FIVE NURSES HONOURED AT '33 GRADUATION

Annual Exercises Took Place At Town Hall Here Thursday Evening

With the auditorium of the Town Hall filled to capacity and with many visitors present from out-of-town, the annual graduating exercises of the Port Hope Hospital were held here Thursday evening. The function was presided over by J. A. Hume, President of the Port Hope Hospital Trust.

The five graduating nurses, each garbed in their white uniforms and carried bouquets of flowers, occupied seats on the platform, which was bedecked with flowers and bunting. Others on the platform were Mrs. E. Edgar, President of the Women's Hospital Mission, Miss E. M. Elliott, Hospital Superintendent, Miss R. Bell, Assistant Superintendent, Miss L. Black, C. S. Mann, Rev. A. G. Emmet, E. Cohe and the Chairman.

The pleasing ceremony commenced shortly after eight o'clock when J. A. Hume introduced the members of the graduating class. He welcomed the members of the gathering, and spoke in glowing terms of the work of the institution. He explained that classes opened at the local Hospital in 1916 and since then forty-one graduates have been honoured. In addition, Mr. Hume paid tribute to the work of the Hospital staff and pointed out that much of the success of the Hospital is due to the gifts of local citizens.

The members of the graduating class were Mary V. Sawyer, Glamis; Vera E. May, Cobourg; Alice R. Fouracre, Port Credit; Cora J. Trotter, Clydesdale; and Norma L. Elliott, Port Granby.

The address to the graduates was delivered by Rev. A. G. Emmet, rector of St. John's Anglican Church. In opening, he extended congratulations to the graduating class of 1933 and commended the work of the hospital staff. "You have chosen the noblest of all professions," he said, "and it gives you an opportunity for unparalleled service."

The speaker eulogized the work of Florence Nightingale and the secret of her success was that "she put herself into it." "Anything in the world of achievement counts by exactly what is put into it. You have not chosen your profession for aggrandizement or for a bank account, but because in your hearts there was a desire to serve."

An atmosphere of kindness, added the speaker, is conducive and a requirement for a good nurse and a saving sense of humour is also a requisite.

At this juncture, two vocal solos were rendered in splendid manner by Miss Sydney Bennett with the accompaniments being played by Edmund Cohe.

The graduates repeated the Florence Nightingale pledge in unison, following which the presentation of the medals was made by Mrs. Edgar and the diplomas by J. A. Hume.

Following the pronouncement of the benediction by Rev. Emmet, the visitors were accorded an opportunity of meeting the members of the graduating class. The function was brought to a close by a delightful dance with music being supplied by Eric Carr's amplifying equipment.

YOUTH KILLED NORTH OF HERE

Joseph Meagher, 23, Meets Death On Port Hope-Peterboro Highway

Joseph Meagher, 23, Peterboro, was instantly killed Saturday on the Port Hope-Peterboro Highway, near Springville, when the car in which he was riding was ditched and overturned. Roy Walsh, Peterboro, driver of the car, is held by police.

Roy Walsh, 24, driver of the car, was charged in police court with theft of a car. He did not plead and was remanded until Monday.

An inquest was held ordered by Coroner Dr. T. W. H. Young.

PORT HOPE NURSES GRADUATE

REGULAR MEETING OF TOWN COUNCIL

Installation of New Intake Pipe To Be Made—Improvements Amount To $30,000

By unanimous consent at their regular meeting Monday night, the local Municipal Council agreed to grant the request of the Port Hope Water Works Commission to guarantee bonds amounting to a total of $30,000 for improvements and extensions to the Water Works System, as contained in a report dated July 7 by a company of consulting engineers who made a detailed survey. The Provincial Health Department will be asked to issue the necessary order to enable the work to proceed.

The work under consideration by the Water Commission is the installation of a new intake pipe used to supply the town with water. The present intake in use has been giving some trouble of late and while there has been no shortage of water, it has been deemed exceedingly advisable to install a new intake. In view of approaching winter the work will not be commenced until next year.

It was agreed to rent the town road roller to the Municipal Road Spraying Company for a period of ten hours at a price of one dollar per hour, the company to supply an operator and fuel and guarantee its return in the same condition as received.

A grant of $48.60 to cover relief costs for the past two weeks was made and Mayor Crowhurst drew the attention of the council to the fact that Port Hope was in an enviable position in regard to relief costs as compared with neighbouring towns, Cobourg's last bill being in excess of $900.

All members of Council were present with Mayor W. J. Crowhurst in the chair. The session was short and adjourned in less than three quarters of an hour.

For Burns and Scalds.—Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil will take the fire out of a burn or scald. It should be at hand in every kitchen so that it may be available at any time. There is no preparation required. Just apply the oil to the burn or scald and the pain will abate and in a short time cease altogether.

SHOTGUN CHARGE ROUTS BURGLAR

George E. Caldwell's Home Visited By Thieves Second Time Over The Week-end

For the second time over the week-end, a burglar visited the home of George E. Caldwell, local auctioneer, Ellen Street, but attempts are believed at an end, as the silence of Sunday morning was broken when the resident emptied the contents of a shotgun at the fleeing nocturnal marauder.

This is the third attempt that Mr. Caldwell has been visited by thieves within the past month. On the first occasion, the garage was robbed and rugs, sparkplugs, etc., were stolen.

Early last Saturday morning, a thief gained entrance by a window and ransacked the lower portion of the house. The contents of an unlocked safe were strewn about the floor but the burglar hurriedly departed when occupants of the house raised an alarm. No articles were removed.

On Sunday morning, the marauder returned again, about three o'clock. He was discovered entering the house and Mr. Caldwell grabbed a 16-gauge shot-gun which he had placed beside his bed as a safety precaution. Needless to say, the thief made a hurried departure, jumping to the ground and running up Ellen Street. Mr. Caldwell dashed to the front of the house and fired at him from a distance of twenty-seven yards.

Mr. Caldwell is positive that the buckshot found its mark as the progress of the burglar was temporarily halted. The thief plunged sideways but managed to escape, turning south on Hope Street.

REV. T. E. MELDRUM GIVES UP POST

Resigns After Serving Baptist Church For Over Eight Years

After serving the Port Hope Baptist Church with marked acceptance for over eight years as pastor, Rev. T. E. Meldrum has tendered his resignation to take effect within the next few weeks. Only on one other occasion in the history of the Church has this length of term been exceeded and that of only a few months by Rev. Dr. P. K. Dayfoot.

During Rev. Meldrum's pastorate, he has led the Church in raising several thousand dollars for repair purposes and improvements. The inside of the building has been decorated throughout, the front of the main auditorium enhanced by remodeling throughout in oak panelling and the installation of a new electric organ and much-needed stairway from the front vestibule to the basement was built and a new furnace provided. The outside has been thoroughly decorated and a new modern slate roof has added to its completeness.

During Mr. Meldrum's stay in Port Hope, quite a number have been added to the membership and the best of harmony has always existed between pastor and people and although he is severing his connection, the same spirit prevails. A deep interest has always been manifested and generously given to all the benevolent work of the town and many both inside and outside of the church will miss his kindly ministrations freely and unselfishly bestowed.

LAWYER'S CASE IS ADJOURNED

Frank Hart, a Colborne lawyer, appeared in Cobourg Police Court charged with converting to his own use $100, the property of John H. Nuttall. The accused reserved his plea and with the consent of the Crown, the case was adjourned until Oct. 25. Bruce McMurray a St. Catharines police constable who had resided at Lakeport, stated that after moving to St. Catharines he had paid a grocery bill of $100 to John Nuttall, through Frank Hart. He produced receipts showing payment.

Coroner's Jury Probes Fatal Highway Mishap

George A. Brown, Lonsdale, Died from Hemorrhage of Brain and Truck Driver did all in his power by using flashlight to warn traffic is Finding of Jury

"It was all like a dream. I don't remember anything," claimed Donald Tullock of Napanee district, driver of a sedan which crashed into the rear end of a truck near Morrish on September 21st, when George A. Brown, aged 68, of Lonsdale received fatal injuries and five others put in the Port Hope Hospital, when giving evidence before a coroner's jury at the Town Hall here Monday night. Tullock appeared at the hearing, bearing bandages as a result of the mishap and other members of the motoring party who gave evidence were Mrs. Flossie Tullock and Donald Weese. Earl Teskey, is still confined to the hospital here suffering severe facial injuries.

At the present time, Tullock is facing a charge of criminal negligence and the case will be heard in police court here on October 30th.

The Verdict

The complete verdict reads as follows.—"We find that George A. Brown came to his death on September 21st in the Port Hope Hospital from hemorrhage of the brain, caused by the result of a car in which he was riding crashing into the rear end of Martin's Transport truck, stalled without lights and on Provincial Highway No. 2 in the Township of Hope and that the driver of the truck did all in his power by using a flashlight to warn traffic." The verdict was returned after one hour's deliberation and the members of the jury were George T. Hancock, foreman, Elwin Brown, A. E. Fulford, Frank Flood, A. J. Christie, J. R. Giffen, John Whetstone, Howard Hatchings and Albert Tickell.

The hearing was presided over by Dr. R. McDermont, local coroner while Crown Attorney F. D. Boggs, K.C., of Cobourg examined the thirteen witnesses. Archie Cochrane, K.C., of Cobourg, represented Donald Tullock, driver of the ill-fated car and J. L. G. Keough of the firm Agar and Thompson, Toronto, represented the transport company.

"At the conclusion of the evidence, Coroner McDermont briefly outlined the evidence and respecting coroner's juries in general, added, "Of late Coroner's juries have rather fallen down in a great many of their verdicts. The verdicts are not just what the ultimate outcome of affairs would lead one to believe they should have been. We hope that you give your best according to the evidence and come to as honest a decision as possible."

Driver Testifies

The jury retired and ten minutes later returned to the courtroom to hear additional evidence from Donald Tullock, driver of the death car.

Rather weak and still bearing bandages as a result of the mishap, Tullock told the court of inquiry that the party of six were returning from Whitby after attending his sister-in-law's graduation from the Ontario Hospital. "I was travelling between 30-35 miles per hour," he said, "with Earl Teskey and George Brown in the front seat with me. It was all like a dream. I noticed the double wheels on the back of a truck. I was then not more than ten feet away. I saw no flashlight, heard no warning and there was nothing to hinder me from seeing the flashlight if it was there. I was paying attention to the road and it was misty and had been raining all the way down. I didn't see the truck at all till I saw the wheels. I did not go to sleep but I do not remember anything."

Fred Sanders, Gerrard Street E., Toronto, testified that he was driving easterly on the Provincial Highway near Morrish, four miles west of here, in a Martin transport. It was past midnight and suddenly the lights went out due to battery trouble. The truck was parked on the south side of the road and then he warned approaching traffic by means of a flashlight. The road was wet and the visibility good and witness added that there was no red reflector on the truck.

"This car in particular" told Sanders to a hushed courtroom, "came over the hill. I flagged him and apparently he did not see me. I then screamed and I had to jump out of the way from being hit myself." Witness told of the car plunging into the rear of the truck and of then making arrangements from passing motorists to convey the six injured to the local hospital.

Mrs. Flossie Tullock, his wife, who was sitting in the back seat, and who sustained a fractured jaw, stated that she knew nothing until she heard the crash. "I saw no light," she added, "nor did I hear anyone scream. The visibility was good and anyone should have seen the truck."

Donald Weese, another occupant, testified that he was sitting in the back seat of the sedan, heard the crash and knew nothing more until awakening in the hospital.

Mrs. Weese, was not present at the hearing while Earl Teskey is still confined to the hospital suffering from severe facial injuries.

Post Mortem Examination

Dr. F. W. Diamond, who made the post mortem examination of George Brown submitted his report and attributed the cause of death to hemorrhage of the brain due to lacerations.

Other witnesses heard included Chief Constable Thomas Murphy, Port Hope, J. T. George, Port Hope undertaker, Gerald Dempsey, truck driver, Carrying Place, W. L. Mitchell, Oshawa, J. H. Grant, Toronto, Morris Bickwith, Cherry Valley, E. Purvis, Provincial Motorcycle Constable, Bowmanville and Provincial Constable W. J. Carey, of Cobourg. The latter two investigated the fatality.

AUCTION SALE

CROP REPORT

Extracts from reports submitted by Agricultural Representatives issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

WESTERN ONTARIO

DUFFERIN—Although tops in many fields have been killed by frost, harvesting of the late crop of potatoes is not general, most growers realizing that a better skin and more marketable tuber is secured from the well matured crop. In spite of low live stock prices, inquiries for sires of high quality and breeding females, particularly ewe lambs, have been greater than usual.

HALTON—Early frosts have whitened the corn pretty badly and the majority of it is now ensiled. Yields, of course, are light this year. Wheat is still being sown and the showery weather of the past week should help considerably.

HURON—More than the average number of farmers have saved second cutting of alfalfa for seed, and in most cases the crop is very promising. Harvesting of this crop will be practically completed in a few days.

SOUTHERN ONTARIO

BRANT—Number of most classes of stock about normal, apparently a decrease in number of hogs. Some turkeys being shipped, price about 20c bus.

HALDIMAND—The condition of fall wheat is fair to good. Many farmers have sown their wheat and that which has sprouted is very patchy. Some reports are coming in that the wheat has started to mould and unless we receive rain very shortly, it is feared that the wheat crop may be almost a failure. The water situation in the county is acute. Wells and cisterns are dry and creeks and rivers low. Farmers without end are having to draw water for their stock or else drive the cows considerable distance to running water.

LINCOLN—Silo filling is the order of the day. Corn is shorter than average but particularly well ripened. Last of the peaches went to market last week with the exception of a few odd varieties such as lemon free and smock. Few Albertas may be held over in cold storage but orchards have been picked clean.

MIDDLESEX—Rains were general in the county during the week, though with varying degrees of precipitation in different sections. In the more favoured localities moisture went to plowing depth and will be ample for germination of early sown wheat. In other sections, however, farmers have still deferred wheat planting on account of lack of moisture. Some sections are still suffering from shortage of water for live stock. Many herds of milk cows are now practically on winter feed.

CENTRAL ONTARIO

HASTINGS—1687 white cheese were sold on the Belleville Board on Saturday at 11 1/2c. A year ago 1423 cheese were sold at 10 1/2-10c.

NORTHUMBERLAND—With the recent improvement in pasture conditions, the live stock has improved. A considerable number of farmers are carrying more than their usual quota of live stock, however, in many instances, farmers have had to sell their surplus at a low price. Apple picking is now in full swing. Nearly all the gangs have worked full time this past week. 24 carloads of apples have been shipped from Brighton during the week.

PRINCE EDWARD—The fall wheat acreage is increased by at least 25%. The earlier sown wheat is up and is a very even stand. The apple crop is considerably heavier than last year, quality and color is very good. Some growers have commenced picking McIntosh.

VICTORIA—Steers on ranches only in fair condition. Rain has improved pastures which, with cool weather, should tend to better things. Considerable wet weather. Bad for buckwheat and Red Clover harvesting. Silo filling progressing with fair yield of corn.

EASTERN ONTARIO

FRONTENAC—Pastures holding up fairly well and livestock should go into stables in good condition. A number of buyers have been in the District from Western Ontario purchasing milk cows. Large quantity of hay will be required in county during coming winter. As a large number of dairymen do not have many of their cows fresh in winter, there will not be a very great demand for grains.

GLENGARRY—Pastures excellent, live stock generally in good condition. Few hogs in district, hog population down over 60%. 1212 cheese sold on the Alexandria board Monday night at 11 1/2c.

LEEDS—Cheese on Delta and Lansdowne Boards sold at 11 1/2c on Thursday and Friday, a full cent advance over last week. Pastures and aftermath have picked up wonderfully. Bloat in cattle has been prevalent and numerous losses reported. Due to rapid growth of alfalfa and clovers. More clover and alfalfa being left for seed than usual, second cut alfalfa has an excellent seed set. Heavy frosts a week ago brought on silo filling with a rush, now about 50% completed. Late buckwheat ruined, making about a 50% crop.

LENOX AND ADDINGTON—305 white and 471 colored cheese offered, 245 refused, prices 11 1/2c and 11 1/4c. Fall wheat making excellent appearance, good conditions for preparation of seed bed and sufficient moisture.

PRESCOTT AND RUSSELL—Vanhook Hill Cheese Board, Sept. 16, 550 white cheese at 10 1/2c and 733 colored at 10 11-16c.

NORTHERN ONTARIO

KENORA—Oats, wheat and barley yielding about 25 bus. of very good quality grain.

TEMISKAMING—An occasional carload of stock is being shipped to the Toronto market and buyers are paying $15.00 to $25.00 per head for year and a half old stock. These animals for the most part will grade as stockers and feeders and it would appear that when feed is plentiful it would be better to keep these and stall feed them during the winter.

