25TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Friends Present Mr. And Mrs. Arthur Mark With Silver Tea Service

On the occasion of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary, between thirty-five and forty friends feted Town Clerk Arthur Mark and Mrs. Mark at their home on Brown Street, on Wednesday evening.

After the guests had been received, Rev. Dr. K. H. Palmer of St. Paul's Church read the address which appears below while the presentation of a beautiful silver tea service was made by little Miss Jean Low. Needless to say, both Mr. and Mrs. Mark were taken completely by surprise, and both thanked the guests for their kind thoughts and remembrance.

The evening was spent in amusements of various kinds and refreshments were served.

The address was as follows, To Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Mark, Dear Friends:

"We, a company of your friends and well-wishers, have gathered at your home without a formal invitation on this occasion of the 25th anniversary of your wedding day to tender to you our heartiest congratulations.

"We feel quite confident you will willingly pardon the intrusion when we assure you that our true and only purpose is to give expression to the high esteem and regard in which you are held in the community we represent, and in our town.

"We consider this an opportune time and tender our best wishes for your future happiness and prosperity and for a continuance of those pleasant relationships that have been yours throughout the years.

"We trust that you and the members of your family may long be spared to enjoy the pleasures and profits of home life together.

"May we ask you to accept this gift as a further token of our love and esteem, not for its worth, do we ask you to prize it, but rather as a reminder of the hearts and lives it represents.

"May the richest blessing of the Heavenly Father be your portion at all times."

CLEANED UP OLD CEMETERY

Graveyard Of Pioneers Cleaned Up By Millbrook Volunteers

The old cemetery, just west of the Millbrook Public and Continuation Schools, was cleaned up recently by seven volunteers and two men hired by the Millbrook Council. Mrs. J. L. Byam, the president of the Women's Institute, along with various members, was responsible for bringing about this good deed as the graveyard has been sadly neglected for years.

It is said by some of the old timers, that it belonged at one time, to a Wesley Methodist Church which was situated on the south end of the plot. The underbrush, long grass, and trees were cut down and burnt and another bee will be held soon to even the ground around each grave. The men, J. Might, W. West, W. Guthrie, W. W. Jones, J. Byam, T. Harkness, H. Armstrong, H. Bigelow, Sr., and W. Byam, were served a delicious supper on the school grounds by Mrs. J. Byam, Mrs. T. Harkness, Mrs. G. Fallis, Miss A. Christie and others.

It is the aim of the Institute to plant shrubs and flowers and to cement the better preserved tomb stones. The President would like all those having more than enough of shrubs or bulbs to send the same to the Institute where they will be used for a good cause.

SERVICES OF THANKSGIVING

Special Services Carried Out In Local Churches Sunday

Thankful hearts raised the song of harvest home in the local churches Sunday, observing Thanksgiving Day. From pulpits prayers of gratitude were offered for the abundant harvest, for the blessings bestowed upon men and women throughout Canada. Sermons were preached in the churches of all denominations sounding a note of thanksgiving, echoing the praise sung by the Psalmist David.

At St. Paul's Presbyterian, the minister, Rev. Dr. K. H. Palmer was in charge and the auditorium of the church was tastefully decorated with flowers, fruits, vegetables, etc. The evening service was of song, when the minister, emphasized the power of song and went on to relate the history of several writers. Hymns were sung by the congregation as well as anthems by the choir and special solo numbers under the direction of A. H. N. Snelgrove. In the morning, a solo was rendered by Miss Jean Dickinson.

At the United Church, Rev. Duncan McTavish preached on the subjects "Can We Be Thankful?" or "Thanksgiving in the Midst of Depression" and "Made-over Folk." Anthems were rendered by the choir, with the organist, T. W. Stanley in charge and in the morning, Miss Anderson of Bowmanville gave a solo while in the evening, Mrs. C. J. Mendrim of Campbellford sang. Following the evening service, H. C. Treener, blind soloist and organist of Oshawa gave a short recital and as well contributed a solo.

Sir Henry Drayton, Chairman of the Anglican Church Restoration Fund was the speaker at St. Mark's Anglican worship and he pointed out with pride the appeal which Anglicans made to this fund. Holy Communion was celebrated at eight o'clock in the morning, while at the Evensong service, an address was given by the Rector, Rev. Bruce Jennings.

Rev. T. E. Meldrum conducted both services at the Port Hope Baptist Church, taking as his sermon topics, "Worthy Gratitude" and "Are Multitudes Ungrateful?" The choir presented anthems with the solo parts in the evening being taken by Miss M. Tickle and Earl Hansman.

St. John's Anglican Sunday services commenced with Holy Communion at eight o'clock in the morning, and at the morning and evening prayer the Rector, Rev. A. G. Female Member Of Troupe Gets Away With Enniskillen Farmer's Money Provincial Constable W. E. Smith is on the lookout for a group of gypsies alleged to have stolen money from the pockets of Fred W. Smith, farmer, west of Enniskillen.

The gypsies drove up in a large car and one woman asked Mr. Smith to have his fortune told. When he refused, she pushed her hand into his pocket, and taking a few bills and small change, beat a hasty retreat to the car which drove away at a high rate of speed. Mr. Smith phoned Provincial Constable Smith, who was soon on the scene, but no trace of the gypsies could be found. Mr. Smith was able to secure the number of the car and other centres have been notified.

P.H. ALERTS WIN LOCAL TOURNEY

Eliminate Whitby And Then Defeat Oshawa Team In Finals

In a thrilling softball four-team tournament at the Town Park on the holiday, Port Hope Alerts, managed by George Silverthorne, eliminated the Whitby Red Wings in their first game and then turned around to trim Oshawa Malleables in the finals. A good crowd witnessed the games, prizes being presented to the winning team as well as to individual players of all the teams who made the most hits and put-outs.

The first game was won by Oshawa, who slammed the offerings of G. Mann of Peterboro, for thirteen hits to win 13-6.

The second game was won by the Port Hope nine, who gave Whitby the short end of a 17-14 verdict. Perrin hurred for the winners and her teammates pounded out twenty-five hits, O'Neill and Herring leading the parade with four apiece.

The play-off fixture was a stubbornly contested one with the Alerts gaining a 10-8 decision over Oshawa Malleables. O'Neill hurled stellar ball for the winners, allowing ten hits and striking out six batters. Fraser for the visitors was taunted for twenty-one hits, Thompson and Perrin getting four.

STRUCK BY TRUCK STUDENT KILLED

John Walkem, Aged 15, Meets Death Near Peterboro—Companion Unhurt

John Walkem, aged 15, son of Colonel and Mrs. Hugh Walkem of Montreal, and a student at the Grove Boys' School at Lakefield, was instantly killed Saturday night when he was struck by a truck, the driver of which, it is alleged, did not stop. Police later arrested Patrick Coursey, aged 25, Peterboro, who is alleged to have collided with a wood truck on the outskirts of the city shortly before young Walkem was killed.

With Patrick Slaght, nephew of A. G. Slaght, K.C., Toronto, Walkem and he were riding their bicycles when they noticed a truck coming towards them, police say they were told, on the wrong side of the road. Slaght was in the lead and when the truck failed, he told police, to return to its own side of the highway, he crossed the road, expecting Walkem to follow. As the truck passed, he returned and saw the boy lying in the middle of the road. He claimed the truck slowed up after the crash and then went on its way.

Coursey was returning from the outdoor races at Clear Lake.

B. Q. Dench, Lakefield, arrived soon after the boy was struck and summoned Dr. J. C. Smith of Lakefield, who ordered an inquest for Tuesday night in Peterboro.

The body will be taken to Montreal and a funeral service held at the Walkem residence.

31ST WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. And Mrs. W. J. Highfield Presented With 97-Piece Dinner Set

Thirty-one years of happily wedded life in Port Hope were honoured at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Highfield, Strachan Street, on Friday evening when between 65 and 70 friends invaded their home. After the guests had been received, an address was read by William Perkins. The presentation of a handsome 97-piece dinner set (bridal rose) was made at an opportune time by little Misses Margaret Highfield and Betty Palmer.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Highfield extended the guests their sincere thanks for the pleasant surprise and the evening was spent in cards, following which refreshments were served.

The address was as follows,—

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Highfield,—

"On this, your wedding anniversary, we gather here to say,—

"When we look back,

O'er the days now fled

At the things you've done,

And the words you've said,

And the ways you've helped.

With a heart so true,

That we say Thank God

For friends like you."

"We ask you to accept this gift as our way of saying thanks for the many neighbourly acts, the thoughtful kindnesses and the helping words of sympathy you have so freely given—for being what you are—the 'just right' kind of neighbour and friend."

N.Y. AMERICANS TO TRAIN AT OSHAWA

New York Americans, of the National Hockey League, will do their pre-season training in Oshawa again this year, A. Hamby, manager of the Oshawa Arena, stated. The Americans will arrive in Oshawa on October 16 and would train until about the 8th of November. Arena officials say that another hockey team, probably from a minor circuit, will train with the Americans.

Last year the "Amazing Amerks," with Manager Joe Simpson in charge were more than pleased with the facilities for pre-season training that Oshawa affords.

Aet upon your impulses, but pray that they may be directed by God.—E. Tennent.

ACQUITTED IN COBOURG COURT

E. M. Thurber Found Not Guilty Of Circulating Incorrect Statements About Shares

Edward Metcalfe Thurber, Managing director of the Nicholson File Company of Port Hope, was acquitted when he appeared before Magistrate J. H. Davidson at Cobourg Wednesday on a charge of having published and circulated incorrect statements to induce prospects into becoming shareholders of the H. B. McCarthy Company of Port Hope. D. H. Chisholm, K.C., Port Hope, was defense counsel.

The company was founded in 1921, manufactured leather shoe laces from specially processed leather brought from India, and in 1927 reorganized and issued new stock. Thurber was President of the Company and W. A. McCarthy was Vice-President and General Manager. In 1932, following the death of W. A. McCarthy, the company made an assignment.

Eric Oswald, accountant, residing at Port Hope, was appointed custodian by the assignees. Questioned by Crown Attorney Colonel F. D. Boggs, K.C., Oswald stated that, on examining the books of the defunct company, that dividends were paid out of the capital account rather than from profit and loss account. In addition, an item of $5,000, representing good-will, was incorrectly entered so as to create a credit balance in the profit and loss account. Had it been entered in its proper place there would have been a debit balance in the profit and loss account.

Mr. Oswald, when questioned by defense counsel, stated that the President could not be blamed for improper bookkeeping of W. A. McCarthy, his knowledge of the finances of the company being dependent on the reports of the General Manager. The blame lay on the auditors, rather than the President, was the opinion of Mr. Oswald.

Colonel Phillip Passey, Port Hope, one of the shareholders, was the complainant.

DISMISS COBOURG THEFT CHARGE

'Hopeless Muddle From The Start,' Comments, Cobourg Magistrate

Adjourned from last week because of the entanglement of evidence, a charge of theft against Michael O'Brien was dismissed by Magistrate J. H. Davidson at Cobourg. O'Brien had been charged with theft of a bicycle from T. Martin, and when he came up for trial last week, stated that he had pawned the bicycle to buy beer. At the hearing, O'Brien's liquor permit was among the missing and the magistrate threw out the case in disgust.

"This case had been a hopeless muddle from the start and I am tired of trying to get at the truth of the matter," commented the magistrate.

Cars Being Loaded In This District For Needy Western Families

Thousands of people in southern Saskatchewan and Manitoba are on the verge of starvation. Drought and grasshoppers combined have removed every green thing from large areas. Gardens and all are gone. Let us help them somewhat by sending some fruit or vegetables or clothing. Cars will be loaded at Brighton, C.P.R.; Colborne, C.N.R.; Cobourg, C.P.R.; Port Hope, C.N.R. stations on October 11 and 12th.

These cars are being transported free of charge to the West by these Railway Companies, and give further proof of the great need. In many parts the ministers report that it is five years since they have had a crop and the courage of the people is breaking down. A few bushels of apples, potatoes, carrots, or beans, cabbages, turnips and canned goods will be a great blessing to them. Please do what you can. Your local minister will be glad to give you further information as to trucking.

CROP REPORT

Extracts From Reports Submitted By Agricultural Representatives

Recent showers have brought beneficial results according to reports of agricultural representatives. This is particularly true in Eastern Ontario, where pastures are reported good and livestock in a much improved condition. Additional moisture is required in some sections of Western and Central Ontario, where fall wheat is reported patchy and pastures short. Fall wheat acreage in many counties is reported at from 25% to 50% above that sown in 1932.

The apple crop is generally reported heavy with fruit well colored and of good quality. Splendid progress is being made with fall work—fall plowing and after-harvest cultivation being well advanced.

WESTERN ONTARIO

WELLINGTON—Turnips are moving to market just a little more freely. The prices have ranged from 25c to 30c per bus. Some fields are badly infested with aphids but lately the situation in this respect is reported to be improved.

SOUTHERN ONTARIO

BRANT—Stock is in very fair condition not in as high fit as last year. Considerable feeding being done. Hogs appear to be fewer than usual. Fairly heavy rains of past week have made it very much easier to plow and many farmers who were waiting for rain have sown their wheat. Work appears to be well in hand.

HALDIMAND—Practically every farmer who is selling milk is now dry feeding his cows in the barn in an effort to supplement the pasture. While rain fell during the week, it is believed to be too late to have effect on pasture this fall.

