COBOURG FALL ASSIZES OPEN

Murder, Manslaughter And Eleven Civil Actions On List

With a battery of prominent counsel, a murder, a manslaughter case and eleven civil actions, the Assizes opened Monday afternoon at Cobourg, with Mr. Justice McEvoy presiding. The docket is the largest in a considerable time and the murder case the first in several years.

Yrjo Laurila, Finnish farm hand, will go on trial for the murder of Frederick McLaren, whose frozen, mutilated body was found in his Cavan Township shack last February. The other case on the criminal docket is that of a manslaughter charge against Dr. Carl Haig, Oklahoma University professor, who is charged with manslaughter in connection with the deaths of Mrs. Edith Patterson and her son, James, killed in a motor accident while riding in the defendant's car, near Brighton last June. Dr. Haig is on $20,000 bail.

There is one jury action, a damage suit brought by W. Dunk, Stirling creamery employe, against Roy McKee, alleging slander, and asking for $2,000 damages.

Among the non-jury actions is a claim for damages said to have been sustained by Clifford Brannigan while cutting down trees as an employe of the defendant corporation of Bowmanville. The Bowmanville Welfare Board is named as co-defendant.

Patrick Coe, Trenton, is suing the Allore Lumber Co., Trenton, in connection with the death of his son, William, who was killed in a motor accident last June.

In Dempsey vs. Crewes, the plaintiff, Peter Dempsey of Murray Township, is suing J. Alfred Crewes in connection with a farm dispute.

One divorce action is listed on the docket, Mrs. Edna Maud Talmage, of Toronto, a former resident of Brighton, petitioning for a divorce from her husband, Charles W. Talmage. They have been living apart for some years. A Trenton woman is named as co-respondent. A number of disputes over land and wills comprise the balance of the docket.

T. J. Horkins, of Toronto, is special Crown prosecutor. A. J. Skeans, of Cobourg, will defend the man charged with murder, and Charles Payne, K.C., Belleville, will defend Dr. Haig.

HYDRO QUESTION BEFORE COUNCIL

Mayor Crowhurst To Take Matter Up At Hydro Meeting

"I wish you would find out why we are paying four thousand dollars a year for equipment and poles to carry electricity from Peterboro down the Trent River," said Councillor Herbert Stratton at Monday night's meeting of the Town Council.

Councillor Stratton, who steadfastly opposed the purchase of the local Hydro system four years ago, claimed that the local commission was paying $4,000 annually for what was shown in the yearly reports as "equity in the Hydro System." Mr. Stratton declared that in the purchase contract no mention was made of such payment.

"I inquired from Mr. Coleman, the local manager," said Councillor Stratton "how long this payment would continue and he said that he didn't know definitely, but expressed the opinion that it was an advantage to have such an equity. 'I asked him from what source the money came to pay for this equity and I was informed that it came out of surplus horsepower. The surplus from this source wouldn't more than cover half of it,'" continued Mr. Stratton.

Reeve Elliott—"If there is a leakage of $4,000 per year it should be looked into."

Mayor Crowhurst—"There is a meeting of the Hydro Commission Tuesday evening and I will take the matter up at that time. At present I am unable to answer Mr. Stratton's question."

Deputy Reeve Edmunds—"I understood that we purchased our power at the sub station and had nothing to do with lines not actually set forth and included in the original purchase contract."

Reeve Elliott—"We should find if there is any other contract than the one made by the municipality. We should know why this amount is being paid every year."

A letter of thanks was received from George W. Garnett, chairman of the Water Works Commission for the co-operation of the Council in guaranteeing the issue of $30,000 in bonds to be made by the Commission to cover the cost of a new intake pipe.

In the report received from A. J. Chesher, market clerk, receipts from the town scale and market, for the month of September were $101.55. The number of transients applying for a night's lodging was 80 and those calling through the day for meals numbered forty.

Mayor W. J. Crowhurst presided with Councillor H. M. VanAlstine, the only absentee.

REMAND GIVEN FIVE YOUTHS

Plead Guilty At Cobourg To Five Charges, Breaking And Entering

Appearing in Cobourg police court John Chandler, Francis Connaghan and George Ellis, of Oshawa, pleaded guilty to five charges of breaking and entering and were remanded at the request of the defendants until the following Saturday.

The three men are charged with breaking into Crandall & Walker's garage in Colborne; Mrs. E. Lavender's service station, Darlington township and the stores of A. Phillip, B. Kernaghan and A. Aziz, Colborne. They were arrested several weeks ago following investigations of Provincial Constable F. MacBrien, Brighton, a large quantity of goods being recovered.

THE BIG CROP; OUR LAND OF GOLD

CANADIAN RESERVE MILL

Recently the Editor was privileged to have a most interesting week-end trip to the gold mining centre of Ontario where one of the richest harvests of our land is taken from Mother Earth.

Friday night we set out in two cars, a Cadillac sedan and a Durant coupe and we flew over stock and stone to Huntsville where we stayed for the night. When we were just making up our mind to go on after waiting half an hour, thinking the other car was in the lead, they drove up, having been delayed by an accident when the car slipped off the road on entering the town, doing some damage to the rear bumpers and trunk carrier.

Refreshed by a night's sleep we proceeded northward through the beautiful wooded hills over a splendid road which wound about and up and down every now and then leading by a pretty little lake more lovely reflecting the gorgeous autumn colours. On entering North Bay the coupe, a few feet in the lead of the "Caddie" approached a curve at a very lively clip, blew a tire, but fortunately we made the curve and got stopped without tearing down the highway fence or destroying anything more than the tire. Soon after leaving North Bay we entered the Timagami Reserve with a good road but not designed to hurry over if one wishes to take in any of the matchless scenery which the driver was forced to miss as all attention had to be given to driving if we were to reach our destination before too late in the evening.

The first mining town we struck was Cobalt with its idle mills and quiet streets for present prices of its minerals have brought those mines to a standstill. After seeing Cobalt we were rather amazed to find Haileybury, three miles distant, with such nice homes and fine public buildings. Another odd thing was from then on we were passing through a rich and prosperous looking farm country which was rather unexpected after so many miles of rock, hills and forests.

It was quite dark when we turned off the main highway at Swastika for Kirkland Lake, which wasn't far distant. Here we found a hive of industry. The mines and mills were all lit up and running full blast. The streets were just jammed with cars and the stores with customers. To see the activity here it was hard to realize that there are so many idle hands in the rest of the world.

After supper we proceeded to Larder Lake and found comfortable quarters in a big cottage on the shore of the lake. Early next morning the Editor was tempted by the sight of the lake and rushed down and jumped in to suddenly find the waters are ice cold on account of many springs. However, on dressing we felt fine and faced a meal that was tremendous. We hardly need to tell you what we did to that pile of delicious victuals after a dip and walk through the crisp morning air of the Highlands of Ontario. It was simply astounding.

After breakfast we went over to the Canadian Reserve Mine which is a consolidation of two former mines, both of which have shafts sunk for 1000 and 1200 feet. The former has been pumped out while the latter was filled up but now things have been straightened out the pumps are busy draining the mine.

Never had we any idea of the work involved to prepare for mining. First power machinery has to be installed, then big and expensive motors to run the hoists and air compressors. Next a vertical shaft has to be sunk through the solid rock and tunnels cut at various levels to get at the ore. To step into a little cage and be let down through a rock channel for a 1000 feet into the earth gives you a funny feeling the first time.

The tunnel on the 1000 foot level was about 5 wide except near the shaft where it was double tracked with a big steel sheet directly in front of the lift on which to turn the ore cars. The walking was dry as a ditch along the side carries off any of the water which seeps through the crevices. You could see a distinct difference between the gray rock and the ore vein which ran at a slant and was in many places separated from the other rock by a thin layer of mud. The vein runs at quite a slant so that the farther down you go the longer the main tunnel to reach it.

The tunnel is run along the vein and the ore is blasted away above to the next level and comes down shoots into the cars so that it does not have to be touched after it is blasted loose. After the cars are loaded they are lifted to the surface and dumped into a crusher where the ore is broken up into little pieces. A belt takes this crushed rock up to the mill where it is passed into two cylinders with a heavy iron balls, the first making it as fine as wheat or like coarse sand, the second reducing it to a powder, just about as fine as flour, which is passed through a number of tanks and contrary to the belief of many the gold is not abstracted by falling to the bottom but by being absorbed through a chemical process and later put into a furnace and made into a gold brick. We regret that we do not understand the whole thing to give you a more thorough description but we have a feeling that all Canadians should study this industry for more wealth was gained from the gold fields of Canada than the grain fields and we believe that more development will yield more gold which will help our nation back to better days.

This Canadian Reserve Mine is on the same height of land, about midway between the rich producers at Kirkland Lake and Noranda. It is an interesting study with a map before you to see how the magic carpet is rolling back to reveal a long line of mines of untold wealth. Here are some in that line up, some already famous, others with a romance now unfolding. Howey, Swazey, Kenty, Halcrow-Swazey, Lee Gold, Champagne Makwa (which is expected to make a name for itself soon), West Trees, Teck Hughes, Lake Shore, Wright Hargreaves, Sylvanite, Tough Oakes (being reorganized and renamed Toburn), and Noranda, third largest gold producer.

Monday morning early, we headed back and saw through the Sylvanite mill to see how gold was taken from the ore. We saw gravel made into sand, sand into mud and pumped into tanks, but never a speck of gold was visible and we didn't happen along when they were making bricks. As we had seen the interesting process and they weren't passing out any bricks we decided to head toward home, leaving Kirkland Lake, which has sprung up to a town of 15,000 in about ten years. They are working night and day, seven days a week in the mines and we noticed about thirty homes in the process of construction. At ten thirty as we "took off" we all felt they could sing "Good Times are Here."

We just plodded steadily along, reaching Huntsville by nine o'clock where the drivers of the "Caddie" very weary of driving, decided to halt. Three of us proceeded to Toronto and after a delightful three and a half hour moonlight drive covered the hundred and forty-two miles. There the Editor left the party and picked up Jerry Gallagher (out of a sound sleep) and completed a five hundred mile day at the wheel, very glad to have given his friends a rest and see the wonders of our Northland.

We are of the opinion that gold mining should be studied because of its proven value as the best crop in the country. It takes years of work and hundreds of thousands of dollars to produce a mine so it is well to know what you are doing before you invest in a mine but if you, with the rest of the public, do not produce the money to buy the machinery, drill the hole, and get out the mineral the big crop cannot be harvested.

PORT HOPERS ARE INJURED IN CRASH

Car Driven By George Ward Collides With Truck Loaded With Poles

Colliding from the rear with a truck loaded with poles about 6.30 p.m. Monday evening on the King's Highway near Newcastle, George Ward, Ellen Street, Port Hope, sustained a broken collar bone and his wife, facial injuries. Miss M. McGregor of Uxbridge, also a passenger in the Ward car, is suffering from shock and a sprained ankle.

The poles with which the truck was loaded were protruding some distance over the rear of the truck and smashed through the windshield of the Ward car. Both vehicles careened into the ditch and the occupants of the Port Hope car were most fortunate to escape as lightly as they did. Both the truck and car, the latter being driven by Mr. Ward, were extensively damaged.

MURDER CHARGE IS BEFORE JURY

Cobourg Grand Jury Deliberates On Murder Count Against Laurila

The grand jury was still deliberating the charge of murder against Yrjo Laurila, transient, on trial for the alleged murder of Fred McLaren Cavan township, at the close of Monday's session of the fall assizes at Cobourg.

Early last February, Ray Syers of Cavan paid a visit to the little house where McLaren resided. The fire was out and the house quiet. He investigated further and discovered McLaren's frozen body. It was found the man's skull was literally crushed by a series of powerful blows.

It was recalled a transient named "Jake," who had been harbored by McLaren, had been seen around the district before the murder. Provincial police searched for him for some weeks without success. Then one day the wanted man was seen by Ernest Bell, a neighbor of McLaren. He communicated his suspicions to Tom McDonald on an adjoining farm and when the man was again sighted he was taken into custody.

CAR AND TRUCK IN COLLISION

On Ontario Street Thursday Night — Three Slightly Injured

Three occupants of a borrowed truck were injured, not seriously, and the truck and a car badly damaged in a collision on Ontario street at 9.30 Thursday night. The truck, the property of D. Slater, of Cobourg, and driven by Thornton Ivey, is alleged to have struck a car driven by Jeffrey Clack of Port Hope.

The car was driven over the curb while the truck continued a distance of fifty feet and turned over on its side. Ivey, the driver of the truck, and his two companions, Jack Erskine and Harry Neal, all of Cobourg, received cuts, about the face that required medical attention. Chief Constable Thomas Murphy investigated and has not yet decided if any charges will be laid.

COMMIT THREE MANSLAUGHTER

Arise Out Of Hit-And-Run Mishap — Also Springville Fatality

William Coursey, alleged hit-and-run driver, and Hugh McCullough, charged with manslaughter as the result of the death of Hugh John Walkem, 15-year-old student of Grove School, who was knocked from his bicycle by a truck admittedly driven by Coursey, were both committed for trial at Peterboro by Police Magistrate Langley, following preliminary hearing of the evidence.

Roy Walsh, also charged with manslaughter following an accident early on the morning of September 30 at Springville in which Joseph Maher was killed, was bailed for trial following preliminary hearing by the Magistrate. Bail was fixed at $8,000.

Hearings in all three cases were brief, the accused men and their counsels consenting to the court's decision on the evidence of several police officers. Walsh was remanded until Tuesday on the charge of theft of a car, and bail of $8,000 was fixed also in this case.