CANADIAN BIRCH A VALUABLE TIMBER

Is Most Important of Dominion's Hardwoods—Tests By Forest Products Laboratories Indicate Many Uses

Yellow birch is Canada's most important hardwood, and its properties are such that the many uses of this wood are being constantly increased through the general knowledge of these properties among the consuming public.

Not only in Canada is the status of birch improving but in the United Kingdom and the United States this wood is being brought into an increasing number of products. Always regarded in Canada as a splendid flooring material, birch is exported to the United States in large quantities for this use, and in the United Kingdom birch is being gradually introduced for flooring purposes in homes and industrial buildings. Manufacture of birch flooring in suitable dimensions and with the proper moisture content to satisfy the British trade should find in this market an outlet for a large percentage of the better grades produced.

For furniture and fixtures birch has long been used in finishes as closely resembling walnut and mahogany as possible. Of late, however, the wood is appearing in distinctive finishes, and is being sold as birch and not as an imitation of one of the woods mentioned above. In panelling, too, birch may now be seen in natural finishes, the wood selected for colour and matched for grain, presenting a beautiful appearance.

An example of the beauty of birch panelling and furniture was seen at the Central Canada Exhibition lately held in Ottawa. An exhibit prepared by the Forest Products Laboratories of the Forest Service, Department of the Interior, displayed some selected yellow birch panelling finished with wax only, over a white birch flooring. The appearance of the beautifully figured panels caused many to wonder why such a wood was not more often seen as a decorative product. Similarly a birch desk with figured veneer top and front was admired by many, who were surprised at the low cost of such a fine product compared with some imported woods.

When the wood has been treated with a preservative to which treatment birch adapts itself readily—a long active life under most severe conditions is added to the natural strength and hard-wearing qualities of the wood. Crossed birch has been used for the flooring of the wharves and piers of the St. John Harbour work now nearing completion. In addition, treated birch is used for "top pins" of telephone and telegraph poles, on which insulators are placed, for railway ties in terminals or switch sections of track where heavy traffic requires a hard-wearing tie, and other such uses.

Birch is being used in increasing quantities for automobile parts, principally for frames and steering wheels. In the United Kingdom a trial shipment of birch forwarded some time ago for automobile frames proved successful and has since been followed by several more shipments for this purpose. In Canada and the United States, Canadian birch has been one of the three or four standard woods used for automobile frames for some years.

In veneers and lumber, birch is used a great deal for box construction. Large quantities are used for radio and furniture packing, and in the type of box known as "wire-bound" or "four in one". It has also replaced elm to some extent in cheese box manufacture, usually in double-ply construction.

As cooperage stock it is used for both "slack" and "tight" barrels and kegs. For years in use for molasses puncheons and barrels shipped from the West Indies, birch is now being used for additional liquids such as vinegar, and pork in brine, and attempts are now being made to introduce it as staves and heading for beer barrels.

The promotion of new uses for Canadian birch has been advanced by the work of the Forest Products Laboratories of the Forest Service, Department of the Interior. Mechanical tests have given strength and hardness values, that are in use in many of the lumber-importing countries of the world; experimental work in air-seasoning and kiln-drying have been made available to birch producers in Canada suitable schedules to ensure the lumber reaching its proper moisture content with a minimum amount of degrade, and work on the preservative treatment of birch has made possible treatments of the wood that are at once efficient and economical. Data concerning this wood, its various treatments, and its suitability for different uses may be had at any time on application to the Forest Products Laboratories, Department of the Interior, Canada.

EMPIRE IMPORTS OF CANADA GROW

7.6 Per cent. Gain In Five Months — Foreign Off 21.5 Per Cent.

Although there was a general decline in world trade, the first five months of the present fiscal year saw imports to Canada from Empire countries increase by 7.6 per cent. over the same period in 1932, while imports from foreign countries decreased by 21.5 per cent. This information is contained in a statement issued by the Department of Trade and Commerce, in support of the argument that the Empire Trade agreements entered into a year ago have bettered relations between the countries of the Commonwealth.

The statement emphasizes that trade relations between the Mother Country and Canada were particularly improved as the increase in imports from the United Kingdom alone, during the same periods, was 12.6 per cent.

Comparative figures covering imports from foreign and Empire countries during the five months ended with August of this year, with figures for the same period last year in brackets, are as follows:

From all countries, $161,488,239 ($187,136,546) decrease 13.7 per cent.
 Empire countries, $53,701,269 ($49,903,634), increase 7.6 per cent.
 Foreign countries, $107,786,970 ($137,232,912), decrease 21.5 per cent.
 United Kingdom, $40,227,541 ($5,726,225), increase 12.6 per cent.
 United States, $88,037,731 ($109,780,542), decrease 29.8 per cent.

ROSSMOUNT

Mrs. J. C. Clunie was hostess at a party in honor of her daughter, Gladys, on the occasion of her birthday, Sept. 25th. Four tables of Progressive euchre was played in the early part of the evening, first prizes being won by Miss Addie Hurl and Lafontaine Maybee, and consolation prizes going to Miss Hazel Horner and Harvey Goheen. Dancing was enjoyed during the latter part of the evening, music being supplied by Messrs. Fred Maybee, Percy Maybee and J. C. Clunie. A dainty luncheon was served at midnight.

Mrs. Irvine Whitehead and Mrs. H. Halligan were week-end visitors at Lindsay and visited the fair while there.

Miss Margaret Clunie is spending a few days with Mrs. Gordon Lacey at Camborne.

The neighbours at Rossmount were sorry to hear that Mr. Henry Coates had the misfortune to break his arm and trust that he will have a speedy recovery.

WELCOME

Sister Of Welcome Woman Passes At Peterboro

A life-long resident of Peterboro passed away on Monday night, Sept. 25, following a short illness in the person of William George McKee. The deceased, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Andrew McKee, was in his 74th year and was born in Smith township. He was a member of St. Paul's Church.

There are left to mourn his loss, besides the sorrowing widow, one son, James A. of Chicago; one brother, Isaac of Peterboro, and two sisters, Mrs. Charles Beatty of Peterboro and Mrs. Milton Welch of Welcome.

The funeral was held on Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 27th, at 2 o'clock from the late family residence, 163 Murray Street, with interment in Little Lake cemetery. Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr officiated.

BAILIEBORO

Mr. and Mrs. O. Williamson, of Millbrook have purchased the residence owned by Mr. J. W. Moncrief on Front street and will move to their new home next month.

Mr. James Eagleson, of Orono, was a recent visitor to the village.

Messrs. Lloyd Wilson and Kelvin Barnard, of Toronto, spent the weekend of the guest of the latter's parents. Mr. Joseph Byers, of Oxbow, Sask., has purchased the home of the late Mrs. L. Byers and is now on his way from the west with Mrs. Byers to occupy his new residence.

Mr. N. McIntosh, of Cold Springs, was a visitor in the village on Sunday.

Mr. Harold Butters, of Plainville, was the guest at the home of Mrs. Watt on Sunday.

Mr. W. Howson entertained a number of his friends at his home on Friday when the evening was pleasantly spent in dancing, music, for which was furnished by Messrs. H. Moncrief and K. Kinsmen.

Rev. George A. Williams, field secretary of foreign missions in Canada, conducted the daily services on the Fraserville circuit on Sunday.

HE MAY BE OLD BUT HE HAS YOUNG IDEAS

Ninety-year-old speed-skating champion of Canada by default, for no other nonagenarian has taken up the challenge. Joseph Arsenault of Wellington, Prince Edward Island, where he was for years station master for the Canadian National Railways, wants to become an aviator. A visit from relatives who flew from New York led to Mr. Arsenault's ambition. He is now taking lessons and hopes to gain his pilot's certificate.

FIRST CANADIAN RADIUM

(Montreal Star)

Some time ago the Star noted with thankfulness the establishment of the first Canadian plant for the production of radium. An experimental shipment was brought out from the newly discovered pitchblende deposits of the Mackenzie Basin and was taken to Port Hope, Ont., for the slow, elaborate and costly process of refining. Now it is announced that the first consignment of radium "needles" to be received in Toronto for use in the treatment of cancer cases in Ontario.

This is surely news of great importance in the campaign against cancer which Ontario is waging through its newly-established Cancer Institute. The scarcity of the world's supply of radium and its almost prohibitive cost have confined its use to comparatively few hospitals and institutions and have seriously restricted the amount of research work that could be carried on with it.

The trend of total apple production in the United States has been downward since 1914; carlot shipments downward since 1932, and commercial production slightly downward since 1926.

OTHER EDITORS' OPINIONS

FIRE PREVENTION

Fire Prevention week will be observed in the United States, beginning on October 8, and while no concerted drive will be made in the Dominion at that time, most Canadian municipalities waging their campaigns in the spring, it is something to bear in mind that fires know no closed seasons. Most fires start through human carelessness and almost always big conflagrations are little ones at first. In the drive in the United States, attention is focussed on the fact that if the ordinary man exercises just a little care in connection with every activity which has to do with the control of fire, he can do his part toward wiping out one of the most devastating of economic wastes.

When one reads that the annual loss is so many millions of dollars, the figure quoted only tells part of the story. To it must be added the cost of fire insurance protection and the substantial outlay for the maintenance of fire-fighting forces. Fire insurance rates are based on fire losses. When there is heavy destruction, rates automatically increase. The only way to bring about a rate reduction is to see to it that there are fewer fires. Actuaries deal in percentages and it is the public that fashions these. Being cautious pays dividends.—Hamilton Spectator.

SHOULD DEMAND PROPER AUDIT

"The financial depression has carried down with it during the past three years a lot of municipal and corporation treasurers and has revealed the prevalence of much careless and superficial auditing," comments St. Mary's Journal-Argus. "As a matter of fact, the auditing of the books of local associations in which thousands of dollars of trust funds are concerned, is in many cases a mere formality. And frequently a deflation which has been made possible by loose auditing spells ruin to worthy people whose funds have been wasted away."

There is no doubt that the matter of enforcing a proper audit of public and community accounts should be taken up by legislators and put on a sound basis. A correspondent in last week's Journal-Argus put up a strong case for better auditing. We believe that treasurers of all organizations should be required to give a full statement, accounting for all moneys received and expended. And all treasurers should be adequately bonded to insure careful handling of funds and to protect the public."

Bowmanville experienced the same difficulty some years ago, but overcame it by appointing competent and independent auditors to go through the town's books each year. We agree that every incorporated municipality should be forced to have their books audited annually by chartered accountants and that this antiquated method of local men, who are totally unfitted, doing the work, should be abolished.

THE GIRL WHO WORKS

It has been claimed by many writers that if women could be taken out of the factories, business offices, and stores, and put back in their "proper place" in the home, that the depression would end. Men would have to be hired again, the writers argue, and naturally they would be paid higher wages than girls. As a consequence the men would be able to support themselves and also their women folks as they did in the good old days of yore—and everything would be happy ever after.

But the fact remains that millions of women are working now. It would be impossible to throw them all out of their jobs without giving men sufficient time to learn their work, so the girl workers will be with us for quite a while yet.

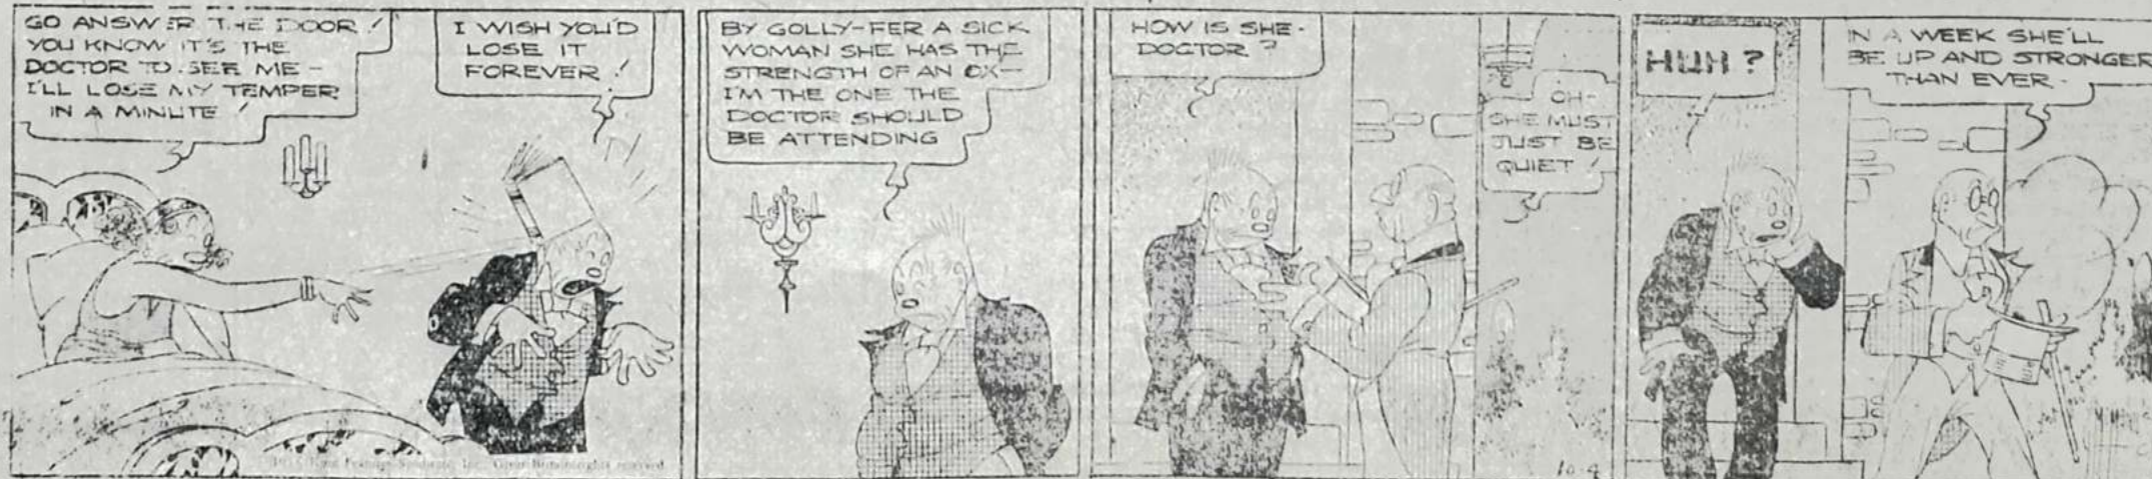

Girls who have felt it keenly that many men look down on them for stealing jobs that "rightly belong to male heads of homes" should find some consolation from the following article from Sherbrooke Record. It contains a large measure of truth and gives credit to the girl who is not merely working to fill in time before she gets married but is finding independence for herself and possibly support her family by her work.

The Record says: "God bless the girl who works! She is not too proud to earn her own living, nor ashamed to be caught at her daily task. She smiles at you from behind the desk or counter or printer's case. There is a sweet memory of her in everything she touches. She is like a brave mountaineer already far up the precipice—climbing, struggling, rejoicing. The very sight of her is an inspiration. It is an honor to know this girl, and to be worthy of her esteem."

"Lift your hat to her, young man, as she passes by. She is a queen in the realm of womanhood. She's a princess among the toilers. Her hand may be stained by dishwashing, sweeping, factory grease, or printer's ink. But it is an honest hand. It stays misfortune from the home; it supports an invalid one, maybe; it is the moving, potent shield that protects many a family from the wolf that sniffs at the door. All honor to the brave toiler! God bless the girl who works."—Lindsay Post.

HEARD ON THE STREET

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 27.

"Forget the past—except to learn by it!"

If only people would forget the mistakes that have gone and remember the glorious achievements, we'd find everybody would be a little happier.

We cannot live on the glories of the past nor the hope of the future. We must work for to-day using the experience of the past to build a better to-morrow.

There will be a re-union of the 21st Battalion at Kingston, Ont., on Saturday, Sept. 30th, 1933. Many members of the old battalion in and around Port Hope expect to go to Kingston and take part in the celebration.

Despite several heavy frosts raspberries are still being picked in Campbellford, an instance of this being the fact that Mrs. Ed Henson this week has harvested from her canes six baskets of fine berries large and luscious. This is a fine record for late fruit of this kind.

Apple men in Northumberland County have engaged over two hundred men to gather the apple crop, which started last week, and nearly fifty carloads of McIntosh Reds and Snows have been barrelled up and shipped to the English market, which has been very strong lately. It is said further shipments will be made, and the prospects are favorable for good prices to the farmers. The heavy shipments to the English market will also have a tendency to stimulate prices at home.