LINCOLN—Grapes are being cut and marketed in large quantities this week. Prices range from 18c for 6's to $40 per ton for bulk grapes to wineries. A few late peaches and plums are being picked and are a fair crop. Late pears and apples now at their best.

MIDDLESEX—Cattle markets have been very drab. A few loads of finished cattle are being sent on export each week. There is fairly general dissatisfaction with extremely low prices for finished cattle, also with dropping hog prices. Young pigs are being bought at around $2.00 each. As a result of general survey and inquiry into the London Milk situation, prices are advertised to be raised on Oct. 2nd, from $1.00 per cwt. to $1.41 per cwt. to the farmer and retail prices from the old range of 5c to 7c per quart to 9c per quart. Showers of varying intensity have been general in all parts of the county throughout the week, though there has not yet been sufficient rain to materially relieve the acute water shortage on many farms. There has, however, been sufficient moisture to germinate fall wheat, to freshen fall pastures and, in many sections, to go to the bottom of plowing.

CENTRAL ONTARIO

DURHAM—Fall wheat went in under ideal conditions and has already made a nice start. Even in our best fall wheat district, reports indicate a 50% increase in acreage with a higher percentage than this when the whole county is considered.

HASTINGS—Lambs marketed at the Lamb Fair this week decidedly of improved quality over last year, off grade lambs were under weight. Weather has been quite favourable for fall work. Considerable acreage will be increased 25% over last year, and a number of farmers are using mixed fertilizer on wheat.

PRINCE EDWARD—Apple picking is in full swing, approximately 30 cars have been shipped this week. The fruit is of good quality and color. Fairly heavy rains have been prevalent all over the county during the past week. Pastures, new seeding and fall wheat are in excellent condition. As yet we have had no injurious frost.

EASTERN ONTARIO

DUNDAS—A record crop of fruit is being picked. So far the growers have been most fortunate in having very few windfalls. The color and quantity of fruit is exceptionally good. The apple market is very slow and much of the crop is being shipped out on consignment. As yet the price is hardly established, but a few choice hampers of No. 1 McIntosh have been sold at $1.25. Cheese on the Cornwall Board on Sept. 25th advanced 1-4c, 1237 boxes selling at an even 11c. This was not nearly the advance anticipated and buyers were inclined to blame the condition of foreign exchange for their inability to pay more.

GRENVILLE—Buckwheat harvesting is practically completed and the crop has been an excellent one. In most sections of the county the potato crop is very light and considerable white grub injury is reported. Improved cheese prices are giving farmers more hope for the future and production is being maintained accordingly through feeding.

LANARK—The poultry population is about equal to that of last year, however, the scarcity of feed has hindered development and production is not normal. Drainage is receiving more attention this fall than for years. Ditches that have been neglected for years are being opened up.

ONTARIO ACHIEVES $4,000,000 SAVING

Government Better Off Than Expected When Budget Compiled

With the end of the fiscal year less than a month distant, the Ontario Government on the basis of the past 11 months' experience, finds itself a shade better off financially than was expected when the budget for the year was compiled.

Hon. E. A. Dunlop, Provincial Treasurer, told that the Government's plan to cut down controllable ordinary expenditures by four million dollars had been carried to a successful conclusion and that the ordinary expenditure for 1933 would be well within the estimate of $34,950,000.

While declining to go into a detailed account of the province's financial position, Mr. Dunlop indicated that the Government is satisfied with the result of the year's operations, taking into account, of course, the steady decline in revenue. Two of the biggest drops in revenue during 1933 were experienced in liquor revenue and succession duties. So far, the liquor revenue has fallen $250,000 behind last year's returns, and succession duties are down $750,000. On the other hand, receipts from the stock transfer tax have increased by several hundred thousands of dollars, and the gasoline tax has already brought in $250,000 over the estimated figure. Revenue from game and fisheries and the Corporation Tax Act is down, the former being due to the decrease in the tourist traffic.

Timber dues are away down, this field of taxation being particularly hard hit.

Economics Carried Out

To effect the saving of $4,000,000, every Government department was closely examined for ways and means of cutting down governmental overhead, and Mr. Dunlop expressed the belief that every possible and practical method of economizing had been followed. Some figures will not be available until the close of the fiscal year on October 31, but the record of the year to date provides sufficient indication of what the final result will be, it was stated.

The 1933 figure of $34,950,000 for controllable ordinary expenditure is the lowest in some years. In 1930 the amount was $45,996,735, and the following year it was reduced to $43,385,133. Another drop was experienced in 1932 when the Government kept non-capital expenditures down to $39,183,961. And then for 1933 the economy move reached its climax and it was determined to lop off $1,000,000 and keep expenditures within $34,950,000. The estimated deficit for this year was $2,952,000 and it will be well within this figure it was learned.

The debt retirement plan will go by the board for at least another year it was indicated. This will make the fourth year in succession that the plan to retire the province's indebtedness has been allowed to lapse due to financial stringency. It is understood, however, that the Government will resume the retirement plan as soon as conditions allow.

Both employment and profits are rising in Australia.

A frail worm that protects itself by constructing a "window" of silken webs over its burrow is causing great damage to deciduous fruit trees, shade trees and shrubs in the eastern United States.

THANKSGIVING

Father, we thank Thee for our fair land, great and free,
We thank Thee for her smiling skies, her glorious liberty.
Yet high above a nation's pride, we give to Thee to-day
A humbler thanks for churches dim, where people kneel to pray.

We thank Thee for her mighty wealth, of field and stream and forest,
For halls of education, for sport and laughing jest,
Yet while for these we thank Thee, we would not forget the while
To thank Thee for a mother's love, a baby's crooning smile.

We thank Thee that time hath in some measure healed
The pangs of wounds once bleeding from the hurt of war,
And even tho' the old pain stabs our hearts at times,
It bids us turn from earth and seek Thy heaven's more.

And so once more at this Thanksgiving tide,
We tell Thy gifts to mortals, from Thy heaven above,
And pledge anew our wealth, our powers and our possessions,
Giving and yet receiving in Thy perfect love.

NEWTONVILLE

Newtonville Branch of the Women's Institute held its September meeting last week at the home of Mrs. John Robinson, Manver Street, Newcastle, with the president, Mrs. W. Milligan, Newtonville, in the chair. Meeting opened with the singing of the Institute Ode and repeating the Lord's Prayer. Following the regular business session the roll was called when each member present responded with My Hobby, What It Is. The program consisted of a reading by Mrs. Ernest Haigh, Newtonville; a paper, The Industries of Durham County, by Mrs. J. C. Hancock, Newcastle; a reading by Mrs. W. Holmes, Lake Shore, and an equally interesting talk by Mrs. M. Holman, Newtonville, on the industries of Clarke Township, fifty and sixty years ago. The program closed with the singing of the national anthem. Lunch was served by the menu committee and a social time enjoyed by all. The members present tendered Mrs. Robinson their thanks and appreciation for accommodation and comforts provided by her for the meeting in her home. The next meeting will be held in the basement of the Presbyterian Church.

The meeting was then adjourned, after which a social half hour was spent.

1900 AEROPLANE HOAX RECALLED

Reporter Who Fooled Entire United States Killed In Car Crash

The death in an automobile accident near Waterloo, Ia. of Harry E. Keister, 62-year-old radio-advertising executive, ended the colorful career of a man who many years ago perpetrated the story of "Prof. Jorgenson's airship," one of the greatest newspaper hoaxes of all time.

Keister, himself, recalled the hoax years after he started it and was fond of telling the story.

Thirty-three years ago Keister was a newspaper reporter and also acted as correspondent for a string of newspapers throughout the country. That was before the advent of the modern news services and occasionally an imaginative newspaper man would "coin" a story which, given the appearance of being genuine, could be palmed off on innocent newspapers and a gullible public with great profit to the creator.

In 1900, three years before the Wright brothers had flown the first aeroplane at Kitty Hawk, a story came out of San Francisco to the effect that an unnamed professor was secretly working on a new sort of heavier-than-air machine and that he planned a flight across the continent. Aeroplanes having been scarcely heard of then, the story was something of a sensation. Newspapers all over the country used it.

A short time later, reports were published, that a mysterious green and red light was seen over Cheyenne. The correspondent speculated on whether it might be the "professor" on his transcontinental flight. A few days later, the light was said to have been seen over Denver. Later, it was supposed to have appeared over Omaha. And then, behold, early one hot morning in June, a prominent Waterloo citizen, on his way to work, was surprised to see a queer looking individual wearing a fur coat, standing near a strange contraption on the banks of the Cedar river near Waterloo's business district.

The fur-coated one was peering at a map. He looked up at the Waterloo man and said, "Where am I?"

"On Commercial street," replied the Waterloo business man.

"Yes, but Commercial St., where?"

"Waterloo."

"Yes, but Waterloo, where?"

Assured that he was in Waterloo, Iowa, the stranger marked a red cross on the map at San Francisco.

"Well, I left there and now I guess I must be here," he said, marking another cross on Waterloo. In broken English he explained that he was Prof. Jorgenson and that he had flown his aeroplane from San Francisco. His partner, he said, jumped in a parachute west of Waterloo and the professor himself was forced down on the banks of the Cedar.

The stranger's face was bleeding as if from wounds received by his forced landing. The fur coat, he explained, was for the cold weather above the clouds.

The news spread around the town like wildfire. Curious crowds trooped to see the "airship," which consisted of two cigar-shaped canvas covered pieces of 50 feet long, placed parallel and connected by braces. Between them, in front, was a propeller and a green and red headlight.

Professor Jorgenson explained that his invention was not fully covered by patent and, with this excuse, refused to allow anyone to inspect it.

The city fathers ordered his ship roped off and protected by police night and day.

On the day the professor landed, Keister, of course, put in his "licks." He sold the story—thousands upon thousands of words by telegraph—to newspapers all over the country.

Meanwhile, people from all over the country flocked to Waterloo to WEDNESDAY, OCT. 4.

Fair weather, even if it does sprinkle!

The great annual Fall Fairs are nearly over in this district. Millbrook streets and fair grounds will have quite a number of Port Hoppers on them if all the cars leaving here for that direction had that as their destination.

We hear a fellow from Protestant Hill boasting that the big exhibition of the year is still to come. He says that Rosebush Fair has 'em all beat for that's where they grow the finest fruit, grain stock and men. He put in the last word for himself, we believe.

Under the auspices of the Gleaners Society of the Port Hope United Church, a delightful chicken supper was served in the Sunday School Hall on Tuesday afternoon from 4-7 o'clock. The supper was well attended and the ladies in charge served an attractive menu.

Householders will soon be engaged in the annual task of raking the dead leaves from their lawns. There has been a heavy fall of leaves and lawns are beginning to take on their usual fall appearance.

Gold stocks continued their downward movement on the Vancouver Stock Exchange yesterday with the exception of Bralorne which advanced 25 cents. Cariboo Gold lost 5 cents at $3.65.

Bernard W. Stein, Detroit, after pleading guilty to reckless driving, was fined $25 and costs by Magistrate Mikel at Belleville. The charge was laid after an accident on the Belleville-Trenton highway, when Mrs. Rachel Schenbeck and her daughter, Miss Helena, both of Detroit, were injured.

William E. Fletcher, A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L., Professor of Music, of Sydney, N.S., has been engaged as organist and choirmaster of Cambridge Street United Church, Lindsay, Ontario, to commence in November.

Customer (at the end of an argument about short weight)—Darn, yer ought to call your scales Ambush. They're always lying in weight.

George Burns, of Belleville, reports the case of a clump of lilacs in the district that has evidently lost track of the seasons. Although fall is fast approaching, on a clump of bushes growing on the Foxboro Road, about one mile south of the village, the strange spectacle of one branch of lilacs in full bloom is noticed. The rest of the bush, however, is acting with the utmost decorum and has refused to sprout more than the one bouquet.

Disguised "What kind of dog is that?" said the friendly lady to the little boy with a mongrel pup.

"He's a police dog," said the lad. "Why, he doesn't look like a police dog," said the lady. "No, ma'am," said the lad. "You see, he's in the Secret Service!"

THURSDAY, OCT. 5.

Hurrah! Hurrah! No school today!

The children of the Public School rejoice that the teachers are attending the annual convention in New-castle to-day and to-morrow.

It gives the youngsters of the Public School particular pleasure to be having a holiday when the "H" students have to attend their classes.

The way it turned out with Thanksgiving, next Monday the school has a nice long holiday.

The Lion's roar will be heard at Craigieburn to-night, where they will hold their luncheon this week.

From the crowds we saw going to see Marie Dressler in "Tugboat Annie" when in Montreal recently we think the Capitol Management are wise in having the picture here three nights for everyone will want to see her in this, which is said to be her best yet.

There's going to be a different kind of rummage sale Saturday and along with it there'll be a sale of delicious home cooking put on by St. Mark's A.Y.P.A. in the Parish Hall, Mill street.

Monday, October 9th, is Thanks-

The annual fowl supper of St. Paul's Church, Perrytown, will be held to-night and with the usual 'large' menu, a capacity crowd is expected. Orono Regimental Band will be in attendance.

The installation of officers of the local Rebekah Lodge will take place this evening.

Mr. Keith Mark, Montreal, is confined at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Mark, Brown street, due to illness.

Due to the epidemic of house burglaries in town, citizens are asked to use all precautions in keeping their doors securely bolted. The local police would appreciate if details of any suspicious characters would be reported.

