CHARLES STAGG DIES SUDDENLY

Prominent Local Bandsman Passed Away Monday Afternoon Following Seizure

Prominent in local band circles for the past fifteen years, Charles George Stagg, well known local resident, passed away suddenly at his home here Monday afternoon shortly after three o'clock in his 73rd year. Deceased had not been feeling particularly well for some time but his condition was not regarded as serious.

Born in Andover, Hampshire, England, the late Mr. Stagg came to Canada twenty years ago with his family and settled in Toronto where they remained for five years. Moving to Port Hope, deceased was employed by the Mathews Conveyor Company as stationary engineer, a position he held until four years ago when he retired.

The late Mr. Stagg, while of a quiet and retiring nature had a wide coterie of friends who will regret to hear of his sudden passing. He was a member of St. John's Anglican Church and for a number of years sang in the choir.

Music was his favorite hobby and as a double bass horn player, was highly regarded in band circles. He also took a keen interest in his home and garden where he spent a considerable amount of his time.

He is survived by his wife, who before her marriage was Ellen Moffatt, two sons, Alfred, of the McLean Publishing Company, Toronto, Arthur, Toronto and one daughter, Mrs. H. P. Harris, also of Toronto.

REGULAR MEETING OF TOWN COUNCIL

M.O.H. To Investigate Sewer Trouble — Tax Collector's Report

At the regular meeting of Council Monday night, Dr. C. B. Kelly, M.O.H., was authorized to immediately inspect and exercise his duty regarding a sewer at the corner of Bramley and Bidout streets, affecting properties on the above named streets and report his findings to the next meeting of Council.

The meeting was short and uneventful with Councillor H. M. Van Alstine the only absentee. A grant to the Relief Committee of $80 to meet current expenses and a second grant of $2,000 to the High School Board for the same purpose were passed. The I.O.D.E. request for permission to hold a tag day on Saturday, October 14, was also granted.

Notice of a claim for damages for personal injury in a fall on Hill street was received from Mrs. Minnie Young. It was stated that the accident was the result of the condition of the street. The matter will be investigated by the street and bridge committee before any action will be taken by Council.

The request for the co-operation of the municipality in putting across Fellowship and Friendship Week from October 4 to 8, was contained in a letter from Hon. W. G. Martin, minister of public welfare. The idea of the week is to help strengthen the character and faith of citizens who are facing difficult and trying times.

Mayor Crowhurst stated that he had referred the matter to two local service clubs but as yet had been unable to get any suggestions as to how it might be carried out.

Tax Collector A. J. Chesher submitted his report for August which showed receipts from the scale and market fees to be $80.40. The number of transients who visited the Town Hall for food or lodging was 98 during the same period.

WHITBY MOTORIST IS CRASH VICTIM

Everett H. Jamieson Passes In Belleville General Hospital

Everett H. Jamieson of Whitby, died at 2 p.m. Tuesday of injuries received when his automobile crashed into a heavily laden truck one mile north of Foxboro. Paralyzed on one side and suffering from a badly fractured skull and concussion of the brain, the victim had not recovered consciousness since his admission to the General Hospital at Belleville.

A passenger in the car, Miss Helen Lucas, of Belleville, escaped serious injury. The truck was driven by Frank Hoxes of Toronto, who assisted in removing the injured man from the wrecked car. Aid was also rendered by David Phillips, a passing motorist. Doctors Ward and Stobie attended Jamieson at the hospital.

DURHAM M.P.P. WAS MARRIED

W. J. Bragg And Bride Will Be 'At Home' In November

St. Barnabas' Episcopal church, Toronto, was the scene of a pretty wedding when Ada Catherine Bryans of Niagara-on-the-Lake and Toronto, became the wife of William J. Bragg, M.P.P., of Bowmanville. Rev. Frank Powell, rector of the church, performed the ceremony.

The bride was beautifully gowned in burgundy velvet made on the new princess lines with draped turban to match and nosegay of sweetheart roses. Mrs. J. E. Flynn of New York City, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, wearing a graceful gown of blue French crepe and carrying an old-fashioned bouquet of talisman roses. Rev. Harry Garbutt was best man.

A reception followed at the Royal York Hotel for the members of the immediate families. After Nov. 1 Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Bragg will be at home to their hosts of friends at their new home in Bowmanville.

COBOURG PURCHASES NEW STONE CRUSHER

Cobourg town council passed a resolution to purchase a stone crusher, the price being $650. The stone crusher will serve two useful purposes. At the present time the supply of small gravel is petering out and it was found necessary to buy a crusher to break up the available large rock into sizes small enough for road-grading purposes.

In addition, the fact that gravel can therefore be obtained through employment of the crusher, will provide work for men in repairing roads throughout the town. There is sufficient stone in one locality alone to serve the town's needs for three years.

Eminent Historian Wed To Miss Elizabeth Durgwynne

Professor George M. Wrong, eminent professor of history at the University of Toronto, and former resident of Port Hope district, was married quietly Friday morning to Miss Elizabeth Durgwynne of Englewood. The ceremony, which took place in St. James Cathedral, was performed by Rev. Canon Plumptre. Only the immediate family were present. Prof. Wrong who has been professor of history at the University of Toronto since 1894, was born in 1869 in Elgin County. He retired in 1927 and is the author of many works on history. "The Rise and Fall of New France," published in 1928, is one of his best-known books; and his history of Canada is another widely known work.

FOUR ALLEGED THIEVES ESCAPE

Apprehended At Belleville For Theft Of Port Hope Car

Arrested as they were sitting in an auto which was reported to have been stolen at Port Hope, four men broke away from County Constable Wickett, at Belleville early Saturday as he was taking them to his home in order to telephone provincial police. One of the men made a dash as the door was reached and for the moment upset the constable. The other three took to their heels before he could recover and the four made their escape by back lanes and side streets.

The car was the property of J. A. Hume, Port Hope, and was stolen from the Port Hope Hospital Friday night.

Millbrook Is Famous For Flavored Drinking Water

Millbrook is very peculiarly and fortunately situated as regards their water supply. It would appear that a soft drink establishment would starve to death in this village as the people have an assortment of flavors to choose from in their natural state that should satisfy the most discriminating.

Millbrook is just bubbling with healthful mineral springs, if your taste calls for lime water, you can proceed to a certain part of the town and get your fill of water with a real lime taste as it bubbles out of the rock. At the town hall fountain, everyone asks his neighbor, "Had your iron to-day?" and if you haven't it is an easy matter to acquire it for from the fountain gushes mineral water so strong with iron that the porcelain fountain is covered with a mass of rust. If you like sulphur water, another part of the town yields this healthful drink in abundance. Millbrook is so noted for its healthful mineral waters that it is not an unusual sight to see persons passing through bottling up their favorite "Flavor" and taking it with them.

LOCAL A. & P. STORE WINS FIRST PRIZE

In a competition for increased sales which has been running for the past thirteen weeks, Port Hope A. & P. store staff, managed by James Bennett, placed first in the Class "A" stores of Ontario district and have won a cash prize of $125. The local store showed a large increase in business over the figures for last year which may be taken as an indication that conditions are improving in general.

PLEADS GUILTY TO 21 COUNTS

William J. Montgomery Faces Additional Charges In Police Court

When Clifford Curtis, Peterboro service station operator, refused to comply with William J. Montgomery's order to "stick 'em up" as Montgomery, concealed behind a latticed gate, poked a loaded revolver into his face, but instead grappled with the thug and beat him so badly that he was easily captured by police, Curtis' action was the means of bringing to justice a criminal whose path of crime stretched full way across the province.

These facts came to light when Montgomery, still wearing a pronounced bruise on his left temple, the result of the fractured skull he received at the hands of Curtis, appeared in Peterboro police court and faced the longest battery of criminal charges to be arrayed against a single prisoner in the Peterboro police court in years.

In all, Montgomery was arraigned on 21 new charges and in a low voice he said "guilty" to each one.

17 Charges of Forgery

They included 17 charges of forgery by which Montgomery had fraudulently obtained a total of $581.28 by cashing the Canadian National Express money orders which he stole on June 30 from the railway office at Lakefield, when he carried off the office safe.

Also Montgomery pleaded guilty to breaking and entering the store of Ivan Steen, Aylmer, Elgin County, and carrying off a safe containing $1,125 in cash, mortgages, Imperial Oil stock and insurance.

He pleaded guilty to defrauding Roy Nicholas of Bowmanville by securing $65 for 40 shares of Imperial Oil stock, stolen from Steen's store. He was remanded, advised: Await for sentence.

Montgomery's speedy course through Ontario early in July cashing the money orders stolen from Lakefield had police throughout the province baffled. In all his criminal activities in July must have brought him returns of close to $1,000 in cash.

COURT ACQUITS LAUNCH DRIVERS

Brighton And Toronto Men Freed In Fatal Collision

Charges of criminal negligence against Harry Shevman of Brighton and Bert Meechin of Monarch Park Avenue, Toronto, arising from a fatal collision of motor boats piloted by the two men were dismissed Tuesday by Magistrate J. H. Davidson.

The charges were laid following an inquest on five-year-old Dorothy Lewis, daughter of Albert Lewis of Toronto, who was the only passenger aboard Meechin's boat to be drowned. Meechin's craft was rammed amidships by that piloted by Shevman, and it capsized and sank.

Joseph Kemp, a passenger in the Meechin boat, related he did not see the on-coming launch until his wife screamed, then he looked and saw it about 50 feet away. "Then it struck," he said, "and we were all pitched into the water." Dorothy Lewis was drowned in the confusion.

Kemp testified the "San Toy," Meechin's boat, was riding on an even keel with its 13 passengers evenly distributed. The other boat, the "Garland," owned by Dr. Frank Dunnett of Brighton, struck the "San Toy" almost amidships. After the "San Toy" capsized the "Garland" picked up all the passengers except the Lewis girl whose body was found half an hour later.

CLERGYMAN'S SON SERIOUSLY SHOT

Son Of Rev. H. P. Seymour, Campbellford, Accidentally Injured While Hunting

James Seymour, aged 16, was Thursday night rushed to the Belleville Hospital suffering from gunshot wounds in his hip, following an accidental shooting on the outskirts of the town.

The injured boy is the son of Rev. H. P. L. Seymour. With two other boys, Angus Donald and Raymond Wragg, both 15 years of age, he went out rabbit hunting after school. They had a couple of hounds with them, and were returning home when the dogs suddenly chased a rabbit across the road in front of them. Raymond Wragg, carrying a 12-gauge shotgun loaded with No. 5 shot, raised his weapon to take aim. In doing so his thumb accidentally caught on the hammer and the gun went off.

James Seymour, who was standing within five feet of the gun, received the full charge in his hip. Ralph Rowe, son of a near-by farmer, rushed the injured lad by motor car to town, where Dr. H. B. Longmore and Dr. E. V. Frederick rendered first aid, and succeeded in removing some of the shot. Following a telephone conversation with Dr. Stobie at the Belleville Hospital, the boy was hurried by ambulance to Belleville.

DECLARES MASH CHICKEN FEED

Judgment Reserved By Magistrate In Norwood Moonshine Case

More important than the alcoholic chicken feed which Mrs. May Hill maintains two Royal Canadian Mounted Police constables foolishly mistook for corn mash for the manufacture of moonshine whiskey came to light at the trial of Russell Hill in Norwood on a charge of having the mash in his possession contrary to the Excise Act.

Constables Wood, of Lindsay and Denton, of Cobourg, both told of visiting the Hill home in Dunmer Township and of finding the 30-gallon barrel of mash. They said the mash contained corn, sugar, yeast and other ingredients guaranteed to hasten its reaction in an alcoholic beverage. A government analyst's certificate which produced showed that the mash was 17.5 percent proof spirits.

May Hill and her eldest son, Gerald, both swore that the mash was made only of cracked corn, water and skimmed milk and that they were in the habit of feeding it to the chickens and sometimes to the pigs. Russell Hill denied any knowledge of what the barrel contained, explaining that he was occupied in working in the field and left the feeding of the stock and fowl to his wife and children.

Judgment of Police Magistrate Langley was reserved until Saturday. However, His Worship said that since the Hill property was in the name of May Hill he could not properly see how the mash could be said to be in the possession of her husband.

Police officers said that if the husband is acquitted they will lay a similar charge against his wife. J. A. O'Brien conducted the defence.

CHANGE RAILROAD BED TO HIGHWAY

Representative Appointed To Confer With Township Heads

A question was introduced at the council meeting at Lindsay in regard to having the old railroad bed between Lindsay and Barleton turned into a highway. Reeve J. B. Begg and Councillor C. G. Frost were appointed to confer with the councillors of Ops, Manvers and Cartwright townships in an attempt to reach an agreement on this matter. Farmers south of town believe that the old roadbed could be turned into an excellent highway cheaply.

Orchards Of Ontario, Ltd., Port Hope, Buys Cobourg Warehouse

The Cobourg fruit warehouse, Elgin street, has been purchased by Orchards of Ontario, Limited, Port Hope. The warehouse is the building alongside the railroad track between the first and second holes of the Cobourg golf course.

