only because the people like to smile but because an obscure teacher in a small commune has caught a glimpse of one way to make life happy. This teacher will be a heroine.

But the inspector is like the fox who tasted sour grapes. He had objected when he saw the class smiling at the "hour of smiles." Like many an office-holder this inspector saw no authority in the syllabus. He found no time allotted in the curriculum to smile instruction. The poor teacher tried to explain to him that smiling as an art ought to be cultivated as "a beautiful thing adding charm to life." The strict-to-the-line inspector scrupulously incorporated this phrase in his report and it caught the eye of the Minister of Education. The inspector then had to try the unusual task of placing on the schedule of the schools of his inspectorate the study of smiles.

The movements of the muscles of the face in smiling affect the disposition in a beneficial way. This might explain why some faces, not complying with the canons of the highest art yet give a foretaste of the other world. Viennese psychologists advise making the face smile for ten minutes a day for the sake of happiness and contentment.—Belleville Ontario-Intelligencer.