For the first time in five years Oshawa fall fair emerged with a surplus, it was reported at a meeting of directors of South Ontario Agricultural society. Proceeds from the one-day fair totalled over $6,200, while expenses were estimated at about $5,350.

Business session of the fifty-sixth annual meeting of the Ontario Women's Christian Temperance Union opened at Peterboro Wednesday with almost 200 delegates from all sections of the Province attending. First reports presented at a meeting at which members of the Oxford Group from Toronto took charge, indicated a year of much activity in W.C.T.U. circles. Mrs. Edmund T. Kerr, president.

Gold stocks continued to decline on the Vancouver Stock Exchange Wednesday. Bralorne after selling at $12 at one time during the forenoon session closed at $11.49 down 15c from Tuesday. Reno Gold was off 6 cents at 94; Premier Gold at $1.20 and Cariboo at $3.62, were each down 3 cents.

Isn't this glorious weather!

There is loveliness in store if the weatherman will send balmy breezes to open the rose buds.

We hope the last rose of summer has not bloomed for it is nice to feel there is something beautiful before us.

In the harvest time so many interesting things turn up. To-day Tom Smith brought in a carrot two feet one inch long, the bulk of it being a root resembling a rat tail. It has been set in the Guide window for you to see.

LOCAL SHELTER DONATION PARTY

Address Given By Rev. Dr. K. H. Palmer—Work Outlined By Superintendent

Attended by a number interested in the work, the annual donation party was held by the Children's Aid Society of the United Counties of Durham and Northumberland at the Shelter, Bramley Street, on Tuesday afternoon. It marked the 21st anniversary of the present building, and throughout the day, many donations of groceries, clothing, fruit, etc. were received.

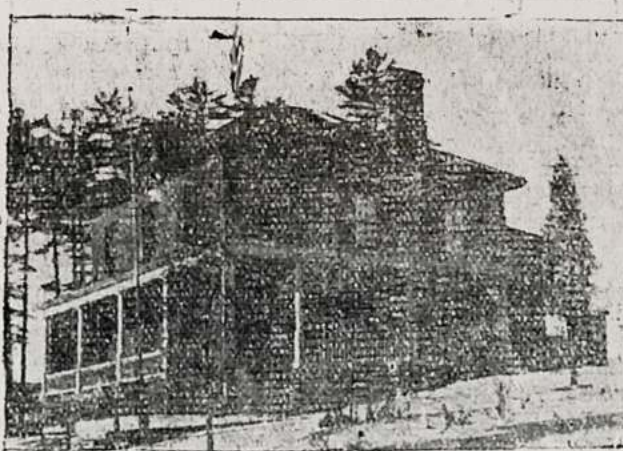

H. Fulford, President of the Children's Aid Society presided at the meeting and commended Rev. James T. Daley, the superintendent, and happier and more homelike than it can be made under less fortunate circumstances.

Faith, Love And Service The feature of the afternoon's program was an interesting address by Rev. Dr. K. H. Palmer, of St. Paul's Church, who commended the meritorious work of the Society in caring for those who found themselves in unfortunate circumstances.

The speaker told that the basis of humanitarian work of this kind was founded on faith, love and service and briefly pointed out how these three points figured in the lives of those interested in the work of the underprivileged. The spirit of Christ must be present, he said, for Christ was the One who showed His undying love to mankind.

The Superintendent, Dr. James T. Daley, thanked Dr. Palmer for his able address and told of some of the workings of the Children's Aid Society and of the great work, which the matron, Miss M. Ferguson. He briefly referred to the report of the Provincial Superintendent, J. J. Kelso who said, 'Social legislation revolves around the home, rehabilitation rather than salvage being the keynote but care is given to the individuals if there is failure in keeping the home intact.'

"At the beginning of the year," said Mr. Fulford, "the United Counties Council made a slight reduction in the annual grant to our society, not because of any lack of interest or sympathy but because of increased expenditures. The work of the children's Aid Society is increasingly necessary. If the underprivileged children of these United Counties are to receive the attention which by right belong to them, then there should be no diminution of efforts on our part or a waning of sympathy and interest on the part of the general public."

"Let me say," he concluded, "that with pure incentive and with renewed, consecrated and Christ-like purpose, we continue our efforts to make the child life which comes to our care, was being accomplished. He told that he had been fifteen years in this particular field of endeavour and during that period, hundreds of calls had been made, in destitute homes, in the police courts, and other places.

During the afternoon, a vocal solo was rendered by Mrs. C. Massie, accompanied by Miss Frances Johnston while a reading was contributed by Miss Netta Brownlee.

Afternoon tea was served which brought the proceedings to a close.

KNIGHTS PLANNED JOINT CELEBRATION

At a meeting of the different councils of the K. of C. in the district, held at Cobourg recently, it was unanimously decided to hold a joint celebration of the birthday of Columbus. This celebration will take the form of a banquet to be held in the Peterboro club headquarters on the evening of October 12. It is anticipated that upwards of one hundred visiting Knights will be present. An outstanding speaker in the Order is being procured; a splendid musical program prepared, and it is the intention of the committee in charge to make the event one of the best of its kind ever held in Peterboro. T. H. Hooper and Sons will have the catering, it is learned.

F. SKITCH GIVES PIANO RECITAL

Talented Local Pianist Presents Interesting Program In Toronto

Writing in 'The Varsity', Norman Langford has the following to say regarding a recital which was given in Toronto on October 1st, by Frederick Skitch, talented local pianist.

The first Wymilwood Musical of the year was given in Burwash Hall, Toronto, Sunday night. The artist was Mr. Frederick Skitch, pianist, an undergraduate of Victoria College. The program exacting enough, was admirably played. Mr. Skitch not only possesses musicianship of an extraordinary high quality, but he also knows how to play the piano. In fact, from the very first measures of the Bach Partita in B Flat, the certainty of his pianistic sense was such that to talk of his nervousness is quite irrelevant. His playing of this difficult work was at times exquisite, and always satisfying. Impressive, too, was his performance of Schumann's Symphonic Etudes, if one did not find his sustained appassionate too monotonous. With Chopin Etudes he is entirely at home, and his Debussy encore ought to have brought joy to everyone. I am not in a position to say how far his audience appreciated his work; but in so far as they may not have appreciated it they betrayed a poor sense of fine music and of sure and profound piano playing. It cannot be emphasized too often that not only is Mr. Skitch a pianist of remarkable promise, but that right now he is one of the finest assets of the undergraduate musical world in this university. We must have more of him!

Mr. Skitch was assisted by Mrs. Schoeni, soprano, who contributed some excellent singing. Mrs. Schoeni's voice and ability deserves much more notice than they must necessarily get here. The merits of her German songs—from Wagner and Schubert—were especially noteworthy.

P.H.S. WINS EXHIBITION 21-15

Defeat T.C.S. 'Thirds' — Play At Peterboro On Saturday

In a game on T.C.S. grounds yesterday, the High School football team defeated T.C.S. "Thirds" by the score of 21-15.

The teams were very evenly matched and the game was not very decisive, though the Bule and White seemed to possess a little more aggressiveness and condition. McTavish, plunging middle wing, frequently went through for sensational gains from scrimmage, and scored two touchdowns. The remainder of the team played good football, but several weaknesses were still noticeable along the line.

The team plays in Peterboro Saturday, and on Thanksgiving Day engage the Old Boys in an exhibition game at the Town Park. The general admission is ten cents. Kick-off will take place at three-thirty o'clock. This game promises to be even more interesting than that of two weeks ago, as several of the Old Boys have been playing interfaculty football at college, and should provide many interesting displays.

Gas in the Stomach Is Dangerous

Daily Use of Bismarck Magnesia Overcomes Troubles Caused by Acid Indigestion

Gas in the stomach accompanied by a full, bloated feeling after eating is almost certain evidence of too much hydrochloric acid in the stomach, causing so-called "acid indigestion." Acid stomachs are dangerous. Too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leads to gastritis, accompanied by more serious trouble. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart. It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to try to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get a little Bismarck Magnesia from any drugist and take a teaspoonful in water right after eating. This will drive out the gas, wind and bloating, soothe the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and stop sourness, gas or pain. Bismarck Magnesia (in powder form) never in liquid or milk is harmless, inexpensive, and a fine remedy for acid stomach. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no fear of indigestion.

HEARD ON THE STREET

SATURDAY, OCT. 7.

This is the Thanksgiving season!

We rather like the story of the man who out of a thankful heart sang each morning "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow."

No matter what griefs and disappointments through which we have passed during the past year are so many things for which each and every one of us have to be thankful.

There was the threat of a terrible war since last Thanksgiving Day, and we can rejoice it didn't involve us.

Did it ever occur that you may be the reason someone cannot enjoy Thanksgiving Day? Selfishness, greed, jealousy and thoughtlessness often make the lives of those about us so miserable that they can hardly see anything to be thankful for at this season.

We all might well be thankful that we live to-day and not in the centuries when life was cruel and hard, when men were bought and sold, when you think of all the rest of the things you have to be thankful for as there isn't room here, there's so many!

The list of fowl suppers to be held in this district is published in another column. This suggestion was made by an interested reader in view of the fact that the fall fairs are listed in a separate column. Which causes our Corner Friend to remark, it is a case of 'fowl and fair.'

At 9:30 o'clock this morning, local firemen received a run to Hope street South when fire broke out in the engine of a truck owned by Hoar's Transport. The damage was slight.

Past Masters' Night was observed at Hope Lodge, A.F. & A.M., No. 114, at the Masonic Hall here last night when Past Masters of the Lodge occupied the various chairs and capably conferred the work of the evening. Following the lodge-room work a banquet was served with the usual toasts being honoured. W. Bro. George N. Taylor was in charge of the lodge-room ceremonies with the W.M. George Brockenshire presiding in the banquet room.

If you have time over the weekend why not make a visit to the flower gardens of Walter Coupland, Ward street; N. N. Brimstin, Melsom street, and F. H. Brown, Hope street, where choice dahlias are grown. The three flower lovers have spent considerable time and money and the flowers are well worth seeing.

The Lions Club have done the town a good turn by putting up their signs which will help motorists missing the first "Port Hope" signs to know just where they are.

Several friends of Mrs. Lawrence Moran, formerly Miss Jean Watt, gathered at the home of Mrs. H. Maybee, Ontario street, on Thursday afternoon, when an afternoon tea was served. The bride was taken by surprise and the presentation of several useful gifts was made.

Cariboo Gold Quartz and Taylor (Bridge River) Mines, Limited, are accepted as two of the more recent P.C. mining issues to come on eastern markets, it being reported application for their listing is in the hands of the Standard Exchange, Toronto.

Owing to the illness of Rev. C. R. Spencer rector of St. John's Church, Bowmanville, Rev. Dr. Evans, a returned missionary from Palestine, will take over the work of the parish during Mr. Spencer's absence, and will commence his duties on October 8th. A special preacher took charge last Sunday and the early morning communion will not be held until the rector returns.

TUESDAY, OCT. 10.

Could you count your many blessings?

Yes, in spite of all our trials and tribulations there were a lot of things which we can be exceedingly glad for.

One fellow insists that on this Thanksgiving Day he was glad, yes truly thankful for all the trouble he has past through during the past few months. Had all gone prosperously he believes he should be much poorer now.

It's just hard to figure some people out these days. Personality seems to be changing with the time.

The Harvest Home decorations in the churches brought home the spirit of Thanksgiving Day with greater force.

The steady stream of cars flowing toward Toronto yesterday afternoon and evening seemed an indication that thousands of "them there city fellows" were thankful to put their feet under father's table groaning with good things fresh from the land.

There were a whole lot of housewives who were awfully glad ladies of Newtonville and Canton churches saved them the trouble of putting on the Thanksgiving Day spread.

A number of Port Hoppers attended the race meet at Belleville yesterday.

Passenger Train No. 17, from Montreal on the Canadian National Railway was held up for a short time this morning after leaving the station here at 5:39 o'clock. The side-roads on the engine broke between here and Newtonville.

On the Vancouver Stock Exchange Saturday Cariboo Gold jumped 25 points to $3.60.

St. Mark's A.Y.P.A. held a mixed pound home-cooking and rummage sale in the Parish Hall on Saturday afternoon.

In an exhibition rugby fixture at the Town Park Monday morning, the High School Old Boys defeated the 1933 squad 5-0, Carr scoring the touch for the winners. On Saturday, the students played in Peterboro and met defeat 15-9.

At four o'clock Sunday morning, burglars again attempted to enter the home of Mrs. J. H. Culverwell, Dorset street, and the marauder was frightened away from the back veranda by a guest who fired a shot in the air. Chief Constable Murphy was patrolling in the district at the time and an extensive search, following the shot, was conducted but no trace of the prowler could be found in the darkness.

A very enjoyable evening was spent at the home of Mrs. Leo Wilson, Ward Street, on Friday when thirty friends met in honour of Mrs. Rupert Davis, who is leaving Protestant Hill to take up residence in Englestown. Bridge was played until ten o'clock when Miss Rigby read an appropriate address and Miss Alma Wilson presented Mrs. Davis with a beautiful table lamp. Mrs. Davis made a suitable reply and bridge continued until eleven o'clock when refreshments were served. At lunch, Mrs. Davis was presented with a beautiful bouquet of dahlias from Mrs. F. Brown.

The rain didn't stop the races in Toronto or Belleville but it put a damper on the spirits of some sportsmen whose spirited ponies had dropped and failed to plough through to victory.