All three manslaughter cases will come up for trial at the jury session of the Supreme Court next January or February.

ARREST DRIVER AFTER MISHAP

Wallace Spicer Alleged To Have Figured In Roseneath Accident

Wallace Spier, a Roseneath motorist, was arrested by Constable T. Marsden on Saturday on a charge of occasioning grievous bodily injury to Irene Douglas of Cobourg. The latter was returning from Roseneath Fair on Friday evening and was walking over to a car when struck by Spier's car, the police state. Spier is said to have kept on going after the accident, the license number of the car being turned over to the police by a spectator.

Norwood's Prize Baby Goes To Jail With His Mother

Baby Hill, 3-months-old boy who Thursday carried off an award at Norwood Fall Fair Baby Show, went to jail with his mother, Mrs. Russell Hill, sentenced to three months' imprisonment for possessing mash suitable for the manufacture of illicit spirits.

Mrs. Hill was found guilty by Magistrate Langley when he discredited her story that mash found in a barrel at her home was chicken-feed. She was fined $200, with an option of three months in jail. Her counsel pleaded for leniency on the ground that she had three small children at home, all under 4 years old.

FIRE DESTROYS THREE STATIONS

Detectives representing the Canadian Pacific Railway have been busy investigating incendiary fires which wiped out small flag stations at Cambray, Hartley and Balsam Lake, as well as six box cars. The stations are all located on the Port McNicoll-Lindsay line, which has not been operating for some time. They had been boarded up and locked.

The incendiary bug took Thanksgiving night as the time for his depredations. It is assumed that he used the waste from "wheel boxes" to light the fires. Cambray Station is about eight miles from Lindsay and Balsam Lake twelve miles further on.

60TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY IS CELEBRATED

Mr. and Mrs. William Wright Hale And Hearty—Presentation Made

Both hale and hearty and in possession of all their faculties, Mr. and Mrs. William Wright, of Campbellcroft, north of Port Hope, are to-day marking the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding day. Throughout the day, scores of friends and relatives visited their modest little home in the village to extend to them hearty felicitations on the celebration of their diamond wedding and to wish them many more years of wedded life.

On Saturday afternoon and evening a reception was held for the happy couple at the home of their son, Bruce Wright, Garden Hill, when surrounded by friends and relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Wright were made the recipients of a purse of gold. Although moved by this expression of appreciation, both Mr. and Mrs. Wright made appropriate and kindly replies. The presentation was made by a granddaughter, little Beatrice Wright, while an illuminated address was read by another granddaughter, Miss Eva Cameron, of Ottawa. During the evening, a mock wedding was presented by a number of young people and the evening's activities were brought to a successful termination by a dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Wright's family consists of eleven children and as well there are forty-four grandchildren and two great grandchildren and a happy feature of the life of the Wright clan is that the circle has only been once broken by death, and on that occasion by a grandchild. The family consists of six sons and five daughters, all living, and include—Mrs. Amy Coates, Compeer, Alta; Mrs. Hanna Cameron, Ottawa; Mrs. Essie Dean, Garden Hill; Mrs. Margaret Boddy, Toronto; Mrs. Minnie Findlay, Thornhill; William A. Wright, Campbellcroft; John A. Wright, Garden Hill; Leonard B. Wright, Redvers, Sask.; Dr. C. S. Wright, Toronto; Robert George Wright, Thornhill and Albert Bruce Wright, Campbellcroft.

In his comfortable home at Campbellcroft, Mr. Wright to-day related to the Evening Guide his experiences. On February 4th, eighty-two years ago, he was born at South Monaghan, and a short time afterwards moved to Cavan where he resided for fourteen years. After a short stay in Hamilton, he settled at Fairview Farm, a short distance north of Campbellcroft in 1874 and there carried on a successful farming business until 1927. Then he retired and settled in the village. His wife, whose maiden name was Harriet Jane Ball, was born in Hamilton Township on September 10th, 1856. She and Mr. Wright were married in Port Hope on October 16th, 1873 by a Presbyterian minister, Rev. Alexander Green.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Wright are in perfect health and both are up and about their home early every morning. They are in possession of all their faculties and their chief interest in the declining years of their lives, centres in their family. They are widely known throughout Durham County where they are held in the highest of esteem.

Briefly, Mr. Wright told of the early days of the time when the Midland Branch of the Canadian National Railways was built through that section. He also recalled the advent of the buggy, the first in the district being owned by the late John Rutherford, of Centreville. As a lad of ten, Mr. Wright recalled that he and other children, stood in amazement as the horse-drawn vehicle came along the road and after the owner had stopped, he took great pride in getting into the buggy and dancing up and down to see the springs work. He also spoke of the arrival of the first automobile and of the interest it created.

With respect to farming it was a hard struggle in the early days, but as Mr. Wright, put it, "hard work never killed any man," and by perseverance, he succeeded.

The following address was read—Dear Grandfather and Grandmother—

"A goodly number of your children and your children's children have fittingly assembled to-day at the beloved old homestead for the purpose of doing you honour on this—the sixtieth anniversary of your wedding day.

"The distinction that is yours on this memorable day by virtue of your attainment of years, is an honour that few parents are ever permitted to express; and the unique opportu-ity of celebrating a diamond anniversary is one that few families are privileged to enjoy. Therefore we rejoice to-day with unspeakable gratitude that Providence has dealt so kindly with you both, all through the years, and that the hand of Time has rested so lightly upon you; and while it is true that the radiant morn and the high noon of your life are past and your sun is westering, yet we rejoice at the measure of physical and mental vigour that is still yours. The numbers of your years is greatly in excess of your real age and we rejoice at the courage of heart, the buoyancy of spirit, and the inclination to happiness and hope that you still possess; and we believe that these inherent personal resources will sustain life for years to come.

"We bring you to-day our tribute of sincerest love and deepest gratitude for all that you have done for us and been to us through these many years. Your endless toil; your life-long struggle with hardship, privation and adversity; your self-sacrifice; your tender parental care; your wise counsel; your unceasing solicitude in our welfare; your unlimited patience and forbearance; and your never-failing love, have placed upon us a debt that we can never hope to repay. Out of your hard-won resources you have clothed and fed us, raised us in comfort and educated us and given us a start in life, and made our lives easier and smoother than your own. In our young lives you implanted the seeds of character. You taught us truth, honesty, industry and charity by exemplifying these virtues in your own lives. You set our feet forth in the path of honour and rectitude and directed our eyes toward all that was true and noble in life, thereby bequeathing to us the greatest legacy that is possible for parents to bestow.

"May we ask you therefore, at this time, to accept from us a small material gift, as a slight expression of our love and gratitude, accompanied as it is by our prayers and earnest hopes that you may be spared to us and to each other throughout a goodly number more of happy, healthful, peaceful, restful years."

CANTON MARKS ANNIVERSARY

Total Receipts Of Sunday Offering And Fowl Supper Were $245.00

Sunday morning was fine and a large congregation gathered in the church, which was resplendent in all the glowing hues of autumn flowers, maple leaves and fruits of divers kinds.

Sunday evening was rainy and the church was crowded.

The male choir was in charge of the music in the morning and the mixed choir at night. Mrs. A. S. Doggett and Ronald assisted the choir at both services. Special numbers were a duet "The Lord Is My Shepherd," Mrs. Doggett and Mr. W. Bickle; Tennyson's "Crossing The Bar" sung by Canton Male Quartette to an exquisite setting by Carrie B. Adams and a solo "Close To Thee" by Mrs. Doggett. Her many friends warmly welcomed Mrs. Doggett and everyone enjoyed hearing her sing. Rev. Banister's subject in the morning was "Three Marks of a Christian" founded on the words of Paul.

The marks were courage, generosity and loyalty. The speaker defined generosity as tolerance, patience and unselfishness rather than the mere disbursement of sums of money large or small. Loyalty to Jesus Christ means infinitely more than loyalty to any creed or dogma. It means taking His standard of living, personally, socially, politically, nationally, and internationally and doing one's best day by day to live up to it. This sort of thing takes courage of the highest type.

The evening theme was an eager question of the Phillipian jailer, "What Must I Do to be Saved?" Rev. Banister was heard with great pleasure and profit on both occasions.

The supper and entertainment on Monday night was a record-breaker all along the line.

The high-class musical program presented by the Peterboro trio and Trepper who replied to the encore previous efforts, except the Hart House Quartette. And for fun-making of a fine type, H. G. Lewis of Peterboro is certainly hard to beat. The program was as follows:—

Trio—"The Student Prince."
Cello Solo—"A Perfect Day."
Vocal Solo—"Tommy Lad" by Mr. Trepper who replied to the encore with "Two Mazepies," songs especially for children.
Trio—Indian Love Lyrics.
Mr. Lewis—Cartoons.
Trio—"Two Guitars."
Vocal solo—"Czardas."
Trio—"Loves Old Sweet Song."
Vocal Solo—"The Holy City," Mr. Trepper.
Cello solo—"Tarantilla."
Mr. Lewis—Ventriloquist.
Violin solo—"Souvenir."
Trio—Nola.
Mr. Trepper, who is Field Secretary of the Institute for the Blind, accompanied himself on the piano and both music and singing was a rare treat. He also replied to both encores.

Total receipts including Sunday offering, $245.

OFFERING EGGS FOR SALE

Violations of the egg regulations under the provisions of the Live Stock and Live Stock Product Act, administered by the Dominion Live Stock Branch, are rare throughout Canada among reputable dealers. Recently, however, a few retailers have unsuccessfully pleaded ignorance of the fact that eggs for sale must be marked with the name of the class and grade. The regulations have been in effect for years, and Clause 3, section b, which deals with retail distribution clearly states:—(b) No eggs shall be offered for sale, advertised for sale, kept for sale, sold, exposed or displayed by any person selling or offering eggs for sale, or delivering eggs direct to a consumer as a retailer, in a store, or in any public place or manner, unless the case or container is marked, labelled, tagged, or designated with the correct name of the class and the grade of eggs contained therein according to the Canadian standards and also with the name of the country of origin when other than domestic product.

"VITAMIN C"

Green leaves of plants, especially of the cabbage, mustard and cress families; also potatoes, onions, swedes, and fresh fruits, contain the elements in food known as Vitamin C, which prevents scurvy. Absence of this vitamin in the food of human beings will cause scurvy after four months. Even its shortage produces ill-health, characterized by sallow, muddy complexion, loss of energy, and fleeting pains in joints and limbs, particularly the legs. Being sensitive to heat, Vitamin C is readily destroyed by boiling and at ordinary temperatures is soluble in alkaline solutions. It is to be noted that dried fruits and vegetables, and preserved lime juice, are especially destitute of this vitamin. — Dominion Fruit Branch.

HINT CLOSING OSHAWA ARENA

Hockey Club Rendered Homeless By Decision Of Directors

Oshawa hockey teams may be without a home rink this winter, according to a statement issued by G. D. Conant, counsel for the Oshawa Arena, Ltd.

At the present time it is very doubtful if the Oshawa arena will operate for the winter and will probably close down when the New York American hockey team finishes their training there. The statement reads in part:—

"Having entered into a contract with the New York Americans professional hockey club some time ago for the use of the arena and for ice during their training period this fall, the arena will be operated until the contract is fulfilled. Owing to the uncertainty of the hockey situation in Oshawa, however, the arena management is doubtful whether it will be possible to operate the arena for the balance of the winter."

The decision of arena directors is believed to be a direct result of the O.H.A. refusing transfers to four players in Oshawa. If the arena is closed to O.H.A. hockey it will necessitate the home games being played in either Whitby or Bowmanville, the nearest points where there are enclosed hockey rinks.

"This is certainly a shock for us," exclaimed Norval E. Wilson, president of the Oshawa Hockey Club. "It looks now as though there will be no hockey in Oshawa this winter, but that won't be definitely decided until we hold a meeting in the near future."

Continuing, Mr. Wilson added: "The O.H.A. spoiled our hockey chances and I suppose we really can't blame the arena officials if they don't see their way clear to operate at a loss."

THE FADED TAPESTRY

Her life is like a faded tapestry
Whose colors have grown paler with the years;
Of every one-time vivid flower and tree
The shadow only, dim and vague, appears.
Day after day has shed its rays thereon
And the caresses of those golden beams
A part of sapphire, rose and jade have won;
The picture now as pale as moonlight gleams.