Belleville City Council at a regular meeting, voted to submit the question of purchasing the Belleville Arena from the Belleville Arena Company, Ltd., at the next municipal election on the first Monday in December to the qualified voters of the city. Arrangements to complete the paying off of the indebtedness could not be completed, and the citizens will have a chance to purchase the rink at a cost slightly above $30,000, which when constructed cost nearly $115,000. If the citizens vote unfavorably on the proposition, the ice plant will be removed and Belleville for the first time in its history will be without ice-skating facilities. The Council also agreed to remit the taxes and water rates in lieu of giving the children free skating hours during the season. This would effect a saving for the city in that it would not have to open the open-air-rinks for the winter.

Under the auspices of the Tennis Club of St. Paul's Church, a delightful wicker roast was held last night at the home of Miss Ruth Williams, Ridout street. About twenty-five attended and the evening was spent in games, etc.

Annual election of officers of St. Peter's Badminton Club was held at Cobourg. J. W. Sprague was elected honorary president; Parker Niles, president; Miss Glenn Sowden, vice-president; Miss Daisy Lloyd, secretary-treasurer; Cliff Boundy, games captain; Hugh Cameron and Miss Trabelle Hutton, games committee; Mrs. C. Boundy, Mrs. G. McCoubrey and Miss Phyllis Guymer, refreshment and entertainment committees.

Cobourg police and court were puzzled as to what possible use John Hart could find for a tricycle. However, he pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing it and offered no explanations of its intended use. Leniently the court allowed him to go on suspended sentence.

At a meeting of the Oshawa Police Commission, the controversy in the city between different rate taxis was finally decided when a by-law was passed fixing a schedule of rates which must be adhered to. The new schedule of rates that will become effective immediately is as follows: For the first half-mile or fraction thereof, 20 cents and for each subsequent quarter mile or fraction thereof 5 cents, this rate applying to a party of from one to four persons. The old rate was 25 cents a head to any district in the city, but some taxis cut prices on loads of more than one person. The new rates will effect a saving to the passengers on most trips when more than one person uses a cab within the city, but will be a decided increase in price on long single passenger trips.

Cariboo Gold Quartz is understood to be the latest applicant for listing privileges on the Standard Exchange at Toronto, says the Evening Telegram. Following in the wake of other B.C. offerings this is a pioneer lode gold operation in the old Cariboo placer area. The city of Vancouver has been doing the peppery work on the issue.

A hit-and-run motorist with a conscience has sent $10 to his victim, 18-year-old Rosie Munt of Lindsay, and has promised to send more later. Writing an unsigned letter, dated from Oakwood, the motorist claimed that he did not know the girl had been badly hurt when struck by his car, and he enclosed $10 to help pay the doctor, and promised to send more. The girl was injured last week.

In traffic court, at Peterboro, Thomas McGill, of Kingston, was fined $20 and costs for speeding at 65 miles an hour. For the same offence, but not as great a speed, Arthur Moore, Port Hope, was fined $7.50 and $3.75 costs. Gerald Dunford was fined $4 and $3.75 costs for not having proper lights on his truck, and $2 and $3.75 costs for not having a proper muffler on the vehicle.

Charged with criminal negligence, the case against Donald Tullock, Nanawau, was adjourned until October 30th. It is claimed that he was the driver of the car which collided with a truck west of here on September 21st, when George Brown, Lonsdale, received injuries which resulted in his death.

Henry Graham, a well-known farmer of Minden, was unfortunate enough to lose his barn by fire, together with contents. Mr. Graham lived on what is known as the old Mortimer farm.

A Wild Tale! Willie went with his father to see a young colt. He patted its head and seemed delighted with the animal in general until its owner cautioned him to be careful that the colt did not turn about and kick him.

Later, while telling mother about the colt, Willie said, "I like him pretty well. He's very tame in front—but he's awful wild behind!" FRIDAY, SEPT. 29.

And here's what the Orono News says about fast time.—"Of the several faces, the capital one is daylight saving, and it doesn't save energy or prolong life. This week-end will see its end, thanks to the season, and it's one nuisance. Better it never come back."

Farmers are now busy with their fall plowing. The tomato crops have been good in some parts, while in others it is reported that the recent frosty nights spoiled the crops.

Norman Redpath has taken a contract, it is stated to build a house for Ontario Orchards, to replace one destroyed by fire.

The canning factory at Grafton is working two days a week only, owing to the lack of tomatoes.

At Bowmanville Monday evening, the Rebekah Lodge there entertained members from district visiting Lodges, following which, a regular lodge session was held. Mrs. E. B. Freeman, Port Hope, District Deputy President of District No. 18 and others from town, attended the affair.

It is said that Northumberland farmers are now organizing a club for the purpose of presenting a petition to the Government requesting authority be given owners of land where pheasants abound to collect a nominal fee from hunters shooting these birds on protected property. The farmers contend they feed and look after pheasants during the year, but are not deriving one cent for their work, whereas hunters who have, nothing to do with raising them invade the farms and destroy the game.

The hopes of the citizens of Oshawa for a readjustment of their electric rates, so as to provide for a more equitable scale of charges and possible elimination of the service charge, are likely to be realized in the near future. Sometime ago, the Oshawa Public Utilities Commission made representations to the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario for a new schedule of rates for domestic consumers of power, but after the lapse of some weeks, no response had come from the provincial body. On the request being reiterated, however, a promise was given that a new schedule would be forthcoming, and that the matter was under consideration.

We understand, says the Orono News, there are 13 vacancies in the Senate. Well, we hope the government of the country will let nature take its way in the matter of abolition of this body, antiquated seat holders at $4,000 per year. Just let the vacancies stand as they are at present. There will be no special suffering if they are not filled for some time to come, and just notice what will be saved by so doing. Just allow nature to take its course and the whole body will pass out, unwept, unhonored and unused.

POLICE SEEKING FRAUD SALESMAN

R. J. Snazel Believed To Have Worked Coupon Sale In Port Hope

Police and a score of Peterboro merchants are keen to come up with a smooth-looking young man who styles himself R. J. Snazel, of Detroit. Snazel went to Peterboro about three weeks ago and sold many merchants on a scheme to increase their sales. It was in connection with a "Prosperity Day" program that has been successful elsewhere.

Snazel secured three dollars from each merchant, cashed several bogus cheques, ran up a printing bill, lived a ball, and hurriedly left the city early one morning last week with about $200 in funds and without paying his board bill, the advertising or informing the merchants.

A warrant for his arrest on several charges has been sworn out. Snazel is believed to be the same party who worked a coupon sale in Port Hope last July.

PRETTY WEDDING IS SOLEMNIZED

Jessie Forrest Becomes Bride Of Harold E. Martin, Port Hope

Ferns, palms and pink daisy-anthemiums graced Knox College chapel, Toronto, Wednesday afternoon for the marriage of Jessie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Forrest, to Mr. Harold Edward Martin, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold E. Martin of Port Hope. Rev. J. A. Mustard performed the ceremony and Mr. W. R. Young presided at the organ. During the signing of the register Mr. Robert Williams sang "My World."

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a graceful gown of ivory suede lace on long simple lines, tight sleeves forming a point over the hand with the fan shaped train falling from the waist. Her ivory tulle veil fell from a cap of ivory tucked tulle with clusters of orange blossoms at each side. Johanna Hill roses and lily of the valley intermingled with white heather sent from the gardens of the bride's aunt in Scotland formed her bouquet.

Miss Mary Forrest was her sister's maid of honor, wearing a charming gown of powder blue georgette with long flaring skirt. A short velvet cape and crushed girdle of deeper blue was worn on the dress, the circle forming a soft bow at the back with a small velvet beret and matching satin shoes. She carried Talisman roses.

Bridesmaids were Miss Marion Martin, sister of the groom and Miss Kathleen Pack. Their gowns were fashioned similarly to that of the maid of honor but were made of pink chiffon and deeper pink velvet with matching berets and slippers. Their bouquets were butterfly roses and carnations. All three attendants wore rhinestone pendants, gifts of the bride.

The groom was attended by Mr. Edward W. Simpson and the ushers were Mr. A. Frank Oliver of Sarnia, brother-in-law of the groom and Mr. Barclay G. Johnston.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents where Mr. and Mrs. Forrest received with the bride and groom, Mrs. Forrest wearing a gown of tinted gray angora skin lace. She wore a small black velvet hat and silver fox fur and carried Johanna Hill roses. Mr. and Mrs. Martin also received, the latter wearing a gown of black satin with black velvet belt and carried Talisman roses.

Later the couple left for a trip to the States, the bride travelling in a brown suede cloth coat with large mink collar, small brown felt hat and matching accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Martin, on their return, will reside in Toronto.

CARGO OF COAL UNLOADED HERE

Arriving at Port Hope Harbour late Wednesday afternoon, the coal-carrier, S.S. Glenelg, unloaded eight hundred tons of coal consigned to the Port Hope Sanitary Manufacturing Company. The steamer, equipped with the most modern handling machinery unloaded the entire cargo in slightly over two hours and cleared harbour at 9 p.m. for Oswego. Another shipment of coal is expected in November.

WRITES LETTER AND WINS RADIO PRIZE

Last Friday evening, an announcement was made over Radio Station CFRE, Toronto, to the effect that a prize would be awarded to the person sending in the best letter, describing the program and the reception of the new Wurlitzer organ, especially adapted for radio use. Announcement was made by that station at 10.30 o'clock last evening, that Murray Gibson, Augusta Street, of the firm of Thomas Long & Son, was chosen as the successful one. Congratulations were extended and Mr. Gibson will now receive a handsome portable Rogers radio.

LOCAL YOUTH FRACTURES ARM

Playing at his home, Ward Street, Milton Rowden, aged 13, fell against a pile of lumber and sustained a fracture of the right arm at the wrist. He was removed to the Hospital where the fracture was reduced by Dr. F. W. Diamond. Later, the boy was removed to his home.

BETTER PRICE FOR APPLES

Canadian Apples Find Ready Sale On British Market

Prices better than average this season for apples from this central section of the province, now pouring into the British Isles in a steady stream of barrels, is forecast by a member of the Canadian Commissioner's office on his return from a tour of inspection at Southampton, Liverpool and Glasgow markets, according to a London despatch.

"The outlook is especially promising for red dessert apples," the member is quoted as saying. "First arrival of Ontario Wealthies are in excellent condition, fetching as much as six dollars per barrel." This is due mainly to the dearth of colored fruit. Owing to the favorable rate, exchange prices for good quality apples between now and Christmas will be well above last season's return, it is reported. As the NRA code has almost closed the English market to American apples, Ontario will benefit, but 10,000 boxes of Australian apples, selling at give-away prices must first be cleared, stated the despatch.

PROPOSE JOBLESS BUILD BRIDGE TO DESERONTO

A bridge to link Prince Edward County with Deseronto as a relief measure was suggested to Premier Henry by a deputation representing eastern Ontario counties. The Premier pointed out that the construction would be a matter for the municipalities concerned to include in their relief programs.

While no plans or estimates have been made for the bridge, it was suggested that it would cross Forester's Island over the Bay of Quinte. In the deputation were H. S. Colliver, M.P. P., Prince Edward Island; W. E. Tumman, M.P., South Hastings; J. A. Weese, M.P., Prince Edward and Lennox; J. F. Hill, M.P.P., East Hastings, and D. E. Medcalf, reeve of Deseronto.

BLAZE SUBDUED AT CITY DAIRY

Early Morning Outbreak Causes Damage To Extent Of $100.00

(From Saturday's Daily) At three o'clock this morning, fire broke out in a second-storey room at the Port Hope City Dairy, corner John and Augusta streets and the blaze was extinguished by the Port Hope Fire Brigade. D. C. Murray, the proprietor, estimates the damage in the vicinity of $100.00.

The fire broke out in a small room, used for storage and was discovered by Thomas Hall, an employee, who was sleeping in the next room. He was awakened by the smell of smoke and at once battled his way to the scene of the blaze. Dense clouds of smoke poured from the room and the alarm was immediately turned in. The local firemen responded and a line of hose was used.

The flames burned a hole in the wall and damaged the pasturing. The origin is unknown.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. and Mrs. George Nelson wish to extend their sincere thanks to the members of the Bankers Softball Club and the local Girls' Team for the benefit game arranged for their son, who recently underwent an operation at the local hospital. GAS PURCHASE LEADS TO COURT

James Waldie, Roseneath, Is Given Suspended Sentence At Cobourg

James Waldie, a Roseneath fire-her, was placed on suspended sentence when he appeared in Cobourg Police Court charged with obtaining by false pretenses, the sum of $110 from the Government in gas tax rebate, by falsely stating that he had bought 1,841 gallons of gas from a Roseneath garage.

MUNICIPAL WOOD PILE AT WHITBY

The Town Council at Whitby has decided to establish a municipal wood pile in the town yard and all men on relief who apply for fuel this winter, beginning right away, will have to cut it. Only in cases where a member of a family is not available either through infirmity or otherwise to cut wood will an exception be made. Those who are able to cut wood will be required to cut it for those who are not. It is also announced that transients who are the guests of the town at nights will have to do a little sawing before they get a meal ticket from the chief constable.

BEARDED MAN IN CAST-IRON CASKET

Gravediggers Come Across Cast-Iron Casket In Oshawa Cemetery

The discovery of a cast-iron casket, fitted with a plate-glass window, and containing a bearded corpse, has been made in an older section of the Union cemetery at Oshawa. Workmen digging a grave in the section formerly known as the Presbyterian burying ground, were surprised when their picks rang on the cast-iron surface. Further digging revealed the casket.

Because iron caskets are so rare, undertakers cleaned it and discovered a sliding section in the top that revealed the plate-glass window. Through the window could be seen the bearded face of the corpse still intact. The casket is of grey cast-iron with the lid fastened down with set screws.

It is estimated that the burial of the casket took place about 55 years ago, and that it was shipped from the southern section of the United States. The casket has been re-laced and the grave filled in.

OBITUARY

LATE PATRICK WALSH

Patrick Walsh, born in the County of Antrim, Ireland, and for fifty years a resident of this district, passed away Sunday afternoon at four-thirty o'clock at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Joseph Cook, Croft Street. Deceased was in his 79th year. He had been seriously ill for five weeks.

Coming from Ireland, the late Mr. Walsh settled in Cobourg, where he resided until six years ago when he came to Port Hope to live with his daughter. For many years he was employed at Crossen's Car Works and is well known in Cobourg. He was a member of St. Michael's R.C. Church and the Holy Name Society.

He is survived by two sons, Arthur and Patrick, Toronto, four daughters, Mrs. R. Wilson and Mrs. C. Enright, of Toronto, Mrs. J. Jones, Cobourg, Mrs. Joseph Cook, Port Hope. His wife, whom he married fifty-eight years ago, also survives, as well as fifteen grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

The funeral will leave the residence of his son-in-law, Joseph Cook, Croft Street, Tuesday morning at 8.45 o'clock and proceed to St. Mary's Church for Requiem Mass, interment at St. Michael's Cemetery, Cobourg.

We are often prophets to others, only because we are our own historians.—Mad. Swetchine.

HEARD ON THE STREET

MONDAY, OCT. 2.

Good morning! How do you like the change?

Port-Hope went on Standard Time Saturday at midnight and the change seems to be welcome.

Everyone was on deck bright and early this morning, apparently refreshed after that extra hour of sleep which was lost last May.

Miss Ethel Kerman will be the speaker at to-night's meeting of the United Church Young Peoples' Meeting, which will be under the Christian Fellowship Department. All young people are asked to bring canned goods for the relief car going to the West.

Charles Goodman, Dale, discovered a mammoth puffball at Grafton yesterday and it measured fifty-two inches in circumference.

A pair of lady's gloves were found in the local Post Office on Saturday and may be obtained on application at this office.

Mrs. H. Filion, Mathewson's Apartments, underwent an operation for appendicitis at the local hospital over the week-end and is making favourable progress.

When is Sunday afternoon on Tuesday evening? To-morrow at the Capitol, and if you are a theatregoer don't overlook the fact that the program changes on Tuesday and Thursday, instead of Wednesday and Friday, this week. For particulars, see the theatre advertisement.

The regular meeting of the Town Council will be held at the Town Hall to-night at 7:30 o'clock.

Under the auspices of the Gleasons Society of the Port Hope United Church, a chicken pie supper will be served to-morrow evening from 4 until 7 o'clock. The menu is attractive and a large crowd is expected.

'Treasure Night' will again be observed at the Capitol Theatre this evening when ten pieces of walnut furniture will be given away to lucky patrons. This is the last treasure night for awhile.

The annual field day of the Ladies Section of the Port Hope Golf and Country Club will be held on Tuesday, October 3rd, commencing at 10 a.m. Afternoon tea will be served at four o'clock and all visitors will be made welcome.

The action of George E. Caldwell in firing at a burglar who entered his house early Sunday morning is to be commended and is apt to put a stop to further acts of this kind.