The warehouse will be conducted as a community apple packing and marketing plant besides providing storage facilities up to five thousand barrels. A staff of twelve to fifteen hands will be employed for the fall months.

Acids In Stomach Cause Indigestion

Create Sourness, Gas and Pain. How to Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sour, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

The world's sugar production increased from 18,000,000 tons in 1921 to 30,000,000 tons in 1932.

MAKE DISCOVERY NEW STIMULANT

Growth Producing Acid Found Everywhere — Still In Experimental Stage

The most universal stimulant ever found, a growth-promoting acid, is under discussion by American Chemical Society biologists at Chicago.

Even its name, pantothenic acid, was new to most of them. Its discovery was reported by Dr. Roger J. Williams and Carl M. Lyman, of Oregon Agricultural college, who, said they named it from the Greek, meaning "from everywhere," because that described exactly where they found it.

They said it was a "constituent of all living things." They found it in humans, worms, plant molds, oysters, bacteria, algae and milk.

"It is probably safe to say," they stated, "that it is more widely distributed in nature than any known physiologically potent substance. It is apparently a single acid substance."

Although they have not yet succeeded in getting rid of all the impurities their latest extract, taken from liver, is so potent that a single droplet the size of a pinhead speeds up the growth of yeast in 250 gallons of liquid.

Their experiments indicate that it is composed of long chains of carbon, hydrogen and oxygen. Neither sulphur nor nitrogen have been found in it, or any of the common combinations of carbon and hydrogen forming sugar.

In strength it falls between acetic and lactic acids. Yet one part in a billion appears sufficient to affect growth.

Enormous Surplus Of Butter Worries Canadian Producers

Canada suddenly finds itself with 10,000,000 pounds more butter than will be needed for domestic consumption this winter. W. H. Forster of Hamilton, President of the National Dairy Council, and Allan C. Fraser, Manager and Secretary, with other members of the Council had conferences with Hon. H. H. Stevens, Minister of Trade and Commerce, and Hon. Robert Weir, Minister of Agriculture, to see what can be done about it.

The impression seems to be that Canada made too much butter and not enough cheese. Canadian cheese commands a premium on the British market, and the butter has to take a discount as compared with the New Zealand product. Until late in August it appeared the balance between cheese and butter was quite satisfactory; that butter reserves were being accumulated at about the proper rate to provide for the domestic requirements this winter. However, the storage figures on Sept. 1 showed 41,490,441 pounds of butter on hand whereas last year the total on the corresponding date was 30,605,169. Returns from the creameries were more complete this year, however, so that the actual excess this year is slightly under 10,000,000 pounds.

BODY AND SOUL

The house is old, the house is frail. Its stricken timbers quake and quail. At every gust and every gale, At every breeze of life, Like a defenseless city, laid Open to pillage, sore afraid, In all its parts aghast, dismayed, It shrinks from thought of strife, The house is old; but, ah, I see The beauty that once used to be Within its shining walls for me In days when it was new! And now, as then, I find it fair Because the tenant dwelling there, Untouched by weariness or care, Is plain before my view. The house is old; some never guess The undiminished loveliness, Enduring through all change, all stress, Aglow within that place; But I can see its gleam and so I hold it dear as long ago. For me those charms still stronger grow Which through the years I trace! —ALINE MICHAELIS.

BETHEL GROVE

Remembrance Day Service was held at this church on Sunday, September 10. The service was held in the church and Mr. Campbell, preached an excellent sermon appropriate to the occasion. Mr. Campbell chose his text in the 61st psalm, verse 5—'For thou, O God, has heard my vows; thou hast given me the heritage of those that fear thy name. The choir rendered special music. The graves were nicely decorated by the friends. A good deal of work has been put on the cemetery but every one is well repaid for their time and labor which has made it a beautiful little cemetery.

Some of those present were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Norman McBride, of Port Hope; Mr. and Mrs. H. Moore and Miss Evelyn, of Cobourg; Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Cole, Plainville; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Bray and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Jibb and sons, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Brown, of Coldsprings; Mr. and Mrs. Lacey and family, Cambridge, Mrs. R. $2,349,274 More In August Than In Same Month 1932

After years in which the returns for each month showed a falling off as compared with the corresponding month of the year before, a turn came in July in which the revenue exceeded that of July, 1932, by $642,929 and August has gone ahead to a much greater extent.

Customs duties, excise taxes and sundry collections were up last month as compared with the year before. Excise duties fell off. The figures for last month with August, 1932, in brackets follow: Customs' duties, $5,683,519 ($5,653,381); excise duties, $3,401,652 ($3,708,290); sundries, $75,288 ($52,233).

For the five months of the present fiscal year the revenues are still $6,804,183 below a year ago.

The income tax returns for August were $689,697 above a year ago. The total last month was $2,521,737.

WOMEN WHO BAIT FISH HOOKS

With rather dubious eyes I look On women who can bait a hook And never squeal or never squirm Impaling minnow or a worm.

A minnow, slippery and cold, Seems such a slimy thing to hold, That I've the ancient notion it's A job to give a woman fits.

I know there's many a girl who can Bait hooks as well as any man, But just the same I seem to feel That anglerworms should make her squeal.

I do not criticize the kind Of maid who man's work doesn't mind. I'm just old-fashioned, and I look Surprised to see one bait a hook.

TENNIS CLUB PRIZES PRESENTED

Play-Offs In Various Sections Held — Club Enjoys Good Year

The finals of the Annual Singles Tournament of the Port Hope Tennis Club were held on Wednesday, Sept. 13th. Although the day was not conducive to a large turn-out of friends of the tennis enthusiasts, it was ideal playing weather and the players enjoyed the games, as well as victors.

Miss Madeline Ward and Dorothy Grant battled again this year for the ladies' trophy cup, their playing being so evenly matched, it was a fight to the finish. Miss Ward's slight chop stroke winning over her opponent in the end. Miss Ward winning by a score of 19-8 and 7-5.

In the men's singles, Foster Hamilton played his usual reliable steady tennis, defeating Hugh Fraser, who played an excellent game 6-4, 8-6 making it exciting to watch.

The Junior girls held their play-off at the same time between Misses Muriel Flood and Doris Brooks. Miss Flood winning the championship of the Juniors by a score of 6-2, 6-2. Both Juniors with practice will develop into smart players in the future.

At the finish of the games, delicious refreshments were served on the lawn, under the cover of Mrs. R. E. Southworth and her committee, after which the president, Miss Doris Hancock, voiced the Club's appreciation to all those who had worked so splendidly this season, to the players in the Kawartha League for their cooperation and to all who so kindly loaned their cars to take the players out of town. E. M. Wynn, the games Captain, came in for special mention and his outstanding work and untiring efforts to make the club a success and his interest in the league is certainly appreciated. Mrs. Southworth has been an excellent Conventor and is worthy of highest praise.

Miss Hancock then presented the cups to the champion tennis players of the Port Hope Club for 1933, extending to them hearty congratulations.

CHARGE POSSIBLE PHEASANT HUNT

Challies Agreeable To Having Sportsmen Pay Farmers For Privilege

In the event of an open season for pheasant being generally proclaimed this Fall, as was the case last year, the Department of Game and Fisheries, under the direction of Hon. George H. Challies, will have no objection to farmers making what they can out of charging sportsmen for the privilege of hunting on their property.

"I have felt for some time," declared Mr. Challies, when the matter was discussed with him, "that the farmers who protect and feed pheasants should be entitled to remuneration—if they desire it—from those who come on their property after birds. They might lease their lands for the shooting period to some club, or they might charge individual hunters. In any event, as long as departmental regulations with regard to bag limit and so on are lived up to, we certainly are not opposed to the charge idea."

"How about advertising their property as shooting grounds?" Mr. Challies was asked. "That is done by farmers in various sections of the United States."

"Let the farmers advertise as much as they want to," was his reply. "We'll not object."

The Minister of Game and Fisheries was of the belief that such a policy would work to the advantage of pheasant propagation. The farmer would see to it, he felt, that the birds on his lands were not depleted, so as to have a nucleus with which to raise flocks for another year. Secondly, he would be apt to extend greater protection than he has even done in the past to the birds during the off-season.

FROST REDUCES ONTARIO CROPS

Many Districts Report Serious Damage — Harvest Rushed

Early frosts did widespread damage in Western Ontario yesterday, the loss to crops in the Caledon district alone being estimated at $100,000.

Buckwheat, field corn, potatoes and sugar mangels are among the crops to suffer most, having already been held back by a dry season.

Kitchener, Belleville, Woodstock, Simcoe, Napanee and Stratford were among the centres reporting their districts nipped Stratford adding cucumbers and tomatoes to the products touched.

Tobacco growers in the Oxford-Norfolk area are working feverishly to bring in the last of their crop, fighting against time and a recurrence of the freezing temperatures which already have reduced the value of their crop.

HOCKEY GAMES OVER THE AIR

National League Games From Toronto And Montreal To Be Broadcast

There is good news for hockey fans all over Canada in the announcement to-day that General Motors hockey broadcasts are definitely to be continued and on a larger scale than last winter. Arrangements have been made to broadcast National Hockey League games from the Montreal Forum, Montreal, as well as from Maple Leaf Gardens, Toronto.

The hundreds of thousands of radio listeners in Ontario, who enjoyed Fester Hewitt's rapid fire account of the swift hockey matches of last year, will be delighted to know that he will be at the microphone again for every game played by the Maple Leafs on their home ice.

In addition, a number of the home games of Maroons and Canadiens, who play in the Forum at Montreal, will go on the air. Each Saturday night game in the Forum will be broadcast in the Montreal area.

Provision is made not only for listeners in Ontario and Quebec, but also all across the Dominion since it is announced there will be a national network broadcast from Toronto or Montreal, each Saturday night.

This expansion of the General Motors Hockey Broadcast is a result of the enthusiasm with which last season's programs were received. The immense audience built up for national league hockey will be still further increased by the latest arrangements.

GENERAL MOTORS 25TH ANNIVERSARY

Company Has Made Rapid Strides Since Inception 25 Years Ago

To-day is the 25th anniversary of the incorporation of General Motors. The occasion is being observed by General Motors of Canada, Limited, not only as an important division of the larger organization, but also because an Oshawa anniversary, which is of almost equal importance in Canadian automotive history. It is just 25 years ago that the McLaughlin Motor Car Company, now General Motors of Canada, Limited, built Canada's first Canadian-made Buick-engined motor car in Oshawa under a 15-year contract made the previous winter by R. S. McLaughlin, then president of the McLaughlin Motor Car Company.

Ten years later, General Motors of Canada, Limited, came into being to fill needs which were growing rapidly both industrially and scientifically. Since then the General Motors lines have been produced in Canada in growing volume.

Congratulations are being received from companies associated with Canada's mines, forests and other primary industries to the prosperity of which the motor car company contributes very largely.

BALL CLUB TO HOLD BANQUET

Meeting Held Friday Night To Wind Up Season's Activities—Banquet October 14

The activities of the Port Hope Baseball Club were brought to a conclusion at a meeting of the executive and players in the office of the Department of Agriculture, Friday night.

It was decided to hold a banquet at a place yet to be selected on the evening of Saturday October 14th. The team has enjoyed a most successful season and indications are that next year will be one of the best baseball years Port Hope has seen in a long time.

O. H. SOLIBAKKE TELLS OF CARIBOO

Addressed Large Meeting Of Shareholders Here Friday Night

Over 125 shareholders of Cariboo Gold Quartz Mining Company assembled at the Queen's Hotel here Friday night to hear a two hour address by O. H. Solibakke, director of the Company, who gave an interesting and comprehensive review of the activities and told of the present work at the development. Besides a large number of shareholders from Port Hope, many were present from district points.

There is a big force behind Cariboo as can be seen from the fact that five years after the sale of treasury shares was commenced in Port Hope, shareholders will gather at a meeting to hear of the progress of the mine at Barkerville, B.C. This is not the first such meeting that has been held here and the remarkable feature of it all is that no other mining company has accomplished such a thing in Port Hope.

Space does not permit to give a detailed account of Mr. Solibakke's address but he convincingly told of the rapid strides being made by the Company. It is the centre of mining interest in British Columbia and a vast amount of building has been done in order to get things prepared for the construction of the 1,900-ton mill. At the present time, the small mill is grinding out ore at the rate of 65 tons per day, realizing $1,000 daily. A vast amount of tunnelling is being proceeded with, and ore is being blocked out for the new mill, construction of which will commence as soon as possible. One hundred and thirty-five men are employed at the mine and the pilot mill is in the process of being stepped up to 100 tons daily.

The speaker struck an optimistic keynote when he told that there is no depression around Barkerville. Buildings are going up, miners are flocking into the gold fields of historic Cariboo. Mr. Solibakke described the recent visit to the property of the Vancouver Board of Trade members. They inspected the property carefully and were greatly enthused.

Of particular interest to shareholders was the statement to the effect that the wonderful Sanders Ledge will be reached around the end of the present month. What will be uncovered in this section no one knows and shortly beyond this, lies the Pinkerton group where heavy additional finds are in store.