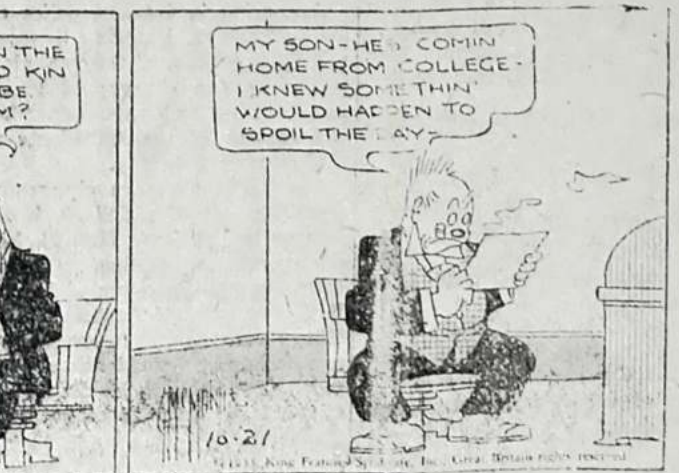

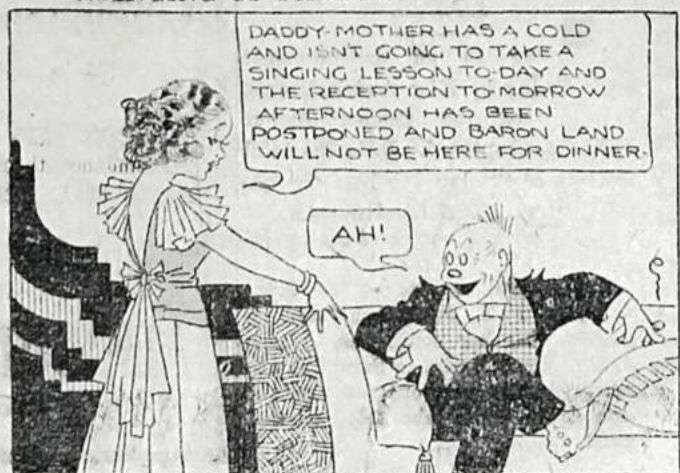

A faded tapestry, which takes from time
An added beauty as the seasons go;
So softened, rendered mystic and sublime
With loveliness no crude, new thing can show,
We see her life grown fairer at the end,
Which glamour years, and years alone, can lend.

SAFE FOR A CENTURY

Two epoch-making events in the latter history of mankind contributed materially to the growing consciousness that the world can continue to increase its population at the present rate for at least another century without risk of food shortage. The one was the now historic and far-reaching research work of Canadian scientists in wheat, the other, the but little known labour of Mormon scientists in Utah in conserving soil moisture by the systematic cultivation of alternating crops of wheat and alfalfa in arid areas with an annual rainfall not exceeding six inches and in de alkalinizing salt-poisoned land, rendering it available for market garden crops and fruit. The only limiting factor to a world shortage of food is believed to be a possible world-deficiency of phosphates.

HEARD ON THE STREET

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 11. It looks as if we might have a stormy winter but the clouds may not bring as bad storms as we fear.

Often a good storm clears the air and things are all the better for a few sparks of electricity.

The only way you can wake some people up is give 'em an awful shock.

TRUCK DRIVER HURT IN CRASH

Vehicle Driven By Ernest Ferguson Demolished By Train Near Peterboro

Ernest Ferguson, aged 19, of Campbellford, had a narrow escape from death about noon Friday when the new bread truck which he was driving on the old highway five miles east of Peterboro was struck by a Canadian Pacific Railway passenger train at a level crossing. The force of the impact turned the heavy vehicle completely over, and the truck was a complete wreck except for its windows, none of which were broken. Ferguson sustained a badly gashed head, minor face injuries, wrenched knees and possible internal injuries. He was rendered first aid by Dr. Clark of Peterboro, who later had him removed to Campbellford. Ferguson is expected to recover.

WHEN YOU ARE HAPPY

I know when you are happy, You do so many things, You fit about the little house As though your feet had wings.

With sewing, cleaning, baking It seems you never quit; And, even when all else is done You take bright yarns and knit.

I know when you are happy, Though others might not see The half-hid smile, the glowing eyes These signs are clear to me.

But ah! when you are quiet And when your hands are still, Across my heart from some dark land A wind blows, bleak and chill!

God made me wise and strong, dear, To fend your fears away; For I would have you happy Forever and a day!

RASPBERRIES PLENTIFUL

Wild raspberries are still plentiful in Kent County. Along the Ridge in Raleigh Township housewives are gathering a generous supply from the bushes along the farm fences, and the quality is said to be quite equal to the crop grown earlier in the year. Second crops of berries are by no means uncommon in Kent County.

JOINS TORONTO LEGAL FIRM

Sir Henry Drayton Becomes General Counsel For Salter, Stapells & Sewell

Announcement is made of the association of Sir Henry Drayton, K.C., K.B., in the capacity of general counsel, with the well-known legal firm of Salter, Stapells & Sewell, of Toronto. Sir Henry Drayton is an outstanding figure in the public life of Canada. To few men has it been given to occupy so many positions of high responsibility with such success and distinction. Assistant City Solicitor for the City of Toronto, for seven years; Crown Attorney for the County of York for seven years; Chief Corporation Counsel to the city of Toronto for two years; Chairman of the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada for seven years; Dominion Minister of Finance for two years; Chairman of the Ontario Liquor Control Board—these are some of the public positions which Sir Henry Drayton has been called upon to fill during his distinguished career.

Born of United Empire Loyalist stock at Kingston, Ontario, in 1869, Sir Henry was educated in the public schools and at Jarvis College Institute, and chose the study of law. Called to the bar in 1891, his ability won for him the post of Assistant City Solicitor for Toronto in 1893, whilst he was still a young man of twenty-four. In 1900, he resigned to form a law partnership with the late Charles J. Holman, K.C., and in 1902 was appointed counsel to the Railway Committee of the Ontario Legislature. Then commenced that close study of railway affairs which led, nine years later to his appointment as Chief Commissioner of the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada. This difficult and arduous position he occupied until 1919, when he entered the House of Commons as member for Kingston, Ontario. He was almost immediately called by Sir Robert Borden, then Prime Minister, to assume a difficult and high responsibility as Minister of Finance, a post he held for two years. After the defeat of the Meighen government in 1921, he remained a member of the House of Commons until 1928, when he was appointed to head the Liquor Control Board of Ontario, a duty which he accepted only on a temporary basis. It is largely owing to Sir Henry's organizing ability and keen legal sense that the administration of liquor control has functioned so smoothly in the province.

THIRD BLAZE HINTS FIREBUG

Cooper's Planing Mill At Cobourg Is Swept By Flames

Fire of undetermined origin gutted Cooper's Planing Mill, causing about $10,000 damage at Cobourg Tuesday. Nearly 30,000 feet of fine lumber also went up in smoke when the warehouse at the rear was consumed. The fact that the planing mill was metal sheathed, prevented the flames from breaking through and attacking the residential block to the north. Proximity of the fire to the Bell Telephone garage made it necessary to remove the trucks and equipment to a safer place.

A few minutes after its discovery it was a blazing inferno that resisted all efforts to extinguish it. Firemen battled for several hours and succeeded in keeping the blaze confined to the planing mill and warehouse. The fact that there were two fires at previous dates of unknown origin has led to the belief that this was incendiary. The condition of the devastated interior indicated that the fire started at one end and almost immediately broke out at the other end of the mill, quickly spreading to intermediate points. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

Ninety-Fifth Birthday Celebrated By Oshawa Lady

Although she has observed her ninety-fifth birthday, Mrs. James Dunlop, Gladstone Avenue, Oshawa, is proud of her skill in the kitchen. She regularly bakes her own bread, having behind her more years of experience than most bakers in the country. Mrs. Dunlop takes keen delight in her baking, and maintains that home-made bread is "the finest in the world." Citizens who have had the privilege of eating her product support her statement.

FORMER PORT HOPER KILLED

Harry P. Squires, Miller of Warton, Crushed By Truck Against Mill Wall

Many of our older readers will regret to learn of the death by accident of Harry P. Squires of Warton, and who for a number of years resided with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Squires, in the house now occupied by Mr. James Arkless on Barrett street.

The accident occurred on Sept. 18, the cause being that while loading a truck at Reddins Mill, Warton, the truck slipped on the incline and crashed the young man between the truck and the mill wall. He was rushed to Owen Sound Hospital, but died the same evening.

Harry was well known among his young associates while in Port Hope and the tragic ending to a life of usefulness is much to be regretted.

An inquest was held into the cause of the accident and the jury rendered the following verdict:—

"We, the Coroners jury empanelled to enquire into the death of Harry P. Squires of Warton, find he came to his death by being crushed between a truck owned by Gregg and Henzell of Lion's Head and the wall of G. Reddins flour mill at Warton. From the evidence we find that Mr. George Hummel used every precaution to make the truck secure at the time of loading and from evidence presented we are unable to determine the cause of the movement of the truck."

DAMAGE ACTION BEING CONSIDERED

Following Coroner's Commitment Of Two Motorists At Peterboro

Action for damages on behalf of William Coursey and Hugh McCullough, of Peterboro, against Dr. J. C. Smith of Lakefield is being considered by Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., counsel for the two men. Both Coursey and McCullough were sentenced to three months in the county jail when they refused to give evidence at the inquest held into the death of John Walkem and presided over by Coroner Smith.

Mr. Gordon has applied to have an Order-in-Council passed freeing the two men, as it is held by the Attorney-General that the Coroner overstepped his authority in giving the men a three months' term for contempt of court. If action for damages is instituted it will be on grounds of unlawful commitment to jail.

Acids In Stomach Cause Indigestion

Create Sourness, Gas and Pain. How to Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well. Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any drug-gist some Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder form—never liquid or milk) is harmless, inexpensive, and is a fine remedy for acid stomach. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no fear of indigestion.

CANADIAN CLUB OPENING MEETING

Mrs. Madge Macbeth gave Fine Recital — 'Come With Me To Spain'

The opening meeting of the Women's Canadian Club of Port Hope was held at the home of Mrs. H. W. Benson, Dorset street, Tuesday evening. The President, Mrs. E. M. Tauler, was in the chair and after a few preliminary remarks, introduced the speaker of the evening, Mrs. Madge Macbeth.

Mrs. Macbeth, whose subject was "Come With Me To Spain," appeared first in a gypsy costume, entering the room to the measured time of a Spanish dance. In this costume she presented the first part of her brilliant recital, which gave a vivid and intimate picture of the home life of that country.

For the second part of her program, the speaker wore a simple black dress and a black mantilla draped over a large cap. She dealt with the religious festivals and processions, in which thousands join and which are often miles in length. She painted beautiful word pictures of some of the most famous Spanish cathedrals, each with its peculiar history and charm. Mrs. Macbeth paused at Granada to recall the famous Alhambra, and took her audience to Andalusia, the home of the gypsies.

The speaker said that it is difficult to give much information about the political life in Spain. It is a difficult country to govern, as the Spaniard does not think nationally, but individually. He is suspicious of foreigners and his own countrymen—is a law unto himself, and has never learned to appreciate the strength of unity and co-operation. She referred to the forthcoming election in November in which women will cast their vote for the first time. A very hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Macbeth for her thoughtful and original manner in which she presented her recital. The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

SATURDAY, OCT. ...

Is this the last rose of summer?

With nights getting colder it looks as if the loveliest of flowers will soon be gone.

John Laurie picked a beautiful bouquet of roses yesterday which he distributed among friends. A real treat at this season.

A rose with all its charm seems to be more attractive when beauty is fast fading and brings pleasant memories of days that were and brighter hopes for days to come.

A pleasant smile too when things are desperate has much the same effect, so spread about you a little brightness on cloudy days. You'll find four radiance will light up others and shine back to cheer you when your outlook has been clouded.

Convicted of obtaining relief from Oshawa Welfare Board under false pretences, Fred Rogers, 302 Verdun Road, Oshawa, was sentenced to sixty days in the county jail when he appeared before Magistrate Creighton in Police Court. "Why, because your arms will be full of presents," said the other.

Is it summer again!

We thought we'd seen the last rose of summer but now our hope revives for the buds to bloom and send their fragrance around.

Such a day as this almost makes one lose sight that the statesmen of the world are striving to keep the "dogs of war" from breaking loose and tearing up the beautiful gardens of the earth.

'Twill be just too bad if the nations resort to arms and gals to settle their differences for they should realize that nothing is really settled that way. There was nothing fixed up by the Great War so why have another? Here's hoping they'll have a little horse-sense.

Here they are talking of another war when you'd think that 1914-18 was a lesson which would put a stop to the tragedy of wrecking homes, maiming lives and destroying the spirits of men.

The world should form a police force big enough to put any nation which violates the peace of the world under iron or at least a position where a belligerent nation could be disarmed so as not to cause suffering and desolation among the peoples of the earth.

DISAPPROVES OF JAIL COMMITMENT

Attorney General Says Peterboro Coroner Exceeded His Duty

Coroner J. C. Smith of Peterboro oversteered his duty in sentencing William Coursey and Hugh McCullough to jail for contempt of court until they were willing to give evidence on the death of John Walkem, killed on Saturday night when struck by a truck alleged to have been driven by Coursey, in the opinion of Attorney-General Price.

Colonel Price states that the way is open for G. N. Gordon, K.C., their counsel, to take proceedings by way of habeas corpus to free the men. He said Mr. Gordon telegraphed him asking that steps be taken to release the men.

Coroners have power to commit only for the time the court was sitting, the Attorney-General said and persons so committed were not supposed to remain longer in custody. His department could order the men released, but an Order-in-Council would be necessary, he said, and no decision had yet been reached along this line.

The men refused to testify at the inquest, on the advice of their counsel, and the Coroner thereupon committed them to jail for contempt of court.

GARDEN HILL

Mr. and Mrs. W. Wright are celebrating their Diamond Wedding today. This is the second Diamond Wedding in this community inside of a month.

This place is noted for health, long life and good water. The great grandmother of Dr. Bruce, the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario lived in Garden Hill until she was 104, and when she was 100, walked with a Mrs. Dean a mile to get her picture taken. Now we have our photographs taken if we have the money.

In those times they did not attempt to add "lilies" to the name Garden Hill to keep things going in different directions but there soon will be an end to this for all time.

MEN'S FORUM FIRST SESSION

Rev. D. McTavish Speaker; Sports Committee Bring In Report

The first meeting of the Port Hope Men's Forum which was addressed by Rev. Duncan McTavish on his "Impressions of the Liberal Summer Conference," was well attended by an enthusiastic group of members and a number of visitors.

