CHARLES FOSTER IS FINED $200

Bottled Evidence Uncovered By Constables Denton And Carey

A bottle of moonshine liquor and several other bottles which were alleged to have contained the same fiery liquid held the spotlight in Peterboro police court. Considerable mystery surrounded the ownership of the illicit spirits and the bottles, a quartet of witnesses swearing profoundly that they knew nothing about them. However, the bottled evidence was uncovered by Constable L. A. Denton, R.C.M.P. of Cobourg and Constable Carey, in the outbuildings on the property of Charles Foster, Monaghan Road, on August 5, and after all the evidence was in, Police Magistrate Langley found that Foster was guilty of the charge and that he did have in possession illicit spirits without lawful excuse under section 181 of the Excise Act. He ordered Foster to pay a fine of $200 or be confined to the county jail for the next three months.

ORDERED TO LEAVE PARK

Harness Horsemen Summarily Ordered Out Of Oshawa Park

The Oshawa Parks Commission has declared war against the harness horse traders who are squatting in Alexandra Park. They have been given 24 hours to clear out of the park, and unless they are gone by today the police will be asked to evict them forcibly. About 15 racing men from various parts of the province, together with about an equal number of parents and trotters, are making Oshawa a centre for their training operations.

Among other things the commission complains that their presence interferes with athletics, that they are creating a nuisance and that they are undesirable visitors. To give legal strength to these contentions they point out that there is a parks by-law forbidding anyone to remain on the grounds after 11 o'clock at night. The trainers have been established in the buildings since spring, and claim that they were given permission to use them.

CHARGE WOMAN SECURITIES ACT

Remanded At Bowmanville For Week On Three Counts

Martha Christina Milne, Dundonald Street, Toronto, appearing on three charges at Bowmanville under the Securities Act of 1930, was remanded for one week when she appeared before Magistrate R. M. Cotton in Police Court. The charge, which was preferred by Provincial Officer W. E. Smith, alleged the accused did unlawfully trade in securities without being registered as a broker, did promise to purchase a security offered for sale, and did also call at a private home for the purpose of trading securities, contrary to Section 3, 24 and 29 of the act.

ALERT DRIVER LANDS FORGER

Recognized On Road Near Brighton By Whitty Taxi Driver

Through the alertness of Richard Heard, Whitty taxi driver, a man named Jay Gibson, giving his address as Toronto, is in the county jail awaiting trial on two charges of forgery. Mr. Heard was proceeding to Belleville when a man stopped him nine miles from Brighton Village and asked for a ride. Mr. Heard recognized the man as Gibson, who, it is alleged, gave him a cheque some weeks ago, made out to a Whitty hotel, which was found to be a forgery when taken to a Whitty bank. Gibson was taken back to Brighton by Mr. Heard who turned him over to the provincial police there after he had communicated with Night Constable John Thomas, Chief of Police H. W. Quattrill brought the man back to Whitty. It is alleged that he passed bogus cheques on two hotels. At one of them he stayed for two weeks. It is stated that the man is also wanted in Toronto on a warrant on another charge.

MEN'S FORUM FIRST MEETING

Rev. D. McTavish To Speak On 'Impressions Of The Liberal Convention'

President James Moir states that the opening meeting of the Port Hope Men's Forum will be held on the 15th of October when the speaker will be the Rev. Duncan McTavish and the subject "Impressions of the Liberal Convention." On the following Sunday the leader of the Forum, Dr. J. D. Reynolds, will give the general nature of the discussions proposed for the ensuing season.

The committee responsible for arranging speakers has a very interesting list of names of authorities on various subjects such as Mental Hygiene, Music, Sport, Literature, Economics, etc., and it is hoped that the schedule for 1933-34 will meet with the approval of a greater number than ever of the residents of Port Hope.

The meeting held last night was not an executive meeting as reported but a committee meeting. A meeting of the executive will be called within the next day or so.

AWARD PRIZES WEEKLY DRAW

Treasure Night At Capitol Theatre Is Popular Attraction Monday Night

Garfath Mitchell was the lucky winner of the major prize in the Treasure Night draw at the Capitol Theatre Monday night. Once again a large crowd was present for the occasion with Reeve Elliott drawing the tickets.

The screen attraction, "Jennie Gerhardt," is a dramatic story with Sylvia Sydney doing some remarkably fine acting. The story is a gripping one and provides a wide scope for the talents of this popular star.

- The complete list of prize winners in the drawing are as follows:—
1. Norman Strong, Centre Piece Tray.
  2. Miss M. Cancilla, Sandwich Tray.
  3. Lorne Williams, Comport.
  4. Mrs. P. Zealand, Casserole.
  5. C. Watters, Roll Tray.
  6. Mrs. S. Cancilla, Pie Plate.
  7. Garfath Mitchell, Dresserware Set.
  8. Miss F. Johns, Butter Dish.
  9. G. Bradley, Flower Basket.
  10. Miss Sydney Bennett, Bon Bon Dish.

ARREST FOUR ON HIGHWAY

County Constable's Alertness Results In Recovery Of Goods

Alertness of Constable Frank Atkinson, county constable residing at Brighton, led to the arrest of four alleged store burglars. The four men, Myrtle Pries, aged 36, William Ross, aged 19, and John Ross, of North Oshawa, along with Roy Kimble, of Rural Route No. 3, Whitley, were taken to Brighton by Constable Atkinson and Constable Cagne where they were taken into custody by Sergeant Thompson and Constable Stringer of Belleville and taken to that city to face charges of theft.

Constable Atkinson was returning to Brighton and stopped when he noticed a car on the side of the road one mile east of the village. Four men were engaged in changing the two rear tires, which Constable Atkinson suspected to belong to Arlin Thompson, rural resident near Brighton, which had been stolen along with a reflector. Looking inside the car he found about $500 worth of men's and women's wear and immediately placed the four under arrest. Constable Cagne was sent for and assisted Atkinson in bringing the prisoners into town.

Belleville police were notified and some time later, Merton Sorrels, Frankford clothier, informed the authorities at Belleville that his store was broken into. He was brought to Brighton where he identified his goods as those which had been in the possession of the four alleged thieves. They were accordingly taken to Belleville to stand trial and will also face a charge of theft of the tires.

ORANGE WALK IN PORT HOPE

Invitations To Be Sent Out To Lodges Of Five Counties

The annual celebration of the Battle of the Boyne will be held in Port Hope on July 12th, 1934 and the Port Hope L.O.L. have already started making arrangements for the event. Invitations will be sent out to the various lodges at an early date and the counties include Durham, Northumberland, Victoria, South Ontario and Peterboro. The local committee in charge of arrangements include P. H. Zealand, E. P. Sanders and Sam Pearce.

On November 10th, a monster dance and draw will be run off in the Town Hall here for the purpose of making funds to help defray the preliminary expenses and further details regarding the function will be published at a later date.

THIEVES ACTIVE SUNDAY MORNING

Goods Stolen From George Caldwell's Garage—Second Attempt Made

Between the hours of three and four o'clock Sunday morning, thieves effected an entrance to the garage at the rear of the residence of George E. Caldwell, Ellen Street, and made an escape with a quantity of goods. A battery was removed from the car and as well, the burglars stole a number of spark plugs, and a set of chains hanging on the wall.

Prowler Escaped
At an early hour Sunday morning, a sole marauder entered the residence of Robert Hume, Dorset Street, by means of a window. He walked through a bed-room and when the occupants were aroused, the visitor made a hasty retreat. It is believed that nothing was stolen.

Local police are investigating both affairs.

FRAUD CHARGES ARE ADJOURNED

Cobourg Magistrate Instructs Complainant To Lay A More Specific Charge

While a jammed courtroom awaited with interest the start of proceedings at Cobourg on Tuesday in connection with conspiracy to defraud charges against the mayor and four councillors, the case did not get under way, Magistrate J. H. Davidson acceding to the request of Col. F. D. Boggs, K.C., Crown Attorney for an adjournment.

Mayor Jack Delanty and Councilors Reuben Jackson, William J. Maher, Archie Russell and William Jennings, the defendants, were represented by Archie Cochrane, K.C., and T. F. Hall K.C., and the complainant, Harry A. Allan, was represented by Fred McMahon, of Port Hope as private prosecutor.

The charge of conspiring to defraud by deceit or other means, which had been laid against the mayor and four councillors, was objected to by defense counsel as too vague. Magistrate J. H. Davidson ordered that the charge be amended to one of more definite terms on or before Sept. 7 and adjourned the case until Sept. 13th.

When the court was opened, Col Boggs immediately asked the magistrate for an adjournment.

"I must object to an adjournment," declared Archie Cochrane, K.C. "There is a charge, which by the way is decidedly vague against five respectable citizens of the town and they have come here at a sacrifice of time and business to answer to this charge. I do not see why their time this morning should have been wasted."

"I haven't had time to prepare for this case. I have been busy, just the same as these other gentlemen are," declared Col. Boggs.

"Well, I intend to object to the way this information has been laid, either now or later. I might just as well point out now that there are no specific charges in the information. I would suggest to your Worship that if you consent to an adjournment that it be on condition that the charge be made more definite so that we can have some idea what the charge really is. I am going on the assumption that it is in connection with a sewer but I must confess, that I cannot follow the flights of fancy of Mr. Allan's mind," stated Mr. Cochrane.

The magistrate accordingly adjourned the case until Sept. 13th with a ruling that the charge be amended to one more definite.

JURY PROBES WORKER'S DEATH

John Comar Came To His Death By Being Hit By Train

That John Comar, Port Hope, came to his death on August 23 when struck by a C.P.R. passenger train at the Kingston crossing, 2 miles east of Cobourg, was the verdict at the inquest held at Cobourg. Death was purely accidental, the verdict stated.

Comar was struck by a C.P.R. east-bound passenger train. None of the witnesses saw how the fatality actually occurred. Members of the jury were: Thomas Grieves, W. Marshall, E. Thompson, J. Burnett, C. Flannigan, T. Kelly, R. Hilliard and J. Manley.

F. Manion, Port Hope section foreman, stated that Comar was working with the section men repairing the crossing.

"I didn't see how it happened. I was some distance away. But after the train had passed, I saw his body on the highway near the track," related Manion. Asked if any warning had been given, witness said that he had given the men the signal to clear when the train approached.

SHOOTING DATES ARE ANNOUNCED

Holders Of Licenses May Kill Birds In Deer Season

Open season for the hunting of partridge in Ontario this autumn is to run from Oct. 9 to Oct. 19, inclusive, Hon. G. H. Challies, Minister of Game and Fisheries has announced, an order-in-council to this effect having been passed by the Cabinet. But hunters possessing deer or moose hunting licenses may shoot partridge for six days of the deer hunting season, the periods differing in the several hunting districts.

For Residents
The season from Oct. 9 to Oct. 19 is open for all parts of Ontario except Crown game preserves, Provincial parks and any other lands which are legally prohibited. This particular period is open only to residents of the Province who have gun licenses. The other periods set aside specifically for those with deer and moose hunting licenses are not restricted to residents, any one possessing the above license being allowed to shoot partridge.

These periods are as follows: In the district north of the main line of the Canadian National Railways—deer and moose; Sept. 15 to Nov. 25; partridge: Oct. 20 to Oct. 25, inclusive. In the district south of the C.N.R. line and north of the C.P.R. line from North Bay to Heron Bay, and north of the Mattawa River—deer and moose; Oct. 20 to Nov. 25; partridge: Oct. 20 to Oct. 25, inclusive.

In the district south of the C.P.R. line and north of the French River—deer and moose; Nov. 1 to Nov. 5, inclusive.

In that part of Ontario lying south of the French River—deer and moose; Nov. 5 to Nov. 25; partridge: Nov. 6 to Nov. 10, inclusive. On St. Joseph's Island—deer and moose; Nov. 10 to Nov. 25; partridge: Nov. 10 to Nov. 15, inclusive. It will be noted that, except for the most northerly district, the partridge hunting season is open to the hunters of deer for roughly the first six days of the deer season.

In releasing the above schedule, Mr. Challies explained that by the arrangement, residents of the Province would have the first opportunity at the partridge; and also in the general period allotted to them they would not be bothered by the high-powered rifles used by the deer hunters. Anders allowed them a time in which the other periods for the deer hunt to hunt partridge while out after deer or moose.

Bag Allowed

The bag allowed partridge hunters is five of each of the following varieties in one day, or a total of 15 of each kind in season—ruffed grouse (birch partridge); Canada grouse (spruce partridge); sharp-tailed grouse (prairie chicken); prairie hen and ptarmigan. The hunter may take his quota of each type, provided he can get them.

According to the Order-in-Council, the birds must be used for food or mounting on or before five days after the end of the partridge season, unless subsequent possession has been approved by special permission.

ARMY RALLY AT BELLEVILLE

Delegates From Port Hope Attend Annual District Meeting

Delegates from Port Hope, Cobourg, Lindsay, Peterboro, Kingston, Tweed, Trenton, Toronto, Napanee, and Campbellford, were present Monday at the annual district meeting of the Salvation Army officers, which was held in the Army Citadel at Belleville.

A private afternoon session was held, after which the visiting delegates were served with light refreshments. Major E. J. Riches, divisional commander of the East Toronto Division, presided, while over 20 officers were present.

A new camera can take 2,000 pictures a second and also record the timing.

GIRL MARATHONER CONFESSES DRUNK

Daisy King Shaw Ordered To Return To Montreal

An entrant in the women's swim at the Toronto Exhibition Friday, Daisy King Shaw, Quebec marathoner, arrived at the Fair Grounds. She was arrested.

Before Magistrate Patterson in Women's Court Saturday she pleaded guilty to being drunk.

"It is her first offense, and she has friends to take her back to Montreal," said her counsel, Austin Ross. "I will remand her for sentence to go to Montreal. Remember, if you come back it will be your second offense, and the fine is $50," said Her Worship.

She left court with two girl friends. She was given a chance to leave the Exhibition but refused. Constable Gardener (4), arrested her.

Daisy King Shaw was an entrant in the last Women's Marathon. She started seven minutes late, and only swam a short distance.

SHORT SESSION TOWN COUNCIL

Meeting Tuesday Night Lasts Only Ten Minutes—Mayor Crowhurst Presided

The regular meeting of the Town Council held at the Town Hall Tuesday night was the shortest recorded this year and was completed in ten minutes. All members were present with Mayor Crowhurst presiding and only minor routine details were considered.

Communications were entirely confined to notice of admittance of indigent patients to hospital and all were received and filed.