In all, Mr. Solibakke's talk was greatly enjoyed and with the present price hovering around $420 per share, advice is given for shareholders not to part with their stock, as the proposition will result among the best in B.C.

TOO FAIR FOR SLEEP

Too fair for sleep, this night The Moon rides high And swiftly fleet on fleet of white clouds said

Along the tranquil ocean of the sky. Each galleon for a moment draws its veil

Across that still, bright face men call a world Grown dead and cold, forgetful, passionless;

A moment then its glory is unfurled To wake strange thoughts no language can express.

Too fair for sleep and so old dreams return, Vague dreams whose splendor troubled many a breast When earth was young and man had yet to learn

Life gives no answer to the spirit's quest. The night too fair the universe too wide.

Your hand, O, love, draw nearer to my side!

OTHER EDITORS' OPINIONS

THINGS CANADA HAS DONE

The following partial list of Canadian achievements is given by the News Letter of Canadian events.

"Canada built and demonstrated the first railway sleeping cars. Built and sent the first steamboat across the Atlantic. Gave to the world the idea of the all-electric radio. Originated the idea of making paper from pulpwood. First isolated helium gas in commercial quantities. Originated the idea of electric heating. Built the world's first electric stove. Originated Marquis and other more recent wheat, which helped to build up the commerce of the West, both in Canada and the United States. The idea of the telephone originated in Canada and the first long-distance trials of the instruments were made in Ontario between Paris, Ont., and Brantford. Canada pioneered in the field of electro-chemistry with the discovery of calcium carbide by Tom Wilson, of Hamilton. Canada originated the idea of standard time, which has since been adopted by every civilized country in the world. Canada built and demonstrated the first submarine telegraph in the history of the world. A Canadian physician, Dr. F. G. Banting, of Toronto, discovered insulin, a serum for the treatment of diabetes. Canada built and demonstrated the first compound steam engine in the history of the world. The effect of this invention was the doom of the sailing ship as a factor in ocean commerce."—Peterboro Examiner.

BEER-WINE SALE

Disturbing news comes from Toronto with the announcement of Premier Henry that the Ontario Government will have to consider the question of freer sale of beer and wine in Ontario. This is indefinite and means very little but all the same it tends to confirm rumors that some of the present members of the Legislature are turning to laxer liquor law as a possible method of saving their skins in the next provincial election.

Most thinking people, The Post firmly believes, do not want beer and wine sold here as it is in Quebec. The present liquor laws are quite loose enough, they believe, and should be enforced as they stand rather than broadened to encourage people to drink and bolster up the revenue of the province and of the manufacturers of beer and wine.

When the question was brought up before it met with decided opposition. At that time the announcement was made that the Government intended to have nothing to do with the proposals of the Moderation League.

Now there is an indication, although there is no definite announcement, that certain members of the Government have changed their ideas. Some who claim to have knowledge of the "inside workings" of the Government, claim that the sale of beer and wine will be a plank in the Conservative platform in the next election. They state that party leaders hope to keep their grasp on power in this way.

It would be well for the Government to remember that most of the people of Ontario once voted for "Control" and that that is what they meant then and what they almost certainly mean now. There are more important things for the Government to do than wasting time seeing that the province can get its beer or wine by the glass instead of drinking out of bottles as at present.—Lindsay Post.

ARE LOCAL EMPLOYERS PAYING STARVATION WAGES?

Premier R. B. Bennett on his return from the World Economic Conference in London, and in the course of an address before the Montreal Board of Trade, remarked that Canada cannot afford to experiment with shorter hours and higher wages.

We believe that the Premier was quite sincere in his statement, but this must be construed as his approval of the wages that are being paid by some unscrupulous employers who are taking advantage of the depression to get work accomplished at almost slave trade wages.

This disgraceful condition is not peculiar in any way to large cities like Toronto or Montreal, where flagrant disregard has been paid to the Minimum Wage Act. This condition exists in Bowmanville, but we are thankful to say not in the major industries of the town. There are others, however, small employers of labor who are paying grossly unfair wages, which if they were public knowledge would be loudly condemned by any decent thinking citizen. We are acquainted with several cases in and around Bowmanville where employers are expecting married men with families to work six days a week for wages that will barely keep body and soul together, let alone pay rent, taxes, water and light rates, yet these employers strut around as public spirited citizens and philanthropists. It is a great pity that there is not legislation in Ontario governing the payment of a minimum wage to male earners, similar to that which protects the female worker. No one expects the high wages of 1928 and 1929 at the present time, but wages that will provide a fair return for the amount of work asked is only justice, and the publication of a few of the names of these employers with the wages they are paying their help, might do much to help in overcoming a condition that Bowmanville should be ashamed to harbor.—Bowmanville Statesman.

A CANADIAN

BOY WONDER

Billy, the three-year-old son of Hector McNeill, a civil engineer in the employ of the Canadian National Railways in Montreal, is surprising all he comes in contact with by his feats in reading, spelling and arithmetic, in all of which he is self-taught.

Before his first birthday, he began to pick out letters from newspapers; at eighteen months knew the alphabet; at twenty months could dial any telephone number without help and he was able to read words of ten letters.

At two and a half years Billy, or

William Donald, to give him his proper names, — read with ease the usual nursery books, at three years began to read newspapers and by five questions he asked proved to his astonished parents that he understood what he was reading.

How he learned to understand first letters, then figures and finally words is a mystery to his father and mother for the boy has had no schooling and no help in the home, and in all other respects is a normal child. He is now interesting himself in a script type of shorthand and reads whole passages without difficulty.

55 MILLIONS TAX MOTOR OWNERS

$50 For Every Registered Vehicle In Canada, Excluding Fines

Motor vehicles operated in Canada ran their owners into a tax bill of $55,763,993 last year, according to an estimate released by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. That meant over $50 for every registered motor vehicle — to say nothing of fines.

The provinces collected $21,126,271 for registration fees on vehicles and operators and another $27,083,316 in gasoline taxes. The Dominion took in $4,598,471 on import duties and excise taxes. In addition there was the sales tax on cars sold, estimated at $2,500,000, and the import duty on gasoline estimated at $1,500,000.

Motor vehicle registrations in Canada for 1932 amounted to 11,114,563, including 945,564 passenger automobiles, 1,529 motor buses, 157,990 trucks and other commercial vehicles and 9,419 motorcycles.

This was a decrease from the 1931 registrations of 85,404 motor vehicles, or 7.2 per cent. The greatest decrease was in New Brunswick where total registrations decreased by 16.6 per cent, and passenger cars by 17.8 per cent, and Saskatchewan followed with a decrease of 15.5 per cent. in total registrations.

Canada, with one motor vehicle to every 9.4 persons, ranked fourth in density, the United States leading with a density of one motor vehicle to every 5.1 persons, and Hawaii and New Zealand ranking second and third, Ontario, with 6.5 persons per motor vehicle, had the greatest density in Canada, British Columbia was second with 7.7 persons per motor vehicle.

Revenues collected by the provinces from registrations of motor vehicles, operators, etc., for 1932, amounted to $21,126,271, as against $19,634,508 for 1931. This was an increase of 39.96 and 22.23 per cent, and was all made in Ontario and Alberta. These two provinces made increases of 39.36 and 22.20 per cent respectively, by increasing the rates. All the other provinces collected small revenues, ranging from 4.41 per cent for New Brunswick to 9.76 per cent for Prince Edward Island.

Although Canada raised the average passenger rate by 50 per cent., at $3, per vehicle, it is still the lowest of all the provinces. There is a greater range in sizes and fees for trucks than for passenger cars and, consequently, the average rates are directly comparable only when weight is given to the relative number of large and small trucks in each province. Quebec had the highest average of $48.81 per registered truck, and Manitoba had the lowest with an average of $12.49.

COBOURG CATCHER HAD BROKEN FINGER

Few Cobourg ball fans realized that Jack Mitchell, efficient young catcher of the Cobourg Lakeshore League squad had caught since last July with a fractured right index finger.

Mitchell's pegs to second base have been a feature of his work. How he accomplished them with a fractured first finger is a mystery to his teammates.

Troubled with a badly swollen finger nearly all season, Mitchell kept in the game and not until the end of the play-offs, after a 15-inning game with Dundas last Saturday, did he decide to get it attended to.

An X-ray taken in Toronto showed that the bone below the middle joint was split and that the section above had knitted in an overlapping position. An operation will now be necessary.

PRIZEWINNING MARE DIES OF "FAIR FRIGHT"

Five minutes after a second prize ribbon had been pinned to her halter, a valuable mare, owned by Norman Breckenridge, of Millbrook, lay dead in the show ring at the exhibition at Peterboro at the feet of the judges. The mare was frightened by an elephant, raised up on its hind legs and then took a complete somersault backwards. The mare's neck was broken in the fall and two minutes later she was dead.

EVEN GOLD FISH HAVE COMPETITION

Meet the "Guppies!" said to be an old family, they are about to leave whatever seclusion they enjoyed in their native Trinidad to enter Canadian society. The "Guppies," explains a bulletin of the Canadian National Steamships which are in a way responsible for the migration, are small ornamental fish which abound in the waters of the Eastern group of the West Indies. The Trade Commissioner in Trinidad suggested that they would thrive in bowls and small aquariums and prove as ornamental as goldfish. The "guppies" have the advantage of living happily in water which does not require the same care and change as that provided for goldfish.

ADAPTION OF CROPS

There are some crops which are not well suited to very fertile soils backwest, for example, often produces too much straw and too little grain on rich soils, especially the cereals which are very high in nitrogen. Oats are likely to lodge badly on soils too rich in nitrogen. On the other hand, a fertile soil is essential for profitable yields of wheat and barley. Rye will grow well on rich soils but it is also a particularly good crop for light infertile soils. Turnips require a fairly fertile soil but, if the soil is unbalanced in its fertility by having an over-abundance of nitrogen in comparison with other elements of fertility, there will be luxuriant tops but small roots.—Dominion Department of Agriculture.

M.P. ORDERS PARKS HEAD KEPT OFF RACE TRACK

Dr. T. E. Kaiser, ex-M.P., has introduced a new angle into the controversy between the Oshawa Parks Commission and harness horse trainers who are using the building and track at Alexandra Park. As representative of the old athletic society, which he claims owns the track, Dr. Kaiser contends that the parks board has no right to prevent the racing men from exercising their horses there. While the parks board has asked the police to order the trainers out of the grounds, Dr. Kaiser is insisting upon police protection for them.

"Keep Chairman Bradley off that track," he told Chief Constable Friend. "He has no right whatever to interfere."

STERLING CURRENCY JUMPS THREE CENTS

The advance of British and gold standard currencies continued on New York foreign exchange markets Thursday, as inflation gossip emanating from Washington went on unabated.

And in Paris for the first time since Sept. 1, the gold value of the United States dollar was driven below 69c. This was caused by selling of dollars for francs, sterling or other currencies.

Sterling closed near its top here to-day, finishing at $1.63, for a net gain of 2c. This week it has gained 8 1/2c. The franc closed at 5.71 1/4, up .07 1/2 of a cent.

The Canadian dollar developed strength as the day progressed and closed at 95 13-16c against 95 1/2c Wednesday, a gain of 7-15 or nearly 1/2 a cent.

NEW GRADES ARE FIXED

Regulations Established For Apples Packed in Closed Packages

Apple growers of Northumberland and Durham Counties will be greatly interested in the new grades which have been established for apples packed in closed containers other than the standard box. These new grades have been announced by the federal department of agriculture and have been fixed, it is stated, in accordance with a recommendation made by Canadian apple growers to the department. The new grades replace No. 1, No. 2, Domestic, and No. 3, which have been effective for several years, and went into effect on August 19, so that they are applicable to the present year's packing. The new grades are as follows:

1. "No 1" shall consist of hand-picked apples of one variety, clean, sound, of normal shape, and good color for the variety but when less than 2 1/4 inches in diameter the area of color shall be 10 per cent, greater than that required for larger apples; free from decay, breakdown, bitter pit, scab, smutty fungus or other diseases, worm holes or other insect injury, visible water-core, skin punctures, hail marks, limb rub, sun scald, spray burn, storage scald, solid-russeting or non-russet varieties, bruises, soft or shrivelled specimens, and shall be properly packed. In this grade russeting at the basin of the stem and smooth netlike russeting not exceeding 10 per cent, of the surface and which does not interfere with the normal color of the variety shall be permitted.

2. "Domestic" shall consist of hand-picked apples of one variety, clean and of fairly normal shape; free from decay, breakdown, bitter pit, soft or shrivelled apples, worm holes, visible water-core, soft bruises and unhealed, broken or punctured skin (except those incident to proper handling and packing) but may include apples which are slightly affected with scab, limb rub, hail marks, hard bruises, sun scald, solid russeting, healed over insect stings or other minor defects and shall be properly packed.