Present Report

Jim McLelland, on behalf of the Sports Committee, gave the following report:

"At a meeting of your last year's executive, they voted to back your sports committee to the extent of fifty dollars, to sponsor baseball for the boys of the community.

The sports committee entered into the work with an earnest desire to make their efforts a benefit to the town. It was not solely the ambition of your committee to make good ball players, but to provide properly supervised recreation for our boys. We believe that if the boys are given facilities for healthy, clean sport, and properly supervised, and disciplined, that we are doing a real service for them and the community.

We have not only watched these boys while on the ball diamond, but have taken an interest in all their doings during this past summer, and out of some 160 boys whom we have enrolled, I have not heard of any of them getting into any serious trouble this summer, but some of your committee have interested themselves in some little chaps not enrolled who might very easily take the wrong path, without a little friendly guidance during the next few years.

We have absolutely forbidden profane language, and smoking in our presence, and have at all times insisted on strict obedience while on our field.

Financially we have been very successful. We have not carried on with an eye to making money, but rather with the idea of supplying recreation for everyone. We feel that during these depressing times, some sort of diversion for the mind is an absolute necessity; for this reason we have tried to make everyone welcome at our games and not embarrass anyone when the hat was passed.

Cwing to the careful supervision of the members of our committee responsible for financing our expenses for baseball have been only $84.32.

Just here I would like to thank all those who helped us so willingly to prepare the diamond, put up the fence, back stop, and numerous other jobs which had to be done. To the fellows who kept the field mowed we are grateful and we thank you.

The gentlemen who inspired the games did it in a gracious manner. Their services were greatly appreciated and we sincerely thank them. If it had not been for all this help we could never have kept our expenses down to $84.32, and it gives us great pleasure to present this cheque to you for the money you advanced in the Spring.

Our balance on hand is $28.44 which means our total collections amounted to $116.46.

On Labor Day we took our boys out for a picnic. Once again your finance committee proved their ability to do things economically in a big way. There were 87 boys taken on this outing. There were 6 contests and 12 worth while prizes were given to the winners. At the end of the day if there was a boy on the grounds who could have eaten another cone, hot dog, or drank another glass of lemonade we could not find him, he did, however, get rid of 2 bus. of apples just before leaving for home. This cost $18.66, which was practically all donated as was the use of the grounds and the transportation. We thank everyone who helped us make this outing such a success.

President Jim Moir called upon the speaker of the occasion, Rev. D. McTavish, who without standing upon ceremony started in to tell of some of the impressions he gained at the Summer School held last month here in Trinity College School. While held under Liberal auspices it was devoid of party feeling. He went on to tell of the cosmopolitan group making up the school: (1) Armed chair professor—theory of economics and political science. (2) Practical politician—who has had a hand in working things out. (3) The every day thinking man who wants things done—grows impatient at the politician sometimes carried away with theories.

It was pointed out that it was a good time to study political economy with the world in an abnormal state, for it is said that when the body is out of order that is when the doc-

TWO HELD IN WALKEM DEATH

Refuse To Answer Coroner, Two Jailed At Peterboro For Contempt

William Coursey, alleged "hit-and-run" truck driver and his companion, Hugh McCullough, held on joint charges of manslaughter, gave joint blank refusals, on advice of counsel, when called upon to testify at the Coroner's inquiry at Peterboro Tuesday night into the death of 15-year-old Hugh John Walkem.

The incident, which caused a mild sensation in the closely packed courtroom, resulted in Coroner Dr. J. C. Smith formally committing the two accused men to jail for contempt of court "until such time as the required evidence is submitted."

The jury returned a verdict to the effect that Walkem came to his death by being run down by a truck, "believed to have been driven by William Coursey."

Patrick Slaght, nephew of A. G. Slaght, K.C., recalled that he and Walkem were cycling back to Grove School at Lakefield. "I was riding in front. We were on the right side of the road about two feet from the grass. We were riding along and I saw the headlights of a car shining through the trees around the bend of the road."

The car got around the head and witness said he noticed it was on the wrong side of the road. "When it got quite close I told Walkem to take to the ditch. I swerved over to the other side of the road."

Witness stated he heard a crash and saw the truck continue on for 250 yards before coming to a momentary halt. A man got out of the car and witness shouted to him to come back. He got no response. Walkem was lying dead from terrible injuries.

Other evidence was produced which indicated the truck proceeded on into the city and met with another minor accident in collision with a road truck.

Edward Gooley owner of the wood truck, who originally stated to police that Coursey and McCullough were intoxicated, in evidence said he was not prepared to swear Coursey was drunk.

Asked why he desired to amend his statement, Gooley said that since learning of the fatality in which Coursey and McCullough had been involved changed his opinion, believing the men had every reason to be "nervous and excited."

FOWL SUPPERS

Following is a list of the fowl suppers which will be held throughout the district within the next few days.

Oct. 20—Welcome United Church.
Oct. 24—United Church Ladies Aid, Port Hope.

Oct. 25—Garden Hill United Church.
Oct. 26—Wesleyville United Church.

Our first impulses are good, generous, heroic; reflection weakens and kills them.—L. A. Martin.

Learn how it should run. His impressions were:—

(1) That we have a great many earnest sincere brainy men—grappling with the problem, determined to find a way out.

(2) That the problem is a very complicated one. Utopia can not be ushered in over night, no cut and dried scheme will do.

(3) That we must have corporatized opinion. Expert opinion—economics—Great Britain's Economists predicted our present crisis.

View of politician can't be ignored. The theorist may give blue print, common sense may point out need but practical politician knows business of working it out.

Public Need—The accumulated experience of the practical man.

(4) A growing leniency toward some of our social and gov't control.

(5) Enormous difficulties of controlling Canadian currency. Canada is a little launch caught between the swells of two great ocean liners.—Wall Street and London. Geographically situated between the two we are bound to be disturbed by these two great factions. He has gained a little more sympathy for Mr. Bennett and Mr. Rhodes than he had before on the gold standard question.

(6) Frank recognition that the present dilemma is man made and can be man cured—no attempt to pin it to Divine Providence.

(7) One factor missing—We have trusted too much to the business man who thinks in terms of equation. He concluded that the way out was not by destruction but fulfillment; not revolution but evolution.

POLICE COURT

Remands Given In Cases Against Three Local Men

Three cases of intoxication, involving three local men, occupied the attention of court officials at the Town Hall here Saturday morning.

James Quinn, Port Hope, pleaded not guilty to an intoxication count of October 7th and his lawyer, A. Cochran, K.C. of Cobourg, asked for an adjournment until October 23rd.

William Rowden, Port Hope, charge with being intoxicated on October 8th, pleaded not guilty and got a remand until October 26th.

Alfred Breen, Port Hope, pleaded not guilty of being intoxicated and evidence for the prosecution was furnished by Chief Constable Thomas Murphy. "He came out of a lane between 2.30 and 3 o'clock in the morning and went across Walton Street. He was intoxicated and I ordered him home. On Cavan Street, he started dancing around with another man. He was unsteady and staggering."

Breen stated that he was not drunk but admitted having a drink or two, and he denied staggering and the dance on the street. He explained that he had been out to a friend's house playing cards and was on his way home.

At this stage, Breen asked for a remand in order to obtain witnesses and the action was adjourned until October 26th.

ANNIVERSARY

Services Held At Welcome On Sunday — Fowl Supper On Friday

The very best of October weather favoured Welcome United Church for its anniversary services on Sunday, October 15th, both of which were attended by large congregations in which several surrounding neighbourhoods were represented.

The preacher was Rev. W. F. Banister, E.Th., B.D. of Canton who gave two very thoughtful and much appreciated sermons. In the morning, his text was "My Father worketh hitherto and I work," John 5: 17, and in the evening, "Their eyes were holden that they should not know him," Luke 24: 16. The helpfulness of the services was greatly increased by the music rendered by the Merial Mixed Quartette, Toronto, under the direction of Thomas Palmer. In quartette, duet and solo they sang the gospel message with inspiring effect.

The fowl supper on Friday, October 20th, with Frederick Dawson, of Toronto, as entertainer, promised to be an event of unusual interest.

GOODWILL CYCLISTS RETURN TO OSHAWA

Bill Burnett and "Chuck" Galloway, Oshawa's good-will cyclists, arrived back in Oshawa Saturday afternoon, completing a bicycle trip of some 3,000 miles. The boys left Oshawa six weeks ago with messages of good-will from the Oshawa Chamber of Commerce and toured through Quebec and the Maritimes, where they called on civic officials at most important centres. The boys are in good condition and raised the excellent hospitality they received during the trip.

YOUNG PEOPLE ATTEND RALLY

Misses Audrey Box and Ilene Gifford Chosen As Representatives

Howard Shackleton was elected as president of the Presbyterian Young People's Societies of the Presbytery of Peterboro at the Grand Rally of the district which was held at Peterboro when the big Sunday School room of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church was filled to overflowing with the crowd of over three hundred young people, in a gathering that far exceeded the expectations of those in charge, who had prepared for about two hundred and twenty-five.

Other officers for the Y.P.S. of the district were elected in Gordon McCabbin of Warkworth, vice-president; Miss Ethel Piddock of Cobourg, secretary; Robert McGregor of Campbellford, treasurer.

The Rally was eminently successful from every point of view. The gathering was animated by a spirit of real fun that deepened later to an attentive collective ear turned to the utterances of the Rev. W. M. Kammwin, D.D., of Toronto, General secretary of the Board of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies, who was the guest speaker of the evening.

Members of the Executive of the Y.P.S. for the district are as follows: For Colborne, Miss Esther McGlenon and Miss Beryl Martin; for Hastings, Miss Annie Spooner and Frank Taylor; for Bowmanville, Miss Christie Crombie and Donald Hardstone; for Norwood, Miss Jean Webb and Melvyn Ennis; for Port Hope, Miss Audrey Box and Miss Ilene Gifford; for Peterboro, Howard Shackleton and Miss Edna Morrow; for Campbellford, Robert McGregor and Miss Phyllis Addison; for Lakeport, Madeline Kernaghan and Miss Bessie Orck; for Warkworth, Miss Bessie Grant and Gordon McCubbin.

The chairman of the evening was the Rev. J. C. Robinson of Campbellford, Moderator of the Presbytery, while devotions were led by the Rev. W. J. Todd of Bowmanville and the Rev. A. C. Reeves of Norwood pronounced the benediction, after the installation of officers was conducted in humorous style by the Rev. Dr. K. H. Palmer of Port Hope and a sincere vote of thanks to St. Paul's, the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Barr, and the ladies of the church was voiced by the Rev. Mr. Duncan of Warkworth seconded by the Rev. Mr. Graham of Colborne, and elaborated upon by the Rev. Mr. Rhodes of Cobourg.

St. Paul's Y.P.S., Port Hope was well represented at the gathering.

In a one-sided rugby game played at Horse Show Park, Cobourg, on Saturday afternoon, the Port Hope High School squad met defeat at the hands of Cobourg Collegiate by the score of 33-1.

The locals were up against a much larger and stronger team but put up a stiff battle all through the game. Port Hope suffered the only casualty when Tom Long received a broken shoulder in the last quarter.

EASTERN ONTARIO TORIERS TO MEET

Monster Meeting At Ottawa On Nov. 1st — Bennett To Be There

The Right Hon. R. B. Bennett, Prime Minister of Canada, has accepted the invitation of the Eastern Ontario Liberal-Conservative Association to a dinner to be tendered to him at the Chateau Laurier on Wednesday, Nov. 1. This will be the occasion also of the second annual meeting of the Eastern Ontario Conservatives, who organized their association at a monster meeting and banquet in Brockville last year when over 1,500 party stalwarts crowded the convention hall in the afternoon session and overflowed three banquet halls in the evening.

There will be many prominent guests at this year's meeting, including Federal and Provincial Ministers and members of Parliament. Preparations are being made for a much larger gathering than was held at Brockville last year. The facilities of Canada's finest hotel will be at the disposal of the Tories for their meetings in the morning and afternoon, and for the banquet and ball following the banquet in the evening.

Miller's Worm Powders destroy worms without any inconvenience to the child, and so effectually that they pass from the body unperceived. They are not ejected in their entirety, but are ground up and pass away through the bowels with the excreta. They thoroughly cleanse the stomach and bowels and leave them in a condition not favorable to worms, and there will be no revival of the pests.

INSTALLATION AT ST. JOHN'S

Installation of officers was the chief item on the program of St. John's A.Y.P.A. when that organization met on Monday evening. The Rector, Rev. A. G. Emmet installed the officers in their respective chairs: President, Doris Hancock; Vice-President, Jack Mitchell; Secretary, Elva Collins and Treasurer, Stanley Wood.

The four groups were formed and each group will chose their own name. A number of the members are attending the A.Y.P.A. convention in Toronto, however, sixty answered the roll call. Miss May Ansell and Herbert Winfield were appointed as St. John's representatives on the Local Council.

Stanley Wood had charge of the recreational hour at the close.

CHANGE MADE IN EGG GRADES

"Specials" And "Extras" Become "A1" and "A" Qualities

In future graded eggs will consist of "A1," "A," and "B" and "C," according to an announcement by the Department of Agriculture. This simplifies the grading of eggs and displaces the old system of "specials," "extras," and "firsts" and "seconds."

The words "new laid" will be used only in conjunction with grade "A1," and the word "fresh" may be applied only to grades "A1," and "A." All eggs possessing the quality of grade "A" may be sold in that grade irrespective of size. However, eggs of different sizes must be packed separately, with the size indicated on the container.