Two resolutions, one granting $75 for direct relief and the other advancing $100 to the Parks Commission on account of estimates, were passed. The meeting then adjourned.

SHOWER GIVEN BRIDE ELECT

Mrs. Donald Skitch Presented With Miscellaneous Gifts At Surprise Party

Mrs. Donald Skitch (nee Miss Maizie Bye) was the guest of honor at a shower held at her home on Ridout Street Thursday night and was the recipient of a number of different gifts.

The affair was arranged by Misses Elsie Blow and Helen Cornthwaite and about twenty of the friends of the bride elect were present for the occasion. Mrs. Skitch was taken completely by surprise and entered the room to find the assembled gathering and a table laden with miscellaneous gifts.

The evening was spent playing bridge and dainty refreshments were served at the close.

DISTRICT MEETING HERE THURSDAY

Mrs. E. B. Freeman Duly Installed As Rebekah District Deputy

Mrs. E. B. Freeman of Ganaraska Rebekah Lodge was installed District Deputy of District No. 18 at a meeting of representatives at the local I.O.O.F. Hall here Thursday. Whitty, Bowmanville, Oshawa and Port Hope were represented at the meeting.

The impressive installation ceremony was fittingly carried out by Mrs. Frankie Branton, of Oshawa, Past District Deputy and as well, Mrs. J. Ham was installed as District Secretary.

During the afternoon, considerable business pertaining to the work of the Order was discussed and at six o'clock, a delightful banquet was served.

SCUGOG RESORT STORE IS RAZED

Government Inspector Reports Relief In Lindsay Area Greatly Reduced

A destructive fire occurred at Caesarea, Scugog Lake, when the store and resort of David Harron was totally destroyed, together with the contents. The cause of the fire is a mystery. Mr. Harron lives about half a mile from the store and was awakened by a passing motorist. When he arrived on the scene the building was a mass of flames. The loss is estimated at $2,500 with insurance totalling $800.

WARNING ISSUED AGAINST FIRES

Merchants Asked To Clean Out Sidewalk Gratings Containing Debris

Chief Constable Thomas Murphy has issued a warning against fires to owners and occupiers of stores on Walton street. There are several gratings in the sidewalk and many become clogged with waste papers, and other debris.

A lighted match, accidentally dropped or a cigar or cigarette butt carelessly thrown away, may cause heavy damage and in the interests of safety, the police department would appreciate if the gratings were cleaned out.

FINE PAID BY BRIGHTON MAN

PASTOR AND BRIDE RECEPTION FOR

Canton U.C. Charge Welcomes Rev. Franklin And Mrs. Banister

All last week members and adherents of the three congregations which compose Canton charge, looked eagerly forward to Friday, because on that day their beloved pastor and his bride would return from their honeymoon vacation. The parsonage, freshly painted and papered wherever such renovation was needed had been thoroughly cleaned throughout, furniture re-arranged and flowers placed in various rooms so as to render it all as homey and inviting as possible.

Only immediate relatives were at the parsonage to welcome the bride and groom on their arrival in the late afternoon but in the evening, Community Hall gaily decorated with gladioli and asters was filled with people waiting to give an enthusiastic reception to Rev. W. F. Banister and Mrs. Banister.

As Garden Hill appointment is Mr. Banister's home community, it was fitting that from there should come the major portion of the program, five numbers. Piano Duet, Mrs. Walter Caldwell and Miss Helen Wilson; reading, Mrs. Milton Dunbar; vocal duet, Mrs. Hammill and Lawrence Dunbar; vocal solo, Mrs. Terry; reading, Mrs. S. P. Grey.

Elizabethville furnished an excellent chairman in the person of Mr. E. White and contributed two selections, piano duet, Miss Birdega White and Miss Leta Powell; reading, Mrs. T. Sowden. Canton male quartette gave two numbers and Miss Jean Hawkins a reading.

When the chairman called on Mrs. Grey, he also requested Mr. and Mrs. Banister to take seats upon the stage while Mrs. Grey read as follows,—Dear Pastor and Mrs. Banister,—

"This happy evening gathering is to congratulate and welcome you both to our community, our church and to our hearts. Pleasant memories take us back some years when Franklin came to our midst a high school boy energetic and always successful. As Sunday School teacher and Taxis leader in Garden Hill, you proved a devoted and faithful friend of the young, directing them to truer and nobler ideas. Your sterling character, affable and kindly disposition and Christ-like humility have endeared you to us, and now, as our pastor and minister you are among us still "As he that serveth." Truly one having such a motto as this is a prince with men and a Priest of God.

"To serve us most effectively you have won a fair lady whom we are proud to call "Mistress of the parsonage." We welcome you Mrs. Banister to our community and to our church, feeling that as time goes on you will be grafted to our hearts with hooks of steel. Your sympathetic nature and deep and moral sense have made you a successful teacher and popular girl friend in your home school and community, which fact has been proven by the many tokens of appreciation you have received. We feel that appreciation is to helpfulness as rain is to flowers. So may you and Franklin be refreshed and encouraged in our midst by our slight token of this evening.

"We ask you to accept this clock, and, as you listen to its soft chiming tones may you be reminded of the perfect harmony existing between the members of our big church family.

"As you use this chair and it finds a real place in your home may you be ever convinced that Canton Circuit is the real corner of God's vineyard for your usefulness and labour."

Signed,—
W. BICKLE, Sec. Official Board.
T. C. BARRIE.
M. T. GARDNER.
VERNON PEACOCK.

At the proper moment Mr. Terry, Garden Hill, withdrew the curtain concealing the lovely gifts and the Westminster Chimes of the clock most obligingly rang out the hour.

Mr. Banister, on behalf of Mrs. Banister and himself replied in a masterly and eloquent speech.

The program concluded, the crowd repaired to the basement and during their progress thither Mrs. Stanley Gist rendered a delightful selection on the piano.

Refreshments were then served, the bridal party occupying a special table beneath a canopy of wedding bells and streamers of blue and white.

Girls' Softball
A while ago Canton softball team went to Cambourne to play against that team and were defeated. Then on Friday of last week, the Cambourne girls came here and our girls defeated them by one run, though when they went to bat at the last inning the visitors were ten ahead. The teams will play off at Cambourne on Friday of this week and here's hoping.

Personals
Rev. J. F. Lane, Mrs. Lane, Helen and Kenneth, were calling on friends in the village last Thursday, en route from Oakwood to their home at Frankford.

Mr. and Mrs. George Watkins, Eugene and Reginald spent a few days in Toronto last week attending the C.N.E.

Miss Margaret Pollard returned to Highland Grove on Sunday to resume her duties in that school. Her mother, Mrs. A. P. Pollard and brother Alfred motored up with her.

Miss Jean Hawkins and Miss Evelyn Gist are again ruling in their respective realms, viz. Quay's school and Canton.

Miss Bertha Austin left on Monday to attend high school at Frankford. Bertha is a very popular member of our younger set and has many friends besides, all of whom hope she will have a good time and win honours for herself and her native village.

Mrs. Jean Sickey and Billy with Bobby Fryer returned to Toronto on Thursday of last week. Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Wallace and family accompanied them and all attended the Ex. Miss Margaret Wallace and Beatson remained in Toronto over the weekend and fore part of this week.

E. W. Jennings, I.P.S., Lindsay, visited his uncle, Mr. W. G. Jennings, Braeside, last Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Gist, Toronto, were week-end guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Gist.

Last Sunday, the Male Choir was again in charge of the praise service, of which an especially interesting feature was the duet "Somebody" by Ronald Doggett, Oshawa, and Will Watkins.

PREDICT RISE IN GAS PRICE

Sequel To Boost In Crude Oil Cost, Says Officials

Further advances in the price of crude oil in the United States producing fields make increased prices for gasoline inevitable in Canada, according to Toronto oil company officials and it is expected that within a few days there will be a general advance in the Canadian price structure.

The increased cost of crude in the United States has already been followed by increases of from a half cent to one and three-fifths cents per wine gallon in that country. Last Saturday prices in New York and New England advanced one cent. Thursday they increased half a cent in the Middle West, and word was received that they will advance one cent or more on the Atlantic Seaboard, the Gulf Coast and in California.

Under the influence of NRA, the crude oil market has strengthened greatly, and prices in the Mid-Continent field, which is the largest producing area in America, are now three times the low prices prevailing earlier in the year. As the Mid-Continent field produces 65 per cent. of United States crude, price movements there are naturally reflected in other fields, including those in Canada.

Sentenced At Belleville

Pleading guilty to a charge of breaking, entering and robbing the general store owned by Michael Sables, of Frankford, four Oshawa youths, Merle Prest, Ralph Campbell, William Ross and John Ross, were sentenced to terms in jail by Magistrate Mikel at Belleville. The leader of the group, Prest, received from one to two years in Guelph Reformatory, while the younger members received terms of one month in the common jail. The quartet were arrested Tuesday morning by County Constable Atkinson, of Brighton.

UNSEATED FOR UNPAID TAXES

But William Scriver, Brighton, Was Re-Elected By Acclamation

Climaxing a tense situation that has gripped the ratepayers and school board of School Section No. 28, Brighton township, William Scriver, recently disqualified by a judgment from holding office as trustee, was re-elected by acclamation. Following the re-election of Scriver and of Cecil Samis the resignations of Fred Deonan trustee and Harry Bedal, secretary-treasurer, were demanded and immediately accepted when tendered. Deonan and Bedal several weeks ago asked for an order from Judge L. V. O'Connor disqualifying Scriver and Samis, on the grounds that they had not paid their taxes. Under an amendment in the School Act, Judge O'Connor found it necessary to disqualify the two trustees.

It was a common rumor at the time, that hiring of Bedal's daughter as teacher of the school, had been refused by Scriver and Samis. Later proceedings were taken to unseat the two.

However, having straightened out the tax deal that had been the stumbling block both Samis and Scriver were nominated and elected, at the board meeting called for the purpose of filling the vacancies.

Junior Farmers Complete Judging At Exhibition

Junior Farmers attending the C. N.E. as guests of the directorate completed their judging contests yesterday. The classes judged were fruit and vegetables, and grain and roots. Winners of the fruit and vegetable contest were: 1, Maxwell Taylor, Smithville, Lincoln County; 2, A. W. Archibald of Seaforth and William Crompton of Jordan, who tied; 4, Irwin J. Clarkson, Islington; 5, Hygus Torosian, St. Catharines, and 6, Herbert Irwin, Kleinburg. Winners in the grain and root contest were: 1, Clarence Graham, Maple, York County; 2, Vernon Bradley, of Orangeville, and Inman Thompson of St. Paul's, Perth County, who tied; 4, Clifford Marshall of Woodstock; 5, Donald McCallum of Woodbridge, and 6, Oliver J. Smith of Burketon, Durham.

TRAIN CREWS ALLOW RIDERS

Hoboes Can Have Free Freight Train Rides Without Molestation

Taking no chance of any trouble as has been the case in the past, the Canadian National railroad has instructed all train crews not to attempt to molest hoboes "riding the rails." As far as the railway officials are concerned hoboes can have all the free transportation on freight trains they desire.

That was the explanation given a coroner's jury in Toronto by G. E. Elliott, C.N.R. claims agent, who was called to the witness box to testify regarding the death of Peter Huminnik, 33-year-old foreigner, killed while attempting to board a train at the Don Station on August 18. A verdict of accidental death was returned.

Mr. Elliott explained that for a time the train crews tried to keep hoboes off their cars, but so many of their employees were slugged and beaten up that it was decided discretion was the better part of valor and the order to leave them alone was given.

WEDDING BELLS

BAMSEY—BOSNELL

At five o'clock on the afternoon of Thursday, Sept. 7th, a pretty wedding took place at Maple Avenue, Hope Township, the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Bosnell, when their eldest daughter, Helen Elizabeth, was married to Mr. Francis Allan Bamsey, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bamsey, Hope Township.

The bride was led to the altar by her father to the strains of the wedding march played by her sister, Jean. The officiating minister was Rev. W. E. Honey. The bridal couple stood in front of a beautiful bank of ferns and flowers of the season. The bride was attended by her sister, Evelyn, while the groom was supported by his brother, Wilbur. Only a few close friends and relatives were present. The bride was very attractive in a gown of flower chiffon in yellow and white and carrying yellow roses. The traveling suit was brown tweed with accessories to match. The bridesmaid was dressed in white with coat embroidered in green and white and carried pink roses.

After a dainty supper the happy couple left for points west, and on returning will reside in the Welcome neighbourhood.

ELMSLEY—HUGHES

The marriage was quietly solemnized in the chapel of the Metropolitan Church, Toronto of Joyce Lillian, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Hughes, of Toronto, to Mr. Willard Lyman Elmsley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Elmsley, of New Toronto. Rev. Dr. W. H. Sedgewick officiated, and Miss Grace Hughes, sister of the bride, played the wedding music.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Aubrey D. Hughes, wore a gown of robin's egg blue chiffon trimmed with darker velvet. Her hat was of velvet of the same darker shade, and she wore shoes to match her frock and carried a bouquet of pink rosebuds and baby's breath. She was unattended.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Elmsley left for a trip to the Kawartha Lakes. They will live in Port Hope.

SKITCH—BYE

A pretty wedding took place here Saturday afternoon at three o'clock at the United Church Parsonage when Maizie Evelyn, youngest daughter of Mr. William A. Bye and the late Mrs. Bye became the bride of Donald Skitch, son of Mrs. Skitch and the late A. B. Skitch.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Duncan McTavish. The bride

FORUM PICNIC IS LOTS OF FUN

Boys Race, Swim, Play And Eat — Particularly Excelling In Eating

The Forum picnic on Labor Day to Harecourt's Beach, Lake Shore Road, was a tremendous success. Three truck loads of boys and a number of cars brought a lively group to romp at the water's edge and swim about in the lake which was ideal for the occasion.

The Swims
The midget swim was a closely contested affair with Ken Mix crossing the line first, closely followed by Reg. Hopkins.

In the junior class Reg. McElroy and Harold Blow tore away from the others, Blow leading until within fifteen feet of the finish when he suddenly weakened letting McElroy pass him for an easy win.

On Land
There were two midget races with Jack Demill and John Wilson just one and two jumps ahead of the others in one race. In the other race Reg. Bailey, Reg. Hopkins and Art Foote proved to be the fastest on their feet.

Reg. McElroy was not only fast in the water but he led the junior foot race with Raymond Mann right on his heels and Mervyn Nelson just a matter of inches behind.