Hunting rabbits in Peck's woods, H. Johnston, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Johnston, corner Ellen and Hope Street, was accidentally shot in the lower part of the body but his condition is not serious.

The annual donation party will be held at the Children's Shelter to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock to which the public are invited. Rev. Dr. Palmer will give an address and there will be a program of music and addresses will follow. The committee in charge will be glad to receive contributions of vegetables, groceries, clothing, money, etc.

Stocks were irregular on Vancouver Stock Exchange Saturday, some losing ground and others moving higher. Cariboo Gold, leader of the market, jumped 15 cents over its opening to a high of $3.85 and closed at $3.90 bid.

They Have Their Fun
Two little boys were talking. One said to the other: "Arn't ants funny? They work and work and never play."
"Oh, I don't know about that," replied the other. "Every time I go on a picnic they are there."

TUESDAY, OCT. 3.

Did you hear the game?

Business was of secondary importance this afternoon as baseball fans gathered around loudspeakers to hear the broadcast of the World Series game.

The first two games, to-day and Wednesday, will be played at the Polo Grounds, N.Y., and the following three games, Thursday, Friday and Saturday—at the Washington Ball

Park. Should sixth and seventh games be necessary, the teams will return to New York. Each day's broadcast will begin at 1.15 o'clock.

C. Francey, G. Taylor and H. Rosser left yesterday morning for points west with Florida as the ultimate destination. Last seen, the trio were perched on top of a C.N.R. Westbound freight.

A minor motor accident occurred at the corner of Molson Street and Telephone Road about five o'clock last night when a car driven by George Austin, Brown Street, and a vehicle in charge of Rev. J. V. McAuley, Ennismore, figured in a collision. Both cars were only slightly damaged and none of the occupants were injured.

Miss Janet Baillie presided at the regular weekly meeting of the Baptist Young People last night while the topic, 'Should All Christians Be Church People' was given by Carrie Bennett. Miss Marguerite Robinson rendered a vocal solo, Mrs. J. Mulhall gave a reading and William Brown read the Scripture lesson. The society will hold a Hallowe'en party on October 30th when it is expected that the members of the Park Street Group, Peterboro, will be the guests. The Annual Fall Rally of the B.Y.P.U. of the Peterboro Association will be held in Peterboro Thanksgiving Day.

About thirty attended the regular meeting of the Young Peoples Society of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church last night and an enthusiastic meeting was held with the President, Murray Gibson, presiding. Committees were formed and plans for the year's work were discussed.

The Ontario College of Art Summer School, situated at the outskirts of Port Hope, has closed for the season. J. W. Beatty, R.C.A., was in charge of the work here.

At the sale of stock, implements, furniture, etc., of the late William Best in Ops Township, the binder sold for $5 more than the original price and the cultivator also brought a higher price. Three pieces of furniture almost doubled the price originally paid by Mr. Best.

Failing to appear in Police Court on a charge of unlawfully having liquor, Roy Thomson, Seymour Township, was fined $100 and costs or three months. The charge followed a raid by Provincial Constable Wm. McBryan, of Brighton, and Constable George Hardy, of Campbellford, on Thomson's home on Sept. 24. Thomson had been refused a home-brew permit.

Appearing in Cobourg police court on a charge of obtaining by false pretenses an overcoat, $1.50 in cash and seven gallons of gas, Duncan Fletcher, of Oshawa, was remanded for two weeks. T. F. Hall, K.C., counsel for Fletcher, informed the court that his client was willing to make restitution, stating that the coat had been given to him to be cleaned and pressed and that it had been later lost.

Harold Vrooman made only one mistake. He forgot to pull down the blinds. In Simcoe Police Court Vrooman, a rooming-house proprietor, was sentenced to a two-month jail term for keeping liquor for sale. Provincial Police officers told the court that they stood outside a window and watched a guest drain a glass of beer and then tender a bill to the accused. Seized in the raid were twenty-three quarts of ale and a bottle of gin.

Stocks failed to hold gains made on Saturday, and prices fell throughout both sessions on the Vancouver Stock Exchange Monday. Bralorne Gold sold at $11.85 this morning, but dropped down to sell at $11.50 in the afternoon, and at the close was quoted at $11.30 bid. Cariboo lost 20c at $3.70, and Reno Gold closed at $1.01, off 6c.

The Oshawa Chamber of Commerce, through its Harbor Development Committee, has petitioned the Minister of Public Works to permit further improvements being carried out at the harbor this fall. Earlier in the year the Federal Government voted $35,000 for developments at Oshawa, and of this amount $5,000 is still unexpended. It is suggested that this unused balance be applied to dredging operations, to be undertaken continuous with what work is now under way.

MARVIN NELSON IS SWIM VICTOR

'Iowa Kid' Wins Fifteen Mile Swim At Chicago On Sunday

Plowing through 15 miles of chilly Lake Michigan waters in less than seven and one-half hours Marvin Nelson, the "Iowa Kid," Sunday added the William Randolph Hearst marathon swim to his previous successes in Toronto marathons.

The finishing order looked like a scroll of honor for Canadian National Exhibition swimmers that have gone before.

After the Fort Dodge "Seal," winner at Toronto in 1930 and again this year, splashed home a winner by two big miles, George Bladgen of Memphis, Tenn., 1931 Toronto victor, came in to take second money. Then came Bill Goll, the singing New Yorker, who was third in the Lake Ontario splash of 1931, second in '31, fifth in '32 and again second in this year's swimathon.

First Canadian to finish from out of the field of more than 200 who started at nine o'clock Sunday morning was Dan Demrick of Windsor, Ont.

Texas' powerful stroking Nelson carved through the low-temperature water in 7 hours 22 minutes 24 3-5 seconds, a world's record for the distance. He swam the entire route without bathing suit or trunks and after reaching the finishing line remained in the water until a bathing suit could be tossed to him.

His triumph brought him the $5,000 first prize. Bladgen's splendid effort won him $2,500, with Goll receiving $1,000. Bladgen's time was 7 hours, 53 minutes 13 seconds.

Darkness had settled over the lake when Goll pulled himself out of the water to finish in 8 hours 29 minutes 37 2-5 seconds.

Miss Dorothy Nalevaikis of Glen Cove, N.Y., was the first woman to finish and received the $1,000 prize offered for that feat.

O. HEZZELWOOD ESTATE $127,125

Life Interest Is Provided For Widow Of Former Oshawa Man

The late Oliver Hezzelwood, formerly prominent citizen of Oshawa and executive of General Motors of Canada, Limited, left an estate valued at $127,285, it was learned, when his widow, Mrs. Letitia Hezzelwood, and the Toronto General Trusts Corporation made application for grant of letters probate of the will.

The testator provided for a life interest in the estate for his wife, and following the death of Mrs. Hezzelwood, the estate is to be distributed among his daughters, Mrs. Helen Clark, and a number of nieces and nephews. Mr. Hezzelwood died in Toronto on August 3.

COBOURG BOY FOUND AT DOCKS

Bobbie Wilson Wandered From Home, Accompanied By Dog

"Bobbie," four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Wilson, Bagot street, Cobourg, caused his parents real anxiety when he strayed away from home, accompanied by his dog. When he was found missing, his parents made an extensive search for him and were assisted by neighbors. It was believed that he had made his way to the ferry dock and searchers feared that he had perhaps fallen in the harbor.

The little chap, however, was found safe and sound by Jack Mitchell. Mitchell was driving past the ferry moorings when he noticed a youngster and a dog sitting on the pier, gazing pensively over the water. He put them in his car and took them home, there to learn for the first time that his parents had been searching all over for him.

PIANO RECITAL WELL ENJOYED

Frederick Skitch Scores Success In Brilliant Recital Here

A most enthusiastic audience greeted Frederick Skitch on Thursday evening in St. Mark's Parish Hall when he played a brilliant program of piano music and scored another of his customary artistic successes.

The assisting artist was Margaret Dickson, coloratura soprano and one of the celebrated 'Madrigal Singers' of Peterboro, who was accompanied by Mrs. Agnes Logan Green, an accomplished pianist also of Peterboro.

The piano selections ranged from a partita by Bach to 'Gold Fish' by Debussy and included compositions from the classic, Modern and Romantic Schools of Music.

Since his professional debut last season, Mr. Skitch has made rapid strides, as shown by the dazzling technique of the Chopin numbers and the additional sonority of tone gained in the Beethoven Sonata. Clarity of phrasing and beauty of expression distinguished this youthful artist's playing and lifted it above that of the average piano recital.

Miss Dickson sang two groups of songs, including a brilliant operatic aria and after many recalls received with a captivating encore, Villanelle by de Aquia.

Program notes done by Jean Dickson, Port Hope, supplied brief, interesting comments on numbers chosen.

SOUTH MONAGHAN FAIR IS SUCCESS

E. A. Summers, Port Hope, Was In Charge Of Centreville Fair

The first School Fair of the township of South Monaghan was held at Centreville and proved an unqualified success. The day was ideal and the gathering large. E. A. Summers, of Port Hope, the agricultural representative, had charge of the fair.

The interior exhibits were held in the municipal building. There was a very fine collection of grain, fruit, vegetables, and handicraft work. The exhibit of lambs, calves and colts was not large. One of the most interesting features of the fair was the school parade. In massed formation, with the colors of their schools adorning their persons the schools of the township paraded in the ring, headed by their banners and teachers, and went through marching exercises and physical culture.

The group singing attracted much attention and interest and received hearty applause. The winners in their order were: No. 2 school, 1st, No. 5, 2nd, and No. 1, 3rd.

There was also competition in impromptu speaking, recitations and Mouth-organ music. The special feature in the forenoon were the foot races. Mr. Summers was delighted with the attendance, exhibits and interest manifested in this, the first School Fair in South Monaghan.

Program notes done by Jean Dickson, Port Hope, supplied brief, interesting comments on numbers chosen.

It was also decided that Dorothy Davidson, Cecilia Bennett and Mervyn Lawson be delegates to the A.Y.P.A. Conference to be held in Toronto from October 19th to 22nd. The program was brought to a conclusion with refreshments and dancing. Anyone wishing to join the organization will be made welcome.

Man Should Profit By The One Day Rest Provided Each Week

The Orono News correspondent from Pontypool mentions what he saw on the way to a certain place on Sunday—several people at work, some painting their premises, a number at their farm work, and so on. Well, outside of all religious feeling on this line of Sunday work, what do those people gain by so doing. Better to go and lie down in the shade and give a little thought to the matter so far as a day of rest is concerned, both for man and beast. There is nothing gained by such work for the things of this world as to go beyond the six days which is the allotted time. And here is an article which would be a good idea for all of us to ponder over, religious and irreligious alike: "It is just beginning to dawn upon some people that the world in its mad scramble for material things has not made that study of the benefits of the spiritual world which is warranted. . . It is as foolish to assume that there is no more progress possible in the spiritual and religious world as it is to suppose that no more mechanical inventions will be made, or no new facts about the universe uncovered." Here is something to think about, especially for church-going people.

LARGE CROWDS
ATTEND 1933
ROTARY FAIR

Port Hoppers, With Exception Of One, Win Major Prizes

With large crowds in attendance, the 1933 Rotary Carnival was staged in the Armouries here last night and from 7.30 until after midnight, there was not a dull moment. Members of the club in charge of affairs state that the crowd was as large as previous years and the proceeds, although not definitely known yet, will reach a substantial figure.

The Rotarians are to be congratulated on the success of the Fair and the proceeds are to be spent as usual right in Port Hope in the interests of under-privileged children. The Club desires to publicly thank all who contributed towards the success of the event.

The various booths, with none over ten cents, were well patronized. Probably the most interesting booth was the 'mouse game' and those in charge were kept busy handling the customers. The bingo game, two wheels, refreshment booth, coin game and the baseball-throwing were also well patronized.

At the north end of the Armouries a large space was roped off for dancing and old time and modern dancing was enjoyed, with music being supplied by E. Brandwood's capable orchestra. Giordmaine, the magician, was present with his bag of tricks and delighted the audience.

The vast crowd packed the entire floor space and everyone seemed to have an enjoyable evening. The prizes, all useful, consisted of groceries, hams, bacon, sugar, flour, silverware, etc. A fine spirit was shown when members of the Lions Club, local service organization, turned out and helped the Rotarians.

Chief interest centred in the draw for the eight major prizes and the draw was made shortly before twelve o'clock by Mayor W. J. Crowhurst. All the prize-winners were Port Hoppers, with the exception of one.

The winners were,—
Westinghouse Electric Refrigerator,—Percy Bridges, Ticket No. 6639.
Walnut Cedar Chest and Contents —Mrs. Friend, Sherbourne Street, Ticket No. 7003.

Silver Service, four parts and tray —William Thomas, Ticket No. 2086.

IN ODDFELLOWS PAST 50 YEARS

A record, probably unequalled in Canada, is that of W. J. Jeffries, veteran Bowmanville business man, who received his 50-year pin as an Oddfellow from the Grand Secretary of the order, Wm. Brooks, of Toronto, Friday night.

Mr. Jeffries' record, as presented before a largely attended meeting of the Florence Nightingale Lodge, includes missing only five meetings out of a total of 2,600 meetings. He has missed only four Oddfellow funerals in that time, has drawn only one week of sick benefits and has been on the degree team of the lodge for 35 consecutive years.

Masonic Order and Clergy Take Part In Impressive Ceremony

The corner-stone of St. Mark's Anglican Church at Bonarlaw was laid Tuesday in an impressive ceremony by the Masonic Order and clergy from the surrounding district. Right Wor. Bro. W. S. Herrington, K.C., of Napanee, Past Grand Master, was the officiating Mason, assisted by members of the Grand Lodge throughout the Province. Ven. Archdeacon Blagrove, of Peterboro, addressed the gathering, there being more than one thousand in attendance. The church is of solid stone on old architectural lines and will fill a long-felt want in that community. T. Webb, 87, and one of the oldest members in the parish, was an active participant in the services. The rectorship of the parish is in the hands of Canon G. W. Swayne.

The Grand Lodge Officers and clergy taking part were: Director of Ceremonies, Rt. Wor. C. H. Buskard, Deloro; Grand Pursuivant-P.M., W. L. Smith, Madoc; Grand Stewards, Very Wor. J. Fennell, Napanee; Wor. Bro. R. T. Dulmage, Stirling. Grand Superintendent of Works, W.M. George Aylesworth, Madoc; Grand Secretary, W. J. Attig, Hamilton; Grand Chaplain, Rev. A. L. Geen, Belleville. Past Masters bearing emblems: Cornucopia of Corn, W. A. Sanderson, Marmora; Ewer of Wine, Frank Smith, Madoc; Ewer of Oil, T. W. Solmes, Stirling; Grand Junior Wardens with Plumb-Rule, George West, Madoc. Grand Senior Warden with Level, J. O. Herity, Belleville. District Deputy Grand Master, J. Clifford Cooper, Picton. Deputy Grand Master, J. W. Barlow, Belleville. Most Worshipful Grand Master, W. S. Herrington, Napanee.

Clergy of the Church of England in attendance with Rev. Canon G. W. Swayne, rector of the parish, were Ven. Archdeacon Blagrove of Peterboro; Rural Dean Caldwell of Marmora; Rural Dean Hall, Merrickville; Rev. G. Hope Swayne, Tweed; Rev. B. F. Beazer, Roslin; Rev. A. F. McConnell, Stirling; Rev. E. W. G. Worrall, Havelock; Rev. A. Pepper, Shannonville, and Rev. G. G. Wright, Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne and Mrs. Gerald Graham, of Belleville.

A TROPICAL CAT WITH SUICIDAL TENDENCIES

The crew of the Canadian National Steamships freighter "Cavalier" has tried repeatedly to keep a Jamaican cat as the ship's mascot, but in vain, for in every case pussy has mysteriously disappeared. The latest tabby, named "Thomasina," is believed to have jumped overboard in mid-ocean. Members of the crew have come to the conclusion that Jamaican cats have suicidal tendencies and advance as one reason that no matter how well a cat from Jamaica is treated on board, it remains thin and morbid.

TOMMY LOUGHRAN DEFEATS SHARKEY

The revenge that Tommy Loughran has lived for through four troublesome years came sweetly to him last night as he jabbed out a 15-round decision over fading Jack Sharkey, at Philadelphia, and even managed to batter to the floor the man who knocked him out in three rounds in 1929.

Before a home crowd of no more than 10,000 making up what it lacked in number by lusty vocal effort, the fleet Philadelphia courageously stood up under a terrific bombardment, boxed his way out of one trying after another, and then stunned the gathering by dropping Sharkey to his knees in the tenth with a right hand smash to the chin.

A.F. & A.M.