Storage eggs will not be permitted to be sold in a higher grade than grade "B." Changes were also made to prevent misrepresentation in the sale of storage eggs.

ROSSMOUNT

On Friday evening about thirty neighbors and friends gathered at the home of Mrs. Harvey Goheen, the occasion being her birthday.

The evening was spent playing cards and dancing. Solos were rendered by Mrs. Percy Maybee and J. Smith. Little Phyllis Goheen delighted everyone by singing "Cowboy Jack." Fred McQuiggin played selections on the Hawaiian guitar.

Miss Beryl Clunie was pianist for the evening. Messrs Fred and Percy Maybee assisted by Fred McQuiggin supplied the music for dancing. L. Maybee was master of ceremonies.

A dainty lunch was served at midnight. Mr. Fred McQuiggin, of Welland, was a week-end visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Clunie.

Miss Hazel Horner and Ilene Sophie spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Horner, Campbellcroft.

Miss Beryl and Margaret Clunie motored to Toronto Friday morning and returned in the evening accompanied by Mr. Fred McQuiggin.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Smith, of Peterboro, were visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Goheen, Friday evening.

SEVEN DAYS FOR MOTORIST

Wm. Virtue Of Bowmanville Sentenced For 'Drunk' Driving

Charged with driving a car while under influence of liquor, William Virtue of Bowmanville was convicted by Magistrate Creighton at Oshawa and sentenced to seven days in jail with an additional term of seven days if court costs are not paid.

Virtue claimed he drank but one bottle of beer several hours prior to his arrest, but unfolded events of a lively evening. He had been sitting in his car with the wife of another man, Virtue said, when her husband came along, pulled him out of the car and struck him several blows. "He slashed me across the face and hit me in the side," Virtue said. "It made me dizzy. The car shimmied when I was driving on King street later, but I wasn't drunk."

Virtue claimed he was taken to the hos, for several hours after his arrest and treated for the injury to his side.

Traffic Officer McCommander who made the arrest claimed Virtue had been zig-zagging along the street.

SMALL RURAL SCHOOLS PROVE VERY COSTLY

Despite efforts of the Ontario education department to close up tiny rural schools with but a few pupils, and redistribute the children, there are still 364 schools in the province with an average attendance of from 1 to 5 and a teacher devoting her time in each case to this small group.

These figures are given by the report of Premier G. S. Henry as minister of education. The average cost per pupil of such classes is about $230, as compared to an average cost in all the rural schools of the province of about $62.

There are 1,352 schools throughout the province which have an average attendance of from 6 to 10, and in these the cost is about $130 per head, or just about twice the average cost in all Ontario rural schools.

Ten years ago, however, the costs of these tiny rural schools were considerably greater, having a cost of $248 per head in the 1 to 5 pupil schools, and $144 in the 6 to 10 ones.

INATTENTION DECLARED MENCE ON HIGHWAYS

One of the chief dangers to users of highways, both drivers and pedestrians, was inattention—a lack of concentration on the business of driving a car or walking on the highway, declared W. G. Robertson, general manager of the Ontario Motor League in an address in the 1933 series for Highway Accident Prevention. Driving and walking, Mr. Robertson said, tended to become purely involuntary occupations, the mind being left free to wander where it would. He advised close attention and concentration for drivers at all times as one safeguard against accidents.

BIBLE SUNDAY LOCAL CHURCHES

J. R. Whetstone Again President Of Bible Society — Other Officers

In place of the customary Annual Bible Society meeting held during the week, the executive launched an initial effort to stimulate and increase the people's interest in this work by having representatives of the society occupying the different pulpits on Sunday.

Rev. A. M. Bamfield preached in the United Church at the morning service and at St. Paul's in the evening, while Rev. Atkinson spoke at the Baptist Church morning service and at St. Mark's in the evening. Both men were able speakers and presented a message that was inspiring and which showed the great importance of the society work, serving as it does missionaries of every church by providing for them the bible in the native dialects and languages, totaling 667 different translations.

At a short business meeting at the close of the evening service the following officers were elected:

President—J. R. Whetstone. Vice-President—L. B. Randall. Secretary—S. Hayden. Treasurer—V. B. Coleman.

THE BEAUTY OF THE WALNUT

An article from the London Times, headed "Beauty in the Black Walnut," published a few days ago in The Globe, has called the attention of correspondents to the possibilities of nut culture in Ontario.

Especially interesting is a bulletin issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, which was prepared by Mr. James A. Neilson, B.S.A., M.S., whose services Canada, unfortunately, has lost through his removal to the Michigan State College, in East Lansing.

As Mr. Neilson has pointed out, the conservation and improvement of our native trees offer great possibilities in making Ontario "more productive and more beautiful." Canada expends millions of dollars annually in the importation of nuts. A large part of the demand could be met, expert opinion is certain, by the culture in suitable areas of nuts of the best native and exotic varieties.

There has been a gratifying increase in public interest, it is true, in the growing of nut trees in the Province within recent years, as is attested by the planting programs carried out along certain roads in Southwestern Ontario. But the communities which have taken even slight advantage of their opportunities, after all, are few and widely scattered.

Many types of nut trees combine beauty with a wide measure of utility. Their food-producing possibilities certainly are not appreciated by the public. Dr. Robert T. Morris, in a work on nut-growing, remarks: "Nut trees produce more of the food essentials in proteins, oils, and starches than are furnished by ordinary field crops." He adds: "Each acre of walnut trees in good bearing will produce ever year food approximating 2,500 pounds of beef, or 3,500 quarts of milk, or 3,000 pounds of mutton.

Sir William Mulock, Chief Justice and former Postmaster-General, was among the few in Ontario who in earlier years appreciated the possibilities of black walnut culture, and his ever-widening plantation near Aurora, which has attained a value difficult to compute, gives testimony to his foresight. Growing beside some of York County's roads will be found here and there black walnuts of amazing size.

The black walnut, with which the Times article dealt, is one of our finest native trees. Contrary to popular belief, it grows rapidly and, in some cases, bears early. A few trees, Mr. Neilson states, were found which produce large nuts with a thin, easily cracked shell and fine kernels. These superior sorts have been propagated and are sold as named varieties. Trees of the walnut, hickory, chestnut and hazel groups offer infinite possibilities for culture in Ontario.

Pecans have been grown successfully in several parts of Ontario for some years. Mr. Neilson remarks, notably at Richmond Hill and near Simcoe. The almond, which is akin to the peach, has grown rapidly and borne fair crops in Ontario's peach belt. Trials of many exotic varieties of nut trees have yielded results which will be almost incredible to many in Ontario to whom a roadside tree of any kind is merely another product of chance or accident—or, indeed, an actual encumbrance, to be cut down or mutilated as best suits the decorative purposes of those who erect additional poles and string additional wires.—Toronto Globe.

AUTUMN AND WINTER

(An Editorial for Young People)

There are plenty of signs that the summer has drawn to its close. Every season has its own special charms, and autumn certainly has them in abundance. The countryside changes, but it takes on an appearance of even enhanced beauty, when the leaves assume their wonderful variety of tints and the air becomes cool and bracing. This is the season when one feels the urge to greater exertion. Summer, beautiful as it is, is not the best time of the year for activity. Spring is the time of reawakening, it is true, when Nature shakes off her winter sleep and goes to work with a will, making new garment for this world of varied and exquisite charm. But when the cooler months come and Nature seems to take a rest, that is the time when human beings are most capable of vigorous activity of mind and body. It is wise to make the most of time at all seasons; but what great achievement could be realized if careful plans and a definite program were formed now! By the time spring came round again, what gratifying results might be recorded!

For the majority of young people the conscientious performance of school and home tasks will occupy the greater part of their time. But this at least might be determined upon—that home lessons, a course of useful reading, the pursuit of an improving hobby—will be faithfully performed. Fall and winter are the ideal seasons for study; it is now that habits are likely to be formed which establish the character of the individual for good or ill. How pitiful it is to hear young people say they feel dull and find nothing worth while to do. The time not devoted to "pleasure" is lost to them; they are bored by their own company. The quiet hours spent at home, by oneself, acquiring knowledge, improving or merely entertaining the mind, should be very precious hours to every right-minded boy or girl. The other day Professor Norman MacDonald, of our local McMaster University, spoke on the "romance of learning", which, he said, "opened windows to the mind." That is the way to look at it—learning is in deed a romance, leading to never-ending adventure and constantly fresh delight.

The mind that is shut in is more to be dreaded than the shutting in of the body. It is pleasant and comfortable to stay indoors when it is cold outside; and it is then that the mind ranges abroad in imagination and in the quest of new facts and new ideas. The "windows of the mind" are opened to the sublime thoughts of the great of all time; the light streams in and the soul is refreshed. Unhappy indeed is the young person who does not understand this. Reading and contemplation should be an important part of life for all of us; but it is when we are young especially that we need to build up knowledge and enrich ourselves day after day with new thoughts, developing our intellectual powers. There is no royal road to learning; it has been well said. The road is not always smooth, but it is almost always delightful, if the journey is undertaken in the proper spirit.—Hamilton Spectator.

UNABLE TO PAY, TAKES THE TIME

Leslie Taylor, Elgin Street, Up On Charge Under Excise Act

Charged under the Excise Act of unlawfully brewing beer for the use of others than himself and family, Leslie Taylor, Elgin Street, was found guilty by Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell in police court at the Town Hall this morning and a fine of $50.00 and costs was imposed. Not being able pay the fine Taylor was obliged to accept the alternative of one month's imprisonment at Ferryview. Taylor pleaded not guilty to the count which was preferred by Constable Lewis Denton, Cobourg.

Constable Denton stated that accompanied by Chief Constable Murphy, a visit was paid to Taylor's home on September 16th. "Mrs. Taylor ran into the bedroom with a jug and a couple of glasses. I followed and she put the jugs and glasses under the bed clothes. Four men were in the house and two of them were under the influence of liquor. In a hole in the floor, I saw a tremendous amount of beer for one house. I came to the conclusion that he was bootlegging and told him to cut it out. I was prepared to give him another chance and thought that sufficient warning."

Accompanied by Provincial Constable W. J. Carey, Taylor's house was again visited on September 23rd, a week later. Constable Denton stated that a man was there consuming beer. He took the glass out of his hand and a bottle of home brew which was on the table in front of him, was produced in court. Witness told that 530 quart bottles of beer were destroyed as well as a number of pints. Witness added that Taylor said at the time that he should have taken the warning given a week before and thrown the stuff away.

The contents of the bottle produced in court was sent to Ottawa for analysis and the report showed a 7.2 per cent proof spirits. Provincial Constable Carey told of making the raid with Constable Denton and that 530 quarts of beer were destroyed. "While dumping the beer Taylor kept saying that he should have taken Constable Denton's warning. I never before saw so much home brew in any dwelling."

Chief Murphy told of visiting the house on September 23rd and four men were there at one o'clock in the morning, and that two of them were intoxicated.

Taylor told the court that he was the father of eleven children and had received relief from the town. He denied giving the bottle of beer to the man the police found sitting at the table, stating that he had brought the bottle up for himself and daughter and that the visitor took it.

"The evidence shows," said the Bench, "you had a great quantity of home brew beer or something of that nature. There were over 500 quarts to say nothing of the pints and empties. You have a family of eleven children and you have admitted you have been on relief, but in spite of all this, you had a huge quantity of beer on hand. You have had your chance and I must find you guilty."

My gems are falling away; but it is because God is making up His jewels.—Wolfe.

THE MENACE OF DAYLIGHT SAVING TIME

Daylight saving time has run its course and Bowmanville is back on standard time. The commencement or close of the daylight period is always the origin of numerous discussions of its merits or demerits. The plan certainly has both good and bad points, but it seems to us that most of its disagreeable effects are traceable to the fact that daylight saving time is not a blanket regulation covering the entire country. In England a government edict passes on daylight saving and the whole country changes, including railways, with the result that no one seems to mind it at all, and there is little if any, criticism of the plan.

In Canada the cities, and towns connected with them by branch industries, transportation, and other connections go on daylight time while the farming community and the railways stay on standard time. The worst part of this situation is that these towns and cities cannot agree among themselves as to the dates and so we see Toronto, Oshawa, Bowmanville and other centres starting one week, Hamilton and other cities another week and then week by week, Port Hope, Cobourg, Newcastle enter the fold. The rural communities stand pat on standard time and the result is several months of confused times when hardly anyone knows just what town is on fast time and what town is on slow time.

As we see it there are only two ways in which the matter may be adjusted to bring everyone in line, and that is to either abolish daylight saving time altogether, or institute federal legislation placing the whole country under the measure.—Bowmanville Statesman.

DEATH CLAIMS LINDSAY MAN

Richard Kyle Was Popularly Known As 'Good Roads' Kyle

Richard Kyle, one of Lindsay's most prominent citizens and familiarly known as "Good Roads Kyle," passed away at his home on Kent street West Thursday night, following an illness of but a few days. The deceased, who was the father of the late Prof. Edward Kyle of the teaching staff of Toronto University, was born in South Monaghan, Peterboro County, 83 years ago. His parents moved to Ojibwa Township and then to Peterboro where they lived for twenty-three years. The late Mr. Kyle was predeceased by his wife a year ago and by his son, Prof. Ed. Kyle, renowned educationalist, in 1915. Sixty-six nieces and nephews residing in Peterboro County, mourn his loss. Last year Mr. Kyle contributed to St. Mary's R.C. Church, Lindsay, three handsome marble guitars and a marble sanctuary rail.