Tug Of War

The Beavers just took the Lions and the Giants for a long walk when they got them on the string. A couple of the pulls were real battles and the Beavers were starting to slide but they dug in their toes, and cheered and coached by Moss Hewson stopped slipping, then steadily dragged the others over the line.

Hot Dog!

When it came to ice cream, sandwiches and lemonade you should have seen those boys go to work. It was nothing short of marvelous to see how much those little boys could lay away—but when it came to hot dogs they surpassed all former efforts, disposing of ten pounds in less than five minutes.

Around The Camp Fire

In the evening they gathered about a huge camp fire and sang songs. To conclude they thanked all those who had made such a splendid outing possible so that the men felt that their efforts were well rewarded.

Canada is increasing her trade in Trinidad at the expense of the United States.

looked charming in a brown ensemble with matching accessories. The bridesmaid was Miss Ruby Bye, sister of the bride and the groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Fred Skitch.

After the ceremony the happy couple left for a honeymoon at Lake Simcoe. On their return they will reside in Port Hope.

FISHER—GEROW

An event of unusual interest took place at the Central United Church Parsonage Montreal Que., when the Rev. S. L. Pike, pastor of Central United Church, officiated at the wedding ceremony of Irene McTavish, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Gerow of 51 Dundas street, Belleville, Ontario, to Mr. Arthur Roger Fisher, only son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Fisher of Port Hope, Ont.

The bride was becomingly attired in Gunn grey suit of botany serge with fur trimming and grey accessories to match.

Immediately after the ceremony amid flowers and confetti and the good wishes of their friends the young couple left for the home of the groom's uncle, where a sumptuous dinner was served.

The happy couple left on a motor trip through Quebec Province and on their return they will reside in Toronto, where Mr. Fisher is employed by the Imperial Oil.

PORT HOPE MAN MADE DIRECTOR

F. H. Batty Is Appointed To Executive Of Monarch Great Bear Mining Company

Monarch Great Bear Syndicate, Limited, a property in the heart of Canada's newest mining field, in which a considerable number of local investors have become interested, held an organization meeting at the King Edward Hotel in Toronto on Saturday last and elected William F. Sagar, Professor at University of Toronto, president of the company.

Eric V. Oag, Toronto mining consultant was named vice-pres. and managing director with Lindsay C. Macdon, broker, also of Toronto, being appointed secretary-treasurer.

The directors of the company include Gerald C. Murphy, of Murphy Services, Limited, Cameron Bay, Great Bear Lake, and F. H. Batty of The Evening Guide staff, Port Hope.

The company has been capitalized at $150,000 with shares issued at a par value of $1.00. The actual property of the company is in close proximity to mines that have already proven themselves and while development is not far advanced, indications are said to be decidedly favorable. Deposits include both gold and silver.

CANADIAN ROOT CROP

Canadian field root crops, both in yield and quality, raised from Canadian-grown seed are in many cases superior and in all cases equal to crops of the same varieties grown from imported seed. However, previous to the Great War there existed a misconception in the Dominion that field root seed grown in Canada was not capable of producing as good crops as seed of the same varieties imported from Europe. Until that time the amount of field root seed raised in Canada was negligible, the bulk of the seed used being imported from Europe, supplemented by small quantities from the United States.

During the war imported seed was not available and it was a case of growing seed in Canada or cutting down the acreage of the crops. The Department of Agriculture led the way and since then ample proof has been given, particularly through the extensive tests by the Experimental Farms and Stations, of the continued stability of Canadian-grown seed.

SEED CLEANING MACHINES

Special machines are required for the preparation of mangel, sugar beet, and carrot seeds for the market. From the two first-named crops all pieces of stalk must be removed. This separation is made with machines which take advantage of the fact that the seed is round whilst the sticks are more or less flat and will not roll. The machine consists of a travelling endless belt set at an incline upon which the seed to be cleaned is fed. Carrot seed has small spines which cause the individual seeds to cling together, so that, before the carrot seed can be cleaned and graded, the spines must be removed by rubbing. There are several types of machines for this purpose, but plans of small mangel and carrot seed cleaning devices can be obtained from the Division of Forage Plants, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

HEARD ON THE STREET

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 6.

Are you going to school? The schools are busy now, public high and political! It seems a very sound idea to have political schools—for it appears that both electorate and members of government could do with a better understanding of each other and how they should co-operate.

Hu Shih's talk on Political Education in China last night at the Liberal Summer School showed the great value of education through schools, propaganda, and newspapers, in bringing about great reforms.

With all our education there seems to be something lacking or we would be intelligent enough to have kept out of war and the present mess.

There are Lions in Port Hope! The natives know it; but, visitors to the town will be informed of the fact by new signs that will be erected at the three main entrances. The signs have been approved by the Mayor and will be put up to-day by members of the local club.

Visitors in town last night were admiring our light streamers on the main street which makes Port Hope outstanding to tourists passing this way at night.

This rain won't do us any harm and we hope the forest fire areas will get a real drenching so that the appalling loss will be stopped.

The Hamilton Salvation Army band, which was in town on Sunday, entertained the inmates of the children's shelter to a concert on the Shelter grounds, Bruton street. A delightful program was presented and the act of the visiting bandmen was much appreciated.

Miss Margaret Ferguson, King's Highway east, had some thirty of her friends at her home for a wine-and-roses. A program of games and music made the evening pass very pleasantly.

Montreal, Toronto, and New York papers are represented by staff reporters at the Liberal Summer Conference here and as well the happenings are being covered by the Canadian Press serving a wide field of newspapers. Staff operators are stationed at the C.N. and C.P. Telegraph offices for handling the vast amount of wordage.

Thomas Garnett & Sons, local contractors, are demolishing the Old East Primary School on Elgin street—a school through which thousands of Canadians gained their earlier education.

Mr. Lofkin, 37 Bastedo ave., Toronto, reported to Bowmanville police that a club bag dropped from his car in Bowmanville was picked up by a passenger in another car, and the car drove away before he was able to secure the number. The club bag contained clothes and other articles. No trace of it has been found as yet.

Magistrate J. H. Davidson of Cobourg reserved judgment in a wage claim brought by a former employee against Mrs. Bertha Green, Cobourg, hotel proprietress. The hearing involved a mass of evidence concerning books kept by both parties. T. F. Hall, K.C., appeared for the defendant and A. J. Skeans for the claimant.

Cobourg citizens reverted to standard time on Labor Day after a period of daylight saving time, which commenced on May 29th. The change to old time will be welcomed by rural residents who find the fast time inconvenient for shopping and market day.

The opening meeting of the United Church Young People's Society was in the open air at the beach in the silvery light of the moon until two bright cherry fires blazed up gleaming the silver with gold. Besides community singing Bill Duncan gave a solo, and Lex Shepherd and Roy Philip gave a report of their trip as delegates to the Oak Lake Summer School. Weiners, coffee and so on, were laid away and the youngsters went home to sleep.

The Hamilton Township grader has been working on the roads in Baltimore vicinity and the roads are much improved.

Mrs. Albert Woodward, 236 Richmond street east, Oshawa, has a sunflower growing in her garden which would be the pride of any horticulturist. Growing on this one plant there are 83 buds, while one flower alone is 1 1/2 inches in diameter.

Owned by Fred Murray and stolen from his home at Colborne four weeks ago, a car was recovered eight miles north of the village, hidden in a clump of woods. Constables Frank Atkinson and J. Gagne recovered the car.

A forty-hour working week for Canadian General Electric Company employees in the Peterboro plant will go into force Monday, it was announced by Works Manager C. A. Salmonson. The change from the forty-five-hour week is expected to provide employment for a considerable portion of the plant's former staff.

Miss Irene McMahon won "The Chair" at the Capital Treasure Hunt Wednesday night. The other successful hunters were: Mrs. H. Shepherd, bread knife; Miss Dorothy Fourt, cornport; Miss Meretta Brown, set of linen; Mrs. E. L. Sculthorpe, bed lamp; Miss K. Daley, knife set; Mrs. J. Nelson, Smith street, blanket; Mrs. E. Grace, Indian print; Miss Elsie Ansell, salad bowl; Miss G. Innes, bed lamp. Only ladies were called so it might be referred to as Ladies Treasure Night.

Mr. and Mrs. James Harvey Forrest of Toronto have announced the engagement of their daughter, Jessie, to Harold Edward Martin, only son of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Martin of Port Hope.

"I'd Lay Me Down And Die" "I can't live without your daughter, sir." "Right; I'll pay for the funeral!"

T. Johns and E. Goodman of Oshawa were eliminated in the first round of the Globe Scotch doubles at Toronto yesterday, being defeated by the R.O.Y.C. rink 13-7.

The Port Hope Golf and Country Club has extended an invitation to players in general to enjoy the full privileges for the balance of the season at a nominal green fee of fifty cents per day and no doubt many will take advantage of this special offer.

Two girls and boys from Port Hope, left this morning on the Canadian National railways for a two-day stay in Toronto, the guests of the William Wrigley Co. The party included Norah Hugh, Grace Hudson, Alex Watts and Frank Hill.

In the list of matriculation scholarships announced by the Senate of the University of Toronto, Floyd Honey of Port Hope High School is included for a General Proficiency Scholarship.

Increase in attendance at Cobourg Collegiate Institute has necessitated an extra form to accommodate the new arrivals. Last year there was one first form but this term an extra class was formed to take care of the increased attendance. Slightly over 130 passed their entrance exams, of which number 100 pupils answered the roll call on the opening day, an amount in excess of last year.

Over fifty applicants were interviewed at Lindsay as they applied for the position of chief caretaker of the Dominion Arsenal to succeed the late John Blackwood, who was recently electrocuted while engaged about the plant.

W. A. Fraser, M.P., for Northumberland County, and one of that apple-growing county's best known growers, expects this year's crop to top that of all others during the past few seasons. On his own part, Mr. Fraser expects to pack a total of over 10,000 barrels, while he states that other growers in the district are equally as confident of enlarged crops. Mr. Fraser believes that conditions this year have been practically ideal for the growth of apples, and is confident that an increase of twenty-five per cent will be seen in the yield. Trenton and Brighton will be considerably benefited from an

DRIVERS CHARGED IN BOAT TRAGEDY

Aftermath Of Drowning Of Toronto Child At Presqu'ile

Charges of criminal negligence have been laid against the drivers of two motor boats which collided at Presqu'ile last month, resulting in the drowning of Dorothy Lewis, five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Lewis of Cosburn Avenue, Toronto. The two men, Bert Meecham of Monarch Park Avenue, Toronto, and Harry Shewman, a Brighton boat-builder, will appear in Brighton Tuesday for preliminary hearing.

The jury at the inquest held Aug. 30, found both drivers had been careless. Meecham was in charge of the boat bearing Dorothy Lewis and 12 others, while Shewman was driving a boat owned by Dr. Frank Davenport of Brighton.

GARDEN HILL

W.M.S. And W. A. Hold A Joint Meeting

The August meeting of the Women's Missionary Society and Women's Auxiliary, met at the home of the president of the latter organization Mrs. Etta Byers, Wednesday afternoon, August 30th in Garden Hill.

Mrs. Walter Caldwell, President of the W.M.S. presided and also conducted the devotionals. The Women's Auxiliary had charge of the program.

Mrs. Caldwell gave a very helpful and instructive address on the "Practical results of a life of prayer". She cited a number of remarkable answers to prayer in the life of Hudson Taylor, founder of the China Inland Mission; George Mueller, founder of the Orphanages for destitute children, Bristol, England, and a number of others, which demonstrate beyond the shadow of doubt, that God hears and answers prayer and that it is therefore, the most practical thing in the world to-day.

Mrs. Anson Dunbar gave an interesting reading on the benefits of a Ladies' Aid society. Miss Helen Wilson and Mrs. Caldwell sang a duet.

A bale filled with practical things, is being sent this month, to one of the Indian schools in the North West.

A communication was read from Rev. J. S. McMullen, chairman of the Belleville Presbytery, asking the society to provide what ever possible for the six hundred or more needy families of that district. It was unanimously agreed to give all the help possible.

Several other helpful numbers were given and routine business transacted, after which lunch was served by the women of Mrs. S. J. Gray's group.

VIVE THE WHALE!

Though whale fishing is a thing of the past in Bermuda, whales still blow occasionally off the balmy shores of the British colony and hardy sportsmen occasionally go after them. One Bermudian expedition was towed 20 miles out to sea by a huge whale. It was the biggest fish the party had ever got a line on—and it got away, of course.

PLAN USING OLD RAILWAY

Disused C.P.R. Lindsay To Burketon Line May Be Utilized By Farmers

Members of the township council of Cartwright and of the township council of O.C.s, as well as influential citizens and business men of Lindsay, have been approached by farmers and others living in the rural section south of Lindsay with a view to securing the right of way over the road bed of the old Canadian Pacific Railway line, which formerly ran from Lindsay to Burketon.

Some time ago the line was completely dismantled. The rails and ties, along with all sidings, were taken up and the stations removed at Clabo, Ops, Janetville and Nestleton. Some of the stations have been sold, along with the dwelling houses formerly occupied by agents, while other small stations have been transferred to other parts of the C.P.R. system.

The roadbed, a fine, level, well-laid gravel stretch, several miles in length, remains, and the scheme is to utilize this stretch for vehicular traffic. It passes through the heart of Cartwright township and also links up various summer resorts on Saugog Lake. In this respect it would be particularly convenient to residents of Toronto and also of Lindsay who have summer cottages along the eastern shores of Saugog Lake.

The new road would also be a real boon to farmers and others, as it would be a direct road to Lindsay for hundreds. It is planned that the road could be used as it is and that turning out places could be built along the eastern shores of Saugog along the stretch of roadway.

The bridge has been taken up which crossed the stream known as Cross Creek, but vehicular traffic could use the old railway bed as far as Murphy's farm, then jog off to the regular road, cross the creek at the regular road bridge and return to the railway bed a short distance away.

It is understood that W. W. Staples, M.P.P., has approached members of the Ops council and the Lindsay council on this matter.

BETHEL GROVE

Decoration service will be held at our cemetery on Sunday, September 10 at 4 p.m. Rev. Mr. Campbell will have charge of this service. Sunday school in the morning at 10.30 a.m.

The Ladies Aid held their Sept. meeting at the home of Mrs. George Martin on Tuesday.

The Sunday school picnic was held on the church grounds on Wednesday afternoon. Tables were set in the Sunday School Hall and about 60 sat down to dinner. Races and softball were enjoyed throughout the afternoon. Everyone present was treated to ice-cream and lunch was served at tea time. All present voted that they had thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

Persons Mr. and Mrs. A. Howard and family were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. Howard, Bethesda.