Cobourg sports enthusiasts are proud of the fact that Chris Pickering, grandson of the late Chris Pickering of Baltimore, five miles from Cobourg, is to be given a trial by the Baltimore Orioles of the International Baseball League next year. Pickering is a pitcher.

Showed Her Sense

"There are two sides to every question," proclaimed the wise man.
"Yes," said the fool, "and there are two sides to a sheet of flypaper, but it makes a difference to the fly which side he chooses."
"Women are fools. I never knew but one really sensible one."
"Well, why didn't you marry her?"
"I asked her, but she wouldn't have me."

For Catarrh.—It is one of the chief recommendations of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil that it can be used internally with as much success as it can outwardly. Sufferers from catarrh will find that the Oil when used according to directions will give prompt relief. Many sufferers from this ailment have found relief in the Oil and have sent testimonials.

Ralph H. Johnson the secretary of the Club, was the speaker of the evening and gave an historical talk on Port Hope which was much enjoyed. The President, William Giddy, presided.

DEATH CLAIMS J. A. MACHRAY

Central Figure In Manitoba Defalcations Succumbs To Long Illness

Death Thursday put an end to the prison term of John A. Machray, once a leading figure in financial, educational, legal and church affairs. Ill with cancer and deformed from his high position in the community by financial defalcations running up to $2,000,000, Machray entered Stony Mountain penitentiary a year and two weeks ago to begin serving a seven-year term for theft.

At that time it was freely predicted he would not come out alive and he died after spending most of his months behind the bars on a cot in the prison infirmary. Machray was 68 years old.

The funeral was held quietly and privately to-day. The service was conducted by Rev. Henry D. Martin, pastor of St. George's Anglican Church, and burial was in St. John's cemetery. Machray's defalcations almost depleted the endowment funds of the Church of England but the church officials declined to press charges against him.

He pleaded guilty to theft of $500,000 from the University of Manitoba and $60,000 from a former law partner at a brief trial before Magistrate R. M. Noble.

ELDORADO'S PROGRAM

Eldorado Mines has provided little or nothing new in the way of news for shareholders since officials came out some time ago. The freeze-up is soon to be on, and the company's fiscal year ends with December 31. The program of installing the silver concentrator is continuing, schedule saying it will be producing by the year-end. Bagging of higher-grade ores, pitchblende and some silver, has progressed this summer and the 200 tons or so of this, destined for the Port Hope refinery, will soon be on the way out. A preliminary statement may soon be issued, particularly covering the radium production.

September Swell Month Comment Of Weatherman

"September was a swell month this year," observed the statistical expert. "There was not one day of the thirty on which the sun did not shine, and the mean temperature for the month was 62.8 which is exactly 4 degrees above the average."
The hottest point was reached at 89.8 on Sept. 8 and the lowest at 39 on the 12th. Rainfall totalled only 1.25 inches, which is 1.93 below the September average. The heaviest shower was .22 of an inch on the 14th.
Hours of sunshine were 195 just 58 below average and 52 per cent of the possible.

DOMINION BONDS FOR SALE SOON

Next Week's Offering Is Divided Into 2, 6 And 12 Year Securities

Arrangements are nearing completion for the new Dominion loan of $225,000,000 to $250,000,000, to be placed on the market about Oct. 11 at lower rates of interest than for some years. It is reported there will be three different lots of bonds, as follows:

Two-year bonds bearing a coupon rate of 3 1/2 per cent, to yield between 3 3/4 and 4 per cent.

Six-year bonds bearing interest at 4 per cent, to yield 4.20 or 4.25 per cent.

Twelve-year bonds bearing interest at 4 1/2 per cent, to yield 4.35 to 4.40 per cent.

It is estimated that the banks hold nearly half of the $169,000,000 issue of tax-exempt 15-year bonds now maturing, in addition to $40,000,000 in Treasury notes bearing interest at 3 1/2 per cent. They are expected to accept in exchange for these bonds the new short-term bonds bearing a coupon rate of 3 1/2 per cent.

The 6 and 12 year securities, it is believed, will be taken up by investors generally, and the Government is hoping for a wide distribution of the new issue. There is every prospect for complete success of the flotation.

JUDGE MCGIBBON TO GO TO LINDSAY SOON

No date has been definitely decided yet for the swearing-in ceremony at Lindsay of the new county judge, His Honor J. A. McGibbon, of Oshawa, but will likely be some time after the middle of the month. Arrangements are being made to bring Judge McGibbon as soon as possible because several courts have been cancelled since the death of His Honor Judge R. D. Ponton, of Victoria and Haliburton, and the work has piled up to an alarming degree.

The new judge was a visitor to Lindsay one day recently and met several of the court officials. It is also understood that he was looking for a home as he intends moving his family in the near future.

His Honor Judge McGibbon will likely be sworn in at an elaborate ceremony such as the one when the late Judge Ponton became county judge just about a year ago. Arrangements have not yet been made for this event.

Cook took the thirty days. The complaint was laid by Chief Constable Hardy.

TORONTO POLICE CAPTURE PAIR

Believe To Have Figured In Preston Robbery—Money Recovered

Roaring along the Guelph-Hamilton highway at a speed of 80 miles an hour, the two men believed to have committed the $2,000 hold-up of the Imperial Bank at Preston Wednesday outdistanced Guelph police officers in a desperate chase, but dipped into their Toronto hideaway apartment late in the afternoon to find themselves entangled in a net of city and provincial police.

The ultimate capture of the pair, and recovery of more than $2,000 of the Imperial Bank loot, was not completed, however, until detectives had pursued Willis Pelley, 25 years old, of Queen street west, for half an hour through backyards, over fences and along lanes. He finally fell exhausted into the arms of two plainclothesmen, while the sharp crack-crack of revolver shots fired in the air still echoed about the neighbourhood.

Pelley's partner, Edward Wells, 31 years old, who shares the same apartment on Queen street West, was captured as he returned to the apartment late in the afternoon and stepped into the arms of a squad of detectives, under the supervision of Provincial Inspector John Miller.

The two are held on charges of robbing a bank while armed. While the police last night declined to state whether or not the pair were linked with recent bank robberies at Mimico, Bronte, Orangeville, Hamilton and Flesherston, it was understood that the investigation was proceeding in that direction.

Dealers' Accounts Said To Be In "Very Bad" Condition

G. T. Clarkson, liquidator of the Manufacturers' Finance Corporation, questioned by his counsel, W. N. Tilley, K.C., gave some figures at Toronto Thursday at the resumed action of the corporation against N. L. Martin, the former auditor, showing to what extent the corporation had been able to pay its creditors.

I. Levinter, acting for Mr. Martin, objected to the evidence, but I. H. Hilliard, K.C., Master at Osgoode Hall, allowed the evidence to go in subject to the objection. Mr. Martin is being sued for an aggregate of $237,000 for alleged breach of duty and negligence in connection with his audits.

Mr. Clarkson testified that of a bond issue of Oct. 1, 1925, to the amount of $44,700, 12.6 per cent, had been paid to the bondholders. Of a bond issue of $275,000, June, 1926, 4.27 per cent, had been paid; bond issue of May, 1927, for $500,000, 8.8 per cent, had been paid; bond issue of $141,200, August, 1927, 25.31 per cent, had been paid; bond issue of $500,000, February, 1928, 2.42 per cent, had been paid.

Asked by Mr. Tilley in what condition he found the dealers' accounts, Mr. Clarkson said: "They were very bad. They owed a large sum of money as I pointed out."

"When did this become apparent?" queried the Master. "Almost immediately after the liquidation," said Mr. Clarkson. Of $1,877,000 of notes outstanding at the time of liquidation less than $600,000 had been collected, Mr. Clarkson testified.

Colonel John A. Cooper, a former director, testified that he had some doubts as to the way the company was doing business. There had been no way for the directors "to discover how the payments were kept up," he said.

NOVEL PLAN TO ERADICATE PESTS

Durham County School Pupils Take Part In Groundhog Competition

A novel class included in the Durham County Rural School Fair Prize List for 1933 read as follows: "Collection of ground hog tails; mounted on cardboard with a note under each showing the date and how captured. All entries in this class will be collected by the Department at each school fair."

Naturally the boys in all rural schools were excited when they learned of this new contest. Boys and dogs were soon on the war path armed with traps and rifles.

The response was very gratifying in that the total of collections at the thirteen school fairs was 3,457 tails. The largest collection, 396 tails, was made by Clair Sisson of Ballyduff School Fair, Manvers Township and the second largest, 204, by Kenneth Henderson of the same fair.

Many comments were passed by farmers, at the school fairs and they were pleased that steps were being taken to eradicate this pest which is rapidly increasing in numbers. Members of several Township Councils intimated they would be in favor of granting a special prize for this work next year.

WORLD SERIES WON BY GIANTS

Ott's Home Run Wins Saturday's Game For New York Team, 4-3

New York Giants, the "miracle men of the baseball season," the champions of the world after out-fighting and out-hitting Washington Senators Saturday in the second successive extra-inning thriller of the series.

The mighty bat of "Little Mel" Ott, who struck the first big blow for the Giants in the opening game, produced the decisive punch with a home run into the bleacher pavilion in left centre in a rousing tenth-inning finish on Saturday.

This big blow broke up a relief pitchers' duel between Adolphe Laque and Jack Russell, gave the Giants their fourth triumph by the score of 4-3, and the series by a four-to-one margin, but it was not posted on the scoreboard until an umpire's decision was reversed and another out raged protest registered, first by the Giants and then by the crestfallen Washington players.

Umpire Pfriman, a National League, at first ruled Ott's hit a two-tagger under ground rules, as Fred Schulte, Senator centrefielder, dived among spectators for the ball, barely got his gloved hand on it and then catapulted head-first over the low board fence into the bleachers.

In the debate that broke out the Giants led the first protest, while Ott remained unwillingly around second base. Pfriman then reversed his decision, ruling the hit a home run after consulting his two American League associates on the field, Emmet Ormsby and George Moriarty, as well as Umpire-in-Chief Charles Moran.

The Saskatchewan government was supplied with 100,000 caragana seedlings by the Dominion Forest Nursery Station at Sutherland last year.

CENTENNIAL MARKED BY OSHAWA CHURCH

First Minister Had Missionary Work From Toronto To Cobourg

Special services which will continue all week commenced Sunday in St. Andrew's United Church, Oshawa, which is celebrating its centennial. The Presbyterian church which was the forerunner of St. Andrew's United Church came into existence in Oshawa in 1833 when Rev. R. I. Thornton, received a call from about 25 families of the district, on the understanding that he could continue doing missionary work between Toronto and Cobourg. The first church was an old log building on Moore's Hill, Township of Whitby. In 1862 the congregation moved to Bruce and Simcoe streets, where the present church now stands, being built in 1899, and a Sunday school building erected with it. In 1927 the present enlarged church and school being formally dedicated in 1928.

The special speakers during the coming week at the church include: Rev. James Hodges, B.A., Minister of St. Andrew's Church from 1898 to 1912; Rev. Prof. W. G. Brown, D.D., Principal of Victoria College; Rev. J. Y. McKinnon, M.A., Brantford; Rev. F. J. Maxwell, Toronto; Rev. George G. D. Kilpatrick, D.D., Hamilton; Rev. H. W. Avison, D.D., Toronto; Rev. Dr. Seymour, Belleville, and Dr. T. E. Kaiser, Oshawa.

THE MYSTIC UNION

I do not ask that many understand The motive hidden darkly in my deed; Why should a stranger who has never scanned My spirit know of all its urge, its need? It is enough that one with clearer eyes Shall look beneath the surface and discern, Deep down, the plan, the purpose I devise Where thoughts through brains strange mazes wind and turn.

But, ah! to one I would lay bare my soul With nothing secret, nothing furtive there, No impulse veiled no wish denied; the whole Revealed as to my God, avowed with prayer. Such is the mystic union love must know When two souls into one soul's splendour glow!

—Aline Michaelis.

NEW RADIO POLICY AIDS NEWSPAPERS

Charlesworth States Aims For National Advertising Program

National Radio advertising on terms reasonable to advertisers and beneficial to newspapers is the desire of the Canadian Radio Broadcasting Commission in formulating a new policy, Hector Charlesworth, the chairman said at Montreal Wednesday.

"Newspapers will be the first to benefit by the new policy," Mr. Charlesworth said, but indicated the plan had not been sufficiently worked out to discuss it in greater detail. "It is impossible to say when the new policy will come into effect," he added. "With our limited resources, we cannot afford to take any chances and we have to operate on a business basis."

Although the Commission has no objection to United States programs being brought in over Canadian stations, "as long as there are not too many of them," no all-day hook-ups with American broadcasting chains will be allowed.

Canada-wide broadcasting of programs by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra has been arranged, the said, the feature to be put on the air Saturdays.

During the address at a service club Mr. Charlesworth explained some of the difficulties with which the Commission was faced and claimed Western Canada had particularly benefited by the Commission's activities. Everything possible was being done to improve the situation at Ottawa, which he described as "the worst reception spot in North America."

Late Fall Sauerkraut And Other Preserved Vegetables

The following vegetables, cabbage (sauerkraut), string beans and beet tops may be preserved by fermentation with dry salting. In this method, the vegetables are washed, the water drained off and the vegetables weighed, using 3 pounds of salt to every 100 pounds of vegetables. No water is used. The salt extracts the water from the vegetables.