3. In order to allow for variations incident to commercial grading, handling and packing, in each of the above grades 10 per cent, by count of any lot may be below the requirements of the grade but not to exceed one-half of this tolerance shall be allowed for any one defect except that not more than 2 per cent, of the entire lot may be affected with decay.

4. The minimum size to which any variety of apples may be packed shall be as follows:

2 1/4 inches diameter—Alexander, Astrachan, Baxter, Bietigheimer, Bishop Pippin, Colvert, Crimson, Beauty, Dudley, Duchess, Fallawater Hubbardston, Jefferis, King, Mann, Milwaukee, Ontario, Paragon, Peawaukee, Rhode Island Greening, Stark Green, Stark Red, Twenty Ounce, Winter Banana, Wolf River, 2 inches diameter—Ealdwin, Ben Davis, Bethel, Blenheim Orange, Canada Red, Cranberry Pippin, Canada Baldwin, Delicious, Gano, Gravenstein (Crimson), Gravenstein, Grimes Golden, Jonathan, King David, Maiden Blush, McIntosh, Northern Spy, Rome Beauty, St. Lawrence, Seek, Spitzenburg, Stayman Wine-sap, Tolman Sweet, Vanderpool, Wagner, Winesap, Wealthy, York Imperial, Yellow Newton.

1 7/8 inches diameter—Cooper Market, Cok Orange, Fameuse or Snow, Golden Russet, Nonpareil, Pommegrise, Ribston, Salome.

5. WIRELESS WAVE GIVEN AS CURE

Various Ailments Ended In This Way—Claims German Physician

Cures for various ailments by the use of short wireless waves are claimed by Dr. Erwin Schliephake, a German physician and scientist.

Writing in the British Medical Journal, he described how after long study and experimentation he succeeded in treating deep-seated abscesses in the human body by passing ultra-short wireless waves through the patient, who was not in immediate contact with an instrument.

He found, he said, that various tissues exhibited entirely different degrees of conductivity in the presence of these waves, which act in characteristic ways according to the wave lengths. Many of the effects were said to be quite selective.

Dr. Schliephake declared he has used waves to treat pulmonary abscesses after pneumonia, in pleural empyema, pneumonic tuberculosis, in certain forms of peritonitis, in migraine (where waves of 15 meters were reported most satisfactory) and acute tonsillitis.

AUTOS STOLEN, BOTH RECOVERED

One Found in Port Hope And Other Located In Belleville

Auto thieves were active in Port Hope Friday night and as a result two local machines were stolen, one being recovered shortly afterwards on Bloomsgrove Avenue and the other being located in Belleville early this morning.

At 10:10 Friday night, a coupe owned by Herbert Winfield was parked on Ontario street in front of the residence of Fred Little. The ignition key was in the car and the thief calmly took possession of the car and made a getaway. Nearby residents saw the auto drive away but were under the impression that it was its owner at the wheel.

The Winfield car was abandoned on Bloomsgrove Avenue, being left gawked in the centre of the road, ignition on and lights burning. The thieves were forced to leave the machine as the gas supply became exhausted.

The marauders then proceeded to the Port Hope Hospital where they removed a coupe, owned by J. A. Hume, King street. No one saw the car being removed and advised here to-day state that it was recovered in Belleville.

Night Constable Harvey was notified of the thefts and communicated with district points.

FIRES SUBDUED BY SMART WORK

Firefighters Check Bush Outbreak In Haliburton District

Fire which broke out early Friday morning on the farm of Mark Sisson at West Guilford, seven miles northwest of the Village of Haliburton, for a time threatened to sweep through and cause property damage, but fortunately a near-by creek provided ample water for the fire fighters and the blaze was checked. The fire covered a little over two acres of ground. It was started by Mr. Sisson three days ago and was well under control until the wind changed. Provincial Constable Porter was summoned and took a gang of twenty-five unemployed men to the scene. A bucket brigade was formed and pails upon pails of water thrown on the burning brush. Had the fire broken into a near-by swamp it is claimed, nothing could have saved the small hamlet of dwellings on the other side. The bush fire at Eagle Lake also broke out anew, but was put out without difficulty.

About sixty of the young bride's friends completely surprised her and made her the recipient of many pretty and useful gifts.

HORSEMEN LEAVE OSHAWA GROUNDS

To Make Peaceful Departure—Future Trotting Races Affected

Advised by the police that they must leave Alexandra Park, the colony of race horse trainers established at Oshawa signified that they would leave peacefully. The police action followed an ultimatum issued to the racing men by the parks board which regards their presence on the grounds as a nuisance. The trainers, however, consider that they are being shakily treated and threaten that the parks board's attitude will put an end to trotting races at future Oshawa fairs. Chief Constable Friend stated that no trouble was expected.

REDUCTION IN PRICE SUBSCRIBERS' TICKETS

Cenny Smythe, managing director of Maple Leaf Gardens, announces that there'll be a reduction in prices for subscribers this year at the N.H.L. games. He also furnishes the good news that the Leafs will have 19 Saturday night games. A year ago they had 16 and the year before only 14. The reduction in prices means more than a $4,000 loss on capacity houses.
Subscribers in the grey section will be able to get their seats for 75 cents probably the lowest figure in professional hockey there. For the green section the price will be $1.25; the side blues $1.75 and the end blues $1.40, while the boxes outside the centre will be $2.20. The sale opens next week.
As to the Leafs' training quarters it will either be Galt or Kitchener, when three or four amateurs will be tried out. The semi-annual meeting of the N.H.L. will be held at Toronto on Saturday, September 30.

SERUM DEVELOPED FOR SLEEP ILLNESS

Discoverer Advises Its Use In Every Case
A serum of benefit in treating encephalitis has been developed by Dr. Karl Edward Rosenow, experimental bacteriologist of Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn.
Dr. Rosenow telegraphed St. Louis health authorities that the results of his tests had been borne out by further experiments in the Mayo Clinic. He succeeded in infecting rabbits with the sleeping sickness germ by taking cultures from the throats of victims of the disease and injecting it into the animals. His telegram from Rochester read: "Encephalitis anti-streptococcus serum agglutinates strains in high solution. Advise its use in every case."
The term "agglutinates" is defined as the coagulation of the disease micro-organisms when the serum is placed in the prescribed solution. The confirmation of this experiment strongly supports Dr. Rosenow's streptococcus theory, it was said.
Three persons died Friday, bringing total fatalities to 146. Twelve new cases were reported.

WEDDING BELLS

WICKETT—ROBERTSON
Kawartha Park, Stoney Lake, with autumn tints already beginning to color its foliage, was the scene nearing the sunset hour Tuesday of a lovely wedding, when Helen Joan Robertson, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Robertson of 171 Aylmer street, was married to Mr. Robert Hume Wickett, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Wickett, of Port Hope, at the summer home of her parents, Lower Kawartha, Stoney Lake.
The charming rooms were lovely with a profusion of flowers, gladioli, asters, gypsophila, and adiantum fern. The ceremony took place in the pretty living-room, in front of the large fireplace which was banked high with cedar boughs. The Rev. J. E. J. Millyard was the officiating clergyman.
The bride wore an exquisite frock which had been her mother's marriage gown and was made of cream point d'esprit and Battenberg lace posed over white satin. Fashioned on long, graceful lines, the front of the skirt was finely tucked and the waistline showed five tiny taffeta bows at the back. The jacket was of the lace, which also trimmed the sleeves, puffed above the elbow.
The net veil was held in place with orange blossom clusters.
White satin slippers with flesh-colored hose and short white kid gloves, were worn, also a string of pearls, and the bride carried a bouquet of Joanna Hill roses and lily of the valley.
The matron of honor, Mrs. Norman Moffat, sister of the bride, wore a beautiful gown of aquamarine blue-green chiffon trimmed with amethyst velvet. Her velvet turban, slippers and gloves were also in amethyst tones and she wore a shoulderette of orchids and lily of the valley.
Mr. Edmund Cohe of Port Hope was best man.
After the ceremony, a reception was held, only the members of the immediate families and a few friends being present.
Mrs. Robertson, mother of the bride, was in beige lace over satin, with a large hat of brown satin, beige slippers and gloves and corsage bouquet of Talisman roses.
Mrs. Wickett, mother of the bridegroom, wore white crepe with three-quarter length coat, a large white hat, white slippers and gloves, and corsage bouquet of Talisman roses.
Refreshments were served at small tables decorated with silver bud vases filled with roses. Messrs Hooper and Sons catered. The bride's table centred with the cake, was done with a cloth of Venetian lace, green candles in silver holders and a bowl of roses.
Later, Mr. Wickett and his bride left by motor for Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec, and will live in Port Hope on their return. The bride travelled in a dress of brown wool with long matching coat, brown hat and accessories.

COBOURG DISCOUNTS BASEBALL RUMOURS

Although, according to a Peterboro item, sport leaders of that city were predicting a four-team circuit of Belleville, Cobourg, Peterboro and Oshawa in the C.O.B.L., the same view is not shared by sport followers in Cobourg.
The news item which emanated from Peterboro, states:
" . . . it is thought that Cobourg and Oshawa would be willing to re-enter the league. It is considered that Cobourg's ball team is of senior calibre . . ."
Rumors that three of the stellar players of the Cobourg team were seriously thinking of new stamping grounds, led sport leaders to discount the Peterboro prediction that Cobourg would be in Central League ball next year. It was learned that "Hot" Gibson, hard-hitting pitcher of Cobourg, had been approached by Port Hope baseball backers and might turn out with that town's squad next year.
Jack Mitchell, youthful catcher who had been coming along very well this year, has attracted the attention of outside centres, and, it is stated, may go to Toronto to play ball next year. In addition, Archie Campbell, who has been doing effective work on the pitching mound, is said to be considering a move to another town.
With the loss of these three players Cobourg would not consider entering Central League ball for a moment. Had the team remained intact for 1934, it is still considered doubtful that the town would withdraw from Lakeshore intermediate ball.

ILLEGAL EGG TRADING

One of the most common causes of prosecutions under the egg regulations of the Live Stock and Live Stock Products Act, administered by the Live Stock Branch, Dominion Department of Agriculture is the purchase of eggs at a flat rate in violation of Clause 9, paragraph 4 of these regulations. It would appear that several traders are not as familiar as they should be with the terms of this clause.
The clause reads—(4) The manipulation of returns to equal a previously agreed upon price, or payment of a guaranteed price, or a flat price, or a uniform price for ungraded eggs is hereby prohibited. No person shall make an advance payment for ungraded eggs in cash, by cheque, or other negotiable instrument, in merchandise, or on account, or in any other manner, at or prior to time of delivery, or prior to candling and grading, in excess of eighty per cent of the total value of the eggs computed at the price per dozen for the grade "Firsts" appearing on the statement.
Except on written approval of the Dominion Minister of Agriculture or his representative, final settlement shall be made within seven days of date of delivery.

AUGUST GOLD PRODUCTION IS RECORD FOR YEAR

Gold production by Ontario mine in August totalled $3,716,355, an increase of $79,641 over the output for July. With the exception of a $4,059,248 output in March last, August production was the best of the year so far.
Production for the first eight months of this year is given as $29,517,884, compared with $30,839,593 for the first eight months of last year. In the same period 3,587,653 tons of ore were milled this year and 3,618,157 last year, indicating a slightly richer grade of millheads last year than in 1933. It is understood that the premium on gold now ruling has led producers to grind some ore that previously was not regarded as commercial value.
Figures on which the returns are based were received by the Ontario Department of Mines from seventeen producers. Hollinger in the Porcupine district led the field in output followed by Lake Shore, McIntyre, Dome, Wright-Hargreaves, Teck Hughes and Sylvanite, in that order.
The Porcupine district producer, numbering seven, reported output a $1,886,540 in August, compared with $1,728,048 by the seven producers at Kirkland Lake and $101,801 by three mines in the northwestern field.

CENTURY OF PROGRESS

Steamboat, iron plow, cotton gin, These the marvels men might see When this century came in, Back in eighteen-thirty-three.
With a great ox for a steed And a water-mill for power, Little thought had men of speed, Cruel demon, splendid dower.
But this century has brought Magic gifts to you and me; Tasks, undreamed of once, are wrought Now, in nineteen-thirty-three!
In Chicago, at the fair, We are shown a world made new; All Aladdin's dreams are there, Brighter, that they have come true!
Boundless realms swing wide their doors, Lord of electricity, Man to newer marvels soars, Still, in nineteen-thirty-three!

EMPLOYEES HONORED FOR DEEDS OF HEROISM

The Royal Canadian Humane Society has announced that shortly it will present to Frank H. Birkett, employee of the Canadian National Express, Montreal, a testimonial in appreciation of his action in saving a young Verdun boy from drowning last Spring.
The document will read: "Awarded for prompt action and presence of mind in the rescue of Richard Frankel from drowning, at Verdun, Que., March 27, 1933." Young Frankel and a boy named Stanley Lewis fell through ice into the river. Lewis was drowned, but Birkett was able to save Frankel. The testimonial will be presented several weeks hence, when the Society will present other documents to several other Canadian National employees for heroism.