CRIPPLE SETS SWIM RECORD

A remarkable swimming feat has been performed at Auckland, N.Z., by Miss Mona Leyden, a girl cripple. She walked to the swimming bath with her legs encased in steel frames to correct deformities resulting from infantile paralysis. Entering the water she swam with great freedom and broke the New Zealand quarter-mile record, established five years ago by the Olympic swimmer, Miss Kathleen Miller, by no less than six seconds.

A special presentation was made to Miss Leyden, who received a tremendous ovation.

LIGHTNING FIRES NEWCASTLE BARN

Clinton Brown, And Helper Narrowly Escape Death

Struck by lightning during a violent storm which struck Newcastle district Wednesday, the barns of Clinton Brown on the lake shore at Newcastle, were burned to the ground, together with the whole season's crop of hay, straw and threshed grain.

Brown and his hired man had a miraculous escape, being in the barn unloading millet at the time the bolt struck the building. Hastily they lacked the team of horses and wagon out of the barn as the flames leaped toward the sky, fanned by a high wind.

Leading the stampeding team to safety the men returned to the barn, where they released other horses and also managed to save a few implements. A sow and a litter of little pigs were roasted alive. The high wind blew the sparks from the fire towards the house, which was threatened several times.

Neighboring farmers were soon on the scene and, forming a bucket brigade from the pump to the house, kept a continual stream of water running over the roof and down the walls so that the sparks from the barn had little chance to send the house up in flames.

Mr. Brown had only recently threshed his crop and had his granaries full of grain and his mows packed tightly to the roof with hay. The loss is estimated at several thousands of dollars. He was also owner of the farm.

Dobbin Gives Solution To Amusement Question

There is an old saying that necessity is the mother of invention and that held good here with a holiday trip. A party of friends from Detroit, visiting at the home of an Elgin Street resident decided to go on a fishing trip and to while away the idle hours, the ancient and honourable game of horseshoes would be engaged in. On searching the premises, only one horseshoe could be found and resort was made to faithful Dobbin. Three of the horse's shoes were divested and the party proceeded for the day's outing. Following the return in the evening, the three shoes were nailed on Dobbin's feet again.

WEED SEED GERMINATION

Weeds and weed seeds are illustrated and described, in one of the bulletins of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. The seeds of most annual weeds, when embedded in the soil, retain their vitality for several years, says the bulletin. The seeds of the mustard family and others, when ploughed down soon after ripening, seldom germinate the following year, and not until they are brought by further cultivation near the surface. Light surface cultivation during the early autumn usually serves to stimulate germination in freshly ripened weed seeds. A considerable proportion of them may thus be destroyed, whereas by deep ploughing the difficulty is simply deferred to succeeding years.

CHURCH GIVING

I bought gasoline, I went to the show; I bought some new tubes for my old radio; I bought candy and peanuts, nut bars and ice cream; While my salary lasted, life sure was a scream. It takes careful planning, to make money go 'round; One's method of finance must always be sound. With habits quite costly, it's real hard to save. My wife spent 'ten bucks' on a permanent wave.

NEWTONVILLE

Miss E. A. Thompson, Oldest Member Of W.M.S. Honoured

The home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Lane, Newtonville, was the scene of a very happy event when a reception was held by the Women's Missionary Society in honour of its oldest member, Miss E. A. Thompson, the occasion being her ninetieth birthday. At the hour of 2.30 p.m. the W.M.S. presented its guest of honour with a large birthday cake and the following address:—

Dear Miss Thompson,— "Nothing but our good-will as members of the Women's Missionary Society makes us bold in creating an occasion for your many immediate friends and neighbours to cordially greet you with their loving thought on this 90th anniversary of your birth.

"Only a few among the many who began life together can record such a mature pilgrimage, will beyond life's allotted span and for one community to share its entire life, watch its development, and feel the impact for good in the church and community welfare, is a privileged opportunity for which it cannot sufficiently praise the Giver, Preserver and Sustainer of all existence.

"What you have meant in real worth to this neighbourhood only God can measure and Eternity reveal. Yet, knowing our judgment to be set with human limitations, we venture to add our unanimous and humble testimony to an inward spiritual dynamo, beautifying the spirit, illuminating the mind, warming the heart and sanctifying the personality, thus sending our colorful rays of light, thoughts of love, and acts of helpfulness to others on life's way.

"Dr. Parker of City Temple defined preaching as "Sanctified Conversation," and Dr. Phillips Brooks said it was "Truth strained through personality," and we call to mind that our Lord and Master told a matchless story of a Samaritan who ministered graciously to an unfortunate fellow on Jericho's way, and He ended the message with "Go thou and do likewise." Attested by such standards, the voice of your life has been heard in no uncertain sound in this community. Probably the greatest contribution that anyone can offer to the redemption of this world is the offering of a good life and this you have not failed to do and do.

"So actuated with feelings of grateful praise "We just came to tell thee that we love thee" and to offer this miniature token of our sincere esteem and good-will, with a prayer that it may please our Heavenly Father to give you continued peace and happiness until the sunrise of the Eternal Day shall dawn in glorious splendour and radiant beauty, and "being clothed up" you shall stand in spotless purity before the throne forever and ever."

Written on behalf of the Newtonville Women's Missionary Society.

At the close of the address little Miss Leona Lane presented Miss Thompson with a large basket of beautiful roses.

From then until five o'clock, a large number of friends from far and near came to extend to Miss Thompson their good wishes.

Following the reception, a dainty luncheon was tendered the guests, who numbered well over one hundred. An interesting feature was the signing of a register by each of those who attended.

I bought gasoline, I went to the show; I bought some new tubes for my old radio; I bought candy and peanuts, nut bars and ice cream; While my salary lasted, life sure was a scream. It takes careful planning, to make money go 'round; One's method of finance must always be sound. With habits quite costly, it's real hard to save. My wife spent 'ten bucks' on a permanent wave.

YOUR NEWSPAPER The following was taken from a circular sent to retail merchants by a large wholesale house: "The value of your local newspaper cannot be over-estimated. Its worth all the support and co-operation you can give it. For the newspaper is a mirror reflecting the life of the community in which you and your store have an important part. Your advertisement is the reflection of your store. If it is not there, the mirror is dark where your store should be. You are there but you cannot be seen. Your store is open for business as usual, but 'Out of sight; out of mind!' To keep in step with the progress of your community; to get your share of business you must advertise regularly. Take your newspaper publisher into your confidence; he can give you invaluable assistance. Establish an advertising budget. Plan a regular schedule for your advertisements. Its a policy that is followed by the most successful stores; its an idea that will be profitable to you."—Deseronto Post.

BOBCAYGEON IS INVADED BY DESTRUCTIVE BEARS Bobcaygeon residents are in constant fear of encountering any of a number of large black bears that are practically patrolling the main street. One man shot a large black bear that had been feeding on the fruit of his orchard. The other night three bears were sighted in a corn patch within a few rods of the public school.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 9. School is out to-night!

Our corner friend says there's a lot of scholars at Trinity College School who are enjoying it a heap more than the students who will next occupy the class rooms.

There is no doubt that this political education will develop some useful ideas which will some day be acted upon and help the progress of the nation—yes, and the nations.

We will look forward to having these sessions give rise to opening of many such schools throughout the country for the training of the public.

Port Hope Rotary Club was honored by an official visit of the district governor, Grant Bird, of Oshawa, at their regular luncheon Thursday evening. He gave a talk on the values of Rotary to the members who put their best effort into whatever was allotted to them.

Dr. T. S. Boyle, Rector of St. Peter's Church, Cobourg, addressed the Rotary Club there at their luncheon on Friday noon, giving some tremendously interesting impressions gained on his recent European trip. Everyone regretted that he was limited by time.

While driving along a road off the highway east of Newcastle, Mrs. J. W. Perry, 91, Ritson Road North, Oshawa, observed some raspberries growing by the roadside, quite ripe. She picked a few branches, some of them being covered with blossoms and with large red berries, with many other berries not yet ripe. It is considered somewhat unusual to find ripe raspberries growing wild at this time of the year.

LOWEST WHEAT YIELD SINCE '24

Dominion Estimate Of 1933 Crop Placed At 282,771,000 Bushels

Hit by drought and grasshoppers, Canada this year will produce 282,771,000 bushels of wheat, the lowest yield since 1924, according to a crop estimate issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

All grain production is much below the average, says this official report, which is the first of a series issued from time to time as information comes to the Capital. The oat yield is the lowest since 1929, rye is lowest since 1931, barley since 1921, while the flax seed crop is the worst since the bureau began keeping records in 1908.

The wheat crop is one-third below last year's production. In 1932, Canada produced 428,514,000 bushels of wheat. This year, according to this preliminary estimate of 282,771,000 bushels, the output will be slightly more than 34 per cent. below 1932.

Of the other grain crops, barley drops from 80,773,000 bushels last year to 64,291,000 this year, oats from 391,561,000 to 316,966,000 bushels, rye from 8,938,000 to 6,418,000 bushels and flax seed from 2,446,000 to 756,000 bushels.

"Judging by conditions at Aug. 31," continues the report, "there will also be short harvests of the late-sown crops, including corn, potatoes and sugar beets. These late crops are distinctly less promising than in 1932 and are about 20 per cent. below average. The condition of pastures throughout Canada is extremely poor."

WEDDING BELLS

HONEY—MAYHEW

A quiet wedding took place on Saturday, September 9th, in Morgan Memorial Chapel of Queen's University, Kingston, when the Rev. Dr. Kent united in marriage Ellen Dorothy Mayhew, daughter of Mrs. E. S. Mayhew, and the late Mr. Mayhew of Calgary Alberta and John Charles Honey, B.Sc., son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Honey of Port Hope.

Mr. and Mrs. Honey will reside in Cardinal, Ontario.

POLICE COURT

Charged with the theft of a number of articles, Robert Welch, Port Hope, was arraigned in police court here this morning before Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell, the complainant being Robert Mercer, Mill street. Accused was represented by W. F. McMahon, Port Hope. The case was allowed to stand pending the arrival of Walter Stewart, owner of the goods.

BOWMANVILLE PAPER GIVEN HIGH HONOR

Word was received from John M. James, who is representing the Canadian Statesman, Bowmanville weekly newspaper at the annual convention of the Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association in Vancouver, that this newspaper had placed second in the Mason Trophy contest for the most enterprising weekly newspaper in Canada. The Statesman, which is edited by Mayor George W. James, has been in the contest for three years in competition with the finest newspapers in the country. In 1931 and 1932 the Statesman was placed fourth, and this year the Vernon, B. C. News was the only newspaper to beat the Statesman.

V. Cox, Oshawa, Alleged To Have Practiced Optometry In Lindsay District

V. Cox, Oshawa, appearing before Magistrate Jordan in Lindsay Police Court charged with unlawfully practicing optometry, was fined $10 and costs.

The charge was laid by W. R. Barkley, inspector, Board of Optometry, Toronto, after several complaints had been received from a number of persons in that district. Mr. Cox, representing an optical company of Toronto, told the court he did not practice optometry as he did not test the people's eyes.

"Although he carried the necessary equipment and set it up, the person desiring glasses tested their own eyes," he said.

Crown Attorney J. E. Anderson prosecuted and Mr. Cox was defended by R. Humphries of Oshawa.

RESCUE COBOURG PAIR IN LAKE

Canoe Capsizes And Cobourg Girl And Youth Nearly Drown

Pitched into the water when waves upset their canoe, Mary Spragge, College Street, Cobourg and D'Arcy Macdonald, King Street, had a narrow escape from drowning, being rescued at the point of collapse by Jerry Harris, who rushed to the scene in his motor boat.

The two canoeists, who were paddling several hundred yards off the east beach, were in the act of turning, when a sudden wave upset their frail craft. Both decided to abandon the boat and swim to shore but were part way in when Macdonald became exhausted. His companion pluckily went to his rescue and assisted in keeping him afloat, while both shouted for help.

Although their cries were not heard, the upset canoe was noticed by Mrs. Cecil Peterson on shore and Terry Atkinson, who was with some swimmers on a raft, a short distance from shore. Atkinson noticed that the canoe was floating upside down and, becoming alarmed, told J. Lafay to go ashore and wheel out the pier and notify Jerry Harris, who owned a motor boat, to start up his engine. Lafay hurried to the pier and Atkinson made the trip on foot, arriving at the moment that Harris had the engine going and was awaiting particulars.

The three got in the boat, Atkinson pointing out the location of the capsized canoe. When they drew near the scene, the two swimmers were struggling in the water.

WEDDING BELLS

WASHBURN—AMES

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Milton F. Ames at Plainville, Ont., was the scene of a pretty wedding when their elder daughter, Enid Velma Ames, R.N., was married to Curtis Ross Washburn, B.Sc., younger son of Mrs. Washburn and the late Mr. H. E. Washburn of East Freetown, Mass. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. J. F. Horwood, assisted by Rev. James each. The bride was charmingly dressed in a white georgette gown. She carried Talisman roses and lily-of-the-valley, and was attended by Miss Ruby Horwood as flower girl and ring-bearer, who carried a basket of pink asters. After the reception the couple left for a motor tour to Lake Placid, the bride travelling in a dark green swag suit with brown accessories. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Washburn will reside in Mimico.

MARINER DIES AT NAPANEE

Was Former Owner of Lyman Davis, Which Now Awaits Destruction

A mariner for over forty years, and a builder of motor boats and smaller craft, Captain John McCullough passed away at his residence at Napanee Sunday after a long illness. His condition, however, did not assume a serious aspect until a few days ago. During the past few weeks there has been considerable controversy over the proposed destruction of the Lyman Davis, which ship is now at Sunnyside, Toronto, and letters have appeared in the press against the destruction of this boat, which is the last of the old sailing vessels which plied the Great Lakes and the Bay of Quinte.

Captain McCullough owned the Lyman Davis, which he operated for several years, and after disposing of her retired from marine work.

During his early years he was an employee on the sailing vessel the Mary, which caught fire and sank in Lake Ontario.

Among other boats owned from time to time by Captain McCullough were the Snowbird, Katie Eccles, Lizzie Wetsner, John D. Newland and the William Jamieson.

He leaves to mourn his loss his wife who before her marriage was Miss Hannah Hearn.