Spread layers of vegetables 1 inch thick in a crock, covering each layer with a very thin covering of salt, being careful to distribute the salt evenly, until the crock is three parts full. Place a cloth on the top, then a plate upside down, or a piece of clean board, and a weight on top. A ten-pound weight is sufficient for a 5 gallon crock. The container, (old kegs and butter tubs do as well as stone crocks) should be allowed to stand in a warm room for from eight to ten days. When the bubbles of gas cease to appear the fermentation is complete. A layer of hot paraffin wax about half an inch thick is poured over the top to prevent a scum forming. It is very important that the wax should not be added before fermentation ceases.

In making sauerkraut the outer green leaves of the cabbage and any decayed or bruised leaves should be discarded, as well as the core. The cabbage should be shredded with a saw-cutter or sharp knife. After weighing, pack immediately in a water-tight receptacle. It has been found that one pound of salt to 40 pounds of cabbage gives the best flavour to the finished product.

The cabbage should be pressed down as firmly as possible and covered with a cloth, board and weight. The weight should be sufficient to cause the brine to rise above the board. When sauerkraut is made late in the fall, it is not necessary to add a layer of paraffin wax, because it can be frozen as soon as fermentation is complete. At other times of the year, the scum should be taken off before adding the layer of paraffin. Preserving Fruits and Vegetables bulletin, Dominion Department of Agriculture.

THE SEASONS

Spring is a lad with a lute in his hand, Capering, frolicking over the land, Wooing the flowers with his wistful notes, Putting his tune in the meadow-larks' throats; Whimsical, mystical, brimming with joy, Spring is a madcap dancing boy.

Summer is glad with a deeper mirth, Bringing her bounty to bless the Earth, Green is her robe, with rich broderies, Flowers and fruits on her grasses and trees. Singing she goes through the sunset days, Fertile her ways as a woman's ways.

Autumn is only a gypsy maid, Wandering freely and unafraid; Leaving her path splashed with scarlet and gold, Gaudy her raiment, her laughter is bold, Autumn seems poised, at a breath, to depart; Ah, how the charm of her captures the heart!

Winter, an old man who strides though the world

When eggs are described as sold by the standard dozen, the dozen, under provisions of the Inspection and Sales Act of Canada, means one pound and a half.

PICTON IS BLANKED BY SOUTHAMPTON

Goldsmith Holds Losers To Single Hit — 4,500 Attend

Southampton Fishermen won the first game of the O.B.A.A. Intermediate "B" finals Monday from Pictou by 4-0. A smashing double into the crowd in right centre field by Ross Baker, followed by a clean single into centre by Kuglar, scored the only run of the game in the seventh inning and broke up a magnificent duel between "Lefty" Goldsmith of the home forces, and Warner Phillips of Pictou.

Goldsmith set Pictou down with just one hit, a single to right field by McQuade in the fourth inning, but his mates contributed four errors to the cause and kept him in hot water in the early innings. He struck out 13 batters. Two lightning double plays by Pictou and one by Southampton cut off potential scoring threats.

There was no heavy clouding down from Phillips' delivery either. His portside slants took eight on a third strike and allowed but four hits. The crowd of more than 4,500 was the largest ever to witness a ball game in Southampton.

OCTOBER

October leads her radiant train O'er all the countryside, In trappings gay her cavalades In proud procession ride; Her flaming banners float and fling Their splendor 'gainst the sky, As in these sun-filled languid days Her brilliant train glides by.

And when we see her banners float From every scarlet tree, When weirdly calls the plover's note Across the fallow lea, Our spirit answers to the call, Our gypsy pulse beats high; And we, too, join the cavalcade When Autumn's train sweeps by.

For who can view the magic scene Of these October days— The trees in scarlet, green and gold Veiled in the lilac haze. The placid waters of the stream, The tender blue of sky— Unheeding of the mystic thrill As Autumn's train sweeps by? —Helen B. Anderson.

NEW EXPORT REGULATION

For many years the export regulations of the Root Vegetable Act have been applied to carload and cargo shipments of potatoes for export from any point within the provinces of New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island to any other province, or out of Canada. During the past year, the regulations were amended to include compulsory inspection of turnips exported from Ontario and Prince Edward Island, and also to all vegetables shipped out of British Columbia. On the 2nd of September a further amendment, by ministerial order, now makes the regulations applicable to all truck shipments, in addition to carload and cargo consignments. Thus in accordance with the new order, potatoes for export from New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, turnips from Ontario and Prince Edward Island, and all vegetables from British Columbia moving by rail, water, or truck are required to be inspected at the point of shipment. The inspections are carried out by officers of the Dominion Fruit Branch which administers the Act.

TO PROBE SECRET OF PARASITIC PLAGUE

In an attempt to probe the secrets of the parasites that cause tularemia, a plague that greatly reduces game life, Dr. Robert Green, professor of bacteriology to the University of Minnesota, will spend some months in the Hudson Bay region around Churchill, states the Natural Resources Department of the Canadian National Railways.

The germs of this disease are believed to live on grouse and rabbits which are common in this territory and specimens of both will be trapped with a view to isolating the parasite to finding means which will eventually lead to the eradication of the plague.

FIRE PREVENTION

The small boy who can resist the temptation to take a shot at a bird on a fence or in a tree, if he has anything to shoot with, is yet to be born.

The wanton destruction by small boys—and boys old enough to know better—on bird life is appalling. Much of the killing is done by sling-shots, and it is natural for boys when they reach a certain age to aspire to the possession of a sling-shot, but they should be taught to use particular care in the selection of targets.

They should never be allowed to shoot at the neighbor's windows, birds, the family cat, but should use tin-cans as targets. Now a tin-can makes a wonderful target!

The schools can do much toward stamping out the practice of the killing of birds by small boys, which is no credit to those who do so.

If the teachers would appeal to their better nature, it would prove fruitful of good results.

CANADIAN STEAMER DID IT

The year 1933 marks the 100th anniversary of the spanning of the Atlantic ocean by the Royal William, a Canadian-built vessel, the first to make a crossing of the ocean entirely under her own steam, in August, 1833. A special Canadian postage stamp has been issued by the Dominion post office department to mark the centenary of the historic sailing.

In these days of rapid progress the achievements of the past are apt to be forgotten in the light of later accomplishment, but The Sailor, official organ of the Navy League, has some interesting comment to make on the pioneer vessel.

Following an auspicious launching of the vessel, which was built by Canadian workmen and named after King William IV., she was sent on some trading trips between Quebec and Halifax prior to being placed in trans-Atlantic service. These trading trips did not prove very successful financially. A cholera epidemic followed which meant quarantine with consequent financial loss, and in the spring of 1833 the ship had to be sold by Sheriff sale to the mortgagees who used it for towing and local pleasure parties. Later she undertook a voyage to Boston and held the distinction of being the first steamer ever to enter a United States port flying the Union Jack.

Her owners afterwards decided to send her to England for sale, and she left for London with a crew of 36 and seven passengers. Off the Newfoundland banks she was assailed by storms that strained her timbers and put one of her engines out of commission. To make matters worse the ship sprang a leak and began to sink, but the gallant captain, McDougall by name, held to his course, manned the pumps and took over the engineering duties himself. In a week's time he had the ship again in action, and after 25 anxious days brought the Royal William to the Port of London, thus completing the first steam crossing of the Atlantic, and giving Canada the honor of inaugurating ocean steam navigation.

That was a hundred years ago. To-day floating palaces are crossing the ocean in five and six days and aeroplanes in much shorter time than that. But it is well that the present generation of Canadians should remember that Canada was the pioneer in ocean steam navigation.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

THE WORLD'S SERIES

The world's series is on and all over the North American Continent—for Canadians are as much interested in this blue ribbon competition as are their cousins to the south—people are forgetting the economic situation for the moment and pinning their attention upon the fate of the New York Giants and the Washington Senators.

Probably because newspapers in both countries carry more extensive reports of the series and because by the magic of radio play-by-play descriptions, the roars of the crowd and the crack of ball against bat are borne into the homes of millions, the interest in the annual meeting of the champions of the two major leagues is greater than ever before.

This excitement over two teams that the majority of people have never seen in action is not an unhealthy sign; it indicates an affection for sport that helps to preserve the balance of the people of the United States and Canada.

As a rule those who can wrap themselves up in the thrills of an athletic contest are able to fight life's battles with a stout heart, and they rarely have the temperament upon which bloodshed and revolution are founded.

You'll find a scarcity of both Communists and dictators in countries whose people have learned to play and enjoy watching others play.

The world's series then is welcome in the relief from the troubles of the day it supplies and in the common interest it gives to North Americans.—Peterboro Examiner.

SAFE MARGINS

A bulletin just issued by the Ontario Safety League should be of real service to the driver who is conscientious about following safety rules at all times.

There are a good many motorists who probably have not given a great deal of thought to the margin of safety that should be maintained between vehicles travelling in the same direction along a highway.

Obviously this varies according to the speed of the vehicles, and the Safety League has compiled a table which indicates the safe margins between cars travelling in a single line at various speeds, as follows:

30 miles per hour	71 feet
35 miles per hour	90 feet
40 miles per hour	112 feet
45 miles per hour	138 feet

"If you keep that far behind the car in front," the bulletin declares, "you will avoid running into it should it be forced to stop suddenly and unexpectedly."

This table will be in the nature of a surprise to many motor-

YOUTHS GIVEN TERM IN JAIL

Hope Township And Millbrook Youths Get Jail Terms

Appearing on remand on conviction for chicken stealing, three youths were sentenced by Police Magistrate O. A. Langley at Peterboro to terms of imprisonment in the County Jail. Percy Henry, of Hope Township, previously convicted of chicken stealing in December 1928, was sentenced to three months' imprisonment, and his two companions, John Hummell, of Toronto, and George W. Martin, of Millbrook to two months each.

It was related at a previous hearing, that the trio embarked on a chicken stealing excursion which took them to the farm of Joseph Hutchinson of Otonabee township. They not only stole chickens in Otonabee, but also robbed chicken coops near Cobourg. For the latter offence the youths served thirty days in Cobourg jail. They were arrested at the expiry of their time by Provincial Constable D. Silvester on the charges for which they were sentenced in Peterboro.

T. J. Carley of Hall and Carley, pleading on behalf of the defendant Henry, said that while Henry went to the farm of his former employer to steal chickens, he believed that he had been led away by the other defendants. "The boy has a job to go to, and his family are in need."

Martin had nothing to say and no one spoke on his behalf.

Just before Hummell was sentenced, his wife with a baby in her arms, rose and addressed the magistrate. She had seen her husband in the lock-up that morning she said, and he had told her he had no intention of stealing chickens. "He has never stole anything in his life before," she said. "I asked him why he stole the chickens, and he said it could have cost him his life, whatever he meant by that."

LIMIT IS SET FOR NEW LOAN

Oversubscription Ruled Out And "After Market" Protected

The Dominion refunding loan to be launched next Tuesday will be for $25,000,000 and that amount has been set as a definite limit to subscriptions. This announcement was made by Dr. W. C. Clark, Deputy Minister of Finance. In most previous loans a certain objective was set, but subscriptions were received by more than the amount aimed at and the actual loan sometimes was doubled.

In this instance it has been decided, in the event of oversubscription, to issue the new bonds by allotment, scaling down the large subscriptions to make a fair division.

ists who, while they pride themselves that they are careful and capable drivers, have not considered it necessary to keep these distances behind cars in line on a highway.

As a matter of fact, most drivers reduce the margin considerably without stopping to think that in doing so they are leaving themselves open to danger in the event of a sudden halt in the line of traffic ahead.

Possibly the publication of these figures will effect a change of opinion, and result in more attention being paid to the art of motoring.—Peterboro Examiner.

Sons are: Ernest of Dorset Township; Isaac and George of Southern Saskatchewan; Stanley of Prince Albert; Saskatchewan; and William of Peterboro and daughters are Mrs. Cox of Port Hope; Mrs. H. While the difficulties of Canadian fruit exporters are well looked after by the Dominion and Provincial Departments of Agriculture, the importance of rapid marketing is being urged by the New Zealand and Australian governments on their own fruit exporters owing to the wastage in apples and pears. According to a survey by the Empire Marketing Board, delay occurring between the time of unloading and the time that the fruit reached the retail shops responsible for much waste. Both in the case of New Zealand and Australian apples, the injury was found at the time of unloading to be most extensive in the most mature apples.

"The relationship between size and wastage is well established," the survey declares, "the larger the apples being so susceptible that they can scarcely be profitably shipped unless they are packed in such a way as to protect them from the action of all fruit from the same countries. It is a matter of common knowledge that the export of apples should not be delayed."

MAYOR CLASHES WITH MEMBER

"Have Always Been Bad Friends," Bowmanville Councillor Retorts

Councillor W. F. Ward and Mayor George W. James had yet another of their verbal clashes when representatives of Bowmanville organizations throughout the town gathered to discuss the relief situation. Asked by Mayor James to express his opinion as to whether relief should be paid through a town levy or the money raised by subscription, as in previous years, Councillor Ward believed that a canvass should be made. He suggested that the money could be raised if the canvass was properly made.

Mayor James retorted that he had taken part in the canvass each year and as Councillor Ward had taken no part he should confine himself to things he was acquainted with. Councillor Ward objected to the mayor's statement and later in the evening stated that the mayor did not know what he was talking about.

"We have always been bad friends," Councillor Ward added, "and I guess we always will be."