Cedar Lodge, A.F. & A.M., No. 270 G.R.C., Oshawa, opened its activities for Fall and Winter seasons by celebrating Canadian Night. The guests of the evening were the officers of the Durham Regiment. These officers made this visit as a tribute to their former commanding officer, Lt.-Col. P. H. Jobb, the Worshipful Master of Cedar Lodge. Unfortunately, Col. Jobb was unable to be present on account of illness so Wor. Bro. F. L. Prosser acted for him and welcomed the distinguished guests from the adjoining County. Rt. Wor. Bro. W. J. Youden, the newly elected D.G.M. for Ontario District journeyed from Cobourg accompanied by several Cobourg brethren to be present at the meeting. Another distinguished visitor was Rt. Wor. Bro. W. F. Rickard of Newcastle, the Warden of the United Counties of Durham and Northumberland.

After the guests had been received, the acting W.M. asked the Officers of the Lodge to vacate their chairs and called upon Rt. Wor. Bro. G. C. Bonnycastle to assume the W.M.'s chair, appoint his officers and carry on with the work of the evening. The various chairs were occupied by the following brethren:

W.M., Rt. Wor. Bro. Major G. C. Bonnycastle; I.P.M., Wor. Bro. Major W. F. McMahon; S.W., Bro. Lt.-Col. W. J. Hoar; J.W., Bro. Major E. S. Ferguson; C.D., Bro. Capt. Hall; J. D., Bro. Major A. H. Bounsal; I.G., Bro. Capt. J. C. Gamey; S.S., Bro. Capt. J. A. V. Fraser.

The military men conferred the degree of the evening with military precision and in a creditable manner, the acting W.M. being assisted by Wor. Bro. Col. Lorne T. McLaughlin, C.M.G., D.S.O. On completion of the degree work, Wor. Bro. Prosser complimented the Durham Officers on their excellent work and then proceeded to close the lodge, requesting that all present find their way to the banquet hall.

SHAREHOLDERS MEETING HELD

Promising Reports On Monarch
Great Bear Syndicate Heard
At Gathering Here

That the property of the Monarch Great Bear Syndicate, Limited, in the Great Bear Lake district, is one of the most promising properties in that area, was the opinion expressed by Eric V. Oag, Vice-President of the Company in addressing a meeting of local shareholders at the Queen's Hotel Thursday evening. The meeting was largely attended and enthusiastic, many questions being answered and angles of the development explained by Mr. Oag.

The feature of the meeting was the announcement of the most recent assay of ore from the company's property which was just completed yesterday showing deposits with a per ton value of $12.60 in gold and $1.70 in silver.

Mr. Oag's remarks were particularly interesting and expressed a confidence that speaks well for the future success of the mine. He pointed out that owing to the extreme cold weather work on the property would have to be discontinued at the end of November until the first of March.

Questioned regarding the installation of a mining plant on property he told meeting that it was hoped to have a mining plant at the end of steel ready to be taken into the property as soon as the break-up next Spring.

Asked regarding transportation, a factor that has proven an obstacle to the pioneer companies in the Great Bear district, Mr. Oag was of the opinion that by next year the problem will have been completely settled and the freight rate greatly reduced.

Col. Burton, also an officer of the company, outlined the period leading up to the formation of the original syndicate and expressed complete confidence in the project. The chairman for the evening was Harold Batty, of Port Hope, a director of the Company.

Two short whistles constitute the engineers' salute, and mean, "I get you" or "Thank you." One long and three short blasts tell the rear flagman or a brakeman to take his flag in the daytime, or his lantern at night, and walk back along the track to warn the train following that it must not proceed. When the first train is ready to go, four or five blasts of medium duration say, "All aboard to the man out back."

EXCHANGE MADE BY MINISTERS

Columbus And Warkworth Charges Are Involved In Exchange

At a meeting of the executive of the Oshawa Presbytery of the United Church, sanction was given to an exchange of pastoral charges, involving the Columbus charge in the Presbytery and that of Warkworth, in the Cobourg Presbytery. By this exchange, Rev. Edwin Smith, Ph.D., of Warkworth, will become minister of the Columbus and Kedron charges, while Rev. Dr. J. R. Cooper, of Columbus, will take over the charge at Warkworth. The presbytery executive endorsed the call to the Rev. D. Smith from Columbus and Kedron, and forwarded it to the settlement committee of the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church. The exchange will probably become effective some time in October.

SEPT. MEETING OF LOCAL I.O.D.E.

Tag Day To Be Held On October
14th—Contest And Lecture
Here

Mrs. M. S. Hawkins, Regent of the Colonel Arthur William Chapter, I. O.D.E. presided at the September meeting of the organization and reports were given by the Secretary, Miss Audrie Brown and the treasurer, Mrs. L. B. Randall.

The Chapter will hold a Tag Day on Saturday, October 14th, when Mrs. F. E. Sculthorpe will be the convener. Captains were appointed to look after the taggers and assist Mrs. Sculthorpe.

Mrs. M. S. Hawkins gave a report on the home-baking contest and lecture which will be held in the Town Hall on Thursday, November 9th by the Lake of the Woods Milling Co., makers of Five Roses Flour. The affair is being sponsored by the local Chapter.

Mrs. Hawkins, Mrs. H. E. Haultain, Mrs. J. T. Daley and Miss Edith White are members of the committee in charge of arrangements for an open meeting to be held at the home of the Regent within a short time, and they will be assisted by Miss Ferguson's group.

The meeting closed by singing 'God Save the King.'

FUNERAL HERE MONDAY LATE D. B. HENDERSON

The funeral was held from St. Mark's Church, King Street on Monday afternoon at three o'clock, of the late David B. Henderson, resident of Port Hope for several years who passed away on Saturday. Interment was made at St. John's Cemetery and the service was in charge of Rev. Bruce Jennings and Rev. W. A. Phippen. The pall bearers were Lt. Col. Passy, W. F. McMahon, A. E. Andrews, O. Rigby, J. Hobson and J. Chaffins.

Deceased, who was an accountant, and spoke Spanish fluently spent several years in South American countries and has resided in Port Hope on Walton Street for over twenty years. He is survived by his wife.

FORMER PORT HOPER
DIES IN N. TONAWANDA

Mrs. Elgan T. Clendenan, wife of Dr. C. W. Clendenan died suddenly at her home, 147 Christiana Street, North Tonawanda, Sunday, Sept. 24th. Mrs. Clendenan had not been in good health for some time but it was not until she was stricken with a heart attack that her condition became serious.

Mrs. Clendenan had lived in North Tonawanda since becoming a bride 44 years ago. She was a member of several societies in the Tonawandas and Buffalo.

She was born in Port Hope, Ont., 69 years ago. Upon their marriage Dr. and Mrs. Clendenan located in the Gratiwick section of the city, both becoming prominently identified with the civic, social and church life.

Mrs. Clendenan was a member of the North Presbyterian church and a charter member of 'the Academe', founded in the Tonawandas in 1895. She was also a member of the Town Club and the Daughters of the British Empire of Buffalo.

Besides her husband she is survived by a brother, John C. Johnston, of Detroit, and two sisters, Mrs. Mary Adams and Mrs. Sarah Cochran of Toronto.

The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from the late residence, Rev. Loren K. Grimes officiated and interment was in Elm-lawn.

DAVID CHRISTIE IS LAID TO REST

Ill since the first of the year, David Christie, a resident of Port Hope for the past half century, died at his home on Princess Street Monday afternoon in his 77th year. The late Mr. Christie was one of the town's best known residents and his wide circle of friends will regret to hear of his demise.

Born in Inverness, Scotland, the deceased came to Canada as a young man and was employed as an engineer on the Grand Trunk Railway. He retired from that position twenty-seven years ago and since that time had been employed as an engineer with the Port Hope Sanitary Manufacturing Company.

Deceased was a member of the local Baptist Church and of Caledonia Lodge A.F. & A.M., No. 249, Midland. The funeral, which was held on Wednesday, was under the auspices of local Masons. Interment was made at Union Cemetery.

The late Mr. Christie is survived by his wife, who before her marriage was Martha Brockenshire, one son, George, Port Hope, one daughter, Mrs. J. Rogers, Toronto, and two grandsons, Kenneth and Roy Christie.

MEDICAL MEN ATTEND MEETING

With medical men attending from surrounding districts, a meeting of the Ontario Medical Association was held at the Ontario Hospital, at Cobourg. Doctors were in attendance from Victoria, Peterboro, Durham, Prince Edward, Northumberland, Hastings and Haliburton counties.

There were two sessions, one in the morning and the other in the afternoon with a luncheon served in St. Peter's Parish Hall at 12.30. The speakers were Dr. H. McPhedran, Toronto; Dr. B. T. McGhie, director of Hospital Services, Toronto; Dr. W. E. Galie, Toronto, head professor of surgery; Dr. F. C. Neale, Peterboro, and Dr. T. C. Routley, of Toronto, secretary of the O.M.A.

WEDDING BELLS

McCLELLAND — JIBB

The marriage took place in Cambridge United Church, of Beatrice Evelyn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Jibb, to Hilliard Orville McClelland, son of Mrs. L. A. McClelland, and the late Mr. McClelland of Port Hope, Rev. G. D. Campbell officiating. The church was decorated with gladioli and asters, the color scheme being pink and white. The wedding music was played by Prof. Mars Westington, M.A., of Chicago, cousin of the bride, and the soloist was Mrs. Mars Westington, Chicago.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory bridal satin and French lace turban and nose veil. She carried Rapture roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Bernice Jibb, graduate nurse of Oshawa General Hospital, who wore a frock of blush pink satin with matching turban, and carried pink Briarcliff roses. The groomsmen was Mr. Douglas Westington, B.A., of Ottawa, cousin of the groom. Little Margaret Redpath of Oshawa, cousin of the bride, was flower girl, wearing a white crepe dress, with trimmings of pink and carrying a basket of small pink and white flowers. Master Willard Jibb, brother of the bride, was ringbearer. The ushers were Mr. Milton Jibb, Baltimore, and Mr. Robin Thorne, Peterboro, cousins of the bride and groom. A reception was held at the residence, after which the couple left on a motor trip to the Atlantic Coast. On their return they will reside near Port Hope.

ITALY AND WOOL

Italy, almost alone among the principal wool-consuming countries of Europe, says the Empire Marketing Board, has been able during the present economic depression to consolidate the enormous expansion of its wool textile industry that occurred in the war and post-war periods. This expansion has been built up with the aid of an effective protective system, which has enabled the industry to capture almost the whole of the domestic market and, at the same time, to penetrate into foreign markets. About two-thirds of Italy's imported wool supplies in recent years were derived from British Empire countries. Italy's exports of all wool tissues (non-printed) to Canada from January to May of this year amounted to 33,000 lbs.

Children's special trains have been inaugurated by a British railway.

Athletic Sisters Are Twins

A pair of Canadian beauties. They are twins, too. On the LEFT is Margaret and on the RIGHT is Elizabeth, and the last name is Taylor. You will know the girl on the RIGHT as Betty Taylor, but you didn't know she had a twin, did you? Betty is Canada's premier girl hurdler for 1933. She holds the senior Canadian hurdling championship and the intermediate Ontario 80-metre hurdle crown too. The girls are 17 years of age and Margaret has just recently taken to running. She doesn't want her twin sister to get all the track glory, particularly now that application has been made for a Canadian record for twin-sister Betty for the 80-metre hurdles of 12 seconds.

RADIO HOOK-UPS WITH U.S. CURBED

Canadian Stations Are Forbidden To Make Permanent Contracts

Canadian radio stations are forbidden to establish a permanent hook-up with United States broadcasting systems in an announcement of policy made at Montreal Wednesday by Hector Charlesworth, chairman of the Canadian Radio Broadcasting Commission.

Mr. Charlesworth said this was the policy of the commission "now and in the future."

Although the commission had no objection to United States programs being brought in over Canadian stations "as long as there are not too many of them" no all-day hook-ups with American broadcasting chains would be allowed. Canada could not tolerate domination from the United States. Part-time hook-ups would be granted, subject to the necessary permission being obtained.

REDUCED RAILWAY FARES FOR THANKSGIVING DAY

Reduced fares will be in effect on Canadian railways between all stations in Canada for Thanksgiving Day week-end, it was announced recently by C. P. Riddell, chairman of the Canadian Passenger Association. The reductions will provide low fares for up to four-day trips, tickets at the rate of one and one-quarter times the regular first-class one-way fare being good for the going journey from noon, Friday, October 6, to noon on Monday, October 9. Return portions of these tickets will be good on trains leaving not later than midnight on Tuesday, October 10. In addition to the long week-end tickets, the Canadian railways have also arranged one-day trip tickets for both Sunday, October 8, and Monday, October 9, at the regular one-way fare for the return trip. These tickets will be good going any time after 1.0 a.m. either Sunday or Monday and good for the return on trains reaching the starting point not later than midnight the same day. Week-end tickets will also be good between Canadian points and certain destinations in the United States.

RAILROAD WHISTLES

Have you ever wondered, as you heard a locomotive whistle pierce the air, what the signal meant? The engineers have a code that is understood by all railroad men. When they pull the whistle cord they are not indulging in aimless tooting. For instance: when a train is approaching a grade crossing the engineer must send forth a warning which consists of two long blasts, one short blast and another long blast. If you happen to be hearing the same crossing in your automobile put your brakes on and let the train go by. Another important warning is a succession of short blasts. That's the way the engineer tells pedestrians to get off the tracks, and to take their live stock, if any, with them. This signal is, of course better known in the country than in the city.

Miss Kathleen Doggett, Oshawa, visited her friend, Miss Mildred Bickle over the week-end while her brother Ronald was guest of Mr. Lawrence Bamsey.

Miss Lou A. Mayne, Miss Willa C. Peters and Mr. W. G. Jennings spent Wednesday of last week at Bethesda, guests of Mrs. Henry Raby.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Langdon received a call from their brother-in-law, Mr. Albert Nokes, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Eva, son Murray and friend, Mr. Snelgrove, all of Manilla, on Sunday.

Mr. George Watkins spent the fore-part of the week in Rochester on business.

Mrs. W. J. Haynes, Goodwood, is spending this week at Braside, guest of her friend, Miss Willa C. Peters.

Congratulations to Canton School on their success in singing and to all prize winning exhibits.

PORT HOPE HORSE WINS AT ORONO

Joe Macgregor Piloted To Tie For First Place At Orono Fair On Wednesday

Don Haines, a former star rider of running horses, drove his first harness race at Orono on Wednesday afternoon and piloted Frank Lowe's Port Hope horse, Joe Macgregor to a win in the free-for-all class. Haines who has booted many a filly to the tape on the running tracks of Ontario, drove a smart race and while in the final standing Mac Dale came through to tie for first place, Haines performance was decidedly creditable. The races were in connection with Orono fair which was largely attended. The various exhibits were well filled and the fair was a great success. The race results were as follows:—

C.N.R. GROSS REVENUES UP

Operating Cost For August Lower And Income Higher

An increase in gross revenues of $923,178 for August as compared with August, 1932, is shown by the monthly statement of revenues and expenses of the Canadian National Railways issued at Montreal.

Gross revenues for August totalled $13,376,756, as against $12,447,478. Operating expenses were $12,369,725, a reduction of $544,044, leaving a net revenue of $1,007,031, as against a net revenue deficit of $466,191 in August, 1932, a net revenue gain of $1,473,222.

Aggregate revenues from Jan. 1 to Aug. 31 of this year were $94,134,223, a decrease of $11,275,712, as compared with the same period last year. Operating expenses during the period were $95,285,708. A reduction of $9,761,342. After payment of operating expenses there was a deficit from the eight months period of $1,151,485, as against net revenue of $362,885 for the similar period of last year.

THE WORD OF GOD

GOD'S WONDERFUL WORKS: Many, O Lord my God, are the wonderful works which thou hast done; if I would declare and speak of them, they are more than can be numbered. —Psalm 40: 5.

The worms that infest children from their birth are of two kinds, those that find lodgement in the stomach and those that are found in the intestines. The latter are the most destructive, as they cling to the walls of the intestines and if not interfered with work havoc there. Miller's Worm Powders dislodge both kinds and while expelling them from the system serve to repair the damage they have caused.

216,000 GIVEN JOBS SINCE APRIL FIRST

Growth Of Employment In Canada Stated By Stevens

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics estimates that 246,000 Canadians have been reinstated in employment since April 1. In the month of August, 12,000 left the army of the unemployed for gainful occupation.

Hon. H. H. Stevens, Minister of Trade and Commerce, said that 8,264 firms which make monthly statements to the Bureau now report they have 817,002 persons on their pay-rolls, on August 1 the number was 804,846.

"The importance of the gain will be made clear," the Minister said, "when it is remembered that the usual experience of the past would indicate a normal decline at this season of the year of over 4,000. Instead of that decline we have an increase of 12,000 so that the betterment is actually 16,000 for the month."