PREDICT 4 TEAM GROUPS CENTRAL ONTARIO LEAGUE

It is being freely predicted by sport leaders at Peterboro that next year the Central Ontario Baseball League will be made up of a four-team circuit consisting of Belleville, Peterboro, Cobourg and Oshawa. Kingston, league champions for the past two years, if retained in the league, will probably be given a bye through the regular playing season, it is suggested. Cost of the long jump to Kingston is the main factor in creating this opinion. With the elimination of Kingston from the regular season it is thought that Cobourg and Oshawa would be willing to re-enter the league. It is considered that Cobourg's ball team is of senior calibre and that Oshawa will be willing to return to the Central League fold.

JUNIOR FARMERS FETED AT ORONO

Two Hundred Attend Orono Banquet To Honor Youthful Judges

Two hundred Durham County junior farmers together with prominent citizen and distinguished guests met around the banquet table in Orono Friday night to pay tribute to Norman Hogg, Maurice Baker and Oliver Smith, three Durham boys who won high honors as representatives of the province at the Regina World Seed and Grain Show.

R. S. Duncan, director of agricultural representatives for Ontario, acted as toastmaster and after the toast to the King, Walter Blackburn, prominent junior farmer, proposed, the toast to the Parliaments of Canada, to which Fred W. Bowen, M.P., and W. J. Bragg, M.L.A., responded, each tendering congratulations to the boys who made such high standing at the Regina show. W. J. Bragg is a grandfather of Maurice Baker, who was third high man of the 24 United States and Canadian boys who competed in the junior judging of seed at the fair.

Warden W. F. Richard of the United Counties and Reeve of Newcastle proposed the toast to the boys and their coach, E. A. Summers, Durham County Agricultural representative, who accompanied the boys to Regina. In replying to the toast, Norman Hogg, of Orono, paid tribute to the work accomplished at the O.A.C. and especially that of Prof. Squirrel, who was one of the guests of the evening.

Maurice Baker, of Hampton gave all credit for the team's fine work, which included the winning of $600 in prize money to the agricultural representative as did also Oliver Smith, of Burketon. The Ontario junior team was composed of three junior boys, two of whom were from Durham, while Norman Hogg was high man on the Ontario senior team.

Representative Summers in a brief address eulogized the efforts of the boys whom he called real workers and real gentlemen. He lauded also the help of the parents who had permitted their sons to give much time to coaching for the events.

The main speakers of the evening were Dr. G. I. Christie, president of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, who was introduced by Mr. Duncan. Prof. Squirrel, who had played an important part in preparing the boys for the Regina contests, was introduced by Donald Gibson, an O.A.C. graduate of Newcastle.

Bruce Beer, president of the Durham Junior Farmers' Association, and one of the main judging winners at the C.N.E. last week, expressed the appreciation of the juniors to those who had made the banquet a success. Also appearing on the program was Mrs. Donat Robb, pianist, Donald Robb, vocalist; Carlos and Ken Tamblin, who rendered a trumpet duet. After the banquet the junior farmers staged a dance in the town hall when Tamblin's Comedians provided the music.

RECOVER STOLEN BIKES HIDDEN IN FREIGHT CAR

Stolen from the bicycle shed at the Cobourg collegiate institute, two bicycles were recovered a few hours later in a freight car. It is believed that two transients were responsible for the theft and secreted the bicycles in the freight car, intending to take them with them when they pulled out of town.

Mrs. F. Spooner, Division street, notified Chief of Police J. C. Ruse that two hoozes were in possession of two new wheels. Acting on the hunch that the transients might have hidden the bicycles in a freight train Chief Ruse visited the railroad yard and found the stolen wheels. The thieves, however, must have taken alarm as they did not put in an appearance.

CORN OYSTER

One recipe of serving corn that is easy to follow and is sure to prove a favourite whenever it is served, says the Fruit Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, is called Corn Oyster and is made in this way—

Prepare a cup of corn by slitting the kernels with a sharp knife and scrapping out the inner pulp with the back of the knife. To the pulp add 1 well beaten egg, 1/4 cup of flour, 1/2 teaspoon salt and the same amount of baking powder with a dash of pepper. Mix well and drop by spoonfuls onto a well greased pan. When brown on one side, turn and brown on the other. Serve piping hot.

Gas in the Stomach Is Dangerous

Daily Use of Bisurated Magnesia Overcomes Troubles Caused by Acid Indigestion

Gas in the stomach accompanied by a full, bloated feeling after eating is almost certain evidence of too much hydrochloric acid in the stomach, causing so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous. Too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leads to gastritis, accompanied by more serious trouble. Food ferments and sour, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to try to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get a little Bisurated Magnesia from any drugist and take a teaspoonful in water right after eating. This will drive out the gas, wind and bloating, soothe the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and stop sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder form—never in liquid or milk) is harmless, inexpensive, and a fine remedy for acid stomach. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no fear of indigestion.

Floyd Honey Ranked First For Two Scholarships — Will Enter University

Floyd Honey of Port Hope High School, who matriculated with honours this year, ranked first in the Upper School examinations for the Flavelle Classical Scholarship, (Greek and Latin) and he also ranked first for the Hamilton Fisk Biggar Scholarship for highest standing in Greek, Latin, French and English.

As he was prevented by the regulations from holding both scholarships, he was awarded the latter which has a total value of Five Hundred dollars. These scholarships were awarded on the results of the Departmental Examinations held this summer. Floyd will enter the university this year and it is hoped that his course therein will be marked with the same brilliant success as has signalized its inception.

While attending Port Hope High School he was under the tutelage of Dr. J. F. Thompson.

OBITUARY

JAMES CURTIS

The funeral of Nathaniel James Curtis, a prominent agriculturist of Cobourg locality, took place Wednesday afternoon from his late home at Mill Valley to Coldsprings cemetery, and was largely attended. Mr. Curtis had not been well for the past two years, and a year ago suffered a heavy bereavement, when a daughter, aged about 22, was accidentally drowned while swimming. He is survived by his widow, before her marriage, Miss T. Minifie, and his sons and daughters: Mrs. George Bull, William Ross and Carl Curtis, Haldimand Township; Otto of Toronto; Rev. John E. COBOURG BOY SAVED AFTER STEPPING IN HOLE

Wading into a hole while playing in the water south of Bagot street, Cobourg, eight-year-old Clifford Jenkins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Jenkins of University Avenue, narrowly escaped drowning. Cries of his frightened sister attracted the attention of George Holman and Jack Patterson, who went to his rescue, grabbing him before he went down for the third time. The unconscious lad was brought up on shore and revived by Mr. Holman after which he was taken to Dr. E. W. Hayden. Although suffering from shock, he will recover.

CROP REPORT

Below will be found a brief synopsis of telegraphic reports received at the Head Office of the Bank of Montreal from its Branches. The Branch Managers have complete and intimate knowledge of each local situation and are in close touch with crop conditions in all sections of the districts mentioned.

GENERAL

Grain cutting is nearing completion in the Prairie Provinces and threshing is well advanced. The quality of the crop marketed to date has been high. Private estimates place the Prairie wheat yield at approximately 270,000,000 bushels. Recent rains while delaying harvesting operations have improved pasturage and late feed crops. In Quebec the cereal crop is proving about average except in the case of oats which are heavy in some districts and under average in others. In Ontario threshing has been well advanced under favourable conditions. Barley is of good quality and shows a fair yield, and a short oat, crop of fair quality is indicated. Fruit crops are progressing satisfactorily. In the Maritime Provinces grain yields are showing somewhat under average. Potatoes promise an average crop and the apple crop outlook is excellent. In British Columbia the third crop of alfalfa is making good progress. Threshing of grains is now general although delayed by rain in some districts. Details follow:

PRAIRIE PROVINCES

ALBERTA NORTHEASTERN AREA—Threshing has been delayed. The average wheat yield is estimated at 13 bushels per acre. ALBERTA SOUTHEASTERN AREA—Wheat threshing is half completed. The average yield is about 10 bushels. The feed situation has improved.

ALBERTA WESTERN AREA—In the North the average yield is 18 to 20 bushels. There has been some frost damage in the Peace River District. In the South the average yield is 10 to 13 bushels. A good average yield of sugar beets is indicated.

SASKATCHEWAN NORTHERN AREA—Yields are very uneven, but grades generally are good. There is a fairly large acreage of coarse grains still to be cut in the Eastern section. SASKATCHEWAN SOUTH EASTERN AREA—Heavy rains are expected to result in a lowering of grades in the Southwest. Wheat yields show wide variation. Coarse grains are patchy with a shortage offered in number of districts. Pasturage is poor but shows improvement from recent rains. MANITOBA—Threshing is approximately 65% completed. The outturn in some localities is exceeding expectations and an average wheat yield of 13 bushels per acre is now indicated. While the feed shortage is serious in the Southwest and a few other districts, reports indicate that here is sufficient feed for the requirements of the Province as a whole.

PROVINCE OF QUEBEC

Growing conditions have been generally favourable and crops are making good progress. Cutting of grains is nearing completion and threshing is fairly general. Potatoes have improved. A yield slightly under average is indicated. Other root crops promise well. Corn is in good condition. Cutting of tobacco is under way and though the crop has made good progress during the past fortnight the yield is expected to be below average. Pasturage is fair.

PROVINCE OF ONTARIO

Corn is ripening rapidly. Root crops have been adversely affected by insufficient moisture and potatoes, turnips and mangels will be a light crop. Pastures are badly parched in some sections. Harvesting of tobacco is under way but due to lack of moisture some plants have suffered from rim fire which may affect the yield. A fair peach crop has been marketed and while, due to dry weather, some dropping of apples has occurred, indications continue good for an average yield. Fall ploughing is general.

MARITIME PROVINCES

Weather conditions have been favourable and crops are maturing satisfactorily, having been benefited by widespread rains. Harvesting of grains is becoming general. Potatoes promise to be of good quality. Other root crops are progressing favourably. A yield of apples well over average and of good quality is indicated. Pasturage has been improved by recent rains.

PROVINCE BRITISH COLUMBIA—Grain yields of approximately 30 per cent of average are indicated. Potatoes are doing well. Harvesting of onions has commenced and ripe tomatoes are moving very freely. Prospective yields of the above crops are 85 per cent, 150 per cent and 100 per cent respectively. Peas, peaches and plums are moving in volume and apple picking is becoming general. A large crop of hops is now being picked in the Fraser Valley.

IMPROVEMENT IN CONDITIONS

Oshawa Board Will Investigate Applicants More Carefully In Future

Steady improvement in the unemployment condition of Oshawa was shown in the reports of the Oshawa Welfare Board at their monthly meeting. At the present time 972 families are receiving relief in Oshawa, compared with 1,116 during the same period last year. The relief cost during the first six months of the year amounted to $226,068, the average cost of relief per family being $192.81.

It was decided to investigate more thoroughly all future applications for relief, particularly if the applicants have been working during the current year. No relief will be given if the applicant has earned a reasonable amount of money this year unless he can account for its expenditure. This action was taken because of the temporary shutdown at this time of Oshawa's largest industry, which will affect several thousand families.

At present more than 425 Oshawa single unemployed men are in Government construction camps, and permanent closing of the single men's hostel is being considered by the board. Transients in future will be forced to earn their meals by cutting a quantity of wood. During the past summer they have been given meal tickets on restaurants by applying to the police station, but the board has now purchased 200 cords of wood, and transients will be forced to chop a sufficient quantity of wood to pay for their meal.

While there, they were the guests of the William Wringley Co., together with 500 boys and girls from all parts of the Province. The members of the group were royally entertained and besides being conducted on a tour of the city, visited the Canadian National Exhibition.

SLEEPING SICKNESS MAKES APPEARANCE IN LONDON

Rendol Snell, 64-year-old, Thedford resident, and former Stratford district salesman, died at London Wednesday of sleeping sickness in St. Joseph's Hospital. Snell was stricken with the malady ten days ago. Last Thursday he lost consciousness at his home and was removed to the hospital. It was understood a special oxygen treatment was given him, but he failed to rally.

Snell had resided for two years in Thedford. He is survived by his wife, a son in St. Thomas, and a daughter in Stratford.

CO-OPERATION IN RAILWAY LINES

Message Delivered At C.N.E. From Head Of C.N.R.

That the two great railway systems of Canada are co-operating with each other in numerous ways that much progress had been accomplished to date, while other forms of co-operation are now under examination and may be expected in the near future, was the keynote of a message from S. J. Hungerford, Acting President of The Canadian National Railways, which was given at the directors' luncheon of The Canadian National Exhibition on Transportation Day. The speaker representing the transportation interests was W. A. Kingsland, general manager of the Central Region, Canadian National Railways, who, in behalf of Mr. Hungerford, expressed his regrets at not being present owing to an expected business engagement which at the eleventh hour detained him at headquarters.

In his message, Mr. Hungerford pointed out that the transportation problem of to-day and the immediate future is to use the various means of transport in the most economical and efficient way. Instead of competing to an uneconomic extent, as at present, Mr. Hungerford found that each of the component parts of the transportation industry as a whole should fill its own individual economic sphere and all should co-operate with each other so that eventually each will be complementary to the other with the ultimate aim of giving to the public the best possible service and at the lowest possible cost. The necessity of restricting the various methods of transportation to their proper economic fields is more evident from day to day. The ultimate goal is the greatest economy in performing transportation. It was pointed out that there is a direct place in the transportation scheme for the varied forms of transport, including the air service, but that railways are, and will continue to be, the great tonnage movers, particularly of such natural products as grain, lumber, coal, and also the most economic medium for long distance traffic.

"There is a definite place for the railroads which no other form of transportation can fill," Mr. Hungerford's message continued. "The railroads realize this and are concentrating their own efforts upon doing their own job. Certain new conditions face the railways and at the present time there is not enough traffic moving to make our railways pay. A new means of transport—the motor driven vehicle—has been developed which has taken away from the railways a certain amount of the most profitable traffic while transportation by water has been greatly developed and has become a serious competitor in certain fields. These conditions plus the depression, with its consequent shrinkage in railway traffic have created difficulties and have imposed on the managements of the railways the necessity of doing things which all concerned would have preferred not to do, but everybody has recognized the urgency of the problem to be met and the employees generally have shown a very proper appreciation of the situation and have co-operated to a great extent in carrying out measures which involve sacrifices on their part."