THEIR EXCELLENCIES RETURN FROM JASPER

Their Excellencies the Earl and Countess of Bessborough during their recent visit to Jasper became familiar figures on the motor roads and foot trails of Canada's largest National Park. The Governor-General particularly displayed a keen delight in seeking out the areas where plentiful game is promised and during his stay visited not only Peabontas, which is noted for its mountain sheep, but carried on into Fiddle Valley, where a new road is being built into Miette Hot Springs. While Their Excellencies were content to maintain a quiet program of activities, Lord Duncannon and Lady Ponsonby took advantage for more strenuous sport out-doors. Both lent their presence to the masquerade which is an annual event as Jasper Park Lodge. Lady Moyra appeared costumed as a toy soldier. Lord Duncannon was a member of the prize committee and distributed the awards.

PEACH BASKET NETTING SHOULD BE ELIMINATED

The modern practice of covering baskets of peaches with red netting should be stopped. When the net is removed the fruit has quite a different appearance. Covering the peaches in this manner does not permit the purchaser to judge properly of the quality of the goods offered for sale and allows unscrupulous dealers the opportunity to foist inferior fruit upon an unsuspecting public.

BETTER ON FRUIT NOT GREAT MENACE

At the present time a considerable number of inquiries are being received from fruit growers about a beetle—the humble flower-beetle—which is attacking ripening fruit writes W. A. Ross, Entomologist in Charge, Dominion Entomological Laboratory, Vineland Station, Ont. This insect is a yellow-brown beetle, one-half inch or more in length, with its wing covers sprinkled all over with small irregular spots. In late summer it is found every year, in greater or less numbers, feeding on the pollen of flowers, on ripe fruit—peaches, pears, grapes and apples—and also on corn, but it is rarely responsible for serious damage. In fact, we have never seen the insect cause commercial injury in Ontario, and consequently we have never had occasion to advise the adoption of any control measures.

GIVES OPINION ON BALL TEAM

Bowmanville Writer Gives Alex Hills A Pat On The Back

W. J. Martyn, of Bowmanville, gives his opinion of the Bowmanville Baseball Club which will undoubtedly be of interest to local fans:

Mr. Martyn says in his letter as follows:

"I have been asked several times, what was wrong with the Bowmanville Ball Club and I am frankly going to answer. In my opinion Bowmanville had the best team in the league, with the poorest coaching and management. A team of all stars in any sport cannot get very far without good coaching and management. No doubt the team was a little weak in some departments, but we had the best fielding team in the league and as good a hitting team as any, which is not saying much. I have witnessed the playing of every team several times and the batting was about on a par. Cobourg pitcher struck out 23 Port Hope batters in one game and in another game Port Hope had only four hits and Cobourg 2, and in the last game in Port Hope, Cobourg had 6 hits and Port Hope 8. There were several errors and both teams looked weak. It was pitiful to watch and to think that Bowmanville, a much superior team, was through for the season.

"In the four games played between Port Hope and Cobourg the attendance was around five thousand - a great gate which Bowmanville might have shared in. However, it proves what an inferior team can do when properly coached and managed, and Alex Hills is to be congratulated on his showing with his Port Hope outfit. We have plenty of young material coming along for next year and prospects look bright for a good team. Let's hope we have good coaching and management and will profit by the experience of this year's failure.

"Yours truly, W. J. MARTYN."

CENT-A-MILE TRIPS TO WEST

East-West Excursions By Both Railways Sept. 16th To 26th

Following the striking success of the cent-a-mile coach excursion inaugurated last May and June, announcement is made that the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways will repeat the experiment this month with all tickets good for thirty days from date of sale.

The excursion will be from the east to the west and from the west to the east with Port Arthur as the dividing line. Anyone in the east who desires a visit from a relative in the west can deposit the fare with any ticket agent and the ticket will be delivered at the relative's residence. From west to east tickets will be on sale from September 16 to September 26, inclusive, while from east to west tickets will be sold from September 20 to 30. These tickets will only be good on Canadian routes but excursionists will have the usual choice of routes, whenever optional and no change has been made in the regulations governing baggage.

To illustrate the effect of these rates, the trip from Toronto to Winnipeg and return is only $24.25 in coaches, which is less than one-third of the usual return fare. As far as tourist sleeper accommodation is available the full charge from Toronto to Winnipeg and return will be $42.35.

GUIDE FOR SALE ADS BRING RESULTS

Day by day, Evening Guide ads are bringing results. Last week, R. J. Armstrong of Campbellford inserted a two-line advertisement to the effect that he had six acres of alfalfa for sale. A short time after the paper was issued, the crop was sold, and to-day Mr. Armstrong writes a short crisp letter, - "The alfalfa is sold. It must pay to advertise in the Guide. Yes, the alfalfa is sold."

Just another instance of a satisfied customer.

ATTEMPT MADE TO FIRE BARN

Matches Attached To Grain About To Be Placed In Thresher

An attempt to fire the barn of E. A. Thompson, Sophiasburg Township, by wiring boxes of live matches to the sheaves of grain so that they would ignite when thrown into the threshing machine separator was accidentally discovered Wednesday.

Threshing had been in progress fifteen minutes when H. E. Adler noticed a packet box of matches on the stack, but it had a wire through it and he tossed it away. A second worker, Fred Woodall, discovered another box securely wired to a sheaf just as he was about to toss it into the machine. Had he done so, the separator, barn and contents would have been burned. Mr. Thompson cannot think of any reason why anyone should want to harm him.

Farmers fear that a pyromaniac is in that district, as just two weeks ago the Setburn Spencer barn and all contents were lost when the separator burst into flames while threshing was in progress. Police are investigating.

COBOURG CIVIC HEADS ACQUITTED

No Evidence Offered On Charges Of Conspiracy

Charges of conspiring to defraud, on which Mayor Jack Delanty and Councillors Archie Russell, William Jennings, William J. Maher, and Reuben Jackson appeared in Cobourg police court, were dismissed by Magistrate J. H. Davidson when Col. F. D. Boggs, K.C., Crown Attorney, announced that he had no evidence to offer. A. Cochrane, K.C., and T. F. Hall, K.C., appeared for the defendants.

The charges were the outcome of a sewer dispute in which the complainant, Harry Allan, and the council were the participants. Several months ago, two citizens on Ann Street asked permission of Mr. Allan to connect their homes to his private sewer. When they couldn't agree on a price, the citizens took the matter up with the town council. The council made Mr. Allan an offer for his sewer, which was refused. An engineer's survey later revealed that Allan's sewer was not at the required level to meet with requirements of the people who were asking for a sewer on that street. A separate one was built, and later Mr. Allan laid charges of conspiring to defraud against the mentioned municipal councillors, on the ground that they had conspired to defraud him of the commercial value of his private sewer by building another one.

Mr. Cochrane stated that it was deplorable that the Mayor and four councillors should have been subjected to such an indignity.

RETRACTION RE THEFT CHARGE

Evening Guide Makes Retraction Of Statements Published On Monday Night

In Monday night's issue under the heading of "Police Court," it was stated that Robert Welch, Port Hope, "was arraigned in Police Court before Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell on a charge of theft and that the case was adjourned pending the arrival of the alleged owner of the goods."

The above statement has no foundation in fact and it was through a misunderstanding that the article was published. The Evening Guide wishes to make a complete retraction of all the above mentioned statements and regrets exceedingly any injustice or inconvenience that may have been caused Mr. Welch.

The goods in question had been left in the care of Mr. Welch for their owner, Mr. Walter Stewart and following the laying of a complaint, Mr. Welch voluntarily appeared before the Magistrate who found no evidence of any offence on the part of Welch removing the articles he had been asked to look after by the owner.

BEAVERS WIN CHAMPIONSHIP

Capture Honours In Junior Division - Take Second Game 5-2

Mrs. Hewson's Beavers are champions of the Junior section of the Men's Forum Baseball League. At King's Field last night, they pulled out a 5-2 victory over the Forum in five innings, and the win marked their second straight in the series. Carelessness on the bases did not help the Forum's cause but the losers came within an ace of evening matters in the final frame. A hit and two passes filled the bases with only one out, but McCullough was nipped off the middle sack and Edgewood fanned to end the game.

Douglas pitched for the Forum, allowing six hits, issuing three walks and striking out four. Wakenly was on the mound for the Beavers and pitched four complete innings, and in the fifth, when he allowed a hit and a walk, Dawley went in and held the opposition.

The Forum scored their two runs in the third innings. Bennett hit, went to second and third unaided and scored on Douglas' drive to centre with the latter scoring on McCleod's safety.

The Beavers counted two runs in the first frame. Dawley was safe on a fielder's choice, stole second, counting on Walsh's hit to right field and the latter scored on Wakenly's hit. In the third frame, the Beavers sent across three runs on four hits three errors and a wild pitch.

Wakenly for the Beavers and McCleod for the Forum headed the batters with two hits apiece.

The teams: Forum—Edwardson, ss; Mann, cf; Bennett, lf; Douglas, p; McCleod, cf; McCullough, rf; Pencock, 2b; Potts, 3b; Snell, 1b.

APPLE CROP RECORD YIELD

Four Million Barrels Predicted - Ontario Exports Sell Well

The apple harvest in the Dominion is being gathered these days. It is not only the sailors who view storm-signals with alarm, but the owners of apple orchards. A storm last year did great damage to the crop in Nova Scotia.

A commercial crop of 4,000,000 barrels seems likely this year with Nova Scotia producing almost half of them according to reports reaching Ottawa. British Columbia's crop will be slightly below the big one last year. Ontario will have a better crop this year than last, Quebec about equal to last year.

Canada's largest crop in recent years was in 1921 when it totalled 4,187,000 barrels, figuring three boxes to a barrel.

The fruit branch of the Department of Agriculture started its weekly report this week on the export trade. Advice from London showed that "supplies of Australian and New Zealand apples are heavy and the market generally depressed. Recovery is not anticipated until storage stocks and early English varieties of which there is a heavy crop have been cleared up."

PEANUTS GROWN BY CHERRY VALLEY FARMER

Peanuts are being successfully grown in this section of Ontario. The grower is Elwood Dulmage, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dulmage, Cherry Valley-Milford Road.

In the spring, from a Georgetown, Ont., seed house, Elwood purchased a packet of these southern climate nuts along with ground almonds and other seeds, for his experiments. The peanuts, which totalled thirty-four kernels, were planted in the spring after the ground had become warm and free from frost. The peanuts were shelled before planting, care being taken not to break the brown skin with which nuts are covered. The kernels were planted every six or eight inches in the row. When a newspaper representative visited the Dulmage garden a few days ago the plants were about ten inches in height, having gone out of bloom several weeks ago. The blooms of the peanut plant are small and are a yellow color. Each blossom makes a pod. The blossoms cover themselves by burrowing into the ground.

The nuts, which were of a very good size when inspected recently, ripen with the first frost. If these nuts mature, and often times over a hundred pods grow from a single vine, Mr. Dulmage should reap a large harvest.

COULD NOT EAT OF ABUNDANT SUPPLY

The plight of the shipwrecked ocean mariner when he said, "water, water everywhere but not a drop to drink" had its counterpart in the good-natured sally of Kenneth Grant, football player, when in Jamaica recently, where he found "bananas, bananas everywhere but not one for immediate eating purposes." Regarding bananas, he said he simply could not find a place to buy one, though Jamaica is the largest banana-growing country in the British Empire. And bananas are not out of season. Grant is the winner of the prize offered by the Palace Theatre in a contest to determine the most popular male athlete in Montreal and returned from a trip by Canadian National Steamships liner to Jamaica, the trip being the prize.

COBOURG HIGH SCHOOL GRIDDEERS ARE ACTIVE

Enthusiasm at the Cobourg Collegiate Institute is running high this season over rugby football prospects and the boys have already had some initial workouts. About forty boys were put through the paces in order to get limbered up for the coming fray. Cobourg will have senior, intermediate and junior teams, it is expected, in the Central Ontario League of Secondary Schools, which will again function this autumn.

At Tuesday night's meeting of the High School Board a communication was received from Dr. H. A. CANADIANS REACH NORWEGIAN MARKET

Canadian manufacturers also hope to find sale in Norway for aluminium from plants in Quebec where cheap electric power enables low manufacturing costs.

CUT OFF SEVEN MILES BY PROPOSED HIGHWAY

Much interest is noted in Bowmanville in a despatch from Lindsay which states that the Lindsay town council is conferring with other councils concerned in regard to having the Burketon-Lindsay branch of the C.P.R., recently torn up, converted into a highway. According to a man who is well acquainted with the situation, Lindsay would become about seven miles nearer Toronto by road were this highway completed.

CANTON SEPTEMBER MEETING OF CANTON W.M.S.

The September meeting of the W.M.S. was held at Maplehurst, the home of the President, Miss A. L. Harris on Tuesday of last week.

The program, one of more than ordinary interest, was in charge of Mrs. A. P. Pollard's group.