Index numbers also show that employment is well above September 1, 1932, the Minister added. The upward trend which is now in evidence has lasted since the beginning of April. In the five months since then there has been an aggregate increase of approximately 116,000 in the staffs of the reporting employers, each of whom employs 15 persons or more, Mr. Stevens said.

"These reporting firms, taken as a sample of the industries which they represent, indicate to the Bureau that 246,000 persons have been added to the pay-rolls of April 1 last," the Minister concluded.

Report For Ontario

The Bureau of Statistics' report for Ontario said:

"In Ontario 3,652 manufacturing firms reported further advances in personnel, which compared favorably with the reductions indicated on Sept. 1, 1932; employment then had been at a lower level than on the date under review. Manufacturing recorded a large share of the increase, the vegetable food and textile groups showing especially important gains, although the tendency was also upward in leather, lumber, rubber, electrical apparatus, non-ferrous metal, mining products and other factories. Among the non-manufacturing divisions, metallic mining, transportation, building and trade (both retail and wholesale), were also busier. On the other hand, iron and steel works showed their first curtailment since the beginning of the year, and highway and railway construction also released employees; the declines in iron and steel were largely seasonal in character.

The payrolls of the reporting employers aggregated $81,840 persons, or 5,616 more than in the preceding month.

CANT MELT SPECIE, GOVERNMENT WARNS

Gold Coin Is For Currency Only — Stiff Penalty Provided

A warning to those who might be tempted to melt down gold coin in order to secure the high price now prevailing for the raw metal is contained in a statement issued by the Department of Finance. Heavy penalties await those who might be tempted to take advantage of the market in that manner. The statement, put out as a general answer to inquiries being received from holders of gold coin, was as follows:

Gold coin, which is legal tender in Canada, that is to say, Canadian ten-dollar and five-dollar pieces, British sovereigns and half-sovereigns, and United States twenty-dollar, ten-dollar and five-dollar pieces, may not be melted, broken up, or used otherwise than as currency. Section 25 of the Currency Act provides that the penalty for illegally dealing with such gold coin shall be a fine not exceeding $250, or imprisonment for not more than twelve months, or both fine and imprisonment and furthermore the articles in respect of which the offense was committed may be forfeited. Legal tender gold coin is not accepted as a deposit by the Royal Canadian Mint.

RING LARDNER DIES IN NEW YORK STATE

Ring Lardner, humorist, author and playwright, died in his sleep at his home in New York State Monday night. He was 48 years old.

A heart ailment from which he suffered three years, complicated by other diseases, caused death. Early in the afternoon he became unconscious and never awoke. Mrs. Lardner and two of their four sons were at the bedside.

Lardner, the American sports writer to "debunk" baseball, later a regular in the literary sky had been in poor health since 1931. In that year he went to Arizona to fight tubercular infection and returned to New York City much improved. A recurrence last spring sent him west again.

He returned several weeks ago, spending major portion of his time in bed. His physician permitted him to continue writing "because he wasn't happy, unless he was working."

His "work" was divided into two distinct phases. In the early days Lardner devoted his talents to the rather broad humour found in his "Bib Ballads," "Symptoms of being thirty-five" and "Gullible's Travels."

HOUSTON'S "BLUE BOOK" OF CANADIAN BUSINESS MAKES 33rd APPEARANCE

The Annual Financial Review has just made its thirty-third consecutive appearance. Familiarly known to financial circles of the Dominion as the "Blue Book," the current edition again goes exhaustively into essential details of changes, incorporate statistics of the past year and records trends of Canadian financial and commercial activities. The new book covers some 1,750 companies, giving their histories, description of plant and properties, details of funded debt, capital authorized and issued, latest balance sheet, changes in dividends and market records.

In addition, the Annual Financial Review, which has the official sanction of the Toronto and Montreal Stock exchanges, contains a record of high and low prices of all listed stocks and bonds extending back for ten years, while the number of shares transacted each month is set out for each issue for the previous 15 months.

Cause of Asthma. No one can say with certainty exactly what causes the establishing of asthmatic conditions. Dust from the street, from flowers, from grain and various other irritants may set up a trouble impossible to irradiate except through a sure preparation such as Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy. Uncertainty may exist as to cause, but there can be no uncertainty regarding a remedy which has freed a generation of asthmatic victims from this scourge of the bronchial tubes. It is sold everywhere.

A TEST FOR PICKING MATURITY OF APPLES

During the course of investigations by the Laboratory of Plant Pathology, Kentville, N.S., conducted on the storage quality of apples from various spray plots it has been necessary to try to define the stage of maturity of the apples, both at harvest and at intervals during storage. A few years ago a mechanical pressure tester was used. This instrument registered the pound pressure necessary to force a plunger into the flesh of the apple a fraction of an inch. It was in reality the "thumb test" reduced to a mechanical basis. But like a good many machines, its accuracy depended on the operator's skill. Several types of these instruments have been tried and may still have a limited use but as a test for picking maturity they leave much to be desired. Chemical analyses of apples have shown that certain changes are going on in the apple as it approaches maturity. One of these is the gradual disappearance of the starch which has accumulated in the fruit during the preceding two or three months on the tree. It has been found in Australia and New Zealand and confirmed by the Laboratory at Kentville that the starch content at harvest of some varieties of apples has a decided influence on the development of storage pit as well as their general quality.

The two varieties Gravenstein and Cox Orange have responded exceptionally well to the iodine test for starch as an indication of picking maturity. The test is simple to perform and worthy of trial by growers who wish to market these varieties in their best condition.

To conduct the test a representative sample of 25 or more apples are picked. The fruit is cut in half and dipped for about half a minute in a potassium iodide-iodine solution. This solution is made up of 1 gram of potassium iodide, one-quarter gram of metallic iodine in 100 cubic centimeters of water. After dipping the cut surface of the fruit in the solution it is removed and placed with the treated surface up to let the colour develop. The iodine solution turns starch a blue-black. For the best picking maturity there should be no starch in the core area and one-half or more of the rest of the flesh of the apple should contain no starch. In other words, one-half or less of the flesh outside the core area should turn blue-black, but if there is no blue colour the apple is over mature.

This method of testing is not offered as a cure-all for our storage troubles of fall varieties of apples. In our experience, however, the fruit harvested at a time when the starch was present only in a part of the flesh, as suggested above, was superior in storage life and quality and freer from storage pit to the earlier harvested fruit. Seed colour is not a reliable index of fruit maturity.

Canadian imports into the United Kingdom for the first six months of this year showed an increase of 3,094,544 pound sterling (roughly 14,900,000 dollars) while British exports to Canada for the same period showed a decrease of over 4,000,000 dollars, and a decrease of over 470,000 dollars in re-exports.

STIRLING WINS TOURNEY PRIZE

Defeats Rinks From Cobourg, Port Hope And Belleville

In spite of chilly weather the mixed bowling tournament held at Cobourg Wednesday was a decided success, some 28 rinks participating. Silverware, blankets and electric clocks comprised the prizes awarded to the rinks ranking high with three wins, two and one. W. Whitty's bowlers from Stirling won first prize with 43 and three wins; George Cairns, of Peterboro, was in second place with 42 and two wins, and George Mitchell, Cobourg, third with a score of 39 and three wins.

Other rinks with their scores were: J. Topping, Kingston, 40 and 2 wins; James Thompson, Cobourg, 34 and 2; J. Watson, Madoc, 26 and 1; R. Fletcher, 31 and 1; R. Burnham, Cobourg, 21 and 2; H. Heagle, Kingston, 28 and 1; J. Harrison, Cobourg, 22 and 1; W. Pirie, Port Hope, 22 and 1; E. Catcher, Belleville, 33 and 1; P. Morrison, Cobourg, 30 and 1; R. Winter, Port Hope, 38 and 2; A. Hopper, Cobourg, 34 and 2; H. Rosevear, Port Hope, 30 and 1; H. McCullough, Cobourg, 35 and 1; W. Peacock, Port Hope, 24 and 0; E. A. Hirsch, Cobourg, 37 and 3; F. Flood, Port Hope, 33 and 2; E. Gillet, Cobourg, 37 and 2; J. Fleming, Hastings, 28 and 0; W. De Lany, Cobourg, 31 and 1; W. B. Cutcliffe, Norwood, 35 and 2; J. McKinnon, Cobourg, 27; J. Cullen, Peterboro, 22 and 2, and Leslie Wilson, Cobourg, 33 and 1.

EVEN AS THE SEED

Shut far away from the golden sun, Green branch where once it grew, No whisper of the singing wind, And all glad things it knew, Does the seed fret when trodden down Beneath the heavy earth, Within the silent dark to brave The mystery of birth?

In patience there it lies in wait Until life's germ bursts through The bars of that small prison-house To struggle forth anew. One tiny shoot to brave the cold, The maze of Stygian night; And yet unflinchingly it takes The path that leads to light!

After the pain of chill and dark, The journey drear and long, How glorious to greet the sun, The world of warmth and song! Even as the seed, which has no fear Of all it must endure, Be, soul, as humble and as strong; Your growth will be as sure. —Aline Michaelis.

For Frost Bites and Chilblains. — Chilblains come from undue exposure to icy and cold and frost-bite from the icy winds of winter. In the treatment of either an excellent preparation is Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, as it counteracts the inflammation and relieves the pain. The action of the oil is prompt and its application is extremely simple.

The Guide Story

"I am sure I never said I hated you, Tom," murmurs Judy, twisting two or three ivy-leaves round one finger and gazing at them pensively.

"Well, no, perhaps you never went so far as that," admits Tom, regarding the leaves and finger with great interest. "Still, you don't like me you know. If you did—"

Tom pauses and shakes his head vaguely.

"Well, Tom, what if I did?" asks Judy, peeping at him furtively from under her dark lashes.

"Well, you see—with a brusque laugh—"if you and I got married, your mother could not carry you away."

"Oh, Tom, you are not a bit original—that is just what Mr. Callaghan suggested when that dreadful old man laid claim to me!"

"I know I am not original, I am not sharp, I am not clever," sighs Tom, hopelessly. "But, Judy, dear, I have a heart, and I would do anything to help you. Look here—if you will marry me, I'll go right away to the North Pole, and leave you in possession of Skylark Hall. Would that suit you, Judy?"

The girl shakes her head, while two tears steal out from beneath her smiling lashes and down her dimpled cheeks.

"Then what can I do to help you, Judy?" asks Tom in despair.

"Why, marry me, Tom. But don't go away to the North Pole," sobs Judy, as her head falls upon her lover's shoulder, and she looks up into his face with a smile. "I should be so dreadfully lonely."

"Do you really mean it, Judy?" asks Tom, bending down to read the truth in her eyes.

What he sees there seems to satisfy him for he draws her gently into his arms and kisses her.

"Oh, Judy, my darling, you shall be so happy!" he murmurs softly.

"I mean to be," declares Judy, with a saucy smile. "Listen, Tom—I shall spend half my time at the Hermitage."

"All right," agrees Tom. "But they will have to take me in, too."

"Oh, that is nothing new!" declares Judy demurely. "You always did spend half your time there, you know."

"But I say, Judy, what will your mother say?" asks Tom rather anxiously.

Judy reflects for a few moments, then answers decisively—

"She will never consent to it, Tom—never."

"Then suppose we don't ask her?" suggests Tom audaciously.

After that more plotting is carried on, as the lovers stroll up and down the shrubbery path, and the end of it all is that Judy enters the dining-room when lunch is half over.

"Late again Julia! I do abominate unpunctuality," says Mrs. Earnshaw sharply, turning angrily to the delinquent.

Judy does not answer her mother, but as she passes Miss Griffin's chair, she bends down and kisses the old lady's flushed cheek, murmuring in her ear, "I am so sorry, auntie," and, instead of replying Miss Griffin bursts into tears and leaves the table.

"No, Sarah, it is of no use begging. I cannot promise to let you have my daughter for a month every year—or even a week. It would be only foolish to buoy you up with a false hope. When once I get her away from the Hermitage, I shall keep her away."

"Oh, Julia, that sounds very hard, when you know how we love her!" sobs Miss Griffin.

"Upon my word, I can't see much in her to love," returns Mrs. Earnshaw coldly. "An ignorant, conceited and utterly selfish creature she seems to be."

"Oh, Julia, hush! She is just coming in. I saw her pass the window with Tom Wilde. Take care—take care, she may hear you!"

"I don't care if she does," declares Mrs. Earnshaw as Judy and Tom enter the room "Julia," she continues, addressing her daughter rather sharply, "I was just explaining to Miss Griffin that when you leave the Hermitage to-morrow with me, you leave it for ever."

Judy goes straight over to Miss Griffin, and places her arm lovingly round the old lady's neck, imprinting a loving kiss on her cheek.

"Don't fret, auntie. I will never leave you," she murmurs in her ear.

"But, my child, you must—she is your mother," says Miss Griffin, and she is just about to go with her.

"Excuse me, Miss Griffin," inter-poses Tom, who is looking highly delighted and triumphant, "but surely it is Judy's duty to stop with her husband!"

"Her husband!" echoes Miss Griffin, looking dazed.

Judy has pulled off her glove and now points to a plain little band of gold on her left hand.

"Yes, auntie dear, Tom and I got married this morning—we thought it was the only way to settle matters comfortably."

"You sly little minx!" exclaims Mrs. Earnshaw. And she sweeps from the room in a tempest of rage.

THE END

OUR NEW STORY

CHAPTER I

"Lindsay!"

The deep, pleasant voice, calling the old-fashioned name, rings through the oak-paneled hall, up the staircase to the upper rooms of the old house, but only echo answers softly.

Richard Durant stands for a moment at the foot of the oaken staircase, waiting for the answer to his call, then, with a slight expression of disappointment on his face, he turns upon his heel and, going back to the hearth, stands meditatively looking at the red glow of the fire.

The day is gray and dreary, but the cheerful fire brightens up the old oak carvings, its fine chimney piece and the massive carved beams across the ceiling. But if it is shabby, it is home-like. The high-backed chairs look comfortable, the dogs are lying about the hearth in attitudes of repose, there is an old china bowl full of autumn flowers in the centre of the oak table, and the cushioned seats in the window on either side of the hall door look delightful resting-places, and, although the crimson damask of the cushions has faded it looks only the more in harmony with the worn Turkey rugs which are scattered over the oak floor.

Richard Durant looks likewise very much in harmony with his surroundings. He is a tall, broad-shouldered man of seven or eight and twenty, with brown eyes and hair and a bronzed complexion. He wears a loose suit of dark brown velvet, gaiters and heavy boots, and he looks not only what he is, an honest, upright yeoman, and a gentleman in the best sense of the word, but a very handsome fellow, too.

His usual expression is resolute and determined, but on this September morning his face wears a somewhat puzzled look. He has a letter in his hand, which he glances at dubiously once or twice, as though he thought it contained something of an explosive nature.

"She will not like it," he mutters after a few moments' close study of the glowing fire. "And if she does not, he shall not come."

Apparently his tete-a-tete with the fire has given him an opportunity of arriving at some decision, for, as he turns away from its red glow, the doubt and irresolution have disappeared from his face and he wears his everyday expression of grave resolve, which is rather an unusual one in a young man of his age. Just as he turns away, a quick, light foot-step sounds in the inner hall which leads to the servants' domains and a young lady comes forward with her hands full of sunflowers.

She is a tall, slight girl of two or three and twenty, and, although the resemblance between her and the resolute-faced young fellow is not striking, there is sufficient to show their relationship. Lindsay's eyes and hair are brown, but not so darkly brown as her brother's, her features are regular without being in the least staccato, while her complexion is as purely white and red as early hours, fresh air, and perfect health can make it. Perhaps the chief point of resemblance between the brother and sister lies in their expression. Her face is as grave and earnest as his, but it has a pride which is emphasized by the haughty carriage of her head.

"Ah, there you are!" says Richard Durant, smiling. "I was calling you a moment since. Why, have you been out without a hat, Lindsay? It is a wretchedly cold morning!"

"I have not been far," she answers lightly. "Only down to the sunflower hedge. What do you think of these great golden beauties?"

"They are very fine, certainly, but I don't care for seedling flowers," Richard rejoins, looking at her with fond, proud eyes, and thinking what a pretty picture she makes in her serge gown, as she holds the bright-hued flowers, which seem all the brighter held against the sombre background of her black dress.

"Ah, but the fragrant flowers are over!" she says sadly. "It cannot be always July, Dick. Roses are short-lived."

"Yes," he returns rather absently, watching her swift, graceful movements as she takes a large Indian vase from one of the cabinets and begins to arrange her flowers in it with the pretty, decided, little gestures which seem characteristic of her.