Stricken By Heart Attack, Farmer Falls In Fire

William Lyle, a pioneer of Haliburton County, met death unexpectedly. He had set fire to some stumps and in his efforts to keep the fire from entering the brush, he overtaxed his strength and died from a heart attack. "Bobby" Lyle, aged 9 years, son of Mr. Lyle's nephew, with whom he resided, was out in the field with him. He saw him run into the smoke to check some fire which was spreading in the dried grass and when he did not return ran to the house. Ed Lyle and James McKag found him in the fire, with his clothes badly burned. He was immediately carried out of the burning area and medical attention procured, but life was extinct.

STONE CRUSHER CHAIN STOLEN DURING NIGHT

An unusual theft took place recently in Hamilton Township. The stone crusher had been operated in road construction work and had been left in readiness to proceed the following morning, but some person happened along during the night and stole a heavy chain from it. The chain is valued at $40.

DECREASE IN BANK DEPOSITS

Average Weekly Percentage Of Local Pupils Depositing Is 14

The average weekly percentage of pupils of the local public schools depositing in the Penny Bank for the months of May and June was fourteen with the total amount on deposit at the end of June of $2,858.60. This is a drop from last year when the comparative figures were $3,272.59.

The percentages of district schools are as follows:—Newcastle 48, Whitby 46, Peterboro, 40, Belleville 32, Brighton 31, Oshawa 21, Bowmanville 18, and Campbellford 17.

Many are the schemes advocated for effecting a return to normalcy in the economic world. Some of them are designed to improve commerce, others to help agriculture, others to aid governments. But none of them reach the masses of men and women as directly as does the practice of personal thrift.

Thrift means good management of one's income,—wise spending and regular saving. Penny Bank deposits and withdrawals, giving as they do a cross-section of a large number of Ontario homes indicate that the people are resolutely seeking both practices. Of necessity, the number of withdrawals throughout the province has been great; the money is needed for the purchase of essentials. But the amounts of the withdrawals have decreased, showing greater care in the spending of money even for essentials.

It is gratifying to see the large number of deposits maintained throughout the past, difficult months—an undeniable evidence that the people are determined to save ever small sums where such saving is possible.

MOTORCYCLE DRIVER IS KILLED IN CRASH

William Rose Dies From Injuries Following Collision With Auto

Crashing broadside into an automobile while riding his motorcycle, William Rose, Cherry Valley, sustained fatal injuries and later died at the Picton Hospital early Wednesday.

Rose, with a pillion rider, William Broker, was proceeding southward on the Picton-Cherry Valley Road, when a car driven by John Wesley Halliwell, is alleged to have failed to stop at a cross road. Rose's motorcycle crashed broadside into the Wesley driven car, catapulting Rose and his companion fully twenty feet into a near-by ditch. Rose was later rushed to the Picton Hospital, where he died, while Broker sustained but minor injuries.

Wesley, the driver of the car, was held by the police for questioning, while a coroner's inquest has been set for Friday evening at Picton. Provincial Constable Durnford of Picton investigated.

CARIBOO GOLD FIFTH BRICK

Valued At $36,000 Brings Total Value Of Production This Year To $141,000

The fifth gold brick from the Cariboo Gold Quartz Mining Company property, valued at some $36,000 has just been shipped, bringing the total value of the production this year to $141,000. About $400,000 is reported in the company's treasury to finance future programs.

The company was recently host to the visiting Vancouver Board of Trade party making a tour of the Cariboo area, principal interest in which centres about the company's operations.

WORKS PROGRAM POLICY APPROVED

Governments Will Pay Two-Thirds Of Direct Labor Costs

Announcement was made by Premier Henry of the regulations under which Dominion, province and the municipality, are to co-operate in the new program of public works construction which this year, is to supplement the present arrangement of direct relief.

Although the agreement between province and Dominion has still to be formally signed, the Bennett Cabinet has approved of it in detail, and notified Hon. Dr. Joseph D. Montiel, Chairman of the Unemployment Relief Committee, that its operation could start forthwith.

Under the regulations, no work is to be commenced until both Queen's Park and Ottawa have given their approval. Already a number of municipalities have programs of prespective work in the hands of the Queen's Park Committee. Other municipalities, with larger undertakings in mind, have held off their presentation, at request of Mr. Henry, but can now be expected to submit their schemes for consideration without delay.

To Pay Two-Thirds

As intimated previously, the two Governments will pay two-thirds of the field labor cost of all approved municipal construction. This construction will include buildings. Buildings, however, are not provided for in the all-provincial projects which Queen's Park at present contemplates. The all-provincial undertakings will be confined to road building with the Trans-Canada looming large in present plans. The Federal contribution to Trans-Canada construction will be at the rate of 60 cents per man per working day. On all other-provincial road projects—such as the Marmora-Actinolite stretch, and the completion of a third Toronto-Hamilton route, via the old Middle Roads system, both of which are now under advisement—the Federal contribution will be 50 cents per man day.

A distinct feature of the regulations regarding the supplementary works program is that only goods and materials of Canadian manufacture or production, if available, shall be used; and contracts shall be let only to Canadian persons, bona fide Canadian firms or corporations established and operating in Canada prior to January 1, 1933.

It is intended that persons who are now on direct relief shall be employed as far as is practicable, on works undertaken. These persons should then be taken off direct relief. While Queen's Park has no intention at the present time of doing away entirely with direct relief, the new works program is generally considered as the first definite move toward that objective, slow or speedy as it may ultimately work out.

Requirements Set Out In issuing the new regulations, Premier Henry prefaced their publication, as follows: "The Dominion and the province have agreed that they will each pay a percentage not to exceed thirty-three and one-third per centum of the direct labor cost of the construction of municipal works and undertakings carried out to provide work for the unemployed. The remainder of said direct labor cost and all costs of administration, materials, supplies, tools or equipment is to be assumed and paid by the municipality. Applications for grants must be made to J. A. Ellis, secretary unemployment relief, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, by the council of the municipality.

The Guide Story

No sooner, however, does she see sight of Judy than she is panic-stricken. Instead of sitting still where Judy left her, she leaves her seat and pushes away almost frantically in the direction she last saw her darling. Once in the crowd all idea of her locality deserts her. She hurries this way and that way, knocking against people and begging their pardon, until at last the whole scene becomes a kind of nightmare, and it seems to her that she has been wandering among the human maze for hours, when once more she discovers a tolerably quiet spot. But where is the seat on which Judy left her? After searching for it in vain, she seats herself on another, from sheer inability to stand, and gives way to a fit of utter depression.

How long it is since she parted from Judy? She fumbles nervously for her watch to see—but the watch is gone. That, however, in the poor lady's present frame of mind, is a trifle. Still, on making the discovery, she begins to weep softly and hopelessly. What is she to do? How will she ever find Judy again? What will become of her poor, dear innocent darling, lost in a London crowd?

Suddenly a voice at her elbow breaks in upon her melancholy meditations.

"You seem to be in trouble, madam. Can I render you any assistance?"

Miss Griffin wipes the tears from her eyes and looks up quickly. Standing beside her chair is a tall man in a light dust-coat and with a gray hat. His features are regular and somewhat sharp, his eyes large, brown, and restless—the lower part of his face almost hidden by a heavy moustache.

"I am indeed in trouble," she responds impulsively.

The stranger regards her with a look of pity and asks again in a conventional tone—

"Can I do anything for you?"

"I fear not," answers Miss Griffin, with a hopeless sigh. "Anything lost in that crowd?"—pointing despairingly at the people flocking past her—"could not be easily found."

"Well, no—I suppose not," assents the stranger, gazing vaguely in the direction indicated. "So you have lost some valuable?"

"I have lost my watch, but that is nothing," answers Miss Griffin, pointing with a tearful smile at the dangling chain which still hangs from her waist. "Of course, I should never have fretted about that, but—"

"—her voice beginning to quaver—"I have lost dear Judy."

"Your pet dog, I suppose?" says the stranger, interested, but slightly contemptuous.

"Oh, no!" returns Miss Griffin quickly. "Judy—Julia—Miss Earnshaw, I mean—is my daughter—my adopted daughter of course."

The stranger bows and then smiles reassuringly.

"Oh, a young lady ought not to be very difficult to find!" he says, with a laugh. "How long ago did you lose her?"

Miss Griffin tells him the whole story as briefly as she can, although she has no great aptitude for condensing matter. She tells him that she is a stranger to London, and that it is her first day's sightseeing, and that Judy would leave her to look around and how she ran after her and got quite confused in the crowd—how long ago she cannot possibly say, having lost her watch.

The strange gentleman listens to her story with wonderful patience and politeness, though once or twice he cannot quite suppress a smile. When Miss Griffin has finished, he says very kindly—

"If you describe the young lady to me, I shall doubtless be able to find her for you. I know the Palace as well as I know my father's estate, and if she is anywhere within the building, I think I may safely promise to bring her back to you."

"Oh, how kind! I can never thank you enough!" cries Miss Griffin, clasping her hands in her gratitude and looking up into the stranger's face almost reverentially.

"Don't mention it. What is Miss—Miss—your adopted daughter like?"

"Oh, Judy is tall and slight, with gray eyes and beautiful fair hair!" answers Miss Griffin comprehensively.

The stranger smiles a worldly-wise but indulgent smile.

"You must remember there are hundreds of girls here answering that description," he says gently.

"How stupid of me—oh, so there are!" admits Miss Griffin, as two tall fair girls with smiling eyes pass within a foot of her seat. "And I am sure I don't know how to describe her any better! Oh, I wish she acquainted or had a hairlip or something distinctive!"

"Tell me how she is dressed!" suggests the stranger.

"Oh, of course!" replies Miss Griffin, with a grateful sigh. "You will know her at once by her dress—she has on a crushed-strawberry hat with white feathers, a very light gray jacket and a crushed-strawberry dress."

"Ah, I think that will do!" says the stranger musingly. "I am not very clear as to crushed-strawberry, but I presume it is a kind of pink."

"Yes, a rather dirty-looking, faded pink," agrees Miss Griffin, in a somewhat disparaging tone. She does not herself much admire the aesthetic tints which have so taken Judy's more youthful fancy.

"I shall find you here on my return?" questions the stranger with a doubtful smile. "You won't move again? Because, if so, even I might find some difficulty in bringing you and your adopted daughter together."

"I won't move if you don't come back for hours," answers Miss Griffin, with great energy.

"Let me see—what is the young lady's surname? It would be awkward not to know her name."

"Yes, of course. Her name is Earnshaw—at least, we think her name is Earnshaw—that is what she is called, at any rate," explains Miss Griffin, to whose innocent mind it seems untruthful to tell even a stranger decidedly that Judy is the daughter of her old friend.

Not unnaturally, the stranger looks both surprised and amused.

"I understand—Miss Earnshaw," he says, with a smile. And then, raising his hat, he moves away to begin his quest.

He has not been gone more than ten minutes when, to Miss Griffin's unspeakable relief, he reappears, accompanied by Judy.

"Oh, auntie, why did you move and give me such a fright?" cries the girl as Miss Griffin leaves her seat and runs forward a few steps to meet them.

"My dear Judy, I was so terribly afraid you would get lost!" explains the old lady naively.

"And you lost yourself, instead," says Judy, laughing.

"No matter, dear, we are together again, thanks to this gentleman's kindness"—turning with a look of gratitude towards the tall figure standing a little in the background.

"Oh, pray don't mention it!" says the stranger, smiling down at Judy. "I am only too pleased to have been of use. May I be allowed to remain with you until the gentlemen of your party come up?"

"We have no gentlemen," explains Miss Griffin plaintively. "We are quite alone."

The stranger knits his brows in apparently deep thought for a moment. Then he says impulsively—

"It is scarcely safe for ladies to visit a place of this sort alone."

"Oh, thanks—we are right enough now, and I shall take good care not to leave auntie alone again!" answers Judy.

"The fright has quite upset me," admits Miss Griffin. "I think we had better get some lunch if we can, and then take a taxi home."

"I will show you where to get a good lunch," interposes the stranger, and very deferentially he offers his arm to Miss Griffin, who is visibly trembling.

After installing them, he summons a waiter and stands aside while Miss Griffin gives her order. Then, with a smile and a farewell bow, he is just moving away when an exclamation from that lady arrests him. Turning once more he sees her with a desperate look on her face.

"Judy, Judy," she cries, "my purse is gone! What shall I do?"

Judy looks as if undecided whether to laugh or cry.

"Have you any money Judy?"

The girl shakes her head.

"You told me to leave my purse at home, auntie, lest my pocket should be picked. Don't you remember?"

"So I did! Oh, dear—oh, dear!" murmurs the distracted lady, putting her hand to her troubled brow. "And I have ordered that dreadful lunch, and can't pay for it! Judy, how can you laugh?"—almost tearfully.

"I can't help laughing, auntie—it would be such fun!" rejoins Judy, who is certainly not so much impressed as she ought to be by the situation.

"I think that I am awfully obliged to the Hon. Alexander for leaving us the wherewithal to get a good lunch," says Judy practically. "Here it comes, auntie. This is ours, I think—chicken and charet. Oh, dear me, I am as hungry as a hunter!"

Both ladies do full justice to the meal paid for by their new friend's money and Judy, meekly owning that she is an ungrateful little wretch, when the waiter returns with the change from the Hon. Alexander Callaghan's note.

"You have been most unfortunate," observes the stranger, who has been listening with an amused smile. "Your watch, your purse—why, really, madam, your visit to the Palace will have cost you a fortune soon."

"Oh," exclaims Miss Griffin, with a profound sigh of relief, "I was afraid you had gone! The money does not matter in the least—I don't mind losing it, but I wish enough had been left me to pay for my lunch."

"Be good enough to allow me to settle for that," says the gentleman, smiling.

"Oh, I couldn't!" answers Miss Griffin, looking flurried and very much troubled.

"But, my dear madam, a trifle like that need not distress you. Would you not gladly do it for any one in the same position?"

"Of course—so I would," agrees Miss Griffin, her brow clearing. "Thank you. I am sure Judy and I are very much obliged to you."

"Auntie," interrupts Judy, with a slight flush tinting her cheeks, "if the gentleman were to leave you his address, you could send him the money."

"Of course—ah, Judy, how clever you are!" cries Miss Griffin, in genuine admiration.

"Oh, certainly if it would make you more happy to repay it!" says the stranger indulgently. "Here is my card"—producing one from a very bulging pocketbook—"but would it not be more simple if you would allow me to call for the money—say to-morrow?"

"But would not that be a trouble to you?" asks Miss Griffin, who has glanced at the card and seen that he boasts the prefix "Honourable" to his name.

"Not in the least. I shall be only too delighted." For a moment his glance rested admiringly on Judy. "And now since this most oppressive debt is to be repaid so soon"—with a laugh—"how much shall I leave with you—five pounds, ten—what will you have?"