PICTON TEAM IS ALL HOME-BREW

Travel More Than 4,000 Miles To Reach Ontario Finals

Not since an intermediate team defeated Caledonia in 1921 to annex the provincial title has baseball taken such firm root in the minds of the residents of Picton and county. They have representing them in the O.B.A. A. intermediate "B" finals, one of the smartest aggregations turned out in Ontario in many a moon.

Entered in the Bay of Quinte loop, in which they were grouped with such teams as Belleville Victorians, the strong Napanee Gibbards squad, and a team from Brighton, the Picton team displayed championship form from the start of the season. They won eight of their 12 league starts and capped a fine schedule performance by eliminating Belleville 1932 champions in two straight games for the loop title.

Meeting Gananoque in the first round of the O.B.A.A. playdowns, the Pictonians again showed championship form, when they eliminated the Island Town squad by the odd game in three. Yorker, Peterboro and Beaverton formed the opposition in the second, third and fourth rounds, and were decisively defeated in each instance in two straight games.

Pitted against the rugged heavy-hitting Falconbridge Miners in the semi-final round, Picton took a 5-0 defeat in the initial game at the mining town. The second clash, played in Picton resulted in a deadlock, darkness stopping the game at the end of the ninth with the score eight all.

The replay was taken by the homers 7-5, while the third and deciding game, played in Napanee, saw an inspired Picton team play championship baseball to swamp the northern champions by a 14-3 count. Up to the finals, in which they state at present engaged, the Bay of Quinte prizes have won 20 games, 164 1/2 and tied one, for a percentage of 1.66.

One of the important factors in their brilliant showing has been the efforts of their pitching staff. D. Phillips, starry left-hander and leader of the hurling corps, Ron Church and Roland Burke, make up a trio of fingers who have done splendid work in the climb to the finals.

A fast infield, reputed to be the smoothest working intermediate quartet in eastern Ontario, coupled with a trio of fast-moving outer gardeners, balance the aggregation. Right now they are battling in the finals for the Ontario championship, taking on "Lefty" Goldsmith and his Southampton Fishermen in a home-and-home series for the title.

The long trek to Southampton marks the last of a series of long trips, in which the eastern Ontario representatives have covered more than 4,000 miles in quest for triumph honors. And every mail-bag of them is a resident and native son of the county which they are representing.

Faith In Canada As Minister Of Finance Launches Dominion Loan

"Did you ever talk with a man at the moment that he was asking for a loan of $225,000,000?" Dr. K. H. Palmer, minister of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, asked an Evening Guide representative today.

"I did," replied Dr. Palmer, "just the other morning at Ottawa, and before I could ask him 'How do you think you will come through?' he asked me, 'Well, old man, and how are things with you?' While I waited, calls on long distance telephone from all parts were coming in to him. Someone wanted to know this and someone else wasn't just sure of that. But this man was sure of one thing, that he was going to get his $225,000,000 and going to get it pronto."

AUSSIE FLYER TAKES RECORD

Kingsford-Smith Cuts 40 Hours England To Island Continent

Wing Commander Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith clipped more than 40 hours from the England-Australia flying record when he landed at Melbourne, Australia, late Wednesday afternoon to the cheers of a mighty throng of well-wishers. C.W.A. Scott, British aviator, set the old record of 87 1/2 hours, 23 hours and 49 minutes in a flight completed April 23, 1932.

Sir Charles, flying English last Wednesday at 12:25 p.m. (Greenwich time), landed at 5:12 p.m. for a elapsed time of seven days, four hours and 44 minutes.

The famous flyer circled the field and glided down to a perfect landing just as the sun was setting, concluding the hazardous last phase of his flight—the 1,250-mile ocean span from Sydney, Australia.

He stepped out of his plane to the din of rapturous cheering from the horns of motorists parked and waiting his arrival and hurrahs from virtually the entire population of late Wednesday.

The fiercest had perfect flying weather conditions throughout his trip, except for one day of rain.

DEMAND MODESTY IN BATHING SUITS

Forming present day bathing suits a menace to morals, Cambridge Women's Institute and Cambridge United Church Women's Association presented a resolution asking the reeve of the township to have a by-law passed, prohibiting bathing suits that cover so little of the body of women as to leave them almost nude in some cases. The petition calls for bathing suits for men and women in the future to cover the breasts and to extend down to the knees. The petition will also be sent to Victoria county council and probably to other councils as well as to manufacturers.

OSHAWA WOMAN MARKS HER 101ST BIRTHDAY

Confined to her bed most of the time, Mrs. Elizabeth Shales, of 77 Ontario St., Oshawa's oldest citizen, was 101 years old Friday. She has remarkably good eyesight, sews and reads when able to sit up, and takes a keen interest in events about her.

Although Mrs. Shales attributes her long life to the fact that she has never worried much about anything, other members of her family lived to great age. Her mother lived to be 102 years of age, while her sister died only a few days before her hundredth birthday. Her father, however, died at 35.

An inquiry for the purchase of apples has been received from Valetta in the Island of Malta, and for hay-fork and manure-fork ash handles from Bristol, England.

NO MORE SICK HEADACHES

"I suffered exceedingly with indigestion and sick headaches for years. I could hardly eat anything and was badly constipated. I realize now, of course, that I was in a very run-down condition. Fortunately for me a neighbor recommended 'Fruit-a-ties' and I began taking them. I am certainly glad I did. They regulated my system and toned me up generally so that now I am in the best of health. I would not hesitate to recommend them to anyone."

BOWMANVILLE YOUTH KILLED

Apple And Rifle Episode Ends In Death Of Arthur Lewis

Shot through the head by a charge from a .22-calibre rifle in the hands of his brother-in-law, Arthur Hockett, Arthur E. Lewis, a 15-year-old Bowmanville lad, was fatally injured in the presence of his father on Saturday afternoon.

The father, son and Hockett had gone out shooting after dinner near the Goodyear plant flats and were returning when the Lewis lad is said to have challenged Hockett to hit his hat as he threw it in the air. Placing an apple in it, he threw it, and Hockett fired and missed. Taking the apple out, the lad threw it in the air again, and Hockett aimed and fired as it came down. Just as he pulled the trigger, he later told Chief Constable Sydney Venton, he saw young Lewis either step or trip in front of him, and the charge hit him just behind the temple, coming out at the back of the head.

Seeing his son fall to the ground shot, Fred Lewis fainted and it was not until Hockett had revived him that the two were able to carry the lad half a mile to the Goodyear plant, where Dr. C. W. Semon was called to attend him. He was taken to Bowmanville Hospital, but he died seven hours later, at 8 o'clock on Saturday evening. Coroner Dr. V. H. Storey, after questioning the two who witnessed the accident, decided that an inquest was not necessary. Arthur Lewis, an only son, is survived by his parents and two sisters.

WINTERING ROSES

The roses usually cultivated in Canada may be divided into four groups so far as hardness is concerned, with rosa rugosa and hybrids, Austrian briars, Provence or Cabbage roses, Demask and Moss forming the hardest group Hybrid perpetuals, or hybrid Remontant, climbing roses of the many flowered kind and dwarf Polyantha roses are included in the second degree of hardness, while hybrid tea and pernetiana roses represent the third. The fourth degree of hardness consists of tea roses. Roses of the first group need little winter protection in many parts of Canada. However, in the Prairie Provinces where the country is open, it is desirable to bend the rose bushes down, covering them with soil, and where evergreen boughs can be obtained, to put some of these over them as well. More protection is necessary for hybrid perpetual, hybrid tea and tea roses. One of the simplest methods is to earth them up six or eight inches or more in the fall. The base of the mound should be made broad as a greater protection for the roots. A light covering of straw, straw manure or leaves held in position by evergreen boughs is often desirable. This prevents sudden freezing and thawing which causes much damage to plants. Another method is to bend the bushes down covering them with a box-filled with dry leaves and having a water-proof cover.

The Guide Story

For a few moments the grief-stricken girl can only sob passionately. She is too overwrought to recover her usual calm quickly. At any rate the insult he has offered her—for insult it is in the eyes of the proud, delicate-minded girl—would have stung her keenly. But now with the wound so recently inflicted by Bell's careless words, it has caused her bitterest anguish.

"Lindsay."

The low tone in which he utters her name is convincing proof of his shame and contrition—for once Fred's shallow nature is touched. He has cared for Lindsay as much as any one, and he feels as though he would willingly cut off his right hand to unsay the words which have caused her such intense suffering. Yet that very suffering raises a faint hope in his mind. If he were an object of such perfect indifference to her as she asserts, would she mind so much what he says—would his words cause her so much pain? He cannot guess that they have only irritated her already wounded heart, and thus caused her almost unendurable agony.

"Lindsay, forgive me, for Heaven's sake!" he urges earnestly. "I can never forgive myself!"

Her sobs are becoming fainter and a violent emotion is gradually subsiding. Her anger is over already, and only pain remains—pain and regret that she has lost her self-control and spoken so harshly and bitterly. Without turning her head, she holds out an unsteady hand towards him. He takes it in silence, and falling upon his knees beside her, presses it passionately to his lips.

"Lindsay—Lindsay," he murmurs in a tender and penitient tone, too absorbed to notice that the sunshine streaming in at the open door is darkened for a moment as if by a passing shadow.

When he raises his head and Lindsay gently but firmly disengages her hand from his, the shadow has vanished and the golden light lies in an unbroken stream on the polished floor of the old hall.

CHAPTER V

The early autumnal dusk is creeping rapidly over the landscape when the party returns from Elton Pike. Tea is ready for them in the hall, where the logs are blazing cheerfully on the wide hearth. Lindsay turns a serene but pale face towards Mrs. Ford as she advances from the warmth of the fireglow to meet her.

"Well," she says cheerily, "have you had a pleasant day?"

"Very pleasant," answers Mrs. Ford gaily. "Such a view, Lindsay! I did so wish you were with us. You would have enjoyed it so thoroughly. As it is not perfect, Bell?"

"I have seen far better ones," Bell answers rather sullenly.

She looks vexed and tired and her lips are compressed in a way which alters the bright, piquant beauty of her face. As she enters she gives a swift, suspicious glance around, as if to assure herself that Lindsay is the only occupant of the hall, and a gleam of satisfaction lights up her face as she perceives that their hostess is alone.

"I hope tea is ready," she says, in a more careless tone. "I am dying for some Lindsay! Have you waited for us?"

"Of course, I have," answers Lindsay briskly. "Come to the fire, Mrs. Ford. You must be tired."

The Rector and Richard Durant are hanging up their caps and putting away their alpenstocks. Mrs. Ford comes up to the fire, bright and flushed from her walk, pulling off her thick gauntlets.

"It was such a pity Lord Denzil would not go with us," she says, holding out her hands to the blaze. "He would have enjoyed it, I am sure. But he was quite right not to go if he felt it would be too much for him."

"Not to go!" echoes Lindsay, looking up from her teacup with startled eyes. "Did he not go with you?"

Mrs. Ford turns from the fire, in surprise and Bell, who has sunk into an armchair by the hearth, looks at them both with an expression of mingled amusement and satisfaction.

"Have you not seen him?" asks Mrs. Ford. "He came about a mile with us, then turned back, saying he would come straight home. He must have been there in less than an hour after we started."

"I have not seen him," says Lindsay, in a low, troubled tone without raising her eyes from the tea-tray. Bell laughs a mocking laugh, which rings gaily through the hall.

"What a sociable pair!" she exclaims.

"The king was in the counting-house counting out his money; the queen was in the parlour eating bread-and-honey."

"Have you not seen him at all, dear?" inquires Richard Durant, coming up to Lindsay's little table. "I hope he is not ill."

"I hope not," answers Lindsay. "Dick will you see? I have not heard him about the house and Jamieson did not come for any luncheon."

"Lindsay, you must have frightened him," says Bell laughingly. "Fancy going without luncheon because he dared not trust himself to a tete-a-tete with you."

"I am afraid he must be ill," observes Mrs. Ford rather anxiously. "Yet he seemed quite well and bright when he left us."

Bell laughs again, the mocking laugh which jars upon Lindsay. Lindsay's hands are trembling so much that she can hardly hold the teacup, for she is too anxious about Lord Denzil to answer Bell. She can scarcely realize that the Earl has been in the house all the day without letting her know of his return. Perhaps he is ill. Yet, if he were, Jamieson would surely have come for her. Perhaps he has not returned, and some accident has happened. Involuntarily the girl puts down her teapot, and presses her hand to her heart as if in sudden pain.

"Are we not to have any tea, Lindsay dear?" Bell asks innocently. "Don't punish us for his lordship's misdeed."

"I beg your pardon," Lindsay says hurriedly. "Mrs. Ford, do sit down. You must be tired. No, indeed," she adds, forcing a faint laugh as the Rector comes forward to assist her in handing the teacups and the thin slices of bread and butter—"you have earned a rest Mr. Ford. I will wait upon you all."

"You look more fit to be waited upon," remarks Mrs. Ford kindly. "Lindsay, I am afraid the Earl is quite right in thinking your care of him has tired you. You are looking very pale."

"It must at least be a satisfaction to Lindsay to know how highly her care has been appreciated," Bell observes demurely. Lindsay feels her face flush hotly as she bends over her tray, and there is a sudden gleam of anger in her eyes.

"I hope Lord Denzil is not ill," says Mrs. Ford anxiously. "It seems so strange that he should not have reported himself to Lindsay, when he certainly came home only to please her eyes."