A special feature was a responsive devotional service led by the president and followed by the devotional leaflet "Priscilla the wife of a missionary," read by Mrs. R. V. Wallace. The Peace and Temperance secretaries contributed items of information along these lines. A reading "A Little New Settler in Northern Ontario" was given by Mrs. A. P. Pollard while Miss B. Langdon presented "A Hospital Scene in Korea." Then followed prayer by Mrs. W. Langdon. Mrs. W. Barrie gave a sketch of mission work in Montreal and Miss Evelyn Gist read an inspirational poem "Someone Had Prayed." Hymn singing marked the opening and closing of the program and interspersed various numbers. The dismissal prayer was offered by Miss C. W. Peters.

DRUNK APPEAL IS ABANDONED

Aurora Priest To Serve Ten Days In Jail As Result

Rev. Father M. J. Enright, Aurora, will spend 10 days in jail, according to an announcement made before Judge Widdifield in general sessions at Toronto, yesterday. It was announced that Father Enright had abandoned his intention to appeal the 10-day sentence imposed by Magistrate Keith in county court.

Drunk in charge of a motor car, was the charge on which Father Enright was found guilty. Two other charges, failing to return to the scene of an accident, and reckless driving were withdrawn. The trial was held in camera on Aug. 22, after which the priest was freed on $500 bail, pending an appeal on the drunkenness charge.

In accordance with the notice of motion for abandonment, Judge Widdifield affirmed the conviction and automatically recorded dismissal of the appeal.

HOME PRESERVES

In the successful home preservation of fruits and vegetables, the matter of proper storage is important. A cool, dark place is ideal because heat favours the growth of bacteria; light causes fading, while dampness furthers the inception of moulds and may even cause rust on the metal fastenings of jars. Canned goods, says the Dominion Department of Agriculture in its latest bulletin on preserving fruit in the home, should not be allowed to lie about under uncertain conditions. The jars should be labelled with the name of the product and date when canned. If dark storage is not available, the jars should be wrapped in paper to exclude the light. Again, if a damp atmosphere is positively unavoidable, the rubbers on the jars should be examined from time to time, as mould may attack them, making possible the admission of air and bacteria to the contents of the jar.

ARRANGING TAX SALES ON OSHTAWA PROPERTIES

Arrangements for tax sales of properties on which taxes are in arrears in Oshawa were instituted this week by the city treasurer's department. The properties will be advertised for 13 weeks and then a date for the sale will be set.

The Guide Story

Judy had drawn her slight figure to its full height. She is very pale and also very determined.

"I shall not come," she says decidedly. "You had better leave us, she adds sternly.

"Not without you, Polly—not without you," objects Mr. Hogg, his face distorted by a hideous smile.

Then Judy opens the door, and pointing at it, says authoritatively—"Go!"

"If I go, Polly, 'tis to get the police," says the old man, his playful smile giving way to a scowl. "You'd better come quiet, my dear."

"Go!" repeats Judy, emphasizing her command by stamping her foot. "I'll be back again directly," declares James Hogg, in a menacing tone, as he pulls his shabby old hat tightly down over his head and walks out of the room.

Just outside the door, however, and before Judy has had time to close it, his shoulders are seized by a pair of powerful hands and he is held prisoner, while the Honourable Alexander Callaghan's voice says anxiously—

"Has this man been annoying you?"

"He—he says he is my father," replies Judy, whose face is deathly pale.

"Oh!" exclaims the new arrival, in a tone of profound astonishment.

Then he motions Mr. Hogg back into the room, and there follows an explanation, so confused by reason of Miss Griffin's sobs, the old man's rage and Judy's indignation that with a gesture of despair, Mr. Callaghan asks the ladies to retire upstairs and leave the man to him.

"Oh, save her—save her!" pleads Miss Griffin, looking tearfully and imploringly up into their champion's face, as she passes out of the room.

Ten minutes later Mr. Callaghan joins them in the drawing-room, but his face is very grave. Indeed, poor Miss Griffin bursts into a fresh fit of weeping the moment she sees him.

"Hush, hush!" he says soothingly. "Pray, don't excite yourself so, Miss Griffin!"

"I can't lose her—oh, I can't!" sobs the old lady rebelliously.

Mr. Callaghan looks both perplexed and distressed.

"I don't wish to alarm you," he says falteringly, "but I am afraid it is a very serious business."

"Oh, he can't be my father!" gasps Judy.

The Honourable Alexander takes her hand in his, and looks down into her frightened eyes almost tenderly.

"I—I really am afraid he is," he says, in a low, pitying tone.

Judy buries her face in her hands to hide the blush of indignation and shame that mounts to her cheeks.

"Don't—don't take it to heart so," pleads Mr. Callaghan.

But Judy turns from him and takes up her station by one of the windows, as if in deep thought.

"He cannot insist upon taking her away, can he?" asks Miss Griffin, in great consternation.

"He wants to do so," replies Mr. Callaghan, with his eyes fixed upon the figure at the window.

"Not now—not at once! Oh, how unreasonable the man is!" cries Miss Griffin.

"Perhaps I might be able to bribe him to leave her with you for a few days longer," says the Honourable Alexander dubiously.

"Bribe him with money, do you mean?" cries the old lady hopefully.

"Oh, Judy darling, if it is only money the man wants, he shall never claim you—never, never!"

But Judy turns from the window, her white face set with a look of proud despair.

"No, auntie," she says decidedly. "There must be no bribe used in the matter. If I am his daughter, and he insists on it, I must go to him. But let him prove it first."

"I fear that will not be difficult," interposes Mr. Callaghan, in a tone of commiseration. "He has only to apply to the nearest magistrate, and he will at once be armed with authority to claim his daughter. You, Miss Griffin, with your knowledge and experience of the world, must surely see that."

"Yes, of course—of course," acquiesces Miss Sarah. And then Judy having again turned aside, she manages to slip her well-filled purse into Mr. Callaghan's hand, places her hand on her own hip to indicate anger and nods her head mysteriously at Judy's back.

"Perhaps, Mr. Callaghan, if you saw him again, you might be able to persuade him to wait," she says imploringly.

"Auntie, remember, I won't have him bribed," cries Judy, turning shangly upon them. But, quick as her movement Miss Griffin's purse has disappeared and the Honourable Alexander answers her soothingly—

"I will go down again and try to reason with him."

As the door closes, Judy sinks down upon her knees beside Miss Griffin's chair, and they embrace each other fondly.

"Judy, my child, I could not live without you!" sobs the old lady.

"It seems too—too horrible to think I am his daughter!" says Judy.

"You are not, my darling—you are mine," persists Miss Griffin. "But, Judy, you must not be stubborn about the matter, if he is content to take money instead of you. Oh, I shall be so thankful!"

Judy shakes her head sorrowfully.

"No, no, auntie. If he is base enough to want to sell me, there would be no end to his demands for money. I cannot bear to think that, after all your goodness to me, he should try to extort money in this shameful manner!"—and Judy sighs.

"What does money matter, my darling?"—tightening her clasp round Judy's slender form.

Just then the door opens, and as the Honourable Alexander enters the room, both women glance up at him, like prisoners awaiting their doom.

"He has gone!" cries Mr. Callaghan cheerfully. "He has agreed to wait three days before insisting on his claim."

"Oh, thank you, thank you—and a thousand times thank you!" says Judy impulsively, holding out her hand to her deliverer.

"Only three days!" moans Miss Griffin.

Mr. Callaghan has taken Judy's outstretched hand, and holds it protectively in his.

"I call it a great relieve—a great relieve," he repeats dreamily. "Three days will give us time to think—and—arrange."

"But he will come for me then, and I must go," murmurs Judy despondently.

The clasp on her hand tightens reassuringly.

"Perhaps not—I hope not," says Mr. Callaghan. "I have a plan which I am working out in my mind—a plan which would totally circumvent Mr. Hogg."

"Oh, let us hear it!" cries Miss Griffin eagerly.

"You must give me time," he says reprovingly. "Perhaps to-morrow, when Miss Judy is less agitated, I will call again."

"But I am not agitated—not in the least," declared Judy, who is trembling from head to foot.

Mr. Callaghan, however, persists in his determination not to communicate his plan and, after a few more vague but hopeful assurances, that they need not feel anxious, takes his leave.

CHAPTER V.

On the following morning, when Judy comes down to breakfast, she looks pale and listless. A sleepless night has reduced her almost to a state of indifference. If she really is James Hogg's child, her duty is plain—she must go to him. If, on the contrary, he cannot prove his statement, then she will persuade Miss Griffin to return at once to the Hermitage, and never, never again will she leave its peaceful shelter!

Miss Griffin, who has received a very lengthy letter from the Hon. Alexander Callaghan by the early post, is positively hilarious.

"It is all right, Judy darling," she cries, thrusting the letter hurriedly into her pocket. "Mr. Callaghan will be here at ten, so let us get breakfast over as soon as possible."

"Has he found out that it is all a mistake?" asks Judy, a sudden gleam of hope lighting up her woebegone countenance.

"No, dear—oh, no!" responds Miss Griffin, who is evidently in the best of spirits. "Indeed, there seems no doubt whatever that you are Mr. Hogg's daughter."

"Oh!" gasps Judy, as her hands drop into her lap, and she stares blankly at her plate. "I am Polly Hogg—the daughter of a man who lives in two miserable rooms in some back street!"

"Never mind, Judy, you need never go to those rooms. Mr. Callaghan is so clever and so thoughtful, so good and generous and kind—he has arranged everything perfectly."

"I don't see how that is possible," replies Judy, with a deep and hopeless sigh. "If I am James Hogg's daughter, I suppose I must live with him."

"No, no, Judy! Mr. Callaghan has been thinking it all out, and he will save you, darling—in his letter this morning he promises to save you."

"Mr. Callaghan cannot save me," declares the girl contemptuously. "I distrust him."

Just then Bird enters the room. She had been told of James Hogg's claim. She shakes her head mournfully, and wipes one eye with the corner of her apron.

"I wish you would let me telegraph for the master, ma'am," she suggests thoughtfully. "I feel sure he could set things straight, somehow. He has such a powerful set of common sense!"

Miss Griffin shakes her head sadly but firmly.

"No, Bird, no," she says impatiently. "My dear brother is too determined, too obstinate, too dogmatic. We must settle this affair without consulting him. For, if he came up to town and made that old man furious, there is no saying what might happen to dear Judy."

"Umph!" grunts Bird dissentingly. Put the remainder of her protest cut short by the appearance of the Hon. Alexander Callaghan.

"How may I inquire the new arrival, with a slight shrug of his shoulders, as Bird retires.

"Yes, I suppose society would call her my maid," answers Miss Griffin musily. "I call her my friend. She is one of those faithful, kind, true creatures that one so rarely meets with nowadays."

"I see—a paragon," observes Mr. Callaghan, with a sceptical laugh. "I don't believe in paragons, myself. As for officious servants, I detest them!"

"I don't think Bird is officious," begins Miss Griffin, but her visitor interrupts her.

"Pray let us dismiss a matter of so little moment," he says, taking off his gloves and rubbing his white hands one over the other. "I have come this morning to talk over Miss Judy's future—with a sharp glance in the girl's direction—and I think I have found a way out of our difficulty—or rather, I hope I have."

"Yes—yes, I know," cries Miss Griffin eagerly. "I fear poor Judy has had no sleep all night from sheer anxiety."

"May I speak first to you, Miss Griffin?" inquires Mr. Callaghan, with a smiling glance at Judy. "I shall want all your sound common sense brought to bear upon my plan to tell me whether it is a good one."

"Certainly, Mr. Callaghan," agrees Miss Griffin fustily, as she leads the way from the room.

Left to herself, Judy rises from the table beside which she has been sitting and sinks down into a low chair near the window. A feeling almost of despair creeps over her as she sits there, thinking of her future. What can Mr. Callaghan do to help her? Nothing. She must go and live in those wretched rooms, amidst squalor and dirt, for the remainder of her life. Of course she will not live long, she will soon pine away and die. And Miss Griffin will be inconsolable, and poor darling Guardie miserable. Apparently the future has nothing for her but desolation and general unhappiness. Judy conjures up a very pathetic picture, and when Miss Griffin, after half an hour's absence rejoins her, she finds the girl quiet and hopelessly crying.

"Cheer up, my darling—cheer up!" says the old lady, hastening into the room with a bright-nervous flush on either cheek. "Mr. Callaghan is the very nicest man I ever came across and you must just run up and speak to him for a few minutes, my dear one."

"But has he thought of anything practical, auntie?" asks Judy rising from her chair with only a faint tone of hope in her voice.

"Something very practical indeed, Judy," replies Miss Griffin, who seems to be enjoying some little joke all to herself. "And, as he says, it is the only way out of our difficulty, and a very good way too, my dear—only you must be reasonable. You will be reasonable now, Judy, won't you?"

"I won't give in to bribery, auntie," declares Judy, with a very determined pucker about the corners of her pretty mouth.

Again Miss Griffin laughs softly.

"It has nothing to do with bribery, dear," she says, imprinting a fond kiss upon the girl's cheek—"nothing whatever."

"Then what can it be?" asks Judy, leaving a sigh of relief at the assurance.