"No, one will be enough," replies Miss Griffin, "and then there won't be much over for me to lose, you know."

The gentleman smiles assent, deposits a pound-note beside Miss Griffin's plate, makes a note of her address in his voluminous pocket-book, raises his hat and takes his departure.

"Oh, I am glad he has gone at last!" exclaims Judy, with a little grimace.

"How ungrateful of you, Judy!" remonstrates Miss Griffin. "I am sure I don't know what we should have done without him. I must write home and tell Sam all about our adventure. He is always complaining of the selfishness of the present generation and I really think this disinterested kindness on the part of a total stranger ought to do something towards re-establishing his faith in human nature."

"I have no faith in that man!" remarks Judy, shaking her head.

Miss Griffin stares at the girl in amazement and heaves a profound sigh.

"I think yours must be a very suspicious nature, Judy," she says reflectively. "Has he not left us proof positive of his kindness of heart?"—touching the note beside her. "For all he knew to the contrary, we might have been impostors."

"Ah, that is a new view to take of the case!" replies Judy. "So we might have been. But, auntie darling, I defy any one to take you for an impostor. By the way, I suppose that is good?"—taking up the note and regarding it suspiciously.

"My dear Judy, members of the aristocracy are not in the habit of carrying false money," says Miss Griffin reprovingly. "And what you dislike in our new acquaintance I can't make out."

"Nor I, either—unless it is that the man is too flowery and grandiloquent!" admits Judy. "By the way, auntie, how do you know that he belongs to the aristocracy?"

"His manner was quite enough for me," answers the old lady, with a smile of conscious superiority. "Doubtless his card will convince even you!"

Judy takes the card, and reads aloud for Miss Griffin's edification, "The Hon. Alexander Callaghan."

"Now then, what do you say to that?" asks Miss Griffin triumphantly.

"I think that I am awfully obliged to the Hon. Alexander for leaving us the wherewithal to get a good lunch," says Judy practically. "Here it comes, auntie. This is ours, I think—chicken and charet. Oh, dear me, I am as hungry as a hunter!"

Both ladies do full justice to the meal paid for by their new friend's money and Judy, meekly owning that she is an ungrateful little wretch, when the waiter returns with the change from the Hon. Alexander Callaghan's note.

CHAPTER IV.

Miss Griffin's chivalrous friend allows two days to pass by before he avails himself of her invitation to call and that borrowed pound-note weighs heavily on the good lady's mind. She has no means of returning it for there is no address on the card in her possession but he puts an end to her embarrassment by making his appearance. The Hon. Alexander Callaghan calls just when Miss Griffin is indulging in afternoon-tea and very sociably consents to take a cup. In fact he has not been five minutes in the room before he seems quite at home there and makes himself exceedingly agreeable—indeed, according to Judy's idea, oppressively so.

The blend of tea which Miss Griffin affects he thinks perfection—it is so deliciously fragrant—might he ask for the address? He has never tasted any cake like hers since the days of his boyhood! What a clever idea of hers to get her cake sent up once a week from home! The butter too—any one can see at once what a genius she has for domestic comfort!

Miss Griffin is not used to flattery and a pretty pale-pink flush of pleasure mounts to her cheeks as she listens to the stranger's praise. She begins to wonder whether she is appreciated as she ought to be by her country friends and neighbours.

Then their visitor proceeds to admire the art-pottery, Japanese screens, painted flower-stands, etcetera, with which Miss Griffin has overcrowded her drawing-room. Such taste and common sense combined it has never been his fate to meet in one woman. He feels so sorry, so inexpressibly grieved, that his mother, Lady Vevey, is not in town. He feels confident that they would have become fast friends and Miss Griffin might have found it convenient to meet with some one who could have introduced Miss Earnshaw to a little gaiety.

Being a bachelor himself with only a pied-a-terre at his club all hospitality is, unfortunately denied him. But, if he might be allowed to offer tickets for the Haymarket Theatre—there is a good play running—and—

"Oh, auntie will buy tickets, if she hears of this really serious loss and suggests that for the future, if her mistress likes, she will take care of the money. Miss Griffin is only too pleased to rid herself of the responsibility, for since her arrival in town she has already been most unfortunate.

They have done a great amount of sight-seeing, and Judy is beginning to sigh for the country, when a most terrible and utterly unforeseen catastrophe overtakes them—a calamity so unprecedented that for the time being even Judy seems to lose her wits.

They have just returned one afternoon from a visit to the West End, when Bird comes into the drawing-room, looking particularly cross and uncomfortable.

"Please, ma'am, there has been a man waiting to see you for the past two hours," she says, rather resentfully.

"A man!" echoes Miss Griffin, pausing in the very act of untying her bonnet-strings. "What sort of man, Bird? And why didn't you tell him to call again, instead of keeping him waiting?"

"It was no use telling him," explains Bird—"he wouldn't go. He said he had come from the East End to see you, and as he had got the rheumatics, he would rather wait. So for two mortal hours we have been sitting staring at each other down in the dining-room and I must say he isn't a pleasant sort of man to sit with. First he wanted to smoke, and, when I wouldn't let him, he began to—"

"—to chew tobacco," Bird makes a gesture of disgust.

"But, Bird, you could have left him alone for a short time," observes Miss Griffin, smiling.

"No, thank you, ma'am," retorts Bird, with a knowing nod. "The plate-basket was a little too handy—"

"—contemptuously—"that I think he would have been likely to fancy Mrs. Tooley's German silver, but there are all the queer-shaped silver spoons you bought the other day in it. Also, Miss Judy's purse lying, I must say, rather tempting on the chimney-piece."

"I see," says Miss Griffin, smiling. Then she continues wonderingly, "What can the man want with me? Did he tell you his name?"

"Yes, ma'am—Hogg," and he looks at her anxiously.

"Hogg," muses Miss Griffin. Then she shakes her head, being able to make nothing of the name. "You had better show him up, I suppose, and—"

"If you will excuse my saying so, ma'am, he is severely drawing-room victor," objects Bird hurriedly.

"Ah, perhaps not!" says Miss Griffin, looking a trifle amused. "I him, for I am sure he admires you. I saw him looking at you so friendly just now."

"Oh, I am sure he can't," Judy cries, laughing, "for, unless he is blind, he must be aware that I do not at all appreciate his many charms!"

Miss Griffin says nothing, thinking it best not to run the risk of increasing Judy's prejudice, but to let it die out of its own accord. And she firmly believes that it will do so in time.

Before the day is over, circumstances seem to be really working to bring about that consummation. For Judy, on her return from the theatre finds that she has lost a valuable diamond pin which she had worn in her hair and Mr. Callaghan is so energetic in drawing up advertisements for its recovery that she has to acknowledge, before she retires to rest, that he is very good-natured.

"Good-natured—I should think so!" ejaculates Miss Griffin admiringly. "We seem always to be making use of him."

The Hon. Alexander seems exceedingly anxious to render himself agreeable to them and as time goes on, he becomes daily more and more at home in the little house at Kensington. Such frequent visits necessitate a certain amount of intimacy and soon it becomes an established thing that, when Miss Griffin is in any difficulty, great or small, she straight way sends for Mr. Callaghan. He soon knows her family history as well as she knows it herself, and is moved to indignation by the sorrow of her youth. He admires Judy immensely, but always speaks of his passion as being hopeless.

He is always kind and helpful, and, when Miss Griffin, having spent all the money she brought with her receives a cheque for three hundred pounds from her brother, he puts himself out of the way to go with her to the bank and protect her on the homeward journey. True, the bag containing the money is snatched out of her hand as she is leaving the bank and his efforts to catch the thief are ineffectual, but that does not alter his kindness of intention and he at once insists on her accepting two five-pound notes, until she can hear again from the Hermitage.

Bird sniffs ominously when she hears of this really serious loss and suggests that for the future, if her mistress likes, she will take care of the money. Miss Griffin is only too pleased to rid herself of the responsibility, for since her arrival in town she has already been most unfortunate.

They have done a great amount of sight-seeing, and Judy is beginning to sigh for the country, when a most terrible and utterly unforeseen catastrophe overtakes them—a calamity so unprecedented that for the time being even Judy seems to lose her wits.

They have just returned one afternoon from a visit to the West End, when Bird comes into the drawing-room, looking particularly cross and uncomfortable.

"Please, ma'am, there has been a man waiting to see you for the past two hours," she says, rather resentfully.

"A man!" echoes Miss Griffin, pausing in the very act of untying her bonnet-strings. "What sort of man, Bird? And why didn't you tell him to call again, instead of keeping him waiting?"

"It was no use telling him," explains Bird—"he wouldn't go. He said he had come from the East End to see you, and as he had got the rheumatics, he would rather wait. So for two mortal hours we have been sitting staring at each other down in the dining-room and I must say he isn't a pleasant sort of man to sit with. First he wanted to smoke, and, when I wouldn't let him, he began to—"

"—to chew tobacco," Bird makes a gesture of disgust.

"But, Bird, you could have left him alone for a short time," observes Miss Griffin, smiling.

"No, thank you, ma'am," retorts Bird, with a knowing nod. "The plate-basket was a little too handy—"

"—contemptuously—"that I think he would have been likely to fancy Mrs. Tooley's German silver, but there are all the queer-shaped silver spoons you bought the other day in it. Also, Miss Judy's purse lying, I must say, rather tempting on the chimney-piece."

"I see," says Miss Griffin, smiling. Then she continues wonderingly, "What can the man want with me? Did he tell you his name?"

"Yes, ma'am—Hogg," and he looks at her anxiously.

"Hogg," muses Miss Griffin. Then she shakes her head, being able to make nothing of the name. "You had better show him up, I suppose, and—"

"If you will excuse my saying so, ma'am, he is severely drawing-room victor," objects Bird hurriedly.

"Ah, perhaps not!" says Miss Griffin, looking a trifle amused. "I had better go down to the dining-room. Oh, dear, these stairs! When you get to my age, Judy, you won't skip up and down them as you do now."

"Nonsense, auntie! You are tired to-day—you are generally as brisk as a bee," returns Judy, passing her hand affectionately within Miss Griffin's arm. "Come now, let me be your prop."

So they make their way down the stairs and into the dining-room. Bird was right—the air is disagreeably tainted with the smell of coarse tobacco. As they enter, a shuffling figure rises from a distant chair and advances to meet them, bearing in his hand an exceedingly rusty black hat, into which is crammed a dirty red cotton handkerchief.

"Your servant, ma'am," the man says, in a low, thick voice. Then, seeing that Miss Griffin merely bows her head, and remains silently awaiting an explanation, he draws forth the soiled handkerchief, and applies it ostentatiously to his eyes. "I am crying, ma'am. I am much affected," he remarks at length.

"Are you in trouble of some kind?" inquires Miss Griffin kindly. "I did not recognize your name."

"It is the likeness that makes me cry, ma'am—it's that what affects me," says the old man, his voice quivering. "She is so like her mother—the image, I may say, of my dear Polly."

Judy, who has been regarding the object before her with mingled curiosity and disdain turns rather pale as she sees the old man's eyes fixed wickily upon her.

Miss Griffin does not snare in Judy's alarm. She is so thoroughly convinced, in her own mind, that the child, whom she has cherished for all these years, is the daughter of her false friend and faithless lover, that it has never occurred to her that there is the faintest risk of her being claimed by others.

"Did you know Mrs. Earnshaw?" she asks, beginning to feel interested in the interview.

The old man regards her suspiciously with those cunning eyes of his.

"I know nothing about Mrs. Earnshaw," he whimpers, shaking his grizzled and unkempt locks. "I came here to see my pretty Polly—my dear, dear Polly, the image of her mother." And, depositing his hat upon the table, he holds out two hands encased in clumsy woollen gloves towards Judy.

The girl stares at him with a look of horror, then turning towards Miss Griffin, she says pitiously—

"Oh, auntie, auntie!"

Instinctively, Miss Griffin's hand closes on that of her adopted daughter, and, sinking into a chair, she asks, in a bewildered, faltering voice—

"Man, what do you mean?"

Mr. Hogg looks at them out of the corners of his bloodshot eyes, then, taking up his hat again, he smooths it for inspiration.

"I've been seeking her and seeking her ever since my Polly died," he says, apostrophising the ceiling. "But cooking for a lost child in this big world is like seeking a needle in a bundle of hay and I had given up hope almost when Providence took me to the pit of the theatre and there, sitting up above me, decked out with flowers and jewels, I found my child."

Again he steps towards Judy, but she turns away shudderingly, retiring almost behind Miss Griffin's chair.

"You may have lost a child—I suppose you have," says the old lady, pressing one of her white, jewelled hands to her throbbing brow, "but why do you claim this young lady? Where—where did you leave your baby?"

"Ah," sighs Mr. Hogg, "if I had known the name of the house where I left her, I should have claimed her long ago. But Polly and I had been on the tramp for weeks, and I don't even rightly remember what county it was. Only we was about dead-beat, and the child was heavy, and says Polly to me, 'Do you see the lights from that big house, Jennie, shining through the trees?' Yes, says I. 'That's here the last carder told us the baby was never turned away without victuals or money, so let's make for it.' 'Just so,' says she. 'But we won't ask nothing for ourselves, only put the child on the step and bolt.' 'So we did it, only Polly was so soft-hearted that she must needs Lide till she saw the child took in.'

This graphic description is too much for Miss Griffin. A vague, unwilling half-belief creeps into her mind.

"When did all this happen?" she falters, her hand tightening its clasp on Judy's, which she is holding over her shoulder.

"On a cold November evening, just eighteen years ago," he answers readily.

The shock makes Miss Griffin tremble from head to foot, and Judy stepping out from behind the chair, confronts the old man with a white set face.

"If what you say is true—if I am your child," she says slowly, "and with an effort at self-restraint, 'you have no right to claim me now. You abandoned me years ago, and I belong to those who have taken care of me—don't I auntie?'—and she turns with a sob towards Miss Griffin.

"Oh, Polly, to speak like that to your poor old father!" cries James Hogg, in a whimpering tone. "And when it isn't the truth, either, for by the law of the land I can claim you. You are under age, miss—yes, that you are"—stamping his foot—"and I'll soon see whether I don't make you come home and keep my little chair nice and tidy for me. I want only Polly, I do, to sweep my hearth, and cook my little bit of dinner—I want her to fill my tacey-pipe and mix my little drop of whiskey."