Despite further objections by Councillor Ward that the meeting was not a constituted body and therefore could not pass resolutions, the meeting passed the resolution recommending to the council that a canvass of all non-taxpayers be made and the remainder needed be taken from the taxes.

Col. T. McLaughlin, chairman of the welfare board, stated that $5,000 would be needed to get through the winter. President Tommy Ross of the Rotary Club announced that the club will donate $500 in relief if the money is expended on Rotary Park, which the club presented in the town.

CARIBOO GOLD STRONG POSITION

Officials Of B.C. Mine Preparing For Construction Of 1000-Ton Mill

Cariboo Gold Quartz Mining Co. has made good progress with its initial production program, according to official figures, says The Financial Post. At the annual meeting of shareholders held on May 28 last, the report presented showed that in the 118 days the mill had then been in operation, 5,077 tons of ore had been treated producing 1,520 ounces of gold bullion, which had an approximate value of $38,000. This was equivalent to approximately 42 tons daily and an average recovery of $7.60 per ton. A better picture of the progress made is shown for the period ended July 31, when the total value of the gold production reached $121,605. By deduction the 76-day period, following the annual meeting, indicates the recovery of $83,600 from approximately 4,500 tons of ore treated or an average recovery of $18.30 per ton—over $1,100 daily. Official figures also show that in spite of the fact that the mill was running on a reduced rate and being tuned up, that for the period ended June 30, 1933, a modest operating profit, accrued before depreciation and development costs of some $31,000.

Strong Cash Position

The financial statement as to June 30, 1933, also reflected a very healthy financial position with current assets of $400,000 of which $346,000 was cash. This position reflected the sale of 237,833 treasury shares, bringing the total outstanding as at June 30 to 1,241,133.

It is the intention of officials to prepare as speedily as possible the mine for a 1,000-ton mill and to this end O. H. Solbakke is en route to England to market sufficient treasury shares to put $1,000,000 in the company's treasury ready to finance mill construction just as soon as mine conditions warrant.

CANADIAN GOLD OUTPUT DECLINED DURING JULY

Gold produced in July amounted to 253,655 ounces, compared with 261,411 ounces in June and 250,371 in July, 1932, says a report issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Production during the seven months ending July totalled 1,713,578, a decrease of more than 13,000 ounces as compared with the corresponding period in 1932, when 1,751,501 ounces were produced.

Ontario led the provinces with a production of 189,522 ounces; Quebec second with 33,845, and British Columbia third with 24,214 ounces. Manitoba's output was 9,509 ounces, while 13 ounces were produced in Nova Scotia and Alberta. Alluvial gold production in the Yukon totalled 1,000 ounces.

July gold output of the world was 9,000 ounces, compared with 10,000 ounces in the previous month, says the report, and world production for seven months ending July was 13,708,000 ounces, compared with 13,878,000 in the corresponding period of 1932.

CHARGES ARISE FOLLOWING CRASH

Further Charge Of Manslaughter Is Laid Against Roy Walsh At Peterboro

Roy Walsh faced an additional charge of manslaughter when he appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., on an adjourned charge of stealing an automobile.

Both charges arose as a result of an automobile smash-up near Springfield on Saturday morning last, on the Port Hope-Peterboro Highway, when Joseph M. Maher, the accused's companion on the "joy ride" in a stolen sedan car, was killed.

Through his counsel J. A. O'Brien the accused, who had previously elected summary trial on the lesser charge, entered a plea of "not guilty" to car theft. He did not elect or plead on the major charge which was laid subsequently on the information of Provincial Constable D. Silvester. On application of Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., hearing of the charges was adjourned to October 11th. Bail was set in the sum of $8,000, with two sureties of $4,000 each.

Mr. O'Brien applied for bail for Walsh before the manslaughter charge was laid. He pointed out to the Magistrate that a coroner's jury had found that the deceased man, Maher was the driver of the car at the time it plunged into the ditch and further stated that evidence was given at the inquest which showed that Maher had procured the car.

"That may be, but my view of the matter is that a manslaughter charge will be laid," the Crown Attorney stated.

Mr. O'Brien—If this man is innocent, he should not be held for another week.

Mr. McElderry—We will lay the manslaughter charge now if you prefer it that way.

Addressing the bench Mr. O'Brien said, "I would again draw to Your Worship's attention that the inquest proceedings were held. The Crown was in possession of all the evidence, and should have been in a position to go on with the preliminary inquiry."

ANOTHER LOCAL HOME ENTERED

Thieves Active On Park Street—Steal Money And Clothing

The series of nightly house robberies in Port Hope still continue and in the early hours of this morning, unidentified thieves entered the home of Mrs. W. J. Hill, Park street, and stole $420 in cash, two suits of clothes, and a single pair of trousers, and a set of keys, the property of Harold Connors, Capitol Theatre employee here.

Early this morning, the two suits of clothes were recovered by Fred Page, John Street, who noticed them lying on the grass in the vacant lot at the south end of the fruit house, near the tracks. He returned them to the Hill residence and it was the first that the occupants learned of the burglary.

Mr. Connors retired at midnight, and did not hear the thieves as they worked in his bedroom. Entrance was made to the house by an unlocked side-door, which was unlocked due to the fact that all the occupants of the house had not returned home.

The bold thief entered Mr. Connors' bedroom and removed the money and keys from a dresser, while the owner slept a few feet away. The marauders then visited a closet and stole the two new suits of clothes and a pair of trousers.

The boldness of the thief was amazing and none of the occupants of the house heard any disturbance. At 1.30 o'clock this morning, a suspicious looking car was seen in the neighborhood but a description of its occupants was not obtained.

Quick Relief for Women

Women need not endure periodic pains and headaches. They can spare themselves this suffering by taking ZUTOO TABLETS. Mrs. Allen Wright, of Fulford, who was relieved in 30 minutes of severe pain and headache, wrote saying: "Every woman in the land should know about ZUTOO TABLETS and what they will do." Just try the tablets and know for yourself how quickly they stop the pain.

The Guide Story

"Father talk of going away for a holiday," Bell is saying. "He will go as soon as Fred can come to take his place."

"Ah," Richard Durant interposes, glancing involuntarily at his sister, "and when will that be?"

"Oh, I don't know—soon, I hope or dad will break down and then who will physic the doctor?"—and Bell shrugs her pretty shoulders. "Now I must be on, or it will be too dark to find my way across the hills."

"It is far too dark already," says Lindsay quietly. "I have sent to say you will stay here to-night, Bill. Robinson had to ride back that way, so he took the message."

"Oh, how delightful!" exclaims Bell rapturously. "Moor House is the most charming place in the world, Lord Denzil," she adds, turning her laughing, blue eyes upon his face.

"I can readily believe so," the Earl answers smiling. "It seems like home to me already—at least more like home than any other place I have ever lived in!" he adds, glancing after Lindsay, as she crosses the hall on her way upstairs and uneasily conscious that the firelight seems to glow less homelike when the graceful figure in its long red dress has appeared.

Dinner in the quaint panelled dining-room is a very pleasant meal.

It, in a pale-blue frock, which remains permanently at Moor House, to enable her to change her habit when she rides over to spend the evening, looks charming. Lindsay is pale and grave, but perfectly courteous and the dinner itself and the appointments of the table leave nothing to be wished for.

Bell chatters away gaily to an accompaniment of frequent laughter from the two young men. Even Lindsay smiles once or twice, but takes no part in the chit-chat, and the Earl is puzzled to decide whether she is naturally cold or whether she knows that silence suits her.

"Are you not well, dear?" he hears her brother say, as he rises to open the door for the two girls. "You are so quiet."

"She is very quiet," says Bell audaciously. "Fred must prescribe for her," she adds with a laugh.

Lord Denzil sees the sudden flush which rises to Lindsay's cheeks, and is half amused, half angry at the strange pang that pierces his own heart as the door closes after them and that lovely, significant blush is hidden from his sight.

CHAPTER III

"He said that Bell? He said that I would not have nursed him so carefully if he had not been Lord Denzil? Are you sure?"

"He did not use those identical words of course," answers Bell carelessly. "But he said something to that effect."

"Did he? It was generous of him! wonder he dared say it to you, Bell, believing as I suppose he does, that you are my friend!"

"And am I not your friend?" Bell inquires, putting her arm round Lindsay as they stand together in the drawing-room of Moor House. "Of course I told him he was mistaken. Come Lindsay darling, don't look so pale, or I shall be sorry I told you. I only did so because I thought you ought to know."

"I am glad you did tell me," says Lindsay firmly, with pale lips that do not quiver or betray any of the passionate pain of her wounded heart. "It was only right that I should know, Bell. If he was mistaken I was, too, because I was foolish enough to imagine that, though he was an Earl, he was a gentleman."

Bell laughs rather mirthlessly. She is not looking at Lindsay; she cannot meet the grave, brown eyes of her friend just now, but she can detect the suffering in the rich-toned voice, and she feels a little uncomfortable. She half wishes, notwithstanding Lindsay's assurance, that she had held her tongue. And yet she knows that she has accomplished the object she had in view.

"What a terrible Radical you are, Lindsay!" she says gaily. "That word 'though' is an expressive one! By-the-bye, why are you not coming with us to-day?"

"Where?" asks Lindsay carelessly. She is still very pale but she has moved away from Bell's side and is walking alone in the drawing-room, putting finishing touches to the folds of the soft muslin curtains, adjusting the ribbon and laying to the pretty, faded old room its air of homelike grace and refinement.

"Where?" echoed Bell. "Have you forgotten that we arranged to go up the Elton Pike to-day and lunch on the top? The Rector and Mrs. Ford are coming, you know."

"I had forgotten," admits Lindsay. "But I did not mean to go—the climb is such a stiff one. It is a fine day, and you will enjoy it."

"Oh, we shall never get to the top!" replies Bell, with a laugh. "Lord Denzil will be sure to break down."

"Is he going?" queries Lindsay, pausing suddenly in the act of arranging an antimacassar.

"Of course he is. He promised me this morning." Now, Lindsay, don't try to prevent him," she adds earnestly. "He wants to go."

"He is quite unequal to such a walk," remarks Lindsay coldly, as she takes the antimacassar again in her shaking fingers.

"Oh, well, if you tell him so, he'll stay at home!" says Bell, laughing, but with an angry flush on her bright cheeks. "But he'll believe, of course, that you induce him to stay at home in order to have a long tete-a-tete."

"I dare say he will," Lindsay agrees coldly. "He is quite capable of it, Bell. If you will excuse me, I will go and see what Peggy has put up for your luncheon."

"I'll go, too," Bell declares. "I am at least as much interested as you are!"

Peggy has packed the luncheon-basket in a masterly manner—the result of long experience in catering for similar festivities. And, having satisfied herself on that head, Bell runs off to her room to put on her hat, while Lindsay goes into the hall and standing at the open door, looks out at the fair October morning with dim, unseeing eyes.

"Did he say that—did he say that?" She repeats the words to herself again and again as she stands there—a tall, fair figure in her serge gown, so severely simple in its straight folds, relieved at the throat and wrists by her linen collar and cuffs. The thought darkens all the bright landscape.

To a proud woman like Lindsay Durant the feeling aroused by Bell's words is one which gives her almost unbearable suffering. Lord Denzil has been at Moor Farm for three weeks now, and for the greater part of the time he has been an invalid, ill enough to excite anxiety, and prevent Doctor Heath from taking the holiday of which he is in need. During that time his patient and uncomplaining suffering had made Lindsay a very tender and skilful nurse.

The Earl had not been obliged to keep to his room except for the first day or two—he had been allowed to lie on a couch in the sitting-room which Lindsay had arranged for him and she had won for ever the fidelity and devotion of his servant, by her kindness to his master. The old soldier was himself a skilful nurse, but he could not, as Lindsay could, make the long, weary hours short and pleasant to Lord Denzil by reading or singing or chatting to him and he had not her quick, keen powers of perception, by which she knew when their patient was parched with thirst or faint and weary.

Bell's words have made Lindsay's mental vision almost painfully clear. She sees now, for the first time, how pleasant—how unspeakably pleasant—the days of Lord Denzil's convalescence have been to her, and what a sweet, strange interest has brightened her life. His weakness, his dependence on her have aroused all her gentlest feeling and pity which is on the borderland of love has proved a traitor and has urged her unconsciously beyond the frontier. The keen, almost maddening pain at her heart tells her the truth now for the first time—it is not pity she feels for Lord Denzil. It is love!

A deadly faintness comes over her as she stands there. For a moment all is dark before her eyes, but she recovers herself with a long, shivering sigh. She has been mad, but she must use all her strength to hide her madness. It will be easier to die, the girl thinks wildly, than to let the truth be known to the man who thinks so basely of her, and her madness will be but short-lived. She will not long love one so unworthy.

He has seemed so different, she thinks bitterly, in the long talks they have had together in the firelit room—he has seemed so true and generous and noble. His life has been a lonely one, too—he has no relatives except the sister from whom fate has separated him and she has appeared so grateful for any trifling attention, while he has been his suffering with the patient endurance of a brave man.

All the intense happiness of the past bright days comes before Lindsay as she recalls them, and thinks of the cruel, carelessly-spoken words which have changed all the world for her. In the same hour in which she has learned her love she has learned also that it has been bestowed upon one who is unworthy of so precious a gift.

The mist clears away from her eyes. She looks towards the hill-tops standing out against the bright, clear sky—Elton Pike the lowest and the most richly wooded. The fells are full of colour, the woods rich in the loveliest tints. It is an ideal autumn day.