"Run up and see," suggests Miss Griffin.

"Aren't you coming too, auntie?" inquires Judy wonderingly.

"Presently, dear—in a minute. Only I want to have a little talk with Bird first."

So, perfectly unconscious of the fact that she is about to receive an offer of marriage from no less a person than the Hon. Alexander Callaghan, Judy runs up the stairs and into the drawing-room. When she opens the door, her visitor is standing by one of the three long windows, holding in one hand a large bouquet of moss-roses, which he at once hands to her.

"I received such a huge hamper of roses from my mother this morning that I thought I might venture to bring you a few," he says, almost apologizing for the offering.

"Thanks—you are very kind," answers Judy, not even smelling the flowers, although she dearly loves roses. "But what about this man—this supposed father of mine? Miss Griffin says you have thought of something—and she places her bouquet on a side table.

"Well, I went down to the East End last evening, and after some difficulty, succeeded in hunting up his quarters," explains Mr. Callaghan slowly. "I am afraid, Miss Judy, there cannot be the least doubt as to your being his—his—"

"His daughter, you mean?" falters Judy.

"Yes, his daughter," repeats Mr. Callaghan, with his eyes steadily fixed upon his highly-polished boots. "Much as I wished to disbelieve his story, I could not shut my eyes to facts."

"And your plan?" inquires Judy eagerly.

The Hon. Alexander looks at her sharply and keenly before replying, then he says cautiously—

"A man of that class is always open to bribes."

"My father shall never be bribed!" answers Judy, in a decided, though tremulous voice.

"I agree with you," rejoins Mr. Callaghan, seating himself beside the girl on the sofa, where she has almost unconsciously sat down. "The man is full of avaricious craft and cunning. He would ruin your kind friends in the course of a few years."

"That shall never be!" declares Judy, clasping her hands convulsively.

"Again I agree with you, Miss Judy," observes the Hon. Alexander, in a tone of soft flattery. "And, so far as I can see, there is only one way out of your difficulty."

"I know," assents Judy with an unconscious stamp of her foot—"everybody says there is only one way, but nobody will tell me what it is. Do make haste, please—you can imagine how anxious I am to hear it!"

Mr. Callaghan looks somewhat disconcerted, but, after a moment's hesitation, he says, somewhat pompously—

"You must have observed, Miss Judy, ever since the hour of our accidental meeting at the Crystal Palace, that my interest in you and Miss Griffin has been more than an ordinary interest."

"Yes, yes, but don't mind about that now, please," urges Judy impatiently.

"But I must mind about it," returns her companion, rather stiffly, "since my admiration—and I suppose I may as well say affection—for you concerns the matter very closely."

Judy makes no answer, but she certainly looks very uncompromising.

"I have often been on the verge of speaking before," proclaims Mr. Callaghan blandly, "but our acquaintance being so short, I deemed it better to wait. Circumstances, however, alter cases, and—and—the fact is, Miss Judy, I see but one way out of your difficulty—marry me, and your father cannot claim you!"

"Marry you!" exclaims Judy blankly, staring at her suitor in amazement. "Why should I marry you? No—I don't mean that exactly—you have just given me a reason—only—why in the world should you want to marry me?"

"Because I love you!" answers Mr. Callaghan, in a very solemn impressive tone.

Notwithstanding all her anxiety, Judy actually breaks into a merry laugh, but checks it instantly as a heavy scowl darkens her companion's face. Certainly, Mr. Callaghan's manner has never given her the impression of his being a man in love. But, at the same time, it is kind of him, particularly in the circumstances, to suggest the one way which he sees out of her present dilemma and she feels some compunction for her short-lived mirth.

"Oh, I beg your pardon!" she says, pressing her handkerchief to her lips, and vainly trying to conquer her feeling of amusement. "I did not mean to laugh."

"There is nothing to laugh at that I can see," remarks Mr. Callaghan, whose face is now crimson. "When a man falls in love with a beautiful girl like you—and—and—well, he naturally expects to be met with decision."

"It was very bad of me," admits Judy contritely.

Mr. Callaghan takes a mean advantage of the meekness of the girl's answer, and before Judy is aware of his intention, slips one arm affectionately round her waist.

"Sir!" cries Judy indignantly. Hastily springing up from the couch she walks over to the window and stands there like a little fury. "It is very kind of you, Mr. Callaghan, I know, and I am sure I ought not to feel greatly honoured and obliged. But for all that you are the very last person on earth whom I should ever dream of marrying," she explains excitedly.

Mr. Callaghan has also risen and apparently the love he has just professed for Judy has suddenly turned into hate.

"Do you realize what your refusal means?" he asks, coming near her and speaking in a low, hissing voice.

"Yes," the girl answers slowly. "I must go and live with my father."

"How will you like associating with gamblers, drunkards, and thieves?" he persists impressively.

"If I have to do so, it will be my fate, not my fault," Judy answers bravely.

"Your own fault entirely!" corrects Mr. Callaghan. "I offer you an honourable name, a happy home surrounded by every refinement and luxury and you deliberately choose to go and live in one of the worst slums in London. Is it right or just of you to disappoint your kind friend, Miss Griffin, in this way? It will break her heart."

"Oh, no, no—not that!" cries Judy, sinking down into a chair and hiding her face in her hands.

"In three days, or rather in two now, James Hogg will come to fetch you," pursues her tormentor ruthlessly.

"Oh, go away, please! I am sure things are bad enough without enlarging on them!" cries Judy impatiently, as she makes a gesture for him to leave her.

"I shall not despair, Miss Judy," says Mr. Callaghan, pausing for a moment before making his exit.

"When you have had time to think the matter over, doubtless you will look at my proposal in a different light."

"Never, never! No, not if I were reduced to sweeping a crossing," declares Judy, springing once more to her feet, and emphasizing her speech with a stamp of her foot.

"Nevertheless, as I said just now, I will not despair," answers Mr. Callaghan, in a cool and provoking tone, as he takes his departure.

Five minutes later, Miss Griffin enters the room, her countenance sad and her cheeks wet with tears.

"Oh, Judy, Judy, my dear, rash pet—what made you refuse Mr. Callaghan? Such a splendid alliance for you! He tells me his elder brother is not very strong, and—"

"Oh, auntie, auntie, what do I care about his brother? I wouldn't marry him if he were king of England," sighs Judy, nestling her aching head upon the kind old lady's shoulder.

"And he loves you so, Judy—he dotes on you," continues Miss Griffin reproachfully. "He showed me such a magnificent set of diamonds, which if you had accepted him, he was going to get reset."

"He can spare himself that expense anyway," says Judy, laughing.

"Besides, auntie, I don't care much for diamonds."

"Oh, and Judy, Judy, that terrible man will surely come and claim you!" cries Miss Griffin tearfully. "I feel perfectly distracted between one thing and another."

"And so do I," sighed Judy.

"Please, ma'am here is Mr. Wilde," announces Bird, suddenly throwing open the door and showing in the owner of Skylark Hall.

CHAPTER VI.

Tom Wilde, hat in hand, steps into the room, bringing with him, as it seems to Judy, something of the freshness and healthiness of his native hills—something that had been strangely wanting in the artificial life they had been leading of late.

Tom's face is bronzed. His light gray suit fits him easily. His serviceable boots are of honest leather, without that aggressive lustre which have accidentally rested upon the Hon. Alexander's highly-polished boots. Tom's hands, too, when he pulls off his gloves, are honest, useful brown hands.

Judy regards them with satisfaction and compares them advantageously with those long, white, subtle fingers she has seen so much of lately. Mr. Callaghan's hands have always reminded her of snakes and conjuring tricks.

"Why Miss Griffin, what—what is the matter?" asks Tom, in his blunt, kindly manner, and with his gray eyes full of astonishment as he looks from one to the other.

"Oh, Tom, Tom, we are in such trouble!" murmurs Miss Griffin, giving the young man her right hand, while she hides her eyes with her left.

"And oh, Tom, we are glad to see you!" echoes Judy, with a laugh which is half a sob.

"That is good news, anyhow," remarks Tom, turning towards Judy. "Such a terrible thing has happened, Tom!" pursues Miss Griffin, laying her hand upon the young man's shoulder and gazing up into his face as though for help. "Judy's father has just turned up, and lays claim to her."

"I always thought her father was in South Africa," observes Tom, somewhat mystified.

"Oh, that was all a romance of dear auntie's!" interposes Judy, with burning cheeks. "My parents were tramps Tom—tramps! They abandoned me years ago, as you know. And now this wicked old father of mine wants to get piles of money out of Guardie and auntie, or else to make me go and live with him. Oh, he is such a wretch!"

Tom shakes his head slowly.

"No, no, Judy," he says, with a broad smile, "I can't believe that of your father."

"Oh, but he is!" declares Judy solemnly. "And my name isn't Judy at all. It is just Polly—Polly Hogg! Did you ever hear of anything so awful?"—and the girl bursts into a fit of hysterical laughter.

"I think Polly is rather a pretty name," says Tom consolingly.

"And, Tom, she—she insists that the man shall not be bribed," observed Miss Griffin. "She actually says she will go with him when he comes to fetch her on Saturday. My heart will break I know it will." And letting her head rest upon Judy's shoulder, Miss Griffin sobs quietly.

"Look here—you mustn't go, you know!" says Tom, shaking his head at Judy, who has drawn Miss Griffin to the sofa and is seated beside her.

"I call it very perverse of her," murmurs Miss Griffin. "Yes, I do, Judy. It is of no use squeezing my hand like that to keep me quiet because I won't keep quiet. Tom shall just hear what a naughty, intractable girl you are."

"In what way?" questions Tom, smiling at Judy.

"Well, Tom, you must know that since coming to town we have made the acquaintance of one of the handsomest, most fascinating, clever and aristocratic men that has ever been my fate to meet."

"Oh—oh, have you?" falters Tom, a look of dismay on his honest face. His eyes sharply seek Judy's, but that discreet young lady is gazing demurely at the carpet, and only a pair of tell-tale dimples tell him that she is trying hard to repress a smile.

"Yes—a man in every way qualified to win any woman's heart."

"Oh, dear!" groans Tom.

"Well," continues Miss Griffin, with a deep-drawn sigh, "this gentleman, the Honourable Alexander Callaghan has laid his hand and heart at Judy's feet, and she—"

"Said, 'Thank you, sir, but I would rather not,'" interposes Judy, suddenly breaking into the conversation.

"Yes—was it not provoking of her? Of course, as Mr. Callaghan observed, once married her father could not claim her."

"No, of course not," agrees Tom, whose face now brightens wonderfully.

"I don't see why I should marry anybody if I don't want to," says Judy, pouting.

"And that dreadful man is coming on Saturday," observes Miss Griffin hopelessly. "Oh, Tom, Tom, can't you think of something? Can't you help us?"

Judy blushes crimson, fearing that Tom Wilde will only see the way out of it suggested by Mr. Callaghan. It is quite a relief to her, when laying aside his gloves and hat, he says in quite a business-like tone—

"I'll try my best, anyhow. Please tell me the whole story from beginning to end."

Miss Griffin does so most willingly and Judy, taking sly peeps at her old lover from time to time, cannot help noting that, when intent on business, all his nervousness leaves him. There is no stammering now, no blushing, no shyness. He is far too anxious for that, as, note-book in hand, he follows Miss Griffin's narrative.

When she has finished, Tom, closing his book, remarks hopefully—

"So far as I can make out, this man has given you no proof whatever. He has merely come here and claimed Judy."

"Oh, but, Mr. Callaghan says he has proof positive!" remarks Miss Griffin sadly.

"Then let him produce it," says Tom stolidly. "Let him tell you now Judy was dressed when they left her, and all the rest of it."

"Oh, dear, I never thought of that!" cries Miss Griffin, her face suddenly brightening.

"And look here—we might test him," pursues Tom reflectively. "Has Miss Judy any distinctive mark about her?"

"No," replies Miss Griffin, shaking her head. "It was always my pride to say that she was without spot or blemish."

"Then you had better invent a large mole on her neck or shoulder. That will catch him if there is no truth in his story," rejoins Tom. "By the way, you can't give me his address? That would simplify matters, because we could get the interview over."

"His name is James Hogg, and he lives in Mizzy Court one of the worst slums in London," explains Judy woefully.

"I am afraid that is rather vague," says Tom thoughtfully—"just a little worse, you know, than a needle in a bundle of hay. London is so big, and Mizzy Court probably so small."

"It is somewhere at the East End," sighs Judy hopelessly.

"Ah, I have never explored the East End," observes Tom.

"The only plan is, I suppose, to wait until Saturday," says Judy. "But, oh, the suspense!"

Tom rises from his chair, and going over to where Judy is sitting, lays his hand for a moment lightly upon her shoulder.

"Don't look so miserable," he says, in a cheerful tone. "I'll start at once for this wonderful East End and question every policeman I meet until I discover Mizzy Court. By the way if you gave me some description of James Hogg it might be a help."