"Oh, Judy, is it all a horrible nightmare, or am I awake?" asks Miss Griffin, holding out her trembling hands as though she would seize and hold the girl by force.

In a moment Judy is on her knees and has encircled the old lady with her strong, reassuring young arms.

"I don't believe a word of it—I don't believe I am his child," she cries hotly.

"But, if so"—with a sudden terrible dread that his statement may be true—"I won't be made his servant now! No one has any right to me but you, auntie dear—you and Guardie."

"As to not being my servant, we'll soon see what a policeman says to that," declares the old man, a malicious smile lighting up his crafty countenance. "A father has a right to his child, I suppose?"

"Give us time, my good man—you surely can't expect her to go with you now!" cries Miss Griffin, deeply agitated.

"No time like the present, ma'am! I have been without her long enough, so put on your hat, Polly and come along home with your father! I've got two nice little rooms in Mizzy Court. They ain't as big perhaps as they might

SOLOMON

(International Uniform Sunday School Lesson, Sept. 17th)

COLLEEN TEXT: "Enter into his gates with thanksgiving and into his courts with praise."—Psalm 103:4.
LESSON PASSAGE: 1 Kings 8:1-11.

WORSHIP
"In the castle of my soul there is a little eastern gate
Where, when I enter, I am in the presence of God.
In a moment, in a turning of a thought,
I am where God is.
When I meet God there all life gains a new meaning,
Small things become great and great things small,
Lowly and despised things are shot through with glory.

My troubles seem but the pebbles on the road,
My joys seem like the everlasting hills.
All my fever is gone in the great peace of God,
And I pass through the door from Time to Eternity."

ARCHITECTURE, 1
There are cathedrals in Europe which required six hundred years to build. The original conception has only been surpassed by the continued devotion which brought the project to completion. No one can estimate the spiritual influence of Westminster Abbey and St. Paul's in Old London. In recent years cathedrals have been erected in Liverpool and in New York costing many millions of dollars. The expense is criticized, but so also was the breaking of the alabaster box of precious ointment criticized by those who were penny wise and pound foolish. Jesus commended the lavish devotion. The value of a cathedral cannot be estimated in dollars and cents. It has been well said that the cultivation of roses does not interfere with the growing of grain. People may be hungry for beauty as well as for bread. Worship may be of more permanent value than wealth. Solomon built a gorgeous temple for the worship of God. The erection of this noble structure carried economic strain but viewed through the centuries it may be argued that the project justified itself. Architecture is always costly, but it has been of great service to the higher life of mankind. One of the unforgettable cruelties of the Wars was the destruction of magnificent cathedrals such as that at Rheims. War littleness dies slowly when civic pride and religious sanctity have been thus violated.

TRADITION, 2-4.
Edgar Guest has said that it takes a hero of living to make a house a home. It takes long history to create religious sanctities. During the wilderness wanderings of the people of Israel they could have no fixed place of worship. The ark of the Lord was carried with them in their journeyings, a perfect cube, about which religious associations had gathered. To us it would seem an imperfect religious symbol, but to the Israelites it stood for the presence of Jehovah with his people. In worship it needs to be remembered always that it is what is in the mind of the worshipper that is most important. All Israel's history was summed up and recalled by the presence of the ark. In itself it was of little value, but because of long associations it was fitted to be the central object in a shrine. Preparations for moving it into the Temple were made with utmost care. In a few brief years great reverence attached to the tomb of the unknown soldiers in various countries. The Edinburgh War Memorial has become a symbol to a nation and to many beyond that nation. Canada's Peace Tower is reproduced constantly in picture form. How much deeper were the associations of the people of Israel with the ark of the covenant which had been cared for by successive leaders and around which their worship had taken form.

SACRIFICES, 5
It is difficult for modern people to understand what lay back of the custom of offering sacrifices. When the Temple was dedicated Solomon had more sheep and oxen sacrificed than could be numbered. It was a vague way of expressing devotion. Perhaps it was necessary to have something which could be seen in order that worship might be impressive. It showed the willingness of the worshippers to give and the blood symbolized life. Yet it was at best a primitive and imperfect form of worship. It lacked the elements of truth and beauty. There were many associations that were unpleasant. When the race made progress it was able to put away childish things. The prophets saw the danger of trusting to outward sacrifices when the true sacrifice to God is a broken spirit and a contrite heart. After all the sacrificial system, though costly and inconvenient, was too easy. It did not deal sufficiently with the human heart and will. Jesus confirmed the prophets in requiring a higher form of worship.

ART IN WORSHIP, 6-8.
Art has had a large place in worship. The cathedrals of Europe show great paintings. The stained glass windows teach sublime truths. Color and light have been utilized to express man's moods and faith. The cherubim with their wings spreading over the ark may have little meaning to us, but to those who first had this vision of truth and beauty it meant to keep reverent guard over sacred things. The outspread wings are frequent figures in religious symbolism. Very necessary their symbols were in the days when few could read or write. It may be that they are still necessary because people learn most easily through the eye, but we are now able to use books, cultivated speech, motion pictures and radio for educational purposes. The artistic sense finds many modes of expression. Art is not the foe or rival of religion. It may be an ally. Such has often been its function in the past.

INCENSE, 10, 11.
The use of incense in worship is much more intelligible to us than sacrifices because it is such a fitting symbol of prayers ascending to God. It has the value of appealing to the sense of smell, a sense much neglected in modern life compared with the past. The cloud of incense smoke filling the Temple was a symbol of the presence of the glory of God. The fragrance arising from the incense was a memory that helped to recall higher spiritual values. It may be that we are now able to do without such symbols. If we sing, pray, speak and listen with intelligence we may have the realities in truth of which the incense was but a sign and symbol. It may be that the two sacraments of baptism and the Lord's Supper are now sufficient, but in the long history of religion, sacred shrines, sacrifices and incense have had an honored place.

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION
1. What is worship?
2. Should Canada seek to create a shrine comparable to Westminster Abbey?
3. Since the War two great cathedrals have been built one in Liverpool and the other in New York. Was the money well spent?
4. Which has done more for religion, art or architecture?
5. Why do Protestants not use incense in worship?

C.C.F. ILLOGICAL SAYS PROFESSOR

Prof. MacIver Speaks At Liberal Summer Conference

Dr. R. M. MacIver, Professor of Political Science at Columbia University, New York, Thursday night at the Liberal Summer Conference at T.C.S. described as "minute capitalism" principles of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, which, he said, meant capitalism for the farmer and the retail store, if it was small enough, and socialism for the bankers.

Professor MacIver, former head of the Political Science Department of the University of Toronto, declared present economic conditions were a challenge to Liberalism, to the meaning, order and whole foundation of life. He said, was an age of extreme and class consciousness, die-hard Conservatism and Fascism which bred communism.

The war, he continued, had developed irrationalism, and irrationalism had been projected into its aftermath. The younger generation he blamed for creation of a disorderly world.

Any political party, he said, should welcome the challenge of these conditions in a day that was not a judgment day, but one of opportunity. It was the habit of extreme minds, he proceeded to speak as though there were only two systems, communism and capitalism.

He maintained there was a middle road, and courage, not timidity, prompted the search for this road. Communism and Conservatism he labelled the consummation of activities, while in Liberalism there was progressive endeavor.

Waste, unemployment, distress and maldistribution of wealth, Dr. MacIver said, constituted a challenge that had to be met. He accused Conservatives of denying any challenge existed, and expressed the view every demand of the present could be met by Liberalism.

"Let us put our house in order by all means," he said, "but do not let us do so by an explosion."

Sir Herbert Samuel
Sir Herbert Samuel, Chairman of the British Liberal Party, delivered an address in which he outlined the status of his party in the United Kingdom.

"It is a question," he said, "if the Labor Party in England has contributed at all to progress, and if we would not have been further on if it had not existed. He accused the Laborites of having merely divided the support that normally would have gone to the Liberal Party, allowing the Conservatives to be returned to the House of Commons.

If Labor had occupied itself in instilling more enthusiasm into the Liberal Party, the United Kingdom would have made more social progress in the last twenty years, he said.

Sir Herbert admitted that the Liberal Party in Britain was in a weak position, and blamed the condition partly on circumstances surrounding inauguration of the National Government, partly on the vivid and combative personality of David Lloyd George, its former Leader, and partly on the rise of the Labor Party.

Information Withheld
It was too early to say that the lowest point of the depression had been reached, Professor H. M. Cassidy, University of Toronto, told the conference. The volume of unemployment in this country was still large. On that point, however, he voiced indignation at the "unwilling attitude" of the Dominion Government to give out information on the unemployment and relief situation. Information, he said, was difficult to obtain except through personal friends in the departments concerned.

The present system of relief was creating a growing class of unemployables. Begun as an emergency measure it had now developed on a semi-organized national basis.

He believed that, since the community had a responsibility to keep its citizens alive, a system should be worked out by which Province and Dominion should bear the lion's share. The British North America Act had best be forgotten in view of the urgency of relief measures.

Sales of fertilizers during the year ended June 30 totalled 265,442 tons against 362,848 tons during the preceding twelve months. Of the 143,233 total 85,459 tons were exported and 179,983 tons were sold in Canada.

Percy Smith, driver of a transport which figured in an accident on the Provincial Highway west of here several weeks ago, was listed for hearing here Monday but the action was further adjourned until October 9th.

HOW PRICELESS IS GOOD VISION?

Yet how often we neglect our eyes. Of course one seldom goes blind through neglecting his eyes, but eyestrain, headaches, and general physical breakdowns often result.

And it is all so unnecessary. Modern optical science through the prescription of proper lenses, can correct optical deficiencies and bring comfort and health.

If you have the slightest doubt about your eyes, take no chances, it isn't worth it. A thorough eye's examination may save you months of suffering and inconvenience.

In keeping with the times the cost of glasses is considerably less, with the same high standard of examination and service.

PETERBORO RINK WINS DOUBLES

Forty Rinks Competed For Bickle Trophy At Cobourg

Forty rinks took part in the Scotch doubles tournament of the Cobourg Bowling Club, which was completed at an early hour Tuesday morning. They came from Toronto, Whitby, Bowmanville, Belleville, Peterboro, Norwood, Cobourg and other points.

Joe Bennett and John Howden of Peterboro won the Bickle Memorial Cup, this being the third time in seven years that they have annexed this trophy.

The runners-up were Cliff Harecourt and O. F. Allison of Cobourg. The consolation was won by Messrs. Kitcher and McLean of Belleville, Messrs. Hicks and Sturgess of Whitby being the runners-up.

Ed Guillet and W. H. Hopper won the hard luck, which concluded much strenuous competition. The runners-up in this event were Messrs. Dean and William of Norwood. This is the third largely attended tourney held by Cobourg bowlers this season.

UNIQUE CORN COB FOUND AT OSHAWA

In most cases it is usual to find one cob of corn at the most in each ear found in the corn-field, however, Mrs. F. S. Marshall, Lakeview Gardens, Oshawa, while picking golden bantam corn the other day found an ear that contained no less than five ears, all contained in the one sheaf and on the same stalk. Two of the ears are larger than the others while the other three are clustered about them in compact fashion.

AT MIDNIGHT

Have courage, soul!
When dawn returns
And the dark sea
With bright flame burns,
When rose and lily
(Not so dim)
Are filled with scarlet
To the brim,
You will be glad
And brave again.
Forgetting night's
Forlorn refrain.
You will be like
A lily cup,
With hope and joy
So brimming up.
Take courage, soul;
At midnight say:
"Dawn even now
Is on the way!"

—Aline Michaels.

DIED

LOCKHART—At the Toronto General Hospital, on Sunday, September 16th, 1933, Mary Jane Marshall, beloved wife of Arthur James Lockhart.

IN MEMORIAM

DOUGHERN—In loving memory of Sarah E. Laurenson, beloved wife of W. Boughen, who passed into eternal rest on September 12th, 1928.

Time may come and bring us changes,
Fresh with every coming year,
But your memory will be cherished
In the hearts that love you dear.
Ever missed by husband, son, parents,
Brothers and sisters.

WOOL—In loving memory of our dear Mother, Emma Wood, who passed away September 12th, 1932. We do not forget you, nor do we intend.

We think of you often and will to the end.
Gone and forgotten by some you may be,
But dear in our memories you always will be.
Sadly missed by family.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

SEPTEMBER 6, 1913.
A Pleasant Auto Trip
Mr. and Mrs. George Medaife, Victoria street, returned from a visit in Detroit and other western cities on September 6th, 1913. They travelled in their three-year-old Ford car covering 1,100 miles on the trip. Returning Mr. Medaife made the distance from Detroit to London on five gallons of gasoline.

SEPTEMBER 7, 1913

BRICKVILLE
Mr. Taylor put up a new driving shed.
Kerr Brothers had a large crop of tomatoes.

Fred and Dolly Little left for the Northwest.
Mr. Will Fogler was the guest of his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Sid Little visited Mr. and Mrs. Will Cook.
Misses Lillian and Lou Wilson visited Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Little.
Mr. Walter Crowhurst and son Arthur were in Toronto, taking in the Exhibition.

Miss Edith Taylor returned home from a visit to Peterboro, Lindsay and Fenelon Falls.

RESTORE CURFEW AFTER FORTY YEARS

After resting, dusty and silent in the municipal storehouse for four decades, the old curfew bell of the village of Bridgeburg was brought out this week to be put in readiness to ring its warning again that children must leave the streets at 9 each night.

The board of education requested restoration of the forgotten curfew by-law to curb a wave of minor delinquency.

Hope of ill gain is the beginning of loss.—Democritus.

A GREAT DIPLOMAT GONE
It should always be gratefully remembered of Viscount Grey, of Falloden, whose death took place early on Thursday morning, that placed in a position of great responsibility he did his utmost to avert the World War.

He of all the diplomats concerned in the events that led up to the great conflict fought the hardest to prevent the beginning of hostilities, and while the circumstances proved too strong even for his diplomatic ability to overcome, his earnest efforts for peace should cause his name to be recalled appreciatively.

And Britons everywhere will not fail to remember, too, that when he realized that his efforts to maintain peace were futile he threw himself into the prosecution of the war with the same vigor and determination he had previously displayed in his attempt to avert the conflict.

When peace could no longer be maintained without the national honor of his country being injured, Viscount Grey was a loyal Briton eager to do all that he could to bring success to his country's cause in a struggle he had exerted every effort to prevent.

He was one of the world's greatest diplomats, and in his eleven years as Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs—incidentally the longest term in that office ever held by one individual—he did much to maintain peace and order in Europe. — Peterboro Examiner.