"At least I shall have a few hours to myself while they are at Elton Pike," the girl thinks. But her spirit is troubled with the knowledge that Lord Denzil is not in a fit state to attempt so long and fatiguing a walk, and he ought not to undertake it. An hour ago she could have had no hesitation in issuing peremptory orders that he should not go, but she cannot do so now. Bell's laughing speeches, spoken so innocently yet so significantly have silenced her, although Doctor Heath's directions were explicit—fatigue was to be avoided. What should she do? How could she prevent him?

Lindsay is still standing at the door when two figures come within sight, sauntering slowly in the old-fashioned garden. The first is a man in a grey suit, the second a woman in a grey dress. The man is the Earl—there is no mistaking his still, gaunt proportions—and the girl is Bell. She is laughing up at him as they walk side by side. The Earl's hands are clasped behind his back, his head is slightly bent. Bell's bright face looks lovelier than ever. A pang of agony, sharper than any she has felt before, pierces Lindsay's heart as she turns away from the door and it is fortunate that Richard Durant, coming out of his sanctum at the moment, is glancing over a paper, or he could not fail to notice the expression in the brown eyes, which are usually so serene and calm. A sudden impulse forces her to speak.

"Dick," she says hurriedly, "Lord Denzil ought not to go with you. He is not fit. Try to prevent him, will you?"

"I told him I thought the walk was too far for him," replies Richard, shrugging his shoulders. "But it is useless to try to dissuade him, as Bell is going!"

He laughs a forced laugh as he utters the last words, and Lindsay glances at him anxiously. He looks rather worn and haggard, she thinks.

"He ought not to go," she persists. "He will be knocked up. Oh, Dick, do you think—"

The pain at her heart causes the words to die upon her lips and her eyes are fixed upon his with a blind, unseeing stare.

Dick laughs again.

"It is easy enough to see that our pretty Bell would like to be a countess, dear," he says lightly. "Whether his lordship is inclined to make her one, I doubt, but—"

A brief silence follows, and it seems to Lindsay that chaos has come again.

"Dick, would you care?" she asks faintly, putting her hand upon his arm, and raising such wistful eyes to his that he smiles brightly to reassure her.

"I thought I should, but I don't—much," he answers. "She is very sweet, Lindsay, but—"

Again he pauses. His wound, if not a mortal one, like Lindsay's, is deep enough to hurt him more than he cares to let her know. Presently he says hurriedly—

"About Denzil, dear. Cannot you advise him not to attempt so long a walk?"

"I would rather you did," she returns. "Oh, here are the Fords!"

Mr. Ford and his wife are pleasant, cheery young people, with excellent health, good prospects, and a fair share of love between them. He is the beau ideal of a parson for the scattered hilly parish over which he rules, and in choosing his wife he has chosen well, for she has energy enough to accompany him on his rounds, and her bright eyes and fluent tongue make her a welcome visitor at the lonely farms and cottages among the hills. She is chattering merrily now to the Earl and Bell as they all enter the hall together.

"Not going with us Lindsay?" she says as she greets Miss Durant. "How is that? Are you getting lazy? You used to climb well enough to be a member of the Alpine Club? Are you well?" she asks kindly. "You look so pale."

"I am quite well," Lindsay declares. "I have never been better." Pike. There is no view worth climbing for."

"I am afraid Miss Durant's kind care of me has tired her, Mrs. Ford," says Lord Denzil regretfully, his eyes resting very tenderly upon the girl's pale, proud face.

"Not at all," Lindsay answers coldly, without looking at him. "You will have a pleasant walk, Mrs. Ford. The weather is perfect."

"It is just the weather for the Lake district," says the Rector cheerfully. "So your father is gone, Bell? He wanted a long rest. Are we all ready?"

"Lindsay thinks it will be too far for you, Lord Denzil," remarks Dick, to his sister's inexpressible dismay.

"Does she?" says the Earl, smiling and trying to meet the proud, troubled eyes which so persistently avoid his own. "I feel quite strong this morning."

"We will walk very slowly," Bell interposes eagerly. "Lindsay is as fussy as the proverbial hen!"

"Would you rather I did not go?" the Earl asks, in a low voice, as he draws near Lindsay.

"I do not care one way or the other," she says firmly. "If you feel equal to the walk, go by all means."

"I will not go if you tell me to stay," he rejoins, in the same tone, bending towards her. "You know I will not go if you would rather I stayed."

"And you know," she replies, raising her eyes to his with an expression he has never seen in them before, "that it is a matter of perfect indifference to me whether you go or stay."

Lord Denzil looks at her in mute surprise, wondering what has changed her so suddenly and so completely. Her manner is usually so sweet and friendly. It seems as though in a moment she had changed into the proud, cold girl she was in the first hour of their meeting, and who had so soon altered into the tenderest and sweetest woman he has ever known. What is the meaning of her haughty, frigid manner? Has he offended her? One thing is certain—he would not have joined the party for Elton if he had dreamed she was not going with them, and he would only be too glad if he could get out of going now.

Bell's face darkens stormily as she sees how wistfully his eyes follow Lindsay as she turns away and begins to chat with the Rector.

"Are we all ready?" inquires Mrs. Ford briskly. "Frank, you and Mr. Durant must share the labour of carrying the luncheon-basket. Lord Denzil, as an invalid, is exempt from fatigue duty. Don't be anxious, Lindsay," she adds kindly, putting her hand upon the girl's shoulder. "We will not let your patient do too much."

Lindsay says nothing. Lord Denzil stands for a moment as if irresolute, then, turning away, he takes his alpenstock and moves after Mrs. Ford, who has gone to the door. The others are standing in the pathway—Bell charming and picturesque, and the Rector and Richard Durant laughing disputing for the honour of carrying the luncheon. Mrs. Ford joins them, making a merry remark, hoping that the contents of the basket will not suffer. Lindsay, standing pale and proud upon the threshold, forces a laugh also, to hide the pain and anxiety she feels so keenly. Perhaps the Earl reads correctly the trouble in the sweet, brown eyes, for he pauses again.

"Am I to stay," he asks gently. "What am I to do, Lindsay? Am I to go or stay?"

"That is for you to decide," she replies coldly.

"You do not care which I do?" he says, a tone of keen reproach in his voice.

"Why should I?" asks Lindsay quietly.

"Come, Lord Denzil," Bell calls out, in her sweetest tones—"we are waiting."

The Earl hesitates. He glances from Bell's bright little figure to the grave, still woman in her serge frock, then, with a scarcely suppressed sigh he turns from the house and strides down the path.

Lindsay's heart throbs painfully as she gazes after him. How gaunt and spare he looks and how mostly his tweed jacket hangs from his shoulders! Bell looks smaller than ever beside him. Her lovely little golden head just reaches his heart.

CHAPTER IV

The old clock in the hall at Moor House proclaims that, it is eleven. A whole hour has elapsed since the party for Elton Pike started, but Lindsay is still in the hall where they left her.

Absolute quiet reigns in the oak-panelled rooms. The kitchens and out-offices of Moor House are all at the back and the hall looks out into the garden, where the autumn flowers are still in bloom, brightening the landscape with their colour, and filling the air with their fragrance. The hall-door is open—Lindsay had left it so when she turned away from it, and, going back to the hearth, she had sunk down in a chair which stood there. She sat facing the fire so that any one entering the hall might well be excused for thinking it empty.

She is still sitting there, but the high back of her chair hides her completely. She has not moved from her first attitude. She had dropped into the chair, weak and faint, as soon as the necessity for calmness and composure was over and she has not stirred. She sits leaning back, with her head drooping upon her breast, one hand is upon her lap, of her chair. Her eyes dim and unseeing, are stirring before her into the fire, which has died down on the hearth into a dull grayish-white heap with gleams of red here and there, where the wood is still burning.

The bitterest hour Lindsay Durant has yet known is drawing to a close. The keen agony, which has seemed as though it would kill her, has faded to a dull sense of anguish, as painful but more endurable. Her physical weakness has not blunted her mental faculties—indeed, they seem abnormally active. The bewilderment of the first shock is over and the truth grows clearer every moment. She has given her love unasked, unwished for, to a man who thinks so meanly of her as to misunderstand her simple actions, and the one thing from which she shrinks in intense dismay is his knowledge of her love. What can she do? The more she thinks the more intolerable her position seems.

The old friendly relations can never be resumed. Will she ever be able to meet him without that terrible pang at her heart which seems to drain the blood from her face and lips?

Her intense self-consciousness will make her nervous and unlike herself. How can she bear the next few weeks? The Earl's stay is to be prolonged indefinitely. Doctor Clayton and his wife are coming to spend a few days at Moor House and Lindsay has planned all kinds of simple festivities to brighten their visit. Will she ever find strength and pride enough to act her part well and arouse no suspicions? Her heart sings almost despairingly as she sits there, poor, pale, proud Lindsay, who is worth of the truest love that ever woman won.

Presently she raises her drooping head, and glances around her vacantly, as though scarcely conscious of where she is. Then she rises slowly, steadying herself against the arm of her chair, standing thus for an instant before she draws herself proudly erect. At the same moment a man's heavy footstep sounds on the stone steps before the porch, and the girl starts and turns towards the door.

A gentleman is standing there, gazing at her with a half deprecating look in his bright blue eyes, and hesitating as though not sure of a welcome or even of being received at all.

A quick gleam of surprise lights up Lindsay's dark eyes as they rest upon him, but her cheeks remain pale.

Frederic Heath eagerly, anxiously as he watches for it, sees no tell-tale blush rise as she advances to meet him.

"Why, Fred," she says, in the most natural manner as she holds out her cold hand, "when did you come? I did not know you had arrived."

"I came last night," he answers, in a somewhat husky tone. "The man my father left as a locum tenens was obliged to go—he was sent for home, so he wired for me."

"What a surprise for Bell!" Lindsay remarks lightly. "She has been staying here for the past week, you know."

"Yes, Doctor Evans left me a note, giving me a few directions, and in it he mentioned that she was here. Is she well? And are you well, Lindsay? You look pale."

"Is 1?" she queries, raising her straight brows. "I am quite well, notwithstanding my want of colour. Bell has gone to Elton Pike with the Rector and his wife, Dick and Lord Denzil."

"Lord Denzil!" he cries carelessly, almost absently, for he is studying her face and trying to read its expression. "He is staying here, is he not?" Evans says in his note something about his needing care. But he cannot be much of an invalid if he is going to climb Elton Pike."

"He is much better," says Lindsay quietly, "although he is not yet very strong. You saw your father at Scarborough, I suppose? How did you think he looked?"

"Very seedy. A holiday will do him good. How pleasant this dark hall looks!" he adds, glancing around him. "I so often see it when I am away."

"The hall is flat," he observes. Lindsay, coldly. "You ride over, of course? Where have you left your horse?"

It is better tea

"Robson took him. I rode into the stable-yard, thinking I should find Dick there, but he was not, so I walked round. I had been standing at the door for some minutes when you rose from your chair. I did not thank any one was here. Were you asleep, Lindsay, that you were so still?"

As they stand together before the fire he looks down earnestly at her and for the first time during their interview a crimson flush rises slowly in Lindsay's face. The young man's heart begins to beat more quickly. She is not so indifferent, as she would fain appear, he thinks, with a touch of triumphant exultation, and she is surely thinner and paler. She has suffered since their parting more than a year ago. She looks older, but not less lovely. Since that parting he has seen no woman half so beautiful. The troubled look fades from his eyes. His manner—until now rather nervous and ill-assured—becomes more confident.

He is a handsome young fellow of seven or eight and twenty, with bright blue eyes like Bell's and curly hair, scarcely darker than hers. His features are good, although his mouth denotes indecision and weakness and he wears a carefully cultivated fair moustache. He is well dressed, with more care and regard for fashion than are usually seen in the inhabitants of the Lake country, and he looks somewhat out of harmony with the quaint old hall and Lindsay's graceful and unconventional air.

"Shall I be dreadfully in your way if I stay awhile?" he asks presently. "I thought you would give me some luncheon, but I did not expect to find you all alone. You are not very busy or you would not have been dreaming by the fire. Was it a very pleasant dream?" he adds, smiling, as with a sudden movement he touches her hand.

It is his question and not the touch of his hand that averts her, but Fred Heath thinks otherwise. He sees the colour fade from her face, leaving her deathly pale, and she draws back from him with a glance of almost passionate reproach which causes him greatly.

"Lindsay, forgive me," he says earnestly. "You would if you knew how wretched I have been since we parted. Lindsay, will you forget my folly, my madness and my unworthiness and let things be as they were before between us?"

He has followed her away from the hearth and as she pauses by an old cabinet which stands near he seizes her hands and she lets them lie in his clasp chill and passive as she raises her eyes to his. The reproachful look has left them. They are grave, questioning, almost and, but he fails to read that there is scorn as well as sadness in their shining depths.

"It was all a mistake," he goes on eagerly—"a great, a terrible mistake, Lindsay. I thought you did not care for me and I was piqued and angry and did not much care what became of me. And you were angry, dear, were you not? But you have forgiven me now and we can be as large as we once hoped to be together."

Lindsay says nothing. Her hands lie motionless in his, her unfathomable eyes are still fixed upon his face, as she leans back against the dark oak cabinet.

"You do not quite hate me, dear?" the young man continues in the same eager way. "Of course, I behaved vilely to you, but my repentance was prompt and sincere! And you are so sweet and true, Lindsay, and my father will be so glad, and—dear, are you listening to me?"