There is a brief silence, Lindsay is busy with her flowers. Her brother stands near the table watching her, the old, irresolute look on his face again. But the girl, absorbed in her occupation, does not notice his abstraction. It is only when, having finished her bouquet, she is about to lift the tall vase, that she remembers the speech with which he greeted her and, raising her brown eyes, she meets his earnest yet undecided glance.

"What is it, Dick?" she asks quickly. "You wanted me, you said. Is there anything wrong?"

"No, dear," he answers irresolutely. "Where are you going to put your sunflowers?"

"Anywhere. What is the matter, Dick? You have something to tell me. What is that letter about?"

The rich colour slightly fades from her cheeks as she utters her rapid questions, and there is a look of anxiety in her eyes which makes her brother's answer prompt and clear and dispels all his irresolution.

"There is nothing the matter, Lindsay," he says. "I have something to tell you, but it is nothing very formidable. This letter is from Doctor Clayton and it contains a proposal which you must decide on accepting or refusing."

"If Doctor Clayton were not an old married man, I might imagine he had made me an offer of marriage," she replies, laughing, and quite reassured by his manner. "Is the dear, kind old fellow coming to pay his long-promised visit and have a few days with the birds?"

"Not exactly," returns Richard Durant lightly. "Read the letter, Lindsay, and it will tell you all about it."

Standing by the table near the Indian vase with the great golden flowers clustering above it, Lindsay takes the letter and reads it slowly, for the cramped handwriting of the great London physician is difficult to decipher. Her brother, watching her, sees her face change slightly and darken as she reads and he sighs, for the proposal which Doctor Clayton makes is one he would like to accept. Perhaps Lindsay hears the sigh and interprets it correctly, for she checks the hasty words which were upon her lips and feigns to be occupied with the letter for fully a minute after she has mastered its contents.

"Do you know anything of Lord Denzil, Dick?" she asks, as she folds up the letter and hands it back to him. "Doctor Clayton speaks as if you did."

"I met him at the doctor's when I was in town in the spring," Richard replies. "He was very ill then. He had been wounded in the war, and had had a relapse on the voyage home and for a time I think it was touch-and-go with him. He was staying in Harley street when I saw him, and was almost convalescent."

"Staying in Harley street—how was that?" the girl asks, with a puzzled frown. "Has he no house of his own?"

"Oh, yes—I suppose he has, but Mrs. Clayton thought he would not be properly looked after, as he has no mother or father, and would have been left entirely to hired service. Mrs. Clayton was governess to his sister, and seems much attached to him."

"Oh! Where is his sister? Why did she not look after him?"

"She is abroad with her husband, Sir William Eaves, who has some high appointment in India," replies Dick carelessly. "Lord Denzil seems rather lonely, Lindsay, and—"

"I do not suppose a man in his position is ever lonely," Lindsay interposes, smiling. "You would like him to come, Dick?" she adds, looking up at her brother with questioning eyes.

"Certainly not, if you dislike the idea, Lindsay," he answers promptly. "You know that, don't you?"

"I know that you are the best and kindest and most indulgent brother in all the world!" she declares. "But it is not my wishes you must consider, Dick. Would the money that Lord Denzil will pay you be of use to you now?"

"Of great use, Lindsay," he replies reluctantly. "But—"

"Then write to Doctor Clayton by this post, and tell him we shall be very glad to accept his offer, if that is the case," she says, looking at him and we will make him as comfortable as we can."

"But dear," faltered Dick, the very promptness of her acquiescence making him hesitate, lest she should be doing violence to her feelings, and he should be allowing her to sacrifice herself, "I am afraid it will be unpleasant for you to have a stranger here, and your hands are already so full that the care of an invalid—"

"But Lord Denzil is not an invalid, Dick," Lindsay interrupts quickly. "Doctor Clayton says he must be out all day long shooting."

"Yes, but he is not yet strong," persists Dick, "and he is not likely to go in for shooting a day long, I fancy. I suppose he must have as much fresh air as possible without a corresponding amount of fatigue, and, as you see Doctor Clayton lays great stress on home comforts and quiet."

"He can be quiet enough," Lindsay remarks, smiling, "and I am equal to any amount of nursing, if necessary. At the same time, he can't be ill, Dick," she adds, a trifle anxiously, "or the Doctor would not have sent him here. He knows we are five miles away from any medical man."

"But he also knows what a good little doctor we have on the premises," says Richard fondly. "Lindsay, you are sure you do not mind much?"

"Quite sure, Dick, and, even if I did, it would not matter. This money—glancing down at the letter as she speaks—"will be useful to you?"

"It will be a perfect godsend!" he answers warmly. "But for it—"

He pauses and averts his face to hide the pain from her loving eyes, but Lindsay slips her hand within his arm and leans her head caressingly against his shoulder.

"Are things so bad, Dick?" she asks, with a break in her voice.

"They are not worse, dear," he answers hurriedly, "for the harvest is a good one and this hundred pounds will help us. It is a lot of money for a month, Lindsay," he adds, glancing at her questioningly—"is it not?"

"It appears a large sum to us, Dick," she replies, trying to speak brightly, "but probably it is not too much to him. And he brings a servant and a horse, you know."

"Yes, of course," says Dick, looking as though her words relieved him from some anxiety. "I think you will like him Lindsay. He is very pleasant, and handsome enough to delight your beauty-loving eyes."

"I shall not see much of him," Lindsay answers carelessly. "And a month is but a short time, Dick," she adds as she carries away her vase of sunflowers, turning from the door to smile at her brother and give him a reassuring nod. "I don't mind in the least, Dick," she says lightly. "You need not be a bit anxious and everything will be ready for his lordship on Thursday."

Then the heavy caken door closes after her and hides the graceful figure. Dick Durant's eyes have a very tender expression in them as he strides away out of the fire-bright hall to the horse which is waiting for him without.

"My poor Lindsay!" he says to himself softly, as he rides away. "How good and brave she is! And what an idiot Fred—Steady, Molly! What are you about?"

A little contrariness from the mare he is breaking in brings his reverie to an end, and, as he goes on his rounds and tries bravely, but ineffectually, to make his farming a success, he forgets even his sister's sweetness in the struggle to make both ends meet.

"There is no one in the dining-room when Lindsay enters it with her vase of sunflowers. It is a pretty though faded, old room, furnished like the hall and with the same home-like air. There is no one there to see how the smiles fade from her face as she puts her flowers upon a bracket in the corner, and then goes slowly to the mantelpiece, over which hangs an oil-painting of a graceful girl, whose delicate loveliness bears some resemblance to the face that is returned to it.

"Mother—oh, mother!" Lindsay says with a sob and for a moment her head sinks forward upon her hand.

Even Dick, who knows her so well, cannot guess what it will be to Lindsay Durant to have the sanctity of her home invaded by a stranger, or does he imagine how deeply rooted in her heart is the fear that they will not be able much longer to keep the house they both love so well.

The weakness is, however, but momentary. Bravely forcing back the hot tears which make her eyes burn, Lindsay raises her head and, in the busy hours of her well-filled day, finds all her usual courage and serenity again. She has need of all her courage in these dreary, autumn days, for the farm is not doing well. There is no ready money to purchase the machinery necessary for making certain improvements and these are pecuniary difficulties, too, if there is no stint of comfort, even of luxury, in the old house. The mortgagees are threatening to foreclose, and Lindsay sadly notices how the two lines on Dick's broad forehead are deepening, and how silent and grave he is in the quiet evenings which have hitherto been so bright and pleasant to them both.

CHAPTER II

The autumnal twilight is gathering over the moors, and the fire in the old kitchen at Moor House is filling it with a ruddy glow. Lindsay has seen that all is ready in the suite of rooms which she has prepared for Lord Denzil. She has watched Dick drive away to the station to meet the invalid, and she has come into the kitchen to give a few last instructions to the old cook and housekeeper, who remembers Moor House when it had a very different establishment, and sometimes longingly recalls the time when the late Squire, as he was always called, brought home the pretty young bride who blossomed like a rose for a few years and then, when the baby girl for whom she had longed was just able to walk with the assistance of her little brother's hand, had gone home to that brighter world where parting is unknown.

Ten minutes ago Lindsay was making her brother laugh merrily over the sweeping curtsy with which she declared she was going to meet his lordship, but now her face is pale and sad as she stands looking thoughtfully into the great bright fire over which the glittering teapot kettle is singing so cheerily. The kitchen itself makes an interior which would rouse an artist to enthusiasm, and reduce a town cook to a pitiable condition of envy. The spotless floor, the vast proportions, the massive cables, the dresser with its china, the shining copper pans reflecting the firelight—all contribute to a total-ensemble of perfect comfort and the only incongruous element of the picture is the graceful figure of the dreaming girl by the fire.

Simply as she is dressed, there is that about Lindsay which never allows her to be overlooked—the perfect figure, the haughty head, the proud tender lips and, above all, the lustrous eyes, with their sad, wistful expression—can never escape notice or comment, while her unconscious grace of movement is rare enough to be remarkable. She stands before the hearth, with her hands loosely clasped behind her.

She has been standing there for some moments when a light touch on her hand arouses her, and she turns with a start to meet the laughing blue eyes of a girl rather younger than herself, who has entered the kitchen unobserved and stands, a bright picturesque figure in a rough riding-habit and quaint jockey-cap, laughing at Lindsay's face as her eyes rest upon the laughing girl, and she stoops to kiss the sweet red lips.

"Bell!" she exclaims. "Is it you? I am so glad! I did not know you had returned."

"You might have guessed I would come back at once when I heard what was in store for me," Isabel Heath answers gaily. "Why did you not write and tell me you were expecting so distinguished a visitor, Lindsay?"

"We are not expecting any visitor," returns Lindsay rather coldly.

"Not!" echoes Bell, her mirth vanishing. "Why, Maggie wrote me that Lord Denzil was coming here to Moor House, and—"

"He is coming. But, as he pays for his accommodation at Moor House he can scarcely be called a visitor."

"What do you call him then?"

"A lodger, I suppose—or a boarder," Lindsay answers quietly, but with scarcely concealed bitterness.

"What nonsense, Lindsay! A lodger, when he comes as Doctor Clayton's friend and your own Why, Dick knows him, he tells me!"

"Dick certainly never called him a friend, Bell. He is quite a stranger, and he is not even of our rank, so I don't know how he could be called a friend. And he is an invalid," Lindsay says.

"An invalid! How long will he stay?"

"A month, unless he gets bored to death."

"A month," Isabel Heath echoes, as she sinks into one of the low chairs before the fire and looks up wistfully at her friend's grave face.

"Oh Lindsay, how I envy you!"

"Envy me!" Lindsay exclaims, rather bewildered. "Why?"

"You are such a perfect nurse, and of course he will fall in love with you and—now, don't be angry! When you look at me in that way, with such wistful eyes, you frighten me."

Bell springs up from her chair and puts her arms caressingly round Lindsay. She is so small of stature that the bright golden head only reaches Lindsay's shoulder, but she is so exquisitely proportioned that her height appears just what it should be. Lindsay looks down at her, half angrily, half tenderly.

"You know such speeches hurt me, Isabel," she says, rather vehemently—"you know that I dislike such jests. Lord Denzil is a stranger to us, and, when he leaves Moor House, we shall, in all probability, never hear of him again. If he even settled at the Manor he would never be a friend of ours. And, if he wished to be, I do not like unequal friendships!"

She speaks with so much earnestness that the golden-haired girl at her side is silenced for a moment, and then she says—

"I won't offend your Majesty again. You look more queenlike than ever in that gown, Lindsay! What a dear old room this is! I never see one like it anywhere!"

"It seems very pleasant to me," observes Lindsay, smiling. "But it is rather shabby," she adds, as she glances round the room, which looks its best with the firelight shining upon the pretty old china, the few good pictures and the old damask hangings, which have faded to a dim harmonious blue, and gleam softly against the pretty frilled Indian muslin curtains which Lindsay's skilful fingers have made.

"How is your father, Bell?" Lindsay inquires, after a brief pause.

"Not much better. He declares he wants a rest," replies Bell, moving away to the window and looking out into the gathering dusk, then coming back into the room. "He was wishing Fred would come back for a few weeks."

"And can he not come?" Lindsay asks quietly, although the colour has faded from her face at the carelessly-taken words.

"He does not seem very willing, and I don't wonder," replies Bell. "And do you know, Lindsay, that Clara has jilted him?"

"Bell!" exclaims Lindsay, even her lips, paling in her surprise.

"It is quite true," says Bell, nodding. "It serves him right, of course!"

"Oh, hush, dear—don't say that! Is he very grieved, Bell?"

"I don't fancy so. He'll survive it, at any rate," answers Bell carelessly. "Lindsay, surely they love each other!"

"Yes—with a startled look. Lindsay has forgotten the expected arrival in the shock of Isabel's news and she is still very pale as the two girls go out into the hall.

A year has passed away since Frederic Heath broke off his engagement with Lindsay Durant, and, although she had so quickly got over the pain that she had been forced to believe that she never really loved the rising young doctor who had wooed her so ardently, she is too true a woman not to feel sorry for his pain.

"Did he love her, I wonder?" she thinks as they enter the hall, where the fire is blazing cheerfully, sending out a ruddy welcome through the deep windows and the hall-door, which is wide open and the girls can hear the sound of wheels coming up the drive.

It is many a long day before Maurice Fane, Earl of Denzil, forgets the picture which greets him as he enters the old hall, coming in—a tall gaunt figure in his long overcoat—from the gray, chill evening without. The quaint, paneled room is bright with the glow of a cheerful fire, there are flowers in vases and old china bowls, there is a little golden-haired fairy in a riding-habit standing by the hearth, looking shyly towards him, there is a little golden-haired fairy in a riding-habit standing by the hearth, looking shyly towards him, there is a stately figure in a rich-hued robe advancing to meet him with grave courtesy, there is the sound of dogs barking in the distance and Richard Durant's deep, pleasant voice near at hand.

"Would you like to go to your rooms at once?" the stately young lady asks in musical tones. "If you would, I will send you some tea. Or would you prefer it here? I am afraid—the voice is very soft now, and it has lost all its tone of constraint—"you are very tired."

"I am tired," he replies, bowing to the golden-haired girl in thering-dress, to whom Richard Durant presents him rather awkwardly. "If you will give me some tea here, Miss Durant, I shall, perhaps, find strength enough to contemplate the staircase with something like equanimity. At present it looks appalling."

He sinks rather heavily into one of the high-backed chairs, but the exhaustion which he tries so bravely to disguise makes Lindsay anxious, although she is too keen not to discern that he has all a man's dislike to being treated as an invalid.

"You will like a glass of wine after such a long, cold drive?" she says brightly. "Dick, you will also, will you not?"

Dick is about to refuse, when a glance from his sister makes him alter his intention. She pours out the wine as if it were quite a matter of course, but the look, half mirthful, half sorrowful in the Earl's eyes as they meet Lindsay's shows her that he has discovered her kindly purpose. The stimulant rouses him from the faintness caused by fatigue, and in a few minutes he is able to interest himself in his surroundings, to admire the charming old hall, and to decide that has never seen anything prettier than the yellow-haired girl, standing on the hearthrug in the full glare of the fire.

Bell has quite lost any timidity she may have felt at first in the Earl's presence. She laughs and chats with Dick, caresses the dogs, answers Lord Denzil and even addresses him with a pretty shy grace which he has never seen in the young ladies of his world. Lindsay pours out tea and waits upon them all with quiet staidness. She does not say much, and Lord Denzil wishes she would let him hear the music of her voice more frequently. By-and-by he finds himself forgetting the golden-haired beauty and letting his eyes linger upon the rather severe profile of his hostess.

Perhaps Lindsay becomes aware of this scrutiny, for a blush rises slowly in her face and she moves her head a little, so that only one little ear and the rich brown plaits are visible to the visitor. Lord Denzil smiles under his fair moustache. "The Earl pleases him—it shows that she is only a woman, after all. Lindsay, glancing at him at the moment, sees the smile, and the colour fades from her face, leaving her as white as marble, and with a burning sense of anger in her heart which makes her manner very cold and stiff when she speaks to the Earl, which is only when she cannot do otherwise.

"Silence suits her," Lord Denzil thinks, as he leans back in his chair. "It is stately, like herself, and yet what a delightful voice she has! I was on the point of fainting, I think, when it called me back to life. What a nurse she would make, if one were ill! I almost wish I could make myself an invalid again to be nursed by her. It would be so pleasant to see her eyes soften and grow tender and anxious and to feel her hand upon one's forehead. Durant is a lucky fellow to have such a sister, but I suppose some luckier fellow will turn up by-and-by and steal her, as Eaves stole Mary from me. What a contrast the other girl is, but how charmingly pretty! Who is that Fred she is talking about, I wonder? My hostess looks conscious, I think!"