"The mystery will soon be solved," observes Bell. "Ah, here they come!" she adds, turning her bright eyes towards the oaken staircase, down which the two young men are coming side by side—Dick, in his rough tweed knickerbocker suit, Lord Denzil in a brown velvet coat, which fits his gaunt figure loosely, but is a very becoming garment, nevertheless.

They form a striking contrast as they come side by side into the fire-lit hall. Durant, so full of health and strength, his movements alert and vigorous, his brown cheeks flushed, his eyes bright and clear. The Earl, looking pale, languid, and worn, his eyes dull, his movements slow and listless, although he smiles brightly at Bell as he goes to her side by the fire. He does not even glance at Lindsay, who after one swift, searching look at him, has resumed her duties as hostess and is busy with her tea-things.

"Come, truant," says Bell gaily, "give an account of your mysterious conduct! You leave us, ostensibly acting under the orders of your nurse and then do not even take the trouble to show her that you have obeyed them. What have you been doing with yourself all the day? Starved yourself for one thing—but what else?"

"Starved myself!" exclaims the Earl, laughing. "I cannot plead guilty to that indictment."

"But Lindsay says you had no luncheon."

"Had I not? Miss Durant does not know what an excellent forger Jamieson is. He was once servant to a commissariat officer, and he thoroughly understands the business."

"Oh, then you are not so much to be pitied!" rejoins Bell lightly. "But however substantial your luncheon was, I know you cannot resist a cup of Lindsay's tea, and while you are drinking it I will tell you what a charming walk we have had."

"You have had a pleasant day, I hope, Mrs. Ford," says Lord Denzil, as he seats himself near the Rector's wife, while Bell pouts at his disregard for her invitation.

"Very pleasant," answers Mrs. Ford brightly. "I wish you could have gone with us, but you were quite right not to do so. The walk would have been too much for you."

"I don't know that it would not have done me more good than the long, solitary, miserable day I have had," he remarks, with a sudden touch of bitterness that he cannot repress. "Thank you, Miss Durant, he adds, rising to take his tea, which Lindsay hands him without raising her eyes to his. "Have you given me my usual complement of sugar?"

"I think so," she answers coldly, and goes back to her chair by the little Chippendale table. There is a pleasant murmur of conversation and laughter around the old hearth, in which Lindsay joins more than she usually does.

Lord Denzil, glancing at her, thinks he has never seen her look so bright. Her pallor has disappeared, and a patch of colour burns on either cheek.

Presently the Fords rise and take their leave, Lindsay and her brother accompanying them to the door. Dick slips his hand within his sister's arm as they stand there together, and for a moment she leans her head upon his shoulder. Bell, from her armchair by the fire, sees how swiftly the Earl's eyes rest upon them, and she bites her lip rather savagely.

"They are quite a Darcy and Jean are they not?" she says laughingly. "I wonder what Richard will do when Lindsay leaves him, I hope," she adds more seriously, "that my father will persuade Fred to settle here and take his practice—that would be such a satisfactory arrangement in every way, and one which would prevent any real separation between this devoted brother and sister."

The Earl glances at her quickly with a slight start. The girl looks very demure and thoughtful as she sits in the fire-glow, her golden hair a little disordered. Before he can ask the meaning of her words, the brother and sister come back to the fire.

"I am afraid you have had a hard day, Lord Denzil," says Dick gently. "Why did you not let Lindsay see if she could charm the pain away?"

"I did not wish to impose unnecessarily on her kindness," replies Lord Denzil calmly. "Besides, I have not been suffering bodily pain. A fit of blues, of the deepest type, assailed me. I used to be subject to them at one time."

"Lindsay would soon have dispersed them," her brother remarks laughingly. "I have many a time proved her magical power in that line."

"So have I," says Lord Denzil, with a very kind, if very sorrowful, glance at his young hostess. "But to-day I thought I would battle against the invaders unaided. The struggle has tired me rather, but I have expelled them. Besides, Miss Durant was not alone when I came in. She had a visitor."

"A visitor!" echoes Dick, feeling his sister start as she stands beside him. "Who was it, dear?"

Lindsay raises her eyes slowly, and, as she does so, meets the Earl's glance, fixed upon her. A burning blush, so intense that it is almost painful, rises slowly to her face, colouring it from chin to brow, and Bell's triumphant laugh echoes gaily through the firelit room.

"Oh what a tell-tale face!" she exclaims. "Can't you guess from it who the visitor was, Dick? It could have been no one but my dearly beloved brother!"

"Fred! Was he here, Lindsay?"

"Yes, he rode over this morning," Lindsay answers calmly, her pride coming to her aid. "He returned last night, Bell, she goes on, with a reproachful glance at Bell. "He left his love for you, and he hopes you will go home soon."

"Does he? That hope is certainly not a sincere one," says Bell. "If I go home he will have no excuse for coming over here! Not that he wants one," she adds, shrugging her shoulder, "for my belief is that his horse would bring him over, no less a volens! He ought to know the way by this time!"

"Don't you think we had better get ready for dinner, Bell?" queries Dick, looking at her with some displeasure. "Lindsay and Lord Denzil are ready, but we are not and the bell will ring in a few minutes."

"Of course," replies Bell, springing up and seizing her hat and gloves. "But, if we are late to-day, Lindsay will forgive us, I am sure. Nothing could be done to-day, as you ought to make her guess to-day."

She rings lightly upstairs, humming a dreamy love-song. Dick follows, two steps at a time. Lindsay begins quietly to file up the cups and saucers on the tea-tray and the Earl watches her with the same kindly, but sorrowful, look in his eyes.

"Are you not grateful to me for my consideration?" he asks, trying to speak lightly, but failing to conceal the bitterness he feels. "It would have been too cruel—would it not—to interrupt such a tete-a-tete?"

Again the hot flush rises in the girl's cheeks, but she makes no reply.

"You are not angry with me?" he goes on hurriedly. "Perhaps I ought not to have spoken of it, but—his lip quivers a little under his fair moustache as he goes on—"I thought I might venture—We are friends—are we not? I owe you so much, Lindsay!"

Lindsay turns from the tea-table with a proud gesture. The pretty blush has faded and she is as pale as he is himself as she faces him.

"You owe me nothing, Lord Denzil," she says quietly. "I did nothing more for you than I would have done for any other person under Dick's roof. You need feel no obligation. I merit no gratitude."

"I did not mind owing my debt of gratitude to you," he returns gently. "I was glad, I think, to owe it, Lindsay. But I had hoped you looked upon me as a friend and—"

"I don't like unequal friendships," Lindsay interposes quietly, although her heart is beating wildly, and she has to force the words from her pale, parched lips. "And there is a wide gulf between your exalted position and mine, Lord Denzil."

"A gulf! Am I so unworthy?" he exclaims, in strange, broken tones. "Lindsay, what have I said or done to make you so angry with me? Is it an unpardonable liberty in a man whose—whose friendship for you is about the strongest feeling he has ever known, to wish to congratulate you on an engagement which seems in every way so desirable? It is true that accident put me in possession of your secret—your happy secret—but I am none the less interested in it for that."

Twice the girl tries to speak to deny the engagement which he seems to take for granted, but she fails to utter a word. He is not looking at her now, he fears to see the happy love-light which must be shining in her eyes. If he had turned towards her, he might have read in them the denial she cannot force herself to utter. But he does not, and in the silence which follows Lindsay determines to leave him under the misapprehension, for, if he believes her to be engaged to Fredric Heath, he can no longer entertain the foul suspicion of her intentions towards himself.

"If my indiscretion—my most reluctant indiscretion—seems to merit punishment," he goes on quietly, "you can have the satisfaction of knowing that it brought its own chastisement. I think the moment I stood there on the threshold and saw you and the man who has been so fortunate as to win your love, and who seems to me the most enviable creature under heaven, was the bitterest I have ever known!"

Silence follows the sadly spoken words. The fire glows dimly before Lindsay's eyes as she stands there, leaning her hand on the little Chippendale table. There is a strange sense of confusion and faintness upon her. She hears the words, truly, but she does not comprehend them.

"You know now why I envy him and why my wishes for your mutual happiness are sincere!" the Earl says presently, in an altered tone. "Don't be angry with me, Lindsay, and remember that if ever I can be your friend—or his—it will give me truest pleasure."

He holds out his hand to her as he speaks and she feels it trembling as it clasps her own.

"Thank you," she says, very gently and quietly, as she withdraws her cold fingers and turning away from him, goes slowly up the stairs.

As the graceful figure disappears Lord Denzil sinks into the nearest chair and covers his pale face with his hands.

CHAPTER VI

"If I possibly can, dear, I'll come home by the mail."

"By the mail! To get to the station while it is still dark! Please don't, Dick. There is not the slightest reason for doing so."

"But I don't like leaving you, Lindsay."

"Why not? What could possibly happen to me or Moor House?"

"Nothing, I suppose," Dick says dubiously as he and his sister stand together on the platform of the little station. "Still I feel anxious because Robson and Blair are both away and Fred is not to be depended upon."

Lindsay opens her eyes in surprise and laughs lightly.

"Do you anticipate a nocturnal

Jack on Moor House?" she asks. "My dear Dick, can the very oldest inhabitant of these wilds remember a burglary?"

"I don't anticipate a burglary, dear, but I scarcely like leaving you with the whole responsibility of the place and its inmates on your shoulders."

"The responsibility sits very lightly, Dick. If you should be detained over-to-morrow, Dolton and Mr. Clayton will be here and Lord Denzil is too well for any fear of a ransack. Here is your train, dear boy. I hope you will find Ted better."

"I hope so. Good-bye, my dearest."

He kisses her fondly as he gets in to the train, and Lindsay stands looking after it as it disappears round a bend in the valley.

The pony-cart is waiting for her in charge of a barefooted lad, whose eyes brighten as she appears. He pulls his yellow forelock in return for the bright silver sixpence she gives him and looks after her as she drives away, thinking what bright eyes she has and what a pretty smile and not guessing that her heart is racked with anguish.

Although she keeps back the tears that are so nearly overflowing, the pretty smile fades as Lindsay drives away over the rough moorland road. The keen, cold air brings a bright colour to her cheeks and the little hands holding the reins are soon benumbed, notwithstanding their thick driving-gloves. But Lindsay does not heed any physical discomfort. She is thinking sadly of her brother's anxious journey to the bedside of his sick friend, and how uncomfortable and embarrassing the tete-a-tete between herself and Lord Denzil will be.

"I wish I had asked Bell to come," she thinks, as she drives rapidly on. "But Bell is so changed and—"

A pitiful sigh ends this sentence. Life has seemed rather a difficult problem to Lindsay lately. She has felt depressed and languid, and unwilling for any exertion, but she has forced herself to go on with her usual duties and to wear the mask which she has found it so difficult to assume.

A week has elapsed since Fredric Heath returned to Moor House with the grayer Lindsay could not but reject. Bell has gone home again—her brother did not like the solitude which Doctor Evans had not objected to. Doctor and Mrs. Clayton are expected on the morrow, and Lindsay wonders whether the Earl will go with them when they leave Moor House. She feels a sharp pang at her heart as she realizes how terribly empty the old rooms will be when he is gone.

Since those few words were exchanged between them in the firelit hall, the Earl's manner towards Lindsay has lost all its old warmth and friendliness, but if he is cold, he is invariably gentle. He sees very little of her, for he spends most of the day on the moor with Dick and after dinner seems too tired for anything but to lie back in his armchair listening to Lindsay's music. The girl tries to feel towards him as she did before Bell had repeated to her those cruel words which seem ever new to sear her heart, but she cannot help the constraint and coldness that have altered her manner towards him, and make the Earl wonder sadly sometimes what has brought about the change.

Once or twice Fredric Heath and his sister have driven over in the evening to spend an hour with Lindsay, and Lord Denzil has watched the young doctor covertly, trying to feel kindly and cordially to the man whom Lindsay loves. Fred is a pleasant fellow enough, clever in his profession, with graceful manners and a low, well-modulated voice. But sometimes, in the long night hours, during which the Earl is restless and wakeful in the pretty, old, grave bedroom at Moor House, he wonders what charm such a man can have for a woman like Lindsay. Looking at him with eyes rendered keen with jealousy, he has seen the weak nature so easily swayed and so variable—but he has seen, too, that as deeply as it is in Fred's nature to love he loves Lindsay Durant.

Lindsay herself scarcely knows how the days pass. She feels like a woman living on the brink of a precipice. Every hour of the autumn days is touched with dread lest the Earl should discover that her engagement to Fred Heath, which she has tacitly allowed him to believe in, has no existence, and every hour, too, is darkened by pain at the remembrance of those words of his, which she doubts sometimes in her calmer moments. Any manness, any unworthy feeling seems then incompatible with the grave, and noble face of the man she loves so hopelessly. Surely the deep, deep voices which sound so sweetly in her ears now never uttered such false and cruel words as those. But the doubts are unfortunately only temporary. She dwells upon Bell's statement with all a woman's love of self-torture, she tries to cut away from her mind what he said to her in the hall, when he spoke so kindly, so tenderly, yet so sadly.

Lindsay drives on swiftly, urging the pony forward, her face red and sorrowful. It is growing dusk when she drives round to the stable-yard, and the gleam of gas and firelight welcomes her warmly from the windows of the house.

As she enters by the kitchen door, a grave, sideli-looking man rises from his seat by the fire and his face brightens at sight of her.

"His lordship has not yet returned, Miss Lindsay," he says respectfully, but with some anxiety.

"It is not very late, Jamieson. Mr. Durant left him at Larcham, a little hamlet a couple of miles from here, where he was resting before starting home."