"Yes I am listening."

The words seem to drop from her lips involuntarily and he looks at her with some anxiety as he says gently—

"You look so white, I thought you were faint. You are not well, dear—let me make care of you. Give me the right I forfeited and of which I am only worthy because I love you! I love you now as I have always loved you."

His eager, passionate words die away in the silence of the hall, but they still seem to ring in Lindsay's ears, as she turns to him, looking shocked, indignant and very sad.

"Do I understand you aright?" she asks steadily. "Are you asking me to be engaged to you again?"

"I am asking you to give me back my lost happiness," he answers falteringly.

Lindsay takes one hand from his and puts it to her throat, as though she feels some strange, suffocating sensation there.

"What do you take me for?" she exclaims, her voice tremulous with indignation. "Have I given you or any man reason to insult me so grossly? Are you to amuse yourself with me when you have nothing better to do, and when a fairer, wealthier girl pleases you, cast me away? How dare you treat me so? You were free to break off our engagement. You were right in thinking I did not love you—I did not, although I thought I did. You had been my friend from childhood and I liked and respected you, but I mistook my friendship for love. You showed me my error when you jilted me. Do you not like the word?"—as he utters a quick exclamation of protest. "It is the right one, I think! When you jilted me I suffered much. The world seemed very dark for a while, but I knew soon that you were nothing to me but a friend!"

Both her hands are freed from his now. She stands proudly erect, her eyes are bright with anger and disdain, yet the sternness of her face slowly relaxes as she continues speaking. Perhaps his evident shame and distress are moving her, as he stands with bowed head, like a subject humbly suing for pardon from an outraged queen.

"You went away and after a time came the news of your engagement. I rejoiced at your happiness, and the wishes I sent you were as sincere as those of any old friend you have! My trifling wound was quite healed then. And when you, in your turn, are cast aside you come back to me—to me, and—"with a passionate gesture of scorn—"what did you ever see in me that you dare to insult me thus?"

In her anger and disdain she seems to tower above him—never has she looked more beautiful than now. The young man cowers beneath her scorn, which seems to have reached its highest point in that last indignant question, for now it dies away, the haughty head droops, the proud eyes soften and become pitying, she turns from him and with a low cry of grief and pain rests her forehead against the cabinet, and bursts into a passion of tears.

"Lindsay," the young man exclaims, his distress almost as great as her own—"Lindsay, forgive me—forgive me."

YOUR THOUGHTS

Think of the loveliest thing you know Clasp it and keep it as you go, Through your thoughts ringing, In your heart singing: Lovelier then will your whole life grow.

Think of the kindest, bravest deed Ever a man did for one in need; Facing blame boldly While the world coldly Judged him and failed all his greatness to heed.

Though you be mocked at and misunderstood, Fear not the mob and its cynical mood; Do you shun sadness? Would you gain gladness? Keep your thoughts brimming with beauty and good!

Pass it on.

Live for self, you live in vain;
Live for Christ, you live again;
Live for Him, with Him you reign.

THE GOSPEL SPREADS, 19-21

Religious persecution usually defeats itself. The persecution of the Christians in the first century scattered the believers from place to place and spread the faith. The blood of the martyrs was the seed of the church. At Antioch, the Jewish Christians gave their Christian witness only to the Jews. In Antioch, however, the Christians shared their message with the Greeks. A large number believed and became followers of Christ. So intense was the faith of the Christians that they would not be silent. It was not a case of carrying out a missionary policy; the Christians just could not keep from telling about Jesus. It is when Christian experience is most vivid that missionary effort is most intense.

GET THE FACTS, 22-24.

There was great unrest among the Jewish Christians when they learned that Greeks were accepting the gospel in Antioch. The Jewish Christians could not help being suspicious of the innovation. They were fair-minded enough, however, to wish to get the facts before passing a final judgment. They, therefore, sent one of their most level-headed men, Barnabas, to investigate conditions in Antioch. He did not take him long to make up his mind. He saw that many people were being added to the faith. Being a good man free from prejudice he would not allow theological considerations to hold back practical service. He found out just what was happening at Antioch, and pleaded with the new Christians to be faithful followers of Christ. Had a man of the winning spirit gone to investigate, there might have been discord and controversy, but Barnabas being a man of fine spirit promoted good will. He was able to see the value of this Christian mission work even though precedents were broken to him. Barnabas was endowed liberally with common sense and Christian good-will.

CHOOSING HELPERS, 25, 26

One of the best things about Barnabas was that he knew his limitations. He saw that the Antioch Church needed leadership which he could not give. He could, however, suggest a leader well qualified for the task. He went to Tarsus and personally asked Saul to come to Antioch. For a whole year Barnabas and Saul taught the people. It was in Antioch that the disciples were first called Christians. The name may have been a nickname at first, just as the Lollards, Quakers and Methodists were nicknamed. The name is now one of honor. To deserve to be called a Christian is one of the highest attainments of life. People in non-Christian lands now speak frequently of certain attitudes as Christian. The name signifies a way of life but it has its source of fellowship with Christ.

THE CHURCH AND RELIEF 27-30

Jesus had fled the multitude. He was concerned with human needs. His followers caught his spirit. When famine was predicted, the Antioch Christians prepared to help their fellow Christians elsewhere. Money was collected and sent to Christians in Judea. So rapidly did the Christian faith overcome racial and religious divisions! Here were Greek Christians in Antioch giving of their

INQUIRE INTO HIGHWAY DEATH

Jury Finds J. Maher Died Of Injuries On Highway North Of Here

Inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the death of Joseph Maher, 23, Peterboro, early Saturday morning, near Springfield, on highway 28, when a stolen car in which he was riding crashed into a ditch, a coroner's jury found that Maher came to his death from injuries received in the accident.

Roy Walsh, aged 25, Peterboro, who was the dead youth's companion on the "joy ride" in the stolen car, declared throughout the examination by Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., "I can't remember."

Provincial Constables D. Silvester and A. E. Hornick and Dr. H. N. Young told of finding the damaged car in the east ditch, and Maher's body in the west ditch. Later, they said, they found Walsh asleep in a nearby field beneath a tree. Walsh appeared dazed, they said, but after a short walk he talked clearly and sensibly. They swore Walsh told them that he had been driving the car at the time of the crash, and that he had dragged Maher's body off the road into the ditch. Walsh told them, they stated, that he and Maher had stolen the car together. Walsh's breath smelled of alcohol, but he was rational and fully sensible, they said.

Albert Bowles, Springfield farmer, said as he was walking from his farm to the scene of the accident he came across Walsh lying asleep beneath a tree and directed the constable's attention to him.

Dr. W. Hewitt and Dr. Young stated that an autopsy disclosed Maher's death was due to perforated lung and ruptured liver.

Substance to Jewish Christians in Judea. Barnabas and Saul were chosen to distribute the relief. During the years of the depression the governments have accepted responsibility for administering relief. The motive leading to government action, however, has been the spirit of Christian brotherhood and helpfulness. In addition to what the government has done, many churches have been caring for the needy. The East has sent supplies to the West. The church still hears its Master saying, "Give ye them to eat."

A TRIO OF WORKERS, 12:23

When Barnabas and Saul returned from Jerusalem they had an interesting story to tell. First of all they gave account of their stewardship in distributing the gifts sent to the Judean Christians. Then they introduced the young man, John Mark, a nephew of Barnabas, who was to be a companion on part of their first missionary journey. Though this trio was to be broken later, at this time they shared a happy fellowship. Their bond of union was a common loyalty to Christ and a desire to carry out his purposes. They were fellow workers in the name of Christ and although a cloud came over their friendship for a time, Paul never lost his admiration for Barnabas, and Mark redeemed his failures and proved profitable as a Christian worker. Even good people sometimes disagree. Big hearted people learn to forget their disagreements. Christian people often prove to be better friends when a breach has been repaired. Throughout his life Paul was able to command the respect and affection of his fellow workers.

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION

1. Is Christianity losing its missionary power?

2. Have Canadians any superiorly complexed racially?

3. How was Paul indebted to Barnabas?

4. What is the chief duty of the church during a period of depression?

5. Are there too many young teachers in the Sunday School?

GOOD RECORD BY JR. SWINE CLUB

Boys Exhibited At Orono Fair —To Form New Club

In May, sixteen Junior Farmers of Clarke and Darlington Townships formed a Swine Club when each boy bought two weanling sow pigs which had been selected by H. L. Ford, Dominion Hog Grader, Peterboro.

Monthly feed records were forwarded to the Department of Agriculture, Port Hope. The boys were also given considerable coaching on judging both breeding and market hogs.

A record was made when the sixteen members (100%) showed their pigs at the Orono Fair. The prizes were awarded on the following items: 400 points for Junior Stockman's Award, which were the marks received for care and management, as noted by the Agricultural Representative during his monthly visits and also for the accuracy and neatness of monthly records; 400 points for the pigs; 200 points for judging two classes of hogs and 200 points for answering ten questions on Care and Management and Swine Marketing.

The standing of the boys and the prize money won are as follows:—

1st, $8—Garnet Rickard, Bowmanville.

2nd, $7—Walter Blackburn, Orono.

3rd, $6—Everett Brown, Orono.

4th, $5—Newton Ashton, Bowmanville.

5th, $5—Billy Rowland, Newcastle.

6th, $5—Earl Hambridge, Fraserville.

7th, $4—Wesley Yellowlees, Eramosa.

8th, $4—John Holman, Newcastle No. 3.

9th, $4—Jack Lowery, Orono.

10th, $4—Edgar Milson, Clarke P.O.

11th, $3—Everett Cain, Orono.

12th, $3—Bert Mutton, Bowmanville.

13th, $3—Ornely Anderson, Bowmanville.

14th, $3—Trevin Scott, Bowmanville.

15th, $2—Bob Keane, Orono.

16th, $2—Kenneth Cain, Orono.

Twenty-five dollars of the $70.00, total prize money was granted by the Central Durham Fair Board, while the $45.00 balance was furnished by the Provincial and Dominion Live Stock Branches.

Many will be interested to learn that the first prize pair of pigs shown by Newton Ashton cost 2.9¢ per lb. gain with the average cost per lb. gain for the sixteen pairs being 3.6 cents.

Next year these boys will form a Senior Swine Club when the members will keep feed records on the litter from their sows. It is expected another Junior Club will be formed in Darlington and Clarke Townships in 1934. Prospective members are asked to communicate with E. A. Summers, Agricultural Representative, Port Hope.

WALTER STONE BEST IN 2.09

Local Horse Wins At Race Meet At Belleville On Monday

The racing meet sponsored by the Harness Horse Association of Canada was held at Belleville Monday under threatening weather conditions, but a good crowd attended. The rain made the racing strip a little heavy.

Walter Stone had too much foot for Margaret Dillon in the fast class, and was never headed in the three trips, although the mare made him go a trip in 2.10½ to head her. Janet D. was an easy winner of the classified trot, the chief opposition coming from Babe Ruth and Princess the Great. It was one of the best trotting races seen in this section in years. Lee Hanover, winner of the trotting Futurity in Toronto, did not have the speed to cope with the more experienced campaigners.

The 2.19 class was the best race of the afternoon, with Daisy Patch heading the summary over such good ones as Dominion Grattan and Catharine Grattan.

The summary:

RULING GIVEN ON FOUND GOODS

Chief Justice Sir William Mulock expressed the opinion in Appeal Court at Osgoode Hall Toronto that if a man finds property and does not take any steps to get in touch with the authorities or the owner, it puts upon him the onus of proving his honesty.

The court dismissed the appeal of William Lyster, now serving six months definite and six months indefinite for theft of a watch. Counsel for Lyster told the court that W. Fulton had complained of his watch being stolen from a lathouse at Sunnyside. Two weeks later, counsel said, his client was in a police station on another matter and had been found with the watch. Accused said he had found the watch on the beach.

"The law is elementary," asserted Mr. Justice Riddell. "If stolen goods are in a person's possession and his account does not satisfy the trial tribunal, there must be a conviction."

LONG DISTANCE

FLIGHT IS OFF

Mollisons Abandon Attempt To Take Off From Wasaga Beach

The Mollisons' attempt to break the world's non-stop long-distance flying record is definitely cancelled. They had planned to take off from Wasaga Beach for Baghdad, Iraq, but after waiting two weeks for favorable weather, they decided to abandon their attempt from the beach. However, they are planning just what it will be they could not say. But it will not start from this side of the Atlantic.

"When we came to Canada for a possible take off, we knew there was an element of doubt," Captain Mollison said, "but it was a gamble worth taking. Provided weather was satisfactory the route was ideal." Amy Johnson Mollison confirmed his statement.

The Seafarer II, the plane in which they had hoped to take off, will be dismantled and shipped back to England, where it will be reassembled while the Mollisons plan an alternative route.

DECREASE IN SALES

LIQUOR CONTROL BOARD

(With only a month to go to the end of the fiscal year, Ontario's Liquor Control Board estimates that its sales for the current year will fall below the $30,000,000 mark for the first time since government sales came in seven years ago.)

There has been a steady drop in sales during the depression and it is figured that the present year will be 20 per cent under the total of 1921-32, which was $36,099,561. In that year there was a decrease in business of $9,736,145.

It is likely that the drop for the present year will be about $7,200,000 and rumour has it that practically all of 124 stores show a lesser volume of business with a few actually "in the red."