OSHAWA PAIR GET REMAND

Charged At Cobourg On Five Counts Of Breaking And Entering

Charged on five counts of breaking and entering and theft in Police Court at Cobourg, Francis Conragan and John Chandler, both of Oshawa, were remanded until October 6. Police were searching for another man believed to be implicated with the two in the alleged breaking in of a Cobourg garage.

The identity of the trio was revealed when police checked the license of a car left at the garage when the alleged break-in occurred. A large quantity of merchandise, identified as having been taken from stores in Cobourg and Niagara, was revealed following a search of two Oshawa homes a few days later.

MANY PHEASANTS IN NORTHUMBERLAND

The outlook for pheasant shooting this fall is claimed to be 50 per cent better than last fall. Looking through Northumberland County, a great number of flocks of these birds were seen feeding in the fields where grain had been taken off, but plenty had been left on the ground to make good picking for these birds. The farmers are dissatisfied the way the Government handled pheasant shooting last year; nearly all farms were placarded prohibiting trespassing by hunters. The Government had hundreds of inspectors out to see that all hunters were carrying a license but they did not make any effort to keep shooters from shooting on properties that were displaying prohibitory notices the farmers state.

Simple Remedy For Bad Stomach Gives Swift Relief

No Need of Strong Medicines or Diet. Safe and Simple Recipe Keeps Stomach in Fine Condition

If you are a victim of Stomach Trouble—Gas, Sourness, Pain or Bloating—you may have quick and certain relief by following this simple advice. Don't take strong medicines, artificial stimulants or pull down your system with starvation diets. For within reason most folks may eat what they like if they will keep their stomach free from souring acids that hinder or paralyze the work of digestion. And the best and easiest way to do this is to follow every meal with a teaspoonful of Bismarck's Magnesia—a pleasant, harmless, inexpensive prescription that promptly neutralizes acidity and keeps your stomach sweet and clean. A week's trial of Bismarck's Magnesia which any good druggist can supply, should quickly convince you that 90 per cent of ordinary stomach distress is absolutely unnecessary. Be sure to get Bismarck's Magnesia.

SAUL IN DAMASCUS

CHARACTER MAY CHANGE, 1, 2

There is a widespread habit of classifying people as types. Some rule of thumb psychologists have only two types, introverts and extroverts. The fact is that nearly everyone is a combination of both. Also people may change so radically that their classification has to be altered. In his pre-Christian days Paul was a cruel persecutor, ruthlessly putting Christians to death and seeking official authority to stamp out the new faith. Yet this same man who was the dread of the early Christians later wrote the thirteenth chapter of first Corinthians, and became one of the most self-sacrificing missionaries of the Christian Church. His very work as a persecutor was a factor in his transformation. He saw the light upon the face of martyred Stephen. He was brought in touch with the spirit of brotherhood among the persecuted Christians, and the intensity of his persecuting spirit was transformed into his earnest missionary zeal. One of the fundamental things to remember about human nature is that it can be changed. Bad people may become good; good people may be made better.

A DRAMATIC CONVERSION, 3, 4

As Saul neared Damascus he was a legalist. Ever afterwards he was a Christian mystic. Whether it was from the light of the mid-day eastern sun, or some inner light, he fell to earth and heard a voice saying, Saul, why persecutest thou me? From the narrative this appears to be very sudden, but Saul had been silently prepared for this great hour. The results of his dramatic experience are to be seen in all his later life. There are many people who are concerned because they have not had as sudden and decisive a conversion hour as Paul, Augustine, Luther, Wesley or Chalmers. Many young people have steadily grown in Christian faith and character and have never had a right-about-face conversion. The reality of conversion, however, is not to be decided by its method, but by its effects. No one could doubt the genuineness of Saul's conversion. The persecutor became a missionary, the Pharisee became a mystic. The power of his Damascus road transformation was life long.

IMMEDIATE ACTION, 5, 6

Saul did not understand what it all meant. Hearing the voice, he asked, "Who are thou, Lord?" The answer came clearly, "I am Jesus whom thou persecutest." Paul's nature was intensely practical. He did not question or debate, but in his astonishment he said, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" A sure test of the reality of conversion is the desire to act in accord with the experience. People who profess conversion, but do not live good lives, or give any Christian service, soon discount their professions. Paul's later ministry was in harmony with this first question. He was always seeking something to do. Few men by their deeds have made a deeper dent in human history than the apostle Paul. The fact was that Jesus had much for him to do.

A LEADER, 7-9

What a change a brief hour had made in this haughty young scholar coming down from Jerusalem to Damascus! This messenger carrying authority from the high priest, is now groping for light. This persecutor, so sure of himself, is asking what to do. This Pharisee who was going to drive Christians out of Damascus, is led in by the hand. It was a humbling experience for this young Jerusalem scholar. In that hour Saul's pride died. All his confidence through his obedience to the law vanished. He knew himself henceforth to be dependent upon another's will. He made an unconditional surrender to the guidance of Christ.

JESUS HELPED SAUL, 10-19

During his darkness and weakness this new convert was not forgotten by his Lord. In Damascus Ananias had a vision in which Jesus appeared to him, directing him to go to help Saul. How great must have been the relief and joy of the once persecutor when Ananias came, put his hand upon him and gave him a message of reassurance in the name of Jesus together with the promise of the presence of the holy Spirit! Saul rose and was baptized, and when he had taken food his strength was restored. In this story the deepest spiritual experiences and the most humble and commonplace actions mingle. Saul heard a voice that others could not hear, yet the touch of a friend and the nourishment of food were indispensable agents of his recovery. Thus do heaven and earth mingle in daily life. Thus do the spiritual and the material blend until often they cannot be distinguished. The one thing to be remembered about Saul's conversion is that although it happened in the first century, similar conversions are happening now even in the month of October, 1933. Christ still speaks to men and leads them to the light out of darkness. The Lord is still adding to the church those who are being saved.

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION

1. Why is there such great variety in conversion experienced?
2. What are the evidences of genuine conversion?
3. Did Peter and John have as deep a religious experience as Paul?
4. Are sudden conversions as sudden as they seem?
5. Did Saul hear an inner or an outer voice?

The BEST way to stop CONSTIPATION

Nothing like Fruit-a-tives

"I was a very bad way with constipation. My stomach was off-colour and I kept having headache. Quite frequently I had severe pains in my joints and muscles. The general effect was very depressing. Indeed, I felt so wretched that I was about to give up work. Today my health is excellent and I certainly feel that 'Fruit-a-tives' played a large part in bringing this about. They toned up my entire system."

SIX INJURED IN CAR CRASH

Bancroft Magistrate Among Those Hurt Near Bowmanville

Elma Powell, Dundas, Ont., is in a critical condition, and five others, including Police Magistrate W. E. Wiggins of Bancroft, are in Bowmanville Hospital suffering from serious injuries sustained in a high-way accident about two miles east of Bowmanville.

According to Traffic Officer Ed. Purves, a car owned by Lorne McQuarrie of Bowmanville and driven by Miss Powell was proceeding west when it skidded across the road into the path of a car driven by Reg. Wiggins of Bancroft and carrying as passengers Magistrate and Mrs. Wiggins, Mrs. Reg. Wiggins and Miss Ethel Wiggins. All the passengers in the Wiggins car were taken immediately to Bowmanville Hospital, while Miss Powell was taken to the home of her uncle, Fred Depew, in Bowmanville.

At that time Miss Powell complained very little of injury but later she was removed to Bowmanville Hospital where Dr. J. Clark Bell of Bowmanville stated she had received a fractured pelvis and a punctured bladder. Her condition is of such a serious nature that a specialist was brought in from Toronto to undertake the operation. In the McQuarrie car were also Lorne McQuarrie, owner, Dick Wright, and Audrey Murphy of Bowmanville. Other than a few bruises and scratches none of these were injured.

DORSET STREET BURGLAR ACTIVE

Enters Home Of Mrs. Culverwell And Terrorizes Women In Two Houses

Residents of Dorset street, who have been experiencing no little anxiety of late in connection with the movements of an alleged burglar were again awakened early Friday morning when the thief made a reappearance.

Mrs. T. C. Buckley, in an interview, stated that she distinctly heard someone attempting to open the back door of her home while at the residence of Mrs. J. Culverwell, next door, the burglar broke two cellar windows, made an entrance and shut off the electric lights from the main switch. Unable to get up stairs owing to the fact that the cellar door was bolted the burglar scaled the verandah and was only frightened away when Mrs. Culverwell shouted, "Get away or I'll shoot."

Night Constable Kenneth Harvey searched the neighbourhood but could find no one about. It is again suggested that residents make certain that all doors are locked before retiring for the night.

NATIVE WINE PRICES UP

Increase At Liquor Stores Goes In Effect

Prices of Canadian wines and French wines and brandies will rise in Ontario liquor shops on Monday, October 2.

"The value of the French brandy has almost doubled," Chairman Stewart McCleughan explained. One brand of French brandy, which formerly sold at $4 a bottle, was raised to $4.25 a month ago and now it goes up to $4.75. There are jumps of from 5 to 25 cents a bottle on French wines.

"We have not raised the prices to the full extent of the increase in the franc," said the chairman. "We are figuring on an exchange going down a little."

Canadian wine now selling for 35 cents a bottle, rises to 40 cents and the former 40-cent bottle will be 50 cents. A bettering of the quality is said to be responsible.

GIVE 4-YEAR TERM IN COBourg CASE

Four years in Kingston Penitentiary was the sentence on William Smith, 21-year-old married man of Cobourg, found guilty on a serious charge. A second charge of the same nature, was reduced to indecent assault and the full term of two years imposed, less whipping, sentence to run concurrently.

T. F. Hall, K.C., defense counsel, raised objection that when George Killick, employer of Smith, came up under a charge which had the same circumstances and witnesses, he had only received two years, while Smith had been sentenced to four years.

IS YOUR ENJOYMENT PLAY FOR YOUR EYES?

Work or study, all day long. Papers, words, figures, day in, day out

Then play. But is it play for your eyes? Reading, watching the movie, driving the car, playing games, making things with your hands: it is all hard work for your eyes, unless they see quickly, see accurately and see easily, without strain.

Give the only pair of eyes you'll ever have all the help you can. Keep them accurate and comfortable. Don't strain them. Have them examined at least every two years.

OSHAWA WOMEN 'HOLDING BAG'

Smooth Talker Puts Over Good Job On Selling 'Fly Exterminator'

Buying a "pig in a poke" is poor business as a group of Oshawa housewives discovered, after falling for the smooth sales talk of a peddler who recently made the rounds of city homes. The young salesman was distributing a sure method of exterminating flies and other insect pests. Worried by the influx of flies driven indoors by the fall weather, the women were excellent customers.

The exterminator was in a paper bag which according to directions, was to be hung on the wall in the room to be cleared of flies. Directions stated, with explicit instructions that the bag was not to be opened or the exterminating element inside would lose its potency from exposure to the air.

"It is used in the best homes in the country and has been very expensive until recently," declared the salesman, mentioning well known homes in Oshawa.

They sold rapidly and the peddler, after doing a rushing business, left the city to carry his message to other communities eager to be rid of the household pest. A few days passed and a number of women in the city noticed there were just as many flies around the kitchens as there had been before the mysterious exterminator had been hung on the walls.

Disregarding the explicit instructions several of the women finally opened the paper bags taking them to the windows in case they might be overcome by powerful poisonous fumes from within the bag. Inside they found an ordinary piece of black cardboard, nothing more.

CANTON

Anniversary Services Sunday To Be Followed By Fowl Supper Monday

School is withdrawn for next Sunday on account of the anniversary but will convene at 2.30 p.m. the following Sunday and thereafter until further notice.

The anniversary services will be held at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Rev. W. F. Banister will preach both morning and evening. Special music by the choir with Mrs. A. S. Doggett, Oshawa as soloist.

"Good wine needs no bush" so the fowl supper on Monday night needs no eulogizing but the entertainment which will follow is somewhat out of the ordinary for Canton and therefore needs description. There will be a trio of musicians from Peterboro, viz. Stanley Northup, A.T.C.M., violin; Harry Northrup, A.T.C.M., piano, and Jack Thackeray, cello, assisted by Lewis, cartoonist and ventriloquist, also of Peterboro. If you enjoy a good feed and an evening of high class fun, come along.

Personals
Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Sykes and daughter Miss Elinor, Hampton; Miss Helen Knox, Fenella, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Barrie on Sunday.

Mr. T. Smith spent Sunday in Oshawa, with his daughters and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Steele.

Mrs. Whitehead and baby Arnold, Rossmount were Saturday guests of her sister, Mrs. George Watkins, Batterwood Farm.

Mrs. B. F. Peters, Toronto, was at church last Sunday, guest of Mrs. M. Bickle.

Mrs. S. Bradley, Grafton, Mrs. H. Warfield, Canandaigua, N.Y., and Mr. Justice Lapp, Grafton, visited at Braeside on Thursday of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Peters, Ruth and Pauline with his father, Mr. W. A. Peters visited Mr. and Mrs. W. Montgomery, Wooler, and also Rev. J. F. Lane and Mrs. Lane, Frankford on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Watkins,

Eugene and Reginald, spent Sunday with Mrs. C. Cole, Bewdley.

Hart House Quartette returned to Toronto on Monday after spending ten days at Durham House, guests of Hon. Vincent Massey.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Gist, Toronto, spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Gist.

It Pays To Advertise

"Why don't the people of Canton have sufficient enterprise to put up a sign board bearing the name of their village if they are not ashamed of it?" asked a bewildered and belated motorist who had unwittingly passed through the village and some miles beyond in quest of Canton.

Will the town fathers kindly consider the question? As this is by no means unusual occurrence.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

SEPTEMBER 28, 1913

Port Hope Market

There was a fairly large attendance at the Port Hope market on September 25th, 1913. Potatoes were plentiful at $1.00 a bag but sales came slowly. Butter held the high figure of 30c per pound and eggs advanced to 25c a dozen. Chickens were plentiful at 90c to $1.10 a pair.

OCTOBER 2, 1913

A Joy Ride With Fatal Results

A well known Cobourg chauffeur went for a little joy ride with his Port Hope sweetheart. But as the facts says, "love is blind," and while nearing the first toll gate on the Cobourg road so taken up were the lovers with each other's charms that they failed to notice a rooster strutting across the road in front of the toll gate, and consequently the rooster met its doom. When returning to Cobourg from Port Hope (alone) in a more sensible frame of mind, the chauffeur was met by an old lady for having killed her rooster.

"You'll pay for that rooster of mine that you killed," said the old lady.

"What rooster?" said the chauffeur.

"You know well enough what rooster, that rooster of mine that you run over when you were joy riding with that there Port Hope girl of yours," said the old lady.

"How much," said the unfortunate man.

"Fifty cents and don't let it occur again," said the old lady.

"All right, but give me the dead rooster," said the shrewd young man. "Isn't a live chicken enough for you without a dead rooster," was the sharp reply.

With that the chauffeur drove on to Cobourg saying that it was a good afternoon's fun for fifty cents anyway.

OCTOBER 3, 1913

Pleasantly Surprised

Mr. and Mrs. Walls were pleasantly surprised when about sixty of their friends from Cobourg and Port Hope gathered at their home on Bramley Street to celebrate with them the tenth anniversary of their marriage. Mrs. Walls was presented with a solid oak mantle clock and Mr. Walls with an Oddfellows watch fob. The evening was spent pleasantly in games, music and dancing.

Kitchen Shower

A number of friends of Miss Louise Baxter gathered at the home of Mr. T. Milne, Cavan Street, and presented her with a kitchen shower. The employees of the Ideal Clothing presented Miss Baxter with a beautiful oak rocker.

TELEPHONE COURSE FOR BRITISH BOYS

Teaching boys the rudiments of a telephone is a new branch of work for the British Post Office and to this end 1,000 skeleton telephones have been sent to schools in all parts of the United Kingdom. The telephones are to be used for instructional purposes as part of an effort to make the youth of Britain telephone-minded.

A Post Office official said: "These telephone outfits have been produced at the request of big business houses, who complain that office boys, who have just left school, are 'frightened' by the telephone. We shall, therefore, loan them to schools so that the boys can not only obtain telephone instruction, but also see exactly how the telephone works. The Board of Education has co-operated in this scheme."

THE CHRISTMAS ROSE

Christmas roses should be planted in September in deep, well-drained sandy loam. The Christmas rose, as the Dominion Horticulturist has pointed out, is not really a rose but it will bloom at Christmas if the climate is not too severe. In Ottawa it blooms up to February and may be plucked if the snow is removed. One amateur gardener in that city grows Christmas roses successfully by covering the plants with a box in the fall, which prevents the delicate flowers from being spoiled by the weight of snow. The flowers are white, sometimes tinged with pink.