Miss Griffin does her best to give a truthful description of Judy's father, and at the same time to picture him better than he is, for fear of hurting the girl's feelings. It is not an easy task, and Tom leaves them with a decidedly misty idea of the person he is looking for. A shabby genteel, cunning old man, with a pair of thick woollen gloves and a red pocket-handkerchief stuffed into his chimney-pot hat—that is the idea he carries away with him.

For some hours Tom wanders about with a certain amount of hope in his breast. Then he takes a hasty lunch and renews his quest. As the daylight fades, however, he is pretty well dispirited. Thanks to his persistence and energy, he has succeeded in finding Mizzy Court, but no one there seems to have the pleasure of Mr. Hogg's acquaintance.

THE GYPSY IN AUTUMN

Summer is fading, is passing now, Yellowing leaf and stripping bough; Days grow shorter and nights grow cool, Chill are the deeps of the forest pool, Southward the swallow and bluebird fly, Soon will be only winter and I!

Only old winter, when flowers depart, Laying his hand on my leaping heart, Stilling and chilling its song and mirth, Making it dearer as the icebound earth; Winter, with snow mounting higher and higher, Mocking at me, by my dead-twig fire!

"But there are houses and hearths," you say, "Doors one can shut to keep away!" What knows a rover of bolts and bars? Nights that are coldest flaunt brightest stars: Walls for a gypsy are coin ill-spent, Better the winds through my tattered tent!

CLERIC CLAIMS LOVE SPOILS IDEAL BOY

Efforts by parents to create and educate an "ideal boy" always have proved futile and the only way it ever will be accomplished, in the opinion of Rev. W. T. Ross Flemington, principal of Mount Allison Academy is to "call in the aid of eugenics."

Speaking to members of a service club in Halifax Dr. Flemington said "Just as long as the tall choose the short, the strong the weak and vice versa; as long as ladies are beautiful so we can love them; and dumb so they can love us, the boy will continue to be natural and not ideal."

The formula for producing an "ideal boy," said the principal would be: "If we chose our wives because their physical excellence and intelligence and our own were equally high, if we paid close attention to the physical wants of the child, if we submitted it to a wise and rich home training followed by a period of travel how subtle would be the final product—the ideal boy."

"But love," he said, "polls all this, right from the beginning, so all that could be done about it would be for his listeners to do their part in providing the proper environment and influence for the youth to-day."

REVIEW

(International Uniform Sunday School Lesson, September 24th)

GOLDEN TEXT: "Be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might"—Ephesians 5: 10.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Hebrews 11: 32 to 12: 2.

ROSES RED AND WHITE
"My garden has roses red,
My garden has roses white;
But if when the day is sped,
I stand by the gate at night,
One fragrance comes when the day is dead,
From my roses white and my roses red."

"The roses of joy are red
The roses of pain are white;
But I think, when the day is sped
And I stand by the gate at night,
I shall know just when the day is dead,
That a rose is sweet be it white or red."

—Percy C. Ainsworth.

THE STUDY OF BIOGRAPHY

One of the charms of Bible study is the biographical interest. During the whole of this year, the International Uniform Lessons are biographical, containing a six month's study of the life of Christ, three months with the early leaders of Israel and concluding with three months' study of the life of Paul. The writing of biographies has in recent years become a specialized literary art. Biographers of Queen Victoria or of Joseph Chamberlain spend a large part of a lifetime writing one biography. The art is not in finding enough to say but in selecting what to say and in stating it in a brief and clear manner. Biblical biographies are brief. Considerable Old Testament space is devoted to Joseph and to Moses, but for the most part characters are sketched in a few verses. Very little space is given to Jonathan, for instance, yet we feel that we know the inner character of the man. Carlyle has said that the history of mankind is the history of its great men. This is not the whole truth, but in so far as a man sums up a period or an epoch, the times may be studied in the man.

THE HEBREW ROLL CALL

Have you ever thought of the men to whom you would give first place in the history of your nation. Suppose you were limited to six, could you be sure of the names and the order in which they should be placed? Would you give first place to rulers, writers, orators, inventors or soldiers? In the eleventh chapter of Hebrews we have the honor roll of Israel. It has been described as the Westminster Abbey of the Hebrew people. It is a rapid sketch of the heroes perhaps of over a thousand years from Abraham to the Maccabees, but it shows the kind of men and women in whom the Hebrew race felt pride. Each separate individual did something to contribute in order to make the tale complete. It is idle to compare one with the other because their abilities were different and the new occasions taught new duties. Enough if in their own day and generation they were faithful to God and their fellowmen and played the hero's part.

TESTS OF SERVICE

Among the early leaders of Israel about whom we have studied in the past three months were distinguished soldiers like Joshua, Caleb, Gideon and Saul. All honor to them. They did their duty as they saw it. But it is only truth to say that the day of the soldiers is passing, if indeed it be not already gone. There may still be men with military training for warfare by land, sea and air, but these will not be the creators of formative periods of future history. The educators, statesmen, artists, poets and preachers will probably have more influence than the masters of military strategy or the merchant princes. The future of the world lies in ideas rather than in brute force. Even among the early leaders of Israel the most influential have been the most spiritual. The field of future service lies in the realm of civilized and Christianised human relationships.

THE ACHIEVEMENTS OF WOMEN

Women receive scant space in the history books. A few queens are written up, but the majority of women are anonymous, their service has been that of rearing children and keeping house. Yet if the scales could be justly balanced it might be found that women have been decisive factors in human history far more than has ever been recognized. Women train the children and thereby often decide what ideals men shall follow. Deborah is the exception like Joan of Arc and Laura Secord, showing what women may do in war. A higher ideal is that of Hannah, the pious mother whose religious life is carried on in her more famous son. Ruth the homemaker found a place in the ancestry of Jesus Christ. In modern life conditions are greatly changed. Women are finding places of prominence in politics, science, literature, business, education and religion. No one can predict the future except to say that the sphere of woman's influence will constantly expand.

RELIGION

Why have several million people of the American continent thought it worth while to study during the last three months the lives of some early leaders of Israel? It is because these were religious men and women who have a religious message for us today. The people of Israel would not have endured nor would they have been heard of in world history had it not been for their religion. It was their faith that held them together and gave them an influence far beyond their numbers. The thought of the unseen holy God, the prayers of the psalmists and the ideals of the prophets are permanent contributions to the higher life of humanity. Christians regret that many Jews do not follow Christ the Saviour, but all right-thinking Christians grieve when the descendants of Abraham are persecuted for political reasons, and when a world citizen such as Einstein is driven from his fatherland because of his race. Such persecutions are relics of the dark ages and should be made impossible in the twentieth century.

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION

1. Why do we study Hebrew history?
2. Do Canadians pay sufficient honor to Canadian pioneers?
3. Does any nation deserve to be called a Christian nation?
4. Do nations have to grow old like individuals?
5. What inspiration did Jesus find in Hebrew history?

SCORES SUCCESS AT PARIS SALON

A. W. F. Hayward, Noted Artist Wins High Acclaim—Was Born Near Here

The many friends of A. W. F. Hayward in Port Hope and throughout Canada will be keenly interested and delighted to hear of the great success his work met with in the Paris Salon Exhibition of Famous Artists this summer.

The following translation of a letter from Mr. Bonnet beautifully expresses the admiration called forth by the finished and exquisite work of this master artist,—

Paris, 7th June, 1933.

To A. W. F. Hayward, Esq., R.O.I. SIR,

I am an old patron, although merely a visitor, of the Salon of French Artists.

Each year I take a pleasurable delight in discovering fresh talent. English painting which I particularly admire, does not escape my investigations.

You fill the object of my discovery, and I offer you sir my congratulations.

You have honored our great annual exhibition by sending two very lovely works.

They are excellently placed, framing as it were, one on either side, the portrait of President Doumer, the work of the master (artist) Baschet. Are they not so placed as a symbol?—flowers so choice, delicate, fresh, and eloquent, fulfil their object by appealing to the spirit and the heart.

They deserve to be hung in a special position, and even that which they occupy is far below their merit, the more so as they are the work of a non-competitive artist.

Your talent, sir, with its charm and harmony commands for these two admirably executed works, an eulogistic mention by our committee, which has been thoroughly deserved.

The public, whose judgment is always sound, has been quick to recognize the value of your contribution, for if the work of Baschet draws attention to the personality of the subject, many among the visitors, and ladies in particular, linger to study the sweet grace and charm of these flowers, which seem like the soul appealing to their feelings.

My pretension is only to be the mouthpiece of many people, who without doubt think like myself, since in my modest opinion your work is a complete enjoyment and an inspiration.

Pray accept, Sir, my most deferential regards.

BONNET.

A. Bonnet, 16 rue d'Orleans, Paris. 14.

Mr. Hayward who is at present residing at Hemmingford Grey, Huntingdonshire, England, is contemplating a visit to Canada again next year.

Many lovers of pictures and flowers will recall his exhibition in the Art Galleries of the T. Eaton Company, Ltd., Toronto, in the spring of 1929, and will look forward with pleasurable anticipation to another display from the brush of this great painter.

PRESENTATION TO BRIDE AND GROOM

A presentation took place at the home of the bride's parents to Mr. and Mrs. Noray Goheen, when between sixty and seventy of their friends gathered and presented them with a marital clock and a living room table. Mrs. F. Simmerson and Mr. Archie Kidd made the presentation and Miss Olive Moise read the following address:—
"Dear Noray and Annie—
"We, a few of your many friends and neighbours, have gathered here this evening to extend to you both our very best wishes for a happy and prosperous wedded life.
"As we would like to show some token of love and esteem in which you are held, we ask you to please accept this living room table and clock, and as the years come and go may you both enjoy this world's richest blessings."
Mr. and Mrs. Goheen then made a suitable reply in a few well chosen words, thanking their many friends. The evening was then spent in dancing, the music being supplied by the Barkwell orchestra. Lunch was served.

The many friends of Mr. William Mitchell, John street, will be pleased to see him out again after a month's illness.

Douglas' Egyptian Liniment, always quick, always certain. Stops bleeding instantly, cauterizes wounds and prevents blood poisoning. Splendid for muscular rheumatism.

THE SKYLIGHT OF PROGRESS

While delivering an address before a large group of prominent business men recently, the speaker said, in part, "Progress and invention have imposed more and more work on our already overworked eyes; evolution has not kept pace with progress and we are faced with an acute condition."

"If our spectacles were taken from us, civilization would at once begin to retrograde and the world would become a blurred place in which to live."
"Without glasses ambition would dwindle and almost everyone over 45 years of age would be unable to enjoy life."
Those are strong statements, but when we have defective vision that has not been properly corrected, nothing appears in its right light; everything is more or less distorted.

In keeping with the times, the cost of glasses is considerable less with the same high standard of examination and service.

CAMPBELLFORD FARMER LOSES HOME BY FIRE

William Wright of Pethick's Corners suffered loss of his farm residence by fire which broke out early Monday morning while Mr. Wright was out doing the milking and barn chores. Hundreds of neighbors quickly gathered and formed a bucket brigade, saving adjoining buildings, but the flames had gained such headway that, aside from a few jars of jam and some lumber stored in the cellar, none of the household effects were saved. Over-heated pipes or sparks from the kitchen range is thought to be the origin. The loss is only partly covered by insurance.

PRESENTATION

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Bamsey Honored By Friends At Welcome

At the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Bosnell, Welcome, Mrs. Allen Bamsey gave a delightful six o'clock dinner for the Pollyanna class of the Welcome Sunday School. Fourteen girl friends, after doing justice to a wonderful repast, adjourned to the parlor when about eight o'clock they were joined by the boys of the four square class of the same Sunday School.

The evening was spent in playing various games and with their ever faithful friend, Floyd Honey, at the piano, songs were the call of the evening.

After much hard work to get the bride and groom where they wanted them to go, Miss Kathleen Leslie read and address, then presenting them with a beautiful occasional chair, which two of the boys of the Four Square Class brought in. The address was as follows:—
Dear Helen and Allen—
"We your friends of the Pollyanna and Four Square Class in our Sunday School wish to express to you our hearty congratulations upon your marriage. We have enjoyed your companionship in our class and League work more than we can say in words and shall always look back with pleasure upon the good times we have had together. We hope that your marriage may not sever the connection you have had with our classes during the years back, but that you may bring to our sessions the same active interest and enthusiasm as ever."

"We wish you to accept this occasional chair as a token of our appreciation of your real comradeship with the hope that all down the course of our lives the bonds of our friendship may remain unbroken."

"With our gifts our best wishes go for a most happy life with every blessing mind can wish."
Signed on behalf of the Pollyanna and Four Square Classes.

KATHLEEN LESLIE.
HAROLD MARTIN.

Both bride and groom responded with most fitting remarks and all joined in singing, "For they are jolly good fellows."

About eleven o'clock a dainty lunch was served.

PRESENTATION TO MISS MARION MARTYN

Choir members gathered round her. All joined in singing "God be with you till we meet again."
Miss Martyn left on Monday to attend normal school at Peterboro. Marion is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Martyn, Fairview Farm, Toronto Road.