"That's nearly three hours ago, Miss Lindsay. I think, ma'am, it would be better if I went to meet him."

MAY SHARE IN LARGE ESTATE

Cobourg Residents To Protest Will Of Aged U.S. Relative

Visions of participating in a million and a quarter-dollar estate are entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Benson of Cobourg and J. Wesley Minifie, assessor of the Township of Hamilton. Mrs. Benson and her brother Mr. Minifie, accompanied by T. F. Hall, K.C., left for Chicago on Sunday, where a Subrogate Court action will commence in an attempt to break the will of the late Mrs. Sarah Henderson, wealthy Aurora, Illinois, woman.

Mrs. Henderson, who is a recent cousin of Mrs. Benson, died two years ago and left an estate valued at about $1,200,000. Under the terms of her will the entire estate was bequeathed to charity, her only immediate survivor being a brother.

"Mrs. Henderson was in Cobourg about three years ago and came to see us," Mr. Benson said. "She was about 75 years old at that time. Before she died she was on her way to see us again, but at the last moment had a stroke. It was after her stroke that she made her will giving it to charity. I really do not think she was normal when she made the will, because she was on such good terms with my wife," stated Mr. Benson.

OCTOBER GROWN FLOWER SEEDS

Many herbaceous plants are easily raised from seed and this is much the most economical way to stock a border. The chief drawback is the time taken to get flowering-sized plants, as most of them take two years to grow to that size. At the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa, perennial flower seeds are sown in October just before the ground freezes. They lie dormant all winter and many of them germinate early in the spring. Sometimes seeds will stay in the ground for two years, so that it is advisable to make the seed-bed in a position where it can stay undisturbed for that length of time.

The seed-bed should be made in a shady position, though not under trees. If no such place is available, some artificial shade could be provided. The soil need not be rich, but if it is very heavy it would be advisable, the Dominion Department of Agriculture suggests, to lighten it with some sand. The surface soil must be made very fine. A suitable width for the bed is four feet and the length need be limited only by the available garden space. If there is doubt about the drainage, the beds can be raised slightly above the level of the surrounding soil. Seeds are sown in drills which should be six inches apart, the depth to sow depending on the size of the seeds. The large ones could be planted about half an inch deep, but the very small seeds should have only a little fine soil sifted over them. After the seed is sown and covered, the surface of the soil should be pressed down with the flat side of the rake or hoe. When seeds are scarce and valuable they should be sown in pots or flat, shallow boxes.

PAUL IN ASIA MINOR

(International Uniform Sunday School Lesson, October 22nd)

GOLDEN TEXT: "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."—Mark, 16: 15.
LESSON PASSAGE: Acts 13: 1-5, 13-15; 14: 19-23.

"Only like souls I see the folk there under,
Bound who should conquer,
Slaves who should be kings;
Hearing their one hope with an empty wonder,
Sadly contented with a show of things.
Then with a rush the intolerable craving,
Shivers throughout me like a trumpet call,
Oh to save these, to perish for their saving,
Die for their life: be offered for them all!"

SENDING THE BEST, 1-3

One of the findings of the Laymen's Committee on Missions is that thoroughly qualified missionaries should be employed. Only people of special gifts and with adequate training can worthily represent the Christian faith abroad. Missionary work is highly specialized. To make contacts with people of another language and another faith requires insight, tact and attractiveness. Many who are qualified to be useful Christian workers in their own land are not equal to the testings of missionary service in other lands. This rule of sending the best was followed in the first missionary effort to the Christian Church when missionaries went out from Antioch westward through Asia Minor. In Antioch were several leaders—some of them quite prominent, but the two chosen for this special mission were the outstanding leaders, Barnabas and Saul. All the other workers accepted the responsibility for this decision, and the two missionaries were sent forth with the blessing and ordination of the Christian Church in Antioch. A member of the Antioch congregation could have made out a strong case for the retention of Paul at teacher and Barnabas as organizer. This church, however, was saved to serve and give of its best. It is quite logical for modern churches to send their best leaders to other lands because the number supported abroad is relatively small compared with the number of workers active at the home base.

RECEIVING GUIDANCE, 4, 5

Barnabas and Saul were sure that they were being led by the Holy Spirit. They trusted themselves to guidance both as to rule and method of work. Yet several practical considerations had weight. They first went to Cyprus where Barnabas had friends. The guidance of the Holy Spirit did not forbid using previous acquaintanceship. They also taught in the synagogues where Paul was especially trained to serve. In all his missionary work Paul used the shrewdest common-sense, yet he was conscious throughout of the guidance of the Holy Spirit. It is when we use our own powers to the fullest that God's spirit can most surely lead us. Guidance is a partnership, a matter of our own choice and obedience to God's leading.

A CHANCE TO WITNESS, 13-15

It is a real problem for Christians to know how much they should talk about their religion. Sometimes the force of our influence is weakened by too many words. On the other hand golden opportunities must be seized at the time as they may never come again. There is no doubt that Christianity suffers more from silent than from garrulous Christians. "A word in season, how good it is!" Paul could preach at set times and places. He was also ready for any unexpected opportunities. In Paphos Antioch Paul and Barnabas visited the synagogue. A general invitation was given for anyone to speak. Paul seized

A RECORD APPLE PICK

Forty-five barrels and seven crates of apples were picked by Fat Yarrow in the Sam Nesbitt orchard at Brighton, Ont., the other day in ten hours. Allen Martin, a boy sixteen years of age, picked twenty barrels, and seventeen crates of apples in ten hours on the same day. The apples picked were of the Ben Davis variety. Mr. Nesbitt is prepared to wager that this will be the greatest number of barrels picked in ten hours within a radius of 500 miles of Brighton.

the opportunity and gave his Christian witness in a direct and forceful way. Perhaps no one rule can be made for every person. Sometimes a Christian word from a complete stranger is effective. With others it is only after years of intimacy that the deepest experiences of the soul may be helpfully discussed. Earnest Christians will make opportunities for witnessing to their faith. Every Christian should be able to say a word of truth to questioners whenever and however the approach comes. Paul knew that the Christian faith could be caught as well as taught, but he would leave nothing to chance. He taught in season and out of season.

INJURED BUT UNDAUNTED, 14: 19, 20

Paul was not a strong man physically, but he had wonderful pluck. At Lystra he was dragged outside the city gates and stoned half to death. His enemies left him thinking that he was dead. Paul, however, rose up, returned into the city and the next day moved on to Derbe. A man of weak will would have given up such a thankless mission, but Paul was made stronger in his missionary purpose by all the sufferings he had to undergo. This incident may have been the occasion of Timothy becoming a follower of Christ. He could not but admire the courage and perseverance of Paul who would not forego his missionary purpose, even fast-flying stones beat him to the ground. We have been pleased to think that the day of Christian persecution is over, but there are still many places in the world where to be a Christian means to risk one's life. It may be that in the great conflict between nationalism and Christianity which is approaching, martyrdom may become a Christian privilege once again.

ORGANIZING POWER, 21-23

Paul showed great tact in his approach to strangers. He gave himself without reserve to Christian teaching while he was in a town or city. After he moved on, he kept in touch with his converts by letters and by sending his fellow-workers to visit the churches. It has become a practice to scorn organization as compared with gifts of thought, speech and friendship. Genius, however, may be shown in organization work. It has been indispensable in the missionary history of the church. There is need to-day of missionary statesmen, men who can take a world-wide view of events and plan their work with foresight. A few nations once Christian are now pagan partly because organization work fell down. Christ can use every gift for his kingdom. Paul consecrated his great powers of organization to the work of the master whom he served.

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION

1. How should foreign missionaries be chosen?
2. Are you conscious of any guidance by the spirit of God?
3. (Are you timid about witnessing for Christ? If so, why?)
4. Do Canadian Christians ever have to suffer for the Gospel?
5. Is your congregation over-organized?

TWO SENTENCED BANK ROBBERY

Pettet And Garret Get Seven Years Following Wellington Hold-up

Five years in Portmouth Penitentiary for robbery and two years for carrying offensive weapons were the sentences meted out to Miles Pettet and Percy Garret Monday in Pictou Court, who pleaded guilty to charges in connection with the attempted hold-up of the Bank of Commerce at Wellington on Wednesday last at which time Norville Kyle, the manager, was slugged and Bert Watson, the teller, trussed and thrown into the cellar.

The men were not represented by counsel and Magistrate A. E. Calman delivered sentence after Gordon Wahmley, Crown Attorney, had asked for the full penalty. Magistrate Calman told the accused he could have given life and lashes but was taking into account their youth and the fact that the guns were not loaded when they entered the bank. The men made no statements only registering their plea.

OCTOBER MEETING OF H.S. BOARD

Insurance To Be Re-Adjusted—Parsons Legacy Will Be Invested

Following a recommendation from Trustee F. R. O'Neill that the fire insurance on the local High School property be completely reconsidered, it was decided at the October meeting of the board to hold a special meeting of the board at an early date when the matter of insurance will be completely reviewed. It was suggested that instead of the present system whereby insurance premiums are paid only every three years that the total insurance of $90,000 be split into three classes of $30,000, with one class falling due each year.

On motion of Trustee J. G. Jackson seconded by H. W. Mitchell it was decided to invest the $2,000 received as a legacy from the estate of the late S. R. Parsons in Midland Loan, five year, five per cent debenture. The bequest was made to the board for the perpetuation of the Parsons' scholarships.

Those present at the meeting included Chairman W. J. B. Davison, A. E. Fulford, F. R. O'Neill, H. W. Mitchell, J. G. Jackson and Warren Dunbar.

BIG CROWD AT ROSENEATH FAIR

Over 7,000 Attend Annual Event—Exhibits And Attractions

Held under the auspices of Roseneath Agricultural Society, the fair at Roseneath Friday drew a crowd estimated at 7,000 people, with splendid exhibits and attractions. There were no restrictions in regard to exhibits, being open to the province, and the fair drew entries from a very large territory.

The entries in the livestock classes were particularly numerous. A feature of the class for Shorthorn bull calves was Charlton Gregg's "Fashions Favorite," which won the class with ease. This animal was adjudged the champion bull calf of that breed at Ottawa Fair.

The class for exhibits of household work drew many entries. Many beautiful specimens of bead work, quill basket and artistic creations were seen in the class devoted exclusively to Indian handicraft. Every exhibit of the fine arts to be seen at a fall fair was housed in the large exhibition sheds and tastefully arranged, presenting an attractive appearance. Old time fiddlers' contests, rolling pin throws, and various other competitions were enthusiastically engaged in.

For Rheumatic Pains.—The pains and aches of Sciatica and Rheumatism should be treated with Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. The soothing and healing properties of this famous remedy have been demonstrated for fifty years. Use it also for inflammatory pains, cuts, scratches, bruises and sprains, either in human beings or the lower animals.

BIFOCALS — WHY WEAR THEM?

Beginning about the fortieth year muscles lose their early elasticity. Nowhere is this more apparent than in the eye. As the muscles become less elastic, the eye becomes less capable of making quick changes from distant to near vision.

Bifocals, properly prescribed, restore quick, accurate vision to the eyes at this period. To-day bifocals increase the efficiency and comfort of business and professional people, of the craftsmen and in the home.

Bifocals are double vision lenses. They have two focuses, one for distance and one for reading. They have been so improved that thousands of people have adopted them.

COMMITTED ON THREE CHARGES

Preliminary Hearing For Arnold Coughlin In Court Here Thursday

Charged with theft and two cases of receiving stolen goods, Arnold Coughlin, Port Hope, appeared in police court at the Town Hall here Thursday afternoon and was committed for trial by Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell on the three counts with the result that he will be tried at Cobourg before the County Judge. Coughlin appeared in court here a week ago on the first charge and was remanded in custody until yesterday. He was represented by F. C. Richardson, Cobourg, while Col. F. D. Boggs, K.C., of Cobourg prosecuted.

Coughlin pleaded not guilty to the charge of the theft of an electric clock, an electric razor, two suits shirts, etc., the property of J. C. Howell, of Montreal. Mr. Howell testified that he was visiting at the home of his father-in-law, L. A. Ott, Victoria Street, and on September 30th, the goods were stolen from his car which was parked in the driveway between 8.15 and 9 o'clock. Two portfolios containing personal papers were rifled and together with the clock box were later found on the premises.

Chief Constable Thomas Murphy stated that he and Provincial Constable Carey searched Coughlin's home. "The clock was found in a trunk and he said he knew nothing about it. His wife said that she had obtained it eight years ago. The shirts were found hanging on the back of the door, covered with another shirt. At the time, the accused was wearing one of the shirts. A razor was found in a coat pocket. He searched was made upstairs and the said that he knew nothing about it although he admitted owning the coat."

Two Other Charges

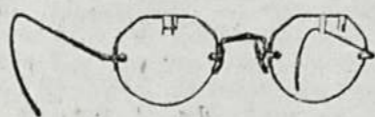

After Coughlin had been committed on the above charge, up stepped Constables S. Venton, of Bowmanville, and two other charges were produced, both of receiving stolen goods. Robert Stephens, of the West End Garage, Bowmanville, said that his garage had been entered and a quantity of tools stolen. Together with Chief Murphy, Constable Venton had searched Coughlin's premises and found some of the tools it is stated.

E. Cook, of Myrtle Station, gave evidence that his garage had been broken into and Provincial Constable Jarvis, of Oshawa, accompanied by Chief Murphy, inspected Coughlin's home and it is alleged that some of the tools were also found there.
